§ 183. Fire alarm districts

Whenever the town board shall have established a fire alarm district pursuant to the provisions of this article, the town board shall prepare, or cause to be prepared, plans, specifications, estimates and a proposed contract for the installation, extension and maintenance of a fire alarm system in such district. Upon the completion of the plans, specifications, estimates and proposed contract therefor, the town clerk shall give notice of a public hearing thereon in the same manner as provided in this article for notice of hearing upon the creation of such district. At such hearing, the town board shall hear such persons as may be interested in the subject matter thereof and may make such modification and changes in the plans, specifications, estimates and proposed contract as the town board shall deem expedient, and thereupon the town board may adopt or reject same. So far as consistent with the provisions of this section, the town board shall award contracts for the performance of the work and the supplying of materials or may cause the same to be done by day labor under the direction of the town engineer or any other town officer, in the same manner as provided by section one hundred ninety-seven of this chapter for the making of special improvements, and may enter into contracts with persons or corporations for the use of their property in connection with such fire alarm system.

After a public hearing as hereinafter specified, the town board, in addition, shall provide for the furnishing of fire protection within such fire alarm district and for that purpose may contract for a period not exceeding five years with any city, incorporated village, fire district or incorporated fire company maintaining adequate and suitable apparatus and appliances for the furnishing of fire protection in such district. Notice of such hearing shall be published in at least one newspaper having general circulation in the district. Such notice shall specify the time when and place where said hearing will be held, and describe in general terms the proposed contract. The first publication thereof shall be at least ten days prior to the day specified for such hearing. The expense incurred by reason of the establishment of such fire alarm district, the maintenance of said fire alarm system and the contract for fire protection, shall be assessed and levied upon the taxable property in said district and collected in the same manner, at the same time and by the same officers as town taxes are assessed, levied and collected and, when collected, the amount thereof shall be paid to the supervisor of the town. The supervisor shall pay to the city, incorporated village, fire district or incorporated fire company furnishing such fire protection, the expense thereof pursuant to said contract. The expense of the installation or extension of such fire alarm system may be raised, in whole or in part, in the same manner as the expense of maintenance or may be financed, in whole or in part, pursuant to the local finance law.

If a fire alarm district shall be situated partly in each of two or more towns any action which would be taken by the town board in the case of a district situated in only one town shall be taken by the town boards of the several towns acting jointly by a majority vote of the members of each of such town boards, and the notices of public hearing required by this section shall be given by the town clerks of the several towns acting jointly.

By mutual consent of the contracting parties, and after a public hearing held pursuant to notice in the manner provided in this section in relation to fire protection contracts, any such contract heretofore or hereafter executed may be (1) amended, (2) terminated, or (3) terminated and a new contract may be entered into in lieu thereof, if the town board, after such hearing, shall determine, by resolution, that it is in the public interest so to do. Such notice shall state in general terms the reason why any existing contract is to be amended or terminated, and if a new contract is to be entered into the notice shall also describe the new contract in general terms.

§ 184. Fire protection districts

1. Whenever the town board shall have established or extended a fire protection district pursuant to the provisions of this article, the town board shall provide for the furnishing of fire protection within the district and for that purpose may (a) contract with any city, village, fire district or incorporated fire company maintaining adequate and suitable apparatus and appliances for the furnishing of fire protection in such district or (b) may acquire by gift or purchase such apparatus and appliances for use in such district and may contract with any city, village, fire district or incorporated fire company for operation, maintenance, and repair of the same and for the furnishing of fire protection in such district, or both. The contract may also provide for the furnishing of (1) emergency service in case of accidents, calamities or other emergencies in connection with which the services of firefighters would be required and (2) general ambulance service subject, however, to the provisions of section two hundred nine-b of the general municipal law. In the event that the fire department or fire company furnishing fire protection within the district pursuant to contract does not maintain and operate an ambulance then a separate contract may be made for the furnishing within the district of emergency ambulance service or general ambulance service, or both, with any city, village or fire district the fire department of which, or with an incorporated fire company having its headquarters outside the district which, maintains and operates an ambulance subject, however, in the case of general ambulance service, to the provisions of section two hundred nine-b of the general municipal law, or with an ambulance service, certified or registered pursuant to article thirty of the public health law, which is not organized under the provisions of section two hundred nine-b of the general municipal law. Any such contract with any such ambulance service permitted herein shall be subject to the provisions of this section.

(a) Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this subdivision, prior to commencing the negotiation process for such contract with an incorporated fire company, the incorporated fire company shall file with the town board a statement itemizing the estimated costs of the incorporated fire company attributable to the provision of services under the prospective contract. The estimated costs attributable to the provision of services under the prospective contract itemized in the statement shall include, at a minimum, those, if any, for: supplies; materials; operation, maintenance and repair of equipment and apparatus; insurance; training; protective clothing, gear and other personnel costs; building rental, maintenance and operation; and a specified proportionate share of capital costs. If the fire company is required to prepare any of the following documents, copies shall be included with the statement:

(1) the fire company's most recent annual report of directors pursuant to section five hundred nineteen of the not-for-profit corporation law;

(2) the fire company's most recent verified certificate pursuant to subdivision (f) of section fourteen hundred two of the not-for-profit corporation law;

(3) the fire company's most recent internal revenue service form 990; and

(4) the fire company's most recent annual report pursuant to section thirty-a of the general municipal law.

(b) The provisions of paragraph (a) of this subdivision shall not apply to the renewal of a contract when the contract is deemed renewed in accordance with subdivision four of this section. Upon good cause shown, the town board may, by resolution, waive in whole or in part the requirement that the fire company file the statement, and copies of documents, required by paragraph (a) of this subdivision.

2. The contract shall not be entered into until a public hearing has been held by the town board. Notice of the hearing shall be published at least once in at least one newspaper having general circulation in the district. The notice shall specify the time when and place where the hearing will be held, and describe in general terms the proposed contract. The first publication shall be at least ten days prior to the day specified for the hearing. Before any contract to furnish general ambulance service by an ambulance service is entered into pursuant to this section, and before any public hearing is conducted as herein provided, the consent of such ambulance service to furnish general ambulance sevice [service][*] shall be obtained. Such consent shall be evidenced by a copy of a resolution certified by the secretary of a voluntary ambulance service or the chief executive officer of a professional ambulance service.

3. Except as provided in subdivision four of this section, the term of the contract shall be for a definite period of time, but in no event shall the term exceed five years. The contract year or years in all such contracts entered into after the year nineteen hundred sixty shall terminate on December thirty-first.

4. Instead of being for a definite term as provided in subdivision three, the contract may be for an original term of one calendar year or less and provide that it shall be deemed renewed on the same basis each year thereafter for a further term of one full calendar year without any further public hearing unless one of the contracting parties shall notify the other in writing on or before the twentieth day of August that it elects to terminate the contract on December thirty-first in that year. The term of any such contract, including renewals, shall not exceed five years, but the contract may provide that there shall be less than four such renewals. If the city, village or fire district, fire department or fire company which is to furnish the service under such a contract is not a fully paid department or company, the city, village or fire district governing board, upon the request of the department or company, shall terminate the contract as provided in this subdivision. Any such contract may provide that in the month of July of each year in which such a renewal could occur the town clerk of the town in which the fire protection district or the major portion thereof is located shall notify the secretary of the fire department, fire company or ambulance service which is to furnish the service under the contract that the contract shall be deemed renewed on the same basis for a further full term of one calendar year unless one of the contracting parties shall notify the other in writing on or before the twentieth day of August that it elects to terminate the contract on December thirty-first in such year.

5. The contract shall specify a definite sum to be paid each year for all of the services to be rendered thereunder.

6. The amount which is to be paid each year pursuant to any contract entered into pursuant to the provisions of this section, together with all other expenses necessarily incurred or occasioned by reason of the establishment or extension of the fire protection district, shall be assessed and levied upon the taxable property in the district and collected in the same manner, at the same time and by the same officers as town taxes are assessed, levied and collected and, when collected, the amount thereof shall be paid to the supervisor of the town. The supervisor shall pay to the city, village, fire district, incorporated fire company or ambulance service furnishing such service the amount to be paid each year for the service in one sum or in installments as the contract may provide.

7. If a fire protection district shall be situated partly in each of two or more towns any action which would be taken by the town board in the case of a district situated in only one town shall be taken by the town boards of the several towns acting jointly by a majority vote of the members of each of such town boards, and the notice of public hearing required by this section shall be given by the town clerks of the several towns acting jointly.

8. By mutual consent of the contracting parties, and after a public hearing held pursuant to notice in the manner aforesaid, any such contract heretofore or hereafter executed may be (1) amended, (2) terminated, or (3) terminated and a new contract may be entered into in lieu thereof, if the town board, after such hearing, shall determine, by resolution, that it is in the public interest so to do. Such notice shall state in general terms the reason why any existing contract is to be amended or terminated, and if a new contract is to be entered into the notice shall also describe the new contract in general terms.

9. The term "fire protection," as used in this section, includes inspections of buildings and properties in the fire protection district for the purposes specified in and as authorized by sections eight hundred seven-a and eight hundred seven-b of the education law, subdivision four of section three hundred three of the multiple residence law, and section one hundred eighty-nine of the town law.

10. The provisions of this section shall not be deemed to have amended subdivision two of section two hundred nine-b or section two hundred nine-d of the general municipal law, or any other general, special or local law requiring the consent of a fire department, fire company or an emergency rescue and first aid squad to the entering into of a contract for services to be performed by such department, company or squad.

Revision Notes: [1955, ch 391] After a fire protection contract has been entered into, changing conditions often require the amendment or termination of the contract or the substitution of a new contract. Opinion No. 6419 of the Department of Audit and Control, October 30, 1953, held in effect that such changes could not be made if they resulted in increased compensation to the unit of government or fire corporation furnishing the fire protection. The Temporary State Commission on Fire Laws believes that there should be greater flexibility in relation to such changes. This act permits any such change after a public hearing and a determination by the town board that the change is in the public interest.

Editor's Notes Laws 2017 ch 294, § 4, eff Jan 1, 2018, provides:

§ 4. This act shall take effect on January first next succeeding the date on which it shall have become a law and shall apply to contracts with a term commencing after March first of the year in which it shall have become a law.

1. In general

In negligence action by homeowners whose residence was destroyed by rekindling of fire after fire chief had assured them that earlier fire had been extinguished, defendant town was not entitled to summary judgment on basis that fire company was independent contractor over which it exercised no control, since CLS N-PCL § 1402(e) specifies that fire company incorporated under statute is under control of town authorities having, by law, control over prevention or extinguishment of fires, and town's concession that it had established fire protection district pursuant to CLS Town § 184(1) made it responsible for providing fire protection. A contract for fire protection is a product of arm's-length bargaining and subject to a public hearing before adoption by a town board. 1969 Ops St Compt File #56.

13. Indemnification for property damage or personal injury

In action by plaintiff who was injured in accident involving vehicle driven by volunteer firefighter responding to fire alarm, fire company incorporated under CLS N-PCL § 1402 was properly granted summary judgment on ground that it was not proper party to action, where town had chosen to establish "fire protection district" (which, unlike "fire district," is not political subdivision independent of town), fire company provided fire protection services within fire protection district pursuant to contract with town, and town retained complete control over fire company and ultimate responsibility for fire protection pursuant to § 1402. Miller v Savage, 237 A.D.2d 695, 654 N.Y.S.2d 215, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2265 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Members of fire police squads are covered under § 205 of the General Municipal Law and § 10 of the Workmen's Compensation Law and other sections related thereto when injured outside of the village while rendering services pursuant to a mutual aid arrangement or while rendering services pursuant to a contract between the fire protection district and the village of which their fire company and fire police squad is a part. 1955 Ops St Compt File #7238.

A fire protection contract may not be entered into between a town board, on behalf of a fire protection district, and village whereby the town at large is required to assume the responsibility for any loss or damage sustained to the fire apparatus of the village in answering, attending or returning from calls in the fire protection district and whereby the town will reimburse the village for such damage and also assume the cost of all materials used by the village in its fire department in connection with such calls excepting gasoline and transportation charges. 1956 Ops St Compt File #8266.

A fire protection contract may not contain provisions whereby the town assumes liability for damage to private vehicles used by volunteer firemen in answering calls or agrees to provide insurance for fire equipment answering protection calls. A town is not liable for damage to apparatus or equipment of a volunteer fire company which contracts to furnish fire protection to one of its fire protection districts. 1963 Ops St Compt #178.

Where the entire unincorporated area of a town is a fire protection district receiving protection under a fire protection contract with a volunteer fire company located within the said unincorporated area of the town, the town is the "home area" liable for volunteer firemen's benefits for members of the fire company. 1967 Ops St Compt File #477.

14. Modification, renewal or termination of contracts

The town board on behalf of a fire protection district may not consent to substitute a new agreement for, nor modify an existing protection contract with a fire district for the purpose of providing increased compensation to the fire district. 1953 Ops St Compt File #6419.

A contract entered into by a town board on behalf of a fire protection district may include a provision whereby the district assumes the responsibility for any damage to the apparatus or equipment of the protecting company while answering calls in the district. 1955 Ops St Compt File #7094.

A town, on behalf of a fire protection district, and with the consent of its fire company, may, upon statutory conditions, terminate a present contract for fire protection and enter into a new one for five years at an annual price of $2,000. 1963 Ops St Compt #77.

A fire protection contract entered into by a village and a Town Board on behalf of a fire protection district for a definite term of three years may not be unilaterally cancelled by the village. 1964 Ops St Compt #559.

Fire protection contract for an original term of one year and a stated number of renewals may be terminated by either party by the notification of the other in writing on or before the 20th day of August of election to terminate the contract on December 31st in that year. Contract for the furnishing of fire protection for a definite period of time may be terminated or amended by mutual consent of parties and after a public hearing. 1964 Ops St Compt File #933.

15. Terms of contracts

Fire protection contract may not be sub-contracted. 1954 Ops St Compt File #6986.

A Town Board, on behalf of a fire protection district, may not agree that in case it cancels a fire protection contract for failure of the fire company to provide adequate protection it will continue to make payment under the contract to any lending institution to which the fire company may have assigned such payments as security. 1963 Ops St Compt #751.

Moneys received by a village from fire protection contracts may not be paid over to the village volunteer fire company furnishing the fire protection unless such contracts so provide. 1968 Ops St Compt File #515.

A town on behalf of a fire protection district may not enter into a five-year contract with a volunteer fire company, leaving the price open and providing for the annual renegotiation of the price. However, other alternatives to a straight five-year contract are available. 1969 Ops St Compt File #242.

Town may not unilaterally impose audit requirement on fire company that provides fire protection by contract to town fire protection district. 2007 Op St Compt No. 07-8.

Fire protection contract with fire company may include provision requiring outside audit of books and records of fire company and, in connection with its authority over fundraising activities of certain fire companies under CLS Gen Mun § 204-a, town board may require, as condition on conduct of those fund raising activities, submission of financial report on receipts and expenditures of proceeds of such activities, and submission of related books and records of fire company for audit. 2007 Op St Compt No. 07-8.

Fire company's debt service expenses for debt incurred to finance firehouse used in connection with providing fire protection service may be considered in course of negotiating "definite sum" payable by town under contract. 2010 Op St Compt No. 10-3.

16. Water supply

Town board may not contract on behalf of fire protection district for rental of hydrants and purchase of water from a water company. Fire district furnishing protection to fire protection district may make such contract with the water company. 1945 Ops St Compt 494.

A water storage reservoir, water pipes and hydrants constructed in a fire protection district may not be financed by the issuance of either bonds or capital notes. 1952 Ops St Compt File #5725.

1. In general

A fire district has no power to tax real property, no power to assess real property and no power to grant or withhold a real property tax exemption. 1976 NY Ops Atty Gen Dec 29.

Transaction in which municipality would apply for loan from emergency services revolving loan account as "surrogate" for private fire company or ambulance service is not authorized under CLS St Fin § 97-pp. 1999 NY Ops Atty Gen F 99-3.

There is no procedure whereby the area of a fire protection district may be annexed to a village solely for purposes of fire protection—a village may provide fire protection to the area of a fire protection district on an on-going basis only by entering into a contract for that purpose with the town board pursuant to Town Law, § 184. 1980 Op St Compt File #43.

A fire district is an independent corporate entity governed by a separate board of fire commissioners, whereas a fire protection district is simply a geographic area, with no independent corporate status, for which the town board is responsible for providing fire protection. 1981 Op St Compt File #1.

The provisions of section 209 of the General Municipal Law relating to answering calls for assistance outside the area regularly served and protected and financial liability for expenses incurred in use of fire equipment when responding to such calls have no application where fire protection is provided pursuant to contract. 1982 Op St Compt File #82-276.

A county may adopt a local law authorizing an appropriation of county moneys to a town to be used to pay a portion of the cost of providing fire protection and ambulance service in a town fire protection district which contains a marina leased by the county. 1983 Op St Compt File #83-49.

2. Cost of services and payment, generally

3. —Consideration for contract

A town on behalf of a fire protection district may provide gasoline as part of the consideration under a fire protection contract so long as a reasonable dollar value is placed on the gasoline and the quantity to be provided is expressed in precise, definite terms. 1983 Op St Compt File #83-10.

4. —Transfer of funds

A town may not transfer general surplus moneys to a fire protection district. 1979 Op St Compt File #456.

There appears to be no authority for the establishment of zones with varying tax rates in a fire protection district. 1953 NY Ops Atty Gen Oct 28 (informal).

The amount of a fire protection contract may be assessed and levied upon the taxable property in a fire protection district at the same time and by the same officers as town taxes are assessed, levied and collected. 1956 NY Ops Atty Gen Sept 10 (informal).

A fire company which provides fire protection in a fire protection district may not bill charitable institutions for its services nor may a town compel the county to issue a bill for fire protection to charitable institutions. 1981 Op St Compt File #81-201.

Where there are three fire protection districts within a town, the cost of the fire protection contract for each of them must be levied against the property of that district; the cost of the separate contracts may not be lumped and levied as a single tax. 1982 Op St Compt File #82-313.

5. Dual office holding

A fire district commissioner may not hold the office of treasurer of the fire district but may hold the office of treasurer of a fire company. 1977 NY Ops Atty Gen March 2.

Positions of member of town board and attorney to water district or fire district are incompatible. 1987 NY Ops Atty Gen No. 87-63 (Informal).

One person may not hold simultaneously the positions of a member of a town board and fire district commissioner. 1987 NY Ops Atty Gen No. 87-69 (Informal).

Town board members who are also members of village fire council do not have conflict of interest with respect to fire protection contract between village and town. 1980 Op St Compt File #101.

6. Entities with which district may contract, generally

7. —Contracts for ambulance services

A town board on behalf of a fire protection district, may contract with a village for the furnishing of general ambulance service by the village fire department emergency rescue and first aid squad where the entity providing fire protection to the fire protection district does not maintain and operate an ambulance, but such contract must first be approved by the fire department and the rescue squad. 1978 Op St Compt File #546.

A fire district may contract for the furnishing of general ambulance service to the town in which it is situated or to an adjoining fire district only pursuant to a fire protection contract with the town on behalf of a fire protection or fire alarm district or with the adjoining fire district, unless another entity is furnishing fire protection to the fire protection or fire alarm district or the adjoining fire district and does not operate and maintain an ambulance, in which case a separate contract for general ambulance service may be entered into. 1979 Op St Compt File #201.

There is no statutory authority for a town to contract with a fire district or the emergency rescue and first aid squad of a fire company for emergency ambulance service to be provided to the town on a town-wide basis. 1980 Op St Compt File #539.

There is no authority for a town to contract with a fire company or a fire district to provide for general ambulance service on a town-wide basis. General ambulance service may be provided to fire protection districts within the town pursuant to fire protection contracts. 1980 Op St Compt File #684.

8. —Contracts with more than one outside agency

A town board acting on behalf of a fire protection district may contract with more than one agency for the furnishing of fire protection within the fire protection district. 1953 NY Ops Atty Gen Oct 15 (informal).

A town may not supply gasoline for fire trucks used by a volunteer fire company that has a contract with a fire protection district in the town. 1979 Op St Compt File #445.

9. Firehouses and apparatus

The Village of Savannah may house all of its fire fighting equipment in a fire house owned and operated by a fire company within an adjacent fire protection district in which the Village furnishes fire protection. 1975 NY Ops Atty Gen Feb 4.

An incorporated volunteer fire company performing services in a fire protection district may set aside part of the payment received each year under the contract to accumulate money for a new fire truck. 1979 Op St Compt No. 79–648.

10. Hearing and notice

A member of a town board may not be compensated for legal services rendered in the formation of a fire protection district. 1953 NY Ops Atty Gen Oct 9 (informal).

Where a village provides fire protection to a fire protection district, the fire protection contract may not require the town, on behalf of the district, to pay for, or provide insurance for volunteer firemen's benefits. However, the additional cost to the village of providing insurance for benefits could be reflected in the contract. 1979 Op St Compt File #858.

11. Hiring and compensation of personnel

The amount payable under a proposed contract for furnishing fire protection to a fire protection district should be mentioned in the notice of hearing. 1949 NY Ops Atty Gen Oct 13.

12. Indemnification for property damage or personal injury

Volunteer Firemen are not covered by the provisions of the Volunteer Firemen's Benefit Law when attending a funeral, whether such attendance is pursuant to orders or by permission from the chief or fire district commissioners. It is questionable whether use of fire department apparatus to transport the body of a deceased fireman for burial is authorized by statute. If a court held that there is no such authorization, the immunity statute would not apply, the Volunteer Firemen's Benefit Law would not provide protection and personal liability might result. 1977 NY Ops Atty Gen Dec 7 (Informal).

A volunteer member of the emergency rescue and first aid squad of a fire company injured in the line of duty while responding to a call from a fire protection district which the company provides fire protection pursuant to contract would be entitled to coverage under the Volunteer Firemen's Benefit Law regardless of whether or not the contract required the company to provide emergency ambulance service. 1982 Op St Compt File #82-236.

13. Modification, renewal or termination of contracts

A town board on behalf of a fire protection district may contract with a village for the furnishing of general ambulance service by the village fire department emergency rescue and first aid squad when the entity providing fire protection to the fire protection district does not maintain and operate an ambulance, but such contract must first be approved by the fire department and the rescue squad. 1979 Op St Compt File #48.

14. Terms of contracts

A town board on behalf of a fire protection district, may contract with a village for the furnishing of general ambulance service by the village fire department emergency rescue and first aid squad where the entity providing fire protection to the fire protection district does not maintain and operate an ambulance, but such contract must first be approved by the fire department and the rescue squad. 1978 Op St Compt File #546.

A village may not contract separately with a central school district to provide fire protection to two school buildings, one within the village and the other outside the village in a fire protection district. 1980 Op St Compt File #45.

Since a fire protection contract entered into by a fire district or by a town, on behalf of a fire protection district, must specify a definite annual sum to be paid for all of the services to be rendered thereunder, provisions whereby the fire district and the fire protection district would also be liable for loss or damage to fire apparatus or equipment and for personal injury or death of firemen, are invalid. 1980 Op St Compt File #757.

Members of an emergency rescue and first aid squad of a volunteer fire company are covered by the Volunteer Firemen's Benefit Law when responding to calls for assistance outside of the fire protection district which the company serves pursuant to contract with a town, whether the call is pursuant to a mutual aid plan or otherwise. A town cannot contract with the company to provide ambulance service for the area of the town outside of the fire protection district. 1981 Op St Compt File #81-112.

There is no requirement that a town board on behalf of a fire protection district award contracts for fire protection pursuant to formal competitive bidding requirements. 1982 Op St Compt File #82-163.

15. Water supply

Where a village fire department which is providing fire protection to a fire protection district constructs a fire station in the district, the town, on behalf of the fire protection district, may not bear the expense of connecting the fire station to the water system. However, the cost of connection may be reflected in a new fire protection contract. 1979 Op St Compt File #658.

§ 184-c. Water supply outside of fire districts

The town board of any town, on behalf of a fire protection district or fire alarm district situated therein, or on behalf of the area of the town outside of any village, fire district, fire protection district or fire alarm district, which area is hereinafter referred to as the "unprotected area", (1) may purchase permanent or temporary rights to take water from cisterns, wells, and bodies of water and water-courses within the fire protection district, fire alarm district or unprotected areas, or may lease such rights, and (2) may construct and maintain, fire suction pools in bodies of water and water-courses, fire cisterns and fire wells, including necessary pipes, pumps, hydrants and other facilities in connection therewith and may purchase and lease necessary real property and rights in land and water therefor, in order to provide a supply of water for any area of such district or unprotected area which does not have an adequate and available supply or which cannot be suitably supplied by contract pursuant to section one hundred eighty-four-a of this chapter.

Before making any purchase or lease of water rights or constructing fire suction pools, fire cisterns and fire wells or acquiring any real property and rights in land and water therefor, the town board (1) shall secure the written statement of the fire chief, or chief engineer, of the fire department or fire company, if any, furnishing fire protection in the district or unprotected area that such sources of water supply are adequate and that such fire suction pools, fire cisterns and fire wells are located properly for fire-fighting purposes and (2) shall hold a public hearing in the district or unprotected area. Notice of the hearing shall be published at least once in at least one newspaper having general circulation in the district or unprotected area, the first publication thereof to be at least ten days prior to the day set for the hearing. The notice shall specify the time when and place where the hearing shall be held, and shall describe in general terms what is proposed to be done pursuant to the provisions of this section.

The water and improvements shall be used for fire-fighting purposes only and such water shall not be sold. The fire suction pools, fire cisterns and fire wells constructed and maintained for the purposes of any such district or unprotected area shall be fenced or covered to prevent trespass by children and domestic animals. Any such improvement shall be located upon real property within the fire protection district, fire alarm district, or unprotected area, which has been acquired by gift, purchase or lease, or upon which an easement has been acquired, by the town board in the name of the town for the purposes of any such district or area, except such portions of the improvement which are located within the bounds of public highways, roads or streets with the consent of the state or local official charged with the supervision of the highway, road or street. No officer or employee of the town shall be liable personally for any damages to persons or property resulting from the maintenance of any such improvement on behalf of any such district or unprotected areas, except such damages as result from his wilful negligence or malfeasance. The town board may purchase insurance to protect the district or unprotected area from liability for damage to persons and property resulting from the maintenance of any such improvement for the district or unprotected area. Expenditures for any such purposes, and any liabilities for any such damage, shall be raised only upon the taxable real property in the district or unprotected area and shall be assessed, levied and collected in the same manner, at the same time, and by the same officers as town taxes are assessed, levied and collected, and, when collected, the amount thereof shall be paid to the supervisor of the town. The supervisor shall disburse such moneys for the purposes aforesaid. Moneys shall not be borrowed to finance the cost of any expenditure made pursuant to this section.

If a fire protection district or fire alarm district shall be situated partly in each of two or more towns any action which would be taken by the town board in the case of a district situated in only one town shall be taken by the town boards of the several towns acting jointly by a majority vote of the members of each of such town boards, and the notice of public hearing required by this section shall be given by the town clerks of the several towns acting jointly.

If, after proceeding pursuant to this section, an adequate supply of water for fire-fighting purposes becomes available for such area, or if a suitable supply may be obtained therefor by contract pursuant to section one hundred eighty-four-a of this chapter, the town board, nevertheless, may continue to act in relation to any such district or unprotected area pursuant to this section.

1. Except as otherwise provided by law, fire districts now existing shall continue to exist as now established, subject to the provisions of this chapter. Except as hereinafter provided no fire district officers shall be appointed or elected as successors to such officers holding office at the time this article shall take effect.

2. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to require the election of fire district commissioners or a fire district treasurer in any water district, highway district, town fire district, water supply district or school district in which fire protection was provided on June first, nineteen hundred thirty-three, pursuant to the provisions of article fourteen of chapter sixty-three of the laws of nineteen hundred nine, entitled "An act relating to towns, constituting chapter sixty-two of the consolidated laws," and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, if there were no fire district commissioners in or for such district on the said first day of June, nineteen hundred thirty-three; but in each town fire district established pursuant to the provisions of chapter two hundred twenty-six of the laws of nineteen hundred sixteen, in which there were town fire commissioners on the first day of June, nineteen hundred thirty-three, five fire district commissioners but no treasurer shall be elected on the fifth day of December, nineteen hundred thirty-three, upon the notice, in the manner and for the terms specified in this section for election of fire district commissioners on such date, and one commissioner shall be elected annually thereafter in the manner provided in this article. The fire district commissioner so elected shall have and may exercise all the powers conferred by this chapter or any other law upon the commissioners of fire districts but the supervisor of the town shall act as the treasurer and the town clerk as secretary of such fire district; provided, however, that in any such town fire district the fire district commissioners may submit at a special fire district election held prior to the first day of October in any year, or at any annual fire district election, the proposition "Shall the fire district treasurer be elected and the fire district secretary be appointed?" If a majority of the votes cast on such proposition submitted as herein provided be in the affirmative, a fire district treasurer shall be elected at the next annual fire district election and a fire district secretary shall thereafter be appointed, as provided in this article. The terms of office of such fire district treasurer and such fire district secretary shall commence on the first day of January next succeeding the date of such annual election. In a town fire district established pursuant to the provisions of chapter two hundred twenty-six of the laws of nineteen hundred sixteen in which there were no town fire commissioners on June first, nineteen hundred thirty-three, the town board shall have and may exercise all the powers conferred upon fire district commissions pursuant to this chapter or any other law except that the supervisor of the town shall act as treasurer of the district and chairman of the commission and the town clerk shall act as secretary thereof. The supervisor whenever acting as treasurer of the fire district shall not be required to give the additional undertaking provided in subdivision four of section one hundred seventy-six but the undertaking executed pursuant to section twenty-five of this chapter shall include and cover the moneys and property of the fire district coming into his hands as treasurer.

3. Every incorporated fire company, and every town fire company established and existing on June first, nineteen hundred thirty-three, pursuant to sections three hundred ten, three hundred eleven and three hundred twelve of article fourteen of chapter sixty-three of the laws of nineteen hundred nine, entitled "An act relating to towns, constituting chapter sixty-two of the consolidated laws," and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, which shall have its headquarters in any water district, water supply district, or highway district, and providing fire protection in such district on the first day of June, nineteen hundred thirty-three, shall continue to exist and may provide fire protection in such districts or any of them, and each such district shall constitute a fire protection district and be subject to all of the provisions of this chapter relating to fire protection districts, so far as the same do not conflict with the provisions of this subdivision. However, any water district, governed by district commissioners, providing fire protection pursuant to this subdivision shall constitute and be a fire district, with all powers and limitations of a fire district so far as the same do not conflict with the provisions of this subdivision. § 187. Exclusion of a fire district from a water supply district

1. Petition. Whenever a fire district shall be located wholly within the boundaries of a water supply district which shall have no bonded indebtedness, a written petition as hereinafter provided may be presented to the town board of the town in which the water supply district is located asking for the exclusion of the area included in the fire district from the water supply district. Such petition shall be signed, and acknowledged or proved in the same manner as a deed to be recorded, or authenticated in the manner provided in the election law for the authentication of nominating petitions, by resident taxpayers owning taxable real property aggregating at least one-half of the assessed valuation of all the taxable real property of the fire district owned by resident taxpayers, as such valuations appear upon the latest completed assessment roll of said town. Such petition shall have endorsed thereon the approval of a majority of the board of fire commissioners of such fire district. The town board shall hold a public hearing upon such petition within the limits of the water supply district and shall cause a notice thereof to be published and posted in the same manner provided for hearings held pursuant to section one hundred seventy-one hereof. Such notice shall contain a description of the fire district referred to in the petition and specify the time when and the place where the town board will meet to consider such petition and to hear all the persons interested in the subject concerning the same. After a hearing held upon notice as provided hereinbefore, and upon the evidence given thereat, the town board shall determine whether it is in the public interest to grant the relief sought. If it is determined that it be not in the public interest to grant the relief sought, it shall deny the petition, but if it is determined that it be in the public interest, it may grant the relief sought by the petition.

2. Filing of determination. Whenever the town board shall adopt a resolution excluding the area included in a fire district from a water supply district, the town clerk shall cause a certified copy of such resolution to be duly recorded in the office of the clerk of the county in which such fire district is located and a certified copy of such resolution to be filed with the secretary of the board of fire commissioners of said district. When so recorded such resolution shall be presumptive evidence of the regularity of the exclusion of such fire district from the water supply district. The expense of such recording shall be a charge against the fire district. The said determination shall be final and conclusive unless a proceeding for review in the manner provided by article seventy-eight of the civil practice law and rules has been commenced within thirty days from the time of filing thereof.

3. Liability for indebtedness; apportionment of liabilities and property. If the town board shall grant a petition for the exclusion of the territory of a fire district from a water supply district and the territory included within the boundaries of the fire district be so excluded, such territory within such fire district shall not be relieved from bearing its proportionate share of any liability or indebtedness incurred for water supply district purposes while such territory was a part of such water supply district, and until such liability shall have been discharged or such indebtedness paid the proportionate share thereof to which such territory would be liable if it had not been excluded from the water supply district, in accordance with assessed valuations as appear on the latest completed assessment roll of said town, shall be added to the annual budget of the fire district by the town board.

The proportion of the liability created or the indebtedness incurred in behalf of the water supply district and payable by a tax against the property within the fire district which shall be assumed by the fire district and the apportionment of the personal and real property belonging to the water supply district shall be determined according to the relative assessed valuation of the personal and real property in that portion of the water supply district without the fire district, and that portion within the fire district, in the following manner: The town board of the town when acting as a board for the water supply district, exclusive of a member who may reside in the fire district and the board of commissioners of the fire district being unable to agree within six months after the exclusion of the fire district from the water supply district becomes final upon the proportion of the debt and the apportionment of the personal and real property, then the supreme court shall have power to determine such division and to enforce such award, division and determination as shall be made in the premises in a suit in equity to be brought in the name of either of said parties.

HISTORY:
Add, L 1988, ch 241, § 1, eff July 8, 1988.

§ 189-a. Procedure

1. The town board of a town or the town boards of more than one town, and the board of trustees of an incorporated village or the boards of trustees of more than one incorporated village, as defined in the village law, located in said town or towns are hereby authorized to establish in such town or towns and village or villages a joint fire district for the purposes hereinafter stated and in the manner hereinafter provided, provided all of the territory in such joint fire district shall be contiguous.

2. (a) Whenever it shall appear to the participating municipalities to be in the public interest, the town board of such town and the board of trustees of such village shall hold a joint meeting at one location within the proposed joint district for the purpose of jointly proposing the establishment of a joint fire district.

(b) If at such joint meeting it is determined by a majority vote of each board to make such proposal, each such board shall, within thirty days thereafter, hold a joint public hearing at one location within the proposed joint district upon such proposal and shall cause notice of such public hearing to be published in a newspaper having general circulation in such town and village, at least once, and posted in five public conspicuous places in the town outside such village and in five public conspicuous places in the village, not less than ten days before the date of the hearing. In the event that the district maintains a website, one of the posting requirements may be fulfilled by posting such information on the website. Notice of such hearing also shall be served by such clerk upon the members of the town board and the members of the board of trustees of the village, by mail addressed to such members at their last known post office addresses, at least ten days before the date of the hearing. Such notice shall contain a brief description of the boundaries of the proposed joint fire district and of the objects and purposes for which it is proposed that a new district be created, and shall specify the single time when and place where such town and village boards will jointly meet to consider the proposal and to hear all persons interested in the establishment of the district. If, upon the establishment of a joint fire district, the joint fire district would become the sponsor of a service award program pursuant to section two hundred sixteen-b of the general municipal law, the notice of hearing shall so specify and contain a statement of the estimated annual cost of the service award program to the joint fire district; provided, however, that if, upon the establishment of a joint fire district, the joint fire district would become the sponsor of a service award program pursuant to section two hundred sixteen-b of the general municipal law, the resolutions establishing the district shall be submitted to referendum in each such town and village in the manner provided by article seven of this chapter or article nine of the village law, respectively.

(c) After such hearing, and upon evidence given thereat, and after considering the objections, if any, the town board of such town and the board of trustees of such village shall determine whether it is or is not in the public interest to establish such joint fire district, and, if it is determined to be in the public interest, subject to permissive referendum, such town board and board of trustees shall, by resolution, duly adopted by a majority of each board, establish such joint fire district; provided, however, that if, upon the establishment of a joint fire district, the joint fire district would become the sponsor of a service award program pursuant to section two hundred sixteen-b of the general municipal law, the resolutions establishing the district shall be submitted to referendum in each such town and village in the manner provided by article seven of this chapter or article nine of the village law, respectively.

(d) In all respects the provisions of article eleven of this chapter, not inconsistent herewith, shall apply to the establishment, operation and management of any joint fire district provided for by this section.

(e) In all respects the provisions of this article, not inconsistent herewith, shall apply to the operation and management of any joint fire district heretofore established pursuant to the unconsolidated laws.

3. If, subsequent to the joint meeting for the establishment of a joint fire district as provided in subdivision two of this section and before the establishment of such district, it is desired to include in such proposed district any portion of the territory of an adjoining town, the procedure shall be as follows:

(a) The town board of the town or towns and the board or boards of trustees of the villages which held such joint meeting and the town board of each adjoining town may hold a joint meeting for the purpose of jointly proposing the inclusion of the territory of such adjoining town in the proposed joint fire district.

(b) If at such meeting it is determined by a majority vote of each board to make such proposal, each such board shall, within thirty days thereafter, hold a joint public hearing upon such proposal and shall cause notice of such public hearing to be published in a newspaper having general circulation in each such town and village, at least once, and posted in five public conspicuous places in each such town outside each such village and in five public conspicuous places in each such village, not less than ten days before the date of the hearing. Notice of such hearing also shall be served by such clerk upon the members of the town board or boards and the members of the board of trustees of the village or villages, by mail addressed to such members at their last known post office addresses, at least ten days before the date of the hearing. Such notice shall contain a brief description of the boundaries of the proposed joint fire district and of the objects and purposes for which it is proposed that a new district be created, and shall specify the time when and place where such town and village boards will meet to consider the proposal and to hear all persons interested in the establishment of the district.

(c) After such hearing, and upon evidence given thereat, and after considering the objections, if any, the town boards of such town and the board of trustees of such villages, shall determine whether it is in the public interest to establish such joint fire district and if it is determined to be in the public interest, subject to permissive referendum, such town boards and boards of trustees shall by resolution, duly adopted by a majority of each board, establish such joint fire district.

(d) In all respects the provisions of article eleven of this chapter, not inconsistent herewith, shall apply to the establishment and the operation and management of any joint fire district provided for by this section.

4. Any joint fire district formed pursuant to the provisions of this article may be extended from time to time to include contiguous territory except contiguous territory in a city. The procedure for extending the district shall be as follows:

(a) The town board of each town and the board of trustees of each village in which any portion of the district as proposed to be extended is located shall hold a joint meeting at one location for the purpose of jointly proposing the extension of the district.

(b) If at such meeting it is determined by a majority vote of each board to make such proposal, each such board shall, within thirty days thereafter, hold a joint public hearing at one location upon such proposal and shall cause notice of such public hearing to be published in a newspaper having general circulation in each affected town and village, at least once, and posted in five public conspicuous places in each affected town outside any affected village and in five public conspicuous places in each affected village, not less than ten days before the date of the hearing. Notice of such hearing also shall be served by such clerk upon the members of each town board and the members of each village board of trustees, by mail addressed to such members at their last known post office addresses, at least ten days before the date of the hearing. Such notice shall contain a brief description of the boundaries of the proposed extension of the joint fire district and of the objects and purposes for which it is proposed that the district be extended and shall specify the single time when and place where such town and village boards will jointly meet to consider the proposal and to hear all persons interested in the extension of the district. If, upon the extension of a joint fire district, the joint fire district would become the sponsor of a service award program pursuant to section two hundred sixteen-b of the general municipal law, the notice of hearing shall so specify and contain a statement of the estimated annual cost of the service award program to the joint fire district; provided, however, that if, upon the extension of a joint fire district, the joint fire district would become the sponsor of a service award program pursuant to section two hundred sixteen-b of the general municipal law, the resolutions establishing the districts shall be submitted in each such town and village in the manner provided by article seven of this chapter or article nine of the village law, respectively.

(c) After such hearing, and upon evidence given thereat, and after considering the objections, if any, the town board of each such affected town and the board of trustees of each such affected village shall determine whether it is or is not in the public interest to extend such joint fire district, and, if it is determined to be in the public interest, subject to permissive referendum, such town board and board of trustees shall, by resolution, duly adopted by a majority of each board, extend such joint fire district; provided, however, that if, upon the extension of a joint fire district, the joint fire district would become the sponsor of a service award program pursuant to section two hundred sixteen-b of the general municipal law, the resolutions establishing the districts shall be submitted in each such town and village in the manner provided by article seven of this chapter or article nine of the village law, respectively.

(d) A signed or certified copy of the determination extending the district shall be recorded in the office of the county clerk and, when so recorded, shall be presumptive evidence of the regularity and validity of the extension of the district and of the acts of the town board or boards and village board or boards of trustees relating thereto. A review of such determination may be had in the manner provided in section one hundred seventy-three of this chapter, except that the undertaking for costs and expenses shall run to such town or towns and village or villages and apply to the costs and expenses of each.

(e) In all respects the provisions of article eleven of this chapter, not inconsistent herewith, shall apply to the extension, operation and management of any joint fire district provided for by this section.

Notes to Decisions

Once the joint fire district has been established, the property and affairs of the district are under the management and control of a board of fire commissioners which may have from 3 to 7 members. The board of commissioners may be appointed by the town board and the village board of trustees in joint session or may be elected in a manner provided in Article 11 of the Town Law. The determination of whether the board of commissioners is appointed or elected is made by the town and village boards "by resolution adopted at the meeting of the establishment of the district in the same manner as a resolution for the establishment of the district is adopted." If the commissioners are appointed, § 189-e of the Town Law provides that where there is an even number of commissioners, village residents may not constitute more than half the board, and where there is an odd number of commissioners, the number of village residents on the board may not exceed the number of town residents by more than one. 1990 Op St Compt 90-27.

Agency Opinions

§ 189-f. Powers of board of commissioners

The board of commissioners shall have and exercise, with respect to such district, the applicable powers and duties of a board of fire district commissioners as prescribed by the town law, with respect to similar functions of a fire district in a town and all of the provisions of article eleven of this chapter shall be applicable to a joint fire district created pursuant to this article. Such powers and duties of the board of district commissioners are subject to the following restriction:

No real property or easement therein shall be acquired by the board of commissioners without the approval of the village board or boards and the town board or boards of each village or town in which any portion of the district is situated. But this restriction shall not apply if, at the meeting for the establishment of any such district hereafter established, a resolution to that effect is adopted in the same manner as the resolution for the establishment of the district is adopted.

The valuation of the real property lying within such joint fire district or within such zone or zones, as so fixed and determined, shall be the valuation subject to taxation for the purposes of such joint fire district or of such zone or zones.

3. The treasurer of each joint fire district shall prepare and file annually in the office of the town clerk of each town in which any part of such joint fire district shall be located, and in the office of the state comptroller, a financial statement setting forth in detail the receipts and expenditures of such joint fire district. 198. Powers of town boards with respect to improvement districts
202-c. Dissolution and diminishing area of certain districts

HISTORY:

Add, L 1932, ch 634.

§ 195. Recording of determination; review by certiorari

The town clerk shall cause a certified copy of the determination or order of the town board adopted pursuant to the provisions of this article, or adopted pursuant to the provisions of article seventeen-A of the general municipal law, establishing, extending, dissolving or diminishing any district, consolidating districts or increasing the maximum amount proposed to be expended for the improvement in any district or extension thereof, or determining to construct any improvement authorized by this article, to be duly recorded in the office of the clerk of the county in which the town is located, within ten days after the adoption of such order or determination by the town board, and when so recorded such determination or order shall be presumptive evidence of the regularity of the proceedings for the establishment, extension, dissolution or diminution of such district, of the proceedings instituted for the construction of such improvement and of all other action taken by said town board in relation thereto.

Within ten days after the adoption of a determination or order by the town board establishing, extending, dissolving or diminishing a district, or consolidating districts, the town clerk shall cause a certified copy thereof to be filed in the office of the state department of audit and control at Albany, New York.

2. Any interested person aggrieved by any final determination or order made pursuant to the provisions of this article may review the same by certiorari provided that the application for such order of certiorari is made within thirty days from the date of the recording of the certified copy of the order or determination in the office of the clerk of the county. The said determination or order shall be final and conclusive unless application has been made for review by certiorari within thirty days from the time of recording thereof. final determination or order he or they will pay to the town board, all such costs and expenses as are incurred by it on account of the said certiorari proceedings, as shall be determined by the court. In the event that upon such review there shall be any modification by the court of said final determination or order the court shall direct the modification thereof by order which shall be final and conclusive and such town board shall cause such order to be recorded and filed in the same places and manner as was the determination or order appealed from.

N.Y. Town Law § 195(2)'s requirement that an interested person aggrieved by a town's final determination or order establishing or extending an improvement district must seek judicial review within 30 days did not bar a power company's challenges to the impositions, by three towns, of special ad valorem levies to finance various special districts because § 195(2) did not bar a plenary action attacking a town's authority or jurisdiction to impose a special ad valorem levy on real property for a special district, which was the nature of the company's challenges. Matter of Niagara Mohawk Power Corp. v Town of Watertown, 6 N.Y.3d 744, 810 N.Y.S.2d 399, 843 N.E.2d 1138, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 3428 (N.Y. 2005).

In taxpayer's action to review assessment for benefits arising because lands assessed are in water district, water commissioners cannot be joined nor can proceeding review formation of water district. A motion to dismiss a petition, on grounds of lack of jurisdiction because of late filing of the order referred to in subd. 1 of this section, will not be granted. Hempstead v Listengart, 275 A.D. 953, 90 N.Y.S.2d 664, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5228 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

Where the proceeding is commenced within the 30 day period prescribed by subd 2 of the above statute, it brings up for review the preliminary order by which jurisdiction to make the final order was obtained. A bond which may be required under subd. 2 of this section as a condition precedent to obtaining review of a determination establishing a water district is intended to cover only security for "cost and expenses", not possible damages, and requiring a bond in the amount of $140,000 is grossly excessive. Tenants by the entirety of property within the proposed district have standing to maintain a proceeding to review the determination of the town board establishing such district since they are "interested persons" within the meaning of subd 2 of the above statute. Reister v Town Board of Fleming, 24 A.D.2d 548, 261 N.Y.S.2d 504, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3801 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1965), aff'd, 18 N.Y.2d 92, 271 N.Y.S.2d 965, 218 N.E.2d 681, 1966 N.Y. Property owners' causes of action, including actions for declaratory judgment and injunctive relief, challenging town's expansion of its sewage treatment facility were time-barred where (1) town board authorized and approved expansion by resolutions in 1988, 1989, and 1990, (2) owners did not challenge those decisions until 1993 or later, well beyond 30-day statute of limitations, and (3) owners did not commence Article 78 proceeding, which CLS Town § 195(2) provides as exclusive method for such challenge. Herzog v Town of Thompson, 251 A.D.2d 917, 674 N.Y.S.2d 830, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7729 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. dismissed, 92 N.Y.2d 943, 681 N.Y.S.2d 471, 704 N.E.2d 224, 1998 N.Y. A proceeding challenging a town board resolution establishing a garbage district and authorizing the issuance of bonds for the construction of a solid waste transfer station, on the basis that certain requirements of the State Environmental Quality Review Act had not been complied with, would be governed by the 30-day limitation period of Town Law §§ 195, 209-g, and not by the four month period of CPLR § 217, since the Town Law statutes require that a review of the establishment of a district, or a determination to construct an improvement, must be made by way of certiorari within 30 days from the recording of the determination in the county clerk's office. Andzel v Gaylord, 126 Misc. 2d 406, 482 N.Y.S.2d 683, 1984 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3632 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1984).

When water district was established more than 3 years previously, no improvement has been constructed for district or services provided by district and no indebtedness is outstanding to accomplish purposes of district, district may be dissolved (subject to public hearing requirements) if town board's determines dissolution to be in public interest; certified copies of board's determination must be recorded in county clerk's office and filed with State Comptroller within 10 days of board's determination. 2002 Op St Compt No. 02-8.

If two towns, by contract, operate a dump or sanitary landfill project, all residents of each town, including the residents of any village therein, must be given the same rights to use the project, and on the same basis, unless an improvement district for this purpose has been formed in only a part of a town or an agreement has been entered into between a town and a village under General Municipal Law § 120-v. 1977 NY Ops Atty Gen Feb 16.

The Grist Mill Water District was established upon adoption by the town board of the resolution required by section 194(2)(b) of the Town Law. If the issuance of indebtedness is proposed to

The town board of every town, except as otherwise provided by law, shall have authority to and may exercise the following powers with respect to improvement districts, heretofore or hereafter established, subject to the provisions of this article:

3. Water districts.

* * * * *

(b) Purchase and sale of water. The town board may contract with any person or corporation, municipal or otherwise, or with a town or county on behalf of a water district, for a supply of water, for a term not to exceed forty years, and shall have the power and authority to resell said water to the inhabitants and consumers in said water district and may use such portion thereof within the district as it may see fit and proper for public purposes and provide for the payment as a town charge of that portion of the cost of said water used by the town. The town board may also sell water for the benefit of such water district to municipalities, water districts, water supply districts and fire districts, and for fire purposes to fire protection districts, fire alarm districts and for "unprotected areas" pursuant to section one hundred eighty-four-a of this chapter, but the town board shall not supply water of such water district to that portion of any fire district, fire protection district, fire alarm district or any such "unprotected area" which shall be included within the boundaries of another water district. The town board, in its discretion, may permit the use of water from hydrants of a water district for fire purposes without charge in all or any part of the area of a fire district, fire protection district, fire alarm district, or "unprotected area", which is wholly or partly included within the area of such water district. The town board may permit any person or corporation owning real estate outside of the water district to use water from a district system for a rental, subject to the restrictions to be prescribed by said board, provided, however, that no such use shall be permitted outside of the town in which such district is located if such territory is served by another water district, a water supply company, city, village or joint water works system unless the approval of the water power and control commission is first obtained. The town board shall not sell nor permit the use of water under this section outside of the district if such use will reduce the supply of water so that it will not be sufficient for the district affected or its inhabitants.

I. Generally

Corporation was entitled to reimbursement of sewer and water tap-in fees it paid without protest under town resolutions that were subsequently declared void since (1) there was direct threat to corporation's property rights in that it could not obtain building permit for scheduled work unless it paid tap-in fees in addition to building permit fee, (2) corporation commenced action to declare resolutions void shortly after tap-in fees were paid, and (3) town would be unjustly enriched if entitled to retain tap-in fees. Video Aid Corp. v Town of Wallkill, 203 A.D.2d 554, 610 N.Y.S.2d 610, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4337 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994), rev'd, vacated, 85 N.Y.2d 663, 628 N.Y.S.2d 18, 651 N.E.2d 886, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 1038 (N.Y. 1995).

Towns generally are not required to provide sidewalks or drainage, but, in a case where public health, safety and welfare will be served, issuance of building permits may be conditioned upon the making of "suitable improvements" on streets adjacent to the lot for which the building permit is sought and propriety of imposing such conditions presents issues of fact for determination at trial. Catalfamo v Zirk, 42 Misc. 2d 429, 248 N.Y.S.2d 315, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1949 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), rev'd, 22 A.D.2d 802, 254 N.Y.S.2d 186, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2825 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1964).

Town board may establish district for purpose of acquiring system previously constructed. 1953 Ops St Compt File #6038.

Where real property is divided by the boundary line of an improvement district, only the value of the part lying within the district is subject to taxation for district purposes. 1974 Ops St Compt File #410.

Town may not establish electrical power district either by local law or pursuant to provisions of CLS Town Arts 12 or 12-A, but town may operate public utility service serving less than entire town if town board determines that such system will nonetheless benefit entire town and serve town purpose. 1987 Op St Compt No. 87-44.

Town board may restrict use of facilities of park district to district residents. 1988 Op St Compt No 88-22.

Town board is without authority to gratuitously transfer personal property to sewer district so that personal property may be sold to generate revenue for district; town may not adopt local law authorizing such gratuitous transfer. 1995 Op St Compt No. 95-17.

Town board, which provides emergency medical service, general ambulance service, or combination thereof on town-wide basis or in ambulance district, may fix schedule of municipal fees for charges to be paid by persons requesting use of those services; absent action by town board to fix such schedule of fees for charges for services to be provided on town-wide basis or within ambulance district, persons within town or ambulance district must receive those services without fee or charge. 1998 Op St Compt No. 98-9.

Town board, on behalf of water district, may establish schedule of water rates including classification under which senior citizens meeting certain income criteria are charged at reduced rate. Ops St Compt 88-57.

2. Leases

Town's agreement with county water authority for construction and retail lease of water system facilities, and operation of all town water districts, was not invalid although its term exceeded maximum 40-year statutory term under CLS Town § 198(12)(b), as plaintiffs failed to show that such illegality amounted to actionable waste or injury, or that town thereby ceded control of its water system, where water authority was obligated to return all leased property at expiration of agreement, and town was afforded opportunity to purchase at cost, less depreciation, any replacements or improvements to which water authority had title. Agreement did not effectuate sale of town's water system without compensation in violation of CLS Town § 198(12)(b) where water authority undertook to make improvements costing more than $3 million and was obligated to operate and maintain town's water system at its own expense. Also, agreement did not abrogate CLS Town § 198(12)(c) on ground that it would generate no proceeds, as statute does not require that lease generate proceeds, but rather provides that proceeds realized (if any) must be applied to satisfy outstanding debt on particular property or facilities being leased. Langdon v Town of Webster, 270 A.D.2d 896, 706 N.Y.S.2d 547, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3413 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 766, 716 N.Y.S.2d 641, 739 N.E.2d 1146, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 2944 (N.Y. 2000).

If property leased by a town to a corporation were not part of a public improvement, the property could be leased by the town subject only to a permissive referendum. Town of Islip was not required to comply with this section before leasing land under the waters of Great South Bay for planting and cultivating shellfish, since land was proprietory in nature and did not change its character because the patent was granted by the state rather than the king or a colonial governor. Bevelander v Islip, 17 Misc.

North Elba Park Commission may, subject to approval of town board, let or lease property to school district without public hearing or referendum. 1965 Ops St Compt File #742.

Separate board of commissioners which governs town water district under CLS Town Art 13, with approval of town board and after complying with public hearing requirements, may enter into lease to permit mobile communications company to use portion of district's real property that is not needed for district purposes, even though remainder of such property may be so needed; lease (1) should contain provision reserving district's right to cancel if leased portion of property is needed for district purposes at future date, (2) should contain other provisions as district deems necessary to ensure that remainder of property may be properly used for district purposes, (3) should be for reasonable term which may bind successor governing boards, and (4) should be for best price obtainable or most beneficial terms and conditions in public interest. 1992 Op St Compt No. 92-23.

Town water district with separately elected board of commissioners is not required to utilize competitive bidding process when selling vehicles that are no longer needed for district purposes; however, method of sale chosen should be one that local officials believe will yield best price or maximum financial benefits. 2010 Op St Compt No. 10-2.

II. Specific Districts

A. Fire Districts

3. In general

Section 184-a of the Town Law does not apply to fire districts. Taxes levied for the purpose of said section 184-a are assessed and levied upon an "ad valorem" basis. A town board may not install fire hydrants unless such hydrants are installed as part of the water system of a water district. 1947 Ops St Compt 237.

4. Hydrants, generally

Water commissioners must charge hydrant rentals to fire district, though both districts co-terminous. 1945 Ops St Compt 396.

A water district may contract with a fire district for the purchase of water and the rental of hydrants for use in protecting against fires. 1946 Ops St Compt 391.

If a board of water commissioners of a water district, created under and pursuant to the Town Law, has been delegated power to sell water and rent hydrants to a fire district, it may enter into a contract for such sale and rental as provided in subdivision 3(b) of section 198 of the Town Law. In the absence of such contract it has no authority to permit the use of such water by the fire district. 1947 Ops St Compt 379.

A town board may not permit the use of water and hydrants for fire protection purposes in a water district unless a contract for the purchase of water and the rental of hydrants has been made. There is no statutory provision indicating the basis for fixing such price although it would not seem reasonable that the town board should be permitted to fix an exorbitant figure. 1952 Ops St Compt File #5803.

A town board has no authority to contract, on behalf of a water supply district, for the erection and maintenance of fire hydrants for a term to exceed five years. 1953 Ops St Compt File #5971.

The board of fire commissioners of a fire district may contract with a village for a term not to exceed five years for the erection and maintenance of hydrants on the village supply line running through the fire district. The cost of such contract would be a general district charge unless the district were zoned. A water supply district could be established to accomplish the same purpose as zoning of the fire district. 1953 Ops St Compt File #6185.

In the absence of a contract, the town board may not withhold hydrant rentals from funds due a fire company for fire protection. 1954 Ops St Compt File #6903.

No water district may permit a fire district to use its fire hydrants until a contract had been made and the town board may not evade this requirement by charging a nominal amount only. 1955 Ops St Compt File #7753.

Rental of fire hydrants is not a general town charge. 1957 Ops St Compt File #274.

A town board may not furnish water for fire protection by rental of hydrants, as a general town charge. 1957 Ops St Compt File #352.

As a possible solution for the problem created by the hydrant charge being assessed against the entire area of the fire protection district, those residents requesting the hydrant service might form a water district or a water supply district. 1967 Ops St Compt File #363.

5. —Location of hydrants

A town board may, in its discretion, change the location of a hydrant in a water district, at the expense of the district. 1955 Ops St Compt File #7283.

The board of fire commissioners of a fire district may not contract with a water district for erection of a hydrant on school district property, since water district lacks authority to make such installation. 1955 Ops St Compt File #7315.

B. Garbage And Refuse Districts

Property owners within residential district of town are entitled to judgment enjoining town and members of town board from erecting garbage disposal plant on property of town situated in zoning residence "A" district in violation of zoning ordinance enacted pursuant to former § 141-c, subd. 18, under which property owners have acquired vested rights. Disposal of garbage and refuse constitutes corporate and not governmental function of town. O'Brien v Greenburgh, 239 A.D. 555, 268 N.Y.S. 173, 1933 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8096 (N.Y. App. Div. 1933), aff'd, 266 N.Y. 582, 195 N.E. 210, 266 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 582, 1935 N.Y. LEXIS 1463 (N.Y. 1935), limited, New Rochelle v State, 19 A.D.2d 674, 241 N.Y.S.2d 272, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3478 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963), disapproved, In re County of Monroe's Compliance with Certain Zoning & Permit Requirements, etc., 72 N.Y.2d 338, 533 N.Y.S.2d 702, 530 N.E.2d 202, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 2697 (N.Y. 1988).

Town sanitation commission's denial of petitioner's application to operate solid waste collection business was not arbitrary and capricious, or abuse of discretion under town code, in view of evidence that petitioner's parent company, which solely controlled petitioner's operations, had violated local and federal regulations concerning waste collection in numerous states. Browning-Ferris Indus. v Danahy, 210 A.D.2d 477, 620 N.Y.S.2d 1004, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13123 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994).

Pursuant to N.Y. Town Law § 198(9), a town improvement district could only enter into a contract by action of the town board. Therefore, the town improvement district's motion to dismiss a service provider's breach of contract action because of the provider's failure to file a notice of claim was granted because the appropriate defendant was the town and, irrespective of the defendant named, a notice of claim was required under N.Y. Town Law § 65(3). Covanta Niagara, L.P. v Town of Amherst Garbage & Refuse Dist. No.1, 840 N.Y.S.2d 689, 16 Misc. 3d 656, 2007 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4095 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2007), aff'd, 49 A.D.3d 1295, 853 N.Y.S.2d 518, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2208 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2008).

A town board may, on its own motion, and on behalf of a refuse and garbage district, increase the services to be supplied within the district to include the collection of rubbish as well as garbage so long as the total annual expenditure for all services supplied does not exceed the maximum amount, if any, stated in the petition for the establishment of the district. 1953 Ops St Compt File #6385.

The commissioners of a sanitary district (garbage and refuse district) operating pursuant to the provisions of Chapter II, Title I, Article 1 of the Nassau County Civil Divisions Act may enact a sanitary ordinance providing for penalties for its willful disobedience. 1966 Ops St Compt File #459.

A town board may not contract with a private landfill operator for collection and disposal of refuse on lands the town has not acquired pursuant to statute, and retains no control over the operation and services to be rendered. 1972 Ops St Compt File #95.

A town board, on behalf of a refuse and garbage district, may contract with villages located within the town, but excluded from the district, for the collection of village refuse; the town board's resolution authorizing the contract would not be subject to referendum. 1991 Op St Compt No. 91-14.

7. Budgeting matters

Annual budget adopted for a certain year need not provide for entire amount due under a contract for garbage removal where contract runs until April 1st of the next year. 1955 Ops St Compt File #7336.

The annual budget and assessment roll of a refuse and garbage district, the cost of which is assessed on the benefit basis, is subject to the public hearing required by section 202-a of the Town Law. A unit basis charge imposed against users of the service does not require such a hearing. 1972 Ops St Compt File #894.

8. Exclusive contracts

Local law mandating that all solid waste processed or otherwise handled within locality be processed at designated facility constituted valid exercise of locality's police power. Nor did local law constitute unlawful taking of property in violation of due process rights of operators of solid waste transfer station since operators could still operate recycling facility at their site within locality and were thus not deprived of all economically viable uses of their property; while operators had some vested interest in their permit to operate solid waste transfer station, expiration of that permit rendered moot any claim that local law retrospectively diminished or retroactively invalidated their vested rights. Clarkstown v C&A Carbone, 182 A.D.2d 213, 587 N.Y.S.2d 681, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10378 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 80 N.Y.2d 760, 591 N.Y.S.2d 138, 605 N.E.2d 874, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 3848 (N.Y. 1992), rev'd, 511 U.S. 383, 114 S. Ct. 1677, 128 L. Ed. 2d 399, 1994 U.S. LEXIS 3477 (U.S. 1994).

A town may not enter into a contract whereby exclusive collection and removal privileges of garbage and waste from premises occupied by residents of the town may be given to one contractor. 1955 Ops St Compt File #7743.

9. Rates, charges and fees, generally

Where party is precluded from receiving any garbage collection services from town, there is no basis for town to impose garbage collection tax on party. Condominium homeowner's association was entitled to declaratory judgment that imposition of town garbage collection taxes against association was improper where town resolution that allowed development of condominium made garbage collection sole responsibility of association and prohibited association from requesting or petitioning town to provide garbage collection services; there was no merit to town's contentions (1) that garbage collection services existed and had been refused by association, since record was devoid of evidence that town resolution had been rescinded or that town ever offered to provide garbage collection services to association, and (2) that, by agreeing to town resolution provision regarding garbage collection, condominium's developer intended to continue imposition of tax and waive collection of services, since record did not support such interpretation of provision. Where imposition of garbage collection tax against condominium homeowner's association was held to be improper, association was entitled to refund of taxes paid for period starting on date that association's attorney notified town attorney by letter that it would seek refund of taxes, but not for period prior to that date, since there was no evidence that association paid taxes under duress. Landmark Colony at Oyster Bay Homeowners' Ass'n v Oyster Bay, 145 A.D.2d 542, 536 N.Y.S.2d 96, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13669 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Local law mandating that all solid waste processed or otherwise handled within locality be processed at designated facility did not amount to unreasonable, discriminatory burden on interstate commerce as applied to operators of solid waste transfer station, even though garbage is article of commerce within meaning of Commerce Clause, since (1) Commerce Clause protects interstate market, not particular interstate firm, (2) local law imposed no special fees, taxes, prohibitions or duties on those transporting out-of-state articles of commerce but instead applied evenhandedly to all solid waste processed within locality, regardless of point of origin, and (3) $11 difference between locality's "tipping" fee and tipping fee charged by instant operators had no more than incidental effect on interstate flow of solid waste. Clarkstown v C&A Carbone, 182 A.D.2d 213, 587 N.Y.S.2d 681, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10378 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 80 N.Y.2d 760, 591 N.Y.S.2d 138, 605 N.E.2d 874, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 3848 (N.Y. 1992), rev'd, 511 U.S. 383, 114 S. Ct. 1677, 128 L. Ed. 2d 399, 1994 U.S. LEXIS 3477 (U.S. 1994).

Court erred in granting a homeowners association (HOA) summary judgment and declaring that garbage disposal taxes a town imposed on HOA members pursuant to N.Y. Town Law 198(9) were invalid under N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 102(14); although the town did not collect the members' garbage, there was a triable issue of fact as to whether the members received the benefit of other services provided by the town's solid waste disposal district. Landmark Colony at Oyster Bay Homeowners Assn., Inc. v Town of Oyster Bay, 91 A.D.3d 726, 936 N.Y.S.2d 301, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 356 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2012).

Property located within a garbage and refuse district is liable for the payment of rates, charges and fees, whether in actuality benefited or not, if the affirmative determination of the town board has become final after appropriate procedure. 1954 Ops St Compt File #6772.

The commissioners of a sanitary district can provide for such extra services as may be necessary to properly care for the disposal of unusual amount of garbage and refuse from business properties and to charge such extra rates or fees as are commensurate with the additional services. 1955 Ops St Compt File #7291.

Charges, fees or rates for the collection or disposal, or for both the collection and disposal of waste matter in a town refuse and garbage district should be collected by the town and not by the individual contractor or contractors providing the service. 1972 Ops St Compt File #270.

Under CLS Mun H R § 10, town may finance town-wide refuse collection services through system of user fees instead of through town general tax, and system of user fees may be established with varying rates to be charged to different classes of users related to varying benefits received by each class of owner. 1987 Op St Comp No. 86-88.

10. —Ad valorem assessment

Ad valorem assessments by refuse and garbage district to provide garbage collection services are permissible under CLS Town §§ 198(9)(b) and 202(3). Sysco Corp. v Hempstead, 133 A.D.2d 751, 520 N.Y.S.2d 40, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 51792 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Utility company was entitled to summary judgment declaring invalid ad valorem levies imposed against company's gas and electric transmission and distribution facilities by various garbage collection districts within town since there was no question that properties in question did not generate any solid refuse, and thus were not benefited properties as defined by CLS RPTL § 102(14) and could not be subject of taxes imposed under CLS Town § 198. Long Island Lighting Co. v Office of Supervisor, 233 A.D.2d 300, 649 N.Y.S.2d 717, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11596 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996), app. dismissed, 89 N.Y.2d 1029, 658 N.Y.S.2d 244, 680 N.E.2d 618, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 403 (N.Y. 1997).

Town was properly enjoined from continuing to impose special ad valorem taxes on a taxpayer's mass property, even though control of property taxation was centralized at the county level in Nassau County, as under this section, the town could establish and extend special districts for garbage and refuse collection services; the town and the county both had roles in determining which properties were subject to special ad valorem taxes. New York Tel. Co. v Supervisor of Town of Hempstead, 115 A.D.3d 821, 982 N.Y.S.2d 162, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1689 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 24 N.Y.3d 905, 995 N.Y.S.2d 714, 20 N.E.3d 660, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 2553 (N.Y. 2014).

Although the town board has the right to assess the expense of providing garbage and rubbish collection service on an ad valorem basis, it could not at the same time restrict the benefit to the point where it was in effect nonexistent. The restricted volume of 40 pounds per day rubbish collection at an industrial plant which generated 45,000 pounds per day refuse and garbage rendered ad valorem assessments, inequitable. Sperry Rand Corp. v North Hempstead, 53 Misc. 2d 970, 280 N.Y.S.2d 600, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1560 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1967), aff'd, 29 A.D.2d 968, 290 N.Y.S.2d 864, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4244 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1968).

Telephone lines, wires, cables, supports, electrical enclosures, and easements that were owned by a telephone company were not "benefited" properties under Real Prop. Tax Law § 102(14) for purposes of an ad valorem tax that was imposed to defray the cost of collecting garbage because those properties did not generate solid waste, and the trial court properly granted the telephone company's motion for summary judgment on its claim that it was illegally taxed. N.Y. Tel. Co. v Supervisor of Oyster Bay, 6 A.D.3d 511, 775 N.Y.S.2d 349, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4443 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2004), aff'd, 4 N.Y.3d 387, 796 N.Y.S.2d 7, 828 N.E.2d 964, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 702 (N.Y. 2005).

11. What items are disposable

The primary responsibility for determining what items may be disposed of in the public refuse disposal system as waste or rubbish rests with the municipality. 1966 Ops St Compt File #113.

A refuse and garbage district may be created for the purpose of collecting leaves, brush and twigs during the spring and fall. 1967 Ops St Compt File #466.

C. Lighting Districts

A town is authorized to erect street lights as a municipal function. In dispute as to whether contract between public utility and town for installation of lighting standards was a public works contract, it was within the competence of the industrial commissioner to determine whether the utility's employees were performing work in the field surveyed by him and to find the classification of the jobs involved. Long Island Lighting Co. v Industrial Comm'r, 40 A.D.2d 1003, 338 N.Y.S.2d 751, 1972 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3063 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1972), app. dismissed, 32 N.Y.2d 646, 342 N.Y.S.2d 852, 295 N.E.2d 652, 1973 N.Y. LEXIS 1452 (N.Y. 1973), aff'd, 34 N.Y.2d 725, 357 N.Y.S.2d 493, 313 N.E.2d 787, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1607 (N.Y. 1974).

Contrary to contention that attachment of lighting equipment to telephone utility's poles by town and its lighting district constituted an authorized de facto condemnation of an interest in real property because utility's special franchise to erect and maintain poles in public highways was an interest in real property, such franchise was not an interest in real property. Real property necessary for functioning of a town lighting district may be acquired by means of condemnation, but town and its lighting district do not have power to condemn personal property. New York Tel. Co. v North Hempstead, 86 Misc. 2d 487, 385 N.Y.S.2d 436, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3362 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1975), aff'd, 52 A.D.2d 934, 385 N.Y.S.2d 505, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12804 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1976).

Where a town board made contract for lighting of town, the remedy of an unpaid creditor is against town rather than against town board since board acted as agent of town in making contract. Dunn v Whitestown, 185 F. 585, 1911 U.S. App. LEXIS 5105 (C.C.D.N.Y. 1911).

A corporate taxpayer may not contract with an electric utility for the lighting of public streets and highways. 1955 Ops St Compt File #7350.

A village may extend its lighting system outside of the village and sell electricity to individuals, with the approval of the public service commission and the consent of the town board. It is not necessary that a lighting district be established in order that electricity be sold outside a village. 1955 Ops St Compt File #7427.

A town board has discretion to contract for as many lights in a lighting district as it sees fit, from time to time. If a maximum expenditure for the service was stated in the petition for the establishment of the lighting district, the contract amount may not exceed that sum. 1967 Ops St Compt File #201.

Town board, on behalf of lighting district whose sole asset is service contract, may (subject to mandatory referendum) sell service contract to town in which district is located, in order for town to include area encompassing district as part of its general town lighting function, and town board may then dissolve lighting district, under CLS Town § 198(12). 2001 Opns St Comp No. 01-15.

13. Lighting for schools

A lighting district cannot be established to include only property owned by a central school district. 1960 Ops St Compt File #227.

Where certain lighting is to be installed by the town to light a portion of highway, an agreement may be entered into by the town and a school district for jointly lighting the highway and the exterior of the school building. 1968 Ops St Compt File #742.

D. Park Districts

Subdivision 4 of this section empowers town boards to sell any property acquired for park purposes and to apply the proceeds to the purchase of other property for park purposes, and allows town board to fix reasonably charges for the use of parks by persons other than inhabitants and taxpayers of such district. Atlantic Beach Property Owners' Ass'n v Hempstead, 3 N.Y.2d 434, 165 N.Y.S.2d 737, 144 N.E.2d 409, 1957 N.Y. LEXIS 903 (N.Y.), reh'g denied, 3 N.Y.2d 942, 1957 N.Y. LEXIS 1528 (N.Y. 1957).

The provisions of this section deal solely with a "park district" park, which is a completely different type of park from a town public park. Hence, this section did not qualify other sections authorizing the establishment of public parks by a town or require village consent to the establishment of a public park within the area of a village. Lloyd Harbor v Huntington, 4 N.Y.2d 182, 173 N.Y.S.2d 553, 149 N.E.2d 851, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1064 (N.Y. 1958).

The town board, on behalf of a park district, may not acquire and operate a water system for general household use by residents. Expenditure of $17,000 for acquisition of a water system in a water district would not be an undue burden where the assessed valuation of a district is between $80,000 and $90,000. 1947 Ops St Compt 291.

A park district may not be established in a town, in which title to park property will be retained by the present owner, said owner to be reimbursed, however, from park district moneys, for the original cost of acquisition of the park property and also the facilities of a park district may be limited to residents and property owners within the park district. 1947 Ops St Compt 316.

A town board, after a park district has been established and the maximum amount fixed by the petition expended for acquisition of park lands and improvement thereof, may not expend further sums in subsequent years for further capital improvements. 1953 Ops St Compt File #6176.

The Manhasset Park District may not dispose of its lands held for park purposes unless the proceeds of such sale at least equal the cost of such lands and unless the proceeds are used to acquire other lands for park purposes. 1953 Ops St Compt File #6247.

If all of the facilities of a water district are sold to a water authority, the proceeds of the sale may not be invested, nor may an excess over the required reserve be used to acquire and maintain a park for the residents of the water district. 1957 Ops St Compt File #57-424.

Cost of construction of park facilities undertaken solely for purpose of increasing possibility of obtaining state and federal aid for sewer district project may not be included as part of cost of district. 1988 Op St Compt No 88-22.

Town may not, pursuant to CLS Town Law Article 12 or 12-A, establish overlapping town districts authorized to provide same improvements or services, such that town may not establish park district within boundaries of existing park district. Ops State Compt 89-58.

15. Easements

Town Board may acquire lands in park district for public parking without consent of State Comptroller and without following procedure for establishment of an improvement district. 1945 Ops St Compt 438.

Subject to the limitations contained herein, a town board may sell, convey or transfer easements acquired for park purposes. 1953 Ops St Compt File #6194.

16. Recreational facilities, generally

Property acquired in park district for park purposes may not be leased to private corporation for a ski lift and ski trail. 1945 Ops St Compt 187.

Town may not charge its residents an admission for admittance to its public parks though it may charge for the use of special park facilities located therein. 1946 Ops St Compt 406.

The recreational facilities of a park district cannot be rented out for the exclusive use of any private organization, whether for one evening or for a longer period. 1968 Ops St Compt File #958.

Where three park districts become owners, as tenants in common, of park property, the town boards, jointly, may grant a license to private organizations for use of buildings thereon which are unnecessary and unused for park purposes. 1971 Ops St Compt File #632.

The Town of North Elba Public Parks and Playgrounds District may not acquire or construct recreational facilities outside the district. 1976 Ops St Compt File #992.

Subject to equal protection guaranties, town board may exclude nonresidents of park district from facilities of district; however, town board may also permit nonresidents to use park facilities, with or without fee; if town board permits use of park district facilities by nonresidents, it may impose reasonable regulations on that use, subject to constitutional equal protection guaranties. 1988 Op St Compt No 88-25.

Subject to equal protection guaranties, town board may exclude nonresidents of park district from facilities of district; however, town board may also permit nonresidents to use park facilities, with or without fee; if town board permits use of park district facilities by nonresidents, it may impose reasonable regulations on that use, subject to constitutional equal protection guaranties. 1988 Op St Compt No 88-25.

17. —Beaches

Bathing beaches are parks. A town could establish a public bathing beach any place within the town, including town-owned land within an incorporated village even though a village zoning law prohibited such a park. Chapter 840 of Laws of 1955 providing that a certain town could establish public bathing beaches in a town only confirmed power which the town already possessed, and effected no change in the village charter and was not violative of the Constitution. Town Law § 198(4) was not applicable and did not qualify other statutes granting authority to establish public parks. Lloyd Harbor v Huntington, 4 N.Y.2d 182, 173 N.Y.S.2d 553, 149 N.E.2d 851, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1064 (N.Y. 1958).

Easements to construct and maintain a boardwalk fronting on a beach may be acquired by park district where such easements are described in the petition presented for the establishment of such district. 1945 Ops St Compt 448.

Pre-existing beach or lake rights are not abrogated by a town's mere purchase of the property involved. The extent to which the owners of such rights may be subjected to rules and regulations depends on the propriety thereof as an exercise of the police power. 1972 Ops St Compt File #54.

18. —Swimming pools

A town board on behalf of a park district may impose charges for the use of a swimming pool or tennis court within a park district park. 1965 Ops St Compt File #285.

A park district may be formed by a town for the construction of a swimming pool. 1967 Ops St Compt File #960.

E. Parking Districts

A town parking district is not a legal entity which may be sued. However, the members of the town board were liable for negligence in the performance of their official duties and since they were named as defendants in the action "as commissioners" of the district their description "as commissioners" could be treated as surplusage and the complaint should not be dismissed. Anderson v Port Washington Public Parking Dist., 1 A.D.2d 826, 148 N.Y.S.2d 489, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6428 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1956).

A parking authority, created by a Town Board, was said not to be a public or private corporation subject to suit but the members of the Town Board could be sued for any negligence in construction or maintenance. Anderson v Port Washington Public Parking Dist., 143 N.Y.S.2d 136, 207 Misc. 824, 1955 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3619 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1955), rev'd, 1 A.D.2d 826, 148 N.Y.S.2d 489, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6428 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1956).

Town board may acquire lands in park district for public parking without consent of State Comptroller, but may not acquire lands for other purposes without consent of State Comptroller, unless moneys available from sale of other park lands. 1945 Ops St Compt 410.

Town may establish public parking areas within a village. 1953 Ops St Compt File #6345.

The Manhasset Park District of the Town of N. Hempstead in Nassau County may acquire town lands not devoted to a public purpose and create a public parking place in such district without a special act of the legislature. 1955 Ops St Compt File #7330.

Where a town has established a parking district it may, nevertheless, purchase or lease land in the parking district for public parking purposes as a general town charge. 1969 Ops St Compt File #339.

20. "Entry fee"

Town could not, by local law, impose one-time "entry fee" on properties within extension of public parking district, in amount equivalent to assessments that would have been imposed on properties for 5 previous years had they been in parent district. 2001 Opns St Comp No. 01-7.

F. Sewer And Drainage Districts

Town exceeded its permissible powers by exacting sewer and water tap-in fees in order to offset cost of capital improvements. Video Aid Corp. v Town of Wallkill, 203 A.D.2d 554, 610 N.Y.S.2d 610, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4337 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994), rev'd, vacated, 85 N.Y.2d 663, 628 N.Y.S.2d 18, 651 N.E.2d 886, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 1038 (N.Y. 1995).

Sewer district lands, not required for the purposes of the district, may be leased to the town. 1947 Ops St Compt 462.

A town board may prohibit the connection of roof gutter leads with a sanitary sewer and enforce its ordinance, rule or regulation by providing for appropriate punishment, and may further enforce such prohibition by injunction. 1953 Ops St Compt File #6128.

A drainage district may be established for the purpose of constructing improvements designed to prevent silting of a creek outlet and consequent flooding of riparian real property. 1953 Ops St Compt File #6382.

Town board may enter into contracts on behalf of sewer district for joint disposal of sewage and apportionment of expense. 1954 Ops St Compt File #6543.

A town board, acting on behalf of a sewer district may not accept a gift of water to facilitate the treatment of sewage upon the condition that the sewer district never be extended (Town L Articles 12, 12-A) or upon the condition that disposal plant operations be limited to sewage originating within the original district (Town L § 64, subd 8). However, the board could accept such a gift where the term thereof was limited to so long as a disposal plant should remain in operation or for so long as such plant did not treat outside sewage (Town L §§ 198, subd 1, 202, subd 5). 1959 Ops St Compt #18.

A town board may act pursuant to Town Law § 64(11-a) to protect property within the town from overflowing water courses or it may establish a drainage district and improve such water course to protect such district. 1960 Ops St Compt File #432.

After a sewer district shall have been established, the town board may contract with any person or corporation, municipal or otherwise, for supplying the inhabitants of such district with sanitary sewer facilities and contract for joint disposal of sewage with apportionment of costs between contracting parties. In addition to any other general or special powers vested in municipal corporations and districts, they have the power to enter into agreements among themselves to do jointly all that which they are empowered to do severally. 1968 Ops St Compt File #943.

Cost of construction of park facilities undertaken solely for purpose of increasing possibility of obtaining state and federal aid for sewer district project may not be included as part of cost of district. 1988 Op St Compt No 88-22.

A town, on behalf of a town sewer district, may contract with a county to provide sewer service to properties within a county sewer district; the cost of such a contract would be financed by the county in the same manner as other operation and maintenance costs incurred by the district. 1991 Op St Compt No. 91-24.

County parks are not subject to the mandate contained in the sewer ordinances of villages and towns in which they are located that all property owners within a specified distance of a newly installed sewer line connect to the municipal sewer system. If the county elects to connect, the town or village is not precluded by Article VIII, § 1 of the State Constitution from exempting the county from payment of sewer rents and connection fees. Whether such exemption would be subject to attack by other users of the system as a denial of equal protection of the laws or discriminatory depends upon the validity of the classification of the county as an exempt user. 1981 Op St Comp File # 81-400.

22. Article 78 proceeding

In an Article 78 proceeding, an application by a landowner to tie into the sewer system of a town the sewer system of a warehouse that he wanted to convert into an office building would be granted, where the town's conditioning of approval of the sewer connection on the landowner's limiting the occupancy of the building to 54 employees and parking to 50 spaces was arbitrary, capricious, and an abuse of discretion, even though the landowner did not have an automatic right to the sewer connection without the consent of the town, where the application was rejected because of the potential increase in traffic, where there was no indication in the record that such an increase would adversely impact on the sewer system, where traffic in any case would be substantially lessened by conversion of the building from a warehouse to an office building, and where the town attorney in response to the landowner's application had noted that the sewer line was readily available to the landowner's property. Svenningsen v Passidomo, 95 A.D.2d 833, 463 N.Y.S.2d 874, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18771 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1983), aff'd, 62 N.Y.2d 967, 479 N.Y.S.2d 335, 468 N.E.2d 290, 1984 N.Y. LEXIS 4477 (N.Y. 1984).

23. Condemnation

Moneys received on behalf of a sewer district as a condemnation award may be used for any general sewer district purpose. 1957 Ops St Compt File #317.

24. Multiple sewer districts

Where enlargement of a sewage disposal plant owned by one sewer district is contemplated to serve three other sewer districts in the same town, it is not necessary to have four separate bond issues for the four separate districts. 1954 Ops St Compt File #6724.

The town board may adopt, in one ordinance, rules and regulations covering all sewer districts in the town. Such ordinance may also be made applicable to future districts upon their creation. 1955 Ops St Compt File #7603.

25. Out-of-district service

Under circumstances that petitioner, whose property consisted of two contiguous parcels bisected by boundary line between town and city, had been treated by town officials who authorized sewer hook-in to petitioner's building as though his entire property were located in the sewer district and no actual contract was entered into, nor was petitioner given an estimate of fee prior to hook-in, town officials could not claim benefit of statute allowing upon board to contract to dispose of sewage from property outside of sewer district. Geller v O'Neill, 57 A.D.2d 865, 394 N.Y.S.2d 248, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12090 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1977).

The board of commissioners of a sewer district may not extend sewer district sewers into territory outside of the district. 1955 Ops St Compt File #7398.

A town board and/or a board of commissioners, on behalf of a sewer district, may enter into a contract with a private individual for disposal of sewage from his real property which is situated outside of the sewer district. 1972 Ops St Compt File #199.

26. Sewer rents

Local law enacted by town which established sewer rent schedule for district did not violate CLS Gen Mun § 451(1)(e) as applied to commercial office and small store buildings such as petitioner's corporate office, even if it computed sewer rents for such properties based simply on assessed valuation because, where sewage discharge was not monitored by individual meters and district was subject to substantial inflow and infiltration problems caused by age of system, unrelated to any actual consumption of services, district was unable to calculate precise individual usage, and employing assessed valuation as basis for additional rent and debt points for commercial buildings was neither unreasonable nor arbitrary given nexus between higher assessed valuation and number of people served within commercial unit and corresponding amount of sewage created. Also, local law did not violate equal protection on ground that commercial office and small store buildings (such as petitioner's corporate office) were only properties subject to surcharge based on threshold assessed valuation, even if sewer rent schedule did not create exact congruence between cost of services provided and rates charged to particular customers, as scheme did not involve fundamental interest or challenged classification, and employing assessed valuation as basis for additional rent and debt points for commercial buildings had rational basis given nexus between higher assessed valuation and number of people served within commercial unit and corresponding amount of sewage created. Frontier Ins. Co. v Town Bd., 285 A.D.2d 953, 728 N.Y.S.2d 311, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7631 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

Moneys in a sewer rent fund shall be used, first, to pay maintenance expenses and, thereafter, to pay debt service on capital improvements to the sewer system which have been financed in the first instance by the issuance of obligations, and to the extent that moneys are raised for such expenditures by sewer rents, assessments may not be levied upon the benefited real property of the district. 1985 Op St Compt No. 85-69.

G. Water Districts

Town board's causes of action against water districts to recover unpaid minimum consumption rates were time barred under CLS Town § 65(3) due to town board's failure to file notices of claim against water districts within 6 months of date on which its right to make demand for payment had accrued. Town Bd. v Meehan, 226 A.D.2d 702, 642 N.Y.S.2d 42, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4594 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 811, 649 N.Y.S.2d 378, 672 N.E.2d 604, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3048 (N.Y. 1996).

In declaratory judgment action challenging town's appropriation of up to $1,021,259 from water district capital reserve fund account for costs related to agreements with county water authority for construction and lease of water facilities and operation of all town water districts, court properly ruled that use of water fund was controlled by CLS Town § 198(3)(d) which states that money collected from water charges "shall be applied toward the maintenance, operation, enlargement and improvement of the water system" and for payment of principal and interest of bonds issued for such purposes; thus, while some Town Law provisions require expenses to be apportioned on correlative benefit basis (e.g., CLS Town §§ 202, 202-a, 202-b, 208), there was no such restriction on expenditure of funds generated from town's sale of water. Langdon v Town of Webster, 270 A.D.2d 896, 706 N.Y.S.2d 547, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3413 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 766, 716 N.Y.S.2d 641, 739 N.E.2d 1146, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 2944 (N.Y. 2000).

The distribution system of a water district may not be leased to a city, the city to maintain and repair the system, and to grant refunds to the district for each person purchasing water from the system. 1947 Ops St Compt 471.

The town board, as governing board of the water district may permit the developer to connect to the district water system for the purpose of purchasing water from the district. 1954 Ops St Compt File #6991.

Water district may not permit free use of a facility for town park purposes even though the facility is no longer needed for water district purposes. 1954 Ops St Compt File #6997.

Water district may purchase disused town garage. Town board may employ a qualified realty appraiser. After acquiring the building, the district may sell or lease any part thereof not required for district purposes. 1966 Ops St Compt File #736.

A water district may not make a gift of its water to a town. A fair and adequate consideration, for the class of consumer serviced, must be received for such water. 1968 Ops St Compt File #1068.

Where a town board on behalf of a water district acquires a private water company facility, it may also acquire such company's accounts receivable and enforce the payment thereof by civil action. 1976 Ops St Compt File #298.

Town, by ordinance, may require district property owners to connect to district water system in proper exercise of its police powers; costs of establishing, operating and maintaining district are, to extent not raised by user charges, charged upon all properties in district. 1988 Op St Compt No 88-30.

28. Bonds

A water district may be extended to include territory, which is not contiguous with the original district and town bonds, issued to finance the construction of a water system in an extension to a water district, may be paid from the net income of the extension. 1946 Ops St Compt 360.

Town may not issue bonds for major portion of cost of water system in town water district, the eventual ownership of which will be in a city. The district may purchase water for resale, but may not permit city to collect and retain water rents. 1947 Ops St Compt 143.

Surplus revenues from water rent, over and above the cost of operation, maintenance, and improvement of the district, should be applied to debt service on district bonds before property in the district is assessed. School district property within the district is liable for its share of the resulting levy. 1958 Ops St Compt File #406.

A town board may not transfer a portion of the revenue of an entire water district to the bond and interest account of one of the constituent districts. 1964 Ops St Compt File #764.

29. Conflicts of interest

Officer of fire department commissioner and water district commissioner (in a district operated by a separate board) are incompatible. 1946 Ops St Compt 651.

30. Construction, including construction of laterals

Town board may purchase lateral main constructed in extension of district by private person. 1946 Ops St Compt 441.

(1) Additional or new construction within an established water district may be undertaken by the town board without consent of State Comptroller. (2) Town board may, on behalf of water district, expend district moneys to lay pipe line for purpose of selling surplus water outside of water district. (3) Town board may not, on behalf of a water district, pay to owner of water main within district, a fixed sum for each connection made thereto by residents of the district. 1947 Ops St Compt 310.

A water district may not make a flat charge to each consumer and deposit money in a fund for the construction of new lines and facilities, the money to be repaid to the depositors in annual installments. 1952 Ops St Compt File #5868.

Where proceedings for the construction of laterals in a water district have progressed to the point where the construction is under way, the town board may not abandon the project, in the absence of factors of illegality or financial inability. 1953 Ops St Compt File #6119.

In a water district in which assessments are levied on a "benefit" basis, rather than an "ad valorem" basis, the cost of constructing laterals must be assessed on the "benefit" basis. Such expense may not be appropriated as a general district charge in the budget. Receipts from water rentals from the benefited properties may be used to meet installments of debt service to the extent that such receipts exceed the proper share of operation and maintenance chargeable against such properties. 1953 Ops St Compt File #6352.

Surplus moneys of a water district may be used to construct laterals within the district if the district is on the "ad valorem" or "area" basis, but not if the district is on the "benefit" basis. 1956 Ops St Compt File #7972.

Discussion in regard to financing construction of water system and administration of water district. 1957 Ops St Compt File #57-992.

31. Fees, including hook-up and tap-in fees

Town law requiring all new customers of water district to pay initial hook-up fee, to be deposited in special account to be used solely for capital developments in district, was not authorized by CLS Town § 198(3)(a), which refers only to "that portion of a supply pipe within the bounds of a public highway" and provides for "a uniform service charge for the installation of such portion of a supply pipe." Local law requiring all new customers of water district to pay initial hook-up fee, to be deposited in special account to be used solely for capital developments in district, was not authorized by CLS NY Const Art IX § 2 and CLS Mun H R § 10 since Articles 12 and 12-A of Town Law establish comprehensive scheme for financing water district improvements, manifesting legislature's intent to preempt area of financing capital improvements to water districts. Also, it was not authorized by CLS NY Const Art IX § 1(f)(1), which grants municipal water systems right to make fair return over and above costs of operation and maintenance and necessary and proper reserves; although CLS Town § 198(3)(d) authorizes town board to set and raise water rates, charge for hooking up to town water system is not within its purview. Further, local law was invalid since it violated proscription against town's establishment of capital reserve funds to finance all or part of cost of improvements to be constructed, reconstructed or acquired, or equipment to be acquired, on behalf of improvement district within such town as provided by CLS Gen Mun § 6-c(3)(a). And, local law was unconstitutional as applied to developers of "planned unit development" since it imposed uniform fee on all new dwelling units without regard to whether development had necessitated expansion of existing facilities or whether developers would be primarily and proportionately benefited by any such expansion; as such, fee constituted tax, prohibited by Municipal Home Rule Law and violative of state and federal constitutions. Coconato v Esopus, 152 A.D.2d 39, 547 N.Y.S.2d 953, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14365 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 701, 558 N.Y.S.2d 891, 557 N.E.2d 1187, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 1309 (N.Y. 1990).

Town exceeded its permissible powers by exacting sewer and water tap-in fees in order to offset cost of capital improvements. Video Aid Corp. v Town of Wallkill, 203 A.D.2d 554, 610 N.Y.S.2d 610, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4337 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994), rev'd, vacated, 85 N.Y.2d 663, 628 N.Y.S.2d 18, 651 N.E.2d 886, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 1038 (N.Y. 1995).

Restrictions under CLS Town § 198(3)(a) are inapplicable to out-of-district users; thus, town board had authority to charge out-of-district property owner "hookup" fee under CLS Town § 198(3)(b). Fox Den Dev. Corp. v Town of Yorktown, 231 A.D.2d 551, 647 N.Y.S.2d 34, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9259 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

Use of tap-in fee to defray cost of maintaining and improving village water system was improper. Torsoe Bros. Constr. Corp. v Board of Trustees, 81 Misc. 2d 702, 366 N.Y.S.2d 810, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2450 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), modified, 49 A.D.2d 461, 375 N.Y.S.2d 612, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11413 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1975).

Residential property owners, who had refused to permit installation of water meter on their property, could not be billed by water district on basis of average of highest 5% of residential billings in the area where such a billing scheme was not authorized by any town board resolution or regulations of any other rate-making body. Even if residential property owners had damage claim against town or water district with regard to entry onto owners' land and installation of water meter, such would not have affected validity of owners' water bills or justified failure to pay such bills. Fact that town officials had announced that billing on basis of water meter readings would await district-wide installation of meters did not preclude billing on basis of such readings after meters had been installed in less than all but over 99% of the homes in water district, in that such announcement was not part of any binding contract but was merely a statement of policy which town and water district would change at any time. Hagen v Hempstead, 84 Misc. 2d 502, 377 N.Y.S.2d 434, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3161 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1975).

Owners of property lying within an established water district may not be charged a flat rate "entrance fee" upon such owners' election to be serviced by the district's facilities. 1969 Ops St Compt File #408.

32. Fluoridation of water

Discussion of propriety of town water district fluoridating its water supply. 1961 Ops St Compt #385.

A referendum may not be initiated by petition on the question of fluoridating a water district water supply. There is no provision for federal or state aid in the taking of a special census. 1964 Ops St Compt File #915.

33. Highway matters

A water district is responsible for the cost of relocation of its pipes necessitated by the improvement of the highways along or under which they are located, when such improvements are made by the county. 1968 Ops St Compt File #526.

34. Hydrants

Town board may not, on behalf of a water supply district, enter into a contract with a water company whereby it will pay each year, in addition to hydrant rental, a surcharge of 9% of the cost of installation of the hydrants for an unlimited period of years. 1953 Ops St Compt File #6243.

35. Out-of-district water service

Restrictions under CLS Town § 198(3)(a) are inapplicable to out-of-district users; thus, town board had authority to charge out-of-district property owner "hookup" fee under CLS Town § 198(3)(b). Fox Den Dev. Corp. v Town of Yorktown, 231 A.D.2d 551, 647 N.Y.S.2d 34, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9259 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

A water district may not extend its mains outside the district for the purpose of serving outside consumers. 1956 Ops St Compt File #7972.

The cost of the connecting line to the district's facilities must be borne by the outside user and any reimbursement for such cost may not be made by the sewer district in the event other outside users are permitted to utilize the line. 1972 Ops St Compt File #199.

Town water district may provide service to users located outside district under CLS Town § 198(3)(b), so long as use will not reduce water supply so that it will be insufficient for district or its inhabitants, and all required approvals and permits are obtained. 2005 Op St Compt No. 05-7.

36. Private property, generally

A board of water commissioners may not maintain privately owned water supply lines between the curb line and house, but it may seal and insist on repair of meters by district employees. 1954 Ops St Compt File #6650.

37. —Easements

A town water district may not lay mains in private streets without obtaining easements from property owners. 1947 Ops St Compt 371.

A town board may grant an easement over water district property for an adequate consideration where such easement will not interfere with the use of the property for the purposes for which it was acquired by the water district. 1958 Ops St Compt File #873.

The Board of Commissioners of a park district may not grant an easement to a water district for installation of a water main. 1961 Ops St Compt #868.

Town board may construct large water main along an easement on private property, and enter into contract with owner for payment to town board of sum equal to cost of constructing smaller water main originally planned by owner. 1966 Ops St Compt File #526.

A town, acting on behalf of water and sewer districts, must obtain easements in order to lay water and sewer lines across private property. If no such easements were obtained prior to the town's installation of the pipes, it is the town's obligation to obtain them now. 1972 Ops St Compt File #723.

Town on behalf of water district may obtain easement in privately owned lake for supply of drinking water and take reasonable measures to make lake satisfactory source of drinking water at district's expense. 1986 Op St Compt No. 86-56.

38. Refunds

A town board, on behalf of a water district, may not enter into a contract with a water company whereby the water company will install service connections, meters and hydrants, maintain and repair the distribution system and eventually purchase the system through refunds, the company to have title to the system in proportion to the refunds made. 1947 Ops St Compt 472.

While a village may sell surplus water to a town water district, the duty of maintaining and repairing the pipelines serving the district is upon the Town Board, and the village may accordingly not refund part of a water bill where the water district has paid for excessive water because of a leak in the line. 1961 Ops St Compt #587.

The granting of a refund to an individual water user for excess water consumption caused by undetected leaks on the consumer's property is illegal. 1967 Ops St Compt File #414.

There is no authority whereby a town may, on closing out accounts of water district customers, withhold from such customers small refunds which are less than a specified amount. 1969 Ops St Compt File #489.

39. Repairs, removal, reconstruction and the like

A town board, on behalf of a water district, may not enter into a contract with a water company whereby the water company will install service connections, meters and hydrants, maintain and repair the distribution system and eventually purchase the system through refunds, the company to have title to the system in proportion to the refunds made. 1947 Ops St Compt 472.

A water district is responsible for the cost of relocation of its pipes necessitated by the improvement of the highways along or under which they are located, when such improvements are made by the county. 1968 Ops St Compt File #526.

Agreement by town on behalf of water district for removal and retention by contractor of underground water tanks and related equipment, in compliance with county health department order and in conjunction with connection to new water supply, constitutes contract for public work subject to competitive bidding under CLS Gen Mun § 103 if it involves direct or indirect expenditure in excess of $20,000; value of tanks and equipment exchanged as consideration for removal work constitutes indirect expenditure for purposes of competitive bidding monetary threshold. 1999 Op St Compt No. 99-14.

40. Sale of property, generally

Water district land may be sold without referendum, but a public hearing is required if the value exceeds $1,000. The seller has no authority to accept, as the purchase price, anything but money. The purchasing town has no authority to pay the purchase price by giving an installment contract. 1966 Ops St Compt File #1129.

A water district governed by a board of water commissioners may sell to retiring district superintendent, for a fair and reasonable consideration, district vehicle he currently uses provided that automobile is no longer required for district purposes; approval of a majority of town board is required and, if value of vehicle exceeds $1,000, public hearing must be held. 1985 Op St Compt No. 85-45.

Governing board of town water district may, subject to mandatory referendum, sell all property and facilities of water district to public authority and dissolve district; moneys received from sale must be placed in reserve fund for purpose of retiring outstanding debt on behalf of district. 1995 Op St Compt No. 95-29.

Town may not, under either CLS Town § 198 or local law, use proceeds from sale of county of all property and facilities of town water district for construction of new town hall. 1996 Op St Compt No. 96-16.

41. —Water sales

A town board, subject to a referendum, may sell the water supply and distribution system of a water district to a water authority and dissolve the district. 1959 Ops St Compt File #911.

A town may not lay pipes for the purposes of supplying and selling water to a private concern where it has not established a water district. 1960 Ops St Compt File #550.

The town board may sell water for the benefit of a water district to municipalities, water districts or water supply districts. 1968 Ops St Compt File #894.

City which operates water public utility may sell water to town water district pursuant to contract with town, but General Municipal Law § 94 does impose limits on amount of money which city may earn on such sale. 1986 Op St Compt No. 86-33.

42. Surplus funds

A water district may not expend surplus or an unexpended balance of district funds to purchase fire hose except in an amount necessary for the protection of district-owned property. 1945 Ops St Compt 185.

Surplus moneys of a water district may be used to construct laterals within the district if the district is on the "ad valorem" or "area" basis, but not if the district is on the "benefit" basis. 1956 Ops St Compt File #7972.

Surplus revenues from water rent, over and above the cost of operation, maintenance, and improvement of the district, should be applied to debt service on district bonds before property in the district is assessed. School district property within the district is liable for its share of the resulting levy. 1958 Ops St Compt File #406.

Discussion concerning disposition of surplus funds of a water district whose facilities are to be acquired by a county water authority. 1978 St Compt File #350.

43. Tax matters

Landowners were liable for water tax assessment even though they had not connected their premises to water system. Larkin v Farrell, 52 A.D.2d 1069, 384 N.Y.S.2d 60, 384 N.Y.S.2d 605, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12995 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1976), app. denied, 41 N.Y.2d 802, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 2990 (N.Y. 1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 836, 98 S. Ct. 125, 54 L. Ed. 2d 97, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 2969 (U.S. 1977).

Subsequent to the date of the establishment of a water district and until such time as the existing water supply systems are taken over by the town board, the operation of such existing systems is the responsibility of the owners thereof, and tax anticipation notes may be issued to finance the cost of operation and maintenance of such systems after the town board has taken them over and until taxes can be levied to pay for such cost of operation and maintenance. 1947 Ops St Compt 112.

The town board should provide for the transmittal to the receiver of taxes and assessments of a list of the water rents which should be collected by him. 1954 Ops St Compt File #6556.

Supervisor of town of Claverack should pay to supervisor of town of Greenport the amount of delinquent water rent received by him from tax collection. 1955 Ops St Compt File #7332.

44. Termination of water service

Town and water authority acted appropriately and within their authority in terminating water service through existing line and in directing property owner to install new line since water authority regulations permitted termination of service where there was willful waste by use of water through improper and imperfect pipes, and property owner was legally responsible for expense of installing and maintaining service line for its property. Hasenoehrl Leasing, Inc. v Hamburg, 182 A.D.2d 1091, 583 N.Y.S.2d 79, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6960 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1992).

A Town Board may enforce payment of water rents by providing for cutting off supply of water. 1964 Ops St Compt #209.

45. Water rents, generally

Town may not issue bonds for major portion of cost of water system in town water district, the eventual ownership of which will be in a city. The district may purchase water for resale, but may not permit city to collect and retain water rents. 1947 Ops St Compt 143.

In a water district in which assessments are levied on a "benefit" basis, rather than an "ad valorem" basis, the cost of constructing laterals must be assessed on the "benefit" basis. Such expense may not be appropriated as a general district charge in the budget. Receipts from water rentals from the benefited properties may be used to meet installments of debt service to the extent that such receipts exceed the proper share of operation and maintenance chargeable against such properties. 1953 Ops St Compt File #6352.

The town board should provide for the transmittal to the receiver of taxes and assessments of a list of the water rents which should be collected by him. 1954 Ops St Compt File #6556.

Supervisor of town of Claverack should pay to supervisor of town of Greenport the amount of delinquent water rent received by him from tax collection. 1955 Ops St Compt File #7332.

Surplus revenues from water rent, over and above the cost of operation, maintenance, and improvement of the district, should be applied to debt service on district bonds before property in the district is assessed. School district property within the district is liable for its share of the resulting levy. 1958 Ops St Compt File #406.

There is no statutory authority for village to require town to levy delinquent water rents on town tax roll, or for town to do so at request of village. 2004 Op St Compt No. 04-7.

CLS Town § 198(3)(d) is limited in its application to users of town water district whose property is located in adjoining town; there is no similar statutory procedure for levy on town tax roll of delinquent water charges owed by outside users of village water system. 2004 Op St Compt No. 04-7.

Should town in which outside properties are located form water district, village, in lieu of providing water to individual outside users, may contract with town for provision of water to district. 2004 Op St Compt No. 04-7.

CLS Town Law §§ 202 and 202-a, when read together and harmonized with § 198(3)(d), require that towns levy assessments for cost of establishment and operation and maintenance of water districts only to extent that such costs are not raised by user charges, and accordingly, in absence of statutory limitation on use of water rents, town board has express authority to impose water rights in amount which would be sufficient to pay cost of both maintenance and operation and debt service on obligations issued for district purposes. Ops St Compt 89-59.

It is within the discretion of the town board to increase water rates from time to time and, in the first instance, the amount of the increase will be determined by the town board. 1983 Op St Comp File #83-116.

Assessments for expense of establishment and operation and maintenance of water district must be raised on an ad valorem basis unless petition submitted pursuant to Article 12 of Town Law requesting establishment of district, or order of town board adopted pursuant to Article 12-A of Town Law for establishment of district, provides that cost be raised on a benefit basis. Basis for raising such assessments may not be changed after district is established; however, water rents may also be imposed to pay costs of operating, maintaining and improving district. 1986 Op State Compt No. 86-10.

46. —Discounts; exemptions

The owner of a complex of six apartment buildings was not entitled to a declaratory judgment that the town water district had to bill all six buildings as one "consumer" so that the owner could take advantage of rates which decreased as usage increased, where the governing ordinance distinguished between "consumers," which the water district could charge for water usage, and "property owners," which the district could charge for fire-line connections, and such distinction would be meaningless if "consumers" and "property owners" were equivalent in meaning. Renley Dev. Co. v Town Bd. of Kirkwood, 106 A.D.2d 717, 484 N.Y.S.2d 175, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 21660 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1984).

A water district may not furnish water to the fire houses of fire companies situated in the water district at no cost. 1946 Ops St Compt 689.

A water district established on a benefit basis pursuant to Town Law, Article 12, may establish water rates with different classifications of consumers. 1968 Ops St Compt File #770.

There is no authority for a town to contract with a banking corporation for the collection of water district water rents. 1972 Ops St Compt File #1061.

A school district may be charged for its use of water through the imposition of water rents by the town water district. 1973 Ops St Compt File #1086.

Town board, on behalf of water district, may establish schedule of water rates including classification under which senior citizens meeting certain income criteria are charged at reduced rate. Ops St Compt 88-57.

47. —Penalties for late or non-payment

Penalties collected for late payment of water rents shall be credited to the water district account. 1954 Ops St Compt File #6613.

48. Zoning matters

A park water district, in erecting a new water tower of larger capacity to take the place of one already existing and the purpose of which is to supply water for inhabitants for domestic and commercial uses and for fire protection, is exercising a governmental function and exempt from compliance with zoning ordinances. Barnathan v Kramer, 44 Misc. 2d 203, 253 N.Y.S.2d 144, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1590 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1964).

H. Miscellaneous Districts

49. Public dock districts

A town board has no authority to grant a franchise for operation of a ferry. A town board in which there is a public dock district does not possess the authority to require a ferry which uses the docking facilities therein to impose an additional fee on each passenger in order that such fee might be applied by the town toward reduction of assessments against real property in the public dock district. 1950 Ops St Compt File #4554.

Town board may not expand activities of public dock district to include maintenance and operation of recreational facilities such as playground and swimming pool. 2002 Op St Compt No. 2002-3.

50. Snow removal districts

A snow removal district may not be formed within a larger area which itself constitutes a snow removal district. 1945 Ops St Compt 457.

31. Town improvement districts

I. Generally

1. In general

Town board when operating improvement districts enumerated in this section is exempt from payment of motor fuel tax. 1934 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 209.

Town of the second class may not license plumbers under this section. 1955 NY Ops Atty Gen March 7 (informal).

Provisions of Article 34 of the General Business Law relating to creditor billing errors are not applicable to statements of account issued to customers by the special districts in the Town of Hempstead. 1974 NY Ops Atty Gen Jan 24.

Discussion of inalienability of sewer district, park district and park lands. 1977 NY Ops Atty Gen Nov 17.

One person may simultaneously hold elected offices of commissioner of water district and commissioner of fire district, but must recuse himself or herself from participating in any matters relating to contract between districts for installation and maintenance of fire hydrants, sale of water, and testing of backflow devices; if those or other matters involving 2 districts lead to frequent or substantial conflicts, recusal would not be appropriate remedy, and individual may not hold both positions. 2002 NY Ops Atty Gen I 2002-11.

2. Leases

Land not used by town parking district may be sold or leased. 1960 NY Ops Atty Gen Feb 4 (informal).

II. Specific Districts

A. Fire Districts

3. In general

The term "district" as used in section 64(2) of the Town Law refers to the improvement districts discussed in Article 12 of the Town Law, and, thus, section 64(2) does not infringe upon the condemnation power accorded a fire district board of fire commissioners as provided for in section 176(14) of the Town Law. 1979 NY Ops Atty Gen Apr 6 (informal).

4. Hydrants, generally

A town board, on behalf of a water district, may charge a fire district for the use of fire hydrants and water by the fire district. 1978 Op St Compt File #630.

B. Garbage And Refuse Districts

5. In general

If two towns, by contract, operate a dump or sanitary landfill project, all residents of each town, including the residents of any village therein, must be given the same rights to use the project, and on the same basis, unless an improvement district for this purpose has been formed in only a part of a town or an agreement has been entered into between a town and a village under General Municipal Law § 120-v. 1977 NY Ops Atty Gen Feb 16.

A town board is not required to hold a public hearing prior to awarding a contract for refuse and garbage collection in a refuse and garbage district. 1978 Op St Compt File #941.

The Town of Oyster Bay may not establish a town-wide refuse and garbage district for the disposal of refuse and garbage since portions of the Town already contain refuse and garbage districts and because all villages in the Town would have to consent to the formation of such a district by the adoption of appropriate local laws. 1981 Op St Compt File #80-791.

6. Budgeting matters

The cost of operation and maintenance of a sewer district may be financed from either sewer rents or benefit assessments or both. If sewer rents are collected they must first be expended for operation and maintenance before they may be spent for indebtedness or further construction. The town budget should reflect the fact that operation and maintenance costs are being raised through either sewer rents or benefit assessments or both and how such funds are being apportioned. 1981 Op St Compt File #80-708.

7. Rates, charges and fees, generally

The cost of operation and maintenance of a sewer district may be financed from either sewer rents or benefit assessments or both. If sewer rents are collected they must first be expended for operation and maintenance before they may be spent for indebtedness or further construction. The town budget should reflect the fact that operation and maintenance costs are being raised through either sewer rents or benefit assessments or both and how such funds are being apportioned. 1981 Op St Compt File #80-708.

C. Lighting Districts

8. In general

The governing board of a lighting district has inherent authority to return pro rata portions of a refund received by the district for overpayments made to a power company, to present and former district residents who were victims of the overpayment, on an equitable basis to be determined by the board. 1979 Op St Compt File #561.

Surplus revenues of a town-wide lighting district may not be accumulated and carried over from one fiscal year to another except by establishment of a lawful reserve fund. Non-appropriated cash surplus may be used to finance an additional appropriation or an increase in an existing appropriation during a fiscal year. 1980 Op St Compt File #280.

(1) A town may not use general funds to install or maintain street lights within the boundaries of an incorporated village except on public bridges which are not under the jurisdiction of the village and (2) a town lighting district may only provide street lighting in a village if the village is within the district. 1980 Op St Compt File #368.

D. Park Districts

9. In general

Without statutory authority a park district may not be created within another park district with the use of the facilities within the smaller district limited to the properties within it. 1969 NY Ops Atty Gen Apr 10 (informal).

In Nassau County, violations of town ordinances regulating conduct in parks of a Town Park District may not be prosecuted in village justice courts. 1980 NY Ops Atty Gen Dec. 3 (informal).

Park land may not be sold or diverted to other uses without authorization by the State Legislature. Land can become dedicated for park purposes through its improvement and use as a park. 1981 NY Ops Atty Gen July 21 (Informal opinion).

A town board, on behalf of a park district, may not authorize payment of a claim for services rendered, at the request of district residents and without board authorization, in connection with dredging a portion of a lake bordering on district property. However, the board may ratify the contract for such services and then authorize payment. 1979 Op St Compt File #90.

Under certain circumstances and provided certain conditions are complied with, a town may purchase park property from a park district within the town. Opns St Comp, 1973, No. 73-863, unreported, and any other prior opinions are hereby superseded. 1980 Op St Compt File #44.

10. Easements

A town board may grant an easement through park district property where such easement will not interfere with the use of the property for which it was acquired by the park district. Adequate consideration must be given for the easement and the consideration may consist of either money or services rendered to the park district. Where the value of such grant exceeds $1,000, a public hearing must be held. 1980 Op St Compt File #147.

11. Recreational facilities, generally

Hot-air ballooning is a recreational activity that a town may sponsor by permitting use of parklands for launching. Previous informal opinion clarified. 1981 NY Ops Atty Gen July 21 (Informal opinion).

A town board, on behalf of a park district, may not charge district residents and taxpayers for use of park district facilities, but may charge a fee to non-residents for use of such facilities. 1979 Op St Compt File #728.

E. Parking Districts

12. In general

There appears to be no authority for the commissioners of a public parking district, in which the town board does not act as the governing board, to name persons to enforce parking rules and regulations within the district. 1954 NY Ops Atty Gen Nov 22 (informal).

F. Sewer And Drainage Districts

13. In general

Discussion of conveyance by a village, and a town, on behalf of a sewer district, respectively, of sewer facilities to a county sewer district and the adequacy of consideration therefor. 1978 Op St Compt File #286.

Discussion of the propriety of a town being connected to a private sewer line. 1978 Op St Compt File #359.

Discussion of extending a sewer district to include several residents of a neighboring village. 1978 Op St Compt File #696.

A sewer district may convey unneeded property to a village in which the district is located, but such conveyance must be for a fair and adequate consideration. 1979 Op St Compt File #234.

The cost of replacement of inadequate sewer pipes running from sewer laterals located in the street and connecting private properties to the laterals, is borne by property owners rather than by the sewer district, when such pipes are not owned by the district. 1979 Op St Compt File #416.

14. Condemnation

The Town of Newburgh is authorized to obtain easements on, and condemn if necessary, land within the City of Newburgh, for the purpose of constructing thereon a sewer trunk line to the City's sewage treatment plant. 1974 NY Ops Atty Gen Nov 8.

15. Easements

The Town of Newburgh is authorized to obtain easements on, and condemn if necessary, land within the City of Newburgh, for the purpose of constructing thereon a sewer trunk line to the City's sewage treatment plant. 1974 NY Ops Atty Gen Nov 8.

16. Sewer rents

A city, by applying the provisions of the Sewer Rent Law or by local law, may collect unpaid sewer rents by adding them to the tax roll and collecting them at the same time and in the same manner as real property taxes. A city by local law may establish the same procedure for collection of unpaid water rents. Subject to due process requirements, city water service may be terminated for nonpayment of water rents. 1981 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 81–56, 1981 N.Y. AG LEXIS 97.

Discussion of refund of sewer and water rent penalties in circumstances where the penalties imposed exceeded 10% of the amounts due. 1978 Op St Compt File #890.

The real property of schools, churches and cemeteries is exempt from taxes but is subject to sewer rents for the operation and maintenance of a town sewer system. 1979 Op St Compt File #353.

G. Water Districts

17. In general

Where the boundaries of a water district are extended and the district acquires an existing water line for inclusion in the water system by purchase or condemnation, the town board, on behalf of the district, may pay to the owner of such existing water line the fair market value of that line. 1980 Op St Compt File #679.

As a general rule, a village may not wholly or partially forgive an amount due from a water district arising from leaks in the supply lines located in the district. The village may compromise claims which the water district might have against the village with regard to the leaks. 1980 Op St Compt File #899.

The terms and conditions of a water supply contract between a town and a village are matters for negotiation between the contracting parties and the Department of Audit & Control has no regulatory powers with respect to such contracts. 1981 Op St Compt File #81-48.

18. Conflicts of interest

Conflict of interest results if town highway superintendent in his or her official or private capacity operates heavy equipment on behalf of water district in town to repair water pipes located under road. 1998 NY Ops Atty Gen I 98-11.

19. Fees, including hook-up and tap-in fees

A town board may, in a local law to establish tapping or connection fees for a town water district, direct the elected town superintendent of highways to do the necessary excavations in town highways between the water main and the curb line. 1978 Op St Compt File #253.

20. Highway matters

Water pipes may not be laid under a village highway by a water district without the consent of village board of trustees. 1956 NY Ops Atty Gen Sept 13 (informal).

A town may have water pipes and mains laid in or along state, county and town highway right of way lines, without obtaining an easement therefor; since pipes and mains will not be laid under state or county highways, consent of the state superintendent of public works is not required and consent of the state and county superintendents of highways are not required under Highway Law § 52 and § 136, but permits should be obtained. 1957 NY Ops Atty Gen May 13 (informal).

The expense of relocating water district water pipes and fire hydrants following reconstruction of a town highway by the town highway department is chargeable to the water district and not the highway department. 1980 Op St Compt File #486.

A town board may, by resolution, provide that the cost of repairing that portion of a supply pipe within the bounds of a public highway in a water district shall be a district expense. 1982 Op St Compt File #82-155.

21. Out-of-district water service

A sale of water by a municipal water district outside the district requires the consent of the New York State Water Resources Commission. The purchase of water wholesale from a municipal water district by a private individual who was the developer of a residential area outside the water district for resale to home owners in the development would also require the consent of the Water Resources Commission. 1966 NY Ops Atty Gen Oct 24.

A provision in a contract for water supply between a town, on behalf of a water district, and a developer owning property outside the district, which provides for payment for water at a higher rate than that which is paid by district residents does not violate the equal protection clauses of the State and Federal Constitutions so long as all non-residents who are similarly situated pay the same higher rate. 1980 Op St Compt File #179.

22. Private property, generally

Discussion of the ramifications of a situation where a water district mistakenly drilled a well on private property and the owner of such property subsequently offers to sell the well and the property to the district. 1978 Op St Compt File #646.

23. Refunds

Discussion of refund of sewer and water rent penalties in circumstances where the penalties imposed exceeded 10% of the amounts due. 1978 Op St Compt File #890.

In cases of extreme hardship and in the absence of negligence on the part of the consumer or a contractual provision to the contrary, it would seem that a refund may be granted to a consumer for water lost due to an undetectable subterranean leak in a water pipe located within the consumer's property. Prior inconsistent opinions superseded. Opn No. 67-414 superseded to the extent inconsistent with this opinion but result reaffirmed on the facts. 1980 Op St Compt File #543.

Except in cases of extreme hardship where there is no negligence on the part of the consumer, as a general rule, a water district may not refund an amount due from a consumer for water lost due to an undetectible subterranean leak in a water pipe located within the consumer's property. The issue of whether it is appropriate for a water district to refund water rents in a given situation involves questions of fact which should be resolved at the local level. 1982 Op St Compt File #82-33.

24. Repairs, removal, reconstruction and the like

Highway Law § 10 and Town Law, Arts. 12 and 13, authorize superintendent of public works to expend available funds for reconstruction of State highways, and at State expense remove, relocate, etc., water mains and sewer pipes owned by town water and sewer districts; and town board in charge of such a district or board of water commissioners or sewer commissioners in charge of such a district may contract with superintendent of public works for performance of work. Superintendent of Public Works, pursuant to Highway Law § 10, has power to perform work of construction and reconstruction contemplated by such section, at request of a town water district or town sewer district and at its expense; in this respect, there is no distinction between a town board and a board of commissioner operating such a district. 1946 NY Ops Atty Gen May 17.

The expense of relocating water district water pipes and fire hydrants following reconstruction of a town highway by the town highway department is chargeable to the water district and not the highway department. 1980 Op St Compt File #486.

A town board may, by resolution, provide that the cost of repairing that portion of a supply pipe within the bounds of a public highway in a water district shall be a district expense. 1982 Op St Compt File #82-155.

25. Sale of property, generally

26. —Water sales

A sale of water by a municipal water district outside the district requires the consent of the New York State Water Resources Commission. The purchase of water wholesale from a municipal water district by a private individual who was the developer of a residential area outside the water district for resale to home owners in the development would also require the consent of the Water Resources Commission. 1966 NY Ops Atty Gen Oct 24.

A town water district may sell unneeded real property having no facilities or improvements thereon in accordance with the procedure in section 198(12)(a) of the Town Law. Real property with facilities must be sold in accordance with section 198(12)(b) of the Town Law. 1982 NY Ops Atty Gen Jan 15 (informal).

A water district governed by a board of water commissioners may dispose of obsolete office and shop maintenance equipment by sale or lease. The approval of a majority of the town board is required and, if the value of the equipment exceeds $1,000, a public hearing must be held. The proceeds from the sale or lease of district property must be paid to the supervisor and credited to the district and may be expended for any lawful district purpose. 1981 Op St Compt File #81-171.

27. Surplus funds

Legislation would be required to authorize the disposition of surplus funds remaining in a water district to the credit of the water users in the town where the facilities of such district have been leased to a water authority. 1979 Op St Compt File #482.

28. Water rents, generally

29. —Discounts; exemptions

Town-owned property, such as the town hall, is not exempt from the payment of water rents. 1978 Op St Compt File #630.

The City of Kingston may adopt a local law authorizing the Board of Water Commissioners to grant a partial exemption from water rents to senior citizens who earn $6,500 a year or less. 1981 Op St Compt No. 81-8, 1981 N.Y. Comp. LEXIS 890.

30. —Penalties for late or non-payment

A public school district or a not-for-profit hospital, located within a town water district, is not entitled to an exemption from a penalty which may be imposed by the town board for the late payment of water charges; nor is a town board authorized to grant such an exemption when the board has authorized the collection of a penalty for a late payment pursuant to the provisions of section 198(3)(d) of the Town Law. 1976 NY Ops Atty Gen March 3 (informal).

Discussion concerning the limits within which a town may impose a penalty for the late payment of water rents. 1978 Op St Compt File #832.

Discussion of refund of sewer and water rent penalties in circumstances where the penalties imposed exceeded 10% of the amounts due. 1978 Op St Compt File #890.

A lien for unpaid water rents attaches by operation of law to the property in connection with which the water was used. In the case of rental property, the lien attaches even though a tenant moves without paying the balance of the water rents due or leaving a sufficient security deposit to cover the unpaid water rents. 1980 Op St Compt File #8.

H. Miscellaneous Districts

There is no requirement or authority for referendum on conveyance by town improvement district of easement in real property. 1997 NY Ops Atty Gen I 97-42.

§ 202-c. Dissolution and diminishing area of certain districts

1. The town board of any town may dissolve and discontinue those districts described hereinafter pursuant either to the provisions of article seventeen-A of the general municipal law or the procedures provided in this section.

1-a. Upon a petition, the town board of any town may dissolve and discontinue any lighting, snow removal, water supply, or refuse and garbage district or a sewer district in which no sewer system has been constructed, provided that there be no indebtedness, outstanding and unpaid, incurred to accomplish any of the purposes of such district. Such petition shall be signed by at least ten percent or five thousand, whichever is less, of the registered voters in this state registered to vote in such district and authenticated in the manner provided by the election law for the authentication of nominating petitions. When any such petition containing the required signatures shall have been presented, the town board shall adopt an order and enter the same in the minutes of its proceedings, reciting in general terms the filing of the petition, and specifying the purpose thereof, the name and boundaries of the district and the time when and place where said board will meet to consider the petition and to hear all persons interested in the subject thereof concerning the same. If the petition shall propose that the area of the district be diminished, the order shall also describe the portion of the district to be eliminated. The board shall cause a copy of such order, certified by the town clerk, to be published at least once in the official paper, the first publication thereof to be not less than ten nor more than twenty days before the day set therein for the hearing as aforesaid, and shall cause a copy thereof to be posted on the sign board of the town maintained pursuant to subdivision six of section thirty of this chapter not less than ten nor more than twenty days before the day designated for the hearing as aforesaid. If the town board shall determine, after such hearing and upon the evidence given thereat, that it is in the public interest to dissolve the district or to diminish the area thereof, the town board shall adopt an order accordingly dissolving the district or diminishing its area. If there are any contracts to accomplish the purpose of such district in force and effect, the town board shall not dissolve such district, nor diminish the area thereof, prior to the expiration of such contracts. If the district dissolved be wholly within a village incorporated since said district was formed and prior to April first, nineteen hundred sixty-five, all of the property of such district shall be and become the property of such village and such village upon delivery thereof, shall assume and pay all of the debts of such district. If the district shall not be wholly included within the limits of any village incorporated since said district was formed, all the property of such district shall become the property of the town and such town upon delivery thereof, shall assume and pay all the debts of such district.

3. Sidewalk districts created in towns pursuant to the provisions of chapter sixty-three of the laws of nineteen hundred nine, as amended, or pursuant to the provisions of this chapter as originally enacted or subsequently amended, are hereby dissolved. The improvements constructed in any sidewalk district hereby dissolved shall be and become the property of the town in which the improvements are located, unless any portion of such district shall on January first, nineteen hundred forty-six, be within a village or city in which event the improvements constructed in any such district, which are located in any such village or city, shall be and become the property of the village or city, as the case may be. Taxes shall continue to be levied within the present area of such districts, as heretofore, for the payment of any debts and liabilities of such districts existing on January first, nineteen hundred forty-six. If any such district shall have moneys on hand on January first, nineteen hundred forty-six, such moneys shall be applied to the payment of the debts and liabilities, if any, of such district and the excess shall be and become the property of the town in which such district is located unless any such district shall be now located wholly within a village or city in which event such excess shall be and become the property of the village or city, as the case may be. If any such district be located in two or more towns, and is not wholly within a village or city, such excess shall be divided among such towns in proportion to the assessed valuations of the properties within such district as shown on the completed assessment rolls for such district pursuant to which the last tax was levied for the purposes of such district.

Analysis

1. In general
2. Diminution
3. Dissolution

1. In general

A village incorporated in territory which formerly was administered by a town sanitary district had the power to render garbage service within its territorial limits upon the expiration of the contract existing with the sanitary district at the time of incorporation. Atlantic Beach v Kimmel, 18 N.Y.2d 485, 276 N.Y.S.2d 993, 223 N.E.2d 489, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 920 (N.Y. 1966).

Town's ad valorem levy for garbage collection services was invalid as imposed against owners of property in planned development where owners did not receive benefits of town garbage collection services by reason of declaration that owners were required to provide their own garbage collection, to which owners had agreed in return for town's allowance of favorable zoning conditions at time when development was formed; declaration did not constitute waiver of owners' right to object to levy, and public hearing was not required by CLS Town § 202-c. Applebaum v Oyster Bay, 81 N.Y.2d 733, 593 N.Y.S.2d 765, 609 N.E.2d 118, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 4221 (N.Y. 1992).

There is nothing in this section to indicate a legislative intent to transfer from the State of New York, or grant to a town, jurisdiction over any sidewalk lying within the right of way of a state highway. Ryan v State, 21 Misc. 2d 74, 197 N.Y.S.2d 106, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2518 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1959).

Sidewalk districts may not be established in towns. Such improvements are handled under section 200 of Town Law. 1946 Ops St Compt 723.

Portions of a fire protection district and lighting district which are annexed to a village do not cease to be parts of the respective districts without affirmative action of the Town Board. 1962 Ops St Compt #876.

Separate valuation of trailers or mobile homes may not be considered as part of all the taxable real property of lighting district unless located on exempt land and separately assessed pursuant to statute. 1965 Ops St Compt File #760.

2. Diminution

That § 202-c of the Town Law was not designed to be the exclusive method of discontinuing or reducing the size of a special improvement district is indicated by § 3-354 of the Village Law which provides this result may also occur by "operation of law." Atlantic Beach v Kimmel, 18 N.Y.2d 485, 276 N.Y.S.2d 993, 223 N.E.2d 489, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 920 (N.Y. 1966).

Town board may not diminish the area of a water district. 1946 Ops St Compt 347.

Area of sewer district in which sewer system has been constructed may not be diminished. Sewer system may be extended within a sewer district. Sewer system extension may be financed over a thirty-year period. 1947 Ops St Compt 319.

There is no authority for the diminution of the area of an existing water district. 1954 Ops St Compt File #6859.

3. Dissolution

That § 202-c of the Town Law was not designed to be the exclusive method of discontinuing or reducing the size of a special improvement district is indicated by § 3-354 of the Village Law which provides this result may also occur by "operation of law." Atlantic Beach v Kimmel, 18 N.Y.2d 485, 276 N.Y.S.2d 993, 223 N.E.2d 489, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 920 (N.Y. 1966).

Only qualified electors of the district affected may properly sign a petition protesting the adoption of a resolution by a town board dissolving a park district, and only such electors may properly vote on the proposition. 1968 Ops St Compt File #786.

Where a town water district is annexed to a village and the water district is dissolved in accordance with the agreement between the town and the village, any surplus funds of the water district should be turned over to the village. 1973 Ops St Compt File #900.

Governing board of town water district may, subject to mandatory referendum, sell all property and facilities of water district to public authority and dissolve district; moneys received from sale must be placed in reserve fund for purpose of retiring outstanding debt on behalf of district. 1995 Op St Compt No. 95-29.

When water district was established more than 3 years previously, no improvement has been constructed for district or services provided by district and no indebtedness is outstanding to accomplish purposes of district, district may be dissolved (subject to public hearing requirements) if town board's determines dissolution to be in public interest; certified copies of board's determination must be recorded in county clerk's office and filed with State Comptroller within 10 days of board's determination. 2002 Op St Compt No. 02-8.

Petition to dissolve lighting district under CLS Town § 202-c(1) is proper only if signed by appropriate number of individual owners of real property who have established domicile within district ("resident owners") and, consequently, if there are only corporate owners within lighting district, district may not be dissolved pursuant to CLS Town § 202-c. 2001 Opns St Comp No. 01-15.

The granting of a cable television franchise by a town creates vested rights and obligations which cannot be altered by the subsequent incorporation of a village within part of the town: consequently, 1. The franchise continues in effect within the area of the village without change or alteration; 2. The village is not entitled to receive any fee from the holder of the franchise for the exercise of the franchise right granted by the town; and 3. The village is not entitled to demand from the town and to receive any portion of the fee received or receivable by the town from the holder of the franchise. 1976 NY Ops Atty Gen Nov 29.

There is no authority for the diminution of the area of an existing town water district. 1979 Op St Compt File #571.

Generally, construction of sewer lines in only one portion of a sewer district would be improper where it has been determined that construction of an entire system within the maximum amount authorized to be expended is not feasible. In such circumstances, consideration should be given to diminishing or dissolving the existing district or modifying the plans for the district. 1983 Op St Compt File #83-216.

ARTICLE 2 Powers, Duties and Jurisdiction of the Department of Transportation

Section
14-f. Transportation of hazardous materials

HISTORY:
Add, L 1967, ch 717, § 27, eff Sept 1, 1967.

1. The commissioner of transportation is hereby authorized to promote safety in the transportation of hazardous materials by all modes of transportation, and in connection therewith shall:

(a) Have the power to make rules and regulations governing transportation of hazardous materials, which shall mean a substance or material in a quantity and form which may pose an unreasonable risk to health and safety or property when transported in commerce, by all modes as defined by the rules and regulations of the department.

Such rules and regulations shall be no less protective of public safety than the rules and regulations promulgated by the federal government with respect to the transportation of hazardous materials. The regulations shall set forth the criteria for identifying and listing, and a list of hazardous materials subject to this section as may be amended by the commissioner of transportation from time to time in a manner consistent with the state administrative procedure act and consistent with those substances and materials designated by the United States secretary of transportation as hazardous under section 5103 of title 49 of the United States code as amended from time to time, including those designated as hazardous in the hazardous materials table set forth in section 172.101 and materials that meet the defining criteria for hazard classes and divisions in part 173 of subchapter C of title 49 of the code of federal regulations as amended from time to time. Such regulations shall include specifications for marking and placarding of vehicles transporting hazardous materials as will be applied pursuant to paragraph (a) of subdivision three of this section. The regulations promulgated hereunder shall include notice that a violation of the rules and regulations is subject to a fine or a period of imprisonment, and the rules and regulations shall set forth the penalty provisions contained in subdivision four of this section. Provided, however, that all local laws or ordinances, except those of cities having a population of one million or more, regulating the transportation of flammable liquids in trucks, trailers or semi-trailers, are hereby superseded and without force and hereafter no such local law or ordinance shall be adopted to regulate or control the equipment or means of transporting flammable liquids in trucks, trailers or semi-trailers.

For the purposes of this section, a "vehicle" shall mean every device in which property may be transported upon a highway, stationary rails or tracks, or on the navigable waterways of the state.

(b) Have power to enforce said rules and regulations through the use of department staff or others pursuant to cooperative agreement.

(c) Have power and is hereby authorized to enter into cooperative agreements with agencies of this and other states and of the federal government in relation to enforcement of said rules and regulations.

(d) Consult with and receive the full cooperation from the commissioner of environmental conservation and other agencies in order to aid the commissioner of transportation in establishing an information system capable of identifying the amount and type of hazardous materials transported in New York, and the methods used for transporting such materials. This system shall be established and maintained in order to assess the volume and potential danger of hazardous materials transported in commerce, by all modes.

(e) Establish and publicize, after consultation with the commissioner of environmental conservation, a public education program to provide publications and technical assistance regarding the regulations governing the transportation of hazardous materials.

(f) Develop a training program for the state police and environmental conservation officers in order to aid such officers in the enforcement of the rules and regulations made pursuant to this section.

2. It shall be unlawful for any person, corporation, company, association, partnership or any officer or agent thereof to transport or cause to be transported hazardous materials in violation of the rules and regulations promulgated by the commissioner pursuant to this section.

3. (a) It shall be unlawful for any person, corporation, company, association, partnership or any officer or agent thereof to operate or cause to be operated in this state a vehicle transporting hazardous materials unless the vehicle is conspicuously marked or placarded to identify the material transported or its principal hazard in a manner specified in rules and regulations promulgated by the commissioner that are consistent with related federal requirements; provided that the commissioner may, by rules and regulations prescribe with respect to any specific hazardous materials the minimum quantities below which no placard shall be required.

(b) It shall be unlawful for any person, corporation, company, association, partnership or any officer or agent thereof to operate or cause to be operated in this state a vehicle transporting those hazardous wastes identified and listed pursuant to section 27-0903 of the environmental conservation law or those regulated wastes listed and defined pursuant to section 27-0303 of the environmental conservation law unless such person complies with the requirements applicable to the transport of such wastes as set forth in article twenty-seven of the environmental conservation law and any rules and regulations promulgated thereunder.

4. (a) Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this subdivision, any person, corporation, company, association or partnership found guilty of violating any such rule or regulation shall be guilty of a traffic infraction, and all of the provisions of the vehicle and traffic law, except as otherwise specifically provided herein, shall be applicable thereto, and shall be subject to a fine of not less than three hundred fifty dollars nor more than one thousand dollars for the first offense, and upon being found guilty of a second or subsequent offense committed within eighteen months by a fine of not less than one thousand dollars nor more than two thousand five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment for not more than ninety days or by both such fine and imprisonment . Except as otherwise provided by law, such a violation shall not be a crime and the penalty or punishment imposed therefor shall not be deemed for any purpose a criminal penalty or punishment and shall not impose any disability upon or affect or impair the credibility as a witness, or otherwise, of a person found guilty thereof; provided, however, that any person transporting hazardous waste in violation of article twenty-seven of the environmental conservation law shall be subject to the penalties provided in article seventy-one of such law.

(b) Any person, corporation, company, association or partnership found guilty of violating any such rules or regulations involving an out-of-service defect relating to brake systems, steering components and/or coupling devices shall be subject to a fine of not less than five hundred dollars nor more than one thousand five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment for not more than sixty days or by both such fine and imprisonment, and upon being found guilty of a second or subsequent offense committed within eighteen months by a fine of not less than one thousand five hundred dollars nor more than two thousand five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment for not more than ninety days or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(c) Operation of an out-of-service vehicle shall constitute a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine of not less than two thousand five hundred dollars nor more than five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment for not more than one year or by both such fine and imprisonment. A conviction for a second or subsequent offense committed within eighteen months shall constitute a class E felony and shall be punished by a fine of not less than three thousand five hundred dollars or by a period of imprisonment as provided in the penal law, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(d) If any person does not appear in response to an appearance ticket or the court's direction, or pay any fine imposed, the commissioner of motor vehicles shall have the power to suspend the registration or privilege of operation of any such vehicle operated or alleged to have been operated in violation of such rules and regulations.

(e) (i) Any complaint issued for an equipment violation, except for a violation involving an out-of-service defect or except for a violation involving the operation of any motor vehicle after it has been placed out of service, shall be dismissed by the court before such summons is returnable if the violation as set forth in the summons is corrected not later than one-half hour after sunset on the first full business day after the issuance of the summons and proof of such correction as set forth in subparagraph (ii) of this paragraph is submitted to the court. For the purposes of this subparagraph, "business day" shall mean any calendar day except Sunday, or the following business holidays: New Year's Day, Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day, Independence Day, Labor Day, Columbus Day, Veterans' Day, Thanksgiving Day and Christmas Day.

(ii) Acceptable proof of repair or adjustment shall consist of submission to the court on or before the return date of the summons of (A) a statement of correction from an officially designated state inspection station duly executed by the person performing or making such inspection and bearing the official stamp of the state inspection station, (B) a statement of correction from an automobile repair shop on the letterhead of such repair shop duly executed by the person who made the correction or (C) a signed statement of any police officer or a department inspector that the necessary corrections have been made. The statement required by this subparagraph shall be directed to the court having jurisdiction of the alleged violation, shall be affirmed as true under penalty of perjury, and shall include the name, occupation and position of the person making the statement, the time and date that the repairs or inspection were made and a statement that the defective equipment, cited in the violation, on the vehicle in question, is in proper working order.

5. With respect to the transportation of radioactive materials, nothing in this section shall be construed to abrogate or effect the provisions of any federal or state statute or local ordinance, regulation or resolution which are more restrictive than or which supersede the provisions of this section.

6. Any police officer having lawfully stopped any vehicle which he has reason to believe is transporting hazardous materials or hazardous waste may require that such vehicle shall be driven to a place designated by such police officer to be inspected pursuant to the provisions of this section and the rules and regulations of the commissioner concerning transportation of hazardous materials or pursuant to title nine of article twenty-seven of the environmental conservation law. Provided, however, that such place designated by such police officer shall not exceed a distance of five miles from the place at which such vehicle was stopped. Furthermore, that when such place designated by such officer or any other place utilized for inspection of vehicles pursuant to this section is a roadside rest area, such rest area shall be kept open for the use of the public to the extent practicable.

Corporation involved in petroleum transport and its district manager and operations manager were properly charged with illegal possession, transportation and storage of hazardous waste where waste in tanker had flashpoint of 80.2 degrees Fahrenheit, and defendants had no authorization to possess hazardous waste, no permit or manifest to transport it, and no permit to store or dispose of it; prosecutor was not obligated to charge grand jury on each possible exemption in hazardous waste regulations. People v Roth, 176 A.D.2d 1186, 576 N.Y.S.2d 968, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13823 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1991), modified, 80 N.Y.2d 239, 590 N.Y.S.2d 30, 604 N.E.2d 92, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 3479 (N.Y. 1992).

Charges of operating with improper placarding, improper shipping papers, defective steering and insufficient air pressure would not be dismissed on ground that information did not contain factual allegations establishing each element of offenses; simplified traffic information can be used to charge violation of regulations made under Transportation Law which refer to traffic matters. People v Kavanaugh, 133 Misc. 2d 689, 507 N.Y.S.2d 952, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2929 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1986).

Defendant was not entitled to dismissal of simplified traffic information which charged violation of non-existent 49 CFR 396.3(A)(5) as supposedly incorporated by reference into 17 NYCRR 507.4 under authority granted Commissioner of Transportation by CLS Trans § 14-f where information stated correct references to both Transportation Law and Codes, Rules and Regulations, and it clearly stated facts in violation of 49 CFR 396.3(a)(1). People v SNR Delivery, Inc., 134 Misc. 2d 570, 511 N.Y.S.2d 1000, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2065 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1987).

Simplified traffic informations charging violations of various regulations of Commissioner of Transportation concerning transportation of hazardous materials, and incorporating federal regulations by reference, were not subject to dismissal on ground that copies of federal regulations on file with Department of State were outdated where there had been no change in particular regulatory provisons defendant had violated; each reprinting of Code of Federal Regulations does not constitute establishment of entirely new body of law, and mandates of CLS NY Const Art IV § 8 are met where text of regulation being enforced is on file and has not been amended at time of alleged violation. People v SNR Delivery, Inc., 134 Misc. 2d 570, 511 N.Y.S.2d 1000, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2065 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1987).

Routine traffic stop of truck transporting hazardous material was unlawful in absence of any articulable or objective basis therefor or proof that stop and inspection were carried out under neutral, nonarbitrary plan or program for regular or systematic inspection of trucks engaged in such transport; thus, since predicate for inspection of vehicle transporting hazardous material is "lawful" stop under CLS Trans § 14-f(6), traffic informations resulting from inspection following stop would be dismissed. People v Deacy, 140 Misc. 2d 232, 530 N.Y.S.2d 753, 1988 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 379 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1988).

Unlawful stop and search of truck carrying hazardous material was not justified as administrative search since there was no underlying inspection program having certainty and regularity of application. People v Deacy, 140 Misc. 2d 232, 530 N.Y.S.2d 753, 1988 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 379 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1988).

Pursuant to CLS Veh & Tr § 207, simplified traffic information adopted by Commissioner of Motor Vehicles is proper instrument for prosecution of violation of CLS Trans § 14-f concerning transportation of hazardous materials. People v Scantlebury, 143 Misc. 2d 9, 539 N.Y.S.2d 641, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 170 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1989).

Defendant was not entitled to dismissal of simplified traffic information charging him with marking or placarding of vehicle as carrying hazardous materials when in fact vehicle was not carrying such materials, even though CLS Trans § 14-f did not prohibit such conduct, since 17 NYCRR § 507.4, adopted by Transportation Commissioner under authority of § 14-f(1)(a), incorporated by specific reference 49 CFR § 172.502(a), which prohibited affixation of placard on vehicle that did not contain placarded material. People v Scantlebury, 143 Misc. 2d 9, 539 N.Y.S.2d 641, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 170 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1989).

Simplified traffic information, which stated "Placarded Flammable not carrying Haz. Material," and had number "172.502" written above words "Transportation Law," was sufficient to apprise defendant that he was being charged with violating 49 CFR § 172.502, which was incorporated by reference into New York regulations adopted by Transportation Commissioner under authority of CLS Trans § 14-f(1)(a). People v Scantlebury, 143 Misc. 2d 9, 539 N.Y.S.2d 641, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 170 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1989).

As defendant's inability to locate the hazardous materials in the cargo hold of defendant's tractor trailer did not constitute a failure to make hazardous materials available for inspection under N.Y. Transp. Law § 14-f(2), the evidence was legally insufficient to establish defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. People v Gaugh, 951 N.Y.S.2d 826, 37 Misc. 3d 9, 2012 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2866 (N.Y. App. Term 2012).

In defendant's appeal from his conviction for violating N.Y. Transp. Law § 14-f(2), (3)(a) by having a prohibited hazardous materials identification marking on a commercial vehicle, there was no merit in his contention that the accusatory instrument was defective in that it incorrectly cited 49 CFR 172.303(a), pertaining to packages, in support of the charge rather than 49 CFR 172.502, which pertained to vehicles, because he was fully apprised of the nature of his alleged offense. People v Chiosie, 820 N.Y.S.2d 400, 12 Misc. 3d 88, 2006 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1608 (N.Y. App. Term 2006).

Defendant was improperly convicted of violating N.Y. Transp. Law § 14-f(2), (3)(a) by operating a vehicle that displayed a prohibited hazardous materials identification marking because he was not transporting any hazardous materials; all the provisions of N.Y. Transp. Law § 14-f pertain to the transportation of hazardous materials, and there is no indication of any legislative intent to regulate the display of a hazardous material identification marking on the outside of a vehicle that is not transporting hazardous materials. People v Chiosie, 820 N.Y.S.2d 400, 12 Misc. 3d 88, 2006 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1608 (N.Y. App. Term 2006).

Trooper was entitled to qualified immunity under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(e) in a claim arising from an accident in which the trooper's car was struck by a motorist while the trooper was making a U-turn because, given the evidence of precautions taken by the trooper, he did not act with "conscious indifference" to the consequences of his actions; the trooper testified that after he stopped in the breakdown lane, he activated his left turn signal and looked over his shoulder and out the front window several times to ensure that traffic had stopped in both directions. Before starting his turn, he saw that the motorist's car appeared to have stopped about 20 yards behind him. Green v State of New York, 71 A.D.3d 1310, 897 N.Y.S.2d 536, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. 5. Operation of emergency vehicle

Klayman v New York, 130 A.D.2d 551, 515 N.Y.S.2d 285, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 46553 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), amended, 134 A.D.2d 408, 520 N.Y.S.2d 1015, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50598 (N.Y. It was reversible error to deny request to charge jury that plaintiff was operating authorized "emergency vehicle" engaged in "emergency operation" at time that ambulance she was driving collided with truck since ambulance is authorized emergency vehicle, and it was undisputed that she was transporting patient who had experienced respiratory distress to hospital at time of accident. Mulholland v Nabisco, Inc., 264 A.D.2d 411, 693 N.Y.S.2d 242, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8647 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

CLS Veh & Tr § 1104(a) applied to police van being driven by civilian operator while transporting prisoners even though it was not equipped with lights or siren, because every police vehicle is authorized emergency vehicle (CLS Veh & Tr §§ 101, 132) and use of authorized emergency vehicle to transport prisoners is emergency operation (CLS Veh & Tr § 114-b), there being no limiting language in statute bearing on either definition. Church v City of New York, 268 A.D.2d 382, 702 N.Y.S.2d 274, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 784 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

Police officer's squad car was an emergency vehicle and his pursuit of a speeding vehicle was an emergency operation for purposes of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104, however, the officer was not entitled to qualified immunity under that statute regarding a traffic accident that occurred during the pursuit because the officer acted recklessly in taking part in the pursuit. Flack v State of New York, 57 A.D.3d 1199, 870 N.Y.S.2d 500, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9575 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

Under the definition of "authorized emergency vehicle" in § 101, a private citizen driving his own car in pursuit of a speeder, and himself violating the speed limit, is subject to conviction of speeding, regardless of his good faith. People v Nagell, 23 Misc. 2d 452, 206 N.Y.S.2d 654, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3055 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1960).

A conservation department game protector was not driving an "emergency vehicle", so as to be exempt from prosecution for violating a village speed ordinance, where the police justice was not convinced that he was acting in an emergency in following up an anonymous telephone call advising him that someone was spearing fish at a point not far distant. People v McIntosh, 35 Misc. 2d 865, 231 N.Y.S.2d 714, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2762 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

Police officers who were responding to emergency call and were traveling in lane for oncoming traffic when their vehicle hit preceding private automobile which had been turned across white line into the oncoming lane were not contributorily at fault, and collision was proximately due to negligence of driver of private automobile. Bravata v Russo, 41 Misc. 2d 376, 245 N.Y.S.2d 702, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1270 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963), rev'd, 21 A.D.2d 689, 250 N.Y.S.2d 582, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3706 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1964).

Where the officer, while attempting to replace the officer's patrol car microphone after receiving a dispatch for a traffic stop, drifted into an intersection and struck the injured party, the officer and city were entitled to summary judgment pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. 3212 in the injured party's personal injury action; the officer was deemed to have been driving an emergency vehicle involved in an emergency operation pursuant to N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 101, 114-b, and the officer's actions were measured under the reckless disregard standard pursuant to N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(e), which the injured party failed to satisfy in the instant case. Hughes v Chiera, 4 A.D.3d 872, 772 N.Y.S.2d 772, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1382 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2004).

When a cyclist was hurt when trying to pass a sheriff's department vehicle parked partly in a two-lane roadway while investigating an accident, because he collided with a vehicle traveling the opposite direction, the operator of the sheriff's department vehicle was not liable for the cyclist's injuries because the vehicle was an "authorized emergency vehicle," under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 101, and its operator was engaged in an "emergency operation," under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 114-b, so the operator was afforded the benefits of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104, protecting her from civil liability because she was not engaged in an act of reckless disregard, as her vehicle's emergency lights were clearly visible to both parties involved in the accident for at least half a mile, it was daylight and not raining, and her vehicle was parked pursuant to sheriff's department policies to insure maximum safety. Gonyea v County of Saratoga, 23 A.D.3d 790, 803 N.Y.S.2d 764, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12390 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2005).

In defendant's prosecution for vehicular assault in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.03, defendant was properly barred from claiming that the failure of a police officer, who was struck in his patrol car by defendant's vehicle, to wear a seat belt was the intervening cause of his serious physical injuries because the officer was not required to wear a seat belt under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 101, 1229-c(3), (4). People v Mojica, 62 A.D.3d 100, 874 N.Y.S.2d 195, 241 N.Y.L.J. 44, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1499 (N.Y. Ownership of an automobile did not create a presumption that the owner was the driver where police used a "phototraffic camera" which took two pictures at a set time interval apart thereby showing that defendant's automobile was proceeding at an illegal rate of speed. People v Hildebrandt, 308 N.Y. 397, 126 N.E.2d 377, 308 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 397, 1955 N.Y. LEXIS 996 (N.Y. 1955).

Passenger of taxicab was not "operator" under CLS Veh & Tr § 113; thus, while taxicab owner's business auto policy provided liability coverage for owner and its drivers in personal injury action resulting from passenger's negligent opening of taxicab door in path of bicyclist, policy's liability coverage did not extend to passenger. 1. In general

New York City Department of Corrections vehicle was in emergency operation as defined by CLS Veh & Tr § 114-b when it was driven by department captain en route to inmate disturbance at correctional facility. Klayman v New York, 130 A.D.2d 551, 515 N.Y.S.2d 285, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 46553 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), amended, 134 A.D.2d 408, 520 N.Y.S.2d 1015, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50598 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Police officers' vehicle was engaged in emergency operation under CLS Veh & Tr § 114-b where officers were pursing suspect who reportedly had stolen car and had gun. Olivera by Santos v City of New York, 239 A.D.2d 300, 658 N.Y.S.2d 853, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5714 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1997).

Police officer, who was responding to radio call from driver of another police vehicle, was engaged in "emergency operation" as defined by CLS Veh & Tr § 114-b. McCarthy v City of New York, 250 A.D.2d 654, 673 N.Y.S.2d 160, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5509 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

It was reversible error to deny request to charge jury that plaintiff was operating authorized "emergency vehicle" engaged in "emergency operation" at time that ambulance she was driving collided with truck since ambulance is authorized emergency vehicle, and it was undisputed that she was transporting patient who had experienced respiratory distress to hospital at time of accident. Mulholland v Nabisco, Inc., 264 A.D.2d 411, 693 N.Y.S.2d 242, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8647 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

Question of whether police vehicle was involved in emergency operation was for jury where driver testified that family dispute call being answered was "noncrime" and was not considered emergency requiring turret lights or siren; court did not err in failing to read to jury language of CLS Veh & Tr § 114-b. Criscione v City of New York, 279 A.D.2d 547, 719 N.Y.S.2d 687, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 611 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), rev'd, 97 N.Y.2d 152, 736 N.Y.S.2d 656, 762 N.E.2d 342, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 3738 (N.Y. 2001).

City had the obligation to take steps to prevent the automatic erasure of any audio recording, and its failure to do so constituted spoliation because it was placed on notice of pedestrians' claim and its claimed "emergency operation" affirmative defense within the 180 days after the recording was made; preventing the city from introducing testimony as to the contents of the audio recording was appropriate. Strong v City of New York, 112 A.D.3d 15, 973 N.Y.S.2d 152, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6601 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2013).

2. Liability standard

City was entitled to summary judgment in a passenger's personal injury case, alleging the passenger was injured in a collision with a city-owned fire truck, because the firefighter was engaged in an emergency operation at the time of the collision the firefighter's conduct did not rise to the level of reckless disregard for the safety of others, the fire truck's emergency lights and siren were activated, and the firefighter either stopped or slowed sufficiently before entering the intersection. Jobson v SM Livery, Inc., 175 A.D.3d 1510, 109 N.Y.S.3d 376, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6771 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2019).

City was entitled to summary judgment on a driver's personal injury action because the police officer, who collided with the driver, was responding to the scene of a police call at the time of the accident and, thus, was engaged in an emergency operation; the officer's conduct in making a sharp left turn and not seeing the driver's vehicle before the collision might have constituted a momentary lapse in judgment, but it did not rise to the level of reckless disregard for the safety of others. Proce v Town of Stony Point, 185 A.D.3d 975, 127 N.Y.S.3d 541, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4290 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2020).

3. Immunity

City of New York was immune from liability when a patrol officer closely pursued a traffic violator at high speed and in the wrong direction without contacting the police dispatcher because the patrol officer was involved in an emergency operation and did not act in reckless disregard for the safety of others. The violator's operation of his vehicle, not the manner in which the police officers conducted their pursuit, was the proximate cause of the accident. Fuchs v City of New York, 57 Misc. 3d 778, 60 N.Y.S.3d 654, 2017 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3549 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2017), aff'd, 186 A.D.3d 459, 126 N.Y.S.3d 652, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4522 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2020).

2. Liability standard

Police officer who was driving patrol car in response to 911 dispatch call to investigate family dispute was engaged in "emergency operation" of vehicle as defined in CLS Veh & Tr § 114-b as matter of law, although police department classified family disputes as "non-crime" incidents and both officers in car testified that they considered call "non-emergency," and consequently defendant driver's actions should not have been measured by jury under ordinary negligence standard, but rather under "reckless disregard" standard of CLS Veh & Tr 1104(e). Criscione v City of New York, 97 N.Y.2d 152, 736 N.Y.S.2d 656, 762 N.E.2d 342, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 3738 (N.Y. 2001).

Court erred in granting deputy sheriff's motion for summary judgment where fact issue existed as to whether deputy, who was involved in police pursuit of plaintiff's motorcycle, deliberately drove his vehicle into path of plaintiff's motorcycle in such manner that collision was likely, if not unavoidable, and thereby consciously disregarded known serious risk of harm. Rouse v Dahlem, 228 A.D.2d 777, 643 N.Y.S.2d 744, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6428 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

City was entitled to dismissal of police officer's personal injury action under CLS Gen Mun § 205-e, because plaintiff and another officer were engaged in "emergency operation" under CLS Veh & Tr § 114-b, and thus other officer's driving was privileged, where officers used portable light and siren of unmarked patrol car to get suspected stolen car to pull over, driver of patrol car triple parked and left driver's side door open on exiting, passing bus hit open door, and impact caused patrol car to hit plaintiff. Williams v City of New York, 240 A.D.2d 734, 659 N.Y.S.2d 302, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7076 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

In action arising from collision between police car engaged in emergency operation and car driven by plaintiff, it was error to grant defendants' motion for judgment as matter of law at close of plaintiff's case, where evidence indicated that police officer, after hearing on his radio that fellow officer and ambulance had been dispatched to medical emergency at nearby location, drove at high rate of speed down center turning lane of main thoroughfare heavily congested with traffic, without engaging emergency siren or attempting to decelerate when he approached red light. Gordon v County of Nassau, 261 A.D.2d 359, 689 N.Y.S.2d 192, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4505 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

Summary judgment for a city and a police department was proper in passengers' personal injury suit because the city and the police department established that police officers were engaged in an emergency operation at the time of the collision with the passengers' vehicle, and the officers' conduct did not rise to reckless disregard, as required by N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 114-b, 1104(e); in opposition, the passengers failed to raise a triable fact issue. Meade v Chestnut, 53 A.D.3d 645, 863 N.Y.S.2d 446, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6299 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2008).

Police officer's squad car was an emergency vehicle and his pursuit of a speeding vehicle was an emergency operation for purposes of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104, however, the officer was not entitled to qualified immunity under that statute regarding a traffic accident that occurred during the pursuit because the officer acted recklessly in taking part in the pursuit. Flack v State of New York, 57 A.D.3d 1199, 870 N.Y.S.2d 500, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9575 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

the motorist's vehicle was error because, even if the deputy was involved in an emergency operation at the time of the accident, the "reckless disregard" provision of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(e) was inapplicable as the deputy's conduct did not fall within the four categories of privileged activity set forth in § 1104(b); the deputy was merely traveling in a normal stream of traffic, driving well within the speed limit and in the proper lane of the roadway when he looked down at his data terminal to ascertain the location of a burglary, leading to the accident. Thus, the liability exemption of § 1104(e) never became applicable, and the county and the deputy failed to provide a nonnegligent explanation for the rear-end collision, while the motorist met her burden in support of her cross motion for partial summary judgment by submitting evidence that her vehicle was rear-ended by the deputy's vehicle. Kabir v County of Monroe, 68 A.D.3d 1628, 892 N.Y.S.2d 714, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9555 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2009), aff'd, 16 N.Y.3d 217, 920 N.Y.S.2d 268, 945 N.E.2d 461, 2011 N.Y. LEXIS 156 (N.Y. 2011).

Trooper was entitled to qualified immunity under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(e) in a claim arising from an accident in which the trooper's car was struck by a motorist while the trooper was making a U-turn because, given the evidence of precautions taken by the trooper, he did not act with "conscious indifference" to the consequences of his actions; the trooper testified that after he stopped in the breakdown lane, he activated his left turn signal and looked over his shoulder and out the front window several times to ensure that traffic had stopped in both directions. Before starting his turn, he saw that the motorist's car appeared to have stopped about 20 yards behind him. Green v State of New York, 71 A.D.3d 1310, 897 N.Y.S.2d 536, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2020 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2010).

Because a pursuing police officer's conduct fell within the protection of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 1104 when he ran a red light in pursuit of a driver, and nothing in the record refuted that the driver passed through two red lights prior to losing control and hitting the injured pedestrians, the City was entitled to summary judgment. Rodriguez v City of New York, 105 A.D.3d 623, 963 N.Y.S.2d 640, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2634 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2013).

Police officer who was dispatched to investigate "burglar/fire alarm" was involved in emergency operation as defined in CLS Veh & Tr § 114-b when he was traveling partly on shoulder of road, although he did not have lights or sirens operating on his vehicle; thus, in action by plaintiff whose vehicle was struck by police car when it attempted to pass him, standard of liability to be applied was whether defendant officer acted with "reckless disregard for the safety of others." Sims v Town of Ramapo, 177 Misc. 2d 302, 676 N.Y.S.2d 421, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 297 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1998).

Where the officer, while attempting to replace the officer's patrol car microphone after receiving a dispatch for a traffic stop, drifted into an intersection and struck the injured party, the officer and city were entitled to summary judgment pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. 3212 in the injured party's personal injury action; the officer was deemed to have been driving an emergency vehicle involved in an emergency operation pursuant to N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 101, 114-b, and the officer's actions were measured under the reckless disregard standard pursuant to N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(e), which the injured party failed to satisfy in the instant case. Hughes v Chiera, 4 A.D.3d 872, 772 N.Y.S.2d 772, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1382 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2004).

Judgment for the survivors of a decedent in a wrongful death action was affirmed; trial court properly allowed the survivors to introduce evidence of the nature of the call to which a police officer was responding when he caused an accident, because while all police officers in patrol vehicles responding to police calls were involved in an emergency operation within the meaning of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 114-b, the nature of the call nevertheless was relevant in determining whether a responding officer's conduct was in reckless disregard for the safety of others; because defendants failed to perfect its appeal from an order precluding a town from calling any experts or eliciting any expert opinion testimony, that appeal was deemed abandoned and dismissed, N.Y. Comp. Codes R. & Regs. tit. 22, § 1000.12(b). Allen v Town of Amherst, 8 A.D.3d 996, 778 N.Y.S.2d 598, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8090 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 3 N.Y.3d 609, 786 N.Y.S.2d 812, 820 N.E.2d 291, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 2480 (N.Y. 2004).

When a cyclist was hurt when trying to pass a sheriff's department vehicle parked partly in a two-lane roadway while investigating an accident, because he collided with a vehicle traveling the opposite direction, the operator of the sheriff's department vehicle was not liable for the cyclist's injuries because the vehicle was an "authorized emergency vehicle," under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 101, and its operator was engaged in an "emergency operation," under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 114-b, so the operator was afforded the benefits of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104, protecting her from civil liability because she was not engaged in an act of reckless disregard, as her vehicle's emergency lights were clearly visible to both parties involved in the accident for at least half a mile, it was daylight and not raining, and her vehicle was parked pursuant to sheriff's department policies to insure maximum safety. Gonyea v County of Saratoga, 23 A.D.3d 790, 803 N.Y.S.2d 764, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12390 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2005).

Motorist's affirmative defense of negligence was dismissed in a deputy's case seeking damages for injuries suffered when a vehicle driven by the motorist collided with the vehicle of the deputy who was making a U-turn on a highway to pursue a speeding vehicle; N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104 applied to the deputy's claim, and the deputy's conduct did not rise to the level of reckless disregard as a matter of law. There was no doubt that, for purposes of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104, an officer in a patrol car responding to a speeding vehicle was deemed to be engaged in an emergency operation, and the deputy had every right to assume that the motorist was going to yield the right of way to an emergency vehicle with lights activated. Ayers v O'Brien, 852 N.Y.S.2d 730, 19 Misc. 3d 449, 2008 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 621 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), aff'd in part, modified, 60 A.D.3d 27, 870 N.Y.S.2d 587, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9975 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

Although a parole officer failed to use a turn signal or sound the horn while driving a police vehicle that was involved in an emergency operation pursuant to N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 1104(a), 114-b, the officer's conduct did not rise to the level of reckless disregard or conscious indifference required for liability to attach. Rusho v State of New York, 878 N.Y.S.2d 855, 24 Misc. 3d 752, 2009 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1018 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 2009), rev'd, 76 A.D.3d 783, 906 N.Y.S.2d 836, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6551 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2010).

Agency Opinions

Vehicles owned by City University of New York (CUNY) and operated by special patrolmen on its security and public safety force are "police vehicles" as defined in CLS Veh & Tr § 132-a; thus, those vehicles may display red or white flashing lights while engaged in emergency operations on CUNY property. 2000 NY Ops Atty Gen F 00-4.

If a person is so infirm that he is incapable of traveling from a nursing home to a hospital by ordinary means of transportation and for that reason is transported with the aid of an ambulance, the driver of the ambulance may use sirens, flashing red lights, etc., pursuant to Vehicle and Traffic Law, § 1104, even though the person being transported is in no imminent danger. 1979 Op St Compt File #22.

1. In general

A mobile home is a motor vehicle within the meaning of § 9-302 of the Uniform Commercial Code which requires that a financing statement must be filed to perfect a security interest therein. Recchio v Manufacturers & Traders Trust Co., 35 A.D.2d 769, 316 N.Y.S.2d 915, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3635 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1970).

Automobile liability insurer was obligated to provide plaintiff insureds with uninsured motorist benefits for injuries caused by uninsured all-terrain vehicle operator, since policy coverage extended, as matter of law, to all motor vehicles as defined by CLS Veh & Tr § 125, which, at time of accident, did not specifically exclude all-terrain vehicles (although it was subsequently amended to exclude them). Harper v Lumbermens Mut. Casualty Co., 174 A.D.2d 1031, 572 N.Y.S.2d 195, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8976 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. dismissed, 78 N.Y.2d 1110, 578 N.Y.S.2d 873, 586 N.E.2d 56, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 4975 (N.Y. 1991).

At the time of the incident in question, a utility vehicle was being operated on defendants' private property - not a public highway. Accordingly, the utility vehicle was not a motor vehicle within the meaning of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 125, and it was error for trial court to conclude otherwise. Wright v O'Leary, 172 A.D.3d 1495, 99 N.Y.S.3d 477, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3421 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2019).

Under former §§ 2 and 59 a town is liable for the negligence of its employee in the operation of a motor truck upon a public highway in connection with the duty imposed upon town. Jones v Clarkson, 223 N.Y.S. 611, 130 Misc. 57, 1927 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 995 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1927).

A "go-cart" is a motor vehicle subject to registration as such if operated upon the public highway. Stevenson v Merchants Mut. Ins. Co., 37 Misc. 2d 996, 235 N.Y.S.2d 589, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2149 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1962).

Fact that automobile subjected to inspection was concededly mechanically without fault did not serve to diminish defendant's objective basis for inspection. People v Gondrez, 74 Misc. 2d 73, 343 N.Y.S.2d 833, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1914 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1973).

Plaintiffs were required to meet serious injury standard of CLS Ins § 5102 in action arising out of incident in which defendant attempted to unhitch trailer carrying boat from his automobile, and trailer rolled backward down road and into tent in which plaintiffs were sleeping, even though defendant's automobile was parked and not being operated on highway, and trailer was detached from automobile; trailer fell within CLS Veh & Tr § 311(2) definition of motor vehicle since it had been drawn to site by automobile and would not have been present and in position to roll out of control if not for its attachment to automobile, and it did not lose its identity as motor vehicle by virtue of sudden and accidental detachment from automobile. Christopher v Caldarulo, 160 Misc. 2d 360, 608 N.Y.S.2d 998, 1994 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 60 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1994).

A "tournament car" owned by the members of the tournament team is required to be registered and to display registration plates. 1953 Ops St Compt File #6035.

2. Inoperable

Where it appeared from the affidavits that the injuries occurred when the automobile "started and ran into" claimant, it was therefore apparently in operable condition, rather than junk, and was undergoing repairs and was a "motor vehicle" within the definition of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 125. Hall v Royal Indem. Ins. Co., 34 A.D.2d 1090, 313 N.Y.S.2d 76, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4380 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1970).

In action by insured whose child was pinned between bumpers of pickup truck and car being manually pushed toward truck, insurer was not entitled to summary judgment dismissing uninsured motorist claim on ground that car, because it was temporarily inoperable at time of accident, did not qualify as motor vehicle under CLS Veh & Tr § 125 and thus was not "uninsured motor vehicle" under subject policy as matter of law; factual issues existed whether accident arose out of maintenance or use of vehicle within meaning of policy. Dupra v Benoit, 270 A.D.2d 856, 705 N.Y.S.2d 781, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3490 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000).

Convictions of fourth degree grand larceny, N.Y. Penal Law § 155.30(8), were supported by sufficient evidence because defendant's sale of two vehicles owned by her former tenants, and left by the former tenants on defendant's property within approximately one week of vacancy, defendant's false statement to police concerning the whereabouts of the vehicles, and her denial of receiving payment for the vehicles supported an inference of larcenous intent and undermined defendant's claim of right; defendant did not argued that, due to their condition, the vehicles did not satisfy the definition of "motor vehicles." People v Lowin, 71 A.D.3d 1194, 896 N.Y.S.2d 231, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1698 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2010).

A grand jury indictment for third degree arson under Penal Law § 150.10 would be dismissed where the evidence presented to the grand jury was legally insufficient to support an arson indictment in that the arson statute contemplates a motor vehicle in operable condition, and the evidence presented indicated that defendant had set fire to a tow truck that had no battery and contained "no electric whatever," and where the prosecutor's instructions to the grand jury that "a motor vehicle is any vehicle not propelled by muscular power" but which omitted the phrase "operated . . . on a public highway" from the definition of "motor vehicle" were incorrect and so emasculated the statutory definition of "motor vehicle" in the context of the limited testimony provided to the grand jury as to prejudice the interests of defendant and impair the integrity of the grand jury. People v Carey, 120 Misc. 2d 862, 466 N.Y.S.2d 887, 1983 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3812 (N.Y. County Ct. 1983).

Defendant was properly charged with operating motor vehicle while under influence of alcohol, based on activity of steering car without battery as it was being pushed, since car was "motor vehicle" within meaning of CLS Veh & Tr § 125 regardless of whether it was technically capable of being operated under motorized power. People v Lopez, 144 Misc. 2d 325, 544 N.Y.S.2d 410, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 484 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1989).

Defendant may properly be charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol for steering a car that lacked a battery since an automobile and all other ordinary motorized vehicles are "motor vehicles" (Vehicle and Traffic Law § 125) regardless of whether technically capable of being operated under motorized power. Only a limited class of vehicles, which are ordinarily muscle powered, such as bicycles and other lightweight vehicles, should be exempted from the definition of "motor vehicle". People v Lopez, 144 Misc. 2d 325, 544 N.Y.S.2d 410, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 484 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1989).

3. Not a vehicle

Court would reverse defendant's convictions for vehicular manslaughter and vehicular assault involving snowmobile accident

where, at time of occurrence, snowmobiles were not vehicles within purview of CLS Veh & Tr § 1192. People v Davis, 178 A.D.2d 714, 576 N.Y.S.2d 947, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16011 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1991), app. denied, 79 N.Y.2d 946, 583 N.Y.S.2d 200, 592 N.E.2d 808, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 2237 (N.Y. 1992).

Trial court did not err in granting a contractor's motion for summary judgment dismissing an employee's action alleging that the contractor as vicariously liable for a coworker's negligent acts because at the time of the accident, the skid steer the coworker used was being operated in a parking lot that was not open to the public, rather than on a public highway; thus, the machine was not a motor vehicle for purposes of liability. Calvert v Duggan & Duggan Gen. Contr., Inc., 159 A.D.3d 1490, 73 N.Y.S.3d 331, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2147 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 31 N.Y.3d 912, 106 N.E.3d 754, 81 N.Y.S.3d 371, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 1563 (N.Y. 2018).

A trailer is not a motor vehicle. Herrick v Arborio, 258 N.Y.S. 5, 144 Misc. 15, 1932 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1154 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1932).

City had authority to regulate "parking" of a pushcart which was neither a motor vehicle nor a motor cycle though the definition of "parking" in the Vehicle and Traffic Law could not be applied to such vehicle. People ex rel. Laskowski v Weinberger, 8 Misc. 2d 953, 165 N.Y.S.2d 229, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2684 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1957).

The mere fact that an unregistered and uninsured vehicle was driven backwards into claimant while he was working in automobile body shop on private property would not preclude the responsibility of the MVAIC for the accident upon the theory that the automobile which struck claimant was not a motor vehicle as defined by this section. An insurer was not obligated to provide coverage under a comprehensive general liability policy, which contained an exclusion for bodily injury arising out of loading or unloading, where the tractor-trailer owned by the insured and involved in the accident came within the policy definition of "automobile" and was a motor vehicle within the meaning of Veh & Tr Law §§ 125 and 359(k), where the deaths of the insured's employees occurred while they were transferring gasoline from one tractor-trailer to another, and where the record on appeal provided nothing to challenge the compelling conclusion that the accident arose out of the ownership, maintenance, operation, use, loading or unloading of the tractor-trailer; accordingly, the trial court erred in denying the insurer's motion for summary judgment. Duncan Petroleum Transport, Inc. v Aetna Ins. Co., 96 A.D.2d 942, 466 N.Y.S.2d 394, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19577 (N.Y. A tractor dump truck, designed to vary heavy loads over highways, is not a piece of road building machinery within the legislative intent to exempt such machinery from registration as a motor vehicle. 1930 Ops Atty Gen 158.

5. Motorcycle

A motorcycle is not a motor vehicle. Hence, the defendant who allegedly permitted an unlicensed person to drive his motorcycle on a public highway should not have been charged with a violation of former § 20 but should have been charged with a violation of former § 41. People v Asselta, 1 A.D.2d 960, 150 N.Y.S.2d 32, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5791 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1956).

"Goped" portable motorized scooter—weighing 19 pounds, started by muscle power for first 15 or 20 feet, and then powered by 1.2 horsepower motor capable of speed of 20 miles per hour—was "motor vehicle," defined in CLS Veh & Tr § 125 as "vehicle...propelled by any power other than muscular power," for which insurance was required under CLS Veh & Tr §§ 312 and 319(1); exceptions in § 125 do not include "lightweight" vehicles or vehicles not capable of causing serious injury if operated improperly. Conventional bicycle from which had been removed various operational parts and which was propelled by a lawnmower gasoline engine and was capable of being stopped only by shorting the spark plug was not, at time it was being operated by 12-year-old boy on public highway prior to fatal collision with automobile, "an automobile" within meaning of any automobile insurance policy issued to various persons who might be conceivably liable since device could not be legally used on public highway as a "motor vehicle" in view of New York statutes; nor was it a "bicycle", "motorcycle" or "motor scooter". Lalomia v Bankers & Shippers Ins. Co., 58 Misc. 2d 530, 296 N.Y.S.2d 464, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 952 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1968), modified, 35 A.D.2d 114, 312 N.Y.S.2d 1018, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. A village ordinance limiting the speed of a "motor vehicle" does not embrace a motorcycle in light of former § 2 sub 8, excepting motorcycles from the definition of motor vehicle. People v Higgins, 31 N.Y.S.2d 508, 1941 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2414 (N.Y. County Ct. 1941).

Motorcycle is "private passenger motor vehicle", as defined by CLS Ins § 3440(a)(1), for which rental vehicle insurance coverage must be provided. Insurance Department, Opinions of General Counsel, Opinion Number 03-10-12.

Insurance Department, in interpreting Insurance Law, has generally construed term "motor vehicle" to include motorcycles, except where there is specific exclusion of motorcycles from definition of motor vehicle, such as can be found in CLS Ins § 5102; in addition, department also construes term "automobile," as used in CLS Ins § 2335, to have same meaning as motor vehicle. Insurance Department, Opinions of General Counsel, Opinion Number 04-10-06.

6. Machinery

A gasoline driven farm tractor on which was mounted a crane and hoist for the purpose of moving and tiering heavy cargo at steamship piers was a tractor crane within the meaning of this section. People v Jarka Corp., 285 N.Y. 548, 33 N.E.2d 239, 285 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 548, 1941 N.Y. LEXIS 1584 (N.Y. 1941).

A four-wheeled electric truck mounted with an electrically operated crane, used principally on "private piers", and moved periodically between Manhattan and Brooklyn over public highways under its own power is exempt from registration. People v Bay Ridge Operating Co., 259 A.D. 260, 19 N.Y.S.2d 140, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6110 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

"Bobcat"—machine used for plowing snow or in connection with landscaping work—was "motor vehicle" being operated on "public highway" when its owner-operator was moving it "on the sidewalk" when it "slid right into the side of" county-owned bus; thus, county was not entitled to stay arbitration of uninsured motorist claim on grounds, inter alia, that uninsured bobcat was neither "motor vehicle" nor was being operated on "public highway." County of Westchester v Winstead, 231 A.D.2d 630, 647 N.Y.S.2d 536, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9471 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

A crane boom permanently mounted on a truck chassis, with a maximum speed of 28 miles per hour, and operated in the city of Rochester and its environs, is a motor vehicle, and not a tractor crane. People v C. P. Ward, Inc., 74 N.Y.S.2d 181, 189 Misc. 288, 1947 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3205 (N.Y. City Ct. 1947).

Plaintiffs cannot avail themselves of the provisions permitting service upon a nonresident owner of a motor vehicle in the absence of showing that the agricultural tractor was being used for nonagricultural purposes inasmuch as the mere operation of such a tractor upon public highway is not a proof of nonagricultural use. Wilson v Heidenreich, 109 N.Y.S.2d 428, 201 Misc. 333, 1951 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2685 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1951).

Although an owner of an excavator was not liable for an employee's injuries under N.Y. Lab. Law § 241(6), because the excavator was a motor vehicle under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 125, 388, that the owner negligently entrusted to an untrained co-employee in violation of N.Y. Lab. Law § 200, the owner was not entitled to summary judgment. Martinez v Hitachi Constr. Mach. Where crane mobile was not subject to motor vehicle registration on June 22, 1951 and (prior to revision of general liability manuals) it was not excluded or included in exceptions in general liability policy, court held it was not an automobile under the policy. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v Dooley Electric Co., 133 N.Y.S.2d 785, 1954 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2438 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1954).

Lawn tractor fit within the broad definition of a motor vehicle set forth in N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 125. Therefore, defendant was properly charged with the operation of a motor vehicle on a public highway while knowing or having reason to know that his license to operate a motor vehicle was revoked when he operated a lawn tractor on a public highway in the early morning hours, en route from a bar to his home, while his license to operate a motor vehicle was revoked and while he was intoxicated. People v Canute, 8 A.D.3d 1125, 778 N.Y.S.2d 247, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8201 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2004).

Vicarious liability of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388 that ordinarily makes owners of motor vehicles financially responsible for injuries occurring as a result of the operation of the motor vehicle did not attach to make an airline who owned a forklift liable to an independent contractor's employee for injuries sustained when he was struck by the forklift where a hi-lo forklift is not a motor vehicle. Mangra v China Airlines, Ltd., 790 N.Y.S.2d 370, 7 Misc. 3d 499, 233 N.Y.L.J. 36, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 224 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 2005).

7. Ambulance, police, or fire vehicle

Under the definition of former § 2, subds. 7 and 8, a police automobile is a vehicle but not a motor vehicle. Booth v Rochester, 258 A.D. 849, 15 N.Y.S.2d 945, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7226 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

A complaint in an action against a city to recover damages for personal injuries suffered by plaintiff when struck by an automobile owned by defendant city, which alleges that the accident was caused solely by the negligence of defendant's police officer while operating the automobile, is sufficient to comply with former § 59 but is insufficient to state a good cause of action, because it fails to allege the exception in sub. 8 of former § 2 that the automobile was not a "police patrol wagon." Kelly v Niagara Falls, 229 N.Y.S. 328, 131 Misc. 934, 1928 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 885 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1928).

A motorcycle, owned by the police department, is a police vehicle within exception of the definition of "motor vehicle" in this former § 2 sub 8. People ex rel. Lehr v MacDonald, 3 N.Y.S.2d 784, 167 Misc. 670, 1938 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1505 (N.Y. City Ct. 1938).

A game protector in the department of conservation is subject to the restrictions of a speed ordinance of the city of Rochester, and the contention that defendant is a peace officer (Conservation Law § 169) and that a car driven by him in line of duty is a "police vehicle" within the meaning of former §§ 2(8), 10, excepting same from the application of traffic laws, must be rejected, since the ordinance does not except "police vehicle" from its provisions and former § 54 preserves the powers of cities of the first class to enact ordinances if not inconsistent with said law, and the legislature by defining "motor vehicle" and excepting therefrom "fire and police vehicles" did not intend to deny the city the right to restrict the operation of fire and police vehicles. Rochester v Lindner, 4 N.Y.S.2d 4, 167 Misc. 790, 1938 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1532 (N.Y. City Ct. 1938).

Unmarked automobile owned by state police was not subject to inspection under Vehicle and Traffic Law, irrespective of purpose or intent of state police, and use of police motor vehicles for enforcement of inspection regulations was not authorized. People v Conrow, 68 Misc. 2d 471, 326 N.Y.S.2d 971, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1386 (N.Y. County Ct. 1971).

Where motor vehicle of state police met standards of commissioner, defendant could not be guilty of improper inspection of the vehicle. People v Conrow, 68 Misc. 2d 471, 326 N.Y.S.2d 971, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1386 (N.Y. County Ct. 1971).

Exemption of police vehicles from statutory definition of "motor vehicle" did not preclude use of vehicle owned by state police to determine whether motor vehicle inspections were properly performed at service station owned and operated by defendant. People v Wehmann, 70 Misc. 2d 278, 332 N.Y.S.2d 516, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1875 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1972).

Exemption of police vehicles from statutory definition of "motor vehicle" did not preclude use of unmarked automobile owned by state police to determine whether motor vehicle inspections were properly performed at defendant's state licensed motor vehicle inspection station. People v Gondrez, 74 Misc. 2d 73, 343 N.Y.S.2d 833, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1914 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1973).

Evidence including showing that operator of state licensed motor vehicle inspection station certified an unmarked automobile of police department which was free from defects violated statute in improperly performing inspection in failing to abide by detailed procedure set forth in regulations before certifying automobile for use. People v Gondrez, 74 Misc. 2d 73, 343 N.Y.S.2d 833, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1914 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1973).

Insurer's petition for a permanent stay of arbitration should have been denied because a police officer was occupying a motor vehicle being operated by a fellow officer at the time it was involved in a collision with an underinsured vehicle, and while the negligence section of the Vehicle and Traffic Law (VTL) excluded police vehicles, the definition of a "motor vehicle" in the general provisions of the VTL applied to the entire VTL and the uninsured/underinsured motorist endorsement at issue. Matter of State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v Fitzgerald, 112 A.D.3d 166, 973 N.Y.S.2d 801, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7135 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2013), rev'd, 25 N.Y.3d 799, 38 N.E.3d 325, 16 N.Y.S.3d 796, 2015 N.Y. LEXIS 1526 (N.Y. 2015).

8. Bicycle, mini-bike

Bicycle is not included within statutory definition of "motor vehicle." General Accident Ins. Co. v Gladstone, 260 A.D.2d 855, 687 N.Y.S.2d 830, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4031 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

A "mini-bike" or "mini-motorcycle" comes within the statutory definition of a "motorcycle" or "motor-driven cycle" rather than a "motor vehicle" and would in a proper case be governed by §§ 410 and 503 and not §§ 401 and 501 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law. People v Moe, 62 Misc. 2d 27, 307 N.Y.S.2d 921, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 975 (N.Y. App. Term 1969).

A two-wheeled vehicle with a seat and a motor known as a "mini-bike" is a vehicle which is regulated and required to be registered under the Vehicle and Traffic Law. People v Devlin, 64 Misc. 2d 327, 314 N.Y.S.2d 670, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1280 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1970).

Defendant, a 14-year-old boy, who attached a 2 ½ horsepower lawnmower motor to his bicycle using the end of a baseball bat as a means of transmitting power of the motor to the rear wheel of the bicycle thereby created a "motor-driven cycle" not subject to regulations relating to motor vehicles or motorcycles. People v Garfinkel, 64 Misc. 2d 774, 315 N.Y.S.2d 689, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1216 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1970).

The infant plaintiff was an occupant of a mini-bike, for purposes of the no-fault insurance statute Ins Law § 3672, even though the mini-bike was not operating at the time, where the plaintiff was seated on the mini-bike within the boundaries of the public highway at the time of the accident. Tyler v Traveler's Ins. Co., 110 Misc. 2d 471, 442 N.Y.S.2d 746, 1981 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3109 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1981).

Only limited class of vehicles, including bicycles and other lightweight muscle-powered vehicles, should be exempted from definition of "motor vehicle" in CLS Veh & Tr § 125. People v Lopez, 144 Misc. 2d 325, 544 N.Y.S.2d 410, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 484 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1989).

A village ordinance or local law may validly require the testing of children, and others, by the application of reasonable standards, to determine their fitness to operate bicycles on public ways within the village, and may also provide for the issuance or withholding of licenses so to operate bicycles. The power to license the operation of bicycles implies the power to suspend or revoke such license by the application of reasonable standards. A village board of trustees may appoint a commission to administer such ordinance or local law and may delegate to this commission the power to test applicants, issue or withhold licenses and suspend or revoke the same, but not the power to hear prosecutions for violations of the enactment, since this power belongs exclusively to the courts. 1965 Ops St Compt File #296.

Defendant's motion to dismiss the simplified traffic informations was denied because whether the vehicle at issue was a limited use motorcycle and not a motor vehicle was a question of fact that could not be resolved based upon what had been presented to the court, where the year, model number, and vehicle identification number were noticeably absent from the description of the vehicle on the simplified traffic information. People v Lewis, 51 Misc. 3d 372, 28 N.Y.S.3d 762, 2015 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4867 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2015).

9. All terrain vehicle

An all terrain vehicle (ATV) is excluded from the definition of motor vehicle found in Vehicle and Traffic Law § 125 and is therefore not a vehicle for the purposes of the Penal Law which defines vehicle as a " 'motor vehicle', 'trailer,' or 'semi trailer' as defined in the vehicle and traffic law" (Penal Law § 10.00 [14]). Accordingly, defendant's motion, at the conclusion of the People's case, for dismissal of the count charging unauthorized use of a motor vehicle (Penal Law § 165.05) involving an ATV, is granted. People v Church, 148 Misc. 2d 909, 563 N.Y.S.2d 620, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 622 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1990).

Despite defendant's act of driving an off-road motorcycle, or all terrain vehicle, which was not a motor vehicle under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 125, he could still be found guilty of reckless driving, due to his act of interfering with the victim's use of a public highway, by causing her to swerve out of her lane and collide with another, contributing to her accident. People v Miller, 196 Misc. 2d 591, 764 N.Y.S.2d 498, 2003 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 896 (N.Y. J. Ct. 2003).

Violations of § 1203-c of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, requiring off-street parking spaces for the handicapped are enforced under the provisions of Article II-A of the Vehicle & Traffic Law, relating to a traffic infractions, rather than Article II-B, relating to parking infractions. Except in those cases in which it is provided by law that no fee shall be charged, the fees for searching the records of the department of motor vehicles kept pursuant to the provisions of this chapter and for furnishing copies of documents in said department kept pursuant to the provisions of this chapter shall be as provided in this section. Provided, however, that no fee shall be charged any public officer, board or body, volunteer fire company, volunteer ambulance service, or legal aid bureau or society or other private entity when acting pursuant to section seven hundred twenty-two of the county law, for searches or copies of documents to be used for a public purpose.

2. Fees for searches of records.

(a) [Eff until April 1, 2022] The fee for a search which is made manually by the department shall be ten dollars.

(a) [Eff April 1, 2022] The fee for a search which is made manually by the department shall be five dollars.

(b) [Eff April 1, 2022] The fee for a search which is made by direct entry by a requester who has been approved for such entry by the commissioner shall be four dollars.

(c) [Eff until April 1, 2022] The fee for a search which is made by means of an electronic medium which has been prepared by a requester who has been approved for such service by the commissioner and which is processed by the department shall be seven dollars.

(c) [Eff April 1, 2022] The fee for a search which is made by means of an electronic medium which has been prepared by a requester who has been approved for such service by the commissioner and which is processed by the department shall be four dollars.

(d) The commissioner may condition approval for direct entry of a request or use of an electronic medium by a requester upon the establishment and maintenance of an account with the department with a minimum balance established by the commissioner from which fees chargeable to the requester shall be deducted. In addition, the commissioner shall prescribe the specifications and procedures for use of electronic media and may establish a minimum and/or a maximum number of searches which may be contained on any one such electronic medium submission.

(e) For the purposes of this section, a search shall consist of a single entry of an acceptable identifier for the purpose of obtaining a specific category of information relating to a person, vehicle or number plate. The commissioner shall by regulation define such categories and identifiers acceptable for such categories. Except as provided in subdivision three of this section, a search of the record of the department shall include the furnishing of the information disclosed by such search, and with respect to searches made manually by the department, shall include a certification of such record.

3. Fees for copies of documents. The fees for copies of documents, other than accident reports, shall be one dollar per page. A page shall consist of either a single or double side of any document. The fee for a copy of an accident report shall be fifteen dollars. All copies of documents shall be certified at no additional fee. Whenever search of records of the department is required in conjunction with a request for a copy of a document, the fee for such search shall be the fee provided in paragraph (a) of subdivision two of this section. The result of such search will be the locating of the document to be copied, or if no document can be located, a certification to that effect will be the result of the search.

4. Registration lists and title information. (a) The commissioner shall have discretion to contract with the highest responsible bidder or bidders to furnish the registration information specified in this section from the records of all vehicle registrations from any registration period, or number of periods not exceeding five years in the aggregate, with respect to a given territory or information on titles. In such event, the fees provided by this section shall not apply to copies of records furnished under any such contract. Any such contract entered into by the commissioner pursuant to this section shall not be for a term of more than two years and shall contain language prohibiting the successful bidder from assigning the contract and from any use or resale of the information received which use or resale is contrary to the public policy of this state or is contrary to the public morals or welfare. In addition, any such sale of registration information shall be limited to only that part of the vehicle registration records describing the name and address of the owner of the vehicle and the make, model, year, weight, body style, number of passengers and cylinders, fuel, license number, type of registration and transaction, validation and expiration date and vehicle identification number of the vehicle.

(b) The commissioner shall notify each vehicle registrant that the registration information specified in paragraph (a) of this subdivision has been or will be furnished to the contracting party. The commissioner shall inform each vehicle registrant when such registrant first makes application for a vehicle registration or when such registrant applies to renew an existing vehicle registration how to achieve the deletion of such information from the contracting party's file. The contract between the commissioner and the contracting party shall provide that, upon the request of the registrant made in such manner and in such form as shall be prescribed by the commissioner, such registration information shall be deleted from the contracting party's file for all purposes, except: (i) issuance of manufacturer's warranty, safety recall or similar notices, or (ii) statistical complications.

(c) Any material violation of the terms of such contract by the successful bidder not corrected or discontinued within thirty days following receipt of notice of such violation will automatically cancel and void its contract with the commissioner and disqualify it from bidding for the five successive years following such cancellation.

(d) Any contract authorized by this section shall be subject to the provisions of article nine of the state finance law.

(e) The commissioner may from time to time require that the contracting party pursuant to this section submit written reports, in form satisfactory to the commissioner, concerning the use of such registration or title information.

5. Miscellaneous charges. The commissioner upon request may furnish copies of documents and records of searches by means other than first class mail upon prior payment of any additional cost involved in such transmission. Where the cost of such requested transmission cannot be readily determined before transmission, the commissioner may establish a reasonable fee to cover the cost of such transmission. Nothing herein shall be construed to require the commissioner to provide such service.

Notes to Decisions

1. In general

Petitioner, holding a contract as highest responsible bidder pursuant to subd. 3 of this section requiring the State Motor Vehicle Commissioner to furnish it with copies of all motor vehicle registrations, was not entitled to a writ of prohibition against favored treatment accorded to the prior holder of such a contract by the Commissioner in allowing the latter to use his offices after hours without payment of appropriate fees for a mass copying operation of vehicle registrations from the records. Circulation Associates, Inc. v Hults, 40 Misc. 2d 92, 242 N.Y.S.2d 722, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1778 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963).

Motion to dismiss claim for breach of contract on grounds that it failed to state a cause of action was properly denied where claimant alleged that it was intended by an agreement entered into between claimant and the commissioner of motor vehicles following a public bidding pursuant to subd 3 of § 202 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law that claimant would be the sole party to receive in bulk from the commissioner, information contained in motor vehicle registration records for the years 1962, 1963 and 1964 and that the commissioner's subsequent agreement with a competitor to permit the microfilming of copies of a form known as MV-50 which contained information substantially identical to that of vehicle registrations at a cost less than the statutory rate, constituted a breach thereof, since these allegations stated a cause of action. Circulation Associates, Inc. v Hults, 40 Misc. 2d 92, 242 N.Y.S.2d 722, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1778 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963).

Plaintiff's complaint seeking declaratory and injunctive relief to prevent the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles to sell the lists of driver registrations to the highest bidder as an unconstitutional violation of his right of privacy was dismissed, since the information was not vital or intimate and was in the category of "public records" available to anyone upon demand. Lamont v Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, 269 F. Supp. 880, 1967 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8802 (S.D.N.Y.), aff'd, 386 F.2d 449, 1967 U.S. App. LEXIS 4195 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1967).

Agency Opinions

1. In general

Department of Motor Vehicles is not authorized to contract with private vendor to print and distribute Driver's Manual in exchange for vendor's right to sell advertising therein. 1992 NY Ops Atty Gen F 92-5.

Computerized listing of all licensed passenger-car drivers residing in 3 counties would be available under Freedom of Information Law if Department of Motor Vehicles could generate requested data based on its existing computer programs; CLS Veh & Tr § 202 does not prohibit applicant from seeking database or portion of database consisting of driver license information. Comm on Open Gov't FOIL-AO-10106.

CLS Veh & Tr § 202 which authorizes copying fee of $15.00 for accident reports obtained from Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) and one dollar per page for copies of other records, and authorizes DMV to collect fees for searching for records, does not authorize other agencies (such as municipal police or sheriff's departments) to charge more than 25 cents per copy when accident reports are requested under Freedom of Information Law. Comm on Open Gov't FOIL-AO-12263.

Since CLS Veh & Tr § 202 pertains to particular records in possession of Department of Motor Vehicles only, other agencies, such as municipal police or sheriff's departments, cannot unilaterally adopt policy or regulations authorizing fees in excess of 25 cents per photocopy or other fees without specific statutory authority to do so. Notes to Decisions

A police vehicle was not subject to inspection, irrespective of the purpose or intent of the state police in the use of police motor vehicles for such purposes. People v Conrow, 68 Misc. 2d 471, 326 N.Y.S.2d 971, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1386 (N.Y. County Ct. 1971).

Exemption of police vehicles from statutory definition of "motor vehicle" did not preclude use of vehicle owned by state police to determine whether motor vehicle inspections were properly performed at service station owned and operated by defendant. People v Wehmann, 70 Misc. 2d 278, 332 N.Y.S.2d 516, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1875 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1972).

Fact that police vehicles are exempt from inspection did not prevent prosecution of defendant charged with failing to make a proper inspection of an unmarked police vehicle. People v Gondrez, 74 Misc. 2d 73, 343 N.Y.S.2d 833, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1914 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1973).

Evidence indicating that defendant failed to follow procedures for inspection of vehicle set forth in statute was sufficient to establish violation of such statute where defendant certified as passing inspection an unmarked police vehicle. People v Gondrez, 74 Misc. 2d 73, 343 N.Y.S.2d 833, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1914 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1973).

ARTICLE 6 Motor Vehicle Financial Security Act

HISTORY:

Add, L 1959, ch 775, eff Oct 1, 1960, with substance transferred from former Art 6–A.

§ 311. Definitions

As used in this article:

1. The term "superintendent" shall mean the superintendent of financial services of this state.

2. The term "motor vehicle" shall be defined as in section one hundred twenty-five of this chapter, except that it shall also include trailers, semi-trailers and tractors other than tractors used exclusively for agricultural purposes, and shall exclude fire and police vehicles, farm equipment, including self-propelled machines used exclusively in growing, harvesting or handling farm produce, tractors used exclusively for agricultural purposes, or for snowplowing other than for hire, and self-propelled caterpillar or crawler-type equipment while being operated on the contract site.

3. The term "proof of financial security" shall mean proof of ability to respond in damages for liability arising out of the ownership, maintenance or use of a motor vehicle as evidenced by an owner's policy of liability insurance, a financial security bond, a financial security deposit, or qualifications as a self-insurer under section three hundred sixteen of this chapter or, in the case of a non-resident, under self-insurance provisions of the laws of the jurisdiction of such non-resident. Notwithstanding any other provision of any law or regulation, any proof of financial security shall for any self-propelled motor vehicle also provide coverage required by this article to any non-commercial trailer hauled by any such motor vehicle, other than a mobile home. For the purposes of this article, a mobile home or "manufactured home" means a mobile home or manufactured home as defined in section one hundred twenty-two-c of this chapter.

4. The term "owner's policy of liability insurance" shall mean a policy

(a) Affording coverage as defined in the minimum provisions prescribed in a regulation which shall be promulgated by the superintendent at least ninety days prior to effective date of this act. The superintendent before promulgating such regulations or any amendment thereof, shall consult with all insurers licensed to write automobile liability insurance in this state and shall not prescribe minimum provisions which fail to reflect the provisions of automobile liability insurance policies, other than motor vehicle liability policies as defined in section three hundred forty-five of this chapter, issued within this state at the date of such regulation or amendment thereof. Nothing contained in such regulation or in this article shall prohibit any insurer from affording coverage under an owner's policy of liability insurance more liberal than that required by said minimum provisions. Every such owner's policy of liability insurance shall provide insurance subject to said regulation against loss from the liability imposed by law for damages, including damages for care and loss of services, because of bodily injury to or death of any person and injury to or destruction of property arising out of the ownership, maintenance, use, or operation of a specific motor vehicle or motor vehicles within the state of New York, or elsewhere in the United States in North America or the Dominion of Canada, subject to a limit, exclusive of interest and costs, with respect to each such motor vehicle except a tow truck, of twenty-five thousand dollars because of bodily injuries to and fifty thousand dollars because of death of one person in any one accident and, subject to said limit for one person, to a limit of fifty thousand dollars because of bodily injury to and one hundred thousand dollars because of death of two or more persons in any one accident, and to a limit of ten thousand dollars because of injury to or destruction of property of others in any one accident provided, however, that such policy need not be for a period coterminous with the registration period of the vehicle insured. The limit, exclusive of interest and costs, with respect to a tow truck shall be a combined single limit of at least three hundred thousand dollars because of bodily injury or death to one or more persons or because of injury or destruction of property of others in any one accident, and to a limit of twenty-five thousand dollars because of damage to a vehicle in the care, custody and control of the insured. Any insurer authorized to issue an owner's policy of liability insurance as provided for in this article may, pending the issue of such a policy, make an agreement, to be known as a binder, or may, in lieu of such a policy, issue a renewal endorsement or evidence of renewal of an existing policy; each of which shall be construed to provide indemnity or protection in like manner and to the same extent as such a policy. The provisions of this article shall apply to such binders, renewal endorsements or evidences of renewal. Every such policy issued insuring private passenger vehicles and every renewal policy, renewal endorsement, or other evidence of renewal issued shall have attached thereto a rating information form which clearly specifies and defines the rating classification assigned thereto, including any applicable merit rating plan; and

(b) In the case of a vehicle registered in this state, a policy issued by an insurer duly authorized to transact business in this state; or

(c) In the case of a vehicle lawfully registered in another state, or in both this state and another state, either a policy issued by an authorized insurer, or a policy issued by an unauthorized insurer authorized to transact business in another state if such unauthorized insurer files with the commissioner in form to be approved by him a statement consenting to service of process and declaring its policies shall be deemed to be varied to comply with the requirements of this article; and

(d) The form of which has been approved by the superintendent. No such policy shall be issued or delivered in this state until a copy of the form of policy shall have been on file with the superintendent for at least thirty days, unless sooner approved in writing by the superintendent, nor if within said period of thirty days the superintendent shall have notified the carrier in writing that in his opinion, specifying the reasons therefor, the form of policy does not comply with the laws of this state.

5. The term "certificate of insurance" shall mean any evidence issued by or on behalf of an insurance company duly authorized to transact business in this state, stating in such form as the commissioner may prescribe or approve that such company has issued an owner's policy of liability insurance on the motor vehicle or vehicles designated therein. Such certificate shall contain information as required by the commissioner including at least the following except as otherwise provided:

(a) The name and address of the person to whom the policy was issued.

(b) The number and effective period of the policy. If all of the motor vehicles owned by one person during a defined period are insured under the same owner's policy of liability insurance the certificate of insurance may so state and it shall then not be necessary to identify the specific vehicle insured. The requirements of this article for an owner's policy of liability insurance may be fulfilled by the policies of one or more insurance carriers which policies together meet such requirements.

(c) As to new policies, a statement that at least ten per cent of the annual premium due on the policy has been paid. For the purposes of this paragraph a transfer of insurance from one company to another by an agent or broker shall not be considered the issuance of a new policy.

6. The term "financial security bond" shall mean for each motor vehicle a bond executed by the owner and by a surety company duly authorized to transact business in this state. The provisions of subdivision (e) of section three hundred forty-nine of this chapter shall apply to such bond.

7. 10. "Insurance Identification Card" shall mean a card issued by or on behalf of an insurance company or bonding company duly authorized to transact business in this state, stating in such form as the commissioner may prescribe or approve that such company has issued an owner's policy of liability insurance or a financial security bond on the motor vehicle or vehicles designated therein. Such card shall contain such information and shall be valid during such period as may be prescribed by the commissioner. If an owner shall have filed a financial security deposit, or shall have qualified as a self-insurer under section three hundred sixteen of this chapter, the term "insurance identification card" shall mean a card issued by the department which evidences that such deposit has been filed or that such owner has so qualified.

1. In general

The compulsory automobile insurance requirement is designed to cover a car-owner's liability, not create it; the applicable statute was not intended to impose liability where none would otherwise exist. Neumeier v Kuehner, 31 N.Y.2d 121, 335 N.Y.S.2d 64, 286 N.E.2d 454, 1972 N.Y. LEXIS 1127 (N.Y. 1972).

Object of compulsory automobile insurance is to assure the protection of members of the public who are innocent victims of motor vehicle accidents by providing compensation for and protection from tortious wrongs committed against them. Rosado v Eveready Ins. Co., 34 N.Y.2d 43, 356 N.Y.S.2d 8, 312 N.E.2d 153, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1587 (N.Y. 1974).

There was rational basis for exclusion of motorcycles from definition of motor vehicle in no-fault insurance law. Montgomery v Daniels, 38 N.Y.2d 41, 378 N.Y.S.2d 1, 340 N.E.2d 444, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 2242 (N.Y. 1975).

Where action against insurer involved interpretation of a liability policy between New York law, involved a resident of the Province of Ontario and a foreign insurer, and involved an accident which occurred in New York, New York properly denied insurer's motion to dismiss on the grounds of forum non conveniens. Radke v Lloyd's of London, 58 A.D.2d 966, 397 N.Y.S.2d 288, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13172 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1977).

Nonresident operator of foreign-registered vehicle may not drive on public highways of New York State with complete immunity from New York's financial security laws, even if such conduct may not be traffic infraction. General Accident Ins. Co. v Loi Tran, 246 A.D.2d 543, 667 N.Y.S.2d 417, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 204 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

The Superintendent of Insurance may determine the requirements of policies to be issued under the Motor Vehicle Financial Security Act provided the requirements are not less than standard policies, and the Commissioner may or may not include provisions making the policies absolute. General Accident Fire & Life Assurance Corp. v Martino, 12 Misc. 2d 935, 175 N.Y.S.2d 894, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3385 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1958).

Defendant's conviction for driving without financial security, defendant having failed to produce a temporary insurance identification card, is reversed since, although the temporary card set forth a 60-day expiration date, expiration was not self-executing but was conditioned upon service of a proper notice of termination (Vehicle and Traffic Law, § 313; § 311, subd 4, par [a]; 15 NYCRR 32.7) and the People offered no proof that such notice was sent to defendant instead relying upon the presumption that the failure to produce an insurance identification card is "presumptive evidence" of driving without financial security (Vehicle and Traffic Law, § 319, subd 3); in order for a criminal statutory presumption to satisfy constitutional requirements it must at least be said with substantial assurance that the presumed fact is more likely than not to flow from the proved fact on which it is made to depend and, while the presumption herein satisfies this requirement where its effect is to show that a defendant never secured insurance at all, it cannot be constitutionally extended to prove that insurance properly secured was lawfully canceled in a case where a defendant alleges that this was not so. People v Baron, 103 Misc. 2d 1057, 431 N.Y.S.2d 234, 1980 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2253 (N.Y. App. Term), app. denied, 49 N.Y.2d 1001, 1980 N.Y. LEXIS 5593 (N.Y. 1980).

Filing requirement imposed by CLS Veh & Tr § 311(4)(c) is independent of that imposed by CLS Ins § 1214. Insurance Department, Opinions of General Counsel, Opinion Number 00-01-06.

Third-party liability exclusion provision in business automobile insurance policy is not permissible under 11 NYCRR Part 60-1 (Regulation 35-A), which establishes minimum provisions for all motor vehicle policies in New York that provide coverage and satisfaction of financial security requirements of Vehicle and Traffic Law. Insurance Department, Opinions of General Counsel, Opinion Number 02-01-28.

There is not exclusion in 11 NYCRR § 260-1.2 (1996) (Reg. 35-A) that permits denial of coverage on ground that claim arose while insured was operating motor vehicle with expired registration; thus, insurer may not include such exclusion in automobile liability insurance policy that is used to satisfy New York's motor vehicle financial security requirements. Insurance Department, Opinions of General Counsel, Opinion Number 02-08-16.

2. Arbitration

The application of the MVAIC for a stay of arbitration was properly denied, since the vehicle involved in the accident was registered in North Carolina and carried liability insurance in accordance with the minimum limitation of that state, but in an amount insufficient to meet the financial security provisions of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 311. The court held the North Carolina vehicle was "an uninsured motor vehicle" and the owner a "financially irresponsible motorist" for purposes of this action. Buglione v Motor Vehicle Accident Indemnification Corp., 32 A.D.2d 525, 299 N.Y.S.2d 661, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4137 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1969).

An endorsement in plaintiff's automobile insurance policy defined an uninsured automobile as "an automobile used without permission of the owner thereof, if there is no bodily injury liability insurance applicable." The owner of an automobile involved in an accident, in which the plaintiffs were injured, stated in the accident report that the operator of his car did not have his consent to drive the car. Held: such statement constituted sufficient evidence that the car was an uninsured car within the meaning of plaintiff's policy so as to entitle the plaintiff to arbitration under the endorsement. Lowe v Ocean Acci. & Guarantee Corp., 21 Misc. 2d 1042, 193 N.Y.S.2d 361, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2603 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1959).

An automobile which has only $5,000 and $10,000 insurance coverage is inadequately insured to meet the requirements of subd. 4(a) of this section requiring $10,000 and $20,000 coverage, and hence an injured person is entitled to require MVAIC to submit to arbitration pursuant to § 601 of the Insurance Law of his claim for damages for injuries sustained through negligent operation of an uninsured motor vehicle. Cruzado v Underwood, 39 Misc. 2d 859, 242 N.Y.S.2d 74, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1832 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963).

Where MVAIC applies for a stay of arbitration under its uninsured motorist policy indorsement pending determination of the question of whether another vehicle was actually uninsured or not, it should not be permitted to withdraw from defense of the action on the merits until there has been a determination of whether defendant was in fact an uninsured motorist. Ratchford v Fisk, 43 Misc. 2d 127, 250 N.Y.S.2d 88, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1715 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1964), aff'd, 26 A.D.2d 685, 272 N.Y.S.2d 1008, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3646 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1966).

3. Conditional or absolute policy

Endorsement on policy issued to lessor of automobiles excluding coverage for drive-yourself private vehicles except vehicles leased on annual basis was contrary to law and to public policy of state to protect innocent victims of traffic accidents. Rosado v Eveready Ins. Co., 34 N.Y.2d 43, 356 N.Y.S.2d 8, 312 N.E.2d 153, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1587 (N.Y. 1974).

The language of this section evinces indications that policies of automobile insurance thereby dealt with, unlike those required by § 345 and the "Safety Responsibility Act," do not impose absolute liability upon casualty and indemnity insurers which cannot be avoided, to the detriment of innocent victims of accidents, by the raising of such defenses as the insurer may have against liability to the insured by reason of his breach of conditions, such as a condition requiring him to cooperate in the defense of any claim. National Grange Mut. Liability Co. v Fino, 13 A.D.2d 10, 212 N.Y.S.2d 684, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11892 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

An automobile policy which is issued under the Motor Vehicle Financial Security Act and under the applicable regulations of the Superintendent of Insurance may validly contain a condition requiring the insured to notify the insurance company in writing of an accident as soon as practicable and said policies are not absolute policies. General Accident Fire & Life Assurance Corp. v Martino, 12 Misc. 2d 935, 175 N.Y.S.2d 894, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3385 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1958).

The Superintendent of Insurance may determine the requirements of policies to be issued under the Motor Vehicle Financial Security Act provided the requirements are not less than standard policies, and the Commissioner may or may not include provisions making the policies absolute. General Accident Fire & Life Assurance Corp. v Martino, 12 Misc. 2d 935, 175 N.Y.S.2d 894, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3385 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1958).

4. Amount of coverage

Where automobile liability policy provided a limit of $5,000.00 for injury or death to one person, the fact that the policy also provided that liability should comply with the provisions of any motor vehicle financial responsibility law to the extent of coverage and limits, but in no event in excess of the policy limits, did not entitle the holder of a judgment against the assured to recover more than $5,000.00. La Paglia v American Casualty Co., 285 A.D. 1065, 139 N.Y.S.2d 683, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6684 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

The minimum insurance coverage which motor vehicle owners are required to carry by the Superintendent of Insurance under subd. 4(a) of this section was intended by the Legislature to be the measure of MVAIC liability to persons injured by uninsured motorists. Garcia v Motor Vehicle Acci. Indemnification Corp., 18 A.D.2d 62, 238 N.Y.S.2d 195, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4228 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1963).

Uninsured motorist coverage carrier is liable for the difference between the amount of a driver's recovery from the other motorist and the minimum limits of $10,000 and $20,000 set by the statute fixing financial responsibility. Neals v Allstate Ins. Co., 34 A.D.2d 265, 311 N.Y.S.2d 315, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4612 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

When a driver's insurer was found liable to a motorist, in a proceeding initiated under N.Y. Ins. Law § 3420(a)(2), for the driver's negligence, the insurer's liability was limited to the statutory minimum coverage required for personal injury liability under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 311(4)(a) because the insurer met the insurer's burden to show that the insurer had no relevant coverage in effect at the time of the subject vehicle collision. Creinis v Hanover Ins. Co., 59 A.D.3d 371, 872 N.Y.S.2d 544, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 740 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 12 N.Y.3d 710, 881 N.Y.S.2d 660, 909 N.E.2d 583, 2009 N.Y. LEXIS 976 (N.Y. 2009).

An automobile which has only $5,000 and $10,000 insurance coverage is inadequately insured to meet the requirements of subd. 4(a) of this section requiring $10,000 and $20,000 coverage, and hence an injured person is entitled to require MVAIC to submit to arbitration pursuant to § 601 of the Insurance Law of his claim for damages for injuries sustained through negligent operation of an uninsured motor vehicle. Cruzado v Underwood, 39 Misc. 2d 859, 242 N.Y.S.2d 74, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1832 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963).

Town ordinance requirement that tow truckers licensed to be called by police to scenes of accidents on a rotating basis have minimum insurance coverage of $100,000 to $300,000 for bodily injury liability and $15,000 property damage as well as garage liability insurance was not void as being in conflict with state law since responding to police emergency calls amounted to extra hazardous duty and the requirement of additional insurance coverage was reasonable for the protection of public. Richard's Service Station, Inc. v Huntington, 79 Misc. 2d 834, 361 N.Y.S.2d 497, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1766 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1974), modified, 47 A.D.2d 963, 367 N.Y.S.2d 296, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9438 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1975).

An automobile liability insurance policy issued to a Pennsylvania resident which provided a $75,000 limit of liability to be used to satisfy all claims against the insured but included a provision permitting adjustments above that limit if an accident occurred in a state whose law required a higher minimum limit of liability, would meet the minimum requirements of New York for an accident involving a vehicle driven by the insured in which one person died and three were injured since New York law requires minimum coverage of $50,000 for one death, $20,000 for bodily injury to two or more individuals and $5,000 to compensate for property damage arising out of any one accident and, therefore, since the $75,000 coverage meets the maximum cumulative exposure of the insured arising from the accident, the policy as it stands would not be modified to provide greater coverage since the court does not have the authority to modify a contract that is clear and unambiguous on its face. Harleysville Mut. Ins. Co. v Boerst, 115 Misc. 2d 1006, 454 N.Y.S.2d 826, 1982 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3804 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1982), aff'd, 101 A.D.2d 686, 475 N.Y.S.2d 809, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18226 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1984).

A reduction-in-coverage clause contained in an endorsement to a policy of automobile liability insurance, which reduces the amount recoverable under the policy's underinsured motorist coverage by the amount paid by the third-party insurer, should not be given effect; inasmuch as Veh & Tr Law § 311(4) requires a motorist to carry at least $10,000 liability coverage, the full amount stated in the policy's underinsured motorist declaration would never be paid; thus, the reduction-in-coverage clause is misleading and ambiguous, and therefore, must be construed against the insurer; accordingly, a woman who was injured while riding as a passenger in a motor vehicle being driven by her husband and who sought to recover for personal injuries pursuant to the underinsured motorist declaration of her husband's insurance policy, which contained such reduction-in-coverage clause, was entitled to coverage up to the declaration's $25,000 limit, without any offset for the amount paid to her by the third-party insurer. United Community Ins. Co. v Mucatel, 127 Misc. 2d 1045, 487 N.Y.S.2d 959, 1985 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2782 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1985), aff'd, 119 A.D.2d 1017, 501 N.Y.S.2d 761, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49862 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1986).

Exclusion contained in the umbrella liability policy relating to the relative of a named insured party did not violate the legislative intent and public policy underlying N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 311(4)(a) since the primary car insurance policy satisfied the statutory minimum coverage amounts. Pfoh v Electric Ins. Co., 14 A.D.3d 777, 788 N.Y.S.2d 441, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 41 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 4 N.Y.3d 711, 798 N.Y.S.2d 724, 831 N.E.2d 969, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 1137 (N.Y. 2005).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to a driver in his action under N.Y. Ins. Law § 3420(a)(2) against another car owner's insurer, arising from an unsatisfied judgment obtained by the driver against the other car owner after the driver was struck by the other owner's car, as the insurer had failed to assert that there was no coverage of the owner in an earlier proceeding and accordingly, it was estopped to deny coverage; the judgment against the insurer should not have been limited to the statutory minimum limit of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 311(4)(a), as the driver was entitled to the full amount of the judgment obtained where the insurer had failed to offer evidence as to any limitation on coverage. Kleynshvag v GAN Ins. Co., 21 A.D.3d 999, 801 N.Y.S.2d 383, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9198 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2005).

Insurance company may not contract with insured to provide less than legally mandated personal injury protection coverage in automobile insurance policy in exchange for lower premium; there are number of other possible ways to reduce costs of total automobile insurance premium (e.g., one can choose not to purchase optional automobile insurance coverages, one can request higher deductible, and one can purchase automobile safety or security devices or take driver safety course). Insurance Department, Opinions of General Counsel, Opinion Number 02-02-11.

Motor vehicle policy that has combined single limits of liability of $65,000 satisfies financial security requirements for accident in which one person was injured. Insurance Department, Opinions of General Counsel, Opinion Number 02-11-21.

Plaintiff's obligation to indemnify defendants in an underlying personal injury action was limited to the statutory minimum, as the savings clause in the policy provided for coverage up to the minimum amounts required by the financial responsibility law, N.Y. Ins. Law § 3420(f)(1), it was in compliance with N.Y. Veh. & Traf Law §§ 311(4)(a), 341, and 345(b)(3), and did not violate public policy. Connecticut Indem. Co. v Hines, 40 A.D.3d 903, 837 N.Y.S.2d 183, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6375 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2007).

5. Certificate of insurance

A certificate of insurance is merely evidence that a contract has been issued. Hill v Johnson, 35 A.D.2d 407, 316 N.Y.S.2d 536, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3086 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1970), app. denied, 28 N.Y.2d 484, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 1797 (N.Y. 1971).

A certificate of insurance is not a contract of insurance but is merely evidence that a contract has been issued and is conditioned upon the issuance and existence of a policy. Country-Wide Ins. Co. v Wills, 51 A.D.2d 701, 380 N.Y.S.2d 1, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11145 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1976), aff'd, 41 N.Y.2d 835, 393 N.Y.S.2d 400, 361 N.E.2d 1048, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 1876 (N.Y. 1977).

A "certificate of insurance" as defined in subd. 5 of this section need not state the number of the policy, as specified herein, in order to impose liability upon the insurance company where the other required factors pointing to insurance coverage are present. Dembitzer v Gilliam, 44 Misc. 2d 487, 254 N.Y.S.2d 47, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1634 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1964).

Insurance identification card is treated as certificate of insurance; where certificate furnished by insurer does not resemble official certificate of insurance document and states that insurance afforded by policies described in certificate is subject to all terms, exclusions and conditions of policies, certificate does not constitute official certificate under § 311, and is simply notice that policy of insurance has been issued. Taylor v Kinsella, 742 F.2d 709, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 19477 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1984).

6. Out of state insurer

Owner and operator of motor vehicle registered in Canada, and insured for liability by Canadian insurance company is not covered person within meaning of Insurance Law § 5102 (j); Insurance Law § 5104 (b) provides in action by covered person against noncovered person for personal injuries arising out of use or operation of motor vehicle, insurer which paid first-party benefits on account of such injuries has lien against any recovery to extent of benefits paid to covered person; plaintiff, passenger in vehicle registered in Canada, is covered person and defendant, insurer of vehicle owned by plaintiff, paid first-party benefits to him; plaintiff argues since insurance policy covering Canadian vehicle was liability policy with limits in excess of minimum prescribed by Vehicle and Traffic Law § 311 (4) (a), vehicle had required financial security in effect, making owner and operator covered person irrespective of whether liability policy provided for no-fault benefits; Vehicle and Traffic Law § 311 (4) (c), however, contains additional requirement in case of vehicle lawfully registered in another State, which includes any province of Canada; liability policy covering Canadian vehicle was issued by unauthorized insurer which has not filed required form; accordingly, owner and operator is not covered person. Marshall v Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 166 A.D.2d 852, 562 N.Y.S.2d 832, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12833 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1990).

Owner/operator of motor vehicle registered in Province of Quebec, Canada and insured for liability by Canadian insurance company was not covered person within meaning of CLS Ins § 5102(j), notwithstanding that Canadian insurance policy was liability policy with limits in excess of minimum prescribed by CLS Veh & Tr § 311(4)(a), since Canadian insurance company was neither authorized insurer nor unauthorized insurer which had filed form consenting to service of process and declaring that its policy would be deemed to comply with requirements of CLS Veh & Tr Art 6. Marshall v Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 166 A.D.2d 852, 562 N.Y.S.2d 832, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12833 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1990).

Since this section requires a motorist to procure a liability policy from an insurer authorized to do business in this state, or from one authorized to do business where he resided or registered his vehicle, a policy issued by a company authorized only to do business in Arkansas to a Tennessee resident temporarily stationed in New York and there driving his car failed to meet either requirement. Gowler v Hults, 35 Misc. 2d 902, 231 N.Y.S.2d 932, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2831 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1962).

The fact that a Georgia insurance company, which did not issue automobile liability policies in New York, filed with the New York Motor Vehicle Bureau a statement and resolution agreeing to variance of the terms of its policies to comply with liability limits required by this state did not make such insurer liable to reimburse MVAIC for money paid out by MVAIC in connection with a New York automobile accident where the policy issued by the Georgia company was a special one issued to a member of the Armed Force then stationed in Georgia for a very low premium and limited to accidents occurring "within the boundaries of any military post, camp or cantonment." Motor Vehicle Accident Indemnification Corp. v American Southern Ins. Co., 44 Misc. 2d 525, 254 N.Y.S.2d 44, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1322 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1964), aff'd, 25 A.D.2d 719, 268 N.Y.S.2d 971, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7344 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1966).

Under subd. 4(c) of this section the term "owner's policy of liability insurance", in application to vehicles registered in another state, is a policy issued by an authorized insurer, that is to say, one authorized to do business under the laws of the state in which the vehicle is registered or one authorized to do business in New York by having filed specified required statements. Motor Vehicle Acci. Indemnification Corp. v Malone, 232 N.Y.S.2d 565, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4143 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1962), aff'd, 19 A.D.2d 542, 240 N.Y.S.2d 879, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3736 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1963).

"Covered persons" include individuals who have liability coverage in excess of the minimum coverage required by N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 311(4)(a), issued by an insurer authorized to do business in New York; § 311 provides that "proof of financial security" consists of an "owner's policy of liability insurance," which: (1) affords minimum coverage to any one person in the sum of $25,000 where injury is sustained, and the sum of $50,000 where death results, and coverage to two or more people in the sum of $50,000 for injury, and $100,000 for death; and (2) in the case of a vehicle registered in another state, is either issued by an insurer authorized to issue policies in New York, or by an unauthorized insurer who has filed a statement with the New York State Commissioner of Motor Vehicles consenting to service of process and indicating that its policies may be deemed to be varied so as to comply with the requirements of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law art. 6. Hunter v OOIDA Risk Retention Group, Inc., 79 A.D.3d 1, 909 N.Y.S.2d 88, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7265 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2010).

There is no New York insurance law that prohibits municipality from purchasing insurance from unauthorized insurer; however, statutes other than Insurance Law may require insurance that is purchased only from New York authorized insurers (such as CLS Veh & Tr Law § 311), and municipality purchasing insurance may have laws or regulations with requirements for purchasing insurance. Insurance Department, Opinions of General Counsel, Opinion Number 04-07-06.

7. Choice of laws

The fact that the deceased guest and driver, both New York domiciliaries and in which state the vehicle was insured, were in Michigan for an extended period of time is irrelevant in determining whether the New York or Michigan law applied to an accident occurring in Michigan. Tooker v Lopez, 24 N.Y.2d 569, 301 N.Y.S.2d 519, 249 N.E.2d 394, 1969 N.Y. LEXIS 1343 (N.Y. 1969).

Action for death of New York domiciliary, a passenger in a car registered and insured in New York, and driven by New York domiciliary, was governed by New York law, rather than the Guest Statute of Michigan, in which state the accident occurred. Tooker v Lopez, 24 N.Y.2d 569, 301 N.Y.S.2d 519, 249 N.E.2d 394, 1969 N.Y. LEXIS 1343 (N.Y. 1969).

Fact that insurance policies issued in New York on New York-based vehicles cover liability regardless of the place of accident did not call for application of internal New York law in New York action to recover for wrongful death of Ontario, Canada domiciliary who was killed when automobile in which she was riding, owned and driven by a New York resident, collided with a train in Ontario. Neumeier v Kuehner, 31 N.Y.2d 121, 335 N.Y.S.2d 64, 286 N.E.2d 454, 1972 N.Y. LEXIS 1127 (N.Y. 1972).

8. Miscellaneous

Insurer of lessor of automobiles, by payment on at least one instance of claim arising out of a short term lease, waived any right to assert policy exclusion of coverage for drive-yourself private passenger vehicles except leased on annual basis. Rosado v Eveready Ins. Co., 34 N.Y.2d 43, 356 N.Y.S.2d 8, 312 N.E.2d 153, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1587 (N.Y. 1974).

Vehicle owned by Quebec citizen in automobile accident occurring in Quebec was not "uninsured" within meaning of either Insurance Law or policy issued to New York accident victims where Quebec vehicle was covered by province's mandatory system of insurance reparations which is "tantamount to an owner's policy of liability insurance" in that it permits its insureds to respond in damages for any bodily injury which they may cause to others, and thus provides its insureds with proof of financial security. Federal Ins. Co. v Watnick, 80 N.Y.2d 539, 592 N.Y.S.2d 624, 607 N.E.2d 771, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 4225 (N.Y. 1992).

Where non-trucking-use endorsement in insurance policy obtained by owner of commercial vehicle was void as against public policy due to absence of express language stating that exclusion was effective only if vehicle's lessee was required to obtain insurance coverage, it was also ineffective to limit liability to financial security minima required by New York law; owner's policy was to be read as if exclusion did not exist. Royal Indem. Co. v Providence Wash. Ins. Co., 92 N.Y.2d 653, 684 N.Y.S.2d 470, 707 N.E.2d 425, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4141 (N.Y. 1998).

Step-down provision in automobile insurance policy, which provided specific amount of over-all coverage to owner-lessor of automobile andprovided that coverage to lessee was subject to any limit of liability contained in lease agreement, was valid even though provision created 2-tiered coverage since no statute or rule prohibited such coverage. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v Aetna Casualty & Surety Co., 168 A.D.2d 121, 571 N.Y.S.2d 735, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8047 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1991).

New York residents, who were injured in automobile accident in province of Quebec, Canada, when their car collided with vehicle operated by Quebec resident, could not recover under uninsured motorist endorsement contained in policy of motor vehicle liability insurance on their car issued by New York insurance carrier since offending vehicle was insured for bodily injury liability under Quebec Automobile Insurance Act (QAIA), mandatory system of insurance reparations that compensates nonresident claimants to extent they are not responsible for accident to maximum of $20,000; offending vehicle was not "uninsured" simply because coverage was provided by governmental reparation program, and QAIA coverage applicable to offending vehicle, being tantamount to "owner's policy of liability insurance" (CLS Veh & Tr § 311(4)(a)), and clearly enabling offending driver "to respond in damages" (CLS Veh & Tr § 311(3)), constituted requisite proof of financial security. Federal Ins. Co. v Watnick, 176 A.D.2d 38, 578 N.Y.S.2d 624, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 738 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), aff'd, modified, 80 N.Y.2d 539, 592 N.Y.S.2d 624, 607 N.E.2d 771, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 4225 (N.Y. 1992).

Nonresident operator of Florida-registered vehicle was not uninsured within meaning of New York driver's uninsured motorist endorsement where nonresident operator was "subject to the financial responsibility law...of [this] state," so that her policy furnished bodily injury liability protection under its "Out of State Insurance" clause, and such protection conformed to that required by version of New York's Financial Security Act (CLS Veh & Tr § 311(3) and (4)(a)) in effect at time of accident, irrespective of whether such coverage must be read into policy under CLS Ins § 5107(a). General Accident Ins. Co. v Loi Tran, 246 A.D.2d 543, 667 N.Y.S.2d 417, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 204 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

Court erred in declaring that plaintiff was obligated to defend and provide primary coverage to its insured in underlying personal injury action, which arose from accident while insured was driving rental vehicle, where rental company's automobile liability insurance policy with defendant, which defined insured to exclude anyone who granted covered auto from named insured under written rental agreement or anyone who operated, drove, or in any way used covered auto rented under such rental agreement, conflicted with CLS Veh & Tr § 345(b)(2) and was unenforceable, and defendant's policy also provided that coverage for any covered auto owned by named insured was primary; further, plaintiff's policy provided that any insurance plaintiff provided for vehicle insured did not own would be excess over any other collectible insurance. Government Emples. Ins. Co. v Chrysler Ins. Co., 256 A.D.2d 1212, 682 N.Y.S.2d 508, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14379 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

Plaintiffs were required to meet serious injury standard of CLS Ins § 5102 in action arising out of incident in which defendant attempted to unhitch trailer carrying boat from his automobile, and trailer rolled backward down road and into tent in which plaintiffs were sleeping, even though defendant's automobile was parked and not being operated on highway, and trailer was detached from automobile; trailer fell within CLS Veh & Tr § 311(2) definition of motor vehicle since it had been drawn to site by automobile and would not have been present and in position to roll out of control if not for its attachment to automobile, and it did not lose its identity as motor vehicle by virtue of sudden and accidental detachment from automobile. Christopher v Caldarulo, 160 Misc. 2d 360, 608 N.Y.S.2d 998, 1994 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 60 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1994).

Automobile insurer that paid no-fault medical benefits to insured could not recover, as subrogee of insured, from New Jersey tort-feasor who himself was insured at level above minimum required by New York law, and who had personal injury protection (PIP) coverage and did not operate commercial or public vehicle without PIP coverage under New Jersey law. Allstate Ins. Co. v Mazzola, 986 F. Supp. 756, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10443 (S.D.N.Y. 1997), vacated, 175 F.3d 255, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 8187 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1999).

Employee of insurer or of insurer's wholly-owned subsidiary did not need to be licensed as bail bond agent in supervising placement of bail bond's by insurer's agents where employee had no discretion in determining which bonds were to be accepted or rejected. Insurance Department, Opinions of General Counsel, Opinion Number 02-02-08.

Whether insurer is required to provide automobile liability insurance coverage where member of named insureds' household is involved in accident while driving automobile that is not owned by named insureds or household member depends on whether or not vehicle not owned by named insureds or household member was furnished or made available to household member for regular use; if automobile was not provided for household member's regular use, mandatory liability coverage for non-owned automobile applies and there is coverage, but if automobile was provided for household member's regular use, mandatory coverage for non-owned automobile does not apply and there is no coverage. Insurance Department, Opinions of General Counsel, Opinion Number 02-07-21.

Risk retention group, which is registered in New York but is not chartered or licensed in New York, is not "an insurer duly authorized to transact business in this state," and thus insurance policy issued by risk retention group would not satisfy financial responsibility requirements of Vehicle and Traffic Law. Insurance Department, Opinions of General Counsel, Opinion Number 03-06-10.

Risk retention group (RRG), which is registered in New York but is not chartered or licensed in New York, is not "an insurer duly authorized to transact business in this state," and thus insurance policy issued by RRG would not satisfy financial responsibility requirements of Vehicle and Traffic Law. Insurance Department, Opinions of General Counsel, Opinion Number 03-06-10.

CLS Veh & Tr § 311(5)(c) requires insurer to collect at least 10 percent of annual premium due for all new policies. Insurance Department, Opinions of General Counsel, Opinion Number 08-10-04.

Insurer must apply CLS Veh & Tr § 311(5)(c) in fair and non-discriminatory manner to all new automobile insurance applicants; specifically, insurer may not require applicants to pay different down payments unless underwriting criteria used to determine down payments relate to risks being insured, and if use of underwriting criteria results in discrimination in benefits under CLS Ins Art 23 or is otherwise expressly prohibited by law, then insurer may not use criteria to determine down payments. Insurance Department, Opinions of General Counsel, Opinion Number 08-10-04.

Notes to Decisions

1. In general

Police vehicles are not "motor vehicles" subject to financial security and responsibility requirements of CLS Veh & Tr Art 6 and Art 7. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v Amato, 72 N.Y.2d 288, 532 N.Y.S.2d 239, 528 N.E.2d 162, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 1670 (N.Y. 1988).

The New York City Transit Authority, which operates vehicles that it does not own, must provide uninsured motorists coverage for its passengers, and others, injured as a result of the operation of its vehicles, since subdivision 1 of section 370 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law provides that every person, firm, association or corporation engaged in the business of carrying or transporting passengers for hire in any motor vehicle, except motor vehicles owned and operated by a municipality, must obtain liability insurance as well as uninsured motorists coverage, and subdivision 3 of section 370 authorizes self-insurance in certain instances; although the authority is specifically considered a political subdivision of the State for certain purposes, there is no statutory provision so providing with respect to section 370 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, and although "person" does not include the State or any political subdivision (Vehicle and Traffic Law, § 359), the authority is not a political subdivision, and section 359 is applicable only to article 7 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, and not to article 8, within which section 370 is found, and in any event, subdivision 1 of section 370 relates not only to a person, but to a corporation, which the authority is. Additionally, even though the authority is a self-insurer (see Vehicle and Traffic Law, § 370, subd 3), it is required to provide uninsured motorists coverage, since the Legislature did not intend for a carrier to be exempt from the obligation to provide uninsured motorists coverage when the owner of even a single vehicle is required to provide it, merely by the fortuity that it had chosen the self-insurance option as to financial security and safety responsibility. New York City Transit Authority v Thom, 70 A.D.2d 158, 419 N.Y.S.2d 689, 1979 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12315 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1979), aff'd, 52 N.Y.2d 1032, 438 N.Y.S.2d 504, 420 N.E.2d 385, 1981 N.Y. LEXIS 2267 (N.Y. 1981).

An insurer was not obligated to provide coverage under a comprehensive general liability policy, which contained an exclusion for bodily injury arising out of loading or unloading, where the tractor-trailer owned by the insured and involved in the accident came within the policy definition of "automobile" and was a motor vehicle within the meaning of Veh & Tr Law §§ 125 and 359(k), where the deaths of the insured's employees occurred while they were transferring gasoline from one tractor-trailer to another, and where the record on appeal provided nothing to challenge the compelling conclusion that the accident arose out of the ownership, maintenance, operation, use, loading or unloading of the tractor-trailer; accordingly, the trial court erred in denying the insurer's motion for summary judgment. Duncan Petroleum Transport, Inc. v Aetna Ins. Co., 96 A.D.2d 942, 466 N.Y.S.2d 394, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19577 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), aff'd, 61 N.Y.2d 665, 472 N.Y.S.2d 88, 460 N.E.2d 229, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 3616 (N.Y. 1983).

Person sitting in driver's seat with motor running on the traveled portion of a highway is an operator of a motor vehicle and may be lawfully arrested on charges stemming from the alleged operation of the vehicle. People v Vasquez, 51 Misc. 2d 1058, 275 N.Y.S.2d 14, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1342 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1966), rev'd, 57 Misc. 2d 138, 292 N.Y.S.2d 134, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1503 (N.Y. App. Term 1968).

ARTICLE 9 Equipment of Motor Vehicles and Motorcycles

HISTORY:

Add, L 1959, ch 775, eff Oct 1, 1960.

§ 375. Equipment. [Effective until April 17, 2021]

1. (a) Every motor vehicle, operated or driven upon the public highways of the state, shall be provided with adequate brakes and steering mechanism in good working order and sufficient to control such vehicle at all times when the same is in use, and a suitable and adequate horn or other device for signaling, which horn or device shall produce a sound sufficiently loud to serve as a danger warning but shall not be used other than as a reasonable warning nor be unnecessarily loud or harsh.

(b) Every such motor vehicle shall be equipped with suitable wipers or other device which shall clear a sufficient area of the windshields to provide reasonable driving vision. (i) The use or placing of posters or stickers on windshields or rear windows of motor vehicles other than those authorized by the commissioner, is hereby prohibited. The attaching to windshields and windshield wipers of handbills and other forms of advertisements, is hereby prohibited.

(ii) In a city of one million or more, the attaching or affixing by any means whatsoever of handbills or other forms of advertisements to a motor vehicle is hereby prohibited. In any prosecution for an alleged violation of this subparagraph, there shall be a rebuttable presumption that the person whose name, telephone number, or other identifying information appears on any handbill or other form of advertisement attached or affixed to a motor vehicle shall be in violation of the provisions of this subparagraph.

(iii) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in addition to those persons otherwise authorized to enforce this subdivision and adjudicate violations thereof, the provisions of subparagraph (ii) of this paragraph shall also be enforceable in a city having a population of one million or more by an agency or agencies designated for such purpose by the mayor of such city, and notices of violation may be returnable to the environmental control board of such city, which shall have the power to impose the monetary penalties provided in subdivision (b) of section eighteen hundred of this chapter. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, service of a notice of violation of subparagraph (ii) of this paragraph committed in such city may be made upon a person by first class mail, postage prepaid, and any such notice served by mail shall be returnable only to such environmental control board. Such service by first class mail shall be deemed complete upon mailing of the notice of violation, unless the notice of violation is returned to the sender by the United States postal service for any reason other than refusal of delivery. In addition, any notice of violation for a violation of subparagraph (ii) of this paragraph may be served by a means prescribed in article three of the civil practice law and rules or article three of the business corporation law. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, such penalties imposed by such environmental control board shall be paid into the general fund of such city.

(iv) Any final order issued pursuant to subparagraph (ii) of this paragraph by an environmental control board of a city having a population of one million or more shall constitute a judgment which may be entered in any place provided for the entry of civil judgments within the state, and may be enforced without court proceeding in the same manner as the enforcement of money judgments entered in civil actions. Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, before a judgment based upon a default may be so entered, such environmental control board must have notified the respondent by first class mail in such form as such environmental control board may direct: (A) of the default decision and order and the penalty imposed; (B) that a judgment will be entered in any place provided for the entry of civil judgments in the state; and (C) that the entry of such judgment may be avoided by requesting a stay of default for good cause shown and either requesting a hearing or entering a plea pursuant to the rules of such environmental control board within thirty days of the mailing of such notice. No judgment based upon a default may be so entered by the environmental control board within thirty days of the mailing of such notice. No judgment based upon a default may be so entered by the environmental control board within less than sixty days from the completion of service by mail of the notice of violation as provided in subparagraph (iii) of this paragraph. Any requirement of any provision of law other than this subdivision that related to the manner of service of the notice of violation that precedes any final order of such environmental control board shall not apply to a final order issued pursuant to this subparagraph. A judgment entered pursuant to this subdivision shall remain in full force and effect for eight years.

(c) Every trailer and semi-trailer weighing more than one thousand pounds unladen and every trailer and semi-trailer manufactured or assembled on or after January first, nineteen hundred seventy-one having a registered maximum gross weight, an actual gross weight or gross weight consisting of the unladen weight and maximum carrying capacity recommended by the manufacturer in excess of three thousand pounds also shall be equipped with adequate brakes in good working order if operated or drawn on the public highways of this state. Every trailer while being drawn upon the public highways of this state shall be so attached to the vehicle drawing the same as to prevent the wheels of such trailer from being deflected more than six inches from the path of the towing vehicle's wheels. On and after January first, nineteen hundred seventy-one every trailer, except a semi-trailer, while being drawn upon the public highways of this state, shall be attached to the vehicle drawing the same by a device of a type approved by the commissioner.

(d) The commissioner shall make rules prescribing standards of brake efficiency, except for motor vehicles the standard of brake efficiency of which are fixed by the department of public service, and no brakes shall be deemed adequate within the meaning of this subdivision unless they meet the requirements of such rules. Such rules shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state and thereafter published once in the state advertising bulletin and shall become effective one month after such publication. Any amendment to such rules shall be likewise filed and published and shall take effect one month after such publication.

(e) No operator or registered owner of any motor vehicle having a registered maximum gross weight of eighteen thousand pounds or more shall disconnect or knowingly permit the disconnection of any set of service brakes on such motor vehicle. Any violation of the provisions of this paragraph shall occur only when such vehicle is actually operated on the public highways. Such violation shall be punishable as a misdemeanor.

2. (a) Every motor vehicle except a motorcycle, driven upon a public highway during the period from one-half hour after sunset to one-half hour before sunrise or at any other time when windshield wipers are in use, as a result of rain, sleet, snow, hail or other unfavorable atmospheric condition, and at such other times as visibility for a distance of one thousand feet ahead of such motor vehicle is not clear, shall display:

1. at least two lighted head lamps on the front, one on each side, having light sources of equal power;

2. if manufactured prior to January first, nineteen hundred fifty-two, at least one lighted lamp on the rear which shall display a red light visible from the rear for a distance of at least five hundred feet;

3. if manufactured on or after January first, nineteen hundred fifty-two, at least two lighted lamps on the rear, one on each side, which lamps shall display a red light visible from the rear for a distance of at least one thousand feet; and

4. if required to display a number plate on the rear, a white light which shall illuminate the numerals on such plate in such manner as to render such numerals legible for at least fifty feet from the rear. The provisions of this subparagraph shall also apply to trailers.

(b) All lamps used on a motor vehicle except a motorcycle shall be so arranged, adjusted and operated, as to avoid dangerous glare or dazzle. Except as provided in paragraph (d) of this subdivision, the upper outline of any beam of dazzling light projected to the left of the longitudinal axis of the vehicle by the lowermost light distribution of a headlamp designed to produce more than one light distribution, or by the single light distribution of any other lamp used on such a motor vehicle, shall not rise higher than the lamp center at a distance of twenty-five feet nor higher than forty-two inches at a distance of seventy-five feet. In each case, the height of the beam shall be measured from the plane upon which the vehicle stands and the distance shall be measured from the lamp projecting the light.

(c) No lamp shall be used on a motor vehicle having a light source greater than thirty-two candle power, unless such lamp is approved by the commissioner as provided by this section. The provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to any light which is permitted to be displayed only on an authorized emergency vehicle, a hazard vehicle or a vehicle which is permitted to display a blue or green light pursuant to paragraphs four and five of subdivision forty-one of this section.

(d) A motor vehicle, other than a motorcycle, equipped with any device such as, but not limited to, a snow plow blade, which blocks or impairs the projection of light from the headlamps of such vehicle, shall be equipped with at least two additional headlamps on the front which headlamps meet all the requirements of this subdivision for headlamps except those provisions of paragraph (b) of this subdivision specifically limiting the height of the beam of any headlamp.

3. Headlamps required pursuant to the provisions of subdivision two of this section may be of the multiple beam type designed to produce more than one distribution of light or of the single beam type designed to produce only one distribution of light.

Provided that, whenever a vehicle approaching from ahead is within five hundred feet, or when approaching a moving vehicle from the rear and within two hundred feet of the same, the headlamps, if of the multiple beam type, or the auxiliary front facing lamps, if the vehicle is so equipped, shall be operated so that dazzling light does not interfere with the driver of the approaching vehicle, or the vehicle being approached, and, whenever the highway is so lighted or traffic thereon is such that illumination of the highway for more than two hundred feet ahead of the vehicle by lights on such vehicle is unnecessary or impracticable, the headlamps, if of the multiple beam type, or the auxiliary front facing lamps, if the vehicle is so equipped, shall be operated with the lowermost distribution of light in use. Nothing contained in this subdivision shall be construed to prevent the use of flashing high beams to signify an intention to pass a vehicle or vehicles when two or more vehicles are traveling in the same direction, the operation of any headlamp as defined in paragraph d [(d)]* of subdivision two of this section, nor shall it apply to any auxiliary front facing lamp permitted to be displayed only on an authorized emergency vehicle.

4. No headlamp shall be used upon any motor vehicle except a motorcycle operated upon the public highways of this state, unless such lamp is approved by the commissioner or is equipped with a lens or other device approved by the commissioner. Every such headlamp, lens or other device shall be applied and adjusted in accordance with the requirements of the certificate approving the use thereof. Every such headlamp shall be firmly and substantially mounted on the motor vehicle in such manner as to allow the lamp to be properly and readily adjusted. The operator of every motor vehicle shall permit any police officer or other person exercising police powers to inspect the equipment of such motor vehicle, and make such tests as may be necessary to determine whether the provisions of this section are being complied with.

Any certificate of approval heretofore issued pursuant to law, or hereafter issued by the commissioner may be revoked by the commissioner, after a hearing of which the person or corporation named therein, or his or its successor in interest, shall have been given reasonable notice and an opportunity to appear and be heard upon the ground that the device does not comply with the provisions of this section, and the rules and regulations of the commissioner and the decision of the commissioner revoking such certificate shall be final; such revocation, however, of a lens or other headlighting device heretofore or hereafter approved shall not take effect until six months after the decision of the commissioner revoking the same and shall apply only to vehicles manufactured and used thereafter on the highways of this state.

The foregoing provisions governing lights on motor vehicles do not apply to so-called dimmers the use of which is permitted or required by local ordinances.

The commissioner may make such rules and regulations relative to lights on motor vehicles and the approval of the same as are not inconsistent with the specific provisions of this section.

5, 6. [Repealed]

7. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, association or corporation to sell or offer for sale a headlighting device without delivering therewith to the purchaser a printed sheet of instructions describing the device in detail, its method of mounting, arrangement and adjustment and specifying the candle power of the lamps to be used thereon and any other matter that may be necessary to insure compliance in the use of such device with the provisions of this article and the certificate of approval. Such instructions shall be printed with a photogravure of the pattern of light from one headlight shown on a regulation testing screen with respect to a horizontal cross line placed across the face of such screen at a height equal to the height of the center of such headlight, and with the headlight adjusted in accordance with the rules and regulations of the commissioner. The sale of a headlighting device not approved under the provisions of this section is prohibited. A violation of any of the provisions of this subdivision shall be a misdemeanor.

8. [Repealed]

9. Every omnibus operating upon the public highways of the state having a carrying capacity of ten or more passengers, shall be equipped with one hand fire extinguisher of at least 4 B:C Underwriters' Laboratories rating or a similar rating by any qualified laboratory or testing organization which meets the criteria of American Society for Testing Materials test E548-76. Fire extinguishers shall be kept in good operating condition at all times and must be mounted in a place readily accessible for use.

10. a. Every motor vehicle, when driven or operated upon a public highway, shall be equipped with a mirror or other reflecting device so adjusted that the operator of such vehicle shall have a clear and full view of the road and condition of traffic behind such vehicle.

b. In addition to the above requirements, an omnibus having a capacity of ten or more passengers registered in this state and manufactured or assembled after July first, nineteen hundred seventy, shall be equipped with a mirror attached to the right side of such vehicle and so adjusted that the driver thereof shall have a clear and full view of the road and condition of traffic behind such vehicle.

c. Every passenger motor vehicle registered in this state and manufactured or assembled after June thirtieth, nineteen hundred sixty-nine, and designated as a nineteen hundred seventy or subsequent year model, shall be equipped with adjustable interior mirrors meeting specifications established by the commissioner which specifications may provide minimum and maximum reflectance values.

d. Every new passenger-type motor vehicle, except a motorcycle, manufactured for sale in New York state on or after January first, in the year next succeeding the effective date of this paragraph shall be manufactured with an interior rear-view mirror of the selective position prismatic type with a reflectance value in the night driving position of at least four percent; or its functional equivalent. For purposes of this section, "passenger-type motor vehicle" shall mean any motor vehicle with a seating capacity of not more than fifteen adults, not including the driver, that is equipped with one or more rear windows. Any violation of the provisions of this paragraph by any manufacturer shall constitute an offense and shall be punishable by a civil fine of not more than seven hundred fifty dollars for each offense.

e. Every single-unit motor vehicle registered in this state, operated for commercial purposes and having a cube style or enclosed walk-in delivery bay, where such delivery bay has a length of eight feet six inches or more, but not exceeding a length of eighteen feet, shall be equipped with a cross-view back-up mirror system, rear video system, rear object detection system, or other device, which enables the driver of the vehicle to detect by means of a visual, or visual and audible warning-indicator, persons and objects located directly behind the vehicle. The commissioner is hereby authorized to promulgate regulations providing specifications for mirrors or other devices as required by this paragraph.

f. Every sani-van and motor vehicle commonly classified as a garbage truck purchased on or after January first, two thousand eight and registered in this state, which is operated in and engages in the collection of garbage or refuse in the county of Westchester shall be equipped with a rear video system, rear object detection system, or other device which enables the driver of the vehicle to detect by means of a visual, or visual and audible warning-indicator, persons and objects located directly behind the vehicle. The commissioner is hereby authorized to promulgate regulations providing specifications for mirrors or other devices as required by this paragraph. Provided, however, that the provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to motor vehicles commonly classified as rolloff vehicles that are used for the express purpose of transporting waste containers such as open boxes or compactors.

10-a. It shall be unlawful after July first, nineteen hundred sixty-seven to operate on any public highway in this state any motor vehicle registered in this state, manufactured or assembled on or after such date, and designated as a nineteen hundred sixty-eight or later model, unless such vehicle is equipped with an adjustable side view mirror which shall be affixed to the left outside of such vehicle and which shall be adjustable so that the operator of such vehicle may have a clear view of the road and condition of traffic on the left side and to the rear of such vehicle.

10-b. It shall be unlawful after June thirtieth, nineteen hundred seventy-three to operate on any public highway or street in this state, any passenger type motor vehicle except convertible, suburban and omnibus or other motor vehicle that has a roll-down rear window or a rear window or windows located in a movable closure (door-like) member registered in this state, manufactured or assembled after said date, and designated as a nineteen hundred seventy-four or subsequent model unless such vehicle be equipped with a rear window defogger or defroster, which shall be so located and adjusted that its operation will give the operator of such vehicle, by means of the mirror or other reflecting device required by subdivision ten of this section, a view of the road and the condition of traffic behind such vehicle.

10-c. It shall be unlawful after June thirtieth, nineteen hundred eighty-five to operate on any public highway or street in this state, any passenger type motor vehicle that has a rear window or windows located in a movable closure (door-like) member, except for a multipurpose passenger vehicle (designed to carry ten persons or less and constructed either on a truck chassis or with special features for occasional off-road operation) registered in this state and manufactured or assembled after said date, and designated as a nineteen hundred eighty-six or subsequent model unless such vehicle be equipped with a rear window defogger or defroster, which shall be so located and adjusted that its operation will give the operator of such vehicle, by means of the mirror or other reflecting device required by subdivision ten of this section, a view of the road and the condition of traffic behind such vehicle.

10-d. It shall be unlawful after December thirty-first, nineteen hundred ninety-two to operate on any public highway or street in this state, any passenger type motor vehicle that has a rear window located in a single movable closure (door-like) member and which has a non-removable top, registered in this state and manufactured or assembled after said date, and designated as a nineteen hundred ninety-three or subsequent model unless such vehicle be equipped with a rear window defogger or defroster, which shall be so located and adjusted that its operation will give the operator of such vehicle, by means of the mirror or other reflecting device required by subdivision ten of this section, a view of the road and the condition of traffic behind such vehicle.

10-e. [Repealed upon conditions set forth in L 2011, ch 138, § 2] Every truck, tractor, and tractor-trailer or semitrailer combination registered in this state having a gross vehicle weight rating of twenty-six thousand pounds or more, and a conventional cab configuration in which more than half of the engine length is forward of the foremost point of the windshield base and the steering wheel hub is in the forward quarter of the vehicle length, whenever operated within a city having a population of one million or more on highways other than controlled-access highways, shall be equipped with a convex mirror on the front of such vehicle or combination of vehicles. When such vehicle or combination of vehicles is being operated, such mirror shall be adjusted so as to enable the operator thereof to see all points on an imaginary horizontal line which: (a) is three feet above the road, (b) is one foot directly forward from the midpoint of the front of such motor vehicle, and (c) extends the full width of the front of such vehicle or combination of vehicles. Provided, however, the commissioner, in consultation with the commissioner of transportation, may promulgate rules and regulations exempting from the requirements of this subdivision any vehicle or combination of vehicles where such commissioner has determined that the use of such convex mirrors would not increase the visibility of persons or objects located directly in front of such vehicle or combination of vehicles.

11. It shall be unlawful after January first, nineteen hundred thirty-four to operate on any public highway or street, in this state, a motor vehicle manufactured or assembled after said date, designed or used for the purpose of carrying passengers for hire, or as a public conveyance to transport school children and others, unless such vehicle be equipped with safety glass wherever glass is used in doors, windows and windshields.

12. It shall be unlawful to operate on any public highway or street in this state any motor vehicle registered in New York state unless such vehicle be equipped with safety glass wherever glass is used in doors, windows and windshields. For the purposes of this subdivision, any device other than a trailer, which is attached to or carried upon a motor vehicle and which lawfully can be occupied while the motor vehicle is in motion, shall be considered a part of such motor vehicle.

12-a. (a) Every motor vehicle, except a motorcycle, when driven or operated upon a public highway, road or street shall be equipped with a front windshield in a fixed and more or less upright position constructed of safety glass as defined in subdivision fourteen of this section and required by subdivisions eleven and twelve hereof. No person shall drive any motor vehicle with any sign or other nontransparent material other than a certificate or paper required to be displayed by law upon the front windshield or the sidewings or side windows on either side forward of or adjacent to the operator's seat.

(b) No person shall operate any motor vehicle upon any public highway, road or street:

(1) the front windshield of which is composed of, covered by or treated with any material which has a light transmittance of less than seventy percent unless such materials are limited to the uppermost six inches of the windshield; or

(3) if it is classified as a station wagon, sedan, hardtop, coupe, hatchback or convertible and any rear side window has a light transmittance of less than seventy percent; or

(4) the rear window of which is composed of, covered by or treated with any material which has a light transmittance of less than seventy percent. A rear window may have a light transmittance of less than seventy percent if the vehicle is equipped with side mirrors on both sides of the vehicle so adjusted that the driver thereof shall have a clear and full view of the road and condition of traffic behind such vehicle.

(c) Any person required for medical reasons to be shielded from the direct rays of the sun and/or any person operating a motor vehicle belonging to such person or in which such person is an habitual passenger shall be exempt from the provisions of subparagraphs one and two of paragraph (b) of this subdivision provided the commissioner has granted an exemption and notice of such exemption is affixed to the vehicle as directed by the commissioner. The applicant for such exemption must provide a physician's statement with the reason for the exemption, the name of the individual with a medically necessary condition operating or transported in the vehicle, the specific condition involved, and the minimum level of light transmission required. The commissioner shall only authorize exemptions where the medical condition certified by the physician is contained on a list of medical conditions prepared by the commissioner of health pursuant to subdivision sixteen of section two hundred six of the public health law. If such [such]* exemption is granted, the commissioner shall make a record thereof and shall distribute a sufficiently noticeable sticker to the applicant to be attached to any window so shielded or altered pursuant to such exemption.

(d) The commissioner may test any window for a person who has been charged with violating this subdivision. If such window is found to be in conformity with this subdivision, a small label attesting to the conformity shall be affixed to the window tested.

(e) On and after January first, nineteen hundred ninety-two, no person shall manufacture, sell, offer for sale, equip or operate a motor vehicle in this state in violation of the provisions of this subdivision, except that a person may operate a nineteen hundred ninety-one or earlier model year vehicle without violating this subdivision if the windows on said vehicle were in conformity with this subdivision as it existed on December thirty-first, nineteen hundred ninety-one.

(f) The commissioner shall make such rules and regulations as he shall deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this subdivision.

(ff) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section or any other general, special or local law, charter, administrative code, ordinance, rule or regulation to the contrary, any person operating a motor vehicle in a burial or funeral procession while travelling to or from a funeral, interment or cremation may place a funeral sign no larger than eight and one half by fourteen inches in any window of such vehicle, as long as such sign when so placed will not prevent such person from having a clear and full view of the road and the condition of traffic behind such vehicle.

13. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to replace glass in doors, windows, or windshields of motor vehicles unless such replacement be made with safety glass.

14. The term "safety glass" as used in this section shall be construed to mean any product composed of glass, so manufactured, fabricated or treated as substantially to prevent shattering and flying of the glass when struck or broken, or such other or similar product as may be approved by the commissioner.

15. The commissioner of motor vehicles shall maintain a list of types of glass approved by him as conforming to the specifications and requirements for safety glass as set forth in this section, and shall not issue a license for or relicense any motor vehicle subject to the provisions of subdivisions eleven and twelve unless such motor vehicle be equipped as therein provided with such approved type of glass.

*Brackets have been inserted by the Publisher around this word as it is superfluous.

16. The owner and operator of any motor vehicle operated in violation of the provisions of subdivisions eleven and twelve shall be guilty of a traffic infraction. In case of the violation of such subdivisions by any common carrier or person operating under a permit issued by the public service commission (or other authorized body or person), said permit shall be revoked, or, in the discretion of the commissioner, suspended until the provisions of such subdivisions are satisfactorily complied with.

17. Every omnibus having a seating capacity of more than ten passengers, every truck having a maximum gross weight in excess of twelve thousand pounds and every combination of tractor and trailer operated upon a public highway shall carry emergency lighting equipment ready at all times for immediate use. The equipment of the vehicle or combination of vehicles may consist of flares of the type used by railroads, flaring candles, torches, lanterns or red emergency reflectors provided it is adequate to provide a warning light in all kinds of weather both in front of and in the rear of the vehicle for at least eight hours. No red emergency reflector shall be deemed adequate within the meaning of this subdivision unless it is of a size and type approved by the commissioner, and conforms to minimum specifications established by him, which minimum shall not be less than the minimum established by the interstate commerce commission for buses and trucks in interstate commerce. When any such vehicle or a combination of vehicles, except an omnibus which stops for the purpose of taking on or discharging passengers, is parked or left standing on a public highway except within a city or incorporated village, during the period from one-half hour after sunset to one-half hour before sunrise, the operator of such vehicle or combination of vehicles shall cause at least one light, or reflector or lighted flare to be placed on the highway in front of such vehicle or combination of vehicles, and at least one light, reflector or lighted flare on the highway in the rear of such vehicle or combination of vehicles at a distance of approximately one hundred feet in the front of and at the rear of such vehicle or combination of vehicles, provided that if such vehicle is parked or left standing within three hundred feet of a curve, crest of hill, or other obstruction, the flare, candle, torch, lantern, or reflector in that direction shall be so placed as to afford ample warning to other highway users but in no case less than approximately one hundred feet or more than approximately three hundred feet from the stopped vehicle.

18. Except as otherwise provided herein, it shall be unlawful to operate on any public highway or street in this state any motor vehicle, or combination of motor vehicle and trailer, so constructed or so loaded that the driver thereof is unable to indicate clearly by hand signals to approaching and following traffic his intention of stopping or turning, unless such motor vehicle or combination of vehicles shall be equipped with directional signals approved by the commissioner, provided, however, it shall be unlawful after January first, nineteen hundred fifty-two to operate on any public highway or street in this state any motor vehicle registered in this state, manufactured or assembled after said date unless such vehicle be equipped with directional signals approved by the commissioner. It shall also be unlawful to fail to cause such signals to be maintained, at all times in good and sufficient working order. The provisions of this subdivision shall not apply to special purpose commercial motor vehicles registered under schedule F of subdivision seven of section four hundred one of this chapter or to a vehicle or combination of vehicles lawfully operated under registration issued, under section four hundred fifteen of this chapter or under a similar provision of the law of another jurisdiction.

18-a. Any motor vehicle may be equipped with and every motor vehicle registered in this state and manufactured or assembled after June thirtieth, nineteen hundred sixty-five, and designated as a nineteen hundred sixty-six or subsequent year model, shall be equipped with a device, approved by the commissioner, by means of which the operator may cause the two front and two rear directional signals to flash simultaneously for the purpose of warning the operators of other vehicles of the presence of a vehicular traffic hazard requiring the exercise of unusual care in approaching, overtaking or passing. The provisions of this subdivision requiring that certain motor vehicles shall be so equipped shall not apply to special purpose commercial motor vehicles registered under schedule F of subdivision seven of section four hundred one or to a vehicle or combination of vehicles lawfully operated under registration issued under section four hundred fifteen.

19. It shall be unlawful for the owner to operate, park or stand a motor vehicle or trailer on any public highway or street in this state, or to authorize another to so operate, park or stand a motor vehicle or trailer, with the consent of such owner, expressed or implied, unless such motor vehicle or trailer be equipped and lighted as provided by this section and by section three hundred seventy-six, and the operation, parking or standing on a public highway or street in this state of a motor vehicle or trailer which is not so equipped and lighted or which is defectively equipped and lighted is hereby prohibited.

20. Every omnibus having a seating capacity of more than seven passengers, used exclusively to transport pupils, teachers and other persons acting in a supervisory capacity to and from school or school activities, or to transport children, instructors or other persons acting in a supervisory capacity to and from child care centers maintained for migrant farm and food processing laborers or to transport children, instructors or other persons acting in a supervisory capacity to and from camp or camp activities, or to transport children, instructors or other persons acting in a supervisory capacity to and from religious services or instruction shall be equipped in the manner provided by this subdivision and any such omnibus used by any state facility or not-for-profit agency licensed by the state and used to transport persons with disabilities, instructors or other persons acting in a supervisory capacity may be equipped in the manner provided by this subdivision:

(a) For each such omnibus having a seating capacity in excess of fifteen children, there shall be colored flashing signal lamps conforming to regulations prescribed by the commissioner on the front and on the rear thereof, including at least one flashing red signal lamp on the front thereof and at least one flashing red signal lamp on the rear thereof. For each such omnibus having a seating capacity of not more than fifteen children, there shall be colored flashing signal lamps conforming to regulations prescribed by the commissioner facing the front and facing the rear thereof, and at least one flashing red signal lamp facing the front thereof and at least one flashing red signal lamp facing the rear thereof. The driver of every such vehicle shall keep such red signal lamps lighted whenever passengers are being received or discharged or whenever he has stopped within fifty feet to the rear of a vehicle with such red signal lamps lighted, and shall light all other required signal lamps, as a warning, prior to stopping to receive or discharge passengers in accordance with regulations prescribed by the commissioner.

(b) (1) In addition to such signal lamps, two signs shall be conspicuously displayed on the exterior of every such omnibus designating it as a school omnibus by the use of the words "SCHOOL BUS" which shall be painted or otherwise inscribed thereon in black letters. Such letters shall be of uniform size, at least eight inches in height, and each stroke of each letter shall be not less than one inch in width. The background of each such sign shall be painted the color known as "national school bus chrome." For each such omnibus having a seating capacity in excess of fifteen children, such signs shall be securely mounted on top of such vehicle, one of which shall be affixed on the front and one on the rear thereof. For each such omnibus having a seating capacity of not more than fifteen children, such signs shall be securely mounted on top of such vehicle, one of which shall face the front and one of which shall face the rear thereof. Each such sign shall be visible and readable from a point at least two hundred feet distant.

(2) The universal handicapped symbol shall be conspicuously displayed on the exterior of every omnibus equipped with a wheelchair lift which transports children with disabilities. The commissioner shall promulgate regulations regarding the size and location of such universal handicapped symbol. The commissioner shall require that any new signage relating to accessibility installed or replaced on or after the effective date of the chapter of the laws of two thousand fourteen which amended this subparagraph depict the logo promulgated by the secretary of state pursuant to section one hundred one of the executive law.

(c) In the event such vehicle is operated on a public highway during the period between one-half hour after sunset and one-half hour before sunrise, the signs required by paragraph (b) of this subdivision shall be illuminated as to be visible from a point at least five hundred feet distant.

(d) Every such omnibus shall be equipped as provided in paragraphs (a) and (b) of this subdivision, and such signs shall be displayed and illuminated in accordance with paragraphs (b) and (c) of this subdivision, and such signal lamps shall be operated as provided in paragraph (a) of this subdivision at all times when such omnibus shall be engaged in transporting pupils to and from school or school activities or in transporting children to and from child care centers maintained for children of migrant farm and food processing laborers, or in transporting children to and from camp or camp activities or transporting children to and from religious services or instruction or transporting persons with disabilities on any such omnibus used by any state facility or not-for-profit agency licensed by the state.

(e) Every such omnibus, having its engine located ahead of the driver, with a seating capacity of more than twelve school children shall be equipped with a mirror, convex in shape, at least eight inches in diameter, firmly mounted at hood, windshield or fender-top height in front of the bus. It shall be located on either the left or right side of the bus in such manner that the seated driver may observe through its use the road from the front bumper forward to the point where direct observation is possible.

(f) The commissioner of motor vehicles is hereby authorized and empowered to adopt and, from time to time, to amend such regulations, not inconsistent with this subdivision, governing the color, number, size, type, construction and use of such signal lamps and signs, as he may deem necessary for public safety. On and after July first, nineteen hundred fifty-one, no such signal lamp or sign shall be deemed to comply with the requirements of this subdivision unless it is of a size and type approved by the commissioner and unless it shall conform to the specifications prescribed and promulgated by him.

(g) In the event, however, that such an omnibus, equipped as herein provided, shall cease to be used to transport pupils or pupils and teachers or children of migrant laborers and migrant child care center instructors, or children and camp instructors, the equipment, markings and paint, herein provided for, shall be removed and changed within fifteen days after relicense. Nothing contained in this section, however, shall be deemed to waive any other requirements as to equipment, markings and paint, contained in this chapter.

(h) All the provisions of this chapter relating to school buses shall apply with equal force and effect to buses used in transporting children and instructors to and from child care centers maintained for children of migrant farm and food processing laborers and to buses used in transporting children to and from camp or camp activities and to buses used in transporting children to and from religious services or instruction. As used in this subdivision, camp or camp activities shall mean day camp or day camp activities respectively.

(i) Every omnibus subject to the provisions of this subdivision shall be operated with headlights and taillights illuminated at all times of day or night.

(j) The commissioner of transportation, in his discretion, by regulation or upon written request, by departmental order, for good cause, may exempt any school bus that does not receive or discharge passengers on or along the public highways on regularly scheduled routes from the requirements of any or all paragraphs of subdivisions twenty and twenty-one of this section.

(k) All omnibuses manufactured or assembled prior to April first, nineteen hundred seventy-seven and all omnibuses manufactured or assembled after April first, nineteen hundred seventy-seven which do not meet federal standards for school bus safety, shall be phased out of use beginning with the nineteen hundred ninety-six–nineteen hundred ninety-seven school year and ending with the nineteen hundred ninety-seven–nineteen hundred ninety-eight school year. In each of such school years, at least one-half of such omnibuses shall be retired from use according to the following formula: in the nineteen hundred ninety-six–nineteen hundred ninety-seven school year, the minimum number of such omnibuses to be phased out of each owner/operator's fleet shall be the total number of such omnibuses divided by two and rounded upwards to the nearest whole number. All such omnibuses remaining shall be phased out in the nineteen hundred ninety-seven–nineteen hundred ninety-eight school year.

Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this paragraph the commissioner of education may make exceptions on a case by case basis if a school district certifies to the commissioner of education that a certain omnibus should not be retired for reason of economic hardship and the commissioner of transportation determines upon inspection that such omnibus is in good working order. In making his determination, the commissioner of transportation shall consider, among other relevant factors, the relative age and structure of each such omnibus. When such determination is made, every such omnibus so certified shall be reinspected by the commissioner of transportation once every six months. Any school district receiving an exemption from the provisions of this paragraph for any omnibus shall provide to the commissioner of education an annual recertification of economic hardship.

(l) (1) Every such omnibus used on a regular basis to transport pupils with a disability on a regularly scheduled route shall, with the written consent of the parent, guardian, or person in a position of loco parentis, have maintained on such omnibus the following information about each such pupil:

(i) name;

(ii) nature of the disability; and

(iii) the name of such pupil's parent, guardian, or person in a position of loco parentis and one or more telephone numbers where such person can be reached in an emergency, and/or the name and telephone number of any other person designated by such parent, guardian or person in a position of loco parentis as a person who can be contacted in an emergency.

(2) Such information shall be used solely for the purpose of contacting such pupil's parent, guardian, person in a position of loco parentis, or designee in the event of an emergency involving such pupil, shall be kept in a manner which retains the privacy of the pupil, and shall not be accessible to any person other than the driver or a teacher acting in a supervisory capacity. Provided, however, that in the event that such driver or teacher is incapacitated, such information may be accessed by any emergency services provider for the purpose authorized by this subparagraph.

(3) Such information shall be updated as needed, but at least once each school year. Such information shall be destroyed if: parental consent is revoked; the pupil no longer attends such school; or, the disability no longer exists.

(4) For the purposes of this paragraph, the term "disability" shall mean a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more of the major life activities of a pupil, whether of a temporary or permanent nature.

21. Every motor vehicle having a seating capacity of more than seven passengers, and used primarily to transport pupils or pupils and teachers to and from school, shall be painted the color known as "national school bus chrome."

In the event, however, such a motor vehicle so painted shall cease to be used to transport pupils or pupils and teachers, the color of paint herein provided for, shall be changed to another color, within fifteen days of relicense.

21-a. In any case where a New York state police or New York city, Albany, Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse or Yonkers police department vehicle is painted a distinctive color which would designate it in the public's view as such a state or city police vehicle, the purchaser of such vehicle shall cause the color of its paint to be altered and any designated markings to be removed within fifteen days of registration.

21-b. The commissioner shall promulgate rules and regulations for the use of two-way radios on school buses.

21-c. The commissioner, in consultation with the commissioner of transportation, shall promulgate rules and regulations for the use of stop-arms on school buses which shall include provisions for a second stop-arm to be located on the driver's side as close as is practical to the rear corner of the bus. Every school bus designed with a capacity of forty-five persons or more, and manufactured for use in this state on or after January first, two thousand two shall be equipped with a second stop-arm in compliance with such regulations.

21-d. The commissioner shall promulgate rules and regulations for the use of back up beepers on school buses.

21-e. The commissioner shall promulgate rules and regulations for the use of front crossing arms on school buses.

21-f. The commissioner shall promulgate rules and regulations for the use of safety sensor devices on school buses.

The commissioner of environmental conservation shall not promulgate any such regulation unless he (i) has determined, with the concurrence of the commissioner, that any such device is, or devices are, effective and reliable, (ii) has determined that the installation of any such device on all or any vehicles of such class or classes is necessary to the achievement of federal ambient air quality standards pursuant to an approved air quality implementation plan adopted pursuant to the federal clean air act, as amended (42 U.S.C. 1857 et seq.) and (iii) has determined that the effect of such regulation will not be diluted by the absence of a comparable requirement in an adjoining state; provided, however, that the effective date of the requirements of such regulation shall not be prior to the approval or promulgation of a transportation control plan pursuant to the Federal clean air act as amended for those portions of adjoining states designated as the territorial areas forming parts of the New Jersey-New York-Connecticut Interstate Air Quality Control Region under such act and not prior to the effective date of comparable requirements for such vehicles registered in, required to be registered in, or operated in any such portions. Any such requirement shall take effect with respect to any such motor vehicle as of the date of issuance of a registration for such vehicle in the year next succeeding the date on which the regulation requiring the installation of such a device is promulgated by the commissioner of environmental conservation, but in no event prior to March first, nineteen hundred seventy-six.

A false statement in relation to such exemption shall constitute a material false statement in an application for registration.

(d) A notation on the registration for a vehicle and an identifying sticker on the vehicle, both of which indicate that such vehicle is required to have an exhaust emission control device shall be presumptive evidence that such device in proper working condition is required on that vehicle pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subdivision.

(e) The rules and regulations promulgated pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subdivision shall contain provisions necessary or appropriate to implement this subdivision, including the definition of terms and exemptions for motor vehicles registered in areas from which no substantial numbers of motor vehicles are regularly operated in the portion of the state referred to in paragraph (b) of this subdivision.

(f) No registered owner shall permit a motor vehicle, required to have an exhaust emission control device in proper working condition pursuant to the provisions of this subdivision, to be operated in the portion of the state to which this subdivision is applicable, unless such vehicle is equipped with an approved exhaust emission control device in proper working condition. Such fine may not be waived, suspended or in any other manner not levied, except that four hundred fifty dollars of such fine may be waived upon presentation of acceptable evidence prior to the final determination of the violation that the device required pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subdivision has been installed on the vehicle and is in proper working condition. Subject to rules and regulations of the commissioner of transportation, a combination of an automotive powered cab and truck chassis being used to tow two such additional vehicles in double saddlemount fashion, each mounted upon a device designed and constructed so as to be readily dismountable and which performs the function of a conventional fifth wheel, so that while all the wheels of the towing powered chassis touch the roadway, only the wheels on the rear axle of each of the towed vehicles are in contact with the roadway; and

5. Subject to rules and regulations of the commissioner of transportation, a combination of an automotive powered cab and truck chassis being used to tow three such additional vehicles in triple saddlemount fashion on a qualifying or access highway, each mounted upon a device designed and constructed so as to be readily dismountable and which performs the function of a conventional fifth wheel, so that while all the wheels of the towing powered chassis touch the roadway, only the wheels on the rear axle of each of the towed vehicles are in contact with the roadway.

Section 1. Legislative findings and declaration. The legislature hereby finds that agriculture is an important and unique industry in the state, providing fresh, nutritious food and valuable fiber at an economical cost to the state's consumers. The legislature further finds that agricultural producers occasionally need to make use of the public roadways to transport crops, equipment and supplies from one part of their farms to the other, especially during harvest season, in order to maintain an efficient, viable farm enterprise. The vehicles used to transport such commodities must be equipped to satisfy the production needs of farmers yet meet certain minimum standards to assure the safety of both the farm vehicle driver and the motoring public. Because of the reliance of farmers on registered farm vehicles at critical times in the growing season, it is also important to minimize out-of-service time and expense associated with equipment repairs. Therefore, it is the purpose of this act to address the need of farmers to use farm vehicles in connection with crop production while maintaining the safety of the public roadways, by setting or requiring development of safety equipment and registration standards for farm vehicles registered pursuant to subdivision thirteen of section four hundred one of the vehicle and traffic law.

The 2018 amendment by ch 478, § 1, added the (36)(a)(i) designation; added "and Biological" twice in (36)(a)(i); added (36)(a)(ii); added the (36)(b)(i) designation; added (36)(b)(ii); and added "and symbol" twice in (36)(c).

The 2018 amendment by ch 486, §§ 1, 2, deleted "and any designated markings to be removed" following "to be altered" in (21-a); and added (52).

The 2019 amendment by ch 59, § 8 (Part III), added 53.

Please buckle up.'"

The 2020 amendment by ch 11, § 1, added 54.

Repeal Notes: [1963, ch 971] Former subdivision 33 of § 375, which was repealed by this act, contained a definition of "motor vehicles" for purposes of determining applicability of the entire section by excepting certain vehicles from the existing definition in § 125. Because of the exclusion from applicability of the section to these same named vehicles together with others under the provisions of former subdivision 34 as amended and renumbered by this act, former subdivision 33 is unnecessary.

[1970, ch 197] Paragraph c of subdivision two of section three hundred seventy-five, which was repealed by section nine of this act, related to lamps used on motor vehicles.

[1970, ch 573] Subdivision 35 of § 375 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, repealed by this act, provided for the promulgation of standards governing the use of tires on vehicles. The authority for establishing such standards is re-enacted in the more comprehensive subdivision 35 of same section, added by this act.

[1975, ch 761] Vehicle and Traffic Law § 375, former subdivision (28-f) of which was repealed, authorized the Commissioner of the Department of Environmental Conservation to study the economic and technological feasibility of requiring air contaminant emission control system used in motor vehicles.

[1977, ch 592] Paragraphs (d) and (e) of subdivision 2 of Section 375, subdivisions 2 through 8, 11 and 13 of Section 376 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law repealed by this act related to reflective device requirements, placement of specific lighting devices, definitions of terms and inclusion of noncommercial trailers which would be covered by Section 376 as amended by this act and regulations which would be promulgated thereunder. Subdivisions 5, 6 and 8 of Section 375 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law repealed by this act contained provisions relating to lights on parked vehicles and methods of approval of lighting devices and appeals therefrom which have become obsolete.

1. In general

Motorist's operator's license was properly suspended for 90 days on evidence that motorist failed to exercise due care to avoid collision with pedestrian, who was struck and killed while intoxicated and while walking in driving lane of highway. McKenzie v

Fisher, 39 N.Y.2d 103, 382 N.Y.S.2d 975, 346 N.E.2d 813, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 2386 (N.Y. 1976).

Any violation of requirement that school buses keep warning lights flashing when passengers are being received or discharged, could not have been substantial factor in bringing about injuries sustained by high school student, who was struck by automobile on high school premises after she had walked into roadway from between two school buses which students were then boarding since any motor vehicle operator would have been chargeable with notice that pupils were boarding or alighting from bus and driver of automobile conceded that she had actual knowledge that buses were loading, and thus student could not recover from bus company based on such a violation. Aridas v Caserta, 41 N.Y.2d 1059, 396 N.Y.S.2d 170, 364 N.E.2d 835, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 2059 (N.Y. 1977).

Under former § 54, authorizing a city of the first class to enact "traffic regulations with regard to the operation of motor vehicles," the commissioner of police of New York City had authority to promulgate the traffic rules and regulations of the city of New York, Art. 5 § 67, which provides, in language identical with that of this section for the display of lights on motor vehicles driven at night. People v Killmeyer, 13 N.Y.S.2d 839, 171 Misc. 778, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2107 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1939).

In a prosecution for violation of this section, no intent to violate the statute need be established. People v Pinnock, 142 N.Y.S.2d 771, 207 Misc. 1097, 1955 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3539 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1955).

Ordinance requiring taxis to be insured for $100,000 "for damages for death or injuries to persons" and for $300,000 "for damages arising out of any one accident" was valid. Foley v McKnealley, 67 Misc. 2d 889, 325 N.Y.S.2d 165, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1231 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1971).

City ordinance regulating private car business, requiring certain equipment and periodic inspections, fell within the broad permissible area provided for under General City Law § 20, subd 13 which empowers cities to regulate and license occupations and businesses under the municipal police power, and said ordinance furthermore did not conflict with state law governing the operation and licensing of motor vehicles generally. Main Private Car Service, Inc. v Mayor of Yonkers, 71 Misc. 2d 417, 336 N.Y.S.2d 207, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1563 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), aff'd, 37 A.D.2d 1044, 327 N.Y.S.2d 583, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7147 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1971).

Town ordinance requirement that tow truck be equipped with dual rear wheels, fire extinguisher, crow bar, shovel, emergency flashing light, first aid kit, red flares and similar equipment was not in conflict with state law since it did not permit anything prohibited and did not prohibit anything permitted. Richard's Service Station, Inc. v Huntington, 79 Misc. 2d 834, 361 N.Y.S.2d 497, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1766 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1974), modified, 47 A.D.2d 963, 367 N.Y.S.2d 296, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9438 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1975).

Bus driver and the county were not subject to liability for failure to comply with N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 375(20) and 1174, as the bus from which the infant alighted was not being used exclusively to transport pupils, N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 375(20), and in addition, the driver's duty to the infant as a passenger terminated when the infant alighted safely onto the sidewalk. Wisoff v County of Westchester, 296 A.D.2d 402, 745 N.Y.S.2d 60, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7019 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2002).

This provision mandates every motor vehicle to have a horn that can sound a danger warning and proscribes that horn from being used other than as a reasonable danger warning. Honking is a traffic infraction if used in a non-emergency situation. People v Velazquez, 64 Misc. 3d 575, 103 N.Y.S.3d 801, 2019 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2887 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2019).

2. Constitutionality

The provision of subdivision 3 of this section that headlamps "shall be operated so that dazzling light does not interfere with the driver of the approaching vehicle" is not so uncertain, indefinite, and vague as to cause it to be unconstitutional. In the context of this provision, the operation of headlights so as to produce "dazzling light" can mean only operation of headlights. Thus, two elements are necessary to constitute the offense: (1) the use of high beams when an approaching vehicle is within 500 feet and (2) interference with the vision of the driver thereof by reason of such high beams. Since a trooper testified that he signaled the defendant to dim her lights precisely because the high beams interfered with his operation of his car, requiring him to reduce his speed, proof was thus offered to establish both elements of the offense. People v Meola, 7 N.Y.2d 391, 198 N.Y.S.2d 276, 165 N.E.2d 851, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1431 (N.Y. 1960).

This section is not unconstitutional as being too vague and indefinite to give a clear, positive, and unequivocal warning of the rule to be obeyed. People v Byron, 17 N.Y.2d 64, 268 N.Y.S.2d 24, 215 N.E.2d 345, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 1543 (N.Y. 1966).

Subdivision 1 of this section which provides that motor vehicles "shall have a suitable muffler or device to prevent unnecessary noise from exhaust gases" is unconstitutional for indefiniteness. People v Zanchelli, 8 Misc. 2d 1069, 169 N.Y.S.2d 197, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1968 (N.Y. County Ct. 1957).

The provisions of subdivision 1 of this section were unconstitutional in that they failed to set up any standard sufficient to define a violation thereof. However, it should be noted that the new provision, relating to mufflers, subdivision 31, effective July 1, 1959 corrects the error by setting up sufficient standards. People v Sisson, 12 Misc. 2d 18, 176 N.Y.S.2d 785, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2862 (N.Y. County Ct. 1958).

Subdivision 1 of this section is constitutional and the word "unnecessary" therein provides a sufficient standard of conduct. People v Merry, 12 Misc. 2d 20, 178 N.Y.S.2d 454, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3226 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1958).

This section (former § 70) is constitutional. People ex rel. Seagrist v Mederer, 33 N.Y.S.2d 114, 1942 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1330 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1942).

3. Construction

This section must be strictly construed. People v Strauss, 260 A.D. 880, 22 N.Y.S.2d 880, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5204 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

Vehicle and Traffic Law will not be construed as imposing absolute liability for violation of its provisions regardless of negligence unless it clearly appears that legislature so intended, and, in absence of such legislative intent, whether exercise of reasonable care would excuse observance of statute is for jury. People v Pulizzi, 106 N.Y.S.2d 680, 199 Misc. 405, 1950 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2557 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1950).

The meaning and implication of New York City traffic regulations making it unlawful to operate a motor vehicle whose brakes do not comply with standards established by regulation are at least as malum prohibitum as subdivision of Vehicle and Traffic Law regulating braking equipment of motor vehicles and mere inadequacy of brakes makes out a prima facie case of violation of regulation. People v Pulizzi, 106 N.Y.S.2d 680, 199 Misc. 405, 1950 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2557 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1950).

Standards to be applied in determining whether action prohibited by provision of traffic law precluding operation of vehicles which emit "unnecessary smoke or unnecessary offensive vapors" is defined with sufficient clarity to give clear warning of rule which is to be obeyed are same as standards used for criminal charges. People v Cohen, 85 Misc. 2d 982, 381 N.Y.S.2d 979, 1976 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2096 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1976).

Provision of traffic law precluding operation on public highways of vehicles which emit "unnecessary smoke or unnecessary offensive vapors" is unconstitutionally vague. People v Cohen, 85 Misc. 2d 982, 381 N.Y.S.2d 979, 1976 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2096 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1976).

Subd. 2 should be read as a whole and the requirements as to lights being displayed between sunset and sunrise embraces reflectors as well. People v Palmiter, 15 N.Y.S.2d 858, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2458 (N.Y. County Ct. 1939).

4. Absolute liability

Subdivision 1 does not impose absolute liability for violation of its provisions regardless of negligence, and where the owner of the automobile had no previous knowledge that his brakes were inadequate or not in working order or insufficient to control the vehicle the question of the defendant's negligence should be submitted to the jury. Schaeffer v Caldwell, 273 A.D. 263, 78 N.Y.S.2d 652, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4581 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

The statute requiring that every motor vehicle operated on public highways be provided with adequate brakes in good working order and sufficient to control vehicle at all times when in use does not impose absolute liability for its violation regardless of negligence, but unexcused omission to comply therewith is negligence in itself. Alongi v Beuter, 286 A.D. 990, 144 N.Y.S.2d 756, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4857 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

Under requirement of subd 1 of above statute that every motor vehicle shall be provided with adequate brakes, liability of owner thereof for noncompliance is not absolute; he is only required to take reasonable steps to inspect brakes and to ascertain their safety. He is not in class of supplier of dangerous instrumentality who has a duty to inspect. And although it was held on facts before court that he was charged with constructive notice of the defect in his brakes, such owner was not in pari delicto with creator of such defect; as between them, the owner may be found passively negligent and such creator actively negligent. Alfano v Amchir, 23 A.D.2d 659, 257 N.Y.S.2d 2, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4765 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1965).

Liability of owner for noncompliance with statute requiring that automobile have adequate brakes is not absolute and he is required to take reasonable steps to inspect brakes and to ascertain their safety. Alfano v Amchir, 23 A.D.2d 659, 257 N.Y.S.2d 2, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4765 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1965).

Vehicle and Traffic Law will not be construed as imposing absolute liability for violation of its provisions regardless of negligence unless it clearly appears that legislature so intended, and, in absence of such legislative intent, whether exercise of reasonable care would excuse observance of statute is for jury. People v Pulizzi, 106 N.Y.S.2d 680, 199 Misc. 405, 1950 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2557 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1950).

In a prosecution for violation of this section, no intent to violate the statute need be established. People v Pinnock, 142 N.Y.S.2d 771, 207 Misc. 1097, 1955 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3539 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1955).

The provision of subdivision 1 requiring every motor vehicle, operated or driven upon the public highway, to be provided with adequate brakes and steering mechanism in good working order, does not impose absolute liability for violation of same regardless of neglience, since it is for the jury to determine whether the exercise of reasonable care would excuse observance of the statute. Where the defendant's papers showed what caused the failure and what the defects were in the brakes on his vehicle but that they had no prior knowledge of same, a triable issue of fact was raised. Lepke v Sclafani & Sons, Inc., 20 Misc. 2d 50, 192 N.Y.S.2d 58, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3040 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1959).

Subdivision 2(a) of this section, requiring motor vehicles driven on the highway between sunset and sunrise to display lighted lamps at front and rear, imposes absolute liability for its violation regardless of the operator's lack of knowledge that some of the required lamps are not functioning. People v Treen, 33 Misc. 2d 571, 225 N.Y.S.2d 787, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3726 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

Requirement of subd 2(a) of above statute that motor vehicle on public highway must display lighted lamp on rear thereof may be found to be violated without proof of knowledge on part of violator, since such traffic infraction is only malum prohibitum and hence requires no proof of knowledge of violation in order to complete offense. People v Attaldo, 44 Misc. 2d 772, 255 N.Y.S.2d 188, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1133 (N.Y. County Ct. 1964).

5. Applicability

This section was applicable where an accident took place more than a half an hour before sunrise and the defendant's truck was parked on a highway with no lights on it. Van Horn v Messina, 3 A.D.2d 918, 162 N.Y.S.2d 604, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5654 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1957), aff'd, 4 N.Y.2d 884, 174 N.Y.S.2d 466, 150 N.E.2d 769, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1035 (N.Y. 1958).

In action for injuries sustained by infant plaintiff when he crossed in front of bus from which he had just disembarked and was struck by vehicle that was maneuvering around stopped bus, defendants were entitled to summary judgment dismissing claim that bus used to transport infant plaintiff home from school was not equipped with red flashing signal lamps and other indicia of school bus as required by CLS Veh & Tr § 375(20), where record established that bus in question was not used exclusively to transport pupils. Sigmond v Liberty Lines Transit, Inc., 261 A.D.2d 385, 689 N.Y.S.2d 239, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4549 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

6. Pleading

In an action where defendant is charged with the violation of former §§ 15, 56 and 58, he need not verify his answer. King v Terwilliger, 259 A.D. 437, 19 N.Y.S.2d 657, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6167 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

An information charging defendant with a traffic violation, in that he operated an automobile on a highway and he failed to come to a complete stop and remain standing upon overtaking a school bus stopped for the purpose of discharging passengers, was sufficient to charge a violation of this law. People v Skolnick, 108 N.Y.S.2d 857, 200 Misc. 389, 1951 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2607 (N.Y. County Ct.), aff'd, 303 N.Y. 630, 101 N.E.2d 704, 303 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 630, 1951 N.Y. LEXIS 1064 (N.Y. 1951).

Defendant's motion to dismiss the count of the superseding information charging him with vehicle equipment violation was denied because the allegation sufficiently pleaded every element of the statute; the deponent, a police officer, alleged that defendant was operating a minivan with defective license plate lights, in that it was not illuminated. People v Lowe, 61 Misc. 3d 370, 83 N.Y.S.3d 402, 2017 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 5492 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2017).

7. Instruction to jury

The failure of a trial judge to instruct jury, pursuant to request of defendant's counsel, as to legal effect of the violation by plaintiff of this section, subd. 2, regarding the necessity of displaying lights at the time of the accident, constitutes error. Raufeisen v Rochester Transit Corp., 258 A.D. 846, 15 N.Y.S.2d 670, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7205 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

A refusal of the court to charge that this section required lights on a motor vehicle which would reveal an object for a distance of 350' constituted reversible error in a case where the jury was to determine that the operator's negligence was the sole proximate cause of the accident rather than the city's negligent maintenance of the highway. Friedman v New York, 286 A.D. 881, 142 N.Y.S.2d 425, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4433 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

In automobile negligence action, trial court's charge to jury, indicating that there was some burden on plaintiff to establish that defendant knew or should have known of defective condition of brakes on his automobile, was erroneous. Alongi v Beuter, 286 A.D. 990, 144 N.Y.S.2d 756, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4857 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

In a negligence action to recover damages for personal injuries sustained when plaintiff's vehicle was hit from behind by defendant's vehicle after plaintiff had walked to the front of his vehicle following a tire blowout and electrical system failure, judgment in favor of defendant would be reversed, and a new trial granted, where the jury had been instructed that if they found a violation by plaintiff of the statutory requirement of illumination of vehicle headlights and taillights, that this violation would be the proximate cause of the accident, and where the court had improperly refused to instruct the jury that an emergency situation preventing the functioning of the vehicle's lights would not constitute a violation of the statute (Veh & Tr Law § 375(2)(a)). Bassey v Mistrough, 88 A.D.2d 894, 450 N.Y.S.2d 604, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17220 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1982).

8. Lights; generally

and (2) interference with the vision of the driver thereof by reason of such high beams. Since a trooper testified that he signaled the defendant to dim her lights precisely because the high beams interfered with his operation of his car, requiring him to reduce his speed, proof was thus offered to establish both elements of the offense. People v Meola, 7 N.Y.2d 391, 198 N.Y.S.2d 276, 165 N.E.2d 851, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1431 (N.Y. 1960).

Where the plaintiff collided with the rear end of a trailer attached to defendant's automobile truck, the fact that plaintiff's front lights did not comply with this section is prima facie negligence, but it cannot be said that plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence as a matter of law. Lewis v Rowland, 225 A.D. 25, 232 N.Y.S. 71, 1928 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8732 (N.Y. App. Div. 1928).

In action for death of motorist who sustained fatal injuries when automobile he was operating collided with truck owned by New York City and parked in a public street, whether statutory provisions requiring motor vehicles proceeding on a public highway to display two lighted headlamps was violated was for jury. Krtil v New York, 259 A.D. 1049, 20 N.Y.S.2d 981, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7920 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

The lights required by this section, subd. 2, are not intended merely to avert collisions between vehicles traveling in parallel directions, but are also intended to be used to avert collisions between vehicles approaching from other directions, and the requirement that lights shall be visible at a distance of 500 feet ahead of the vehicle only prescribes the measure of their intensity. Kerner v Surface Transp. Corp., 262 A.D. 89, 28 N.Y.S.2d 126, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5296 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

A refusal of the court to charge that this section required lights on a motor vehicle which would reveal an object for a distance of 350' constituted reversible error in a case where the jury was to determine that the operator's negligence was the sole proximate cause of the accident rather than the city's negligent maintenance of the highway. Friedman v New York, 286 A.D. 881, 142 N.Y.S.2d 425, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4433 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

The jury was properly charged that a violation of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 375(2a) would be a sufficient predicate for a finding of negligence if that violation was the proximate cause of the accident. It was held the mere fact that plaintiff saw defendant's vehicle 450 distant was not controlling, since the jury could find that the absence of lights made an estimate of speed or motion difficult or impossible, thereby causing the accident. Smith v Conway, 32 A.D.2d 868, 300 N.Y.S.2d 930, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3635 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 25 N.Y.2d 741, 1969 N.Y. LEXIS 1883 (N.Y. 1969).

Stopping of automobile by police officers at time when automobile was being operated without headlights upon public highway was proper. People v Middleton, 50 A.D.2d 1040, 377 N.Y.S.2d 938, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12044 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975), aff'd, 43 N.Y.2d 703, 401 N.Y.S.2d 207, 372 N.E.2d 41, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 2510 (N.Y. 1977).

Defendant was not entitled to suppression of evidence since initial stop of his vehicle was proper where his headlights were on high beam, affecting oncoming state trooper's vision, and he failed to dim them when trooper flashed his own high beams several times. People v Hines, 155 A.D.2d 722, 547 N.Y.S.2d 435, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13869 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 736, 558 N.Y.S.2d 898, 557 N.E.2d 1194, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 2176 (N.Y. 1990).

A conviction of "willfully" and "knowingly" operating his car without having the license plate light in operation cannot be sustained, as against defendant's testimony that he did not know that the light was not operating, in the absence of evidence to show that he had knowledge of the fact or of facts from which such knowledge could be inferred. People v Cross, 25 Misc. 2d 221, 209 N.Y.S.2d 1006, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2250 (N.Y. County Ct. 1960).

Subdivision 2(a) of this section, requiring motor vehicles driven on the highway between sunset and sunrise to display lighted lamps at front and rear, imposes absolute liability for its violation regardless of the operator's lack of knowledge that some of the required lamps are not functioning. People v Treen, 33 Misc. 2d 571, 225 N.Y.S.2d 787, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3726 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

Evidence that the defendant, within a distance of about half a mile, turned his headlights on and off five times at 30 second intervals, neither established that the lights were by their nature in violation of this statute, nor that they were being operated in a manner which could be described as "constantly flashing" within the meaning of this statute, and therefore defendant was not guilty of a violation, since if a light displayed by a motorist is not proscribed by this section or the statute, his motive in displaying the light will not render him guilty of its violation. People v Wright, 53 Misc. 2d 942, 280 N.Y.S.2d 213, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1488 (N.Y. County Ct. 1967).

Smoke from a brush fire 600 feet from a highway obstructing the vision of motorists was not the "proximate cause" of injuries to passengers in a vehicle which was carelessly and recklessly driven due to the limited light range as compared with the speed of the vehicle. Pfohl v State, 42 N.Y.S.2d 372, 1943 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2012 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1943).

In action for injuries sustained when pedestrian crossing street intersection in the morning while it was yet dark with traffic light green in his favor was struck by hit and run driver, evidence established that defendant's truck was operated in a negligent manner in failing to permit plaintiff, a pedestrian, crossing in cross-walk with traffic lights in his favor to continue to safety, that headlights on truck failed to comply with statutory requirements and that plaintiff was free from contributory negligence. Garippa v Wisotsky, 108 N.Y.S.2d 67, 1951 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2469 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1951), aff'd, 280 A.D. 807, 113 N.Y.S.2d 772, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3780 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

Appellate court held that, even assuming plaintiff violated N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 375(2) and 385(3) when he attempted to pull a tree across a public road with a tractor at 5:15 p.m., evidence that a driver who was traveling 55 to 60 miles per hour when she saw what appeared to be a snow drift in the road did not reduce her speed enough to avoid a collision with the tree raised an issue of fact about whether the driver contributed to causing the accident, and the trial court erred by granting the driver's motion for summary judgment. Dumas v Shafer, 4 A.D.3d 720, 772 N.Y.S.2d 411, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2013 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2004).

Where the driver of a tractor-trailer outfit had already dimmed his lights upon seeing a car approaching around a slight curve from the opposite direction, his negligence, if any, in flashing on his lights as a warning when he noted that the other vehicle was on the wrong side or partly on the wrong side of the highway and that a collision between them was imminent and would occur in a matter of a second or two unless immediate action was taken, while it might be considered some possible evidence of negligence, could not be considered a proximate cause of the ensuing collision. Harshberger v Associated Transport, Inc., 282 F.2d 179, 1960 U.S. App. LEXIS 3788 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1960), cert. denied, 364 U.S. 934, 81 S. Ct. 381, 5 L. Ed. 2d 366, 1961 U.S. LEXIS 1894 (U.S. 1961).

9. —Police vehicles

Police officer's use of her white "wiggle-waggle" headlights (which alternate back and forth) in attempt to pull over reckless driver was not unexcused violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 375(3). Martin v Miller, 255 A.D.2d 816, 680 N.Y.S.2d 300, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12927 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

No light, other than white or yellow, may be displayed upon a motor vehicle owned by a town constable so as to be visible from a point directly in front of the vehicle. 1953 Ops St Compt File 200.

Town board may purchase patrol car with blinker light and siren for police duties of special policeman, but special policeman may not use blinker light and siren on privately owned car on police duties. 1953 Ops St Compt File 354.

There is no legal authority for placing a red signal light on the grill of the private automobile of a constable or special deputy. 1964 Ops St Compt #208.

Part-time town policemen in Westchester County may not operate their privately owned vehicles equipped with flasher lights and sirens, but a town board may authorize the use of a detachable "police sign" on privately owned vehicles operated by part-time town policemen. 1967 Ops St Compt File #597.

A town constable may not use a siren or revolving red light on his privately-owned vehicle. 1969 Ops St Compt File #48.

10. —Fire department vehicles

Plaintiff, member volunteer fire department, was not entitled judgment declaring that fire district board of commissioners could not promulgate any regulations prohibiting plaintiff from displaying red flashing light on his personal vehicle while responding to emergencies in discharge of his duties as volunteer emergency medical technician. Nicosia v Shultis, 239 A.D.2d 473, 658 N.Y.S.2d 640, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5359 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. dismissed, in part, app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 1003, 665 N.Y.S.2d 955, 688 N.E.2d 1038, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3678 (N.Y. 1997).

Fire district funds may be used to purchase blue lights for installation on private cars of volunteer firemen. 1955 Ops St Compt File 383.

The provisions in relation to red lights on the private automobiles of the chief and assistant chief engineer of a fire department were not changed in the 1961 recompilation of this law. 1961 Ops St Compt #328.

11. —Ambulances

Emergency medical technician/member of volunteer ambulance service was authorized to have red light affixed to dashboard of his personal vehicle, and thus could not be convicted of violating CLS Veh & Tr § 375(41)(2) although he was not involved in emergency situation at time, as his personal vehicle was "emergency ambulance service vehicle" under CLS Veh & Tr § 115-c, as broadly defined in CLS Pub Health § 3001(2). People v Levy, 188 Misc. 2d 103, 727 N.Y.S.2d 248, 2001 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 167 (N.Y. App. Term 2001).

12. —Civil defense vehicle

Under Vehicle & Traffic Law § 375, subd 41, § 117-a, and § 106-a, individual member of civilian defense was not authorized to have rotating amber lights affixed to bar across top of his privately-owned vehicle. People v Hesselink, 76 Misc. 2d 418, 351 N.Y.S.2d 270, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1504 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1973).

13. —Highway equipment

A road grader plowing snow at night on its wrong side of a highway, down hill, carrying only two small white lights at the top of the cab, each covered with wire mesh, and of a position and appearance to blend with lights along the highway, is not equipped with clearly visible lights as required by this section and § 318 of the Highway Law. Neddo v State, 85 N.Y.S.2d 54, 194 Misc. 379, 1948 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3709 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1948), aff'd, 275 A.D. 492, 90 N.Y.S.2d 650, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3803 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949), aff'd, 275 A.D. 982, 91 N.Y.S.2d 515, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5318 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

The parking of road maintenance equipment at night, partially on the road and shoulder, for the convenience of the highway department, improperly lighted, is negligence on the part of the state. McLane v State, 53 N.Y.S.2d 194, 1945 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1470 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1945).

14. —Driving with dim lights

In view of the limitations contained in this section, subd 3, and conditions at the time of the accident, there was no merit to defendant's claim that plaintiff was negligent as a matter of law in proceeding without headlights of sufficient power to illuminate the road for 200 feet distant. Rutledge v New York, 256 A.D. 515, 10 N.Y.S.2d 417, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4768 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

A defendant-motorist who drove an automobile equipped only with dim lights which threw no beams was found guilty of violating this section, where he operated such vehicle over a poorly lighted street on which the visibility was such that one could see only fifty feet ahead. Nilson v Oppenheimer, 260 A.D. 670, 23 N.Y.S.2d 621, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4687 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940), reh'g denied, 261 A.D. 828, 25 N.Y.S.2d 997, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7645 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941), aff'd, 285 N.Y. 824, 35 N.E.2d 498, 285 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 824, 1941 N.Y. LEXIS 1793 (N.Y. 1941).

A judgment was for the plaintiff where it appeared that plaintiff's testator, while crossing a street, was struck by the defendant's automobile; that defendant had proceeded about three or four hundred feet east of an intersection when he first saw the testator about ten or twelve feet from the front of his car; that he did not sound his horn; that the only lights defendant had on his car were his dim lights and the evidence justified the jury in finding that this section had been violated. Nilson v Oppenheimer, 260 A.D. 670, 23 N.Y.S.2d 621, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4687 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940), reh'g denied, 261 A.D. 828, 25 N.Y.S.2d 997, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7645 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941), aff'd, 285 N.Y. 824, 35 N.E.2d 498, 285 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 824, 1941 N.Y. LEXIS 1793 (N.Y. 1941).

Where defendant's car was traveling with headlamps "dim" when accident in suit occurred and there was varying testimony as to illumination afforded by street lights, all relevant provisions of this section, subd. 3, should have been read, and jury should have been instructed to determine first, what general conditions as to light were, second, what headlamps were required to be used under subd. 3, and then, whether a violation of this section had occurred which had been proximate cause of accident. Hanratty v Bartley, 268 A.D. 512, 51 N.Y.S.2d 878, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3206 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944).

Motorist did not violate CLS Veh & Tr § 375(3) when she flipped her high beams on and off to inform oncoming motorists of presence of police patrol car. People v Lauber, 162 Misc. 2d 19, 617 N.Y.S.2d 419, 1994 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 439 (N.Y. App. Term 1994).

It is not contributory negligence where plaintiff, upon entering a village, lowered his headlight beam and did not see an excavation in the street, which was unmarked, since upon entering the congested part of a village he was required by statute to lower his lights. Smith v Pleasantville, 20 N.Y.S.2d 594, 1940 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1825 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1940).

15. —Rear lights or reflectors

Town justice erred by concluding that a tractor defendant was driving on the date he was issued a simplified traffic information for operating a motor vehicle without rear lights, in violation of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 376, was not a motor vehicle under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 375 or 376. People v Berrus, 1 N.Y.3d 535, 770 N.Y.S.2d 691, 802 N.E.2d 1089, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 3981 (N.Y. 2003).

The failure to have a red light on the rear of a truck trailer is prima facie negligence under this section. Lewis v Rowland, 225 A.D. 25, 232 N.Y.S. 71, 1928 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8732 (N.Y. App. Div. 1928).

The failure of defendant to display a rear light on his motor vehicle one-half hour after sunset justified the finding of an inference of negligence and, therefore, the complaint as to that defendant was improperly dismissed, and a new trial should be granted. Brown v McCullough, 240 A.D. 381, 270 N.Y.S. 37, 1934 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10655 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 265 N.Y. 652, 193 N.E. 429, 265 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 652, 1934 N.Y. LEXIS 1239 (N.Y. 1934).

The state was not liable because of failure to erect reflector signs at approach to curve and underpass on state highway for damages resulting from collision on misty night between approaching automobile and motorist who alleged that he did not see signs erected on side of highway, but did observe a curve ahead beyond which he could not see and that as he neared underpass he stepped on the brakes erroneously believing that underpass might be too narrow to permit passage of two automobiles simultaneously and skidded on the damp roadway into approaching automobile, since proximate cause of accident was skidding and not absence of reflector signs. Vande Walker v State, 253 A.D. 226, 2 N.Y.S.2d 477, 1937 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5129 (N.Y. App. Div. 1937), rev'd, 278 N.Y. 454, 17 N.E.2d 128, 278 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 454, 1938 N.Y. LEXIS 1324 (N.Y. 1938).

Evidence held to sustain judgment for passenger in automobile which collided with rear of truck driven by defendant, on the ground that the truck was not provided with rear lights and reflectors required by law. Weyrauch v Linkletter, 255 A.D. 746, 6 N.Y.S.2d 874, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4986 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938).

A judgment dismissing plaintiff's complaint on the merits was reversed and a new trial ordered in action for injuries suffered where plaintiff was struck by automobile being backed out of a vacant lot as plaintiff was about to board a bus at two A.M., and the jury could have found that if defendants had observed requirements of this section, subd. 2, as to lights, the accident could have been prevented. Kerner v Surface Transp. Corp., 262 A.D. 89, 28 N.Y.S.2d 126, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5296 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

In narcotics prosecution, evidence adduced at suppression hearing indicates that stop of vehicle operated by defendant by police officer at 3:30 A.M. was reasonable, since it was based upon fact that it was being operated with one taillight in violation of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 375 (2) (a) (3) –officer properly ordered defendant to step out of car since defendant's glazed and bloodshot eyes, as well as odor of alcohol, alerted officer to defendant's possible intoxication–while officer administered "alcosensor" test, other officer shined his flashlight on inspection and registration stickers on vehicle's windshield to check validation dates–as he did so, that officer observed, in plain view, on floor of driver's side of vehicle, clear plastic bag, containing white powder, which, based on his training and experience, he believed to be cocaine–officer seized contraband and defendant was placed under arrest–upon returning to vehicle, officer retrieved two additional bags, also containing cocaine, which were also in plain view–decisional law permits seizure of articles which come into officer's plain view from lawfully obtained vantage point, and officer's use of flashlight was not unreasonable intrusion and did not convert proper observation into impermissible search–viewing, with aid of flashlight, of clear plastic bag containing white substance on floor of car by officer trained and experienced in field of narcotics constitutes probable cause to arrest defendant and seize contraband –warrantless search of vehicle, resulting in seizure of two other bags of cocaine, was authorized as search incident to arrest under plain view doctrine and under automobile exception to warrant requirement. People v Ricciardi, 149 A.D.2d 742, 540 N.Y.S.2d 526, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5368 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

In action for wrongful death of plaintiff's decedent, who sustained injuries causing his death when automobile in which he was riding collided with a parked truck, evidence, including testimony that no lights were on parked truck and that accident happened more than half hour before sunrise was sufficient to present question for the jury as to negligence of driver in leaving truck parked on the street unlighted. Van Horn v Messina, 3 A.D.2d 918, 162 N.Y.S.2d 604, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5654 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1957), aff'd, 4 N.Y.2d 884, 174 N.Y.S.2d 466, 150 N.E.2d 769, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1035 (N.Y. 1958).

Defendants' manure spreader, which was being towed on a public highway at night by a farm tractor and was equipped with none of the lights specified in section 376 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law or in 15 NYCRR Part 43, was, as a matter of law, unlawfully upon the highway. Accordingly, in an action by plaintiffs, who struck the unlighted manure spreader from the rear, the trial court's charge that defendants were guilty of negligence as a matter of law was proper, although the court's reason for said instruction was premised upon an erroneous view of sections 375 and 376 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law; the error was only technical and does not warrant a new trial, either as a matter of law or in the interest of justice. Gentile v De Jong, 77 A.D.2d 167, 433 N.Y.S.2d 226, 1980 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13009 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1980), app. denied, 53 N.Y.2d 601, 1981 N.Y. LEXIS 3342 (N.Y. 1981).

Defendant in personal injury action was not entitled to summary judgment where fact issues existed as to whether she violated CLS Veh & Tr § 375(2)(a)(1) and (3) by failing to display lighted tail lights on vehicle she was attempting to park; unexcused violation of statute constitutes prima facie evidence of negligence and it is for jury to determine whether violation was proximate cause of accident. Tepoz v Sosa, 241 A.D.2d 449, 663 N.Y.S.2d 831, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7282 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

Requirement of subd 2(a) of above statute that motor vehicle on public highway must display lighted lamp on rear thereof may be found to be violated without proof of knowledge on part of violator, since such traffic infraction is only malum prohibitum and hence requires no proof of knowledge of violation in order to complete offense. People v Attaldo, 44 Misc. 2d 772, 255 N.Y.S.2d 188, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1133 (N.Y. County Ct. 1964).

Offense of operating vehicle on highway without displaying lighted lamp on rear is malum prohibitum and not malum in se, and conviction does not require proof of knowledge on the part of the violator. People v Attaldo, 44 Misc. 2d 772, 255 N.Y.S.2d 188, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1133 (N.Y. County Ct. 1964).

Order granting suppression motion was error because the trial court's sua sponte experiment to determine that the deputy did not see white light coming from defendant's tail light as he testified and to rule that the deputy's traffic stop of defendant for not having a red tail light as required by N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 375(2)(a)(3) was improper; N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 375 required a tail light to display only red light. Considering the evidence and ignoring the trial court's improper experiment, the deputy lawfully stopped defendant's vehicle, requiring denial of the suppression motion on that basis. People v Allen, 90 A.D.3d 1082, 933 N.Y.S.2d 756, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8532 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2011).

16. Brakes

In automobile negligence action, jury's finding that defendant, who stated that collision was caused by failure of brakes on his automobile, exercised reasonable care sufficient to excuse his violation of statute requiring that every motor vehicle be provided with adequate brakes in good working order and sufficient to control vehicle at all times, was against weight of evidence, in absence of any evidence as to what caused brakes' failure or what defect in brakes was. Alongi v Beuter, 286 A.D. 990, 144 N.Y.S.2d 756, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4857 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

Plaintiff was employed as truck driver to pick up bulk milk at farms and haul it to defendant's facilities; while making "hairpin" turn, with load of 45,000 pounds of milk, tractor trailer began to jackknife and rolled over, causing plaintiff injury–although it was possible to find brakes on vehicle were not adequate under Vehicle and Traffic Law § 375, and defendant was notified of this condition before plaintiff's accident and failed to correct it, this finding would lead only to inference of negligence; plaintiff must also show by fair preponderance of credible evidence that such negligence, if found, was proximate cause of his accident; plaintiff admitted truck had no baffles to prevent load shifts, shifting occurs in trailers when not fully loaded, shifting was especially common on sharp turns, he was traveling at 60 miles per hour 500 feet before exit and left 183-foot skid mark, and brake locking problem he had previously experienced caused no incident for two months he continued to drive after he discovered it–in view of these admissions, plaintiff did not sustain burden imposed upon him in regard to issue of proximate cause; Supreme Court, therefore, correctly dismissed plaintiff's case at close of his proof. Peck v Tuscan Dairy Farms, Inc., 169 A.D.2d 1027, 565 N.Y.S.2d 307, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 827 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1991).

In an action for damages sustained by plaintiff, a passenger in a parked car, when the foot brake on defendant's car failed as he was attempting to park it behind the parked vehicle and defendant was unable to stop the car with the hand brake, negligence of defendant in operating without adequate brakes was a question for the jury. Wheeler v Rabine, 15 A.D.2d 407, 224 N.Y.S.2d 483, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11373 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

With respect to actions for property damages sustained to plaintiffs' automobiles, when struck by defendant's truck due to failure of its brakes while descending a hill with a heavy load, testimony of defendant's driver that the brakes had previously been working all right did not ipso facto absolve defendant-owner from negligence, and, in the absence of evidence as to previous inspection of the brakes or cause of their failure, applicability of § 1 of this section, requiring brakes to be in working order, was a question of fact for the trial judge to determine. Manny v Casale, 15 A.D.2d 857, 224 N.Y.S.2d 291, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11434 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Under the requirement of subd 1 of above statute that every motor vehicle shall be provided with adequate brakes, if person drives such vehicle with actual notice of defective brakes, his negligence is active and bars his recovery for any resulting accident. Alfano v Amchir, 23 A.D.2d 659, 257 N.Y.S.2d 2, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4765 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1965).

In action for personal injuries against used car dealer, allegedly caused by failure of brakes on car recently purchased, it was error to direct verdict for defendant at close of plaintiff's evidence where there were sufficient questions of fact raised to warrant submission of the issue of liability to the jury in view of this section and § 417 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law. Gluck v Royal Motors, Inc., 24 A.D.2d 442, 260 N.Y.S.2d 882, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3740 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1965).

A prosecution for an inadequate emergency brake is proper, since an emergency brake is not for parking purposes only. People v Cicardo, 250 N.Y.S. 477, 140 Misc. 332, 1931 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1350 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1931).

A violation of provision of Vehicle and Traffic Law regulating braking equipment of motor vehicles is a misdemeanor and therefore a crime. People v Pulizzi, 106 N.Y.S.2d 680, 199 Misc. 405, 1950 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2557 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1950).

The meaning and implication of New York City traffic regulations making it unlawful to operate a motor vehicle whose brakes do not comply with standards established by regulation are at least as malum prohibitum as subdivision of Vehicle and Traffic Law regulating braking equipment of motor vehicles and mere inadequacy of brakes makes out a prima facie case of violation of regulation. People v Pulizzi, 106 N.Y.S.2d 680, 199 Misc. 405, 1950 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2557 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1950).

In a motion to dismiss an indictment charging the defendant with criminally negligent homicide and reckless endangerment of life in the first and second degrees, arising out of an accident wherein the defendant passed a stopped school bus and struck the victim disembarking from the bus, the prior conviction of the defendant, based upon his guilty pleas, of driving without adequate brakes and passing a stopped school bus, a misdemeanor and traffic violation respectively, did not bar prosecution under the indictment. People v Taylor, 66 Misc. 2d 1058, 322 N.Y.S.2d 818, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1530 (N.Y. County Ct. 1971).

17. —Notice of defect

Subdivision 1 does not impose absolute liability for violation of its provisions regardless of negligence, and where the owner of the automobile had no previous knowledge that his brakes were inadequate or not in working order or insufficient to control the vehicle the question of the defendant's negligence should be submitted to the jury. Schaeffer v Caldwell, 273 A.D. 263, 78 N.Y.S.2d 652, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4581 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

Under requirement of subd 1 of above statute that every motor vehicle shall be provided with adequate brakes, liability of owner thereof for noncompliance is not absolute; he is only required to take reasonable steps to inspect brakes and to ascertain their safety. He is not in class of supplier of dangerous instrumentality who has a duty to inspect. And although it was held on facts before court that he was charged with constructive notice of the defect in his brakes, such owner was not in pari delicto with creator of such defect; as between them, the owner may be found passively negligent and such creator actively negligent. Alfano v Amchir, 23 A.D.2d 659, 257 N.Y.S.2d 2, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4765 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1965).

Owner of automobile was not in class of supplier of dangerous instrumentality with duty to inspect but owner was charged with constructive notice of defect in brakes. Alfano v Amchir, 23 A.D.2d 659, 257 N.Y.S.2d 2, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4765 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1965).

In action by truck driver for injuries sustained in accident which occurred when brakes locked on trailer which contained less than full load of milk while driver exited highway via hairpin turn, court properly dismissed case at close of driver's proof, notwithstanding that evidence was sufficient to establish that brakes were not adequate under CLS Veh & Tr § 375 and that defendant trailer owner was notified of condition and failed to correct it, where driver admitted that trailer had no baffles to prevent shifting of load and that shifting was common on sharp turns, that he was speeding before he entered turn and left 183-foot skid mark, and that he was aware of brake problem but continued to drive with trailer. Peck v Tuscan Dairy Farms, Inc., 169 A.D.2d 1027, 565 N.Y.S.2d 307, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 827 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1991).

A municipality is liable for damage caused by its fire truck, responding to a fire alarm, where the truck failed to stop due to inadequate brakes since the brakes were of an exposed type, so that when wet they would not take hold, thus constituting a violation of subd. 1 of this section. Hardin v Schenectady, 278 N.Y.S. 28, 154 Misc. 411, 1935 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1018 (N.Y. County Ct. 1935).

A judgment of conviction of a defendant for a violation of this section was reversed, where the fair inference from the uncontroverted proof is that the defendant had provided his automobile with adequate brakes; that on the day in question his automobile was so equipped and that he had no knowledge of any defect in the brakes; and that, while on the road in a sparsely settled location, an accident occurred to a brake rod on one of the wheels which, in the exercise of reasonable care, could not have been foreseen; and that, while proceeding to the nearest place where he could repair the broken rod or have it repaired, he was arrested. People v De Witt, 25 N.Y.S.2d 236, 175 Misc. 481, 1940 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2573 (N.Y. County Ct. 1940).

Subdivision of Vehicle and Traffic Law regulating braking equipment of motor vehicles does not impose absolute liability for violation of its provisions regardless of negligence and whether exercise of reasonable care will excuse observance of statute is a question for jury. People v Pulizzi, 106 N.Y.S.2d 680, 199 Misc. 405, 1950 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2557 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1950).

The provision of subdivision 1 requiring every motor vehicle, operated or driven upon the public highway, to be provided with adequate brakes and steering mechanism in good working order, does not impose absolute liability for violation of same regardless of negligence, since it is for the jury to determine whether the exercise of reasonable care would excuse observance of the statute. Where the defendant's papers showed what caused the failure and what the defects were in the brakes on his vehicle but that they had no prior knowledge of same, a triable issue of fact was raised. Lepke v Sclafani & Sons, Inc., 20 Misc. 2d 50, 192 N.Y.S.2d 58, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3040 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1959).

In prosecution for failing to maintain sufficient brakes in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 375(1), based on inspection of defendant's car after accident involving fatality, which revealed noncompliance with brake efficiency standards, defendant's motion to dismiss would be granted due to People's failure to make prima facie showing that defendant had any knowledge or reason to believe brakes were defective where defendant had experienced no problems with brakes, car had been inspected 8 months before accident and had proper inspection sticker affixed to windshield, and defendant's husband was former auto mechanic who himself inspected brakes and found them to be adequate. People v Troiano, 146 Misc. 2d 770, 552 N.Y.S.2d 541, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 90 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1990).

After defendant's car was involved in a two-car accident which resulted in the death of the driver of the other vehicle, defendant's vehicle was impounded and an inspection of the vehicle revealed that one of the wheels did not meet the requirements promulgated by the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles prescribing standards of brake efficiency. Accordingly, defendant was charged with a violation of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 375 (1), insufficient brakes. Defendant had not experienced any problems with the braking system of the car, the car had been inspected some eight months before the accident and had a proper inspection sticker affixed to the windshield, and defendant's husband, who had been employed as an automobile mechanic, found the subject brake lining to be adequate. Defendant's motion for a trial order of dismissal due to the People's failure to make a prima facie showing that defendant had any knowledge or reason to believe that the brakes were defective is granted. Vehicle and Traffic Law § 375 provides that every motor vehicle operated on the highways of the State shall be provided with adequate brakes, and that any violation shall constitute a misdemeanor. The statute is not one of strict liability, and proof of inadequate brakes does not create a presumption of knowledge or reasonable grounds to believe that such a defect existed. People v Troiano, 146 Misc. 2d 770, 552 N.Y.S.2d 541, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 90 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1990).

18. Steering

To be guilty of a violation of this section one must either know that the steering apparatus is in a defective condition, or it must be such a defect that in the exercise of due care one should have discovered the defect. People v Foster, 117 N.Y.S.2d 641, 204 Misc. 507, 1952 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2056 (N.Y. County Ct. 1952).

Notwithstanding absence of any specific reference to scienter in Vehicle and Traffic Law section relating to operation of motor vehicle with defective steering mechanism, one must either know that his steering apparatus is in defective condition, or it must be such defect that in exercise of due care he would have discovered defect, in order to be guilty of violation of statute. People v Foster, 117 N.Y.S.2d 641, 204 Misc. 507, 1952 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2056 (N.Y. County Ct. 1952).

19. Muffler

Stop of vehicle in which defendant was passenger was not mere pretext to improperly stop vehicle for undisclosed purpose where (1) 2 officers stopped vehicle to issue driver ticket for having inadequate muffler, (2) while one officer was speaking to driver, second officer saw defendant throw small container out of window, and (3) second officer retrieved container, which contained cocaine, and placed defendant under arrest. People v Thomas, 210 A.D.2d 269, 619 N.Y.S.2d 733, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12318 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994), app. denied, 84 N.Y.2d 1039, 623 N.Y.S.2d 196, 647 N.E.2d 467, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 646 (N.Y. 1995).

Police officer reasonably initiated a traffic stop of defendant's vehicle based upon the existence of probable cause because the officer observed the exhaust system on defendant's vehicle was excessively loud, N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 375(31), and defendant was operating the vehicle without wearing a seatbelt, N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1229-c(3). People v Issac, 107 A.D.3d 1055, 968 N.Y.S.2d 631, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3974 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2013).

Defendant's statement to the police and a loaded firearm, seized from the passenger of defendant's vehicle, were not subject to suppression because the police lawfully stopped defendant's vehicle for having an inadequate muffler; defendant lacked standing to challenge the search of the passenger because defendant was not the person against whom the search was directed. People v Gibson, 137 A.D.3d 1657, 27 N.Y.S.3d 772, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2171 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 27 N.Y.3d 1151, 62 N.E.3d 125, 39 N.Y.S.3d 385, 2016 N.Y. LEXIS 2573 (N.Y. 2016).

The use of any muffler which emits offensive noise constitutes a violation of this section since it is unnecessary and remote to the efficient and proper operation of the vehicle. People v James, 6 Misc. 2d 441, 162 N.Y.S.2d 927, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3017 (N.Y. City Ct. 1957).

Subdivision 1 of this section which provides that motor vehicles "shall have a suitable muffler or device to prevent unnecessary noise from exhaust gases" is unconstitutional for indefiniteness. People v Zanchelli, 8 Misc. 2d 1069, 169 N.Y.S.2d 197, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1968 (N.Y. County Ct. 1957).

The statute providing that every such motor vehicle shall have a suitable muffler or device to prevent unnecessary noise from exhaust gases is invalid as denying due process of law on the ground that it does not set up a sufficiently definite standard and is not sufficiently explicit to inform those who may become subjected to its penalty as to what conduct on their part will render them liable. People v Zanchelli, 8 Misc. 2d 1069, 169 N.Y.S.2d 197, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1968 (N.Y. County Ct. 1957).

To establish violation of motorcycle equipment statute providing, inter alia, that motorcycles shall have a suitable muffler or device to prevent unnecessary noise, the People must show either a decibel rating above that allowed by law under another statute or that the vehicle in question made noise in excess of what was usual for vehicles of its class, and mere showing that defendant's vehicle made noise was insufficient. People v Meyer, 63 Misc. 2d 580, 313 N.Y.S.2d 93, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1468 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1970).

A judgment was for the plaintiff where it appeared that plaintiff's testator, while crossing a street, was struck by the defendant's automobile; that defendant had proceeded about three or four hundred feet east of an intersection when he first saw the testator about ten or twelve feet from the front of his car; that he did not sound his horn; that the only lights defendant had on his car were his dim lights and the evidence justified the jury in finding that this section had been violated. Nilson v Oppenheimer, 260 A.D. 670, 23 N.Y.S.2d 621, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4687 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940), reh'g denied, 261 A.D. 828, 25 N.Y.S.2d 997, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7645 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941), aff'd, 285 N.Y. 824, 35 N.E.2d 498, 285 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 824, 1941 N.Y. LEXIS 1793 (N.Y. 1941).

A statutory prohibition against sounding of horns on vehicles except as necessary to warn "a person or animal of danger," cannot be made the basis for imposing liability for alleged negligence in unnecessarily sounding a horn where injury results to the driver of another car who stops and gets out into the traffic to investigate why the horn is being sounded and is truck by a totally different vehicle. O'Brien v Falmore Cab Corp., 18 A.D.2d 1078, 239 N.Y.S.2d 380, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4059 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1963), aff'd, 15 N.Y.2d 648, 255 N.Y.S.2d 868, 204 N.E.2d 200, 1964 N.Y. LEXIS 794 (N.Y. 1964).

Car stop was valid because an officer observed defendant use his horn to ask the police vehicle or a double parked vehicle to move, providing reasonable suspicion that defendant had used his horn in the absence of an emergency situation, in a violation of this provision. People v Velazquez, 64 Misc. 3d 575, 103 N.Y.S.3d 801, 2019 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2887 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2019).

20.5. —Obstruction of view.

Trial court properly denied defendant's motion to suppress certain physical evidence obtained during a traffic stop because the suppression court's credibility finding is supported by the record, and a police officer's stop of a vehicle in which defendant was a passenger was not improper where the office had reasonable cause to believe that a sandal was hung from the rearview mirror in such a manner as to obstruct or interfere with the view of the operator through the windshield in violation of the Vehicle and Traffic Law. 131 A.D.3d 1258, 16 N.Y.S.3d 848, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6969.

21. Mirror

In an action resulting from a bus-bicycle collision, the jury properly concluded that the transit authority was negligent in not equipping the bus with a right side mirror pursuant to Veh & Tr Law § 375(10)(a), which required that "every motor vehicle . . . be equipped with a mirror . . . [giving] a clear and full view . . . behind such vehicle," notwithstanding that Veh & Tr Law § 375(10)(b), which required right side mirrors on busses manufactured or assembled after July 1, 1970, was inapplicable to the pre-1970 bus involved in the case. Flynn v Manhattan & Bronx Surface Transit Operating Authority, 61 N.Y.2d 769, 473 N.Y.S.2d 154, 461 N.E.2d 291, 1984 N.Y. LEXIS 4055 (N.Y. 1984).

22. Safety glass

Police had reasonable basis on which to follow and attempt to detain defendant after observing that he was operating vehicle with damaged windshield. People v Cassidy, 252 A.D.2d 561, 675 N.Y.S.2d 890, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8380 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 923, 680 N.Y.S.2d 465, 703 N.E.2d 277, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 3775 (N.Y. 1998).

Defendant was not entitled to suppress evidence seized from his vehicle because a police officer observed that defendant's vehicle had a cracked windshield and an object hanging from the rearview mirror, and, as such, the officer properly stopped defendant's vehicle upon observing violations of this statute. People v Parson, 122 A.D.3d 1441, 997 N.Y.S.2d 198, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8139 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2014), aff'd, 27 N.Y.3d 1107,

In an action premised upon injuries allegedly sustained by plaintiff when she was struck by shattered glass from a window of a bus on which she was riding, a motion by defendant, New York City Transit Authority, for summary judgment would be denied, where a question of fact was presented as to whether the window glass of the bus in question conformed to safety standards on the date of the incident; it has been held that a failure to comply with equipment and safety standards as provided in the Vehicle and Traffic Law constitutes negligence. Lewis v New York City Transit Authority, 123 Misc. 2d 293, 473 N.Y.S.2d 704, 1984 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2995 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1984).

23. Flares

In an action to recover for personal injuries and for damages to a truck, the plaintiff, driving motor truck south on state highway, more than one-half hour after sunset, ran into defendant's trailer parked on westerly lane, without lights or flares, judgment in favor of plaintiff; trial justice instructed jury as to duties of each party under various provisions in this section and former §§ 56 and 58 and submitted to them question as to defendant's negligence and plaintiff's freedom from contributory negligence. Lonstein v Onondaga Freight Corp., 290 N.Y. 735, 49 N.E.2d 1005, 290 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 735, 1943 N.Y. LEXIS 1347 (N.Y. 1943).

Where a truck was parked under a bridge light, but no flares were lighted it was error to charge that this section, subd. 17, had no application and that there was no obligation to use flares; it was for the jury to determine whether defendant should have placed lighted flares as a warning. Stieglitz v Stewart, 252 A.D. 378, 300 N.Y.S. 203, 1937 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5670 (N.Y. App. Div. 1937).

With respect to damage sustained when a tractor-trailer driven by plaintiff ran into the rear end of another tractor-trailer, driven by defendant, which has been left parked partly on the highway when the driver experienced motor trouble and left the vehicle to go in search of help with the trailer lights left on but without putting out flares as required by subd. 17 of this section, contributory negligence of plaintiff in failing to observe the other vehicle in time to avoid a collision was a question for the jury. Neish v Walsh, 15 A.D.2d 716, 223 N.Y.S.2d 576, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11805 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Evidence presented jury question as to whether plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence in failing to observe defendant's tractor-trailer unit which was stopped in the nighttime with a portion of the unit on paved portion of highway, without flares having been placed. Neish v Walsh, 15 A.D.2d 716, 223 N.Y.S.2d 576, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11805 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Trial court erred in failing to charge jury that fact defendant stopped his vehicle on a highway without putting out flares or other emergency devices in controvention of § 375, was negligence per se. McConnell v Nabozny, 110 A.D.2d 1060, 489 N.Y.S.2d 24, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 48938 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1985).

24. Vehicles stopped on or near highway

In an action to recover for personal injuries and for damages to a truck, the plaintiff, driving motor truck south on state highway, more than one-half hour after sunset, ran into defendant's trailer parked on westerly lane, without lights or flares, judgment in favor of plaintiff; trial justice instructed jury as to duties of each party under various provisions in this section and former §§ 56 and 58 and submitted to them question as to defendant's negligence and plaintiff's freedom from contributory negligence. Lonstein v Onondaga Freight Corp., 290 N.Y. 735, 49 N.E.2d 1005, 290 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 735, 1943 N.Y. LEXIS 1347 (N.Y. 1943).

This section was applicable where an accident took place more than a half an hour before sunrise and the defendant's truck was parked on a highway with no lights on it. Van Horn v Messina, 3 A.D.2d 918, 162 N.Y.S.2d 604, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5654 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1957), aff'd, 4 N.Y.2d 884, 174 N.Y.S.2d 466, 150 N.E.2d 769, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1035 (N.Y. 1958).

With respect to damage sustained when a tractor-trailer driven by plaintiff ran into the rear end of another tractor-trailer, driven by defendant, which had been left parked partly on the highway when the driver experienced motor trouble and left the vehicle to go in search of help with the trailer lights left on but without putting out flares as required by subd. 17 of this section, contributory negligence of plaintiff in failing to observe the other vehicle in time to avoid a collision was a question for the jury. Neish v Walsh, 15 A.D.2d 716, 223 N.Y.S.2d 576, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11805 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Trial court erred in failing to charge jury that fact defendant stopped his vehicle on highway without putting out flares or other emergency devices in controvention of § 375 was negligence per se. McConnell v Nabozny, 110 A.D.2d 1060, 489 N.Y.S.2d 24, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 48938 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1985).

Jury verdict finding no negligence by town bus driver was against weight of evidence in action which arose when plaintiff was struck by automobile while assisting bus driver in removing deer carcasses from highway where it was uncontradicted that bus driver failed to place triangle reflectors to front and rear of stopped school bus, which plainly violated CLS Veh & Tr § 375(17) and constituted negligence in and of itself; further, although court correctly charged that statutory violation constituted negligence in its general instructions to jury at close of proof, it erroneously told jury, in response to subsequent question, that it was merely "evidence of negligence." Goode v Meyn, 165 A.D.2d 436, 568 N.Y.S.2d 472, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4222 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1991).

Defendants' conduct could not be deemed proximate cause of rear-end collision, even if their vehicle were illegally stopped on shoulder without any warning lights, where plaintiffs' vehicle was travelling, in daylight, in left westbound lane of interstate at speed of 70 to 80 miles per hour, and it abruptly changed to right lane and then onto shoulder, where it smashed into right rear of defendant's trailer. Lectora v Gundrum, 225 A.D.2d 738, 640 N.Y.S.2d 202, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3139 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 807, 647 N.Y.S.2d 164, 670 N.E.2d 448, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 1605 (N.Y. 1996).

The parking of road maintenance equipment at night, partially on the road and shoulder, for the convenience of the highway department, improperly lighted, is negligence on the part of the state. McLane v State, 53 N.Y.S.2d 194, 1945 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1470 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1945).

Where truck was left standing diagonally in a street in violation of former § 88 and without lights in violation of this section responsibility for foreseeing accidents which might be claimed of driver might also be claimed of bystander who went into street to look at injuries to truck and so he has no action against truck owner for his injuries arising from such accident. Levine v Shell Eastern Petroleum Products, Inc., 73 F.2d 292, 1934 U.S. App. LEXIS 2673 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1934), cert. denied, 294 U.S. 719, 55 S. Ct. 545, 79 L. Ed. 1251, 1935 U.S. LEXIS 172 (U.S. 1935).

25. Passing stopped school bus

There is no requirement that school buses must display flashing red lights when receiving or discharging pupils on a private road owned and maintained by a school district; any extension of the law in such regard is properly a matter for the legislature. Aridas v Caserta, 53 A.D.2d 853, 385 N.Y.S.2d 586, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13682 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1976), aff'd in part, 41 N.Y.2d 1059, 396 N.Y.S.2d 170, 364 N.E.2d 835, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 2059 (N.Y. 1977).

In prosecution for violation of Vehicle and Traffic Law provision pertaining to overtaking and passing school bus having a visual signal as specified elsewhere in the Vehicle and Traffic Law, to sustain a conviction the people need only to prove substantial, not strict, compliance with the other Vehicle and Traffic Law provision pertaining to the specifications for such signal. People v Geiselmann, 26 Misc. 2d 34, 204 N.Y.S.2d 272, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2551 (N.Y. County Ct. 1960).

Where a vehicle is marked and equipped as required for school buses under subd. 20 of this section, in a prosecution for illegally passing such a bus it is not necessary to prove anything further in order to establish that the vehicle passed was a school bus. People v Praete, 32 Misc. 2d 595, 228 N.Y.S.2d 474, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3829 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1962).

Conviction of a motorist for passing a parked school bus cannot stand where the prosecution fails to prove that a flashing red signal lamp was affixed to the rear of the bus no more than six inches below its top. People v Cuskley, 44 Misc. 2d 436, 254 N.Y.S.2d 187, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1386 (N.Y. App. Term 1964).

In a motion to dismiss an indictment charging the defendant with criminally negligent homicide and reckless endangerment of life in the first and second degrees, arising out of an accident wherein the defendant passed a stopped school bus and struck the victim disembarking from the bus, the prior conviction of the defendant, based upon his guilty pleas, of driving without adequate brakes and passing a stopped school bus, a misdemeanor and traffic violation respectively, did not bar prosecution under the indictment. People v Taylor, 66 Misc. 2d 1058, 322 N.Y.S.2d 818, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1530 (N.Y. County Ct. 1971).

Defendant was improperly convicted of failing to stop for a school bus since there was no proof that the school bus was in compliance with N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 375(20); the bus could transport less than six children, and there was only one "SCHOOL BUS" sign, and its lettering and its background (white) failed to conform to the requirements of § 375(20). People v D'Agostino, 852 N.Y.S.2d 596, 18 Misc. 3d 92, 2007 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 8417 (N.Y. App. Term 2007).

In a prosecution of a motorist for passing a stopped school bus the burden of establishing that the motorist passed the school bus and that it displayed the proper signal lights was upon the people. People v Belfer, 141 N.Y.S.2d 124, 1955 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2480 (N.Y. County Ct. 1955).

In prosecution of motorist for failing to stop for school bus unloading passengers, evidence was insufficient to establish that vehicle was such as complied with requirements of statute for school buses. People v Belfer, 141 N.Y.S.2d 124, 1955 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2480 (N.Y. County Ct. 1955).

In prosecution under statute prohibiting motorist from passing school bus while it is receiving or discharging passengers, burden of establishing that motorist passed school bus which displayed proper signal lights as required by statute is upon state. People v Belfer, 141 N.Y.S.2d 124, 1955 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2480 (N.Y. County Ct. 1955).

Defective tire or lack of inspection certificate would not give rise to necessary suspicion for police officer, who has no probable cause to make arrest for driving while intoxicated, to demand that motorist give him a breath sample under statute authorizing officer to demand sample of breath after violation of any provision of the Vehicle and Traffic Law. People v Graser, 90 Misc. 2d 219, 393 N.Y.S.2d 1009, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2023 (N.Y. Town Ct. 1977).

26. Traffic stops

A criminal negligence conviction arising out of the negligent operation of an automobile should be reversed where prosecutor in opening statement discussed defendant's consumption of alcoholic beverages on night of accident but introduced no evidence of intoxication and successfully opposed motion by defense for disclosure of results of chemical blood tests. Instructions to jury adequately defined criminal negligence but became confused by further charges of statutory violations and common law negligence and may have led jury to believe that proof of ordinary negligence was sufficient. People v Lowe, 285 A.D. 207, 136 N.Y.S.2d 454, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5477 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

Vehicle in which defendant was passenger was lawfully stopped for having broken headlight in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 375(2)(a)(1), and thus weapon and bag of cocaine found in plain view on floor of vehicle were properly ruled admissible at trial. People v Lopez, 154 A.D.2d 715, 546 N.Y.S.2d 690, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13748 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Police officer had probable cause to make a stop of defendant's vehicle because while it was argued that the officer knew that defendant was exempt under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 250(1) from the requirements of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 375(12-a)(b)(4) regarding window tinting based on the vehicle's Georgia plates, the officer did not know whether defendant was the vehicle owner, whether the vehicle was properly registered in Georgia, or whether the light transmittance complied with Georgia law and the rear window of defendant's vehicle appeared to transmit less than 70% light as required under § 375(12-a)(b)(4). People v Estrella, 48 A.D.3d 1283, 851 N.Y.S.2d 793, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1141 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), aff'd, 10 N.Y.3d 945, 862 N.Y.S.2d 857, 893 N.E.2d 134, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 1926 (N.Y. 2008), cert. denied, 555 U.S. 1032, 129 S. Ct. 608, 172 L. Ed. 2d 457, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 8409 (U.S. 2008).

State trooper was justified in stopping defendant's vehicle for driving in the early morning hours and having his headlights on high beam while approaching the trooper's marked vehicle as such conduct was a violation of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 375(2)(b); thus, evidence of defendant's blood alcohol content was properly not suppressed in his prosecution for driving while intoxicated. People v Rorris, 52 A.D.3d 869, 859 N.Y.S.2d 272, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4824 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 11 N.Y.3d 741, 864 N.Y.S.2d 399, 894 N.E.2d 663, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 3188 (N.Y. 2008).

Court properly refused to suppress tangible evidence obtained from defendant by police officers following the stop of the car in which he was the back seat passenger. Officers were authorized to stop the car under New York traffic law and the police conduct was justified from inception to every subsequent stage of the encounter. People v Booth, 158 A.D.3d 1253, 70 N.Y.S.3d 704, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 970 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 31 N.Y.3d 1078, 103 N.E.3d 1247, 79 N.Y.S.3d 100, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 1809 (N.Y. 2018).

Trial court did not err in refusing to suppress the handgun seized from a vehicle being driven by defendant following a traffic stop. The stop was justified because the officer's testimony established that he observed an excessively tinted window and that he measured the tint after the stop, thereby confirming that it was excessive, and the police were permitted to seize the handgun because it was observed in plain view on the floor behind the driver's seat of the vehicle. People v Swift, 185 A.D.3d 1442, 128 N.Y.S.3d 132, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4178 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2020), app. denied, 2020 N.Y. LEXIS 3237 (N.Y. Dec. 8, 2020).

Denial of defendant's motion to suppress the baton recovered from the vehicle and his statements to the officer was proper because the record supported the supreme court's finding that the stop of the vehicle that he was driving was based upon the officer's observation of the vehicle driving at night with a defective headlight. And, based on the observation, the officer had probable cause to believe that a traffic violation occurred so as to permit a stop of his vehicle. People v Garcia, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7356 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2020).

County court did not err in denying defendant's motion to suppress under the Fourth Amendment and N.Y. Const. art. I, § 12 because traffic stop was lawful as officer had probable cause to believe that defendant committed a traffic violation based on officer's observation that rear license plate of defendant's vehicle was inadequately lit as its numerals did not illuminate in the dark and that defendant was driving without a seatbelt. People v Blandford, 2021 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 85 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2021).

Where motorist is stopped for defective tire or for no inspection certificate and is arrested, search of vehicle or defendant or demand for breath sample may not be considered search and seizure incident to lawful arrest unless there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that officer is in danger or probable cause for believing that motorist is guilty of crime rather than simple traffic infraction. People v Graser, 90 Misc. 2d 219, 393 N.Y.S.2d 1009, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2023 (N.Y. Town Ct. 1977).

Arrestee's false arrest, false imprisonment, and malicious prosecution suit was dismissed because troopers lawfully stopped vehicle being driven by the arrestee for a violation of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 375(2)(a)(4) and did not inordinately prolong detention, during which drugs were discovered on the arrestee's person and in the vehicle, leading to the arrest and criminal charges. Anderson v State of New York, 901 N.Y.S.2d 500, 28 Misc. 3d 336, 2010 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 963 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 2010).

Police officer had probable cause to stop defendant's vehicle because the officer articulated credible facts, namely that one taillight out of four on defendant's vehicle was not operating, establishing reasonable cause to believe that defendant violated this statute. People v Abrucci-Kohan, 52 Misc. 3d 919, 37 N.Y.S.3d 816, 2016 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 949 (N.Y. J. Ct. 2016).

Defendant's motion to suppress all evidence obtained by police after stop of defendant's motor vehicle was granted because police officer's mistaken belief of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 375(2)(a)(3) was not objectively reasonable, and police lacked probable cause for the stop as there was no evidence that defendant committed any other traffic offense; testimony provided during hearing illustrated that officer based the stop on her belief that missing tail light constituted an equipment violation. People v Paniccia, 61 Misc. 3d 397, 82 N.Y.S.3d 859, 2018 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3629 (N.Y. City Ct. 2018).

Defendant's motion to suppress observational evidence, chemical test evidence, videotape evidence and statement evidence was granted because the stop of defendant's car was unlawful; the sole predicate for the traffic stop was police officer's observation of a travelling tinted vehicle, which to police officer was a violation of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 375 (12-a)(b)(1)-(3), however, the People failed to develop any testimony as to degree to which defendant's car windows were tinted. People v Anonymous, 60 Misc. 3d 405, 77 N.Y.S.3d 268, 2018 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1894 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2018).

Arrestee's federal constitutional rights were not violated when police officer stopped and arrested him under CLS Veh & Tr § 155 and CLS CPL § 140.10(1)(a) after observing him driving with excessively tinted windows in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 375, where he did not produce evidence of driver's license when asked, and search of "grab area" turned up nightstick which he was unable to prove he lawfully possessed; thus, 42 USCS § 1983 cause of action was properly dismissed. Woods v Candela, 921 F. Supp. 1140, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4484 (S.D.N.Y.), aff'd, 104 F.3d 355, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 37989 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1996).

Arrestee's federal civil rights challenge to his arrest and conviction must fail, because trooper was authorized to stop him for excessively tinted windows in violation of CLS Veh & Tr Law § 375 12-a[b], was authorized to arrest him under CLS Veh & Tr Law § 155 and CPL § 140.10(1)(a), and was authorized to search grab area around arrestee which led to confiscation of nightstick. Woods v Candela, 921 F. Supp. 1140, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4484 (S.D.N.Y.), aff'd, 104 F.3d 355, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 37989 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1996).

27. Miscellaneous

Trailers and semitrailers are "vehicles" within Vehicle and Traffic Law, but not "motor vehicles" within section thereof declaring motor vehicle owner liable for death or injuries resulting from negligent operation thereof by any person legally using it with owner's express or implied permission, especially since such law as whole clearly shows Legislature's purpose and intent to classify motor vehicles, trailers and other vehicles separately. Hennessy v Walker, 279 N.Y. 94, 17 N.E.2d 782, 279 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 94, 1938 N.Y. LEXIS 802 (N.Y. 1938).

Where tractor and trailer equipment, in approaching a main intersection in a village, skidded onto a sidewalk and fire broke out in the tractor destroying plaintiff's adjacent building, in an action to recover for resulting damages, the judgment affirmed; the testimony that the condition of the road was the cause of the accident, judgment entered on verdict for defendant affirmed by Appellate Division and contentions of appellant based on alleged errors in the admission of evidence and in the charge to the jury. Saroodis v Liberty Motor Freight Lines, Inc., 290 N.Y. 804, 50 N.E.2d 231, 290 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 804, 1943 N.Y. LEXIS 1404 (N.Y. 1943).

In action by bus driver who was hit by school bus being operated in reverse in school bus parking yard, verdict was properly directed in favor of defendant bus manufacturer at close of plaintiff's case with respect to claim that bus was defectively designed because it did not incorporate, as standard equipment, optional back-up alarm that would automatically sound when driver shifted it into reverse gear, where plaintiff's employer, having owned and operated school buses for decades and being aware that bus driver has blind spot when bus is operated in reverse, was highly knowledgeable consumer in better position than manufacturer to make risk-utility assessment, and it knew that back-up alarm was available but chose not to purchase it. Scarangella v Thomas Built Buses, Inc., 93 N.Y.2d 655, 695 N.Y.S.2d 520, 717 N.E.2d 679, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1432 (N.Y. 1999).

In a personal injury action, it was reversible error for the trial court to charge the jury that a "Go-cart" was not a motor vehicle within the meaning of the Vehicle and Traffic Law and that the equipment requirements of § 375 of that law does not apply thereto under evidence that the "Go-cart" was a construction of metal tubing about 4 ½ feet long, with 4 small tires, a steering wheel, a lawnmower type engine, and gas and braking pedals, without, however, a horn, a windshield or wipers, a signal device, a light or reflector, or a speedometer. Zapp v Ross Pontiac, Inc., 39 A.D.2d 739, 332 N.Y.S.2d 121, 1972 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4693 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1972).

Notwithstanding broad constitutional home rule powers conferred on local government, county ordinance providing for licensing of school bus companies was unconstitutional and void not only because it conflicted with CLS Veh & Tr § 1604—which expressly prohibits local government entities from requiring licenses for use of public highways—but also because state has preempted field of student transportation by enacting CLS Educ §§ 3623 and 3624, CLS Trans § 140(2)(a) and (c), and CLS Veh & Tr § 375(20), (21), and (21-b); local government cannot impose additional layer of regulation where state legislature has evidenced its intent to preempt field, nor may it exercise its police powers inconsistently with state law, since doing so would thwart state's general laws and operation of state's overriding policy concerns. Board of Educ. of Farmingdale Union Free School Dist. v Gulotta, 157 A.D.2d 642, 549 N.Y.S.2d 740, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 257 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1990).

In action arising from collision in which driver backed his truck into plaintiffs' car, which was traveling behind truck in same direction before truck stopped and backed up, plaintiffs were entitled to partial summary judgment on issue of truck driver's negligence, defendants' counterclaim was properly dismissed, and defendants' motion for additional time to serve amended bill of particulars was properly denied where truck driver never noticed whether vehicles were traveling behind him in same direction, he was fully aware of many potential hazards associated with backing up, including existence of blind spot in rear, he neither exited truck nor sounded horn despite lack of rear movement warning devices, and he was issued violation for unsafe backing of vehicle to which he later pleaded guilty. Weather v North Am. Recycling Corp., 255 A.D.2d 666, 679 N.Y.S.2d 213, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11675 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Because a triable issue of fact existed as to whether the owner and driver of a disabled truck violated N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 375(17) and 49 C.F.R. §§ 392.22 and 393.95 by failing to set reflective triangles in place at the required distance from the truck, and because the trial court properly held the amnesiac plaintiff to a lesser standard of proof, the owner and driver were not entitled to summary judgment in the plaintiff's personal injury action. Franklin v 2 Guys from Long Pond, Inc., 50 A.D.3d 846, 858 N.Y.S.2d 186, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3373 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2008).

Patrol officer had probable cause to stop defendant's vehicle because the officer believed defendant's vehicle had excessively tinted windows, N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 375(12-a)(b), and the strong odor of marihuana emanating from the vehicle coupled with defendant's false statements provided the officer with a founded suspicion that criminality was afoot and permitted questions that focused on defendant's possible wrongdoing; thus, evidence of crack cocaine and digital scales that were recovered after defendant was subdued was properly not suppressed. People v Brock, 107 A.D.3d 1025, 968 N.Y.S.2d 624, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3961 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 21 N.Y.3d 1072, 974 N.Y.S.2d 321, 997 N.E.2d 146, 2013 N.Y. LEXIS 2975 (N.Y. 2013).

Police lawfully stopped defendant's car because the officer testified that the window tints on the car that defendant drove were dark, it was hard for the officer to see inside the car, and anything under 70 percent light transmittance was a summonsable offense. People v Bacquie, 154 A.D.3d 648, 62 N.Y.S.3d 425,

Traffic stop of defendant's vehicle was justified because a trooper observed excessively tinted windows on defendant's vehicle. People v Rudolph, 170 A.D.3d 1258, 95 N.Y.S.3d 629, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1659 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 34 N.Y.3d 937, 133 N.E.3d 427, 109 N.Y.S.3d 724, 2019 N.Y. LEXIS 2787 (N.Y. 2019).

That part of a village ordinance prohibiting the spilling of certain materials upon the highways within the village was valid but a further portion of such ordinance requiring the use of metal or canvass coverings on certain vehicles to prevent such spillage was invalid as prescribing equipment, the authority to prescribe such a requirement never having been delegated to local subdivisions. New York Trap Rock Corp. v Roslyn, 66 Misc. 2d 334, 320 N.Y.S.2d 584, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1675 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1971).

A uniform traffic ticket can only be issued under Veh & Tr Law 375(35)(c) when the tire tread groove has been measured by a tread depth guage, and not solely on the basis of a visual inspection by the traffic officer. People v Putzer, 110 Misc. 2d 162, 442 N.Y.S.2d 36, 1981 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3055 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1981).

Defendant driver of a car equipped with a radar detector was improperly convicted under Veh & Tr Law § 375(30) for obstructing the view through the vehicle's windshield, where no standard existed under the statute for determination of what constituted an obstruction and the statute was therefore unconstitutional. People v Lew, 115 Misc. 2d 421, 454 N.Y.S.2d 225, 1982 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3703 (N.Y. County Ct. 1982).

Defendant could not be convicted of any crime for operating his car with nonworking defroster in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 375(39) since that provision refers to "registration" and not "operation" of vehicles and does not provide any penal sanction for operation of non-complying vehicles. People v O'Neill, 134 Misc. 2d 536, 511 N.Y.S.2d 771, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2059 (N.Y. City Ct. 1987).

N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 375(12-a)(b)(1), by its clear terms, permits "materials" to be affixed to a windshield provided they are limited to the uppermost six inches of the windshield; thus, defendant was not violating N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 371(1) by operating a car that had a stencil stretching across the top five or six inches of the windshield. People v Huurman, 192 Misc. 2d 363, 746 N.Y.S.2d 553, 2002 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1251 (N.Y. J. Ct. 2002).

§ 375. Equipment. [Effective April 17, 2021]

1. (a) Every motor vehicle, operated or driven upon the public highways of the state, shall be provided with adequate brakes and steering mechanism in good working order and sufficient to control such vehicle at all times when the same is in use, and a suitable and adequate horn or other device for signaling, which horn or device shall produce a sound sufficiently loud to serve as a danger warning but shall not be used other than as a reasonable warning nor be unnecessarily loud or harsh.

(b) Every such motor vehicle shall be equipped with suitable wipers or other device which shall clear a sufficient area of the windshields to provide reasonable driving vision. (i) The use or placing of posters or stickers on windshields or rear windows of motor vehicles other than those authorized by the commissioner, is hereby prohibited. The attaching to windshields and windshield wipers of handbills and other forms of advertisements, is hereby prohibited.

(ii) In a city of one million or more, the attaching or affixing by any means whatsoever of handbills or other forms of advertisements to a motor vehicle is hereby prohibited. In any prosecution for an alleged violation of this subparagraph, there shall be a rebuttable presumption that the person whose name, telephone number, or other identifying information appears on any handbill or other form of advertisement attached or affixed to a motor vehicle shall be in violation of the provisions of this subparagraph.

(iii) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in addition to those persons otherwise authorized to enforce this subdivision and adjudicate violations thereof, the provisions of subparagraph (ii) of this paragraph shall also be enforceable in a city having a population of one million or more by an agency or agencies designated for such purpose by the mayor of such city, and notices of violation may be returnable to the environmental control board of such city, which shall have the power to impose the monetary penalties provided in subdivision (b) of section eighteen hundred of this chapter. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, service of a notice of violation of subparagraph (ii) of this paragraph committed in such city may be made upon a person by first class mail, postage prepaid, and any such notice served by mail shall be returnable only to such environmental control board. Such service by first class mail shall be deemed complete upon mailing of the notice of violation, unless the notice of violation is returned to the sender by the United States postal service for any reason other than refusal of delivery. In addition, any notice of violation for a violation of subparagraph (ii) of this paragraph may be served by a means prescribed in article three of the civil practice law and rules or article three of the business corporation law. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, such penalties imposed by such environmental control board shall be paid into the general fund of such city.

(iv) Any final order issued pursuant to subparagraph (ii) of this paragraph by an environmental control board of a city having a population of one million or more shall constitute a judgment which may be entered in any place provided for the entry of civil judgments within the state, and may be enforced without court proceeding in the same manner as the enforcement of money judgments entered in civil actions. Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, before a judgment based upon a default may be so entered, such environmental control board must have notified the respondent by first class mail in such form as such environmental control board may direct: (A) of the default decision and order and the penalty imposed; (B) that a judgment will be entered in any place provided for the entry of civil judgments in the state; and (C) that the entry of such judgment may be avoided by requesting a stay of default for good cause shown and either requesting a hearing or entering a plea pursuant to the rules of such environmental control board within thirty days of the mailing of such notice. No judgment based upon a default may be so entered by the environmental control board within thirty days of the mailing of such notice. No judgment based upon a default may be so entered by the environmental control board within less than sixty days from the completion of service by mail of the notice of violation as provided in subparagraph (iii) of this paragraph. Any requirement of any provision of law other than this subdivision that related to the manner of service of the notice of violation that precedes any final order of such environmental control board shall not apply to a final order issued pursuant to this subparagraph. A judgment entered pursuant to this subdivision shall remain in full force and effect for eight years.

(c) Every trailer and semi-trailer weighing more than one thousand pounds unladen and every trailer and semi-trailer manufactured or assembled on or after January first, nineteen hundred seventy-one having a registered maximum gross weight, an actual gross weight or gross weight consisting of the unladen weight and maximum carrying capacity recommended by the manufacturer in excess of three thousand pounds also shall be equipped with adequate brakes in good working order if operated or drawn on the public highways of this state. Every trailer while being drawn upon the public highways of this state shall be so attached to the vehicle drawing the same as to prevent the wheels of such trailer from being deflected more than six inches from the path of the towing vehicle's wheels. On and after January first, nineteen hundred seventy-one every trailer, except a semi-trailer, while being drawn upon the public highways of this state, shall be attached to the vehicle drawing the same by a device of a type approved by the commissioner.

(d) The commissioner shall make rules prescribing standards of brake efficiency, except for motor vehicles the standard of brake efficiency of which are fixed by the department of public service, and no brakes shall be deemed adequate within the meaning of this subdivision unless they meet the requirements of such rules. Such rules shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state and thereafter published once in the state advertising bulletin and shall become effective one month after such publication. Any amendment to such rules shall be likewise filed and published and shall take effect one month after such publication.

(e) No operator or registered owner of any motor vehicle having a registered maximum gross weight of eighteen thousand pounds or more shall disconnect or knowingly permit the disconnection of any set of service brakes on such motor vehicle. Any violation of the provisions of this paragraph shall occur only when such vehicle is actually operated on the public highways. Such violation shall be punishable as a misdemeanor.

2. (a) Every motor vehicle except a motorcycle, driven upon a public highway during the period from one-half hour after sunset to one-half hour before sunrise or at any other time when windshield wipers are in use, as a result of rain, sleet, snow, hail or other unfavorable atmospheric condition, and at such other times as visibility for a distance of one thousand feet ahead of such motor vehicle is not clear, shall display:

1. at least two lighted head lamps on the front, one on each side, having light sources of equal power;

2. if manufactured prior to January first, nineteen hundred fifty-two, at least one lighted lamp on the rear which shall display a red light visible from the rear for a distance of at least five hundred feet;

4. if required to display a number plate on the rear, a white light which shall illuminate the numerals on such plate in such manner as to render such numerals legible for at least fifty feet from the rear. The provisions of this subparagraph shall also apply to trailers.

(b) All lamps used on a motor vehicle except a motorcycle shall be so arranged, adjusted and operated, as to avoid dangerous glare or dazzle. Except as provided in paragraph (d) of this subdivision, the upper outline of any beam of dazzling light projected to the left of the longitudinal axis of the vehicle by the lowermost light distribution of a headlamp designed to produce more than one light distribution, or by the single light distribution of any other lamp used on such a motor vehicle, shall not rise higher than the lamp center at a distance of twenty-five feet nor higher than forty-two inches at a distance of seventy-five feet. In each case, the height of the beam shall be measured from the plane upon which the vehicle stands and the distance shall be measured from the lamp projecting the light.

(c) No lamp shall be used on a motor vehicle having a light source greater than thirty-two candle power, unless such lamp is approved by the commissioner as provided by this section. The provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to any light which is permitted to be displayed only on an authorized emergency vehicle, a hazard vehicle or a vehicle which is permitted to display a blue or green light pursuant to paragraphs four and five of subdivision forty-one of this section.

(d) A motor vehicle, other than a motorcycle, equipped with any device such as, but not limited to, a snow plow blade, which blocks or impairs the projection of light from the headlamps of such vehicle, shall be equipped with at least two additional headlamps on the front which headlamps meet all the requirements of this subdivision for headlamps except those provisions of paragraph (b) of this subdivision specifically limiting the height of the beam of any headlamp.

3. Headlamps required pursuant to the provisions of subdivision two of this section may be of the multiple beam type designed to produce more than one distribution of light or of the single beam type designed to produce only one distribution of light.

Provided that, whenever a vehicle approaching from ahead is within five hundred feet, or when approaching a moving vehicle from the rear and within two hundred feet of the same, the headlamps, if of the multiple beam type, or the auxiliary front facing lamps, if the vehicle is so equipped, shall be operated so that dazzling light does not interfere with the driver of the approaching vehicle, or the vehicle being approached, and, whenever the highway is so lighted or traffic thereon is such that illumination of the highway for more than two hundred feet ahead of the vehicle by lights on such vehicle is unnecessary or impracticable, the headlamps, if of the multiple beam type, or the auxiliary front facing lamps, if the vehicle is so equipped, shall be operated with the lowermost distribution of light in use. Nothing contained in this subdivision shall be construed to prevent the use of flashing high beams to signify an intention to pass a vehicle or vehicles when two or more vehicles are traveling in the same direction, the operation of any headlamp as defined in paragraph d [(d)]* of subdivision two of this section, nor shall it apply to any auxiliary front facing lamp permitted to be displayed only on an authorized emergency vehicle.

Every such headlamp shall be firmly and substantially mounted on the motor vehicle in such manner as to allow the lamp to be properly and readily adjusted. The operator of every motor vehicle shall permit any police officer or other person exercising police powers to inspect the equipment of such motor vehicle, and make such tests as may be necessary to determine whether the provisions of this section are being complied with.

Any certificate of approval heretofore issued pursuant to law, or hereafter issued by the commissioner may be revoked by the commissioner, after a hearing of which the person or corporation named therein, or his or its successor in interest, shall have been given reasonable notice and an opportunity to appear and be heard upon the ground that the device does not comply with the provisions of this section, and the rules and regulations of the commissioner and the decision of the commissioner revoking such certificate shall be final; such revocation, however, of a lens or other headlighting device heretofore or hereafter approved shall not take effect until six months after the decision of the commissioner revoking the same and shall apply only to vehicles manufactured and used thereafter on the highways of this state.

The foregoing provisions governing lights on motor vehicles do not apply to so-called dimmers the use of which is permitted or required by local ordinances.

The commissioner may make such rules and regulations relative to lights on motor vehicles and the approval of the same as are not inconsistent with the specific provisions of this section.

5, 6. [Repealed]

7. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, association or corporation to sell or offer for sale a headlighting device without delivering therewith to the purchaser a printed sheet of instructions describing the device in detail, its method of mounting, arrangement and adjustment and specifying the candle power of the lamps to be used thereon and any other matter that may be necessary to insure compliance in the use of such device with the provisions of this article and the certificate of approval. Such instructions shall be printed with a photogravure of the pattern of light from one headlight shown on a regulation testing screen with respect to a horizontal cross line placed across the face of such screen at a height equal to the height of the center of such headlight, and with the headlight adjusted in accordance with the rules and regulations of the commissioner. 10-c. It shall be unlawful after June thirtieth, nineteen hundred eighty-five to operate on any public highway or street in this state, any passenger type motor vehicle that has a rear window or windows located in a movable closure (door-like) member, except for a multipurpose passenger vehicle (designed to carry ten persons or less and constructed either on a truck chassis or with special features for occasional off-road operation) registered in this state and manufactured or assembled after said date, and designated as a nineteen hundred eighty-six or subsequent model unless such vehicle be equipped with a rear window defogger or defroster, which shall be so located and adjusted that its operation will give the operator of such vehicle, by means of the mirror or other reflecting device required by subdivision ten of this section, a view of the road and the condition of traffic behind such vehicle.

10-d. It shall be unlawful after December thirty-first, nineteen hundred ninety-two to operate on any public highway or street in this state, any passenger type motor vehicle that has a rear window located in a single movable closure (door-like) member and which has a non-removable top, registered in this state and manufactured or assembled after said date, and designated as a nineteen hundred ninety-three or subsequent model unless such vehicle be equipped with a rear window defogger or defroster, which shall be so located and adjusted that its operation will give the operator of such vehicle, by means of the mirror or other reflecting device required by subdivision ten of this section, a view of the road and the condition of traffic behind such vehicle.

10-e. [Repealed upon conditions set forth in L 2011, ch 138, § 2] Every truck, tractor, and tractor-trailer or semitrailer combination registered in this state having a gross vehicle weight rating of twenty-six thousand pounds or more, and a conventional cab configuration in which more than half of the engine length is forward of the foremost point of the windshield base and the steering wheel hub is in the forward quarter of the vehicle length, whenever operated within a city having a population of one million or more on highways other than controlled-access highways, shall be equipped with a convex mirror on the front of such vehicle or combination of vehicles. When such vehicle or combination of vehicles is being operated, such mirror shall be adjusted so as to enable the operator thereof to see all points on an imaginary horizontal line which: (a) is three feet above the road, (b) is one foot directly forward from the midpoint of the front of such motor vehicle, and (c) extends the full width of the front of such vehicle or combination of vehicles. Provided, however, the commissioner, in consultation with the commissioner of transportation, may promulgate rules and regulations exempting from the requirements of this subdivision any vehicle or combination of vehicles where such commissioner has determined that the use of such convex mirrors would not increase the visibility of persons or objects located directly in front of such vehicle or combination of vehicles.

11. It shall be unlawful after January first, nineteen hundred thirty-four to operate on any public highway or street, in this state, a motor vehicle manufactured or assembled after said date, designed or used for the purpose of carrying passengers for hire, or as a public conveyance to transport school children and others, unless such vehicle be equipped with safety glass wherever glass is used in doors, windows and windshields.

12. It shall be unlawful to operate on any public highway or street in this state any motor vehicle registered in New York state unless such vehicle be equipped with safety glass wherever glass is used in doors, windows and windshields. For the purposes of this subdivision, any device other than a trailer, which is attached to or carried upon a motor vehicle and which lawfully can be occupied while the motor vehicle is in motion, shall be considered a part of such motor vehicle.

12-a. (a) Every motor vehicle, except a motorcycle, when driven or operated upon a public highway, road or street shall be equipped with a front windshield in a fixed and more or less upright position constructed of safety glass as defined in subdivision fourteen of this section and required by subdivisions eleven and twelve hereof. No person shall drive any motor vehicle with any sign or other nontransparent material other than a certificate or paper required to be displayed by law upon the front windshield or the sidewings or side windows on either side forward of or adjacent to the operator's seat.

(b) No person shall operate any motor vehicle upon any public highway, road or street:

(1) the front windshield of which is composed of, covered by or treated with any material which has a light transmittance of less than seventy percent unless such materials are limited to the uppermost six inches of the windshield; or

(3) if it is classified as a station wagon, sedan, hardtop, coupe, hatchback or convertible and any rear side window has a light transmittance of less than seventy percent; or

(4) the rear window of which is composed of, covered by or treated with any material which has a light transmittance of less than seventy percent. A rear window may have a light transmittance of less than seventy percent if the vehicle is equipped with side mirrors on both sides of the vehicle so adjusted that the driver thereof shall have a clear and full view of the road and condition of traffic behind such vehicle.

(c) Any person required for medical reasons to be shielded from the direct rays of the sun and/or any person operating a motor vehicle belonging to such person or in which such person is an habitual passenger shall be exempt from the provisions of subparagraphs one and two of paragraph (b) of this subdivision provided the commissioner has granted an exemption and notice of such exemption is affixed to the vehicle as directed by the commissioner. The applicant for such exemption must provide a physician's statement with the reason for the exemption, the name of the individual with a medically necessary condition operating or transported in the vehicle, the specific condition involved, and the minimum level of light transmission required. The commissioner shall only authorize exemptions where the medical condition certified by the physician is contained on a list of medical conditions prepared by the commissioner of health pursuant to subdivision sixteen of section two hundred six of the public health law. If such [such]* exemption is granted, the commissioner shall make a record thereof and shall distribute a sufficiently noticeable

(d) The commissioner may test any window for a person who has been charged with violating this subdivision. If such window is found to be in conformity with this subdivision, a small label attesting to the conformity shall be affixed to the window tested.

(e) On and after January first, nineteen hundred ninety-two, no person shall manufacture, sell, offer for sale, equip or operate a motor vehicle in this state in violation of the provisions of this subdivision, except that a person may operate a nineteen hundred ninety-one or earlier model year vehicle without violating this subdivision if the windows on said vehicle were in conformity with this subdivision as it existed on December thirty-first, nineteen hundred ninety-one.

(f) The commissioner shall make such rules and regulations as he shall deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this subdivision.

(ff) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section or any other general, special or local law, charter, administrative code, ordinance, rule or regulation to the contrary, any person operating a motor vehicle in a burial or funeral procession while travelling to or from a funeral, interment or cremation may place a funeral sign no larger than eight and one half by fourteen inches in any window of such vehicle, as long as such sign when so placed will not prevent such person from having a clear and full view of the road and the condition of traffic behind such vehicle.

13. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to replace glass in doors, windows, or windshields of motor vehicles unless such replacement be made with safety glass.

14. The term "safety glass" as used in this section shall be construed to mean any product composed of glass, so manufactured, fabricated or treated as substantially to prevent shattering and flying of the glass when struck or broken, or such other or similar product as may be approved by the commissioner.

15. The commissioner of motor vehicles shall maintain a list of types of glass approved by him as conforming to the specifications and requirements for safety glass as set forth in this section, and shall not issue a license for or relicense any motor vehicle subject to the provisions of subdivisions eleven and twelve unless such motor vehicle be equipped as therein provided with such approved type of glass.

16. The owner and operator of any motor vehicle operated in violation of the provisions of subdivisions eleven and twelve shall be guilty of a traffic infraction. In case of the violation of such subdivisions by any common carrier or person operating under a permit issued by the public service commission (or other authorized body or person), said permit shall be revoked, or, in the discretion of the commissioner, suspended until the provisions of such subdivisions are satisfactorily complied with.

17. Every omnibus having a seating capacity of more than ten passengers, every truck having a maximum gross weight in excess of twelve thousand pounds and every combination of tractor and trailer operated upon a public highway shall carry emergency lighting equipment ready at all times for immediate use. The equipment of the vehicle or combination of vehicles may consist of flares of the type used by railroads, flaring candles, torches, lanterns or red emergency reflectors provided it is adequate to provide a warning light in all kinds of weather both in front of and in the rear of the vehicle for at least eight hours. No red emergency reflector shall be deemed adequate within the meaning of this subdivision unless it is of a size and type approved by the commissioner, and conforms to minimum specifications established by him, which minimum shall not be less than the minimum established by the interstate commerce commission for buses and trucks in interstate commerce. When any such vehicle or a combination of vehicles, except an omnibus which stops for the purpose of taking on or discharging passengers, is parked or left standing on a public highway except within a city or incorporated village, during the period from one-half hour after sunset to one-half hour before sunrise, the operator of such vehicle or combination of vehicles shall cause at least one light, or reflector or lighted flare to be placed on the highway in front of such vehicle or combination of vehicles, and at least one light, reflector or lighted flare on the highway in the rear of such vehicle or combination of vehicles at a distance of approximately one hundred feet in the front of and at the rear of such vehicle or combination of vehicles, provided that if such vehicle is parked or left standing within three hundred feet of a curve, crest of hill, or other obstruction, the flare, candle, torch, lantern, or reflector in that direction shall be so placed as to afford ample warning to other highway users but in no case less than approximately one hundred feet or more than approximately three hundred feet from the stopped vehicle.

18. Except as otherwise provided herein, it shall be unlawful to operate on any public highway or street in this state any motor vehicle, or combination of motor vehicle and trailer, so constructed or so loaded that the driver thereof is unable to indicate clearly by hand signals to approaching and following traffic his intention of stopping or turning, unless such motor vehicle or combination of vehicles shall be equipped with directional signals approved by the commissioner, provided, however, it shall be unlawful after January first, nineteen hundred fifty-two to operate on any public highway or street in this state any motor vehicle registered in this state, manufactured or assembled after said date unless such vehicle be equipped with directional signals approved by the commissioner. It shall also be unlawful to fail to cause such signals to be maintained, at all times in good and sufficient working order. The provisions of this subdivision shall not apply to special purpose commercial motor vehicles registered under schedule F of subdivision seven of section four hundred one of this chapter or to a vehicle or combination of vehicles lawfully operated under registration issued, under section four hundred fifteen of this chapter or under a similar provision of the law of another jurisdiction.

18-a. Any motor vehicle may be equipped with and every motor vehicle registered in this state and manufactured or assembled after June thirtieth, nineteen hundred sixty-five, and designated as a nineteen hundred sixty-six or subsequent year model, shall be equipped with a device, approved by the commissioner, by means of which the operator may cause the two front and two rear directional signals to flash simultaneously for the purpose of warning the operators of other vehicles of the presence of a vehicular traffic hazard requiring the exercise of unusual care in approaching, overtaking or passing. The provisions of this subdivision requiring that certain motor vehicles shall be so equipped shall not apply to special purpose commercial motor vehicles registered under schedule F of subdivision seven of section four hundred one or to a vehicle or combination of vehicles lawfully operated under registration issued under section four hundred fifteen.

19. It shall be unlawful for the owner to operate, park or stand a motor vehicle or trailer on any public highway or street in this state, or to authorize another to so operate, park or stand a motor vehicle or trailer, with the consent of such owner, expressed or implied, unless such motor vehicle or trailer be equipped and lighted as provided by this section and by section three hundred seventy-six, and the operation, parking or standing on a public highway or street in this state of a motor vehicle or trailer which is not so equipped and lighted or which is defectively equipped and lighted is hereby prohibited.

20. Every omnibus having a seating capacity of more than seven passengers, used exclusively to transport pupils, teachers and other persons acting in a supervisory capacity to and from school or school activities, or to transport children, instructors or other persons acting in a supervisory capacity to and from child care centers maintained for migrant farm and food processing laborers or to transport children, instructors or other persons acting in a supervisory capacity to and from camp or camp activities, or to transport children, instructors or other persons acting in a supervisory capacity to and from religious services or instruction shall be equipped in the manner provided by this subdivision and any such omnibus used by any state facility or not-for-profit agency licensed by the state and used to transport persons with disabilities, instructors or other persons acting in a supervisory capacity may be equipped in the manner provided by this subdivision:

(a) For each such omnibus having a seating capacity in excess of fifteen children, there shall be colored flashing signal lamps conforming to regulations prescribed by the commissioner on the front and on the rear thereof, including at least one flashing red signal lamp on the front thereof and at least one flashing red signal lamp on the rear thereof. For each such omnibus having a seating capacity of not more than fifteen children, there shall be colored flashing signal lamps conforming to regulations prescribed by the commissioner facing the front and facing the rear thereof, and at least one flashing red signal lamp facing the front thereof and at least one flashing red signal lamp facing the rear thereof. The driver of every such vehicle shall keep such red signal lamps lighted whenever passengers are being received or discharged or whenever he has stopped within fifty feet to the rear of a vehicle with such red signal lamps lighted, and shall light all other required signal lamps, as a warning, prior to stopping to receive or discharge passengers in accordance with regulations prescribed by the commissioner.

(b) (1) In addition to such signal lamps, two signs shall be conspicuously displayed on the exterior of every such omnibus designating it as a school omnibus by the use of the words "SCHOOL BUS" which shall be painted or otherwise inscribed thereon in black letters. Such letters shall be of uniform size, at least eight inches in height, and each stroke of each letter shall be not less than one inch in width. The background of each such sign shall be painted the color known as "national school bus chrome." For each such omnibus having a seating capacity in excess of fifteen children, such signs shall be securely mounted on top of such vehicle, one of which shall be affixed on the front and one on the rear thereof. For each such omnibus having a seating capacity of not more than fifteen children, such signs shall be securely mounted on top of such vehicle, one of which shall face the front and one of which shall face the rear thereof. Each such sign shall be visible and readable from a point at least two hundred feet distant.

(2) The universal handicapped symbol shall be conspicuously displayed on the exterior of every omnibus equipped with a wheelchair lift which transports children with disabilities. The commissioner shall promulgate regulations regarding the size and location of such universal handicapped symbol. The commissioner shall require that any new signage relating to accessibility installed or replaced on or after the effective date of the chapter of the laws of two thousand fourteen which amended this subparagraph depict the logo promulgated by the secretary of state pursuant to section one hundred one of the executive law.

(c) In the event such vehicle is operated on a public highway during the period between one-half hour after sunset and one-half hour before sunrise, the signs required by paragraph (b) of this subdivision shall be illuminated as to be visible from a point at least five hundred feet distant.

(d) Every such omnibus shall be equipped as provided in paragraphs (a) and (b) of this subdivision, and such signs shall be displayed and illuminated in accordance with paragraphs (b) and (c) of this subdivision, and such signal lamps shall be operated as provided in paragraph (a) of this subdivision at all times when such omnibus shall be engaged in transporting pupils to and from school or school activities or in transporting children to and from child care centers maintained for children of migrant farm and food processing laborers, or in transporting children to and from camp or camp activities or transporting children to and from religious services or instruction or transporting persons with disabilities on any such omnibus used by any state facility or not-for-profit agency licensed by the state.

(e) Every such omnibus, having its engine located ahead of the driver, with a seating capacity of more than twelve school children shall be equipped with a mirror, convex in shape, at least eight inches in diameter, firmly mounted at hood, windshield or fender-top height in front of the bus. It shall be located on either the left or right side of the bus in such manner that the seated driver may observe through its use the road from the front bumper forward to the point where direct observation is possible.

(f) The commissioner of motor vehicles is hereby authorized and empowered to adopt and, from time to time, to amend such regulations, not inconsistent with this subdivision, governing the color, number, size, type, construction and use of such signal lamps and signs, as he may deem necessary for public safety. On and after July first, nineteen hundred fifty-one, no such signal lamp or sign shall be deemed to comply with the requirements of this subdivision unless it is of a size and type approved by the commissioner and unless it shall conform to the specifications prescribed and promulgated by him.

(g) In the event, however, that such an omnibus, equipped as herein provided, shall cease to be used to transport pupils or pupils and teachers or children of migrant laborers and migrant child care center instructors, or children and camp instructors, the equipment, markings and paint, herein provided for, shall be removed and changed within fifteen days after relicense. Nothing contained in this section, however, shall be deemed to waive any other requirements as to equipment, markings and paint, contained in this chapter.

(h) All the provisions of this chapter relating to school buses shall apply with equal force and effect to buses used in transporting children and instructors to and from child care centers maintained for children of migrant farm and food processing laborers and to buses used in transporting children to and from camp or camp activities and to buses used in transporting children to and from religious services or instruction. As used in this subdivision, camp or camp activities shall mean day camp or day camp activities respectively.

(i) Every omnibus subject to the provisions of this subdivision shall be operated with headlights and taillights illuminated at all times of day or night.

(j) The commissioner of transportation, in his discretion, by regulation or upon written request, by departmental order, for good cause, may exempt any school bus that does not receive or discharge passengers on or along the public highways on regularly scheduled routes from the requirements of any or all paragraphs of subdivisions twenty and twenty-one of this section.

(k) All omnibuses manufactured or assembled prior to April first, nineteen hundred seventy-seven and all omnibuses manufactured or assembled after April first, nineteen hundred seventy-seven which do not meet federal standards for school bus safety, shall be phased out of use beginning with the nineteen hundred ninety-six–nineteen hundred ninety-seven school year and ending with the nineteen hundred ninety-seven–nineteen hundred ninety-eight school year. In each of such school years, at least one-half of such omnibuses shall be retired from use according to the following formula: in the nineteen hundred ninety-six–nineteen hundred ninety-seven school year, the minimum number of such omnibuses to be phased out of each owner/operator's fleet shall be the total number of such omnibuses divided by two and rounded upwards to the nearest whole number. All such omnibuses remaining shall be phased out in the nineteen hundred ninety-seven–nineteen hundred ninety-eight school year.

Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this paragraph the commissioner of education may make exceptions on a case by case basis if a school district certifies to the commissioner of education that a certain omnibus should not be retired for reason of economic hardship and the commissioner of transportation determines upon inspection that such omnibus is in good working order. In making his determination, the commissioner of transportation shall consider, among other relevant factors, the relative age and structure of each such omnibus. When such determination is made, every such omnibus so certified shall be reinspected by the commissioner of transportation once every six months. Any school district receiving an exemption from the provisions of this paragraph for any omnibus shall provide to the commissioner of education an annual recertification of economic hardship.

(l) (1) Every such omnibus used on a regular basis to transport pupils with a disability on a regularly scheduled route shall, with the written consent of the parent, guardian, or person in a position of loco parentis, have maintained on such omnibus the following information about each such pupil:

telephone numbers where such person can be reached in an emergency, and/or the name and telephone number of any other person designated by such parent, guardian or person in a position of loco parentis as a person who can be contacted in an emergency.

(2) Such information shall be used solely for the purpose of contacting such pupil's parent, guardian, person in a position of loco parentis, or designee in the event of an emergency involving such pupil, shall be kept in a manner which retains the privacy of the pupil, and shall not be accessible to any person other than the driver or a teacher acting in a supervisory capacity. Provided, however, that in the event that such driver or teacher is incapacitated, such information may be accessed by any emergency services provider for the purpose authorized by this subparagraph.

(3) Such information shall be updated as needed, but at least once each school year. Such information shall be destroyed if: parental consent is revoked; the pupil no longer attends such school; or, the disability no longer exists.

(4) For the purposes of this paragraph, the term "disability" shall mean a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more of the major life activities of a pupil, whether of a temporary or permanent nature.

21. Every motor vehicle having a seating capacity of more than seven passengers, and used primarily to transport pupils or pupils and teachers to and from school, shall be painted the color known as "national school bus chrome."

In the event, however, such a motor vehicle so painted shall cease to be used to transport pupils or pupils and teachers, the color of paint herein provided for, shall be changed to another color, within fifteen days of relicense.

21-a. In any case where a New York state police or New York city, Albany, Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse or Yonkers police department vehicle is painted a distinctive color which would designate it in the public's view as such a state or city police vehicle, the purchaser of such vehicle shall cause the color of its paint to be altered and any designated markings to be removed within fifteen days of registration.

21-b. The commissioner shall promulgate rules and regulations for the use of two-way radios on school buses.

The commissioner, in consultation with the commissioner of transportation, shall promulgate rules and regulations for the use of stop-arms on school buses which shall include provisions for a second stop-arm to be located on the driver's side as close as is practical to the rear corner of the bus. Every school bus designed with a capacity of forty-five persons or more, and manufactured for use in this state on or after January first, two thousand two shall be equipped with a second stop-arm in compliance with such regulations.

Provided, however, that the provisions of this subdivision shall not apply to such motor vehicles operating in a city with a population of one million or more.

21-h. (b) Every school bus used to transport ten or more passengers in this state on or after September first, two thousand two, shall be equipped with exterior reflective markings which comply with the rules and regulations promulgated by the commissioner pursuant to paragraph (c) of this subdivision.

(c) The commissioner shall promulgate rules and regulations for exterior reflective markings required to be attached on school buses. Such rules and regulations:

(1) shall require the rear of school buses to be marked with reflective material to outline the perimeter of the back of the bus and of the rear emergency exit;

(2) shall require the horizontal application of strips of reflective material, not less than one and three-quarters inches wide, above the rear windows, and above the rear bumper from the edges of the rear emergency exit door to both corners of the school bus with vertical strips of reflective material at each corner connected to the horizontal strips;

(3) shall require the horizontal application of strips of reflective material, not less than one and three-quarters inches wide, the entire length of the sides of the school bus body and located equidistant between the floorline and the beltline of the bus; and

(4) may require the marking of the front, rear or both bumpers of school buses with reflective material between one and three-quarters and two and one-quarter inches wide applied thereto at a forty-five degree angle to the center line of the road surface.

21-i. (a) (1) Every school bus manufactured on or after January first, nineteen hundred ninety,

(2) Every school bus manufactured for use in this state on or after September first, two thousand seven fueled with diesel fuel and used to transport three or more students who use wheelchairs or other assistive mobility devices or with a total capacity of more than eight passengers and used to transport students who use wheelchairs or other assistive mobility devices shall be equipped with an engine fire suppression system.

(b) The commissioner of the department of transportation shall promulgate rules and regulations establishing standards for the use of engine fire suppression systems on school buses used to transport students who use wheelchairs or other assistive mobility devices.

22. It shall be unlawful to operate a motor vehicle upon the public highways of this state which is equipped with any glass which is so broken, fractured or discolored as to distort visibility.

24. It shall be unlawful to operate upon any public highway in this state a motor vehicle which is equipped with a television receiving set within view of the operator or in which a television receiving set is in operation within the view of the operator. A motor vehicle shall not be deemed to be equipped with a television receiving set solely because such set utilizes power from such vehicle. The provisions of this subdivision shall not prohibit a vehicle with a weight of ten thousand pounds or more or a school bus from using closed-circuit television receiving equipment exclusively for safety and maneuvering purposes, in accordance with regulations to be established by the commissioner.

24-a. It shall be unlawful to operate upon any public highway in this state a motor vehicle, limited use automobile, limited use motorcycle or bicycle while the operator is wearing more than one earphone attached to a radio, tape player or other audio device.

25. (a) On and after the first day of January, nineteen hundred seventy-four it shall be unlawful to operate on any public highway or street in this state any tractor, commercial motor vehicle, combination of a commercial motor vehicle and trailer, or combination of a truck-tractor and semi-trailer which is not so constructed or equipped as reasonably to bar water or other road surface substances from being thrown by the rearmost wheels beyond the extreme rear of the vehicle or combination of vehicles, and to minimize side spray.

(b) Unless the commercial vehicle or combination vehicle is so designed or constructed to accomplish the objectives set forth in paragraph (a) of this subdivision by reason of fender or body construction or other means of enclosure, any such commercial vehicle or combination vehicle shall be equipped, on and after January first, nineteen hundred fifty-seven, with splash guards and stone deflectors which shall be composed of materials substantial enough to withstand ripping or tearing by ordinary means and withstand the action of the elements for a reasonable length of time. Such splash guards and stone deflectors shall also have a reasonable degree of flexibility and the distance from the lower end thereof to the ground shall not exceed one-third of the distance, measured along the ground, from the bottom of the splash guard to the point of contact of the rear wheel.

(c) The commissioner of motor vehicles is hereby authorized and empowered to make rules and regulations with respect to splash guards and stone deflectors, their type and construction, manner of attachment to vehicles and all other matters requisite for the proper effectuation of the purposes of this subdivision. In making such rules and regulations the commissioner shall be guided by the desirability of uniformity in requirements with regard to splash guards and stone deflectors among the several states.

(d) The provisions of this subdivision shall not apply to motor vehicles, trailers and semi-trailers registered pursuant to subdivision thirteen of section four hundred one of this chapter, and not operated upon the public highways in excess of one and one-half miles by direct route between farms or portions of farms under single or common ownership or operation.

26. A gong or siren whistle shall not be used on any vehicle other than an authorized emergency vehicle. This shall not be construed to apply to a gong or siren designed and used solely as a burglar alarm on a vehicle.

27. When a vehicle (a) has a crane, boom or other similar device attached or (b) is loaded with any material, and such crane, boom, device or material extends four feet or more beyond the front or rear of such vehicle, such vehicle shall be provided with a red flag not less than twenty-four inches square by day and a red light visible from the rear and an amber light visible from the front for a distance of at least five hundred feet by night on the extreme end of the extending portion of such crane, boom, device or material.

28. No person shall operate upon a public highway a vehicle which emits unnecessary smoke or unnecessary offensive vapors.

28-a. Except as permitted or authorized by law, no person shall remove, dismantle or otherwise cause to be inoperative any equipment or feature constituting an operational element of a motor vehicle's air pollution control system or mechanism re-

28-b. Except where inconsistent with federal law, every motor vehicle registered in this state and manufactured or assembled after June thirty, nineteen hundred sixty-three shall be equipped with a crankcase ventilating system of a type approved by the state commissioner of environmental conservation for the purpose of reducing the emission of pollutants into the atmosphere. Such system shall be maintained in good working order in continued conformity with standards promulgated by the state commissioner of environmental conservation. For the purposes of this subdivision the term "motor vehicle" shall exclude diesel powered motor vehicles, motorcycles, vehicles driven by electric power and special purpose commercial motor vehicles registered under paragraph F of subdivision seven of section four hundred one of this chapter.

28-c. Except where inconsistent with federal law, rules and regulations, every motor vehicle registered in this state and manufactured or assembled after June thirty, nineteen hundred sixty-seven and known as a nineteen hundred sixty-eight or subsequent model shall be equipped with an air contaminant emission control system of a type approved by the state commissioner of environmental conservation. Such systems shall be maintained in good working order in continued conformity with emission standards promulgated by the state commissioner of environmental conservation. For the purposes of this subdivision, "air contaminant emission control systems" may include, but shall not be limited to, exhaust control systems and gasoline evaporation control systems but shall exclude crankcase ventilating systems.

28-d. The state commissioner of environmental conservation may exempt or partially exempt from the provisions of subdivisions twenty-eight-b and twenty-eight-c of this section any type or class of motor vehicle for which no practical control systems have been developed or are necessary.

28-e. Standards and exemptions established by the state commissioner of environmental conservation pursuant to subdivisions twenty-eight-b, twenty-eight-c and twenty-eight-d of this section, shall be consistent with applicable federal laws and regulations.

28-f. (a) Except where inconsistent with federal law, rules and regulations, in addition to any air contaminant emission control systems required by subdivisions twenty-eight-b and twenty-eight-c of this section, the commissioner of environmental conservation may by regulation require the installation of exhaust emission control devices in proper working condition on all or any vehicles of any class or classes of gasoline powered motor vehicle having a registered maximum gross weight in excess of six thousand pounds. The commissioner of environmental conservation shall not promulgate any such regulation unless he (i) has determined, with the concurrence of the commissioner, that any such device is, or devices are, effective and reliable, (ii) has determined that the installation of any such device on all or any vehicles of such class or classes is necessary to the achievement of federal ambient air quality standards pursuant to an approved air quality implementation plan adopted pursuant to the federal clean air act, as amended (42 U.S.C. 1857 et seq.) and (iii) has determined that the effect of such regulation will not be diluted by the absence of a comparable requirement in an adjoining state; provided, however, that the effective date of the requirements of such regulation shall not be prior to the approval or promulgation of a transportation control plan pursuant to the Federal clean air act as amended for those portions of adjoining states designated as the territorial areas forming parts of the New Jersey-New York-Connecticut Interstate Air Quality Control Region under such act and not prior to the effective date of comparable requirements for such vehicles registered in, required to be registered in, or operated in any such portions. Any such requirement shall take effect with respect to any such motor vehicle as of the date of issuance of a registration for such vehicle in the year next succeeding the date on which the regulation requiring the installation of such a device is promulgated by the commissioner of environmental conservation, but in no event prior to March first, nineteen hundred seventy-six.

§ 381. Motorcycle equipment

1. (a) Every motorcycle, driven upon the public highways of this state, shall be provided with adequate brakes in good working order and sufficient to control such motorcycle at all times, when the same is in use, a suitable and adequate bell, horn or other device for signaling, one red to amber stop lamp and shall, whenever such motorcycle is being operated upon the public highways of the state, display one lighted lamp in front and one on the rear, or, when such motorcycle is operated with a passenger or other truck attached to the side or front two such lamps on the front and one on the rear; and in all cases the lamps on a motorcycle shall include a red light visible from the rear. The rays of such rear lamp shall shine upon the number plate carried on the rear of such motorcycle in such manner as to render the numerals thereon visible for at least fifty feet in the direction from which the motorcycle is proceeding. The light of the front lamp or lamps shall be visible at least two hundred feet in the direction in which the motorcycle is proceeding. Every such motorcycle shall have a suitable muffler or device to prevent unnecessary noise from exhaust gases, and the use of so-called "cut-outs" is prohibited.

(b) Driving a motorcycle without the display of one lighted lamp in front and one on the rear, during a period other than from one-half hour after sunset to one-half hour before sunrise, shall not be deemed to constitute negligence or contributory negligence in any action or proceeding arising out of the operation of such motorcycle.

(c) The provisions of this subdivision relating to the display of one lighted lamp in front and one on the rear during a period other than from one-half hour after sunset to one-half hour before sunrise shall not apply to a motorcycle, driven at a speed of less than twenty miles per hour, owned by a municipality and used for the collection of parking fees or the enforcement of parking regulations.

1-a. Every motorcycle registered in this state and manufactured or assembled after January first, nineteen hundred seventy-one and designated as a nineteen hundred seventy-one or subsequent year model shall be equipped with brakes acting on the front as well as the rear wheel.

2. No head lamp shall be used upon any motorcycle operated upon the public highways of the state, unless such lamp is approved by the commissioner or is equipped with a lens or other device approved by the commissioner. Every such head lamp, lens or other device shall be applied and adjusted in accordance with the requirements of the certificate approving the use thereof. Every such head lamp shall be firmly and substantially mounted on the motorcycle in such manner as to allow the lamp to be properly and readily adjusted. Each reflector which is used as a part of such head lamp shall have a polished silver or glass reflecting surface, or a reflecting surface which gives candle power intensity meeting the requirements of rules and regulations established by the commissioner, and shall be substantially free from dents, rust and other imperfections. The operator of every motorcycle shall permit any police officer or other person exercising police powers to inspect the equipment of such motorcycle and make such tests as may be necessary to determine whether the provisions of this section are being complied with. The commissioner may make reasonable rules and regulations relative to lights on motorcycles and the approval of the same which may be necessary to effectuate the foregoing provisions of this section.

2-a. It shall be unlawful for any person to operate on the public highways of the state any motorcycle manufactured or assembled after October first, nineteen hundred sixty-eight and designated as a nineteen hundred sixty-nine or subsequent year model unless such motorcycle is equipped with the lamps required by this section, which lamps shall be of a type, design and construction approved by the commissioner.

3. Except as hereinafter provided, only a white or yellow light shall be displayed upon a motorcycle so as to be visible from a point directly in front of the vehicle. Any color light, except blue, may be displayed, so as to be visible from a point directly in front of the vehicle, on a police vehicle or on a motorcycle operated by a sheriff or regular deputy sheriff when engaged in the performance of duty as a police officer. Any color light, including blue, may be displayed, so as to be visible from a point directly in front of the vehicle, on a motorcycle operated by a chief or assistant chief of a fire department, a county or deputy county fire coordinator, or a county or assistant county fire marshal. A blue light may be displayed upon a motorcycle, so as to be visible from a point directly in front of the vehicle, when operated by an active volunteer member of a fire department or company duly authorized as hereinafter provided, and while such vehicle is in use for fire or other emergency service. No volunteer firefighter shall be permitted to display a blue light upon a motorcycle as hereinbefore provided except while actually enroute to the scene of a fire or other emergency requiring his or her services and unless he or she shall be an active volunteer member of a fire department or company and shall have been authorized in writing to so display a blue light by the chief of the fire department or company of which he or she is a member, which authorization shall be subject to revocation at any time by the chief who issued the same, or his or her successor in office.

4. Every motorcycle shall have at least one adequate red reflector securely attached to the rear. Such reflector may be a part of the rear lamp. No reflector shall be deemed adequate within the meaning of this subdivision unless it is of a size and type approved by the commissioner, and unless it is so designed, located and maintained as to be visible for at least two hundred feet when opposed by a motor vehicle displaying lawful undimmed headlights at night on an unlighted highway. The provisions of this subdivision with respect to reflectors shall be applicable, both day and night, whenever the motorcycle is on a public highway.

5. No person shall operate on a public highway a motorcycle on which the handle bars or grips are more than the height of the operator's shoulders.

6. It shall be unlawful for any person to operate or ride upon a motorcycle unless he wears a protective helmet of a type which meets the requirements set forth in section 571.218 of the federal motor vehicle safety standards as may from time to time be amended. The commissioner is hereby authorized and directed to adopt regulations for helmets which are consistent with the requirements as specified in section 571.218 of the federal motor vehicle safety standards as may from time to time be amended. The police authorities of a city, town or village may issue a permit exempting members of organizations sponsoring or conducting parades or other public exhibitions from the provisions of this subdivision while such members are participating in such parades or other public exhibitions.

7. It shall be unlawful, on and after January first, nineteen hundred sixty-seven, for any person to operate a motorcycle unless he wears goggles or a face shield of a type approved by the commissioner. The commissioner is hereby authorized and empowered to adopt and amend regulations covering types of goggles and face shields and the specifications therefor and to establish and maintain a list of approved goggles and face shields which meet the specifications as established hereunder.

8. It shall be unlawful to operate on any public highway in this state any motorcycle registered in this state which is equipped with a wind screen, unless such wind screen meets the specifications established therefor by the commissioner. The commissioner is hereby authorized to adopt and amend regulations covering types of wind screens and specifications therefor.

9. It shall be unlawful to sell, offer for sale or distribute any goggles or face shields for use by the operators of motorcycles unless they are of a type and specification approved by the commissioner and appear on the list of approved devices maintained by the commissioner.

9-a. It shall be unlawful to sell, offer for sale or distribute any protective helmets for use by the operators or passengers of motorcycles unless they are consistent with the regulations of the commissioner as provided in subdivision six of this section and within the requirements specified in section 571.218 of the federal motor vehicle safety standards as may from time to time be amended.

10. It shall be unlawful after July first, nineteen hundred sixty-seven to operate on any public highway in this state any motorcycle registered in this state, unless such motorcycle is equipped with a rear view mirror which shall be adjusted so that the operator of such motorcycle shall have a clear view of the road and condition of traffic behind such motorcycle.

11. No person shall operate a motorcycle on any highway which is: (1) not equipped with a muffler to prevent excessive or unusual noise; (2) equipped with a muffler from which the baffle plates, screens or other original internal parts have been removed or altered; (3) equipped with an exhaust device without internal baffles, known as "straight pipes"; or (4) equipped with an exhaust system that has been modified in a manner that will amplify or increase the noise emitted by the motor of such vehicle above that emitted by the exhaust system originally installed on the vehicle.

12. No person shall operate a motorcycle on any highway which is equipped with an exhaust device that is intentionally designed to allow for the internal baffling to be fully or partially removed or interchangeable. This subdivision shall not apply to a motorcycle manufactured or assembled prior to nineteen hundred seventy-nine or a motorcycle registered as a limited use vehicle or an all terrain vehicle pursuant to article forty-eight-A or forty-eight-B of this chapter.

13. A violation of any of the provisions of this section shall be punishable by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars or by imprisonment for not exceeding thirty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Analysis

2. Lights
3. Protective helmets

1. In general

In action arising from accident that occurred when defendants' truck collided with motorcycle on which plaintiff was riding as passenger, plaintiff was entitled to summary judgment dismissing defendants' allegation of culpable conduct on her part where her deposition testimony, and that of driver of motorcycle, established that she had no opportunity to say or do anything to avoid accident, and defendants tendered no evidence that she was aware of dangerous situation or impending collision, or acted other reasonably prudent passenger in prevailing circumstances. Luck v Tellier, 222 A.D.2d 783, 634 N.Y.S.2d 814, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12684 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1995).

Motorcycle operator, who was stopped for violating § 1181 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, relating to minimum speeds, was properly arrested a second time for violating § 1120 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, when he refused to comply with the order and direction of a state trooper to start the motor so a determination could be made whether the muffler complied with subdivision 1 of this section. Krafft v State, 52 Misc. 2d 35, 275 N.Y.S.2d 109, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1276 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1966).

This section is too indefinite and is therefore unconstitutional. People v Smallwood, 52 Misc. 2d 1027, 277 N.Y.S.2d 429, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1785 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1967).

In a prosecution for a noisy muffler on a motorcycle in violation of Section 381, subd. 1 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, the People must show either a decibel rating above that allowed by law under Vehicle and Traffic Law § 386, or that the vehicle in question made noise in excess of what was usual for vehicles of its class. People v Meyer, 63 Misc. 2d 580, 313 N.Y.S.2d 93, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1468 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1970).

2. Lights

In an action to recover for personal injuries resulting from collision in the night time between a motorcycle with the side car attached while plaintiff was driving, and defendant's horsedrawn vehicle, plaintiff's failure to establish that at the time of the accident he was complying with statute as to the number and power of lights on his machine precludes a recovery. Willie v Luczka, 193 A.D. 826, 184 N.Y.S. 751, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5658 (N.Y. App. Div. 1920).

In action for injuries resulting from automobile accident whether plaintiff was guilty of negligence contributing to the accident because motorcycle with passenger truck attached was being operated with but one headlight by plaintiff, in violation of statute, was for the jury. Anderson v Calkins, 252 A.D. 836, 298 N.Y.S. 985, 298 N.Y.S. 986, 1937 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6408 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1937).

In action arising from accident that occurred when defendants' truck collided with plaintiffs' motorcycle, court erred in granting summary judgment to plaintiffs based on truck driver's plea of guilty to violating CLS Veh & Tr § 1141 (failing to yield right of way when turning left), as defendants were not thereby foreclosed from claiming that violation did not actually occur, or was excused, where truck driver denied that he was negligent, claiming that it was foggy and raining at time of collision and that he never saw motorcycle because its light was "dim." Luck v Tellier, 222 A.D.2d 783, 634 N.Y.S.2d 814, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12684 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1995).

3. Protective helmets

Law requiring motorcyclists to wear protective helmets is valid exercise of state's police power and is constitutional. People v Bielmeyer, 54 Misc. 2d 466, 282 N.Y.S.2d 797, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1282 (N.Y. City Ct. 1967).

Subdivision 9 of this section requiring that a motorcycle operator or rider wear a protective helmet of a type approved by the commissioner is not so vague and uncertain as to render it unconstitutional. People v Schmidt, 54 Misc. 2d 702, 283 N.Y.S.2d 290, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1229 (N.Y. County Ct. 1967), app. dismissed, 23 N.Y.2d 686, 295 N.Y.S.2d 936, 243 N.E.2d 153, 1968 N.Y. LEXIS 1049 (N.Y. 1968).

The provisions of subd 6 of this section making it unlawful to operate or ride upon a motorcycle unless wearing a protective helmet of a type approved by the commissioner is a legitimate use of the state's police power not beyond the scope of legislative action. People v Schmidt, 54 Misc. 2d 702, 283 N.Y.S.2d 290, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1229 (N.Y. County Ct. 1967), app. dismissed, 23 N.Y.2d 686, 295 N.Y.S.2d 936, 243 N.E.2d 153, 1968 N.Y. LEXIS 1049 (N.Y. 1968).

Vehicle and Traffic Law § 381, subd 6 is not too vague and indefinite and does not unreasonably limit one's personal freedom so as to be unconstitutional. People v Newhouse, 55 Misc. 2d 1064, 287 N.Y.S.2d 713, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1806 (N.Y. City Ct. 1968).

A New Jersey resident could not be found guilty of violating Vehicle and Traffic Law § 381, subd 6, where his motorcycle complied with provisions of New Jersey law relative to registration and equipment. People v Driscoll, 56 Misc. 2d 220, 288 N.Y.S.2d 158, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1669 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1968).

While subd (6) of this section may infringe on the rights of the individual, it is equally apparent that such is incidental to a valid exercise of the police power and is not unreasonable; and when the general tendency and sole object of legislation is to promote public welfare, it is not unconstitutional even if enforcement interferes to some extent with liberty or property. People v Carmichael, 56 Misc. 2d 388, 288 N.Y.S.2d 931, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1694 (N.Y. County Ct. 1968).

Vehicle and Traffic Law § 381, subd 6 is clear, definite and a valid exercise of the state's police power. The statute is not discriminatory so as to deny defendant equal protection of the laws, and does not constitute an unreasonable burden on interstate commerce. The delegation to the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles of the power to adopt and amend regulations governing the required type of helmets does not constitute an improper delegation of legislative powers, and the law in no way contemplates an infringement upon defendant's right of privacy. People v Carmichael, 56 Misc. 2d 388, 288 N.Y.S.2d 931, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1694 (N.Y. County Ct. 1968).

A mini-bike comes within the definition of motorcycle under Vehicle & Traf L § 123; the operator of such a vehicle is required to wear a protective helmet pursuant to Vehicle & Traf L § 381, subd 6. Dean v Holland, 76 Misc. 2d 517, 350 N.Y.S.2d 859, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1525 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1973).

In view of fact that legislature could rationally have believed that a motorcyclist falling to the ground at great speed would sustain greater personal injuries without a helmet than with one and because statute requiring motorcycle operators and riders to wear protective helmets had clear, rational relation to purpose of protecting the individuals involved and the public interest, statute was constitutional. People v Bennett, 89 Misc. 2d 382, 391 N.Y.S.2d 506, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1872 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1977).

Fact that statute requiring that motorcycle operators or riders wear protective helmets was enacted because of desire to qualify State for federal highway construction funds and that federal government thereafter eliminated requirement of a compulsory helmet law did not render statute invalid. People v Bennett, 89 Misc. 2d 382, 391 N.Y.S.2d 506, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1872 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1977).

Wearing motorcycle helmet in such manner that helmet sits on back of head, resting on top of motorcyclist's shoulders, leaving better part of head exposed, known as "cowboy style", is equivalent to not wearing helmet at all in violation of Motorcycle Helmet Law (CLS Veh & Tr Law § 381[6].) People v Bloomfield, 130 Misc. 2d 151, 495 N.Y.S.2d 133, 1985 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3154 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1985).

No person shall operate or move, or cause or knowingly permit to be operated or moved on any highway or bridge thereon, in any county not wholly included within a city, any vehicle or combination of vehicles of a size or weight exceeding the limitations provided for in this section. Except as otherwise specifically provided in subdivision fifteen of this section, no person shall operate or move, or cause or knowingly permit to be operated or moved on any highway or bridge thereon, in any city not wholly included within one county, any vehicle or combination of vehicles of a size or weight exceeding the limitations provided for in the rules and regulations of the city department of transportation of such city adopted pursuant to section sixteen hundred forty-two of this chapter.

(h) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (a) of this subdivision, a house coach used for non-commercial purposes may exceed the maximum width applicable on the highway upon which such house coach is traveling if such excess width is wholly attributable to an awning and its support hardware that is no less than seven and one-half feet off the ground and extends no more than six inches beyond the body of the vehicle on the passenger side and four inches beyond the body of the vehicle on the driver's side. A fifth wheel trailer designed to provide temporary living quarters for recreational, camping, or travel use not to exceed four hundred square feet in the set-up mode and used for non-commercial purposes may exceed the maximum width applicable on the highway upon which such fifth wheel trailer is traveling if such excess width is wholly attributable to an awning and its support hardware that is no less than seven and one-half feet off the ground and extends no more than six inches beyond the body of the vehicle on the passenger side. This provision shall not apply to any city not wholly included within one county except such house coaches and fifth wheel trailers used for non-commercial purposes may be operated on that portion of interstate ninety-five which connects interstate two hundred eighty-seven with interstate two hundred ninety-five, that portion of interstate two hundred ninety-five which connects interstate ninety-five with interstate four hundred ninety-five and that portion of interstate four hundred ninety-five between interstate ninety-five and the Nassau-Queens county line.

(i) The commissioner of transportation may promulgate such rules and regulations as shall be necessary or desirable to effectuate the provisions of this subdivision.

(c) The length of buses having a carrying capacity of more than seven passengers shall not exceed forty-five feet, except that the length of articulated buses shall not exceed sixty-two feet. A house coach shall not exceed forty-five feet in length, provided however, that if a house coach exceeds forty feet in length, its wall-to-wall turning diameter shall not exceed ninety feet three inches and moreover, such house coach shall have permanently affixed to its body on the front passenger side door jamb, a data-plate on which the house coach manufacturer indicates the vehicle identification number and wall-to-wall turning diameter and attests to the fact that the wall-to-wall turning diameter is calculated in accordance with the Society of Automotive Engineers J-695 Standard as such standard existed on June first, two thousand three, regarding turning capability. In the event such a house coach exceeds either twenty-six thousand pounds gross vehicle weight rating, is greater than forty feet in length or exceeds both, the operator of such house coach must have a driver's license with a personal use vehicle endorsement as set forth in subparagraph (vii) of paragraph (b) of subdivision two of section five hundred one of [the]* this chapter. This provision shall not apply to any city not wholly included within one county except such house coaches and fifth wheel trailers used for non-commercial purposes may be operated on that portion of interstate ninety-five which connects interstate two hundred eighty-seven with interstate two hundred ninety-five, that portion of interstate two hundred ninety-five which connects interstate ninety-five with interstate four hundred ninety-five and that portion of interstate four hundred ninety-five between interstate ninety-five and the Nassau-Queens county line.

pounds, except where axles are spaced eight feet or greater, but less than ten feet, the weight on those two axles shall not exceed that permitted by paragraph (b) of subdivision ten of this section and, in addition, shall not exceed forty thousand pounds. Axles to be counted as provided in subdivision five of this section.

10. A single vehicle or a combination of vehicles having three axles or more and equipped with pneumatic tires, when loaded, may have a total weight on all axles not to exceed thirty-four thousand pounds, plus one thousand pounds for each foot and major fraction of a foot of the distance from the center of the foremost axle to the center of the rearmost axle. Axles to be counted as provided in subdivision five of this section. In no case, however, shall the total weight exceed eighty thousand pounds except for a vehicle if operated by an engine fueled primarily by natural gas which may have a maximum gross weight of up to eighty-two thousand pounds. For any vehicle or combination of vehicles having a total gross weight less than seventy-one thousand pounds, the higher of the following shall apply:

(a) the total weight on all axles shall not exceed thirty-four thousand pounds plus one thousand pounds for each foot and major fraction of a foot of the distance from the center of the foremost axle to the center of the rearmost axle, or

(b) the overall gross weight on a group of two or more consecutive axles shall not exceed the weight produced by application of the following formula:

$$W = 500\ ((LxN)/(N-1) + (12xN)+36)$$

where W equals overall gross weight on any group of two or more consecutive axles to the nearest five hundred pounds, L equals distance in feet from the center of the foremost axle to the center of the rearmost axle of any group of two or more consecutive axles, and N equals number of axles in group under consideration, except that two consecutive sets of tandem axles may carry a gross load of thirty-four thousand pounds each providing the overall distance between the first and last axles of such consecutive sets of tandem axles is thirty-six feet or more.

For any vehicle or combination of vehicles having a total gross weight of seventy-one thousand pounds or greater, paragraph (b) shall apply to determine maximum gross weight which is permitted hereunder.

11. A vehicle or combination of vehicles equipped with any solid rubber tires shall not have weights more than eighty per centum of those permitted in this section for pneumatic tires. Notwithstanding the provisions of this section, vehicles equipped with solid rubber tires and registered in this state prior to January first, nineteen hundred thirty-two shall be permitted to operate until January first, nineteen hundred thirty-three under tire and axle loadings prescribed by chapter four hundred ninety-eight of the laws of nineteen hundred thirty.

12. Motor vehicles or vehicles drawn by motor vehicles when equipped with metal tires shall not have weights more than forty per centum of those permitted in this section for pneumatic tires.

17-b. Except over any highway which is a part of a state interstate route, the following weight limits shall apply to any fire vehicle equipped with pneumatic tires.

(a) The total weight on any one wheel shall not be more than sixteen thousand pounds.

(b) The total weight on a single axle shall not be more than thirty-two thousand pounds.

(c) The total weight on two consecutive axles, when such axles are spaced less than ten feet from center to center, shall not be more than forty-two thousand pounds.

(d) The total weight on all axles of a two axle vehicle shall not be more than fifty-two thousand pounds.

23. Except on highways designated as part of the interstate system, the provisions of subdivisions six, seven, eight, nine, ten, eleven and twelve of this section shall not apply to any fire vehicle, as such term is defined in section one hundred fifteen-a of this chapter.

24. The provisions of subdivisions six, seven, eight, nine, ten, eleven and twelve of this section shall not apply to any tow truck that is transporting a disabled vehicle from the place where such vehicle became disabled to the nearest appropriate repair facility and has a gross vehicle weight that is equal to or exceeds the gross vehicle weight of the disabled vehicle being transported.

1. In general

The statute giving to plaintiff a cause of action for damages caused by a vehicle of a height greater than statutorily permitted, provides for absolute liability, and the defense of contributory negligence is not available. New York State Thruway Authority v Maislin Bros. Transport, Ltd., 35 A.D.2d 301, 315 N.Y.S.2d 954, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3290 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1970).

The distribution of a load on a vehicle or the knowledge or lack of knowledge of the accuracy of scales on the part of the operator of the said vehicle are questions of fact and not of law. People v Rodenbach, 126 N.Y.S.2d 295, 204 Misc. 905, 1953 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2434 (N.Y. County Ct. 1953), aff'd, 307 N.Y. 614, 120 N.E.2d 826, 307 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 614, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 1383 (N.Y. 1954).

The mere payment of registration fees pursuant to § 11 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law or the payment of a highway use tax pursuant to Article 21 of the Tax Law has no effect whatsoever upon the provisions of this section. People v Rodenbach, 126 N.Y.S.2d 295, 204 Misc. 905, 1953 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2434 (N.Y. County Ct. 1953), aff'd, 307 N.Y. 614, 120 N.E.2d 826, 307 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 614, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 1383 (N.Y. 1954).

The manifest legislative intent was the maintenance of the safety and preservation of the highways and § 385 and its subdivisions were enacted by the legislature to affect that intent. The provisions of the various subdivisions of the statute are clear, precise and logical with regard to tire width, wheel and axle overweights, with definitive penalty deterrence. People v Hayes, 60 Misc. 2d 208, 302 N.Y.S.2d 484, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1394 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1969).

Police were justified in stopping and weighing truck where they observed splash guards touching ground, tires ballooning out, diesel stack emitting black exhaust, and truck body tilting back; thus, defendant was not entitled to dismissal of prosecution for operating overloaded truck (in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 385) on ground that evidence obtained after stop of truck should have been suppressed. People v Delta Carting Corp., 136 Misc. 2d 268, 518 N.Y.S.2d 572, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2422 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1987).

Regulation limiting use of interstate highway for overwidth and overlength vehicles to use of right lane only, and only between 7:00 p.m. and 7:00 a.m., was unenforceable since procedure contained in 49 USCS § 2311(i) was not utilized in enacting regulation, and enforcement of regulation was therefore preempted by federal statute. People v R.C. Services, Inc., 141 Misc.

Where a corporation was charged with violating vehicle weight restrictions, the controlling provision was N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 385(20-a), not N.Y. C.P.L.R. 311(a)(1). The CPLR governed procedure in civil judicial proceedings, and because the underlying administrative proceeding was not a civil judicial proceeding, the service provisions of N.Y. C.P.L.R. 311(a)(1) did not apply. IESI NY Corp. v Martinez, 8 A.D.3d 667, 778 N.Y.S.2d 900, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9149 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2004).

While N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1642(a) lists certain "enumerated subjects" where local laws shall supersede the provisions of the Vehicle and Traffic Law in cities having a population in excess of one million, service of process is not one of such enumerated subjects; therefore, under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 385(20-a), service upon a corporation's driver was effective to obtain personal jurisdiction over the corporation. IESI NY Corp. v Martinez, 8 A.D.3d 667, 778 N.Y.S.2d 900, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9149 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2004).

Trial court erred when it annulled a decision by the New York State Department of Motor Vehicles Appeals Board which found that a towing company violated New York City, N.Y., R. tit. 34, § 4-15(b)(9) and (10) by operating an overweight truck on the ground that N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 385(20-a) did not allow the City to serve the towing company with process by giving the ticket to the company's driver. Sureway Towing, Inc. v Martinez, 8 A.D.3d 490, 779 N.Y.S.2d 109, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8405 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2004).

2. Constitutionality

Subdivision 8 of this section is unconstitutional in that it violates the due process clause by depriving a man of his livelihood without due process of law when the statute is attempted to be applied to the driver of a vehicle who did not load the truck and for whom it would be impossible to check the weight of the truck upon each of the wheels and drive wheels of his tractor. When a driver receives a bill of lading specifying the weight of the load on his truck, he has done everything possible to comply with the law and if it turns out that the vehicle delivered to him by his employer exceeds the weight limits, he cannot then be found guilty of violating this section with the resultant loss of his license and opportunity to make a living. People v Vadakin, 125 N.Y.S.2d 25, 204 Misc. 904, 1953 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2268 (N.Y. County Ct. 1953).

Subdivision 8 of this section is constitutional. People v Rodenbach, 126 N.Y.S.2d 295, 204 Misc. 905, 1953 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2434 (N.Y. County Ct. 1953), aff'd, 307 N.Y. 614, 120 N.E.2d 826, 307 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 614, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 1383 (N.Y. 1954).

Two region system of permits for trucks, tractor trailers and semi-trailers, allowing greater weights in down state areas because restricted weight limits cause disproportionately greater increase in travel time and construction costs in down state area due to greater traffic congestion, is not unconstitutional since legislation imposing less severe restrictions in down state area reflect rational policy designed to preserve highways and bridges of state with minimal increase in construction costs. Bonded Concrete, Inc. v State, 131 Misc. 2d 567, 500 N.Y.S.2d 927, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2562 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1986).

3. Construction

This section (former § 70) must be strictly construed. People v Strauss, 260 A.D. 880, 22 N.Y.S.2d 880, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5204 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

Under CLS Veh & Tr § 385(20), local law violating prohibitory provision of Federal Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 may not be enacted or enforced; local law that is contrary to funding provisions of STAA is unenforceable only upon notification of eminent loss of federal funds, and then, only to extent that local law is inconsistent with STAA; former § 211(10) of New York City Traffic Regulations Article 19 was unenforceable only to degree it was inconsistent with STAA, and then, only upon notification of eminent loss of funding, as former § 211(10) contravened funding provision of STAA, not prohibitory provision, such that CLS Veh & Tr § 385(20) had no impact on enforcement of former § 211(10) of New York City Traffic Regulations until New York State received notification of eminent loss of federal highway funds. Ruiz v Commissioner of Dep't of Transp., 679 F. Supp. 341, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 553 (S.D.N.Y.), aff'd, 858 F.2d 898, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 14188 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1988).

4. Length of vehicles

In action for injuries sustained when defendant's automobile collided with left front end of hay baler operated on highway in violation of statute providing that width of vehicle shall not be more than eight feet, question whether causal connection between violation of statute and collision existed should have been submitted to jury. Conant v Bradley, 281 A.D. 732, 117 N.Y.S.2d 830, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3367 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

The operation of a 52-foot panel truck and house trailer unit during the hours of darkness, being violative of the 50-foot dimensions set forth in Vehicle and Traffic Law § 385 subdivision 4 and the daylight use limitations set forth in a permit issued by the superintendent of public works, is negligence as a matter of law. Pelkey v Kent, 28 A.D.2d 636, 280 N.Y.S.2d 517, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4234 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1967).

In a prosecution for violating subd. 4 of this section by operating a tractor and trailer exceeding 50 feet in length, it is not incumbent upon the prosecution to establish that the vehicles in question were not owned and used by a public service corporation for repair and maintenance of its properties and facilities, since the exception of such vehicles is by way of "proviso." People v Odermatt, 39 Misc. 2d 217, 240 N.Y.S.2d 295, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2063 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1963).

Defendant operating a flat-bed truck, not a tractor trailer or true tow truck, with one disabled vehicle on top and another disabled car attached to a tow bar with its front wheels off the ground, comprising a total length of 48 feet 6 inches was not operating a "combination" of vehicles within the purview of § 385(4) of the Vehicle and Traffic Law and consequently was in violation of § 385(3) of that statute. People v Mazzio, 53 Misc. 2d 10, 277 N.Y.S.2d 763, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1742 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1967).

Appellate court held that, even assuming plaintiff violated N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 375(2) and 385(3) when he attempted to pull a tree across a public road with a tractor at 5:15 p.m., evidence that a driver who was traveling 55 to 60 miles per hour when she saw what appeared to be a snow drift in the road did not reduce her speed enough to avoid a collision with the tree raised an issue of fact about whether the driver contributed to causing the accident, and the trial court erred by granting the driver's motion for summary judgment. Dumas v Shafer, 4 A.D.3d 720, 772 N.Y.S.2d 411, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2013 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2004).

5. Weight generally

Conviction for overloading truck axles was affirmed over contention that subdivision 19 provided an exception which the people failed to negative. People v Walker, 308 N.Y. 825, 125 N.E.2d 874, 308 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 825, 1955 N.Y. LEXIS 1084 (N.Y. 1955).

Judge erred in failing to impose minimum fines required by statute for second and subsequent offenses of driving overloaded truck. In re Schmidt, 31 A.D.2d 214, 296 N.Y.S.2d 49, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2545 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1968).

Court properly determined that CLS Veh & Tr § 385(15) and related regulations governing issuance of divisible load overweight permits, 17 NYCRR Part 154, do not violate due process rights of truck haulers as guaranteed by Fourteenth Amendment and CLS NY Const Art I § 6, since regulation of weight of vehicles for purposes of highway safety and protection of highways and bridges is valid exercise of state power, and plaintiff failed to meet heavy burden of demonstrating that regulations are not reasonably related to those purposes. Intrastate Trucking Corp. v White, 185 A.D.2d 697, 586 N.Y.S.2d 65, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9255 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1992).

Court properly determined that CLS Veh & Tr § 385(15) and related regulations governing issuance of divisible load overweight permits, 17 NYCRR Part 154, do not violate equal protection clauses of Fourteenth Amendment and CLS NY Const Art I § 11, although they authorize issuance of permits for vehicles registered prior to 1986 and their replacements of same type and purpose, while making vehicles registered after January 1, 1986 ineligible for such permits, since establishment of cut-off date for issuance of permits or grandfathering of certain vehicles registered prior to cut-off date does not constitute invalid classification where legislation and regulatory scheme are rationally related to achievement of governmental purpose of reducing overall weight of vehicles travelling on state highways. Intrastate Trucking Corp. v White, 185 A.D.2d 697, 586 N.Y.S.2d 65, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9255 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1992).

Court properly determined that CLS Veh & Tr § 385(15) and related regulations governing issuance of divisible load overweight permits, 17 NYCRR Part 154, do not impose undue burden on interstate commerce, since regulation of weight of vehicles for purposes of highway safety and protection of highways and bridges is valid exercise of state power, and plaintiff failed to meet heavy burden of demonstrating that regulations discriminate against interstate commerce. Intrastate Trucking Corp. v White, 185 A.D.2d 697, 586 N.Y.S.2d 65, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9255 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1992).

Summons issued under CLS Veh & Tr § 385 was proper means of charging owner of cement mixer operated in Queens with violation of vehicle weight regulations applicable in New York City. Corona Ready Mix v State DMV Traffic Violations Bureau Appeals Bd., 226 A.D.2d 630, 641 N.Y.S.2d 128, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4391 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

Court would annul determination finding that petitioner violated CLS Veh & Tr § 385(9) where necessary element of charged offense (i.e., that offending vehicle was equipped with pneumatic tires at time of alleged offense) was not shown by substantial evidence. New York Paving, Inc. v Jackson, 272 A.D.2d 330, 708 N.Y.S.2d 306, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4809 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2000).

The heaviest vehicle or combination of vehicles permitted on any highway or bridge in any county not wholly within a city is limited to 71,000 pounds or 35 ½ tons. Bakery Salvage Corp. v Lackawanna, 48 Misc. 2d 975, 265 N.Y.S.2d 471, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1262 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1965), rev'd, 30 A.D.2d 207, 291 N.Y.S.2d 104, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3546 (N.Y. Under statute defining arrest as taking of person into custody that he may be held to answer for an offense, stopping of vehicle on public highway for purposes of inspection and to detect overloading did not constitute an "arrest". People v Amitrano, 59 Misc. 2d 471, 299 N.Y.S.2d 275, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1653 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1969).

Use by police or a weight loader under each rear wheel of defendant's vehicle for purpose of determining weight on each wheel was logical, reasonable, consistent with legislative intent, and in conformity with the provisions of the statute. People v Hayes, 60 Misc. 2d 208, 302 N.Y.S.2d 484, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1394 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1969).

Defendant was not entitled to dismissal of prosecution for operating overloaded truck in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 385, on ground that police did not check to see if his truck was loaded when it was stopped and weighed, since People were required to prove only that gross weight on truck's rear axles exceeded 36,000 pounds, whether truck was loaded or unloaded; under CLS Veh & Tr § 117, "gross weight" is weight of vehicle without load, plus load (if any). People v Delta Carting Corp., 136 Misc. 2d 268, 518 N.Y.S.2d 572, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2422 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1987).

Absolute liability imposed by state statute upon the operator of an over-weight vehicle for damages sustained by virtue of an excessively high load runs to private plaintiffs as well as the State, and contributory negligence is not a defense. Ebasco Services, Inc. v Pacific Intermountain Express Co., 398 F. Supp. 565, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11795 (S.D.N.Y. 1975).

6. —Knowledge of over-weight

Absent direct or circumstantial evidence that petitioner had knowledge that dump truck he owned but was not driving had excessive weight load on rear axle, petitioner was improperly convicted of violating CLS Veh & Tr § 385(9), which makes it offense to operate or "knowingly permit" overweight vehicle to be operated on highway. Accorso v Appeals Bd. of Administrative Adjudication Bureau, 185 A.D.2d 611, 586 N.Y.S.2d 40, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9122 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1992).

Sanitation company was properly found responsible for violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 385, despite its assertion that it lacked actual knowledge of excessive weight of its truck, since company was responsible for knowledge and deeds of its officers and agents acting within scope of their employment duties. Allied Sanitation v Adduci, 226 A.D.2d 195, 640 N.Y.S.2d 541, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3873 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

Employee-operator could not be convicted of charge of operating motor vehicle upon highway in excess of weight limitations prescribed by statute, in the absence of proof that he had knowledge of the breach or the basis upon which an inference of knowledge could be drawn. People v Cubiotti, 4 Misc. 2d 44, 157 N.Y.S.2d 784, 1956 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1264 (N.Y. City Ct. 1956).

The defendant in a prosecution under this section could not contend that they had no knowledge of the over-weight where they admitted that they did not know whether they were overweight or not at the time they went to a weigh station. People v Fortino, 14 Misc. 2d 725, 183 N.Y.S.2d 213, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2380 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1958).

Proof of knowledge for violation of subdivision 10 of this section is required only in the case of an owner or employer not operating the vehicle. People ex rel. Harding v Matessino, 15 Misc. 2d 7, 179 N.Y.S.2d 911, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2941 (N.Y. County Ct. 1958).

Conviction of a driver for overloading a truck under subd 8 of this section does not require proof of his knowledge as to weight of the load. People v Vinciguerra, 24 Misc. 2d 63, 203 N.Y.S.2d 953, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2562 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960).

If City of Poughkeepsie employees, who are driving city trucks are arrested in a nearby town on charges of operating overweight vehicles, even though they had no knowledge of the overloading, no duties in relation to loading the trucks and no means of weighing their loaded trucks, the Corporation Counsel may not represent them. However, the city could pay claims submitted by them for reimbursement for their losses. 1980 Op Atty Gen Aug 4 (informal).

7. Accuracy of scales

On appeal from conviction under this section, the court would not admit proof of truck weight where there was not adequate legal proof of accuracy of the weighing devices. People v Brandon, 5 Misc. 2d 946, 165 N.Y.S.2d 640, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3249 (N.Y. County Ct. 1957).

In prosecution for violation under this section, judgment of conviction was set aside where the evidence as to the accuracy of the weighing devices was not sufficient. People v Marotta, 5 Misc. 2d 947, 165 N.Y.S.2d 639, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3231 (N.Y. County Ct. 1957).

In prosecution for violation of subdivision of Vehicle and Traffic Law limiting the weight of trucks when in operation on public highways, the accuracy of device used to weigh truck must be established to the degree required by law to establish guilt in criminal proceedings, and the burden of proof cannot be shifted to defendant by requiring that he disprove the prosecution's testimony. People v Marotta, 5 Misc. 2d 947, 165 N.Y.S.2d 639, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3231 (N.Y. County Ct. 1957).

A judgment of conviction under subdivision 10 of this section was reversed and the fine remitted where (1) certificates of the State Department of Agriculture and Markets stating that "Load-O-Meters" had been approved were improperly admitted to evidence. People v Hazelton, 10 Misc. 2d 361, 169 N.Y.S.2d 490, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2210 (N.Y. County Ct. 1957).

A conviction for violation of this section could not be sustained where the evidence showed that scales had not previously been tested for a period of 12 months and no witness was able to testify to the accuracy thereof at the date of the alleged violation. People v Dazi, 14 Misc. 2d 774, 179 N.Y.S.2d 910, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2849 (N.Y. County Ct. 1957).

Defendant was properly convicted of violating subdivision 8 of this section where the scales used were tested 2 months before the defendant was arrested. The period of 2 months was not excessive. People v Macomb, 9 Misc. 2d 1027, 174 N.Y.S.2d 330, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3717 (N.Y. County Ct. 1958).

In a prosecution under subdivision 10 of this section, where measuring devices used were portable scales known as "loadometers," readings were not incompetent because no proper evidence of accuracy of the scales on the day of the offense was offered. The scales had been tested 3 and ½ months prior to the offense and the overload was nearly 35 percent above the allowable limit. There was no evidence of damage to the scales or that they were grossly inaccurate. People ex rel. Harding v Matessino, 15 Misc. 2d 7, 179 N.Y.S.2d 911, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2941 (N.Y. County Ct. 1958).

The burden of proof rests on the prosecution to establish the accuracy of scales used in measuring the weight of a truck. People ex rel. Harding v Matessino, 15 Misc. 2d 7, 179 N.Y.S.2d 911, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2941 (N.Y. County Ct. 1958).

In a prosecution for overloading a truck, testimony of a state inspector of weights and measures, with over 20 years' service, that he had tested the scales used to weigh defendant's truck three and one-half months prior to and four days after the day on which defendant's truck was weighed and found them to be correct on both dates, and that he had never found scales of the type in question in error was sufficient to establish accuracy of the scales. People v Vinciguerra, 24 Misc. 2d 63, 203 N.Y.S.2d 953, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2562 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960).

In prosecution under Vehicle and Traffic Law § 385 as to the weight of the vehicle which the defendant was operating, where the People's expert can testify in detail as to the procedure following in testing the scales in order to certify their accuracy, and can testify that the scales must have read within 3 percent of the weights applied, he can testify that in his opinion they were accurate at the time they were tested, even though he is unable to recall the weights that were applied to the scales or what the scales read after the weights were applied to them. People v Dionne, 61 Misc. 2d 211, 304 N.Y.S.2d 1022, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1404 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1969).

Where automobile had been leased for period of three days, lessee, sued to recover for injuries sustained when vehicle was involved in accident while being operated by party to whom lessee had lent vehicle, was not "owner" within meaning of statute imputing to owner negligence of one who uses or operates with his permission, with owner defined to include lessee having exclusive use for period greater than 30 days. Carasso v Sternberg, 63 Misc. 2d 861, 313 N.Y.S.2d 851, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1404 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1970).

Defendant was not entitled to dismissal of prosecution for operating overloaded truck in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 385, on ground that scales used to weigh truck were not shown to be accurate, where scales had been certified as accurate 7 months previously; scales need not be certified as accurate more frequently. People v Delta Carting Corp., 136 Misc. 2d 268, 518 N.Y.S.2d 572, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2422 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1987).

In a prosecution under this section, evidence that defendant's vehicle was overloaded based upon testimony of what the state's scales showed was inadmissible without proof of the accuracy of the scales upon which the vehicle had been weighed. There is no presumption that the scales of the state of New York are any more accurate than the scales of any private individual. People v Du Shane, 125 N.Y.S.2d 9, 1953 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2266 (N.Y. County Ct. 1953); People v Vadakin, 125 N.Y.S.2d 25, 204 Misc. 904, 1953 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2268 (N.Y. County Ct. 1953)).

Finding that the corporation's truck exceeded weight limits in violation of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 385(9), 401(7)(F)(b) was supported by substantial evidence and, as a result, the corporation was not entitled to relief under N.Y. C.P.L.R. art. 78; the traffic enforcement agent's testimony regarding the condition of the roadway at the location of the weighing site, the agent's training, the accuracy of the scales, the manner in which the agent weighed the corporation's vehicle, and the weight observed and recorded for each measurement provided a sufficient basis for the determination of the that the truck exceeded the weight limit, and the agent's uncontroverted testimony established that the ground where the scales were placed was level, even, and clear of dirt and debris. Sprint Recycling, Inc. v Martinez, 12 A.D.3d 451, 784 N.Y.S.2d 597, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13301 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2004).

8. Permit to exceed weight or size limitations

A permit to operate over a town highway a vehicle to transport steel trusses which exceed the dimensions allowed for trucks should be issued by the town highway superintendent. 1960 Ops St Compt File #569.

A town may, under cited section, issue a permit authorizing the operation of overweight vehicles on town roads. 1967 Ops St Compt File #626.

9. Posting limitations on bridges

Where a bridge had been part of a town highway but its repair and maintenance had been taken over by a county, although this section did not expressly require the county to post load-limit signs on the approaches to the bridge, as distinguished from the bridge itself, the legislative purpose was clearly to require that signs be adequate in size and placement. Such obligation rested on the county irrespective of this section. The purpose thereof was to give fair warning of load danger ahead; otherwise the driver could rightfully assume that a bridge was safe. Turner v County of Clinton, 285 A.D. 210, 136 N.Y.S.2d 471, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3311 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954), reh'g denied, 285 A.D. 987, 139 N.Y.S.2d 264, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6387 (N.Y. Regardless of whether or not it was the duty of the county superintendent, under subd 17 to "post" the bridge, there is no responsibility on the county to maintain same unless the bridge has been inspected by the county superintendent and has been ordered posted by the town superintendent of highways as safe for restricted use. Wilson v Board of Sup'rs, 273 N.Y.S. 924, 152 Misc. 645, 1934 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1589 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1934).

The duty to post bridges is placed upon the town superintendent of highways under this section. Blooming Grove v Clark, 87 N.Y.S.2d 678, 194 Misc. 684, 1949 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1978 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1949).

In wrongful death action, alleging that death resulted from blow on head suffered when deceased's head was struck by an overhead bridge while deceased was riding on top of a loaded truck, evidence failed to establish the negligence of the city in failing to post a sign indicating overhead clearance, but did establish that decedent was contributorily negligent. Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v New York, 5 Misc. 2d 110, 160 N.Y.S.2d 365, 1956 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1329 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1956).

Motor carrier was liable under state law to consignee for damage to shipment sustained when top of shipment struck under side of state vehicle bridge. Ebasco Services, Inc. v Pacific Intermountain Express Co., 398 F. Supp. 565, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11795 (S.D.N.Y. 1975).

10. Variance

Conviction of truck drivers was sustained despite the fact that they were charged with violation subdivision 11 of this section although proof showed violation of subdivision 10 of this section. Reference to wrong subdivision was mere surplusage where information advised defendants of acts relied upon to constitute violation. People v Santiago, 3 N.Y.2d 809, 166 N.Y.S.2d 9, 144 N.E.2d 648, 1957 N.Y. LEXIS 913 (N.Y. 1957).

11. Disposition of violation

Truck operator, the operator's employer, and the truck owner were not entitled to summary judgment in a driver's action, arising from the driver rear-ending the truck that had suddenly stopped upon hitting a bridge overpass, as an issue of fact existed as to whether it was negligent to be on that expressway due to the height maximums. Baez-Pena v MM Truck & Body Repair, Inc., 151 A.D.3d 473, 56 N.Y.S.3d 307, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4450 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2017).

A justice of the peace may, in the exercise of sound judicial discretion, fix the amount of bail for a defendant at less than the minimum amount of the fine, providing he is satisfied that the defendant will appear for his trial as ordered. 1964 Ops St Compt File #1007.

Where two inconsistent enactments are passed in the same year but adopted on different dates amending the same sections of a former statute and the effective date is different, the later statute will be deemed controlling. 1932 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 108.

When under the laws of a foreign state a semi-trailer and tractor are registered as one vehicle this will be deemed sufficient when such vehicles are operated in New York, although New York requires each vehicle to be registered. 1933 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 113.

Maximum axle weight limitations permitted by New York law are grandfathered by federal law; state law, in establishing 34,000 lb weight limit for each set of consecutive tandem axles, is consistent with federal law; maximum overall gross weight limitation of 80,000 lbs contained in New York law equals overall gross weight limitation permitted by federal law; therefore, State may not amend CLS Veh & Tr Law § 385 regarding axle weight requirements for vehicles with overall gross weight between 71,000 and 80,000 lbs. N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 89-F6.

2. Construction

Where a statute provides that the "length of single vehicle, inclusive of load, . . . , shall be not more than thirty-three feet" and "a combination of such vehicles, inclusive of load, shall be not more than eighty-five feet," no vehicle, including its load, within the combination shall be more than thirty-three feet in length. 1931 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 240.

CLS Veh & Tr § 1640(a)(20) must be read in relation to and consistent with CLS Veh & Tr § 385. 2004 NY Ops Atty Gen I 04-10.

4. Weight generally

A state trooper under certain circumstances can direct an operator of a vehicle required to have a highway use permit under Article 21 of the Tax Law to proceed to a weighing station for the purpose of verifying its weight thereunder even if such station is more than three miles distant. The three mile limitation contained in Vehicle & Traffic Law § 70(2-a) does not apply to Article 21 of the Tax Law. 1953 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 127.

The weight of the driver is included in the maximum weights permitted for a vehicle or combination of vehicles under this section. 1955 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 217.

Issuance of special permits for divisible loads which will allow trucks to exceed State and Federal weight limits is encompassed by grandfathering provision, but DOT's authority is limited by established maximum weight ceilings for various classes of vehicles in geographic areas, and issuance of special permits should not jeopardize Federal highway funding. 1986 NY Ops Atty Gen No. 86-F12.

Village may enact local law excluding from village highways trucks weighing less than maximum weight limits permitted under state law, but it may enforce such local law and impose fines for violations thereof only with respect to conduct that does not also violate state weight limits. 2004 NY Ops Atty Gen I 04-10.

Delegation to exclude heavy trucks in CLS Veh & Tr § 1640(a)(20) is most reasonably interpreted as delegating authority to exclude trucks that weigh less than maximum weight permitted under CLS Veh & Tr § 385, rather than as delegating authority to regulate and punish conduct that otherwise violates maximum weight limits already established by § 385. 2004 NY Ops Atty Gen I 04-10.

5. Permit to exceed weight or size limitations

A county engineer has no authority to issue permits for motor trucks to exceed legal weight limits on public highways. However, it seems the state commissioner of highways may grant such authority to a county superintendent. 1930 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 390.

The State Superintendent of Public Works has authority, in proper cases, to issue permits to operate motor vehicles upon state highways, the weights and dimensions of which exceed the limitations provided by this section. It would seem that, at the present time, the propriety of issuing such a permit would be dependent upon whether the use of such overweight vehicles would be conducive to the war effort. 1944 NY Ops Atty Gen May 24.

The Superintendent of Public Works lacks the authority to permit a highway towing operation involving more than two vehicles. 1955 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 218.

The former Department of Public Works, now the Department of Transportation, on July 1, 1956, had legal authority under the provisions of section 14, subdivision 19 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, L 1956, ch 348 (now section 385, subd 15), to issue special hauling permits for the operation upon the highways of a vehicle or combination of vehicles which exceeded the statutory limits even if the load dimension or weight was divisible. 1979 NY Ops Atty Gen June 25 (Informal).

6. Posting limitations on bridges

Railroad corporations must erect signs at both ends of all bridges or viaducts upon highways of the state system crossing such railroads, stating the capacity in tons which such bridges or viaducts can safely carry. 1935 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 245.

Town bridges should be posted in accordance with Vehicle and Traffic Law, § 1660, subd 20(b). 1980 NY Ops Atty Gen Jan 9 (Informal), 1980 N.Y. AG LEXIS 158.

7. Disposition of violation

The provision in former § 70, subd 2, that sentence or execution of sentence for any violation thereunder may not be suspended is valid. 1955 NY Ops Atty Gen (informal).

A fine for violation of the cited section may not be less than the minimum prescribed under subdivision 16. A sentence or execution of a sentence imposing a fine or imprisonment may not be suspended. 1965 NY Ops Atty Gen Dec 21.

The court may not suspend the sentence of a fine or imprisonment or the execution thereof for any violation of the provisions of Section 385 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law. 1970 NY Ops Atty Gen June 10.

The possible dispositions of a proceeding wherein violation of Vehicle and Traffic Law, § 385 is charged include alternate sentences of conditional or unconditional discharge and intermittent imprisonment, as well as dismissal in the interest of justice or adjournment in contemplation of dismissal pursuant to CPL 170.40 and CPL 170.55. 1973 NY Ops Atty Gen July 6 (Informal), 1973 N.Y. § 388. Negligence in use or operation of vehicle attributable to owner

1. Every owner of a vehicle used or operated in this state shall be liable and responsible for death or injuries to person or property resulting from negligence in the use or operation of such vehicle, in the business of such owner or otherwise, by any person using or operating the same with the permission, express or implied, of such owner. Whenever any vehicles as hereinafter defined shall be used in combination with one another, by attachment or tow, the person using or operating any one vehicle shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be using or operating each vehicle in the combination, and the owners thereof shall be jointly and severally liable hereunder.

2. As used in this section, "vehicle" means a "motor vehicle", as defined in section one hundred twenty-five of this chapter, except fire and police vehicles, self-propelled combines, self-propelled corn and hay harvesting machines and tractors used exclusively for agricultural purposes, and shall also include "semitrailer" and "trailer" as defined in article one of this chapter, whether or not such vehicles are used or operated upon a public highway. For the purpose of this section, self-propelled caterpillar or crawler-type equipment while being operated on the contract site, shall not be defined as motor vehicles.

3. As used in this section, "owner" shall be as defined in section one hundred twenty-eight of this chapter and their liability under this section shall be joint and several. If a vehicle be sold under a contract of sale which reserves a security interest in the vehicle in favor of the vendor, such vendor or his assignee shall not, after delivery of such vehicle, be deemed an owner within the provisions of this section, but the vendee, or his assignee, receiving possession thereof, shall be deemed such owner notwithstanding the terms of such contract, until the vendor or his assignee shall retake possession of such vehicle. A secured party in whose favor there is a security interest in any vehicle out of his possession, shall not be deemed an owner within the provisions of this section.

4. All bonds executed by or policies of insurance issued to the owner of any vehicle subject to the provisions of this section shall contain a provision for indemnity or security against the liability and responsibility provided in this section; but, except as provided in paragraphs one and two of subsection (g) of section three thousand four hundred twenty of the insurance law, this provision shall not be construed as requiring that such a policy include insurance against any liability of the insured, being an individual, for death of or injuries to his or her spouse or for injury to property of his or her spouse, where the injured spouse, to be entitled to recover, must prove the culpable conduct of the insured spouse.

I. Generally

1. In general

Under this section, the owner of a motor vehicle is now liable for injuries to another resulting from negligence in its operation, where the driver was legally operating it with permission of the owner, whether in the owner's business or otherwise. Irwin v Klein, 271 N.Y. 477, 3 N.E.2d 601, 271 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 477, 1936 N.Y. LEXIS 1225 (N.Y. 1936).

This section is designed in the interest of public safety in the exercise of police power of the state, and is applicable to a carrier engaged in interstate commerce. Dittman v Davis, 274 A.D. 836, 80 N.Y.S.2d 737, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3572 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948), aff'd, 299 N.Y. 601, 86 N.E.2d 175, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 601, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 1066 (N.Y. 1949).

This section does not extend the liability of an owner beyond the ordinary liability of a master for the acts of his servant within the course of his employment. Burmaster v State, 7 A.D.2d 775, 179 N.Y.S.2d 980, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4095 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958), aff'd, 7 N.Y.2d 65, 195 N.Y.S.2d 385, 163 N.E.2d 742, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 874 (N.Y. 1959).

Neither public policy nor any language in CLS Veh & Tr § 388 prohibited insurance companies' insureds from privately contracting to permit defendant insurance company's insured (car rental company) from disclaiming that portion of its liability that exceeded amount for which vehicle owners were required to be insured under CLS Veh & Tr §§ 388 and 370. Government Emples. Ins. Co. v Chrysler Ins. Co., 256 A.D.2d 1212, 682 N.Y.S.2d 508, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14379 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

Under the former analogous section if the owner chose to intrust his car to another person, he invested such person, as long as he used the automobile, with the same authority in regard to the management of the automobile which the owner possessed, including the right to select the operator. Feitelberg v Matuson, 208 N.Y.S. 786, 124 Misc. 595, 1925 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 713 (N.Y. Mun. Ct. 1925).

The responsibility imposed upon the owner of a motor vehicle by this section includes injury to the person or damage to the property of the lender. Shuler v Whitmore, Rauber & Vicinus, 246 N.Y.S. 528, 138 Misc. 814, 1930 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1693 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1930), aff'd, 233 A.D. 892, 251 N.Y.S. 886, 1931 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13647 (N.Y. App. Div. 1931).

Under this section, liability is dependent upon legal use or operation in business "or otherwise" with permission or consent, and the legislature has not otherwise changed the rules governing the liability of the master for acts of his servant. Bindert v Elmhurst Taxi Corp., 6 N.Y.S.2d 666, 168 Misc. 892, 1938 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1916 (N.Y. Mun. Ct. 1938).

This section which provides that an owner of an automobile is responsible for injuries caused by the negligence of any person operating the vehicle with his permission, does not otherwise change any of the rules of liability. Rodgers v Ward, 8 N.Y.S.2d 167, 169 Misc. 559, 1938 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2168 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1938), aff'd, 256 A.D. 986, 11 N.Y.S.2d 240, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5777 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1939).

The automobile owner's liability arising by statutory imputation to owner of negligence of driver with permissive use of the vehicle results in species of "quasi employment" or control similar to employment, and is derivative and akin to liability of master for his servant's negligent acts under "respondeat superior" doctrine. Jenks v Veeder Contracting Co., 30 N.Y.S.2d 278, 177 Misc. 240, 1941 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2257 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1941), modified, 264 A.D. 979, 37 N.Y.S.2d 230, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5606 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

Owner passenger has derivative liability and responsibility for death or injuries to persons or property resulting from negligence in the use or operation of the owner's vehicle by permittee. Durham v Holmes, 79 Misc. 2d 143, 359 N.Y.S.2d 736, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1602 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1974).

Under this section an owner of a motor car is not a joint tort feasor with one whom he allowed to drive it but is in effect his surety. Kramer v Morgan, 85 F.2d 96, 1936 U.S. App. LEXIS 4041 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1936).

Under this section the owner of an automobile is held responsible for damages caused by another person's negligent driving of the owner's car when the car is taken with consent of such owner. ((American) Lumbermens Mut. Casualty Co. v Timms & Howard, Inc., 108 F.2d 497, 1939 U.S. App. LEXIS 2598 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1939).

2. Procedure

Where a release has been given to the driver of an automobile, but the releasor reserves the right to proceed against other wrongdoers, affect should be given to the intention of the parties as expressed by these reservations and a suit may be subsequently maintained against the owner of the vehicle. Plath v Justus, 28 N.Y.2d 16, 319 N.Y.S.2d 433, 268 N.E.2d 117, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 1551 (N.Y. 1971).

Where driver of automobile which struck and killed decedent received release from decedent's executor which release reserved rights against the owner of the automobile, the owner was not released from liability where he demonstrated no prejudice. Plath v Justus, 33 A.D.2d 833, 306 N.Y.S.2d 80, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2677 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969), aff'd, 28 N.Y.2d 16, 319 N.Y.S.2d 433, 268 N.E.2d 117, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 1551 (N.Y. 1971).

This section created a new liability directly against an owner. An injured party may sue the operator alone or the owner alone, or both jointly. The death of one does not abate an action against the other. Hatch v Lovejoy, 254 N.Y.S. 35, 142 Misc. 137, 1931 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1555 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1931).

Subdivision 3 of section 167 of the Insurance Law was amended so as to limit the presumptive exclusion of interspousal coverage to cases where the injured spouse must prove the culpable conduct of the insured spouse in order to recover; therefore, in an action for contribution against the defendant husband, following a judgment in favor of the defendant's wife, and dismissal of the husband's suit against plaintiffs, resulting from an automobile accident in which the wife sustained injury, the wife's insurance company was obligated to defend and indemnify the defendant husband, since the wife's recovery was not dependent upon proof of her husband's negligence. Ward v Accordino, 93 Misc. 2d 746, 403 N.Y.S.2d 438, 1978 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2129 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1978).

Where a counterclaim in a N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388 action was filed against a guardian, individually, the counterclaim potentially placed the guardian's pecuniary interests in conflict with those of the minor passengers; therefore, the guardian had to be removed and the attorney could not continue to represent both the guardian and the passengers, since continued representation could violate N.Y. Code of Prof. Resp. DR 5-105(B), N.Y. Comp. Codes R. & Regs. tit. 22, § 1200.24. Alcantara v Mendez, 303 A.D.2d 337, 756 N.Y.S.2d 90, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2133 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003).

In action by New York residents who were injured in collision in New Jersey with automobile leased to driver by California corporation, if applicable conflict-of-laws rules dictated that New York law would apply, CLS Veh & Tr Law § 388 would render lessor liable for plaintiffs' injuries because New York courts have interpreted § 388 to have extraterritorial effect. Heisler v Toyota Motor Credit Corp., 884 F. Supp. 128, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6472 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

Under New Jersey choice-of-law rules, New York law, which provides that owner of vehicle is liable for injuries resulting from negligence of any person using vehicle with permission of owner, rather than New Jersey law, which provides that vehicle owner is not liable for negligence of another operating vehicle in absence of agency or employment relationship between owner and driver, applies in action against, inter alia, driver and lessor of vehicle, where New York is state where vehicle is registered, where lease between lessor and driver was entered into, and where relevant defendants reside and do business, because application of New York law will substantially further New York's strong policy of holding owners of vehicles registered in New York financially responsible for torts of those permitted to use vehicles. McKinney v S & S Trucking, 885 F. Supp. 105, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6457 (D.N.J. 1995).

3. Purpose

It could not be inferred that by the enactment of the former analogous section the legislature intended to afford additional protection to those for whom the legislature had already provided. Ottmann v Rockville Centre, 273 N.Y. 205, 7 N.E.2d 102, 273 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 205, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1193 (N.Y.), reh'g denied, 275 N.Y. 270, 9 N.E.2d 862, 275 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 270, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1426 (N.Y. 1937).

Although, under common law, the rule is that an owner of an automobile, who merely permits another to drive his car, would not be liable for negligence of the driver, except under the theory of respondeat superior or agency, the Legislature enacted Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 for the purpose of fixing liability on an owner of an automobile for the negligent operation of his car by another with his consent, and in so doing, the Legislature intended that the injured party be afforded a financially responsible insured person against whom to recover for injuries. Plath v Justus, 28 N.Y.2d 16, 319 N.Y.S.2d 433, 268 N.E.2d 117, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 1551 (N.Y. 1971).

It was the intention of the legislature to provide that the owner of an automobile should be liable if a third person was using the automobile with the owner's permission, and to prevent an owner from escaping liability by saying that his automobile was being used at the time and place of the accident without specific authority or not in his business. Plaumbo v Ryan, 213 A.D. 517, 210 N.Y.S. 225, 1925 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8534 (N.Y. App. Div. 1925).

Statute regarding liability for negligent operation of motor vehicle merely creates liability, where none would otherwise exist, by making owner, who consents to use of his automobile by another, responsible for negligence of user, even though automobile is being employed solely for user's personal and private use. Jackson v Brown & Kleinhenz, Inc., 246 A.D. 445, 284 N.Y.S. 44, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8699 (N.Y. App. Div. 1935), rev'd, 273 N.Y. 365, 7 N.E.2d 265, 273 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 365, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1214 (N.Y. 1937).

It was not the intention of the legislature that the provisions of this section should insure the safety of passengers riding in a car which had been left in the custody of a repairman for the purpose of making repairs, when the passengers were in the car for their own benefit and enjoyment through no invitation of the owner, express or implied, but through invitation of the repairman, who had no authority, express or implied, to invite them. Such an owner reasonably could not have contemplated or anticipated that his car would be used upon the street or roadway for any such purpose. Svenson v Zakrocki, 268 A.D. 777, 48 N.Y.S.2d 567, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3435 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944).

An owner's liability under this section is purely statutory, being designed to prevent an owner, who has given permission for use of his car, from escaping liability to injured persons by claiming that the car was not being used in his business, and the statute may not be presumed to make any innovation upon the common law further than required by the mischief to be remedied. Sikora v Keillor, 17 A.D.2d 6, 230 N.Y.S.2d 571, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8567 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1962), aff'd, 13 N.Y.2d 610, 240 N.Y.S.2d 601, 191 N.E.2d 88, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 1220 (N.Y. 1963).

Statutory presumption that vehicle is being operated under insured owner's consent at time of accident is supportive of policy that there should be recourse to financially responsible defendant for one injured by negligent operation of vehicle. Phoenix v Bolton, 59 A.D.2d 464, 399 N.Y.S.2d 914, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13949 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977), app. denied, 44 N.Y.2d 641, 1978 N.Y. LEXIS 4238 (N.Y. 1978).

The purpose of the former analogous section was to protect the public and to make an owner liable for an injury caused by the negligent operation of his car, where his implied permission to use or operate it, in his business or otherwise, could be gathered from all the circumstances surrounding its possession by another, at the time it was negligently operated. Katz v Wolff & Reinheimer, Inc., 221 N.Y.S. 476, 129 Misc. 384, 1927 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 744 (N.Y. Mun. Ct. 1927).

This section was passed to establish liability where none before existed, not to limit an existing liability. It fixes liability on an absentee owner where his car is being operated by another with his consent even though not in his business. The enactment of this section was not intended to defeat or limit the liability of a servant to his master and the agent to his principal for his own tort. Hence, the section could not be used to defeat an action brought by plaintiff to recover damages for the death of her husband caused by an accident while the decedent was riding in an automobile owned by him but alleged to have been operated at the time of the accident by the defendant. Urquhart v McEvoy, 126 N.Y.S.2d 539, 204 Misc. 426, 1953 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2458 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1953).

This section was intended to make the "owner" of a vehicle liable to the injured party when the vehicle is used with his permission, whether or not used in his behalf, and was not intended to change the owner's common-law liability to any other extent. Singerman Bus Corp. v American Fidelity Fire Ins. Co., 44 Misc. 2d 4, 252 N.Y.S.2d 780, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1620 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1964).

Sup. 1952. The purpose of the statute imposing liability upon owner of automobile for injury resulting from negligence in operation of automobile by a person legally operating automobile with owner's express or implied permission was to remove hardship which common-law rule visited upon innocent persons by preventing owner from escaping liability on ground that his automobile was being used without authority or not on owner's business. Parker v Telesco, 111 N.Y.S.2d 481, 1952 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2530 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1952).

4. Construction of terms

Statute making owner of automobile liable for injuries caused while it is driven with his consent must be confined to cases which fairly fall within scope of its language, but statute must be given construction which will result in fulfillment of its purpose. Jackson v Brown & Kleinhenz, 273 N.Y. 365, 7 N.E.2d 265, 273 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 365, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1214 (N.Y. 1937).

Statute establishing liability of owner of motor vehicle used or operated by another with his permission is in derogation of common law and is to be strictly construed. Hanley v Albano, 20 A.D.2d 644, 246 N.Y.S.2d 380, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4580 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1964).

Defendant, the insurer of a trailer unit, was not liable to plaintiff, the insurer of a tractor unit, for any portion of the amount paid by plaintiff to settle personal injury and property damage claims arising out of an accident involving the tractor trailer rig operated in combination by an employee of the tractor owner, since the insurance coverage required by Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 for every owner of a vehicle used or operated in the State is for liability of the owner of each unit of a combined rig and, while liability of owners of units of a combined rig may be joint and several with respect to injured third parties, the statute creates no right of contribution or indemnification on behalf of plaintiff insurer against defendant insurer. Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v Merchants Mut. Ins. Co., 100 A.D.2d 318, 475 N.Y.S.2d 517, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17008 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1984), aff'd, 64 N.Y.2d 840, 487 N.Y.S.2d 322, 476 N.E.2d 648, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 14170 (N.Y. 1985).

That the former analogous section was added to the Highway Law, Art 11, after that article had been substantially repealed and re-enacted in the Vehicle and Traffic Law, was of no merit, for this section was enacted by the legislature and signed by the governor, and while it may be an orphan it became and is a part of the statutory law of the state. Snyder v Binghamton, 245 N.Y.S. 497, 138 Misc. 259, 1930 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1616 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1930), aff'd, 233 A.D. 782, 250 N.Y.S. 917, 1931 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12620 (N.Y. App. Div. 1931).

The liability of automobile owner for damages resulting from negligent operation of automobile by another person with owner's consent is derivative only, being imposed by statute, and is not dependent upon any wrongdoing of the owner, nor does the operator's negligence become the negligence of the owner. Puccio v Carr, 31 N.Y.S.2d 805, 177 Misc. 706, 1941 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2456 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1941), aff'd, 263 A.D. 1042, 33 N.Y.S.2d 684, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7983 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

The public policy of New York, as evidenced by New York statute attributing negligence in use or operation of vehicle to owner, requires New York court to construe similar Massachusetts statute no less liberally than have courts of Massachusetts. Tirone v Tirone, 32 Misc. 2d 962, 222 N.Y.S.2d 986, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2647 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), aff'd, 14 A.D.2d 992, 222 N.Y.S.2d 1016, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7557 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1961).

In light of other statutes, it appeared unlikely that Legislature in granting City of New York power to prohibit, restrict or regulate parking intended to withhold from City Council the authority to impose fines upon automobile owners not actually involved in commission of the parking violations. Kinney Car Corp. v New York, 58 Misc. 2d 365, 295 N.Y.S.2d 288, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1035 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1968).

Both Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 and Insurance Law § 167, subd 2 require coverage of the owner only, and not of the user with permission of the named insured. Neither statute mandates nor projects coverage of users with permission into policies issued to owners. Hiscock v Kuinlan, 62 Misc. 2d 842, 310 N.Y.S.2d 331, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1741 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1970).

Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 apparently is not designed to deny an absentee owner a recovery on the basis of imputed contributory negligence although he may at the very same time be found liable as a defendant when the concurrent negligence attributable to the driver is imputed to him. Cadran v Fanni, 72 Misc. 2d 1, 338 N.Y.S.2d 532, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1413 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1972).

By adding the words "or otherwise," the legislature created a liability where none existed at common law. Bandych v Ross, 26 N.Y.S.2d 830, 1941 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1645 (N.Y. City Ct. 1941).

This section is in derogation of the common law and is strictly construed. New York Tel. Co. v Scofield, 31 N.Y.S.2d 393, 1941 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2395 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1941).

5. —"In this state"

The legislature was not concerned with the extraterritorial effect of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 by adding the words "in this state" to the statutory provision, in view of the fact that it was substituting "in this state" for the former words "upon a public highway" in the predecessor statute in order to cover the situation of an accident on private roadways and parking lots. Farber v Smolack, 20 N.Y.2d 198, 282 N.Y.S.2d 248, 229 N.E.2d 36, 1967 N.Y. LEXIS 1266 (N.Y. 1967).

The grounds of a private racing association are not a "public place" within the definition of "public highway," as used in this section. Sylvester v Brockway Motor Truck Corp., 232 A.D. 364, 250 N.Y.S. 35, 1931 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13812 (N.Y. App. Div. 1931).

Although section 388 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, which imposes liability upon an owner of a motor vehicle for injuries caused by the negligent operator thereof, so long as the latter is driving the car with the consent or permission of the former, speaks of the use or operation of a vehicle in the State, the legislative history of section 388 indicates that the Legislature intended to enlarge the vehicle owner's vicarious liability and not to draw the line at the border. Bank v Rebold, 69 A.D.2d 481, 419 N.Y.S.2d 135, 1979 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11827 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1979).

6. —"Exclusively for agricultural purposes"

In instructing jury as to meaning of phrase "exclusively for agricultural purposes" in CLS Veh & Tr § 388(2), courts use of dictionary definition of exclusively was proper. Palmer v Rouse, 232 A.D.2d 909, 649 N.Y.S.2d 76, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11264 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

Phrase "exclusively for agricultural purposes" under CLS Veh & Tr § 388(2) may not be interpreted so as to consider only primary, dominant, or principal use and ignore "incidental" uses. Palmer v Rouse, 232 A.D.2d 909, 649 N.Y.S.2d 76, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11264 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

7. —"Operated"

The contention that the word "operate" as used in the statute signifies a personal act in driving a motor vehicle cannot be sustained. If the legal user at the time be present in the car, its operation is his operation though the hands at the wheel are those of another and negligent driving will bind the owner with whose permission the car is used. Witherstine v Employers' Liability Assurance Corp., 235 N.Y. 168, 139 N.E. 229, 235 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 168, 1923 N.Y. LEXIS 1162 (N.Y. 1923).

Assuming that "use or operation" of vehicle for purposes of CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1) encompasses loading and unloading, party's independent, preparatory and preliminary activity in removing concrete base from light standard, which he intended to transport in truck, did not, as matter of law, constitute loading and thus was not "use or operation." Frontuto v Ray Burgun Trucking Co., 78 N.Y.2d 938, 573 N.Y.S.2d 634, 578 N.E.2d 432, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 1006 (N.Y. 1991).

Act of negligently parking vehicle constituted use or operation within meaning of CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1). Bouchard v Canadian Pac. Ltd., 267 A.D.2d 899, 700 N.Y.S.2d 540, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13595 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Plaintiff injured in motor vehicle accident involving taxi cab was entitled to summary judgment declaring that cab owner's insurer was required to provide liability insurance protection to owner under CLS Veh & Tr § 388 for any injuries sustained by plaintiff as result of cab passengers' negligence use of cab where (1) passengers' act of opening cab door in order to exit was "use and operation" of cab under § 388, (2) thus, owner would be liable for plaintiff's injuries if passengers' "use and operation" were negligent, and (3) under liability policy issued by insurer to owner, insurer was required to provide coverage to owner under such circumstances. Cohn v Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 286 A.D.2d 699, 730 N.Y.S.2d 152, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8548 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2001).

The word "operated," as used in an insurance policy which prohibits the insured from permitting his motor vehicle "to be operated by any person under age limit fixed by law," when construed in connection with the word "operating," as used in this section, means physical operation. Devitt v Continental Casualty Co., 277 N.Y.S. 844, 154 Misc. 603, 1934 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1957 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1934), rev'd, 245 A.D. 115, 281 N.Y.S. 336, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10241 (N.Y. App. Div. 1935).

The term "used or operated" on a public highway covers more than actual driving of a motor vehicle on the highway and extends to a situation where it is stopped on a highway for purposes of unloading. Stole v United States Steel Corp., 34 Misc. 2d 103, 227 N.Y.S.2d 595, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3529 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1962).

The phrase "use or operation" as used in automobile owner's responsibility law encompasses more than just driving a car; it includes all activities necessarily part of driving a car, such as getting in and out. Fireman's Fund American Ins. Cos. v Olin of New York, Inc., 84 Misc. 2d 504, 376 N.Y.S.2d 800, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3162 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1975).

A hi-lo forklift is not a motor vehicle as defined by N.Y. Veh. Traf. Law § 125 because a forklift operator does not need to be specially licensed and a forklift does not need to be registered with the Department of Motor Vehicles. Mangra v China Airlines, Ltd., 790 N.Y.S.2d 370, 7 Misc. 3d 499, 233 N.Y.L.J. 36, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 224 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 2005).

8. —"Used"

Assuming that "use or operation" of vehicle for purposes of CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1) encompasses loading and unloading, party's independent, preparatory and preliminary activity in removing concrete base from light standard, which he intended to transport in truck, did not, as matter of law, constitute loading and thus was not "use or operation." Frontuto v Ray Burgun Trucking Co., 78 N.Y.2d 938, 573 N.Y.S.2d 634, 578 N.E.2d 432, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 1006 (N.Y. 1991).

Plaintiff's loading and unloading of truck constituted "use or operation" of vehicle under CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1). Argentina v Emery World Wide Delivery Corp., 93 N.Y.2d 554, 693 N.Y.S.2d 493, 715 N.E.2d 495, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1431 (N.Y. 1999).

An exclusionary clause in a policy issued by an insurer providing excess coverage of only one vehicle in a tractor-trailer combination, which clause states that "This policy does not apply . . . while any trailer covered by this policy is used with any automobile owned or hired by the insured and not covered by like insurance in the company", must be read as affording excess coverage not only for the trailer, but also for the tractor, by virtue of subdivision 4 of section 388 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, which provides that all policies of insurance issued to owners of tractors and trailers used in combination with one another are to provide the required coverage; moreover, such an exclusionary clause, whether it applies to primary or excess insurance, is void as contrary to State policy, and the fact that it tracks the language of an Insurance Department regulation (11 NYCRR 60.2 [c]) is immaterial, for to the extent that regulation conflicts with and is inconsistent with the design and purpose of the statute it has no significance. Mt. Vernon Fire Ins. Co. v Travelers Indem. Co., 63 A.D.2d 254, 407 N.Y.S.2d 23, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11342 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1978), aff'd, 47 N.Y.2d 575, 419 N.Y.S.2d 899, 393 N.E.2d 974, 1979 N.Y. LEXIS 2183 (N.Y. 1979).

Defendant, tow truck operator, was not entitled to summary judgment in action seeking to impose vicarious liability under CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1), even though vehicles in question were parked prior to accident, where vehicles were still chained together and it appeared that owner of towed vehicle might have required additional tow since he was attempting to shut off his vehicle's engine, thus raising fact issue as to whether vehicles were being used in towing operation at time of accident. Boyce v Vazquez, 249 A.D.2d 724, 671 N.Y.S.2d 815, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4080 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Act of negligently parking vehicle constituted use or operation within meaning of CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1). Bouchard v Canadian Pac. Ltd., 267 A.D.2d 899, 700 N.Y.S.2d 540, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13595 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Plaintiff injured in motor vehicle accident involving taxi cab was entitled to summary judgment declaring that cab owner's insurer was required to provide liability insurance protection to owner under CLS Veh & Tr § 388 for any injuries sustained by plaintiff as result of cab passengers' negligence use of cab where (1) passengers' act of opening cab door in order to exit was "use and operation" of cab under § 388, (2) thus, owner would be liable for plaintiff's injuries if passengers' "use and operation" were negligent, and (3) under liability policy issued by insurer to owner, insurer was required to provide coverage to owner under such circumstances. Cohn v Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 286 A.D.2d 699, 730 N.Y.S.2d 152, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8548 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2001).

While N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1) does not itself speak to whether loading and unloading of a vehicle fall within its reach, the history of the provision makes clear that those activities are indeed covered, and an exclusion to coverage in a motor vehicle insurance policy, for injuries resulting from negligence in the use and operation of a motor vehicle, would be unenforceable as against the public policy of New York, because to tolerate such an exclusion would leave innocent victims, acting in good faith, and presumably, in reliance upon an insurer's compliance with the law, without legal redress or prospect of recompense for injuries sustained. Progressive Cas. Ins. Co. v Baker, 290 A.D.2d 676, 736 N.Y.S.2d 447, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 82 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2002).

The word "use" included a person who has the actual, though not physical, control of the motor vehicle, and who was constituted by the owner thereof its master ad hoc. Feitelberg v Matuson, 208 N.Y.S. 786, 124 Misc. 595, 1925 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 713 (N.Y. Mun. Ct. 1925).

The term "used or operated" on a public highway covers more than actual driving of a motor vehicle on the highway and extends to a situation where it is stopped on a highway for purposes of unloading. Stole v United States Steel Corp., 34 Misc. 2d 103, 227 N.Y.S.2d 595, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3529 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1962).

If a passenger in a taxicab opens the door negligently, the passenger was "using" the cab and the cab's owner would be liable for damages to a car colliding with the opened door. Epstein v

Kernon, 68 Misc. 2d 29, 326 N.Y.S.2d 137, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1149 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1971).

The phrase "use or operation" as used in automobile owner's responsibility law encompasses more than just driving a car; it includes all activities necessarily part of driving a car, such as getting in and out. Fireman's Fund American Ins. Cos. v Olin of New York, Inc., 84 Misc. 2d 504, 376 N.Y.S.2d 800, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3162 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1975).

The term "use", as applied in section 388 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, which imputes a driver's negligence to the owner of the vehicle, may not be construed to include the act of a person who has the owner's permission to use the vehicle in instructing the injured party in the operation of a motorcycle as a permissive use expressly or impliedly approved by the owner. Maringo v Senior, 102 Misc. 2d 1011, 424 N.Y.S.2d 862, 1980 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2051 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1980).

9. —"Permission"

Automobile insurer presented sufficient evidence to rebut strong presumption of permissive use under CLS Veh & Tr § 388 where driver of vehicle at time of accident testified that its owner, his landlady, did not permit him to use vehicle unless emergency existed, and driver's purpose in using vehicle at time of accident (to attend appointment at Department of Social Services) did not constitute emergency. Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v Santos, 175 A.D.2d 91, 573 N.Y.S.2d 695, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9389 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1991).

"Permission" means the same as consent, and consent implies knowledge. Atwater v Lober, 233 N.Y.S. 309, 133 Misc. 652, 1929 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 689 (N.Y. County Ct. 1929).

In making the owner of a vehicle liable for death or damage resulting from its negligent use or operation by anyone using it with his permission, "express or implied," the word "express" means "direct and distinct" and "implied" is a correlative meaning virtual or inferential. Hubert v Stasiak, 31 Misc. 2d 307, 220 N.Y.S.2d 748, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2239 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1961).

10. —"In the business of"

The operation of a motor vehicle "in the business of such owner or otherwise" includes its use for profit as well as for other purposes, including health or pleasure, and does not necessarily mean an enterprise for gain. Feitelberg v Matuson, 208 N.Y.S. 786, 124 Misc. 595, 1925 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 713 (N.Y. Mun. Ct. 1925).

11. —"Negligence"

"Negligence in operation" is not restricted to the manner in which a vehicle is driven but includes the act of putting a defective vehicle in operation on the highway. Elfeld v Burkham Auto Renting Co., 299 N.Y. 336, 87 N.E.2d 285, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 336, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 940 (N.Y. 1949).

Summary judgment was improperly granted to a railroad company and an employee, dismissing a driver's suit to recover for injuries sustained when he was struck by a wheel that dislodged from the company's vehicle, because a question of fact existed as to whether defendants were negligent under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388 in the inspection and maintenance of the vehicle, in that they failed to produce the company's daily vehicle inspection reports for the date of the accident. Glenn v Couvopoulo, 21 A.D.3d 526, 800 N.Y.S.2d 737, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8666 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2005).

Statute imputing user's negligence to automobile owner covers more than actual driving of vehicle on highway. Stole v United States Steel Corp., 34 Misc. 2d 103, 227 N.Y.S.2d 595, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3529 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1962).

As a non-covered person, a taxi-cab passenger retained a right to sue the driver that caused an accident in negligence for both economic and non-economic loss. Laba v Petrullo, 191 Misc. 2d 758, 742 N.Y.S.2d 787, 2002 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 572 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2002), aff'd, 2003 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 438 (N.Y. App. Term Mar. 11, 2003).

Although an owner of an excavator was not liable for an employee's injuries under N.Y. Lab. Law § 241(6), because the excavator was a motor vehicle under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 125, 388, that the owner negligently entrusted to an untrained co-employee in violation of N.Y. Lab. Law § 200, the owner was not entitled to summary judgment. Martinez v Hitachi Constr. Mach. Co., Ltd., 829 N.Y.S.2d 814, 15 Misc. 3d 244, 236 N.Y.L.J. 82, 2006 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4130 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2006).

Summary judgment dismissal of a wife's personal injury complaint, which was premised on the theory that a domestic rental car company, as apparent agent of the Mexican owner and renter of a vehicle, was vicariously liable for the driver's negligence under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388, was affirmed where it was undisputed that the wife's husband was negligent in causing an automobile accident that resulted in the wife's injuries. The Mexican entity that owned and leased the vehicle was in no way negligent, so the wife could not use the doctrine of apparent agency to impose liability on the Mexican entity's domestic parent company; there was no negligence of the company or the Mexican entity for vicarious liability to be applicable. Ashkenazi v Hertz Rent a Car, 18 A.D.3d 584, 795 N.Y.S.2d 624, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5291 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2005).

Because a driver's testimony corroborated a lessee's recount that an accident occurred as a result of an emergency situation not of the lessee's making, an injured passenger was not entitled to summary judgment since a question existed as to whether a "qualifying emergency" negated the lessee's liability under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1). Cook v Garrant, 27 A.D.3d 984, 811 N.Y.S.2d 801, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3577 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

The former analogous section was not a special or local law passed in violation of Const. Art. XII, § 2. It did not discriminate between the municipalities which provide police and fire protection by reason of a statutory duty imposed upon them, and those which provide such protection, not because of a statutory requirement, but of their own volition. Miller v New York, 235 A.D. 259, 257 N.Y.S. 33, 1932 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7939 (N.Y. App. Div. 1932).

The former analogous section was constitutional under the police power inherent in the state for the protection of its citizens and others within its borders. Feitelberg v Matuson, 208 N.Y.S. 786, 124 Misc. 595, 1925 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 713 (N.Y. Mun. Ct. 1925).

N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388 does not violate due process as applied to long-term vehicle lessors, as one of its purposes is to ensure that persons injured by the negligent operation of a motor vehicle have recourse to a financially responsible person, which is a valid governmental purpose, and imposing liability on lessors for the negligence of long-term lessees is a reasonable means of accomplishing this objective. Chilberg v Chilberg, 13 A.D.3d 1089, 788 N.Y.S.2d 533, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16334 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2004).

N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388 does not violate the Equal Protection Clause as applied to long-term vehicle lessors, as it was rational for the legislature to distinguish between vehicle owners, including long-term lessors, and nonowners, including lienholders, and to allocate the statutory burdens based on that distinction. Chilberg v Chilberg, 13 A.D.3d 1089, 788 N.Y.S.2d 533, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16334 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2004).

The state statute making the owner of an automobile liable for personal injuries resulting from its negligent operation by another to whom he has entrusted it, is consistent with due process as applied to a non-resident owner who was not in that state when the accident occurred and who had merely lent his machine to one not his agent or engaged on business for him, with express or implied permission to take it there from the state of the owner's residence, where the bailment occurred and whose laws did not impose such liability. Young v Masci, 289 U.S. 253, 53 S. Ct. 599, 77 L. Ed. 1158, 1933 U.S. LEXIS 178 (U.S. 1933).

Put colloquially, applying choice-of-law principles to the analysis of the constitutional scope of New York's substantive law mixed apples and oranges. For purposes of the decision, it was sufficient to conclude that there was no constitutional bar to the application of New York law to the dispute. Budget Rent-A-Car Sys., Inc. v Chappell, 407 F.3d 166, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 7783

13. Applicability

The provision of this section exempting from liability imposed upon owners of motor vehicles for negligence of others driving their cars with their consent, those engaged in business of renting motor vehicles, who carry liability insurance in stated amounts protecting renter from liability arising from his negligence in operation of rented vehicle, is violative neither of the federal nor of the state constitution. The exception in the statute does not apply to cars rented or hired when operated by servants or employees of the owner. Atkins v Hertz Drivurself Stations, Inc., 261 N.Y. 352, 185 N.E. 408, 261 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 352, 1933 N.Y. LEXIS 1293 (N.Y. 1933), aff'd, 291 U.S. 641, 54 S. Ct. 437, 78 L. Ed. 1039, 1934 U.S. LEXIS 527 (U.S. 1934).

This section is not applicable if an operator of a car, at the time of the accident, was not acting within the scope of his employment. Enstrom v New York, 258 A.D. 672, 17 N.Y.S.2d 964, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8269 (N.Y. App. Div.), reh'g denied, 259 A.D. 832, 19 N.Y.S.2d 1022, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6894 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

This section is designed in the interest of public safety in the exercise of police power of the state, and is applicable to a carrier engaged in interstate commerce. Dittman v Davis, 274 A.D. 836, 80 N.Y.S.2d 737, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3572 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948), aff'd, 299 N.Y. 601, 86 N.E.2d 175, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 601, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 1066 (N.Y. 1949).

Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 (1) imputes to owner of motor vehicle negligence of one who uses or operates it with his or her permission; that section gives rise to presumption that vehicle is being operated with owner's consent–presumption was rebutted as matter of law here; driver of vehicle owned by defendant, which was involved in accident in question, admitted at his examination before trial that he had taken vehicle without defendant's permission; this testimony was corroborated by defendant's affidavit as well as testimony at examination before trial of defendant's 15-year-old son, who was passenger in vehicle; parties opposing defendant's motion failed to submit any evidence sufficient to raise triable issue of fact as to permission and, therefore, complaints and cross claims insofar as they are asserted against defendant should have been severed and dismissed. Bruno v Privilegi, 148 A.D.2d 652, 539 N.Y.S.2d 403, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4184 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

With regard to machines with multiple functions, statute providing that owners of vehicles used in state shall be liable for death or injuries to persons or property resulting from negligence in use or operation of such vehicle by any person using or operating it with express or implied permission of owner, is not applicable to a function other than that of a vehicle. Monell v International Business Machines Corp., 47 A.D.2d 637, 363 N.Y.S.2d 657, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8802 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1975), aff'd, 38 N.Y.2d 888, 382 N.Y.S.2d 747, 346 N.E.2d 548, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 2332 (N.Y. 1976).

This section is applicable only in actions brought by third persons against the owner of the vehicle involved, and accordingly the contributory negligence of the driver does not bar recovery by the owner where the latter seeks to recover for damages to his automobile. Tuttle v State, 78 N.Y.S.2d 820, 191 Misc. 1014, 1948 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2325 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1948).

Immunity afforded allegedly negligent operator, a federal employee, from any civil liability arising out of automobile collision by reason of Federal Drivers Act could not be extended to the nonnegligent, absentee owner of vehicle operated by immune negligent operator so as to exempt him from any derivative liability under Vehicle and Traffic Law provision imposing upon owner of a vehicle a statutory liability for the negligence of any person using or operating that vehicle within state with permission of owner, express or implied. Padlo v Spoor, 90 Misc. 2d 1002, 396 N.Y.S.2d 798, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2208 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1977), aff'd, 72 A.D.2d 665, 422 N.Y.S.2d 895, 1979 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13821 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1979).

This section does not apply where both motorists are negligent. Plunkett v Heath, 1 N.Y.S.2d 778, 1938 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1226 (N.Y. City Ct. 1938).

N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1) and (4) read together provide that every owner of a vehicle used or operated in this state shall be liable for negligence in the permissive use or operation of its vehicles and that insurance policies on said vehicles must indemnify the owner against said liability. Paul M. Maint., Inc. v Transcon. Ins. Co., 300 A.D.2d 209, 755 N.Y.S.2d 3, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13319 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2002).

Trial court properly denied a trust's motion for summary judgment pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. 3212 in consolidated personal injury and wrongful death actions; the evidence failed to conclusively establish that injuries and the death of a decedent resulted from an intentional act of a driver, and therefore there was an issue of fact as to whether N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388 rendered the trust jointly and severally liable as the owner of the driver's vehicle. Estate of Marone v Chaves, 306 A.D.2d 372, 760 N.Y.S.2d 860, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7011 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003).

The state statute making the owner of an automobile liable for personal injuries resulting from its negligent operation by another to whom he has entrusted it, is consistent with due process as applied to a non-resident owner who was not in that state when the accident occurred and who had merely lent his machine to one not his agent or engaged on business for him, with express or implied permission to take it there from the state of the owner's residence, where the bailment occurred and whose laws did not impose such liability. Young v Masci, 289 U.S. 253, 53 S. Ct. 599, 77 L. Ed. 1158, 1933 U.S. LEXIS 178 (U.S. 1933).

Insurer's suit was premised on a vicarious liability theory pursuant to N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388, however the application of § 388 to lessors, such as defendants, was preempted by the Graves Amendment, 49 U.S.C.S. § 30106; the insurer argued that the Graves amendment did not apply to the instant action, which was first filed in October 2003, but the enactment date for the Graves Amendment fell in the interim period between the dismissal of the insurer's suit without prejudice on July 11, 2005, and June 2006, when the matter was reopened. Because the insurer's original suit was prematurely filed and, therefore, not justiciable, the date in which the case was reopened was considered the date when the suit was commenced for purposes of determining the applicability of the Graves Amendment. Merchs. Ins. Group v Mitsubishi Motor Credit Ass'n, 525 F. Supp. 2d 309, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 70942 (E.D.N.Y. 2007), vacated, 356 Fed. Appx. 548, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 27409 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2009).

In an action arising out of injuries sustained by plaintiff when he was struck by a bus, bus owner's concession that it owned the bus at time of the accident would make it liable for plaintiff's injuries under New York Vehicle and Traffic Law unless it could demonstrate that it was entitled to protection of the federal Graves Amendment, which preempted state law. Summary judgment was precluded in favor of owner, as issues of fact remained as to whether owner was actually engaged in trade or business of renting or leasing motor vehicles and as to whether it knew or should have known that the driver was a dangerous driver. Williams v Blvd. Lines, Inc., 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 40843 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 12, 2013).

14. —Injured third persons

Vicarious liability imposed by CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1) does not extend to owners of vehicles that have never been registered, used, operated or intended for use within New York. Fried v Seippel, 80 N.Y.2d 32, 587 N.Y.S.2d 247, 599 N.E.2d 651, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 1538 (N.Y. 1992).

In action for wrongful death, defendant was not entitled to contribution from third party defendant on basis of CLS Veh & Tr

§ 388 since intent of statute was to benefit injured parties by broadening base of liability in order to provide greater likelihood of recovery. Rodriguez v Yosi Trucking, 151 A.D.2d 556, 542 N.Y.S.2d 335, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7895 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Court correctly applied CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1) in action for injuries sustained by passengers of van, although accident occurred in Pennsylvania and owner of van was Pennsylvania corporation, since plaintiff passengers and defendant lessee of van were all New York residents; New York has strong interest in insuring that motorists will be financially able to respond in damages for their negligent acts so that innocent victims of motor vehicle accidents may be recompensed for injuries sustained. Vasquez v Christian Herald Ass'n, 186 A.D.2d 467, 588 N.Y.S.2d 291, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12171 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1992), app. dismissed, 81 N.Y.2d 783, 594 N.Y.S.2d 719, 610 N.E.2d 392, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 5273 (N.Y. 1993).

Plaintiffs, who were sued in 2 earlier actions by driver and passenger of other motor vehicle, were not entitled to summary judgment on their claim that owner of other vehicle was liable for contribution for percentage of damages awarded to passenger pursuant to CLS Veh & Tr § 388 based on jury's apportionment of liability in driver's earlier action against plaintiffs; § 388 applies only to actions brought by injured parties against vehicle owners and does not apply where joint tortfeasor sues for contribution. Murray v Sterner, 218 A.D.2d 334, 636 N.Y.S.2d 521, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14133 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1995), app. dismissed, 87 N.Y.2d 1055, 644 N.Y.S.2d 147, 666 N.E.2d 1061, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 352 (N.Y. 1996).

Defendants, statutorily immune from suit as result of "exclusive remedy" provisions of CLS Work Comp § 29(6), could not be held vicariously liable under CLS Veh & Tr § 388 as owners of service van which caused plaintiff's injuries; thus, it was error to deny defendants' summary judgment motion to dismiss action brought under latter statute. Allen v Blum, 232 A.D.2d 591, 649 N.Y.S.2d 162, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11388 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

Provisions of CLS Veh § Tr § 388(1) may be invoked only in actions brought by third persons against owner of vehicle. Boyce v Vazquez, 249 A.D.2d 724, 671 N.Y.S.2d 815, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4080 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

The operator of a motorcycle who was using the vehicle without the owner's express or implied permission and who injured himself while operating the motorcycle may not utilize section 388 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law to impute his own negligence to the owner of the vehicle since, as the operator, he is not among the class of persons, injured third persons, who are entitled to protection under the statute. Maringo v Senior, 102 Misc. 2d 1011, 424 N.Y.S.2d 862, 1980 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2051 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1980).

In a personal injury action, a third party complaint for contribution/indemnity could not be dismissed on summary judgment against a vehicle owner, who was the wife of a co-employee of an injured employee, because, although the co-employee could not be liable for contribution/indemnity as he and the employee were in the course of their business when the car accident occurred and the employee did not sustain a grave injury as required under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 11, the owner had no employment relationship with the employee and could be liable for contribution/indemnity under § 11, N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 29(6), and N.Y. Veh. & Traf. § 388 because the owner in that capacity could be liable for the employee's negligence, if any. Clamp v Estate of Hales, 807 N.Y.S.2d 512, 10 Misc. 3d 988, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2926 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2005), overruled, Isabella v Hallock, 22 N.Y.3d 788, 987 N.Y.S.2d 293, 10 N.E.3d 673, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 569 (N.Y. 2014).

When an injured party was hurt by a diplomat's negligent operation of a motor vehicle leased from a long-term lessee, which, in turn, leased the vehicle from the vehicle's owner, while the diplomat could not be held liable, due to diplomatic immunity, this immunity did not insulate the owner or long-term lessee from liability because there was no statutory scheme, such as the workers' compensation statutes, providing the injured party's exclusive means of compensation nor did public policy require that the owner and long-term lessee be shielded from liability, so the owner and long-term lessee were not entitled to summary judgment in the injured party's suit against them. Tikhonova v Ford Motor Co., 10 A.D.3d 185, 779 N.Y.S.2d 47, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8678 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2004), aff'd, 4 N.Y.3d 621, 797 N.Y.S.2d 799, 830 N.E.2d 1127, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 1087 (N.Y. 2005).

15. —Atypical injury

A complaint against a defendant-owner of a car which alleged that the plaintiff was injured when he alighted from the car and another defendant closed the door on his hand did not state a cause of action under this section. Glouzwski v Ruback, 3 A.D.2d 692, 159 N.Y.S.2d 71, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6705 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1957).

In an action based upon an alleged fist fight between plaintiff passenger and defendant taxi driver, the court improperly ruled that the incident fell within the ambit of Veh & Tr Law § 388 since the statute imposes liability for injuries resulting from negligence in the use or operation of a vehicle and, accepting plaintiff's version of the incident, he was struck by defendant in a fist fight on the street outside the vehicle. Horney v Tisyl Taxi Corp., 93 A.D.2d 291, 461 N.Y.S.2d 799, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17118 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1983).

CLS Labor Law §§ 240, 241 and CLS Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 are inapplicable to death incurred during transfer of 28-foot boat from cinder block supports to trailer. McGahey v Kimbrow, 112 A.D.2d 203, 491 N.Y.S.2d 426, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 55950 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1985).

Defendants, plaintiff's brother-in-law who borrowed truck and truck owner, were improperly granted summary judgment in action for injuries sustained when plaintiff fell from one of 2 unsecured planks that had been placed by brother-in-law from tailgate of truck to blacktop driveway to facilitate moving of furniture where fact issues existed as to whether brother-in-law negligently placed ramps, whether it was reasonably foreseeable that someone could be injured as result of way he placed ramps, and whether his negligence, if any, was proximate cause of plaintiff's injuries; further, if brother-in-law was found negligent, liability would be imposed on owner under CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1) since brother-in-law was using truck with owner's permission. Smith v Zink, 274 A.D.2d 885, 711 N.Y.S.2d 594, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8276 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Because the decision in Kalechman prohibited a driver from seeking to impose vicarious liability upon a passenger pursuant to N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1) for the negligent acts of the passenger's boyfriend in driving the passenger's vehicle, the trial court erred in granting the driver's N.Y. C.P.L.R. 3025(b) motion for leave to serve an amended answer. Schuyler v Perry, 69 A.D.3d 33, 886 N.Y.S.2d 228, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6703 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2009).

16. —Effect of foreign ownership

If a foreign owner permits his car to be operated in New York State, he subjects himself to the laws of New York touching such operation. Lovetere v Stackhouse, 25 A.D.2d 628, 267 N.Y.S.2d 758, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4813 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1966).

In action for damages arising out of collision in which Ontario resident was fatally injured while a passenger in automobile owned by Ontario resident and operated by another Ontario resident, which accident occurred in New York with an automobile owned and operated by New York resident, section of Vehicle and Traffic Law providing that "Every owner of a vehicle used or operated in this state shall be liable and responsible for death or injuries * * * resulting from negligence * * *," did not prevent Canadian defendant from pleading the Ontario guest statute; the section of the Vehicle and Traffic Law was inapplicable since its purpose was to impute the negligence of the driver to an absentee owner, and such statute did not establish a choice of law rule for accidents occurring in New York. Rye v Kolter, 39 A.D.2d 821, 333 N.Y.S.2d 96, 1972 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4587 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1972).

Where nonresident decedent was killed in automobile accident occurring in Pennsylvania, which vehicle was driven by a New York resident but was neither registered nor owned by a New York resident, New York statute imputing negligence of driver of motor vehicle to owner was not applicable and Pennsylvania law would be applied. Rogers v U-Haul Co., 41 A.D.2d 834, 342 N.Y.S.2d 158, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4823 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1973).

New York's vicarious liability statute did not apply in wrongful death action arising from single-car accident in New York involving vehicle rented in District of Columbia, where plaintiff's decedent and defendant car rental company were domiciled in Virginia, and all significant contacts (aside from accident site) were with Virginia and District of Columbia; law of Virginia applied pursuant to first "Neumeier" rule. Dorsey v Yantambwe, 276 A.D.2d 108, 715 N.Y.S.2d 566, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11452 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 712, 729 N.Y.S.2d 439, 754 N.E.2d 199, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1076 (N.Y. 2001).

This section provides substantially that every owner of a vehicle used or operated in New York state shall be liable and responsible for death or injuries to persons or property resulting from negligence in the use or operation of the vehicle in the business of the owner or otherwise by any person operating the same with permission, express or implied, of the owner, and this section is not limited to New York state residents, and, consequently, out of state owners and operators who elect to use the highways of this state subject themselves to this section, and the law makes no distinction between residents and nonresidents, people in transit or otherwise, and the Ontario "guest statute" is not applicable in this state. Kell v Henderson, 47 Misc. 2d 992, 263 N.Y.S.2d 647, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1427 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1965), aff'd, 26 A.D.2d 595, 270 N.Y.S.2d 552, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4068 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1966).

Although the ownership of a motor vehicle creates a presumption that its operation is with the consent of the owner under Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388, that presumption may be rebutted by substantial evidence to the contrary. Accordingly, since the defendant owner gave express consent to the plaintiff to operate his motor vehicle and neither the plaintiff nor the defendant owner gave the defendant passenger permission to interfere with the plaintiff's operation of the vehicle by reaching across another passenger to yank the wheel to the right, causing the vehicle to hit one or more pedestrians and necessitating the plaintiff to quickly react, in the course of which he caused the vehicle to strike a telephone pole and house resulting in the plaintiff's injuries, the plaintiff's cause of action against the defendant owner pursuant to section 388 based on the theory that the defendant passenger was operating or using the vehicle with the defendant owner's permission is dismissed. Good v MacDonell, 149 Misc. 2d 315, 564 N.Y.S.2d 949, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 661 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1990).

Non-resident owner was required to comply with N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388 and his knowing failure to maintain proof of financial security might subject him to various penalties under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 318(4)(a), (b). Property & Cas. Ins. Co. of Hartford v Clarke, 793 N.Y.S.2d 883, 7 Misc. 3d 358, 233 N.Y.L.J. 24, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 86 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2005).

The statute authorizing constructive service on nonresident owners of motor vehicles was applicable to accident occurring on private property, and as so construed did not deny due process. Raspante v Trans. Supply & Management, Inc., 214 N.Y.S.2d 583 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1961).

Summary judgment dismissal of a wife's personal injury complaint, which was premised on the theory that a domestic rental car company, as apparent agent of the Mexican owner and renter of a vehicle, was vicariously liable for the driver's negligence under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388, was affirmed where there was no issue raised of the extraterritorial effect of § 388. The wife's conclusory assertion that she and her husband intended to drive the vehicle back to New York was insufficient in the face of contrary evidence that the husband never requested permission to drive the vehicle out of Mexico and the husband testified that he had purchased round trip tickets to Mexico for himself and the wife. Ashkenazi v Hertz Rent a Car, 18 A.D.3d 584, 795 N.Y.S.2d 624, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5291 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2005).

Under New York's conflict of law rules, New Jersey law governed action by New York residents against California lessor, arising from collision in New Jersey with car leased and driven by New Jersey resident, where there was no showing that application of New York law would advance purposes underlying CLS Veh & Tr § 388 without simultaneously undermining multi-state litigation (e.g., by encouraging forum shopping, appearing to favor local party, or producing uncertainty for litigants), and there was no showing that auto lessor had requisite contacts with plaintiffs or New York to implicate New York's public policy. Heisler v Toyota Motor Credit Corp., 884 F. Supp. 128, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6472 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

17. —Effect of foreign accident site

To recover for personal injuries alleged to have been sustained by plaintiff in a foreign state through the negligent operation of an automobile belonging to defendant by his son, there must be sufficient evidence that, at the time of the accident, the automobile was operated by defendant's son as his agent and that it was a family car. The accident happening in a foreign state, this section has no application. Miranda v Lo Curto, 249 N.Y. 191, 163 N.E. 557, 249 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 191, 1928 N.Y. LEXIS 787 (N.Y. 1928).

This section has no extraterritorial effect and does not apply where the accident happened in another state. Cherwien v Geiter, 272 N.Y. 165, 5 N.E.2d 185, 272 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 165, 1936 N.Y. LEXIS 885 (N.Y. 1936).

In wrongful death action arising out of automobile accident which occurred in North Carolina, this statute which attributes negligence of automobile driver to owner of car was applicable rather than the North Carolina statute, where all of the people involved were citizens and domiciliaries of New York, the car was registered in New York, arrangement for its use had been made in New York, and it was on its way back to New York when the accident occurred, despite the fact that the New York statute by its terms stated that it was applicable to the use and operation of a vehicle "in this state." Farber v Smolack, 20 N.Y.2d 198, 282 N.Y.S.2d 248, 229 N.E.2d 36, 1967 N.Y. LEXIS 1266 (N.Y. 1967).

Car rental companies operating or based in New York (defendants) could not be held liable under CLS Veh & Tr § 388 in actions arising from 2 unrelated automobile accidents on West Indies island of Jamaica and leased from Jamaican companies that were licensed, directly or indirectly, by defendants. Fried v Seippel, 80 N.Y.2d 32, 587 N.Y.S.2d 247, 599 N.E.2d 651, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 1538 (N.Y. 1992).

This section, imposing liability upon an owner of a vehicle for negligence of one driving it with his permission, applies only when the vehicle is used or operated in New York State and cannot be invoked where the accident in question occurred in New Jersey and under New Jersey law the owner is liable only if the vehicle is being used in course of his business. Fornaro v Jill Bros., Inc., 22 A.D.2d 695, 253 N.Y.S.2d 771, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3075 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1964), aff'd, 15 N.Y.2d 819, 257 N.Y.S.2d 938, 205 N.E.2d 862, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1592 (N.Y. 1965).

Where nonresident decedent was killed in automobile accident occurring in Pennsylvania, which vehicle was driven by a New York resident but was neither registered nor owned by a New York resident, New York statute imputing negligence of driver of motor vehicle to owner was not applicable and Pennsylvania law would be applied. Rogers v U-Haul Co., 41 A.D.2d 834, 342 N.Y.S.2d 158, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4823 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1973).

Fact that parties were domiciled in different states did not require application of law of locus of accident (New Jersey) as "tie-breaker" where application of CLS Veh & Tr § 388 was consistent with law of all parties' domiciles and thus with parties' expectations, no party was domiciled in New Jersey, and thus New Jersey would be neither benefited nor burdened by outcome of litigation; § 388 is loss-allocating rule, as to which jurisdiction of parties' domiciles has paramount interest. Janssen v Ryder Truck Rental, 246 A.D.2d 364, 667 N.Y.S.2d 369, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 232 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Law of New York, not Croatia, would govern tort action brought by New York citizen against insurer of United Nations agency for injuries sustained in motor vehicle accident in Croatia where insurer's domicile, for choice of law purposes, was also New York, its principal place of business. Urlic v Insurance Co. of Pa., 259 A.D.2d 1, 696 N.Y.S.2d 126, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9574 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 763, 708 N.Y.S.2d 51, 729 N.E.2d 708, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 576 (N.Y. 2000).

In action by New York domiciliaries to recover for injuries sustained in car accident that occurred in Idaho while they were passengers in rented vehicle driven by New York domiciliary, defendant car rental agency was not entitled to summary judgment because, under laws of both Idaho and New York, when vehicle is involved in accident within their respective borders owner of vehicle is vicariously liable; thus, there was no meaningful conflict between New York law and law of Idaho with respect to issue of vicarious liability and, without further inquiry, court would apply Idaho law to effectuate public policy reflected in policy of both jurisdictions. Elson v Defren, 283 A.D.2d 109, 726 N.Y.S.2d 407, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6269 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2001).

Grant of summary judgment to rental car company in injured party's action to recover for personal injuries was affirmed where the injured party was a New York resident, the driver of the rental car was a South Carolina resident and had rented the car from a South Carolina location, and South Carolina law did not impose vicarious liability upon the vehicle owner for the negligence of the operator; because the car involved in the accident with the injured party was rented from an agency in South Carolina, and was operated in South Carolina, where the accident occurred, the State of South Carolina had the greater interest in having its laws applied to the litigation. Darby v Avis Rent A Car Sys., 289 A.D.2d 191, 733 N.Y.S.2d 689, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11835 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2001).

Summary judgment dismissal of a wife's personal injury complaint, which was premised on the theory that a domestic rental car company, as apparent agent of the Mexican owner and renter of a vehicle, was vicariously liable for the driver's negligence under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388, was affirmed where there was no issue raised of the extraterritorial effect of § 388. The wife's conclusory assertion that she and her husband intended to drive the vehicle back to New York was insufficient in the face of contrary evidence that the husband never requested permission to drive the vehicle out of Mexico and the husband testified that he had purchased round trip tickets to Mexico for himself and the wife. Ashkenazi v Hertz Rent a Car, 18 A.D.3d 584, 795 N.Y.S.2d 624, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5291 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2005).

N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1) applied in a federal district court action resulting from a car accident that occurred in Pennsylvania between a New York driver and a Pennsylvania driver because the application of Pennsylvania law would impair New York's interest in providing injured plaintiffs with financially responsible defendant and imposing high degree of responsibility on vehicle owners, while on the contrary, the application of Pennsylvania law would impair New York's interest in providing injured plaintiffs with a financially responsible defendant, and imposing a high degree of responsibility on the owners of vehicles. Garcia v Plaza Oldsmobile LTD., 421 F.3d 216, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 19063 (3d Cir. Pa. 2005).

Under New York's conflict of law rules, New Jersey law governed action by New York residents against California lessor, arising from collision in New Jersey with car leased and driven by New Jersey resident, where there was no showing that application of New York law would advance purposes underlying CLS Veh & Tr § 388 without simultaneously undermining multi-state litigation (e.g., by encouraging forum shopping, appearing to favor local party, or producing uncertainty for litigants), and there was no showing that auto lessor had requisite contacts with plaintiffs or New York to implicate New York's public policy. Heisler v Toyota Motor Credit Corp., 884 F. Supp. 128, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6472 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

18. —Derivative actions

The contention that a father's action for loss of services did not come within the meaning of the words "injuries to person or property," contained in the former analogous section, and that the liability under this section applied only to the person who received the injury, could not be sustained. Psota v Long Island R. Co., 246 N.Y. 388, 159 N.E. 180, 246 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 388, 1927 N.Y. LEXIS 888 (N.Y. 1927).

Injured passenger was not precluded from bringing a lawsuit for the owner's vicarious liability under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388 even though the driver of the vehicle, a diplomat, was immune from liability and the passenger's recovery against the driver was limited to recovery under 22 U.S.C.S. § 254e and 28 U.S.C.S. § 1364. Tikhonova v Ford Motor Co., 4 N.Y.3d 621, 797 N.Y.S.2d 799, 830 N.E.2d 1127, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 1087 (N.Y. 2005).

This section does not make the prior owner of an automobile liable for negligence in its operation after he has parted with title to and control over it. Mason v Allstate Ins. Co., 12 A.D.2d 138, 209 N.Y.S.2d 104, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6284 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1960).

Law firm was properly granted a directed verdict in a legal malpractice suit alleging failure to sue the lessor of a vehicle that struck a client because (1) the client did not show the offending vehicle was owned by or leased from the lessor on the date of the accident, and (2) the law firm did not concede the vehicle was owned by or leased from the lessor. Verdi v Jacoby & Meyers, LLP, 154 A.D.3d 901, 63 N.Y.S.3d 71, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7317 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2017).

There is nothing in this section that creates a liability over to a bailor, against the bailee for whose negligence the bailor must respond in damages. Kurzon v Union R. Co., 21 N.Y.S.2d 310, 1940 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1916 (N.Y. City Ct. 1940).

19. Common law liability

By the former analogous section an owner's common-law liability was not only continued but extended. Under the statute "use" as well as "operation" could fasten liability upon him. Grant v Knepper, 245 N.Y. 158, 156 N.E. 650, 245 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 158, 1927 N.Y. LEXIS 604 (N.Y. 1927).

This section does not affect the common-law liability of an owner present and in control of his car nor does it make more favorable his position, under like circumstances, when he sues to recover damages for personal injuries or injury to his car. In either situation the common-law rule applies and the negligence of the driver of his car is imputable to him. Gochee v Wagner (1931) 257 NY 344, 178 NE 553 ovrld by Kalechman v Drew Auto Rental, Inc. (1973) 33 NY2d 397, 353 NYS2d 414, 308 NE2d 886.holding that the general rule to be applied without exception is that a plaintiff passenger may recover for negligent operation of a vehicle, no matter what his relationship to the driver may be, unless it is shown that his own personal negligence contributed to the injury).

In a negligence action arising out of an automobile accident which occurred in South Carolina, section of Vehicle and Traffic Law of New York providing that negligence of operator of an automobile other than the owner is attributable to the owner, had no application, but the law of South Carolina was controlling, and in the absence of any showing of the law that jurisdiction, Court of Appeals would presume that the common law of South Carolina was the same as the common law of New York. Selles v Smith, 4 N.Y.2d 412, 176 N.Y.S.2d 267, 151 N.E.2d 838, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 851 (N.Y. 1958).

This section does not render the owner of an automobile responsible for the negligence of a third party to whom the borrower had temporarily intrusted the vehicle without the owner's knowledge or consent and who is using it for his own private purpose. This section has not changed the common-law rules relating to master and servant. Jackson v Brown & Kleinhenz, Inc., 246 A.D. 445, 284 N.Y.S. 44, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8699 (N.Y. App. Div. 1935), rev'd, 273 N.Y. 365, 7 N.E.2d 265, 273 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 365, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1214 (N.Y. 1937).

This section has not changed the common-law rule so as to bar an action by the owner for damages to his motor vehicle when the person operating it with the owner's consent, but in his absence and not upon his business, has been guilty of negligence contributing to the accident. Mills v Gabriel, 259 A.D. 60, 18 N.Y.S.2d 78, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6049 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 284 N.Y. 755, 31 N.E.2d 512, 284 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 755, 1940 N.Y. LEXIS 1358 (N.Y. 1940).

This section changes the common law as to an owner's nonliability to a third person, and bars his own recovery through negligence of a gratuitous bailee in addition to making him liable. Darrohn v Russell, 277 N.Y.S. 783, 154 Misc. 753, 1935 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1000 (N.Y. City Ct. 1935).

The rule that a master is not liable for acts of his servant unless the servant is acting within the scope of his employment is not affected by this section. Cuba v Turmelie, 5 N.Y.S.2d 811, 168 Misc. 256, 1938 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1741 (N.Y. App. Term 1938).

This section imputes the negligence of a borrower to the owner in actions against the owner but does not impute such negligence in actions by an owner; in actions by an owner, the statute has not changed the common law rule that negligence of a member of a family who borrows the owner's car with his consent may not be imputed to the owner. Juliano v State, 71 N.Y.S.2d 474, 190 Misc. 180, 1947 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2580 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1947), aff'd, 273 A.D. 936, 77 N.Y.S.2d 826, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5338 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

The statutory imposition of liability upon the owner of a motor vehicle for negligence of a person operating it with his consent has not changed the common-law liability arising from relationship of master and servant upon proof that the servant's negligence in operating the master's car was in course of the master's business. Waterman v Thrift Leasing Corp., 34 Misc. 2d 39, 228 N.Y.S.2d 66, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3682 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1962).

At common law, the owner of an automobile could be held liable for his own negligence in entrusting the vehicle to an operator known to be incompetent, and this section does not prevent imposing liability on that basis. Rice v Spencer, 43 Misc. 2d 331, 250 N.Y.S.2d 620, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1448 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963).

This section was intended to make the "owner" of a vehicle liable to the injured party when the vehicle is used with his permission, whether or not used in his behalf, and was not intended to change the owner's common-law liability to any other extent. Singerman Bus Corp. v American Fidelity Fire Ins. Co., 44 Misc. 2d 4, 252 N.Y.S.2d 780, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1620 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1964).

This section changes the common law rule and imputes the negligence of a borrower of a car to the owner in actions against the owner, but it does not change the common rule in actions brought by the owner against third persons. New York Tel. Co. v Scofield, 31 N.Y.S.2d 393, 1941 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2395 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1941).

II. Liability of Owner

20. In general

Where one leaves his motor vehicle in a busy street in such a position that a reasonably prudent person should anticipate that in event of an emergency or other necessity it must be moved, the owner is responsible for negligent act of person left in charge. Winnowski v Polito, 294 N.Y. 159, 61 N.E.2d 425, 294 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 159, 1945 N.Y. LEXIS 814 (N.Y. 1945).

The owner of an automobile, which, at the time of the accident causing the death of plaintiff's intestate, was being used in military service on a military errand, is not liable under this section. Carmody v Davis, 241 A.D. 88, 270 N.Y.S. 711, 1934 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8174 (N.Y. App. Div. 1934).

Amendment to statute governing automobile owner's liability for injury was intended only to clarify definition of "owner." Tyrnauer v Travelers Ins. Co., 15 A.D.2d 293, 223 N.Y.S.2d 151, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6804 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1961), aff'd, 13 N.Y.2d 613, 240 N.Y.S.2d 603, 191 N.E.2d 89, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 1222 (N.Y. 1963).

In action for personal injuries resulting from being hit by car, owner of car was entitled to summary judgment where, at time of accident, car was being driven without owner's permission or consent. Rosenberg v Mazzone, 251 A.D.2d 565, 673 N.Y.S.2d 943, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7568 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

Court erred in declaring that plaintiff was obligated to defend and indemnify its insured against personal injury claims arising from automobile accident involving insured's brother, driver of insured's vehicle, where insured was not party to instant action, and plaintiff asserted that it had not raised any issue as to CLS Veh & Tr § 388. Progressive Ins. Cos. v Brouse, 272 A.D.2d 996, 708 N.Y.S.2d 673, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5145 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000).

Judgment as a matter of law for the owner of a vehicle involved in an accident was error in plaintiff's personal injury suit because the owner admitted in its answer that it had leased the vehicle to the driver, and was identified as the owner on the certificate of title; the owner thus made a formal judicial admission that it was listed as owner on vehicle's certificate of title. A certificate of title was prima facie evidence of ownership pursuant to Vehicle and Traffic Law § 2108(c), and there was no evidence to rebut that presumption. Zegarowicz v Ripatti, 67 A.D.3d 672, 888 N.Y.S.2d 554, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7846 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2009).

Action was properly initiated in reliance upon record of ownership of automobile in accordance with registration in another state. Staunton v Robbins, 239 N.Y.S. 565, 136 Misc. 197, 1930 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 996 (N.Y. City Ct. 1930).

With regard to a car sold by a Nevada dealer to a purchaser under either a conditional sale contract or chattel mortgage transaction and assigned by the dealer in Nevada to a finance company, in connection with which the Nevada vehicle records showed purchaser as the registered owner and the finance company as the legal owner, the finance company could not be held legally responsible for negligence of the purchaser in operating the car in New York State either under the common law or the statute law of Nevada or New York. Buehler v Bogino, 39 Misc. 2d 1074, 242 N.Y.S.2d 528, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1821 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1963).

Under Connecticut law, imputation of automobile operator's negligence to automobile owner must be predicated upon "family car doctrine", rental of car, or agency. Monko v Cicoria, 46 Misc. 2d 565, 260 N.Y.S.2d 70, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1950 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1965).

Statutory liability of automobile owner for negligence of driver is designed to provide remedy where no other remedy is available, and such liability should not otherwise be applied. Geller v Sherman, 48 Misc. 2d 1049, 266 N.Y.S.2d 671, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1263 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1965), aff'd, 28 A.D.2d 959, 282 N.Y.S.2d 937, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7519 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1967).

Claim against state for damages resulting from collision with state owned truck parked on highway could not be based on statutory liability of owner of motor vehicle for negligence of one operating vehicle with owner's permission, where truck was being used in violation of orders of representative of state in charge of project on which truck and driver were employed and in pursuit of driver's personal aims and not on business of the state. Naylon v State, 40 N.Y.S.2d 587, 1943 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1711 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1943).

Notice by insured truck's owner five months after an accident was untimely as a matter of law and the owner's belief of nonliability for the driver's alleged negligence was unreasonable as matter of law upon consideration of an owner's liability under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 388(1), 1219; since the owner's failure of notice was not excused, the insurer had no duty to defend or indemnify the owner or the driver in a negligence action by a company to recover costs incurred from having to clean a spill and repair road damage that were caused when containers fell from the truck due to the collision. The insurer's motion for a summary judgment declaration that it was not obligated to provide coverage was improperly denied. Modern Cont. Constr. Co., Inc. v Giarola, 27 A.D.3d 431, 812 N.Y.S.2d 115, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2614 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

New York will broadly apply N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1) (2002), perhaps as broadly as is permissible under constitutional choice-of-law principles. Budget Rent-A-Car Sys., Inc. v Chappell, 407 F.3d 166, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 7783 (3d Cir. Pa.), cert. denied, 546 U.S. 978, 126 S. Ct. 567, 163 L. Ed. 2d 463, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 7891 (U.S. 2005).

N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1) (2002) applies unless the accident vehicle has never been registered, used, operated or intended for use within New York. By virtue of its prior use and operation in New York, the accident vehicle was indisputably within the substantive coverage of § 388. Budget Rent-A-Car Sys., Inc. v Chappell, 407 F.3d 166, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 7783 (3d Cir. Pa.), cert. denied, 546 U.S. 978, 126 S. Ct. 567, 163 L. Ed. 2d 463, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 7891 (U.S. 2005).

Because the Graves Amendment preempted N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388, upon which plaintiff's vicarious liability claim against defendant leasing company was founded, plaintiff's claim against the leasing company was dismissed. Green v Toyota Motor CreditCorp, 605 F. Supp. 2d 430, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26278 (E.D.N.Y. 2009).

21. —Elements of tort law

Vehicle need not be proximate cause of injury before vehicle's owner may be held vicariously liable for plaintiff's injuries under CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1). Argentina v Emery World Wide Delivery Corp., 93 N.Y.2d 554, 693 N.Y.S.2d 493, 715 N.E.2d 495, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1431 (N.Y. 1999).

An automobile owner's liability for damages suffered by others because of operator's negligence is derivative and akin to that of master for his servant's negligent acts under respondeat superior doctrine. Sarine v American Lumbermen's Mut. Casualty Co., 258 A.D. 653, 17 N.Y.S.2d 754, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8263 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

In personal injury action arising when defendant's automobile, while being driven by another on a private parking lot maintained in conjunction with a restaurant, negligently struck plaintiff, admission in pleadings that defendant owned, operated, managed, maintained, and controlled automobile at time of accident and proof of such ownership was sufficient to sustain judgment for plaintiff, even though accident had not taken place on a public highway within meaning of Vehicle and Traffic Law provision making owners of motor vehicles operated upon a public highway liable for negligent operation of such motor vehicles by person legally operating such vehicles with express or implied permission of owners. Babajko v Frawley, 9 A.D.2d 764, 192 N.Y.S.2d 232, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6363 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1959).

Where a complaint against a cab owner and driver alleged negligence by the driver, but the driver's actions were intentional, the complaint against the driver could be amended to include causes of action under N.Y. C.P.L.R. 203(f), 207, 213-b, and 215(8); however, because the owner could not be held vicariously liable for the driver's intentional acts under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1), the trial court erred in denying the owner's motion for summary judgment. Gomez v Singh, 309 A.D.2d 620, 767 N.Y.S.2d 67, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10821 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2003).

Where automobile was driven by a party other than owner at time it was involved in automobile accident, as respects liability to third parties arising out of operation of automobile, driver and owner are not joint tort-feasors, in absence of facts establishing actual negligence of owner. Kurzon v Union R. Co., 14 N.Y.S.2d 530, 172 Misc. 37, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2256 (N.Y. City Ct. 1939).

Where operator of automobile is negligent, he and owner of the automobile are "joint tort feasors" and as such are jointly and severally liable, and they can be sued either jointly or severally, but if a recovery is had in each case the satisfaction of one judgment would satisfy the other. Sarine v Maher, 63 N.Y.S.2d 241, 187 Misc. 199, 1946 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2350 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1946).

Owner could be held liable for negligence in furnishing automobile to known incompetent driver, even in absence of consent rendering applicable statute imposing liability in such cases. Rice v Spencer, 43 Misc. 2d 331, 250 N.Y.S.2d 620, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1448 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963).

In an action arising out of an automobile accident which occurred while the car was being driven, contrary to the terms of a lease, by the lessee's minor son, it was held that although the lessee of a car is regarded as the owner with respect to liability for negligence under Vehicle and Traffic Law §§ 128 and 388, under Insurance Law § 167 the self-insured lessor was the owner and the lessee's liability insurance policy constituted excess insurance, since a non-owned car was used without permission of the owner. Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v World Wide Rent-A-Car, Inc., 52 Misc. 2d 552, 276 N.Y.S.2d 401, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1176 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1966), modified, 28 A.D.2d 286, 284 N.Y.S.2d 807, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2928 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1967).

Negligence of driver, who was licensed learner, and who, in mounting curb and crossing sidewalk, struck pedestrian and her dog, while they were walking on sidewalk, was imputable to driver's husband, who was instructing driver at time of accident, as owner of vehicle. Cromwell v Rodriguez, 66 Misc. 2d 243, 319 N.Y.S.2d 1014, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1816 (N.Y. City Ct. 1971).

Statute prohibiting person in charge of automobile from leaving key in ignition was not applicable to automobile owner, who left vehicle's key in its ignition in owner's driveway, and thus owner was not liable for negligence of thief who was involved in collision while driving such vehicle. General Accident Group v Noonan, 66 Misc. 2d 528, 321 N.Y.S.2d 483, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1604 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1971).

Although it has consistently been held that liability for torts occurring subsequent to death of a property owner rests upon the executor or administrator individually, and that no judgment can be rendered against the estate or against him in his representative capacity, in connection with motor vehicle accidents arising out of alleged negligence in the operation of a car which is part of the assets of the estate of a decedent, this section might be construed as imposing liability upon the estate or upon the executor or administrator in his representative capacity if the car was registered in his name and being used with his permission and consent in furtherance of estate business. Koernig v Frimel, 216 N.Y.S.2d 477, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3701 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1961).

While the owner or lessee of a vehicle is not vicariously liable to the operator of a motor vehicle for the operator's own negligence, N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388 does not preclude an operator from attempting to impose vicarious liability on the owner for the negligence of other permissive users of the vehicle; thus, where the owners of a tractor/trailer allowed employees a manufacturer to operate the owners' vehicle while it was being loaded with paper rolls, the owners could be vicariously liable to the injured driver of the vehicle if the employees negligence in operating the vehicle was a proximate cause of the accident that injured the driver. Perrin v Chase Equip. Leasing, Inc., 9 A.D.3d 839, 780 N.Y.S.2d 256, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9466 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2004).

22. Who is owner

If the seller or transferor of a motor vehicle does not remove his license plates and permits the new owner to operate the car with them on, he is estopped to deny ownership and may be held liable for injury or damage resulting from operation of the vehicle, but such estoppel does not prevent his insurer from disclaiming liability on the insurance policy if the vehicle has been transferred without the insurer's consent and the transferor has relinquished control over the car, unless the policy provides for coverage under such circumstances. Mason v Allstate Ins. Co., 12 A.D.2d 138, 209 N.Y.S.2d 104, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6284 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1960).

The change in definition of "owner" in former § 59, by 1958 amendment, was intended merely to clarify the earlier definition. Where the purchaser and original owner of a car was a Rabbi who taught at a rabbinical school which conducted a charitable summer camp for its students, and transferred title to the car to a corporation organized to operate the camp, which thereupon registered title in its name, intending to make a gift of the vehicle but nevertheless continuing in possession of it, he remained liable under former § 59 as its "owner" within the intendment of that section. Tyrnauer v Travelers Ins. Co., 15 A.D.2d 293, 223 N.Y.S.2d 151, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6804 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1961), aff'd, 13 N.Y.2d 613, 240 N.Y.S.2d 603, 191 N.E.2d 89, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 1222 (N.Y. 1963).

Company leasing vehicle for period in excess of thirty days for its exclusive use considered owner thereof within meaning of § 128 and consequently subject to liability under Vehicle & Traf. L § 388(3). Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v World Wide Rent-A-Car, Inc., 28 A.D.2d 286, 284 N.Y.S.2d 807, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2928 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1967).

In consolidated actions to recover for personal injuries sustained in motor vehicle accident, question of fact existed as to who was owner of automobile in question at time of injury to plaintiffs, precluding summary judgment, although presumption existed that defendant owned automobile because its registration indicated that ownership had been transferred to her, since such presumption had been cast into doubt by evidence tending to indicate that neither third-party defendant nor defendant ever intended for title to be transferred and that lease arrangement may have existed. Doughty v Johnson, 155 A.D.2d 513, 547 N.Y.S.2d 373, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14232 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Order granting an owner's N.Y. C.P.L.R. 4401 motion for judgment as a matter of law was error because the owner admitted that it had leased the vehicle involved in the underlying accident to the driver, and was identified as the owner on the certificate of title; under Vehicle and Traffic Law § 2108(c), a certificate of title was prima facie evidence of ownership and New York law made vehicle lessors, their assignees, and their agents vicariously liable as "owners" under the Vehicle and Traffic Law in an action, such as this one, which was commenced prior to the effective date of the Graves Amendment, 49 U.S.C.S. § 30106. Zegarowicz v Ripatti, 77 A.D.3d 650, 911 N.Y.S.2d 69, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7267 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2010).

Summary judgment for a business was properly denied because the business failed to demonstrate, prima facie, that it was not an owner of a vehicle entrusted to it for sale on consignment approximately a month earlier or that its employee did not have its permission to operate the vehicle at the time of the accident. Kelly v Starr, 181 A.D.3d 799, 120 N.Y.S.3d 373, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1956 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2020).

Evidence sufficient to justify jury verdict against lessee who operated and controlled vehicle at time of accident and immediately prior thereto and lessor-owner, even if jury verdict was founded solely on defective maintenance or an existing defect, since the lessee for a period of over 30 days, is deemed an owner, and the title owner and lessor are jointly and severally liable. Accelerated Trucking Corp. v McLean Trucking Co., 53 Misc. 2d 321, 278 N.Y.S.2d 516, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1886 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1967).

The term "owner" under Vehicle and Traffic Law § 128 includes any lessee having the exclusive use for a period greater than 30 days, and does not exclude the title holder as an owner for purposes of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 and under Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 subdivision 3 the liability of the lessor and lessee of an automobile is joint and several. Location Auto Leasing Corp. v Lembo Corp., 62 Misc. 2d 856, 310 N.Y.S.2d 365, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1689 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1970).

An action brought against the sheriff's department and county for bodily injuries sustained by a deputy sheriff while on patrol duty, when the automobile he was driving malfunctioned and left the highway, was barred against the county on the grounds that the vehicle was not a "police vehicle" within the purview of Veh & Tr Law § 388 which specifically excludes fire and police vehicles from the vicarious liability statute and was barred against the sheriff by Workers' Compensation Law since the deputy sheriff was considered to be in the joint employment of the sheriff and the county. Cady v Andrews, 109 Misc. 2d 571, 440 N.Y.S.2d 477, 1981 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2432 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1981).

In an action arising out of a motor vehicle accident in which plaintiff police officer sustained injuries while pursuing defendant, who was allegedly speeding, the motion of the municipality which employed plaintiff for summary judgment dismissing the third-party complaint of defendant is denied since defendant third-party plaintiff's papers raise issues of fact which may found the municipality's liability on more than the vicarious basis of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388, which specifically excludes police vehicles; those issues include an allegation that the municipality failed, by virtue of inadequate supervision of plaintiff, to prevent him from conducting a high-speed pursuit in violation of its own rules and regulations. The argument of the municipality that allowing the third-party action to go forward will cause a double reduction in defendant's liability is without merit since the liability of the municipality, if any, will be determined on the basis of its own acts or omissions. Brown v Ellis, 145 Misc. 2d 1085, 548 N.Y.S.2d 841, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 766 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1989), aff'd, 150 Misc. 2d 375, 575 N.Y.S.2d 622, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 746 (N.Y. App. Term 1990).

Since the mere fact that a bus was leased provided no basis for exculpating the city from liability under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388, the city's motion to dismiss or for summary judgment was denied as to a passenger's negligence suit. Gaines v City of New York, 797 N.Y.S.2d 901, 8 Misc. 3d 968, 233 N.Y.L.J. 5, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1273 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2005).

In action against owner of automobile for damages inflicted while such automobile was being operated by another, wherein parties stipulated that driver was negligent, when the defendant conceded ownership of the automobile, plaintiff's case prima facie was proved. Parker v Telesco, 111 N.Y.S.2d 481, 1952 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2530 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1952).

Trial court erred in granting summary judgment pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. 3212 to a bank in a personal injury action; as the leaseholder, the bank was an owner of the vehicle which allegedly hit the injured party pursuant to of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1), and thus the bank failed to show entitled to summary judgment. Litvak v Fabi, 8 A.D.3d 631, 780 N.Y.S.2d 155, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9141 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2004).

23. Legal title holder

A bank which was appointed committee of property of an incompetent did not thereby acquire title to automobile owned by incompetent and could not be held liable on theory of ownership of automobile for injuries alleged to have resulted from alleged negligent driving of such automobile by infant to whom incompetent loaned automobile. Robinson v People's Bank of Hamburg, 281 A.D. 351, 120 N.Y.S.2d 317, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3049 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

In a negligence action in which it was alleged that one of the defendants, a foreign corporation doing business in New York, rented a car to the defendant driver and gave the latter, a New York resident, permission to drive in Germany, where plaintiff, a passenger in the rented car and also a New York resident, sustained injuries when the defendant driver collided with a truck driven and owned by German nationals, and wherein the only claim of negligence alleged was in connection with the operation of the two vehicles, summary judgment is granted to the defendant corporation dismissing the complaint as against it, since the relationship between the corporation and the driver was not that of master and servant and plaintiff could not therefore rely on the doctrine of respondeat superior in her attempt to impose liability on the corporation, and since the corporation was not the record owner of the rented car, the record owner being a Belgian company owned by the defendant corporation and another foreign company, and the owner company having a license from the defendant corporation to participate in a vehicle rental business, plaintiff could not impose liability under section 388 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, which renders an owner of a motor vehicle liable for injuries caused by the negligent operator thereof, as long as the latter is driving the car with the consent or permission of the former; the defendant corporation could not be treated as the owner-lessor under the alter ego doctrine, since it had only a minority interest in the owner company, which owned the vehicle, insured it and fixed the rental charges, and liability could not be sustained on a theory of alter ego where each corporation has separate assets, employees and business, and additionally, plaintiff could not rely on the doctrine of apparent authority or agency by estoppel to impose liability on the defendant corporation, since plaintiff made no showing of any evidentiary facts indicating how she relied on any representations of the defendant corporation that the owner company was the former's agent, and there was no allegation that the owner company was in any way responsible for the accident. Bank v Rebold, 69 A.D.2d

Defendant, which had acquired security interest in vehicle, was not owner thereof so as to be liable for its negligent use merely because defendant took actions consistent with its rights as lienholder under CLS UCC Art 9 when vehicle lessor defaulted on its obligations; thus, defendant was properly granted summary judgment in action for injuries sustained while plaintiff was passenger in vehicle. Kelly v Fleet Bank, 271 A.D.2d 654, 706 N.Y.S.2d 190, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4511 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2000), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 702, 722 N.Y.S.2d 794, 745 N.E.2d 1016, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 81 (N.Y. 2001).

Public policy will not permit the real owner of an automobile to escape the consequences of his own negligence and recover property damages to his vehicle by taking refuge behind a rebuttable presumption of title in the registered owner, his wife, and it was implicit in the jury's verdict that they found the husband was the real owner of the vehicle he was operating at the time of the collision and that he was negligent and therefore the motion to set aside the verdict as inconsistent as it relates to claim for property damage was denied. Britt v Perry, 64 Misc. 2d 655, 315 N.Y.S.2d 357, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1201 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1970).

Where a corporation, the registered owner of an automobile, transferred all of its assets, including the automobile, to the majority stockholder of the corporation, the latter was in fact the owner of the car and was liable for an accident involving the driver of said car. Schomer v Andy Le Grow, Inc., 198 N.Y.S.2d 974, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3924 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960).

24. —Effect of failure to transfer registration, etc.

An auto renting company which claims to have transferred title of a truck to a bakery corporation and retained the registration to avoid ration regulations is considered as the owner, and disclaimer of ownership does not constitute a legal defense. Elfeld v Burkham Auto Renting Co., 299 N.Y. 336, 87 N.E.2d 285, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 336, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 940 (N.Y. 1949).

The registered owner of a motor vehicle, contending that ownership was retained to avoid a wartime regulation by the actual owner of the vehicle, will not be allowed to disclaim ownership to avoid liability under this section. Elfeld v Burkham Auto Renting Co., 299 N.Y. 336, 87 N.E.2d 285, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 336, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 940 (N.Y. 1949).

The execution by the purchaser of a vehicle of a note and purchase agreement, and by both seller and purchaser of a security agreement stating that the vehicle was owned by the purchaser, was a sufficient transfer of ownership of the vehicle to constitute the purchaser's insurance carrier the primary insurer of personal injuries thereafter inflicted during the purchaser's operation of the vehicle, notwithstanding that the prior owner's license plates remained on the vehicle and that the certificate of title was not transferred until after the injury-causing accident, since, even though a registered owner who transfers a vehicle without removing the license plates is estopped as against an injured third party from denying ownership, the estoppel does not prevent his insurance carrier from denying ownership within the meaning of its policy as against another carrier, since the seller's reservation of a security interest does not affect the requirement of Veh & Tr Law § 128 that the purchaser, as an owner of the vehicle, must obtain its own insurance coverage and cannot rely on the seller's policy, and since the seller's reservation of his security interest does not constitute the seller an owner pursuant to Veh & Tr Law § 388(3); Veh & Tr Law § 2113 did not mandate a different result, since its provisions do not purport to define when a previous owner remains the owner for purposes of insurance coverage, and is inapplicable between insurance carriers, and since the section does not defer vesting of title in a purchaser until the Uniform Vehicle Certificate of Title Act (Veh & Tr Law Title 10) has been complied with. Dairylea Cooperative, Inc. v Rossal, 64 N.Y.2d 1, 483 N.Y.S.2d 1001, 473 N.E.2d 251, 1984 N.Y. LEXIS 4754 (N.Y. 1984).

Because an owner's conclusory affidavit, supported only by a handwritten, undated, and unnotarized statement purportedly from the driver, was insufficient under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 128 and 388(1) to demonstrate that the owner was not the owner of the vehicle, the trial court properly denied the owner's motion for summary judgment in the insurer's action to recover payments made to its insured. Allstate Ins. Co. v Persampire, 45 A.D.3d 706, 846 N.Y.S.2d 288, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11919 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2007).

Summary judgment for the alleged owner of driver-A's vehicle was proper with respect to a claim of vicarious liability that arose from a vehicle accident, as the owner showed that driver-A had the sole possessory interest in, as well as dominion and control over, the vehicle, and the failure to properly register the vehicle in his name did not raise an issue of fact with respect to ownership. Oscier v Musty, 138 A.D.3d 1402, 31 N.Y.S.3d 697, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3282 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2016).

25. Co-owner's liability

The co-owner of a car was not liable under the former analogous section, the statute not being designed to make each part owner of an automobile liable for the consequences of the negligent operation of it by his co-owner. Leppard v O'Brien (1929) 252 NY 563, 170 NE 144 ovrld by Payne v Payne (1971) 28 NY2d 399, 322 NYS2d 238, 271 NE2d 220)., holding that the question of "consent" is one of fact which in the absence of other evidence would be established inferentially upon proof of co-ownership and use, and that the presumption normally arising upon proof of co-ownership and use, however, is not conclusive and may be rebutted by a showing that the common owners have not in fact consented among themselves to possession and use by both.

In considering the question of the liability of an absent co-owner for damages caused by the negligence of the other co-owner in the operation of the automobile, the question of "consent" is one of fact, which in the absence of other evidence would be established inferentially upon proof of co-ownership and use. Payne v Payne, 28 N.Y.2d 399, 322 N.Y.S.2d 238, 271 N.E.2d 220, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 1247 (N.Y. 1971).

In an action against a co-owner of a motor vehicle for damages caused by the operation of the vehicle by other co-owner, where the plaintiff introduced evidence of co-ownership and use but it appeared from the record that the driver was unlicensed, that fact served to rebut the presumption arising upon proof of co-ownership and use, and the matter should be allowed to proceed to trial and not determined on a motion for summary judgment. Payne v Payne, 28 N.Y.2d 399, 322 N.Y.S.2d 238, 271 N.E.2d 220, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 1247 (N.Y. 1971).

The former analogous section as it existed September 8, 1927, did not apply so as to make a co-owner liable for the negligence of his joint owner. Leppard v O'Brien (1928) 225 App Div 162, 232 NYS 454, affd (1929) 252 NY 563, 170 NE 144 ovrld by Payne v Payne (1971) 28 NY2d 399, 322 NYS2d 238, 271 NE2d 220), holding that the question of "consent" is one of fact which in the absence of other evidence would be established inferentially upon proof of co-ownership and use, and that the presumption normally arising upon proof of co-ownership and use, however, is not conclusive and may be rebutted by a showing that the common owners have not in fact consented among themselves to possession and use by both.

This section is not applicable when the defendant husband is the co-owner of the car. Wadsworth v Webster, 237 A.D. 319, 261 N.Y.S. 670, 1932 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5339 (N.Y. App. Div. 1932).

This section (formerly the Highway Law § 282-e) making the negligence of an operator, other than the owner, attributable to the owner is not applicable in an action against a partner by the wife of a member of the partnership for her husband's tortious act because plaintiff's husband was co-owner of the vehicle. Caplan v Caplan, 243 A.D. 456, 278 N.Y.S. 475, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7093 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 268 N.Y. 445, 198 N.E. 23, 268 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 445, 1935 N.Y. LEXIS 958 (N.Y. 1935).

Question of fact exists as to issue of who was owner of automobile in question at time of injury to plaintiffs; although presumption exists that defendant owned vehicle, because its registration indicated that its ownership had been transferred to her, this presumption has been cast in doubt by evidence tending to indicate that neither respondent, nor defendant or codefendant ever intended for title to be transferred; leasing arrangement may in fact have existed with respondent as lessor, defendant as lessee, and codefendant as prior lessee; thus, although court correctly determined that plaintiffs offered no evidence tending to prove negligence on part of respondents, vicarious liability may yet exist on their part pursuant to Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388. Doughty v Johnson, 155 A.D.2d 513, 547 N.Y.S.2d 373, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14232 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Leasing company was not entitled to summary judgment in action against it for personal injuries arising out of motor vehicle accident since triable issue of fact existed as to whether leasing company was registered owner of vehicle alleged to have caused accident. Gliem v Parker, 145 A.D.2d 534, 536 N.Y.S.2d 977, 538 N.Y.S.2d 977, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13647 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Automobile dealership was entitled to summary judgment in the plaintiff's personal injury action because there was no evidence that the dealership shared ownership of an employee's vehicle for purposes of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1), and there was no evidence that the dealership possessed special knowledge that rendered a customer's use of the employee's vehicle unreasonably dangerous. Monette v Trummer, 105 A.D.3d 1328, 964 N.Y.S.2d 345, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2923 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), aff'd, 22 N.Y.3d 944, 976 N.Y.S.2d 696, 999 N.E.2d 174, 2013 N.Y. LEXIS 2910 (N.Y. 2013).

In event self-insured car rental company desired to terminate questionable renewal leasing arrangements with its lessee, it was under a duty to other motorists to diligently take proper steps to remove vehicle from roadways of state before disclaiming its responsibility as a self-insurer of vehicle. Banner Casualty Co. v Lazar, 81 Misc. 2d 360, 366 N.Y.S.2d 314, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2389 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1975).

26. Absentee owner

The absentee owner of an automobile which, at the time of the accident, was being operated by his 18-year-old daughter, was not chargeable with the daughter's negligence as driver at a time when the automobile was not being used in his business as against negligent third party. Siekierski v Derleth, 13 A.D.2d 715, 213 N.Y.S.2d 941, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11577 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1961).

The negligence of an automobile driver is not imputable to the owner of the car as against negligent third party, when the car is being operated with his consent, but in his absence, unless it is being used in his business or for his benefit and on his account. Bulat v O'Brien, 13 A.D.2d 904, 215 N.Y.S.2d 635, 217 N.Y.S.2d 575, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10761 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1961).

In an action wherein respondent, as absentee owner of a motor vehicle was sued for damages sustained by plaintiff allegedly by reason of failure of a person operating respondent's car with his consent stopped the car on a grade and left it without setting the brakes, wherein respondent filed a third-party complaint against a garage for negligence in repairing the brakes, the third-party complaint was sufficient to sustain a cause of action in favor of respondent against the garage if, in exercise of due care, he failed to discover the defective condition of the brakes after the repair job. Glassman v Goldman, 35 Misc. 2d 429, 230 N.Y.S.2d 947, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3374 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1962).

This section provides substantially that every owner of a vehicle used or operated in New York state shall be liable and responsible for death or injuries to persons or property resulting from negligence in the use or operation of the vehicle in the business of the owner or otherwise by any person operating the same with permission, express or implied, of the owner, and this section is not limited to New York state residents, and, consequently, out of state owners and operators who elect to use the highways of this state subject themselves to this section, and the law makes no distinction between residents and nonresidents, people in transit or otherwise, and the Ontario "guest statute" is not applicable in this state. Kell v Henderson, 47 Misc. 2d 992, 263 N.Y.S.2d 647, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1427 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1965), aff'd, 26 A.D.2d 595, 270 N.Y.S.2d 552, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4068 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1966).

Where two automobiles, each being operated by persons not the owners thereof with permission of, but in the absence of said respective owners, collided by reason of the negligence of each driver, each owner was liable in damages to the other. Bandych v Ross, 26 N.Y.S.2d 830, 1941 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1645 (N.Y. City Ct. 1941).

The state statute making the owner of an automobile liable for personal injuries resulting from its negligent operation by another to whom he has entrusted it, is consistent with due process as applied to a non-resident owner who was not in that state when the accident occurred and who had merely lent his machine to one not his agent or engaged on business for him, with express or implied permission to take it there from the state of the owner's residence, where the bailment occurred and whose laws did not impose such liability. Young v Masci, 289 U.S. 253, 53 S. Ct. 599, 77 L. Ed. 1158, 1933 U.S. LEXIS 178 (U.S. 1933).

27. Permission to drive

Wrongful death actions against a Pennsylvania car owner were barred in New York where the issue as to whether the Pennsylvania resident had given permission to another to use his car had been tried out in an action in New Hampshire against the non-owner driver and the insurance company on the owner's risk. The issue of permission of the insured under the insurance policy decided in New Hampshire action was the same as the issue of permission of the owner under this section. Hinchey v Sellers, 7 N.Y.2d 287, 197 N.Y.S.2d 129, 165 N.E.2d 156, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 903 (N.Y. 1959).

Lessor of automobile may not enforce restrictions on use by lessee, and thereby escape liability to third person, on ground that violation of restriction removed element of consent required by CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1). Wynn v Middleton, 184 A.D.2d 1019, 584 N.Y.S.2d 684, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8250 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1992).

Statement signed by vehicle's owner (second defendant) that he had loaned vehicle to driver (first defendant) made out prima facie case that second defendant was liable for negligence in case in which first defendant struck pedestrian. DeProssino v Noorzad, 225 A.D.2d 581, 638 N.Y.S.2d 782, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2183 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

Summary judgment granted to the employer for alleged liability, inter alia, under N.Y. Veh. and Traf. Law § 388(1) was affirmed because the uncontradicted evidence from the employee and a supervisor supported a conclusion that the employee did not have permission for personal use of the employer's van at the time of the accident. Britt v Pharmacologic Pet Servs., Inc., 36 A.D.3d 1039, 828 N.Y.S.2d 630, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 262 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. dismissed, 9 N.Y.3d 831, 840 N.Y.S.2d 563, 872 N.E.2d 249, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 1641 (N.Y. 2007).

Because defendant failed to sufficiently rebut the strong presumption that an unidentified driver was operating defendant's vehicle with its permission at the time of an accident, defendant failed to establish its prima facie entitlement to judgment as a matter of law on a cause of action alleging that defendant was vicariously liable for the driver's negligence under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388. Han v BJ Laura & Son, Inc., 122 A.D.3d 591, 996 N.Y.S.2d 132, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7417 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2014).

Where someone using a stolen driver's license rented a vehicle from defendant and allegedly drove it into a collision with plaintiff, the defendant as an owner could not avoid liability under Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 on the ground that there was no permission express or implied for the operation of the vehicle. Lorippo v Chrysler Leasing Corp., 59 Misc. 2d 534, 299 N.Y.S.2d 672, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 976 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1968).

Civil court erred in granting an owner's motion for summary judgment in automobile salesmen's action to recover damages for injuries they sustained while riding in a vehicle during a test drive on the ground that the salesmen had released the owner from liability because the owner's attempt to completely disclaim the liability imposed upon it under Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 was contrary to public policy; therefore, the release, insofar as it was in favor of the owner was unenforceable unless the owner could establish at trial that the operator of the vehicle used it without the owner's express or implied permission. Kim v Doe, 890 N.Y.S.2d 250, 25 Misc. 3d 65, 2009 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2083 (N.Y. App. Term 2009).

Consent of an owner of an automobile either express or implied, to its use by another, is an essential element to his own liability for any damages inflicted while his automobile is being operated by another. Parker v Telesco, 111 N.Y.S.2d 481, 1952 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2530 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1952).

There is a strong presumption that the driver of a vehicle is operating it with the owner's consent, which can only be rebutted by substantial evidence, in order to find permissive use, there must be a consensual link between the negligent operator and one whose possession of the vehicle is authorized. Lancer Ins. Co. v Republic Franklin Ins. Co., 304 A.D.2d 794, 759 N.Y.S.2d 734, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4540 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003).

If licensed driver has permission from insured owner to operate motor vehicle in New York, insurance policy for vehicle would provide coverage in event that its operator is involved in accident. Insurance Department, Opinions of General Counsel, Opinion Number 08-02-02.

28. —Express

The owner of an automobile is liable to an invited guest for any negligence of the driver under this section where it appears that the owner, driver, and guest were seated in the driver's seat; that the driver was operating the automobile with permission and under the eye of the defendant; that as the automobile was proceeding at a speed of about fifteen miles per hour along a busy highway leading to N. Y. City and in a procession of cars, it suddenly swerved to the left, ran across the road and into a ditch, and turned over against an obstruction, as a result of which the guest suffered injuries. Bennett v Edward, 239 A.D. 157, 267 N.Y.S. 417, 1933 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7984 (N.Y. App. Div. 1933).

29. —Implied

Evidence was insufficient to sustain finding that employee had implied permission to drive a truck for his personal use at the time of the collision. Schied v Davey Tree Expert Co., 2 A.D.2d 926, 156 N.Y.S.2d 707, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3942 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

In an action against the owner of an automobile for injuries inflicted due to the driver's negligence, defendant's written statement six months after the accident wherein she stated that the operator "still had my implied permission to use my car anytime he wished" was sufficient basis for imposing liability on the owner. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v Huther, 22 A.D.2d 747, 253 N.Y.S.2d 727, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3028 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1964).

Evidence that the owner of a motor vehicle had given his son unrestricted use of it and that one of his son's friends had, during a period of time just prior to an accident, frequently driven it pursuant to an understanding with the son, with the only requirement being that he replace the gasoline consumed, could form a basis for a jury finding that the son's friend was driving the vehicle with the implied permission of the owner. Lincoln v Austic, 60 A.D.2d 487, 401 N.Y.S.2d 1020, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9691 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 44 N.Y.2d 644, 405 N.Y.S.2d 1028, 1978 N.Y. LEXIS 4321 (N.Y. 1978).

Trial court's denial of a vehicle owner's motion for summary judgment dismissal of a personal injury negligence complaint against him, as well as cross claims asserted against him, arising from a motor vehicle accident involving his minivan, was proper, as an issue of material fact was raised as to whether the driver of the minivan at the time that the accident occurred had the owner's implied consent to use the vehicle; pursuant to the policy under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388, where the owner gave his friend permission to use the minivan, although whether such permission was restricted or not was an issue of fact, it was reasonable to find that the friend's son had the owner's implied consent to use the minivan, as the keys were in the friend and son's house, the son was promised a new car from his father, and the totality of the circumstances supported the creation of a factual issue as to the consent. Bernard v Mumuni, 22 A.D.3d 186, 802 N.Y.S.2d 1, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8652 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2005), aff'd, 6 N.Y.3d 881, 817 N.Y.S.2d 210, 850 N.E.2d 25, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 1259 (N.Y. 2006).

Where an owner of an automobile delivered it to a dealer in part payment of a new car and prior to the consummation of sale the automobile was involved in an accident in which driver thereof was found to be negligent, it was held that car was being driven at the time of the accident with the implied permission of the owner so as to render the owner liable for negligence. Samiof v Kehn, 228 N.Y.S. 734, 131 Misc. 764, 1928 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 858 (N.Y. County Ct. 1928), aff'd, 226 A.D. 842, 234 N.Y.S. 884, 1929 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10555 (N.Y. App. Div. 1929).

Automobile owner who left auto at service station for repairs could not be charged with implied assent to automobile's be driven by one who was not a licensed driver and the driver's negligence would not be imputed to him. Malone v Liss, Inc. Service Station, 5 Misc. 2d 1002, 162 N.Y.S.2d 637, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3344 (N.Y. City Ct. 1957).

Evidence that an employer had given permission to his employee to use a truck was sufficient where the proof showed that the driver of the truck was with the owner at a bar and the owner there authorized him to drive two girls to his home in one of his trucks and from there to take the girls to their destination. Although the driver had ignored instructions to await service calls and had gone on a joy ride with one of the girls, implied permission was found in view of the employer's previous practice in acquiescing in the use of his vehicles for the pleasure and convenience of others. Leahy v Kaszubski, 123 N.Y.S.2d 246, 1953 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1951 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1953), aff'd, 283 A.D. 947, 130 N.Y.S.2d 221, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5892 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

On the facts, the court properly found that whoever the driver of defendant's car was at the time of the accident, that person was driving with the implied permission of the defendant. Poller v Casagrande, 154 N.Y.S.2d 520 (N.Y. County Ct. 1956).

Summary judgment entered in favor of a rental car company and its parent company was reversed because the companies, as owner of the vehicle at issue, had not adequately rebutted the presumption under N.Y. Veh & Traf. Law § 388(1) that the vehicle had been used with their implied consent. Cherry v Tucker, 5 A.D.3d 422, 773 N.Y.S.2d 405, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2452 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2004).

30. —Question of fact

Grant of summary judgment in favor of the owner of a vehicle was proper where the disavowals that the employee was driving without permission were reinforced by the owner's contemporaneous accident reports and the employee accepted a punishment based on a written allegation that he took the truck without authority. Country Wide Ins. Co. v Nat'l R. R. Passenger Corp., 6 N.Y.3d 172, 811 N.Y.S.2d 302, 844 N.E.2d 756, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 152 (N.Y. 2006).

In action for injuries sustained by infant plaintiff when struck by automobile, against both owner and one operating automobile at time of accident, contradictory testimony as to whether one operating automobile at time of accident was doing so with permission of owner within meaning of the Vehicle and Traffic Law was for jury. Vincinere v Ward, 259 A.D. 1019, 20 N.Y.S.2d 451, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7795 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940), aff'd, 285 N.Y. 823, 35 N.E.2d 497, 285 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 823, 1941 N.Y. LEXIS 1792 (N.Y. 1941).

Order which denied plaintiff's motions to dismiss affirmative defense of contributory negligence and counterclaim affirmed–plaintiff and coplaintiffs brought action to recover for injuries sustained when plaintiff drove pickup truck off highway; complaint alleged town negligently maintained highway and failed to adequately warn of dangerous condition; town asserted as affirmative defense that accident was proximately caused by plaintiff's culpable conduct, and pleaded counterclaim against plaintiff on same ground, seeking indemnification for judgment rendered in favor of coplaintiffs; town also brought third-party action against owner of vehicle, seeking indemnification and/or contribution as result of his alleged negligence; at close of proof, owner made trial motion to dismiss third-party complaint; Supreme Court granted motion, and judgment was entered dismissing third-party action; jury returned verdict in favor of plaintiffs; judgment dismissing third-party action was affirmed by Appellate Division upon basis there was no duty imposed upon owner to equip vehicle with seat belts or to check plaintiff's condition before permitting him to borrow truck; however, judgment in favor of plaintiffs was reversed and new trial ordered "on all issues"; plaintiff brought motions for orders dismissing affirmative defense of plaintiff's culpable conduct and counterclaim as barred by doctrine of law of case; Supreme Court denied motions–in its appeal from judgment dismissing third-party complaint, town took issue only with Supreme Court's determination that it failed to establish prima facie owner's direct negligence and, as is clear from prior decision, only that issue was considered by court; however, reversal of judgment entered on jury verdict in favor of plaintiffs had effect of vacating jury's determination that plaintiff's negligence did not proximately cause plaintiffs' damages; as such, it eliminated basis for Supreme Court's judgment dismissing third-party complaint to extent it stated derivative claim under Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388; thus, judgment dismissing third-party action should have been reversed to that extent; this error notwithstanding, order affirming Supreme Court's judgment dismissing third-party action will operate as estoppel only with respect to questions actually litigated and determined. Ramundo v Guilderland, 163 A.D.2d 712, 558 N.Y.S.2d 310, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8421 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1990).

Rental car company was not entitled to summary judgment dismissing wrongful death action brought on behalf of passenger who was killed while riding in rented automobile which was being driven at time of accident by friend of lessee's brother, notwithstanding fact that car was being used beyond lease period by driver who was neither covered by rental agreement nor given permission by lessee, since company failed to meet burden of overcoming presumption that vehicle was being operated with owner's consent (CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1)). Wynn v Middleton, 184 A.D.2d 1019, 584 N.Y.S.2d 684, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8250 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1992).

In action by passenger to recover damages for injuries sustained in automobile accident, owner of automobile was not entitled to summary judgment, although he rebutted presumption of permission under CLS Veh & Tr § 388 by offering proof that automobile was stolen at time of accident, since question of fact existed as to issue of consent where (1) owner allegedly knew that automobile had been stolen at 2:00 a.m., (2) shortly thereafter, police notified owner that automobile had been "totaled" in accident, and (3) owner did not report that automobile had been stolen at time of contact with police but waited until 4:30 a.m. to report automobile as stolen. Guerrieri v Gray, 203 A.D.2d 324, 610 N.Y.S.2d 301, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3708 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994).

Presumption that driver of vehicle was operating it with owner's permission and consent was rebutted as matter of law where (1) owner submitted affidavit averring that his employee was operating van at time of accident without his knowledge, consent, or permission, that to extent that employee had set of keys to van, employee had obtained them without owner's knowledge or consent, and that following prior accident with van, employee was specifically instructed by owner that he was not to use van for any reason, (2) employee conceded at his examination before trial that, following prior accident, owner told him that he was not to use van for personal matters, and (3) employee conceded that he did not have owner's permission to use van on night he attended concert and was involved in accident; thus, court should have granted owner's motion for summary judgment in action for injuries sustained by van's passenger in accident. Leonard v Karlewicz, 215 A.D.2d 973, 627 N.Y.S.2d 169, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5603 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1995).

Defendants, owners of vehicle which struck plaintiff's vehicle, were properly denied summary judgment, despite their contention that they never gave driver permission to use their vehicle, where testimony in support of their summary judgment motion by witnesses, all of whom were closely related and obviously interested in favorable outcome for defendant and his business, was rife with inconsistencies and raised credibility issues. Carter v Rosa Rosa, Inc., 284 A.D.2d 110, 725 N.Y.S.2d 202, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5655 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2001).

Order granting an employer's motion for summary judgment dismissing the complaint was reversed because the employee driving the employer's vehicle directly contradicted the employer's claim that the employee did not have permission to use the vehicle for non-work related purposes, thus, the issue of the employee's permissive use of the vehicle had to be resolved at trial. Baker v Lisconish, 156 A.D.3d 1324, 68 N.Y.S.3d 233, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9048 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2017), app. dismissed, 31 N.Y.3d 1042, 100 N.E.3d 843, 76 N.Y.S.3d 504, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 855 (N.Y. 2018).

The ownership of an automobile by a corporate defendant created a presumption under this section that it was being used at the time of the accident with defendant's permission, and it was for the jury to decide whether to credit salesman's testimony which, if believed, would destroy the presumption and exonerate the corporate defendant from liability. Aarons v Standard Varnish Works, 296 N.Y.S. 312, 163 Misc. 84, 1937 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1282 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1937), aff'd, 254 A.D. 560, 3 N.Y.S.2d 910, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6559 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938).

Defendant owners of a motor vehicle, the driver of which is charged with negligent operation, are not entitled to summary judgment solely on the basis of their allegation that the operator was not using the vehicle with their permission, where they admit ownership of the vehicle, as against a contention of implied permission or consent to its use. Potter v Kahler, 31 Misc. 2d 15, 219 N.Y.S.2d 522, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3039 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1961).

Affidavits submitted by defendant owner of a motor vehicle charged under this section with damages arising from negligent operation of the car by his son while using the car with defendant's permission, were insufficient to establish lack of permission to use the vehicle, particularly in view of conflicting affidavits and the fact that defendant had no operator's license himself and had permitted the son to use the car with his wife's permission on various occasions, showing existence of a question of fact for the jury. Hubert v Stasiak, 31 Misc. 2d 307, 220 N.Y.S.2d 748, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2239 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1961).

Issue of whether automobile was being driven with owner's consent when it hit plaintiff could be submitted to jury, where out-of-state father had permitted his son to take automobile to college in New York with limiting instructions not to let others use it; jury might hold father to knowledge that so generous entrustment, far from home and for protracted period, was not reasonably susceptible to limitation not to loan car to others. Rodak v Longnecker, 176 Misc. 2d 833, 673 N.Y.S.2d 998, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 192 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1998).

Trial court properly denied summary judgment motions by defendants in an action in which a child driving a rented car caused and accident; before any pretrial disclosure, the issue of whether the child had permission to use the vehicle was exclusively within the knowledge of defendants, so further discovery was required to determine whether defendants were responsible for the injuries under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388, and because the renter failed to establish, prima facie, that the rental agreement was not for a period of greater than 30 days, N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 128. Donato v ELRAC, Inc., 18 A.D.3d 696, 795 N.Y.S.2d 348, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5645 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2005).

Trial court properly denied summary judgment to a vehicle owner as to a claim for personal injuries arising from an automobile accident, as there was a triable issue of fact on whether the vehicle was stolen at the time of the accident, or the owner allowed her grandson to use the vehicle, and was thus liable under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1). Harris v Jackson, 30 A.D.3d 1027, 816 N.Y.S.2d 791, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7588 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2006).

Where a plaintiff proved that defendant owned truck in question, and defendant and driver, who relied on the former analogous section, denied that consent had been given to driver to use truck, there was evidence to go to jury on question of whether driver used truck with defendant's consent. Pariso v Towse, 45 F.2d 962, 1930 U.S. App. LEXIS 3759 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1930).

31. — —Procedure

In an automobile negligence action, question as to whether automobile was being operated with defendant's permission, expressed or implied, is a question of fact which should be submitted to the jury. Carr v Sciandra, 281 A.D. 1072, 122 N.Y.S.2d 132, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4365 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Once substantial evidence is introduced of a denial of permission to operate the owner's vehicle, the issue becomes one of fact for the jury. Antonik v Kochansky, 37 A.D.2d 821, 324 N.Y.S.2d 988, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3274 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1971).

When the owner of a motor vehicle offers proof tending to rebut the presumption that the driver of it was using it with his consent, the issue of consent becomes a question of fact for the jury. Lincoln v Austic, 60 A.D.2d 487, 401 N.Y.S.2d 1020, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9691 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 44 N.Y.2d 644, 405 N.Y.S.2d 1028, 1978 N.Y. LEXIS 4321 (N.Y. 1978).

There was no need for jury determination of whether vehicle was operated with owner's permission where Supreme Court had decided that issue after hearing. Asaro v McGuire Auto Rental Leasing, 238 A.D.2d 366, 657 N.Y.S.2d 334, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3841 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

In actions against the owner of a vehicle driven by another for damages growing out of vehicular collisions, New York cases indicate that even where the owner and driver testify without contradiction as a part of defendant's case that driver had no permission or was out of scope of employment, the case should still go to trier of facts and, if that evidence of interested witnesses is disbelieved, the presumption that owner of vehicle is responsible for manner in which vehicle is driven has not been overcome. Mandelbaum v United States, 251 F.2d 748, 1958 U.S. App. LEXIS 3609 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1958).

32. Evidence of permission

The owner of an automobile is liable to an invited guest for any negligence of the driver under this section where it appears that the owner, driver, and guest were seated in the driver's seat; that the driver was operating the automobile with permission and under the eye of the defendant; that as the automobile was proceeding at a speed of about fifteen miles per hour along a busy highway leading to N. Y. City and in a procession of cars, it suddenly swerved to the left, ran across the road and into a ditch, and turned over against an obstruction, as a result of which the guest suffered injuries. Bennett v Edward, 239 A.D. 157, 267 N.Y.S. 417, 1933 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7984 (N.Y. App. Div. 1933).

The owner of an automobile is liable, under this section, where the vehicle was used and operated with his consent to the extent that he not only kept the vehicle in repair but supplied a chauffeur and fuel with which to operate it. Irwin v Klein, 243 A.D. 23, 276 N.Y.S. 41, 1934 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5476 (N.Y. App. Div. 1934).

In an action against the owner of an automobile for injuries inflicted due to the driver's negligence, defendant's written statement six months after the accident wherein she stated that the operator "still had my implied permission to use my car anytime he wished" was sufficient basis for imposing liability on the owner. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v Huther, 22 A.D.2d 747, 253 N.Y.S.2d 727, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3028 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1964).

Evidence that the owner of a motor vehicle had given his son unrestricted use of it and that one of his son's friends had, during a period of time just prior to an accident, frequently driven it pursuant to an understanding with the son, with the only requirement being that he replace the gasoline consumed, could form a basis for a jury finding that the son's friend was driving the vehicle with the implied permission of the owner. Lincoln v Austic, 60 A.D.2d 487, 401 N.Y.S.2d 1020, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9691 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 44 N.Y.2d 644, 405 N.Y.S.2d 1028, 1978 N.Y. LEXIS 4321 (N.Y. 1978).

Evidence that an employer had given permission to his employee to use a truck was sufficient where the proof showed that the driver of the truck was with the owner at a bar and the owner there authorized him to drive two girls to his home in one of his trucks and from there to take the girls to their destination. Although the driver had ignored instructions to await service calls and had gone on a joy ride with one of the girls, implied permission was found in view of the employer's previous practice in acquiescing in the use of his vehicles for the pleasure and convenience of others. Leahy v Kaszubski, 123 N.Y.S.2d 246, 1953 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1951 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1953), aff'd, 283 A.D. 947, 130 N.Y.S.2d 221, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5892 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

33. Evidence negating permission

Defendant's automobile was not being used with his permission where it appeared that the driver at the time of the accident was only hired to wash the vehicle and was not given permission to use it and was using it on personal business at time of accident, and never had driven the vehicle outside the garage before. Darlow v Drake Bakeries, Inc., 2 N.Y.2d 983, 163 N.Y.S.2d 598, 143 N.E.2d 338, 1957 N.Y. LEXIS 1095 (N.Y. 1957).

Plaintiff was injured when she was struck by car owned by defendant and operated by defendant's brother, codefendant–defendant's motion for summary judgment dismissing complaint and third-party complaint against her was properly granted; Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 (1), which imputes to owner of motor vehicle liability for negligence of person who uses or operates vehicle with owner's permission, express or implied, creates rebuttable presumption; evidence submitted by defendant in support of her motion established she left her car with another brother to be repaired; he then repaired car and parked it in driveway of his residence; at his examination before trial codefendant testified that he was living with other brother during relevant time period and that on three separate occasions during that period, including day of accident, he took keys to defendant's car and drove car without knowledge or permission of other brother or defendant; codefendant further testified that following accident, he pleaded guilty to unauthorized use of motor vehicle; codefendant's testimony was corroborated by that of other brother and defendant who stated they did not give codefendant permission to drive defendant's car and that they were unaware he had been driving car; this evidence is sufficient to rebut statutory presumption of consent as matter of law–further, Supreme Court's denial of plaintiff's motion to renew was proper; plaintiff's motion was based upon assertion that stolen vehicle report belatedly filed by other brother casts some doubt on defendant's credibility; plaintiff had knowledge of existence of report in advance of return date of defendant's motion, and affidavit of plaintiff's counsel does not provide justifiable excuse for failure to obtain copy of report earlier. Polsinelli v Rotterdam, 167 A.D.2d 579, 562 N.Y.S.2d 844, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13022 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1990).

Defendant, whose automobile was involved in accident, was entitled to summary judgment dismissing action for injuries as result thereof where (1) driver of defendant's vehicle admitted at examination before trial that he had taken vehicle without defendant's permission, (2) driver's testimony was corroborated by defendant's affidavit and by testimony at examination before trial of defendant's son, who was passenger at time of accident, and (3) parties opposing defendant's motion failed to submit any evidence sufficient to raise triable issue regarding owner's consent; under circumstances, presumption of consent under CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1) was rebutted as matter of law. Bruno v Privilegi, 148 A.D.2d 652, 539 N.Y.S.2d 403, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4184 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Defendants, owners of car involved in one-car accident, were properly granted summary judgment where their granddaughter, who was driving car at time of accident, testified that she was not given permission to drive car (she pleaded guilty to its theft), defendant, in his deposition and affidavit, attested that he never allowed granddaughter, who did not have license, to operate any of his cars, plaintiff, as evidenced in her deposition testimony, knew car was stolen, but continued riding in it, both as driver and passenger, and granddaughter further testified that although she found ignition keys in car, they were located in console covered by loose papers. Manning by Manning v Brown, 232 A.D.2d 849, 649 N.Y.S.2d 202, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10536 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996), aff'd, 91 N.Y.2d 116, 667 N.Y.S.2d 336, 689 N.E.2d 1382, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3681 (N.Y. 1997).

Car owner was entitled to summary judgment in action for injury to passengers in one-car accident where her affidavit, and driver's admission to police, established that driver and passengers had taken car without her permission while she slept. Bost v Thomas, 275 A.D.2d 513, 712 N.Y.S.2d 218, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8419 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Defendant whose car was involved in motor vehicle collision was entitled to summary judgment on issue of whether he was vicariously liable for negligence of driver, where he submitted affidavit and documentary evidence showing that his car was stolen at time of accident, and there was no evidence to support opposing parties' claim that he had violated CLS Veh & Tr § 1210(a). Adamson v Evans, 283 A.D.2d 527, 724 N.Y.S.2d 760, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6254 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2001).

Pursuant to N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1), a trial court erred in denying a vehicle owner's summary judgment dismissal (SJD) motion of a personal injury action against her by a motorist who was involved in a vehicle collision with the owner's vehicle, and in granting SJD to the motorist of the owner's nonpermissive use defense, as the owner provided substantial evidence to rebut the presumption of permissive use by the driver of her vehicle at the time of a collision under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1); as a prior proceeding had imposed a stay of arbitration with respect to the motorist's uninsured claim upon finding that the owner's insurer's disclaimer of nonpermissive use was not timely filed, such did not bar the owner's use of that defense under collateral estoppel principles in the personal injury action, as the defense in the prior action was not reviewed on the merits. McDonald v Rose, 37 A.D.3d 781, 830 N.Y.S.2d 765, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2327 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2007).

Automobile owner who left auto at service station for repairs could not be charged with implied assent to automobile's be driven by one who was not a licensed driver and the driver's negligence would not be imputed to him. Malone v Liss, Inc. Service Station, 5 Misc. 2d 1002, 162 N.Y.S.2d 637, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3344 (N.Y. City Ct. 1957).

Where automobile was parked on private property in garage attached to owner's house at time it was stolen and owner saw car being stolen and reported such fact to police prior to occurrence of accident in which plaintiff was injured, owner was not liable for such injuries despite fact that keys were in ignition of car. Johnson v Mahyna, 74 Misc. 2d 1, 343 N.Y.S.2d 815, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2101 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1973).

Sworn police statements rebutted the presumption under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1) that the driver was driving with the owner's consent and established a lack of permission for the driver to operate the vehicle where the sworn police statements from most of the attendees of a party indicated that the driver of the car asked the car owner's son for his car keys to prevent him from driving after having consumed alcohol, the keys were put away so the son would not find them, the driver had never been permitted to drive the vehicle before, the vehicle was locked, the son did not then nor ever tell nor imply to the driver that he could drive the vehicle, and the next morning the son was not aware that his car was gone, was not sure who had taken it, and was upset that someone had taken it. N.Y. Cent. Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 307 A.D.2d 449, 761 N.Y.S.2d 730, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7694 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

34. Presumption of permission

It is axiomatic that proof of ownership of a motor vehicle creates a rebuttable presumption that the driver was using the vehicle with the owner's permission, express or implied, which presumption continues until there is substantial evidence to the contrary, and, if there is some such evidence, the question of consent and authority is for the jury. Leotta v Plessinger, 8 N.Y.2d 449, 209 N.Y.S.2d 304, 171 N.E.2d 454, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 837 (N.Y. 1960), reh'g denied, 9 N.Y.2d 688, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1809 (N.Y. 1961).

Although this section requires permission of the owner to operate his car in order to create liability, if the ownership is established, there is a presumption that the operator was using the car with the permission of the owner and this presumption continues until there is substantial evidence to the contrary. Hukey v Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co., 277 A.D. 411, 100 N.Y.S.2d 643, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3073 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

Proof of the ownership of a motor vehicle creates a rebuttable presumption that the driver was using the vehicle with the owner's permission, express or implied, and this presumption continues until there is substantial evidence to the contrary. If the owner restricts the use of the vehicle when in the hands of another, and the restriction is violated, the vehicle is driven without the owner's permission; and where the owner of a car had requested the driver to take her automobile to pick up a pizza and to "bring it right back", the driver's conduct in going for a ride while waiting for the pizza to be prepared was not such a deviation from the permission granted that would relieve the owner from responsibility of the driver's negligent conduct. De Lancey v Nationwide Ins. Co., 26 A.D.2d 631, 272 N.Y.S.2d 468, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3661 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1966), aff'd, 20 N.Y.2d 807, 284 N.Y.S.2d 701, 231 N.E.2d 288, 1967 N.Y. LEXIS 1179 (N.Y. 1967).

In action against automobile dealership for injuries sustained when automobile loaned by its repair shop to customer allegedly sped forward when driver, who was customer's friend, pulled gear shift lever without depressing accelerator pedal, court erred in determining that factual issue existed as to whether driver was permissive user of automobile since no evidence was presented to rebut presumption of permissive use created by CLS Veh & Tr § 388. Fili v Matson Motors, Inc., 183 A.D.2d 324, 590 N.Y.S.2d 961, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14057 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1992).

Defendant was not entitled to summary judgment, since presumption that driver operated motor vehicle with defendant's implied permission was not rebutted as matter of law, where driver had previously been allowed to use vehicle on several occasions. Stewart v Town of Hempstead, 204 A.D.2d 431, 611 N.Y.S.2d 909, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5100 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994).

Insurer was required to provide notice of disclaimer of coverage to injured passenger under motor vehicle policy issued to owner of vehicle in which she was riding, despite insurer's contention that driver of vehicle was nonpermissive user and policy did not provide coverage for nonpermissive users, where nonpermissive use was not specifically denominated as exclusion under policy but appeared as definition of coverage; strong statutory presumption of permissive use would be deemed in force at time of accident so that subsequent finding of nonpermissive use negating coverage would require notice of disclaimer. Greater N.Y. Mut. Ins. Co. v Clark, 205 A.D.2d 857, 613 N.Y.S.2d 295, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6073 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 84 N.Y.2d 807, 621 N.Y.S.2d 516, 645 N.E.2d 1216, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 3475 (N.Y. 1994).

Defendant owner of vehicle involved in traffic accident was not entitled to summary judgment where it failed to rebut strong presumption, created by CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1), that driver of motor vehicle that caused plaintiffs' injuries was operating vehicle with owner's permission or consent. Mills v Marquez, 251 A.D.2d 304, 673 N.Y.S.2d 1019, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6327 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

Presumption that vehicle was being operated with consent of owner (CLS Veh & Tr § 388) was not sufficiently overcome to warrant summary judgment for defendant in vehicular accident case where affidavits of defendant and his daughter failed to allege that purported theft of vehicle was reported to police, defendant did not disclose his whereabouts at time of accident, and defendant did not address question of whether he fit plaintiff's description of other driver. Minaya v Horner, 279 A.D.2d 333, 718 N.Y.S.2d 839, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 421 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2001).

Credit company and the lessor of a vehicle were entitled to summary judgment as to a personal injury action, because the company and the lessor established that the driver of a vehicle was not a permissive user of the leased car at the time of the accident for purposes of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1), and plaintiff failed to submit competent evidence suggesting implausibility, collusion, or implied permission so as to require the issue of consent to be submitted to a jury, and thus the negligence of the driver could not be imputed to the company or the lessor. Nelson v Ford Motor Credit Co., 41 A.D.3d 444, 838 N.Y.S.2d 130, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6987 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2007).

In a personal injury action after a pedestrian was allegedly struck by a vehicle, the N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388 presumption of permissive use was not sufficiently rebutted at a hearing; therefore, a finding that no permission, express or implied, was given by the vehicle's owner to the driver did not establish their prima facie entitlement to judgment as a matter of law. Asfia Talat v Thompson, 47 A.D.3d 705, 850 N.Y.S.2d 486, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 254 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2008).

The presumption that the operator of an automobile was using the car with the owner's permission was overcome when the evidence showed that permission was given only for use in a particular territory and the borrower used the car outside that territory. Lozada v Copeland, 138 N.Y.S.2d 521, 207 Misc. 382, 1955 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2637 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1955).

Special referee did not err in granting petitioner first insurer's application to stay an uninsured motorist arbitration demanded by respondent insured arising out of an accident involving a vehicle owned by respondent owner and insured by respondent, the owner's insurer, as a fair interpretation of the evidence supported the special referee's finding that the owner failed to rebut the strong presumption of permissive use of the offending vehicle under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1), where the owner admitted that the owner left the owner's car parked behind the owner's shop and left the keys to the car with an employee. Travelers Prop. Cas. Corp. v Maxwill-Singleton, 300 A.D.2d 225, 751 N.Y.S.2d 367, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13381 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2002).

N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1) creates a presumption that the driver was using the vehicle with the owner's express or implied permission, which only may be rebutted by substantial evidence sufficient to show that the vehicle was not operated with the owner's consent; a finding that the insurer failed to prove that the vehicle at issue was stolen at the time of the accident was proper where, while the affidavit of the insured indicated that the insured did not give anyone permission to operate his vehicle at the time of the accident, it failed to address whether any person had implied consent to do so, and thus did not establish that the vehicle was stolen at the time of the accident. Matter of New York Cent. Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v Dukes, 14 A.D.3d 704, 789 N.Y.S.2d 267, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 853 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2005).

In opposition to the owner's motion to dismiss personal injury actions on the ground of nonpermissive use, plaintiffs submitted uncontroverted proof in the form of summonses the police issued to the driver establishing that he operated the owner's vehicle on at least three occasions during the applicable time frame. The owner and his wife submitted affidavits containing statements contradicting the assertions in their prior affidavits; upon the record, the court concluded that the owner did not rebut the presumption in N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1) that a vehicle was being operated with the owner's consent. Correa v City of New York, 18 A.D.3d 418, 794 N.Y.S.2d 408, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4826 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2005).

Because a lessor failed to rebut the presumption in N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1) that a rental vehicle involved in a traffic accident was operated with its permission, the trial court properly denied its motion for summary judgment. Bernstein v Diaz, 27 A.D.3d 602, 812 N.Y.S.2d 597, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3471 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

35. —Procedure

Once ownership of the automobile is shown, there is a presumption under this section that the car was being driven with the permission of the owner. Proof of ownership of a motor vehicle creates a rebuttable presumption that the driver was using it with the owner's permission. Lincoln v Austic, 60 A.D.2d 487, 401 N.Y.S.2d 1020, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9691 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 44 N.Y.2d 644, 405 N.Y.S.2d 1028, 1978 N.Y. LEXIS 4321 (N.Y. 1978).

There is a rebuttable presumption that the driver of a motor vehicle was operating the vehicle with the permission of the owner. Carey v AAA Con Transport, Inc., 61 A.D.2d 113, 401 N.Y.S.2d 1015, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9710 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1978).

CLS Veh & Tr § 388 gives rise to presumption that vehicle is being operated with owner's consent, and such strong presumption continues until there is substantial evidence to contrary. Walls v Zuvic, 113 A.D.2d 936, 493 N.Y.S.2d 628, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52557 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1985), app. denied, 67 N.Y.2d 602, 499 N.Y.S.2d 1028, 490 N.E.2d 557, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 16716 (N.Y. 1986).

Service of process on Secretary of State under CLS Veh & Tr § 253, which authorizes such service on nonresident owner of vehicle where vehicle was used with owner's permission, was proper in light of strong presumption under CLS Veh & Tr § 388 that vehicle driven by individual defendant was operated with consent of owner, where that presumption was not overcome by substantial evidence. Asaro v McGuire Auto Rental Leasing, 238 A.D.2d 366, 657 N.Y.S.2d 334, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3841 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

Insurance company was obliged to defend under the policy because the incident involved use of the flatbed truck as a covered automobile by a named insured and as pleaded in the complaint and elaborated upon during discovery, those facts suggested a reasonable possibility of coverage. Farm Family Cas. Ins. Co. v Henderson, 179 A.D.3d 1193, 116 N.Y.S.3d 771, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 29 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 35 N.Y.3d 915, 157 N.E.3d 134, 2020 N.Y. LEXIS 2353 (N.Y. 2020).

The language of this statute makes it clear that permission of the owner to operate his car is essential in order to create liability on his part, and that he is not liable for injuries sustained by negligence in its unauthorized operation, but it likewise gives rise to a presumption that one who is operating a motor vehicle is doing so in the service of the owner and with his permission. Mireider v New Hampshire Fire Ins. Co., 24 Misc. 2d 765, 204 N.Y.S.2d 504, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2561 (N.Y. City Ct. 1960).

It has been held the language of § 388 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law gives rise to a presumption that one who is operating a motor vehicle is doing so with the owner's permission, and that proof of the ownership of a motor vehicle creates a rebuttable presumption that the driver is using the vehicle with the owner's permission. Teska v Atlantic Nat'l Ins. Co., 59 Misc. 2d 615, 300 N.Y.S.2d 375, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1649 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1969).

The statutory provision creates a strong, although rebuttable, presumption that a vehicle is being driven with permission of the owner. Febbraro v Hertz Corp., 64 Misc. 2d 794, 315 N.Y.S.2d 702, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1182 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1970).

Under provision of Vehicle and Traffic Law that every owner of a vehicle used or operated in state shall be liable and responsible for death or injuries to person or property resulting from negligence in use or operation of such vehicle, proof of ownership of vehicle creates a rebuttable presumption that driver was using vehicle with owner's permission, express or implied, and presumption continues until there is substantial evidence to contrary. Banner Casualty Co. v Lazar, 81 Misc. 2d 360, 366 N.Y.S.2d 314, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2389 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1975).

Identity of driver of offending vehicle is not element of injured plaintiff's prima facie case under CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1). Horvath v Lindenhurst Auto Salvage, 104 F.3d 540, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 520 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1997).

36. —Particular facts raising presumption

Where owner double-parked his automobile on busy thoroughfare in shopping district, left key in ignition switch and went into a nearby store leaving his 14 year old boy sitting in rear seat and boy at order of policeman attempted to drive automobile to curb but ran onto sidewalk and struck pedestrians, in personal injury actions, trial judge properly determined that statutory presumption of implied permission had not been overcome by uncontradicted testimony of owner, his wife and infant driver that no permission to drive automobile had been given. Winnowski v Polito, 294 N.Y. 159, 61 N.E.2d 425, 294 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 159, 1945 N.Y. LEXIS 814 (N.Y. 1945).

Proof by plaintiff of defendant corporation's ownership of a truck at the time of an accident created a presumption under this section that the person operating the truck was engaged in the service of the corporation or was using it with its permission. Christie v B. F. Vineburg, Inc., 259 A.D. 342, 19 N.Y.S.2d 252, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6144 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

In an action for damages arising out of a collision with a farm tractor driven by a part-time employee of its owner, the motion of defendant, owner of the tractor, for summary judgment, could not be granted because of the rebuttable presumption set up by this section, notwithstanding his claim that he gave the driver of it permission to use it only for a limited purpose and time. Cosimo v Hollenbeck, 19 A.D.2d 921, 244 N.Y.S.2d 9, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2971 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

Evidence was sufficient to permit jury to find that employee was acting within scope of his employment or had implied authority to use employer's truck to assist coemployee in emergency situation, during the weekend, involving malfunctioning oil burner in coemployee's house, and thus presumption that employee was engaged in employer's service or was using truck with employer's implied permission was not conclusively rebutted and made case for jury. Basile v Huntington Utilities Fuel Corp., 47 A.D.2d 625, 363 N.Y.S.2d 642, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8788 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. dismissed, 36 N.Y.2d 914, 372 N.Y.S.2d 652, 334 N.E.2d 600, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 2001 (N.Y. 1975).

Statutory presumption that automobile owned by insured mother was operated by son with mother's implied permission at time of automobile collision was not rebutted, even though there was evidence suggesting that son's permission had been limited, where automobile was purchased for son's use, son was given keys and possession of automobile, and son was told on day before accident that all insurance forms had been completed. Phoenix v Bolton, 59 A.D.2d 464, 399 N.Y.S.2d 914, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13949 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977), app. denied, 44 N.Y.2d 641, 1978 N.Y. LEXIS 4238 (N.Y. 1978).

Appellant failed to sufficiently rebut the strong presumption pursuant to this section that his son was operating his vehicle with his permission as: (1) the son had access to appellant's residence; (2) the key to the vehicle was kept in a central location inside a bin located in the kitchen of appellant's residence; and (3) on previous occasions, the son had been permitted by appellant to drive other vehicles owned by appellant. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v Sajewski, 150 A.D.3d 1297, 56 N.Y.S.3d 204, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4239 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2017).

In action brought by motorist seeking recovery for hit-and-run accident allegedly caused by motor vehicle owned by defendant, defendant, which was shown by fair preponderance of the evidence to be owner of vehicle, and which offered no proof that driver of automobile was not an employee or that if he was an employee he had no permission to drive vehicle on day of accident, failed to rebut presumption of permissive use, and was liable to plaintiff. Mihelis v Trend Service Corp., 89 Misc. 2d 220, 391 N.Y.S.2d 63, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1861 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1977).

A concession of ownership, by an employer, of an automobile being driven by his employee at the time of an accident, creates a presumption that the employee was engaged in the employer's service or was using the car with the employer's permission, which presumption continues until there is substantial evidence to the contrary. Healy v Moss, 104 N.Y.S.2d 694, 1951 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1802 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1951), aff'd, 279 A.D. 926, 111 N.Y.S.2d 762, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5332 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

Trial court properly denied an owner's motion for summary judgment because the owner's testimony that his car was operated without his permission, by itself, did not overcome the presumption of permissive use in N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1), and the owner failed to show that the other driver's failure to yield the right-of-way was the sole proximate cause of the accident. Vinueza v Tarar, 100 A.D.3d 742, 954 N.Y.S.2d 160, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7627 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2012).

37. —Presumption rebuttable

Under this section the owner of a motor vehicle is presumptively responsible for the manner in which it is driven even though it appears that it was not being used in his service or for his business. The presumption of such responsibility disappears, however, where it is shown that no permission was given. St. Andrassy v Mooney, 262 N.Y. 368, 186 N.E. 867, 262 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 368, 1933 N.Y. LEXIS 957 (N.Y. 1933).

Presumption that the driver was using the vehicle with the defendant's permission was not rebutted as a matter of law by the testimony of the defendant owner that he had given the car to the mechanic for repair work to correct a difficulty in starting the engine and that he had not given the mechanic permission to drive the car, and this issue should have been submitted to the jury. Reyes v Sternberg, 27 A.D.2d 828, 278 N.Y.S.2d 167, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4577 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1967).

Testimony by owner's representative that he did not give driver permission to use automobile at time of accident did not as matter of law rebut presumption of permissive use. Ryder v Cue Car Rental, Inc., 32 A.D.2d 143, 302 N.Y.S.2d 17, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3978 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1969).

Proof of ownership creates a presumption that the vehicle was used with the consent of the owner, but such presumption is rebuttable. Kenneth v Gardner, 36 A.D.2d 575, 317 N.Y.S.2d 798, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4961 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1971).

Proof of ownership of automobile creates a rebuttable presumption of its use with permission of owner, express or implied. Peemoller v Viscarra, 36 A.D.2d 971, 321 N.Y.S.2d 809, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4072 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1971).

In action for injuries sustained when rental van owned by defendant struck pedestrian, presumption of permissive use was not rebutted where (1) van was rented by codefendant on behalf of his employer, (2) codefendant and fellow employee were using van at time of accident after becoming intoxicated at bar, (3) shortly after accident, principal of employer reported van as stolen, (4) principal testified that he probably locked keys to van in cash register, but did not recall if keys were in register at time he reported van to be stolen, and (5) it was unclear whether codefendant or fellow employee was driving van at time of accident and whether ignition had been hot-wired. McCollum v U-Haul Int'l Corp., 204 A.D.2d 56, 611 N.Y.S.2d 522, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4605 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. dismissed, 84 N.Y.2d 850, 617 N.Y.S.2d 139, 641 N.E.2d 160, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 2680 (N.Y. 1994).

Testimony of lessor of rented vehicle, that her 19-year-old daughter had stolen vehicle and was driving it without permission when it hit pedestrian, failed to rebut presumption that vehicle was being operated with lessor's consent, and thus defendant rental company and vehicle lessor were not entitled to summary judgment on ground that neither of them could be held liable to pedestrian under CLS Veh & Tr § 388 as matter of law. Roness v Hertz Corp. (Canada), 283 A.D.2d 416, 724 N.Y.S.2d 195, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4687 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2001).

Because an employee failed to sufficiently rebut the strong presumption in N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388 that a child was operating the employee's work vehicle with the permission, neither the employee nor the employer was entitled to judgment as a matter of law in an insurer's action to recover insurance benefits allegedly paid to it insureds. Amex Assur. Co. v Kulka, 67 A.D.3d 614, 888 N.Y.S.2d 577, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7824 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2009).

The ownership of an automobile by a corporate defendant created a presumption under this section that it was being used at the time of the accident with defendant's permission, and it was for the jury to decide whether to credit salesman's testimony which, if believed, would destroy the presumption and exonerate the corporate defendant from liability. Aarons v Standard Varnish Works, 296 N.Y.S. 312, 163 Misc. 84, 1937 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1282

(N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1937), aff'd, 254 A.D. 560, 3 N.Y.S.2d 910, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6559 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938).

Under provision of Vehicle and Traffic Law that every owner of a vehicle used or operated in state shall be liable and responsible for death or injuries to person or property resulting from negligence in use or operation of such vehicle, proof of ownership of vehicle creates a rebuttable presumption that driver was using vehicle with owner's permission, express or implied, and presumption continues until there is substantial evidence to contrary. Banner Casualty Co. v Lazar, 81 Misc. 2d 360, 366 N.Y.S.2d 314, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2389 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1975).

Because a repairman, an employee, and the passengers used the owner's vehicle, without the owner's express or implied permission, to drive to a dealership to pick up a part for the passengers' vehicle, despite the presumption of consent in N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1), the owner established a prima facie entitlement to summary judgment. Padilla v Felson, 28 A.D.3d 530, 813 N.Y.S.2d 744, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4371 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

38. — —Substantial or undisputed evidence

Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 creates a presumption that the driver was using the vehicle with the owner's permission, express or implied; although the presumption is rebuttable, it is a continuing presumption and can be rolled back only by substantial evidence to the contrary. Rivera v W. & R. Service Station, Inc., 34 A.D.2d 115, 309 N.Y.S.2d 274, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5146 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1970).

Statutory presumption that truck was operated with its owner's knowledge and consent at time of automobile-truck collision was rebutted by evidence presented, in automobile passengers' personal injury action, by truck owner showing that truck had been rented to individual for one-day use, that lessee failed to return vehicle, that owner's attempts to secure return of truck were unsuccessful, that truck owner filed complaint with police listing truck as missing and that accident occurred five days after filing of complaint. Speller v Ryder Truck Rental, Inc., 47 A.D.2d 608, 363 N.Y.S.2d 823, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8744 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1975).

Strong presumption of owner's consent arises from use or operation of motor vehicle, and that presumption continues until there is substantial evidence to contrary; no factual issue existed with respect to whether vehicle was being operated with consent of owner where person operating vehicle was convicted and sentenced for crime of grand larceny in connection with taking of car. Gee v Gee, 113 A.D.2d 736, 493 N.Y.S.2d 202, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52433 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1985).

Vehicle owner rebutted presumption of permissive use under CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1) by showing that vehicle in question was rented under false pretenses by woman who failed to return vehicle on expiration of term of rental agreement. Molina v NYRAC, Inc., 228 A.D.2d 655, 645 N.Y.S.2d 819, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7435 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

Defendant rebutted presumption that his daughter's boyfriend had been driving defendant's vehicle with his consent where uncontroverted evidence established that defendant had explicitly told boyfriend that he was not permitted to drive defendant's vehicle and that defendant's daughter let boyfriend drive car after she arrived at his home on date of accident. Jimenez v Regan, 248 A.D.2d 510, 669 N.Y.S.2d 968, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2574 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

Trial court properly denied a driver's motions for a declaratory judgment and to dismiss a vehicle owner's affirmative defenses and cross-claims because the evidence submitted by the owner, and, in particular, its submission of an extract of the driver's license record provided substantial evidence to rebut the presumption that he was a permissive user of the vehicle that was loaned to his wife at the time of his accident. Staropoli v Agrelopo, LLC, 136 A.D.3d 791, 24 N.Y.S.3d 722, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 974 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2016).

Trial court properly determined that an injured driver and passenger demonstrated that they had a valid uninsured motorist claim against the vehicle's insurer, denied the insurer's petition to permanently stay arbitration, and dismissed the proceeding because the record established that the statutory presumption of permissive use was overcome by substantial evidence where the owner of the car that hit the insured vehicle had given her vehicle and keys to a repair person, whose garage was in Pennsylvania, for the limited purpose of repairing the vehicle, and she had not given permission to anyone else to use her vehicle. Matter of Allstate Ins. Co. v Jae Kan Shim, 185 A.D.3d 919, 128 N.Y.S.3d 49, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4250 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2020).

An owner's consent to allow another to operate his automobile is a presumption often derived from the mere ownership, but the presumption is rebuttable, and it disappears where upon all the evidence it appears that no permission was given. Houlihan v Selengut, 25 N.Y.S.2d 371, 175 Misc. 854, 1941 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1455 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), rev'd, 263 A.D. 811, 31 N.Y.S.2d 560, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5092 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

Evidence that city's truck was being operated by one not authorized to drive it at time of accident nullified statutory presumption that it was being operated with city's permission, so as to preclude recovery of resulting damages from city, in absence of proof that such unauthorized assumption of control over truck resulted from negligent conduct of city's employees. Nickens v New York, 71 N.Y.S.2d 877, 1947 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2666 (N.Y. App. Term 1947).

Even if an employee had consented to her boyfriend's use of a company van, an employee handbook explicitly restricted its use and rebutted the presumption of the lessee's liability; however, whether the lessors constructively consented to the boyfriend's use of the van depended not on the employee handbook restrictions, but on the boyfriend's status as either a thief or a permissive user. Murdza v Zimmerman, 99 N.Y.2d 375, 756 N.Y.S.2d 505, 786 N.E.2d 440, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 162 (N.Y. 2003).

Court certified five questions to the New York Court of Appeals regarding the operation and effect of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1); certification of the questions was appropriate because it was not clear that the Second Circuits prior holding, that a case should go to the trier of fact even if a vehicle owner presented evidence to rebut the presumption of permissive use created under the statute, was still good law. More recent decisions by the New York courts had indicated that summary judgment or dismissal as a matter of law could be entered, despite § 388(1), if the owner of a vehicle presented uncontradicted evidence that a driver did not have permission to use its vehicle, and there was no competent evidence from which permission or authority could be inferred, Country Wide Ins. Co. v Amtrak, 407 F.3d 84, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 7337 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2005).

Rental car company came forward with substantial and undisputed evidence rebutting statutory presumption of consensual use, and thus was not liable for plaintiff's injuries, where there was no evidence to discredit its showing that its service agent who was involved in accident with plaintiff was driving rental car in violation of company policy restricting use of rental vehicles by employees. Buckingham v Rapid Rental, 3 F. Supp. 2d 479, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6766 (S.D.N.Y. 1998).

39. Restrictive permission

The former analogous section did not change the rule that a master is not liable for the acts of his servant unless acting within the scope of his employment. The defendant should have been permitted to prove that the chauffeur, in inviting plaintiffs to ride with him, was acting contrary to her instructions. Grant v Knepper, 245 N.Y. 158, 156 N.E. 650, 245 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 158, 1927 N.Y. LEXIS 604 (N.Y. 1927).

This section may not be construed to include a case where injuries are caused by a person who, at the time of accident, was using a motor vehicle unlawfully, without permission of owner and even contrary to his orders, merely because owner had given the person operating the vehicle permission to use it for another purpose at another place. Chaika v Vandenberg, 252 N.Y. 101, 169 N.E. 103, 252 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 101, 1929 N.Y. LEXIS 531 (N.Y. 1929).

An owner was not liable when the use was beyond the limited consent. Thompson v Morgan, 224 A.D. 691, 228 N.Y.S. 670, 1928 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10387 (N.Y. App. Div. 1928).

Proof of the ownership of a motor vehicle creates a rebuttable presumption that the driver was using the vehicle with the owner's permission, express or implied, and this presumption continues until there is substantial evidence to the contrary. If the owner restricts the use of the vehicle when in the hands of another, and the restriction is violated, the vehicle is driven without the owner's permission; and where the owner of a car had requested the driver to take her automobile to pick up a pizza and to "bring it right back", the driver's conduct in going for a ride while waiting for the pizza to be prepared was not such a deviation from the permission granted that would relieve the owner from responsibility of the driver's negligent conduct. De Lancey v Nationwide Ins. Co., 26 A.D.2d 631, 272 N.Y.S.2d 468, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3661 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1966), aff'd, 20 N.Y.2d 807, 284 N.Y.S.2d 701, 231 N.E.2d 288, 1967 N.Y. LEXIS 1179 (N.Y. 1967).

New York statutes imposing a showing of financial responsibility as a condition to registration and operation of motor vehicles expresses a strong public policy that a person injured by the negligence of a driver should have recourse to a defendant able to respond in damages; thus, renters of automobiles may not enforce restrictions on the use of the automobiles by the lessee and thereby escape liability to a third person on the ground that the violation of the restriction removed the statutory element of consent. Allstate Ins. Co. v Dailey, 47 A.D.2d 375, 367 N.Y.S.2d 87, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9249 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1975), aff'd, 39 N.Y.2d 759, 384 N.Y.S.2d 776, 349 N.E.2d 876, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 2702 (N.Y. 1976).

Statutory presumption that automobile owned by insured mother was operated by son with mother's implied permission at time of automobile collision was not rebutted, even though there was evidence suggesting that son's permission had been limited, where automobile was purchased for son's use, son was given keys and possession of automobile, and son was told on day before accident that all insurance forms had been completed. Phoenix v Bolton, 59 A.D.2d 464, 399 N.Y.S.2d 914, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13949 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977), app. denied, 44 N.Y.2d 641, 1978 N.Y. LEXIS 4238 (N.Y. 1978).

An owner who has contracted with an auto transporter which in turn contracted with a driver for the delivery of a vehicle is not unlike a lessor of the vehicle and public policy requires that any restriction in use be clearly and unequivocally established so as to limit the permission granted and avoid liability. Carey v AAA Con Transport, Inc., 61 A.D.2d 113, 401 N.Y.S.2d 1015, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9710 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1978).

In granting permission for use of automobile, owner may limit its use to specified area or purpose and any use outside scope of permission negates owner's liability under section; proof of limitation of permission for use of automobile may serve to rebut presumption of consent. Walls v Zuvic, 113 A.D.2d 936, 493 N.Y.S.2d 628, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52557 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1985), app. denied, 67 N.Y.2d 602, 499 N.Y.S.2d 1028, 490 N.E.2d 557, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 16716 (N.Y. 1986).

Owner of vehicle involved in accident while driven by codefendant was entitled to summary judgment dismissing personal injury action against owner where presumption of permission under CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1) was rebutted by substantial evidence that, at time of accident, codefendant was driving vehicle in place and for purpose that exceeded terms of owner's consent. Naidu v Harwin, 281 A.D.2d 525, 721 N.Y.S.2d 826, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2560 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2001).

The negligence of a driver of defendant's car colliding with a child's bicycle and injuring the child on the highway is imputable to the owner of the car in absence of definite proof of violation of restrictive permission given the driver to use the vehicle. Paul v Ulrich, 79 N.Y.S.2d 758, 191 Misc. 838, 1948 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2465 (N.Y. City Ct. 1948).

Where the owner's permission to use his car is for a specific purpose and a limited time only, he is not responsible for damage caused by negligence of the operator using the car for other purposes or after the time has expired. O'Toole v United States, 284 F.2d 792, 1960 U.S. App. LEXIS 3145 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1960), cert. denied, 366 U.S. 927, 81 S. Ct. 1648, 6 L. Ed. 2d 387, 1961 U.S. LEXIS 1121 (U.S. 1961).

40. —Area or route restriction

In wrongful death action, judgment in favor of plaintiff in amount of $1,750,000 reversed and new trial granted on issue of damages, unless plaintiff stipulates to reduce verdict to principal sum of $500,000–record supports jury finding of liability of defendant under Vehicle and Traffic Law § 128; court's charge on this issue and other theory of liability, viz., failure of defendant to inspect and maintain trailer in question, was neither so confusing nor erroneous that new trial as to liability is warranted; defendant failed to object at any time to submission of jury sheet, and hence any complaints concerning it are unpreserved for appellate review–codefendant is not entitled to contribution from third-party defendants; intent of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 was to benefit injured parties by broadening base of liability in order to provide greater likelihood of recovery; it was not intended to be used as codefendant, which is not injured party, seeks to use it here; additionally, jury found that third-party defendants had not been negligent, depriving codefendant of that basis for contribution–verdict was excessive. Rodriguez v Yosi Trucking, 151 A.D.2d 556, 542 N.Y.S.2d 335, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7895 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Plaintiff was injured while dismantling light standard attached to concrete base; it was necessary to remove base before it could be prepared for loading on third-party defendant's truck; as base was being removed from standard on private property, standard fell, injuring plaintiff; defendant who assisted in removal of base, served third-party complaint upon third- party defendant, who owned truck plaintiff drove to premises and in which standard was to be transported; third-party defendant moved for summary judgment dismissing third-party complaint; defendant argues third-party defendant, as owner of truck, was responsible under Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 (1) for any negligence in removal of concrete base from standard because such removal constituted use and operation of vehicle, which occurred during "complete operation" of loading–"complete operation" doctrine does not extend to acts in preparation for loading, such as crating goods for shipment, or, as here, dismantling goods before transporting them to vehicle. Frontuto v Ray Burgun Trucking Co., 168 A.D.2d 914, 564 N.Y.S.2d 882, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16439 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1990), aff'd, 78 N.Y.2d 938, 573 N.Y.S.2d 634, 578 N.E.2d 432, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 1006 (N.Y. 1991).

A bill of lading agreement which, upon its face, simply represents that the owner of a motor vehicle is engaging a transporter to convey her car from New Jersey to Florida, that the actual conveyance will be done by a "driver" of the automobile who is to be an "independent contractor" and that the vehicle will be in the possession of the transporter and/or driver for a certain specified period, does not as a matter of law establish that permission to use the vehicle was restricted to transportation by the most direct route from New Jersey to Florida. Carey v AAA Con Transport, Inc., 61 A.D.2d 113, 401 N.Y.S.2d 1015, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9710 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1978).

A restriction as to damages contained in an agreement between an auto transporter and a driver who agreed to drive the owner's car from New Jersey to Florida, pursuant to which agreement the driver guaranteed "that in the event that I detour from the most direct route or delay in the delivery of this vehicle from the agreed due date on the bill of lading that I will be liable for damages", is insufficient to find that the owner had limited permission solely to travel to Florida from New Jersey. Carey v AAA Con Transport, Inc., 61 A.D.2d 113, 401 N.Y.S.2d 1015, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9710 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1978).

Enforcement of clause in car rental agreement, purporting to prohibit use of rental car in New York, was precluded on public policy grounds as "unreasonable and unrealistic" in that defendant lessor knew or should have known of great likelihood that car rented in Massachusetts would be driven to neighboring New York; thus, lessor of car was not entitled to summary judgment absolving it of responsibility under CLS Veh & Tr § 388. Brown v Agency Rent-A-Car, 234 A.D.2d 82, 650 N.Y.S.2d 220, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12395 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

The presumption that the operator of an automobile was using the car with the owner's permission was overcome when the evidence showed that permission was given only for use in a particular territory and the borrower used the car outside that territory. Lozada v Copeland, 138 N.Y.S.2d 521, 207 Misc. 382, 1955 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2637 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1955).

While an owner may restrict the use of his automobile to a particular locality and so escape liability for its unlawful use outside the permitted area, he may not restrict the manner of its operation and so escape liability if the driving mandate is violated to the injury of another. Goschar v Bauer, 13 N.Y.S.2d 328, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2026 (N.Y. City Ct. 1939).

41. —Use restriction

An owner in loaning his automobile may reasonably restrict the uses to which it may be put; consequently, its employment for a proscribed purpose cannot be a permitted use. On the other hand, if limiting instructions relate to the manner of operation, such as speeding or careless pilotage of car, though instructions be disobeyed, nevertheless use is with "permission" of the owner. Arcara v Moresse, 258 N.Y. 211, 179 N.E. 389, 258 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 211, 1932 N.Y. LEXIS 1173 (N.Y. 1932).

The owner of an automobile may restrict its use by another to a specified purpose, in which case, any other use of the vehicle must be deemed to be without the owner's consent. Harper v Parker, 12 A.D.2d 327, 211 N.Y.S.2d 325, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12393 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1961), aff'd, 11 N.Y.2d 1095, 230 N.Y.S.2d 719, 184 N.E.2d 310, 1962 N.Y. LEXIS 1052 (N.Y. 1962).

Where presumption that operator was operating tractor trailer with permission of trailer owner and tractor lessee was overcome by uncontradicted proof that operator was carrying passenger in violation of company regulations, at time of accident operator was operating tractor trailer beyond scope of permission which had been given, and therefore owner lessee was not liable for injuries to passenger resulting from operator's alleged negligence in connection with collision of tractor trailer with bridge abutment. Capalario v Murray, 52 A.D.2d 1037, 384 N.Y.S.2d 579, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12945 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1976).

A company was properly held not to be responsible for the negligence of the driver of a van owned by it, where the driver was the half brother of the company's employee to whom the van had been entrusted, the accident occurred while the driver was delivering a bed to the home of his parents, and both the employee and representatives of the company testified that the employee had been instructed that the van was not to be driven for anything but company purposes. Morris v Palmier Oil Co., 94 A.D.2d 911, 463 N.Y.S.2d 631, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18361 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1983).

Provision in rental car lease prohibiting use of rented car as a public conveyance was reasonable and realistic; the provision's breach by the lessee by using the car as a gypsy cab precluded vicarious liability of the lessor for injuries sustained when the rented car was involved in an accident. Hannibal v Kimbeni, 289 A.D.2d 446, 735 N.Y.S.2d 567, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12931 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2001).

Operator of vehicle who had been given keys by owner with explicit instructions to wash car in area of owner's business but never to operate vehicle cannot be deemed to have been operating vehicle with owner's consent for purposes of imputing negligence to owner under CLS Veh & Tra § 388(1) when he drove car in violation of owner's explicit instructions to contrary and became involved in collision with another vehicle, since proof of stringent restriction placed on driver by owner, coupled with driver's blatant disregard of such restriction, is sufficient to rebut statutory presumption of permissive use; fact that owner provided driver with access to car is insufficient to establish permissive use since owner's conduct was reasonable in view of 8-year course of dealing with driver during which time driver never violated owner's instructions. Clarke v Longo, 132 Misc. 2d 39, 503 N.Y.S.2d 219, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2633 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1986).

Where the owner's permission to use his car is for a specific purpose and a limited time only, he is not responsible for damage caused by negligence of the operator using the car for other purposes or after the time has expired. O'Toole v United States, 284 F.2d 792, 1960 U.S. App. LEXIS 3145 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1960), cert. denied, 366 U.S. 927, 81 S. Ct. 1648, 6 L. Ed. 2d 387, 1961 U.S. LEXIS 1121 (U.S. 1961).

Summary judgment for the United States was proper either under Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 or the Tort Claims Act in an action arising when a government employee driving a government car collided with plaintiffs while attending his uncle's funeral in the Bronx, after obtaining the car from a government pool for an authorized business trip to upstate New York upon certification that he would use it only on official business. Tomack v United States, 369 F.2d 350, 1966 U.S. App. LEXIS 4242 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1966).

42. —Restriction on who may drive

Where a defendant loaned his car to his nephew for the latter's personal use, instructing him not to let any person other than himself operate the vehicle, and that at time of accident the nephew was in the car but it was being driven, with his permission, by a friend who was negligent, recoveries were authorized under this section even though nephew was not guilty of negligence except as the acts and omissions of driver were his. Arcara v Moresse, 258 N.Y. 211, 179 N.E. 389, 258 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 211, 1932 N.Y. LEXIS 1173 (N.Y. 1932).

Restrictions sought to be imposed by insurer of lessor of automobile so as to exclude coverage for driver who was not a permitted user under terms of lease agreement violated public policy of the state. Motor Vehicle Accident Indemnification Corp. v Cont'l Nat'l Am. Group Co., 35 N.Y.2d 260, 360 N.Y.S.2d 859, 319 N.E.2d 182, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1294 (N.Y. 1974).

Even though automobile lease agreement provided that vehicle would be driven by lessee or an adult member of his immediate family and that lessee would not surrender use of vehicle to any other person without first obtaining lessor's consent, lessor gave constructive consent to driver who was not the permitted user under the lease agreement but who had permission of lessee to operate the vehicle, and driver was operating the vehicle with the constructive consent of lessor and with the "permission" envisioned by financial responsibility statute at time of accident and driver was insured under policy issued to lessor. Motor Vehicle Accident Indemnification Corp. v Cont'l Nat'l Am. Group Co., 35 N.Y.2d 260, 360 N.Y.S.2d 859, 319 N.E.2d 182, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1294 (N.Y. 1974).

Statute providing that owner of motor vehicle shall be liable for death resulting from negligence in operation of vehicle in business of owner or otherwise by any person legally using or operating vehicle with permission, express or implied, of owner, was not intended to render owner of vehicle responsible for injuries of owner's permittee, where permittee has automobile for his own pleasure, takes a guest into automobile without owner's knowledge, permits guest to drive, and is injured by negligent driving of guest. Billy v Zajac, 7 A.D.2d 729, 180 N.Y.S.2d 809, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4103 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1958), amended, 7 A.D.2d 929, 183 N.Y.S.2d 1008, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9859 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1959).

In action for injuries sustained in car accident, court properly dismissed complaint against car's previous owner who had authorized purchaser of car to drive with his plates and insurance prior to transfer of title, where accident occurred while purchaser's cousin was driving car and sales agreement expressly withheld consent to drive from all but purchaser, thus rebutting presumption of permissive driving under CLS Veh & Tr § 388. Rooney v Myers, 132 A.D.2d 839, 517 N.Y.S.2d 627, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49326 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 612, 523 N.Y.S.2d 496, 518 N.E.2d 7, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19030 (N.Y. 1987).

In action for injuries sustained by minor plaintiff in crash of car in which she was riding, jury's finding that defendant owner of car was liable under CLS Veh & Tr 388(1) based on having permitted driver to use vehicle was not unreasonable, since proof of ownership of vehicle created rebuttable presumption that driver was using it with owner's permission, and while defendant gave express permission to use vehicle only to his son, there was testimony that son may have in turn given driver permission to use vehicle, resulting in defendant's failure to have rebutted statutory presumption. Schrader v Carney, 180 A.D.2d 200, 586

42.5. Rented or leased vehicles; tractor-trailers

Motorcycle passenger was entitled to summary judgment as to the liability of the employer of the driver of a van the motorcycle collided with because the passenger showed (1) the employer leased the van for more than 30 days, so the employer "owned" the van, and (2) the driver operated the van in the course of the driver's employment. Jung v Glover, 169 A.D.3d 782, 93 N.Y.S.3d 390, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1116 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2019).

Intermodal chassis lessees were not vicariously liable for a tractor-trailer's driver's negligence as for more than 30 days before the accident, they did not have exclusive control of the chassis, which was rented to another company, and they were not statutory owners of the chassis. 131 A.D.3d 1198, 17 N.Y.S.3d 457, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6935.

43. Respondeat superior

In an action to recover for personal injuries alleged to have been sustained by plaintiff through his being struck by a motor car, a finding by the jury that defendant permitted use of the vehicle in its business does not warrant a direction of judgment against it, where the jury also found that it did not own the vehicle and that the driver was not in its employ. Liability may not be predicated merely upon use of the car in such defendant's business by the servant of another. There must be established some relationship of respondeat superior. Brown v S.S. Terminal Operating Corp., 267 N.Y. 83, 195 N.E. 692, 267 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 83, 1935 N.Y. LEXIS 1190 (N.Y. 1935).

The liability of the owner of a motor vehicle under this section is derivative and akin to that imposed on a master for negligent acts of his servant under the doctrine of respondeat superior. Liability on the part of an owner can arise only if the operator of the automobile is negligent. Good Health Dairy Products Corp. v Emery, 275 N.Y. 14, 9 N.E.2d 758, 275 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 14, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1393 (N.Y. 1937).

Under applicable common law, owner would not be held liable for his wife's negligent operation of vehicle during pleasure trip, in absence of proof that she was his agent, acting within the scope of her employment, or of a master and servant relationship. Selles v Smith, 5 A.D.2d 677, 168 N.Y.S.2d 363, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3796 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1957), rev'd, 4 N.Y.2d 412, 176 N.Y.S.2d 267, 151 N.E.2d 838, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 851 (N.Y. 1958).

The driver and owner of an automobile were held liable for injuries to plaintiffs in an accident, where the owner impliedly if not expressly had authorized an intermediary to deliver the automobile to the driver as an independent contractor for repair work on the car and the driver then negligently caused the accident; the intermediary was absolved of liability where he had no ownership interest in the car and the driver was in no way the intermediary's employee under its control at the time of the accident. Wilson v Williams, 37 A.D.2d 781, 325 N.Y.S.2d 349, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3413 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1971), aff'd, 30 N.Y.2d 848, 335 N.Y.S.2d 90, 286 N.E.2d 472, 1972 N.Y. LEXIS 1251 (N.Y. 1972).

In wrongful death and personal injury actions arising out of a head-on collision which occurred in the early hours of the morning, when a car being operated by a salesman, and owned by his wife, entered the westbound side of a highway, traveled easterly on that side, and struck a westbound car, the trial court erred when it submitted to the jury the issue of whether the salesman's employers were liable to the plaintiffs on the theory of respondeat superior, since the evidence established that, at the time of the accident, the task of the salesman was purely personal in nature, and, therefore, the risk itself personal, and not a scintilla of evidence was adduced which would indicate that he was then acting on behalf of his employers. Nero v Ris Paper Co., 60 A.D.2d 340, 400 N.Y.S.2d 825, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9679 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1978), aff'd, 46 N.Y.2d 967, 415 N.Y.S.2d 828, 389 N.E.2d 141, 1979 N.Y. LEXIS 1886 (N.Y. 1979).

Defendant, alleged to be employer of driver of truck which struck and killed plaintiff's decedent, was entitled to summary judgment despite driver's cross-claim against defendant, and plaintiff's uncontested allegation that defendant's advertising was placed on side of truck, where driver testified at deposition that he had been self-employed as sole proprietor for 19 years, and that he received neither payment nor salary from defendant, but rather purchased defendant's products from independent distributor who delivered product to driver's warehouse, and defendant's affidavit stated that driver had never been employee and had no contract with it. Conroy v Bevilacqua, 179 A.D.2d 596, 579 N.Y.S.2d 655, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 854 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1992).

Liability insurers of partnership could not be held liable for judgment arising from rental car accident in which driver of car was son of partner, although partner had used partnership credit card to rent car, since son's use of car was not for carrying on of business pursuant to CLS Partn law § 20, and policies covered only partnership's use of vehicle and liabilities imposed on partnership by law or contract. Lanera v Hertz Corp., 180 A.D.2d 667, 579 N.Y.S.2d 720, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1461 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1992).

Defendant messenger company was not entitled to summary judgment in action arising from accident in which pedestrian was struck by van that was owned and operated by individual defendant, notwithstanding that contract between individual and messenger service stated that individual was independent contractor, since there was triable issue of fact as to whether individual was agent of messenger service where (1) individual worked exclusively for messenger service from about 9:00 a.m. until 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday (and accident occurred at about 9:00 a.m. on weekday), (2) individual carried beeper so as to be on moment's notice, (3) messenger service paid workers' compensation benefits for individual, (4) individual had not filed any documents with any governmental entity to indicate that he was sole proprietor, (5) individual was obligated to file accident report with messenger service, and (6) messenger service issued payroll check cashing card to individual. Carrion v Orbit Messenger, 192 A.D.2d 366, 596 N.Y.S.2d 50, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3697 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), aff'd, 82 N.Y.2d 742, 602 N.Y.S.2d 325, 621 N.E.2d 692, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 3050 (N.Y. 1993).

In action against employers of allegedly negligent driver on respondeat superior theory that driver was operating his vehicle in course of his employment, employers were entitled to summary judgment where they had not directed driver's activities for at least 2 hours before accident. James v Le Feber, 275 A.D.2d 973, 715 N.Y.S.2d 193, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9508 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000).

Employer failed to establish its entitlement to summary judgment in a driver's claim under this statute, which alleged that the employer was vicariously liable for the employee's negligent operation of its van, because triable issues of fact existed as to whether the employee's use or operation of the van was negligent and whether the employee's allegedly improper driving was a proximate cause of the driver's injuries. Gray v Air Excel Serv. Corp., 171 A.D.3d 1026, 98 N.Y.S.3d 259, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2868 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2019).

Where the defendant's son was legally using defendant's automobile with express permission of defendant it was held that the son, in its operation, was an agent of defendant, within the meaning of the former analogous section, and this being so the son's negligence, if any, was attributable to the defendant. Amann v Thurston, 231 N.Y.S. 657, 133 Misc. 293, 1928 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1161 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), aff'd, 224 A.D. 874, 230 N.Y.S. 794, 1928 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12198 (N.Y. App. Div. 1928).

In action against owner of truck which collided with trolley car, based on owner's derivative liability for negligence of truck driver, who was a co-employee of plaintiffs who were riding in the truck and were engaged in their employer's business, defenses of assumption of risk, fellow-servant rule, and joint enterprise were available to truck owner. Schwartz v Forty-Second S., M. & S. N. A. R. Co., 22 N.Y.S.2d 752, 175 Misc. 49, 1940 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2214 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1940).

Under statute attributing to owner negligence in the use or operation of a motor vehicle, negligence of employees of car wash in failing to keep automobile which had just been washed under control was imputable to automobile owner even though the car wash was an independent contractor and the negligence occurred on private property; thus, owner of automobile which rolled down incline without an operator and struck parked automobile after emerging from car wash was liable for damage sustained by the parked automobile. Allcity Ins. Co. v Old Greenwich Delicatessen, 75 Misc. 2d 898, 349 N.Y.S.2d 240, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1324 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1973).

Under New York Law, once an employee has driven his employer's car outside the scope of his employment an intention to re-enter and driving the vehicle in the correct direction is not sufficient to constitute re-entry, and the intent must be accompanied by a reasonable connection in time and space. Tomack v United States, 369 F.2d 350, 1966 U.S. App. LEXIS 4242 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1966).

44. —Government employees

Where superior permitted state employee to drive state automobile home for week end, it having been determined that employee's work would be more efficiently done if he was provided with an automobile for his work, state was liable for injuries caused by such employee's negligent operation of automobile while returning to work. Adams v State, 269 A.D. 482, 57 N.Y.S.2d 42, 1945 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3018 (N.Y. App. Div. 1945), rev'd, 295 N.Y. 946, 68 N.E.2d 44, 295 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 946, 1946 N.Y. LEXIS 1095 (N.Y. 1946).

Town had no vicarious liability under CLS Veh & Tr § 388 as owner of ambulance involved in accident since vicarious liability cannot be imposed on owner unless there is liability on part of driver, and volunteer fireman who was driving ambulance had immunity for his acts of ordinary negligence under CLS Gen Mun § 205-b. Nelson v Garcia, 152 A.D.2d 22, 548 N.Y.S.2d 963, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14856 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1989).

Where the city that owned a vehicle contested the issue of whether a probationary employee was using the vehicle with its knowledge and permission at the time of hitting a pedestrian and refused to provide the employee with a defense in a separate action against the employee, a default judgment against the employee did not collateral estop the city from contesting liability in an action against it and the employee; therefore, the trial court had erred in entering summary judgment in favor of the pedestrian on the issue of liability, since issues regarding actual negligence and causation, as well as the city's knowledge and permission, required decision by a finder of fact. Chambers v City of New York, 309 A.D.2d 81, 764 N.Y.S.2d 708, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9867 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003).

III. Specific Factors Affecting Liability

45. In general

As the negligence of the driver in the operation of a car was not in issue, the trial court correctly charged that the owner in providing a defective and dangerous vehicle would be liable to third persons only where it failed to give notice to the driver of the defective condition and the driver did not know of such condition. Greenbaum v Tiltz Air Conditioning Corp., 297 N.Y. 544, 74 N.E.2d 475, 297 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 544, 1947 N.Y. LEXIS 1032 (N.Y. 1947).

Where a defendant was driving plaintiff's car with plaintiff's consent and plaintiff's wife, a passenger in the car, was fatally injured because of the negligent driving of defendant, the plaintiff, as administrator and sole beneficiary was able to recover. The test was whether the wife, had she not died, would have had a cause of action against the defendant under this section. Rozewski v Rozewski, 46 N.Y.S.2d 743, 181 Misc. 793, 1944 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1680 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1944).

Public policy will not permit the real owner of an automobile to escape the consequences of his own negligence and recover property damages to his vehicle by taking refuge behind a rebuttable presumption of title in the registered owner, his wife, and it was implicit in the jury's verdict that they found the husband was the real owner of the vehicle he was operating at the time of the collision and that he was negligent and therefore the motion to set aside the verdict as inconsistent as it relates to claim for property damage was denied. Britt v Perry, 64 Misc. 2d 655, 315 N.Y.S.2d 357, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1201 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1970).

Where the defendant-instructor was the owner of the vehicle, which struck pedestrians at a time when he was instructing his wife how to drive, the negligence of the driver was imputable to him as owner, not as instructor. Cromwell v Rodriguez, 66 Misc. 2d 243, 319 N.Y.S.2d 1014, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1816 (N.Y. City Ct. 1971).

Because the bus passengers' personal injury claims against the trailer owners and their affiliates under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1) were preempted by the Graves Amendment, 49 U.S.C.S. § 30106(a), which was a valid exercise of Congressional authority, the owners and their affiliates were entitled to summary judgment with regard to their liability. Edwards v Erie Coach Lines Co., 239 N.Y.L.J. 116, 2008 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3732 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. May 22, 2008).

46. State or municipal ownership of vehicle

The State was liable under this section for injuries sustained by wife of district game protector, age 69, as a result of the negligence of the husband while taking a 60-mile trip in a state-owned car on state business. The State was not excused from liability on the ground that prior thereto the superintendent of the law enforcement bureau had sent a communication to its district game protectors requesting them to discontinue carrying members of their families for purposes not strictly in line with the performance of their official duties, in view of the fact that there was a memo attached which said that this did not prohibit game protectors from having others with them if their presence tied in with the work to be performed. In this case, the district game protector took his wife along on the trip in order that she might assist him in driving when he became tired. Burmaster v State, 7 N.Y.2d 65, 195 N.Y.S.2d 385, 163 N.E.2d 742, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 874 (N.Y. 1959).

Municipality, as unregulated self-insurer, was not required to provide uninsured motorist coverage to police officers who were injured when their police vehicles were struck by uninsured vehicles, since police vehicle is specifically excluded from definition of "motor vehicle" in CLS Veh & Tr § 388, and thus CLS Ins § 3420(f) has no application to such vehicle. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v Amato, 72 N.Y.2d 288, 532 N.Y.S.2d 239, 528 N.E.2d 162, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 1670 (N.Y. 1988).

The former analogous section did not make New York city liable for the death of a person killed when a truck driven by a city employee ran into a horse-drawn truck belonging to deceased, where the driver of the city vehicle was engaged in his own business at the time with permission of his foreman. Downing v New York, 219 A.D. 444, 220 N.Y.S. 76, 1927 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10936 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 245 N.Y. 597, 157 N.E. 873, 245 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 597, 1927 N.Y. LEXIS 765 (N.Y. 1927).

In taking a city employee to his home, the driver of the city's automobile was not acting in the discharge of the city's business and the former analogous section did not impose liability upon the city. Aspinall v New York, 221 A.D. 753, 223 N.Y.S. 501, 1927 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6567 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 246 N.Y. 644, 159 N.E. 685, 246 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 644, 1927 N.Y. LEXIS 1043 (N.Y. 1927).

A city inspector of tenement houses used city's car to transport him to summer home. His superior officer knew that he was thus using city's car for his private purposes, although no express consent by anybody had been given for such private use of car which was furnished to him by city for use in making inspections. While at the summer resort he accidentally met the owner of a tenement house upon whom he served oral notice regarding keeping of lights burning at night in halls of tenement house. While returning from the summer resort on that occasion an accident occurred. It was error to permit jury to find that car was being driven by an employee in the city's business at the time of accident and that city consented in any way to employee's use of its car on his private business. Perhaps an implied consent by his superior officer could be spelled out, but no consent that was binding on the city. Fox v Syracuse, 231 A.D. 273, 247 N.Y.S. 429, 1931 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16034 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 258 N.Y. 550, 180 N.E. 328, 258 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 550, 1931 N.Y. LEXIS 805 (N.Y. 1931).

Where evidence that plaintiff's intestate was killed through the negligence of a deputy sheriff, the driver of a prison van owned by New York city and transporting prisoners in the city to the state prison, the verdict against the city and sheriff were set aside as to city, where the verdict should have been set aside as to the sheriff; the transportation of the prisoners was a function of the city and it was not unconstitutional to relieve the sheriff of the function of transporting prisoners; the city is liable as the owner of the vehicle being used with its permission. Miller v New York, 266 A.D. 565, 43 N.Y.S.2d 79, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3622 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943), aff'd, 292 N.Y. 571, 54 N.E.2d 690, 292 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 571, 1944 N.Y. LEXIS 1725 (N.Y. 1944).

Claimant sustained injuries in accident while riding with her husband in state-owned car which had been assigned to him as state employee. Accident was caused by husbnd's negligence and claimant was free from contributory negligence. Husband had received letter from his superior which ordered employees not to carry anyone who did not tie in with work performed involving use of car. Husband said that on day of accident he was on state business and that, as he had not felt good in the morning, he had taken claimant along to help with driving. Held: that uncontradicted testimony indicated claimant's presence did directly connect with husband's use of car. Finding that car was being driven without state's permission in that state had no knowledge that claimant was passenger was improper. Judgment dismissing claim reversed. Burmaster v State, 7 A.D.2d 775, 179 N.Y.S.2d 980, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4095 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958), aff'd, 7 N.Y.2d 65, 195 N.Y.S.2d 385, 163 N.E.2d 742, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 874 (N.Y. 1959).

The words "every owner" included a municipality, outside of the express exceptions, and a city was liable, under said section, for the negligence of one of its police officers while operating a motor vehicle on streets of the city. Kelly v Niagara Falls, 229 N.Y.S. 328, 131 Misc. 934, 1928 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 885 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1928).

A municipal corporation was not liable for the negligence of a federal civil works administration worker, who was paid by the federal government but under the control of a municipal corporation, in the operation of an automobile owned by the municipality, for injuries to a third person, either under the common law or this section, where the worker at the time was not engaged within the scope of his employment. It seems, however, that a municipality was liable for the tortious acts of a worker employed under the civil works administration committed within the course of his employment. Irolla v New York, 280 N.Y.S. 873, 155 Misc. 908, 1935 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1780 (N.Y. Mun. Ct. 1935).

A municipal corporation is not liable for the negligence of a federal civil works administration worker, who is paid by the federal government but under the control of a municipal corporation, in the operation of an automobile owned by the municipality, for injuries to a third person either under the common law, this section, or the Highway Law, where the worker at the time was not engaged within the scope of his employment. It seems, however, that the municipality is liable for the tortious acts of a worker employed under civil works administration committed within the course of his employment. Irolla v New York, 280 N.Y.S. 873, 155 Misc. 908, 1935 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1780 (N.Y. Mun. Ct. 1935).

The state is liable for negligence in the operation of a state-owned vehicle in its business "or otherwise, by any person mutually using or operating the same with the permission, express or implied," of the state. Callahan v State, 107 N.Y.S.2d 319, 201 Misc. 378, 1951 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2347 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1951).

Liability of county, if any, for damages resulting from alleged negligence of deputy sheriff while operating county-owned automobile is based upon this section, and not upon the employment relationship between county and deputy sheriff. Reck v County of Onondaga, 51 Misc. 2d 259, 273 N.Y.S.2d 146, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1705 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1966).

The negligence of a deputy sheriff in driving a county-owned vehicle is attributable to the county as owner of the vehicle. George v County of Erie, 66 Misc. 2d 871, 322 N.Y.S.2d 278, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1505 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1971).

47. —Governmental immunity inapplicable

The former analogous section, which made a city liable for the negligence of a municipal employee operating a municipally owned vehicle, applied to the operation of vehicles used in the discharge of governmental duties and annulled the former rule of non-liability in such cases. Miller v New York, 235 A.D. 259, 257 N.Y.S. 33, 1932 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7939 (N.Y. App. Div. 1932).

The Court of Claims Act § 12-a, places the state in the same position under this section as an individual or a private corporation. Adams v State, 264 A.D. 978, 37 N.Y.S.2d 229, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5600 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

The Binghamton City Charter § 217, which eliminated city firemen as officers or agents of the city and provided that the city should not be held liable in a civil action for injuries to persons or property from the acts or omissions of said officers or agents was superseded by the former analogous section for the clear intent of which was to destroy the exemption of a municipality from liability in a particular instance covered by the Binghamton Charter § 217. Snyder v Binghamton, 245 N.Y.S. 497, 138 Misc. 259, 1930 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1616 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1930), aff'd, 233 A.D. 782, 250 N.Y.S. 917, 1931 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12620 (N.Y. App. Div. 1931).

The former analogous section applied to the operation of vehicles used in a public or governmental duty, the enactment of which annulled the rule of non-liability of municipal corporations for negligence in the operation of city-owned vehicles and created a statutory liability. Snyder v Binghamton, 245 N.Y.S. 497, 138 Misc. 259, 1930 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1616 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1930), aff'd, 233 A.D. 782, 250 N.Y.S. 917, 1931 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12620 (N.Y. App. Div. 1931).

Governmental immunity was waived or abrogated by the former analogous section in so far as third parties were concerned. Miller v Albany, 287 N.Y.S. 889, 158 Misc. 720, 1935 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1743 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1935), aff'd, 247 A.D. 848, 286 N.Y.S. 326, 1936 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9033 (N.Y. App. Div. 1936).

48. Fire truck or police vehicle

Since under the General Municipal Law, § 205, compensation for the death of a volunteer fireman resulting from injuries incurred in the performance of his duties was accorded to his personal representative, an action to recover, under the former analogous section, for the death of a volunteer fireman who was fatally injured while in the discharge of his duty as a fireman through the alleged negligence of the driver of a fire truck who was employed by the defendant village, was properly dismissed. Ottmann v Rockville Centre, 273 N.Y. 205, 7 N.E.2d 102, 273 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 205, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1193 (N.Y.), reh'g denied, 275 N.Y. 270, 9 N.E.2d 862, 275 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 270, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1426 (N.Y. 1937).

A defendant city was not liable for the negligence of a motorcycle policeman committed in the act of performing a governmental function. Lacock v Schenectady, 224 A.D. 512, 231 N.Y.S. 379, 1928 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10050 (N.Y. App. Div. 1928), aff'd, 251 N.Y. 575, 168 N.E. 433, 251 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 575, 1929 N.Y. LEXIS 832 (N.Y. 1929).

An action could be brought under the former analogous section for the negligent operation of a fire truck. Section 205 of the General Municipal Law was not an exclusive remedy. Ottmann v Rockville Center, 241 A.D. 843, 271 N.Y.S. 391, 1934 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9984 (N.Y. App. Div. 1934).

The former analogous section, which made a village liable for the negligence of a person operating a municipally owned vehicle upon public streets in the discharge of a statutory duty imposed upon a municipality, applied to the operation of a fire truck owned by the village and being operated while in the performance of governmental duties, viz., on the way to a fire in answer to an alarm. Rosenthal v Hastings-On-Hudson, 241 A.D. 890, 272 N.Y.S. 1, 1934 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10322 (N.Y. App. Div. 1934).

The former analogous section imposed no liability upon a town for the negligent operation of a fire truck owned and maintained, under County Law § 38, by a fire district within the township. Miller v Irondequoit, 243 A.D. 240, 276 N.Y.S. 497, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7041 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 268 N.Y. 578, 198 N.E. 412, 268 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 578, 1935 N.Y. LEXIS 1043 (N.Y. 1935).

The former analogous section was enacted for the benefit of wayfarers and occupants of vehicles who were strangers to the immediate service being then rendered in the operation of a municipally-owned vehicle in the discharge of a statutory duty. Ottmann v Rockville Centre, 248 A.D. 592, 287 N.Y.S. 367, 1936 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6448 (N.Y. App. Div. 1936), aff'd, 273 N.Y. 205, 7 N.E.2d 102, 273 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 205, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1193 (N.Y. 1937), modified, 275 N.Y. 270, 9 N.E.2d 862, 275 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 270, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1426 (N.Y. 1937).

Since § 205-b of the General Municipal Law exempts a volunteer fireman from liability for negligent operation of a motor vehicle in course of duty, the owner of the vehicle which the fireman is operating at the time of the accident and in the owner's absence cannot be held liable for the injuries inflicted. Sikora v Keillor, 17 A.D.2d 6, 230 N.Y.S.2d 571, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8567 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1962), aff'd, 13 N.Y.2d 610, 240 N.Y.S.2d 601, 191 N.E.2d 88, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 1220 (N.Y. 1963).

Trial court erred in denying a city's amended motion for summary judgment in a driver's negligence action because the driver did not show that the city's traffic enforcement agent failed to ask a car wash attendant if he had a driver's license, the police vehicle's keys were given to the attendant for the sole purpose of having the vehicle washed, the attendant's isolated negligent act of slipping his foot off the brake pedal and onto the gas was the sole proximate cause of the accident, and the city was not vicariously liable as the owner of the vehicle. Guevara v Ortega, 136 A.D.3d 508, 26 N.Y.S.3d 12, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1108 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2016).

Trial court properly granted an application filed by a town's supplementary uninsured/underinsured motorist (SUM) insurer to permanently stay arbitration between the parties because a police officer was not an insured under the terms of the SUM endorsement where the police vehicle that he was operating at the time of an accident was not a "motor vehicle" for purposes of SUM coverage, "fire and police vehicles" were expressly excluded from the statutory definition of a motor vehicle, the fact that the officer was operating an unmarked police vehicle at the time of the accident was of no moment, and without coverage under the policy, the doctrines of waiver and estoppel could not operate to create such coverage. Matter of U.S. Speciality Ins. Co. (Denardo), 151 A.D.3d 1520, 57 N.Y.S.3d 743, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5217 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 30 N.Y.3d 904, 89 N.E.3d 1258, 67 N.Y.S.3d 578, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 3162 (N.Y. 2017).

A municipality was liable under the former analogous section for damage caused by its fire truck, responding to a fire alarm, where the truck failed to stop due to inadequate brakes, since the brakes were of an exposed type, so that when wet they would not take hold, thus constituting a violation of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, former § 15, sub 1. Hardin v Schenectady, 278 N.Y.S. 28, 154 Misc. 411, 1935 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1018 (N.Y. County Ct. 1935).

Insurer's petition for a permanent stay of arbitration should have been denied because a police officer was occupying a motor vehicle being operated by a fellow officer at the time it was involved in a collision with an underinsured vehicle, and while the negligence section of the Vehicle and Traffic Law (VTL) excluded police vehicles, the definition of a "motor vehicle" in the general provisions of the VTL applied to the entire VTL and the uninsured/underinsured motorist endorsement at issue. Matter of State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v Fitzgerald, 112 A.D.3d 166, 973 N.Y.S.2d 801, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7135 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2013), rev'd, 25 N.Y.3d 799, 38 N.E.3d 325, 16 N.Y.S.3d 796, 2015 N.Y. LEXIS 1526 (N.Y. 2015).

Provision in automobile liability insurance policy on tractor-truck, containing "truckmen's endorsement", exempting from coverage accidents which occur while automobile is being used in business of any person or organization to whom automobile is rented, is against New York public policy by reason of absence of limitation to such provision to effect that provision would only apply when tractor is in custody of lessee under written lease agreement which requires lessee to provide insurance covering tractor. Transport Ins. Co. v Protective Ins. Co., 647 F. Supp. 1381, 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17765 (N.D.N.Y. 1986).

49. Trailers and campers

The fact that a trailer is hitched to and drawn by a motor vehicle does not change its character as a separate and distinct vehicle or make it a motor vehicle or in part a motor vehicle within the meaning of this section. Hennessy v Walker, 279 N.Y. 94, 17 N.E.2d 782, 279 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 94, 1938 N.Y. LEXIS 802 (N.Y. 1938).

Trial court erred in denying a dairy's motions for summary judgment in a personal injury claim against it based on its ownership of a hay wagon which was being towed by a vehicle involved in an accident because the hay wagon was not a "trailer" as defined in N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 156, but instead was designed and primarily used for non-highway purposes. Miller v Richardson, 48 A.D.3d 1298, 852 N.Y.S.2d 530, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1179 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2008).

The complaint in this section for personal injuries arising from the collision between an automobile in which plaintiffs were riding and a trailer owned by one of defendants and loaned to another, must be dismissed as to the owner of the trailer, since the trailer is not a motor vehicle, and this section does not impose any liability on the owner of a trailer. Herrick v Arborio, 258 N.Y.S. 5, 144 Misc. 15, 1932 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1154 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1932).

Former § 59 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law did not impose any liability on the owner of a trailer or any other vehicle being towed by a motor vehicle, towed vehicles not being within the meaning of that section. Corsi Bros., Inc. v Daly, 39 Misc. 2d 1076, 242 N.Y.S.2d 865, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1762 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963), aff'd, 21 A.D.2d 853, 252 N.Y.S.2d 253, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5502 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1964).

50. Tractor-trailer trucks

Under this section driver of tractor-trailer is operator of both units and it was error to dismiss complaint of insurer of tractor seeking contribution from insurer of trailer notwithstanding clause in trailer policy purporting to exclude coverage in such circumstances. General Mut. Ins. Co. v Sun Ins. Co., 24 A.D.2d 135, 264 N.Y.S.2d 716, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2914 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

An exclusionary clause in a policy issued by an insurer providing excess coverage of only one vehicle in a tractor-trailer combination, which clause states that "This policy does not apply . . . while any trailer covered by this policy is used with any automobile owned or hired by the insured and not covered by like insurance in the company", must be read as affording excess coverage not only for the trailer, but also for the tractor, by virtue of subdivision 4 of section 388 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, which provides that all policies of insurance issued to owners of tractors and trailers used in combination with one another are to provide the required coverage; moreover, such an exclusionary clause, whether it applies to primary or excess insurance, is void as contrary to State policy, and the fact that it tracks the language of an Insurance Department regulation (11 NYCRR 60.2 [c]) is immaterial, for to the extent that regulation conflicts with and is inconsistent with the design and purpose of the statute it has no significance. Mt. Vernon Fire Ins. Co. v Travelers Indem. Co., 63 A.D.2d 254, 407 N.Y.S.2d 23, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11342 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1978), aff'd, 47 N.Y.2d 575, 419 N.Y.S.2d 899, 393 N.E.2d 974, 1979 N.Y. LEXIS 2183 (N.Y. 1979).

Plaintiff injured in head-on collision with tractor-trailer was not entitled to partial summary judgment on issue of vicarious liability of employer, or former employer, of driver of tractor-trailer where (1) there was triable issue of fact as to whether driver was operating without employer's consent, despite driver's retention of indicia of authority to operate as carrier authorized by Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC), and (2) employer's violations of ICC regulations did not require that it be estopped from denying responsibility for employee's actions; same triable issue of fact precluded grant of summary judgment dismissing complaint against employer. Davis v Rajbar, 266 A.D.2d 828, 698 N.Y.S.2d 373, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11868 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1999).

Plaintiff injured in head-on collision with tractor-trailer was not entitled to partial summary judgment on issue of vicarious liability of individual and 2 transport companies of which that individual was sole stockholder and chief executive officer where triable issue of fact existed as to whether those defendants acted as brokers or carriers with respect to tractor-trailer's trip during which accident occurred or whether they acted as mere factors by buying invoice for trip and then billing supplier; same triable issue of fact precluded grant of summary judgment dismissing complaint against those defendants. Davis v Rajbar, 266 A.D.2d 828, 698 N.Y.S.2d 373, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11868 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1999).

In action by motorist injured in head-on collision with tractor-trailer, court properly denied cross motion by 2 transport companies and their sole stockholder and chief executive officer for summary judgment seeking determination that tractor-trailer driver's employer, or former employer, was liable for driver's alleged negligence under CLS Veh & Tr § 388 where triable issue of fact existed as to whether driver operated as carrier with employer's authority. Davis v Rajbar, 266 A.D.2d 828, 698 N.Y.S.2d 373, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11868 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1999).

Road worker hit by tractor-trailer was entitled to partial summary judgment on issue of liability of driver, driver's employer, and owners of truck where (1) driver's negligence was sole proximate cause of accident, (2) worker was not contributorily negligent merely because he was working with his back toward traffic and with no coworkers around to warn him, (3) driver's employer was liable, under doctrine of respondeat superior, because driver was acting within scope of his employment, and (4) truck owners were vicariously liable under CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1). Gusek v Compass Transp. Corp., 266 A.D.2d 923, 697 N.Y.S.2d 886, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11779 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1999).

Under this section, liability of the driver of a trailer-truck, and of his employer who owned the truck, for negligence, if any, in so backing the vehicle as to injure a pedestrian on the sidewalk, was indistinguishable. De Sessa v White Plains, 30 Misc. 2d 817, 219 N.Y.S.2d 190, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2553 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1961).

The fact that a disabled tractor was being towed piggyback by another tractor would not bring its operation within the purview of former § 59 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, it nonetheless being a towed vehicle and not itself operated on the highway. Corsi Bros., Inc. v Daly, 39 Misc. 2d 1076, 242 N.Y.S.2d 865, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1762 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963), aff'd, 21 A.D.2d 853, 252 N.Y.S.2d 253, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5502 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1964).

Where a tractor was hauling a trailer, if the driver of the tractor was not the owner of the tractor, but merely the driver of such vehicle, he would be separately covered as an additional insured under a policy covering the trailer by virtue of the omnibus clause mandated by statute, the Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 as implemented by the regulations of the Insurance Department. Hiscock v Kuinlan, 62 Misc. 2d 842, 310 N.Y.S.2d 331, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1741 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1970).

In justice and fairness and as a matter of logic and equity, both insurer of tractor and insurer of semitrailer which tractor was pulling at time of accident should pay their proportionate shares to the full extent of their respective policies in recompensing loss for injuries which resulted when the combined vehicles were involved in accident. Mt. Vernon Fire Ins. Co. v Travelers Indem. Co., 90 Misc. 2d 717, 395 N.Y.S.2d 948, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2139 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1977), modified, 63 A.D.2d 254, 407 N.Y.S.2d 23, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11342 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1978).

51. —Multiple owners

The owner of a semitrailer attached to a separately owned motor vehicle is not liable, under this section, for the negligent operation of the two vehicles by an employee of the owner of the tractor. Hennessy v Walker, 279 N.Y. 94, 17 N.E.2d 782, 279 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 94, 1938 N.Y. LEXIS 802 (N.Y. 1938).

Under former § 59 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, now subsection 1 of this section, negligence may be imputed from the operator of a motor vehicle to the owner thereof only in actions brought by third persons against the owner, and therefore any negligence of driver of tractor to which owner's trailer was attached was not imputable to trailer owner in owner's action against motorist colliding with tractor. George W. Brown, Inc. v Pipe Welding Supply, Inc., 26 A.D.2d 855, 274 N.Y.S.2d 41, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3352 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1966).

This section (former § 59-a) does not change the common-law rule under which the owner of a trailer used with a tractor and involved in an accident may hold the driver of the tractor for his negligence, and a power company for its negligence in excavating the street at the point of the accident, although the trailer owner is liable under this section to the party injured by the negligence of the driver of the tractor. Cote v Autocar Sales & Service Co., 79 N.Y.S.2d 130, 191 Misc. 988, 1948 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2369 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1948).

Owner of a tractor and a different owner of a trailer were jointly liable for tractor operator's negligence; but where the negligence of the trailer owner was merely passive, he could recover over from the tractor owner. Mondelli v Harrison Hub, Bed & Spring Co., 10 Misc. 2d 883, 172 N.Y.S.2d 931, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3549 (N.Y. City Ct. 1958).

Former § 59-a simply provided that both owners were "jointly liable" for damage done by a combination tractor-trailer, the two parts of which were separately owned but which were being operated by an employee of one of the owners as agent of each, and the words "jointly liable," may not be given the connotation of partnership, nor is it to be implied that separate insurance policies obtained by the respective owners of the tractor and trailer are thereby converted into policies of co-insurance. Employers Mut. Liability Ins. Co. v Indemnity Ins. Co., 37 Misc. 2d 421, 234 N.Y.S.2d 839, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2278 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1962).

The owners of a tractor and trailer, defendants in a negligence action, are jointly and severally liable and responsible for 50 percent of the recovery to the plaintiff in an action arising from a collision with the plaintiff's automobile. Hiscock v Kuinlan, 62 Misc. 2d 842, 310 N.Y.S.2d 331, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1741 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1970).

Under the Vehicle and Traffic Law, owners of tractor and trailer are jointly and severally liable for any injuries resulting from negligence in the operation of either the tractor or the trailer or of both in combination. Mt. Vernon Fire Ins. Co. v Travelers Indem. Co., 90 Misc. 2d 717, 395 N.Y.S.2d 948, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2139 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1977), modified, 63 A.D.2d 254, 407 N.Y.S.2d 23, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11342 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1978).

52. Rented or leased vehicles, generally

Plaintiff passenger may recover for negligent operation of vehicle—no matter what his relationship to the driver might be—unless it is shown that his own personal negligence contributed to the injury; thus, representative of deceased passenger was entitled to recover from owner of rented automobile in which deceased was riding when he was killed and over which he exercised supervisory control where deceased's father-in-law was driving at time of accident and was contributorily negligent in causing accident. Kalechman v Drew Auto Rental, Inc., 33 N.Y.2d 397, 353 N.Y.S.2d 414, 308 N.E.2d 886, 1973 N.Y. LEXIS 871 (N.Y. 1973).

Where person driving car rented from self-insured rental company was involved in accident, causing injury to third person, rental company could not seek indemnification from renters to extent that damage fell below minimum insurance that company was required to provide for benefit of permissive users under CLS Veh & Tr § 370(1); however, indemnification clause of rental contract, if otherwise valid, was enforceable as to amounts exceeding statutory minimums. ELRAC, Inc. v Ward, 96 N.Y.2d 58, 724 N.Y.S.2d 692, 748 N.E.2d 1, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 695 (N.Y. 2001).

New York law was applicable in action arising out of Maryland vehicular accident involving automobile, which was owned and driven by New York residents, which was being driven on trip beginning and terminating in New York and in which plaintiff New York resident was a passenger, and automobile, which was registered in Virginia and which nationwide car rental agency leased in Maryland to a Mississippi resident; thus, agency was vicariously liable for any misdeeds on part of driver of leased automobile. Cunningham v McNair, 48 A.D.2d 546, 370 N.Y.S.2d 577, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9938 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1975).

In an explosives company's declaratory judgment action to determine the respective obligations of several insurers to provide the company with insurance coverage for claims arising from the explosion of a parked, rented truck which the company's employee had overloaded with dynamite, claims against the explosives company would be covered by the basic automobile insurance policy that was carried by the truck rental company as claims arising "out of the use, including loading and unloading" of the truck by the insured and its lessees as "additional insureds" where overloading the truck in violation of the rental agreement would not rebut the presumption of permissive use for purposes of relieving the insurer of its obligations, and where the legal transportation of explosives would not render the purpose of the rental illegal, although the manner in which they were transported might constitute negligence. The explosives company's comprehensive general liability policy, however, would apply to a claim for indemnification by its customer for breach of contract arising from the company's improper use or handling of explosives that it had contracted to deliver. Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 91 A.D.2d 317, 459 N.Y.S.2d 158, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16134 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1983).

Lessor of automobile may not enforce restrictions on use by lessee, and thereby escape liability to third person, on ground that violation of restriction removed element of consent required by CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1). Wynn v Middleton, 184 A.D.2d 1019, 584 N.Y.S.2d 684, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8250 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1992).

Where someone using a stolen driver's license rented a vehicle from defendant and allegedly drove it into a collision with plaintiff, the defendant as an owner could not avoid liability under Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 on the ground that there was no permission express or implied for the operation of the vehicle. Lorippo v Chrysler Leasing Corp., 59 Misc. 2d 534, 299 N.Y.S.2d 672, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 976 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1968).

The term "owner" under Vehicle and Traffic Law § 128 includes any lessee having the exclusive use for a period greater than 30 days, and does not exclude the title holder as an owner for purposes of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 and under Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 subdivision 3 the liability of the lessor and lessee of an automobile is joint and several. Location Auto Leasing Corp. v Lembo Corp., 62 Misc. 2d 856, 310 N.Y.S.2d 365, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1689 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1970).

Failure on part of lessee of commercially rented vehicle to pay for or leave a proper deposit for period covering date of accident did not give lessor reason for disclaiming its responsibility as a self insurer of vehicle on ground that vehicle had been stolen or, at least, converted, nor did reporting of theft of vehicle to police give lessor a reason for disclaiming on ground that vehicle was no longer being driven with its permission, express or implied, where original rental contract, based on prior dealings between parties, was at best open ended and, though full payment was not made during critical period, partial payment was made, and vehicle was not only in possession of lessee at time of accident, but lessor failed to establish a demand for a return of vehicle and a refusal by lessee. Banner Casualty Co. v Lazar, 81 Misc. 2d 360, 366 N.Y.S.2d 314, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2389 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1975).

Lessee of automobile was an "owner" for purpose of owner's responsibility law. Fireman's Fund American Ins. Cos. v Olin of New York, Inc., 84 Misc. 2d 504, 376 N.Y.S.2d 800, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3162 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1975).

In action for injuries sustained by plaintiff when car leased by him and his father was involved in accident while his friend was driving and he was passenger, plaintiff's father and defendant leasing corporation were entitled to summary judgment dismissing vicarious liability claims under CLS Veh & Tr § 388, as plaintiff was not innocent party intended to be protected by § 388 where he had willingly allowed his friend to drive. Sipp v McGee, 183 Misc. 2d 407, 703 N.Y.S.2d 695, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 28 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2000).

Supreme court properly granted that branch of a rental car corporation's motion which sought summary judgment for conditional contractual indemnification, to the extent granting contractual indemnification to the corporation for any sums which it may be required to pay in excess of the statutory minimum in insurance coverage required by N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1). Ruddock v Boland Rentals, Inc., 5 A.D.3d 368, 774 N.Y.S.2d 50, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2158 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2004).

Even though car owner/lessors moved under N.Y. C.P.L.R. 3211(a)(5) to dismiss a passenger's accident injury complaint against them because the car's driver was an unauthorized driver, the court sua sponte granted summary judgment to dismiss the passenger's complaint against the owner/lessors since the passenger had settled with the car's lessee and car's driver and drafted and executed a release that released "all other persons, firms, or corporations liable or who could be claimed to be liable." The passenger did not create a genuine issue of fact that she did not intend to also expressly release, under N.Y. Gen. Oblig. Law § 15-108(a), the owner/lessors from their potential vicarious liability under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388. Mei Ling Yi v Enter. Rent A Car, 800 N.Y.S.2d 350, 6 Misc. 3d 1004(A), 2004 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2862 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2004).

53. Owner's agent

The provision of this section exempting from liability imposed upon owners of motor vehicles for negligence of others driving their cars with their consent, those engaged in business of renting motor vehicles, who carry liability insurance in stated amounts protecting renter from liability arising from his negligence in operation of rented vehicle, is violative neither of the federal nor of the state constitution. The exception in the statute does not apply to cars rented or hired when operated by servants or employees of the owner. Atkins v Hertz Drivurself Stations, Inc., 261 N.Y. 352, 185 N.E. 408, 261 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 352, 1933 N.Y. LEXIS 1293 (N.Y. 1933), aff'd, 291 U.S. 641, 54 S. Ct. 437, 78 L. Ed. 1039, 1934 U.S. LEXIS 527 (U.S. 1934).

In an action for personal injury caused by the negligent operation of a van driven by the employee of the van's long-term lessee who had obtained the use of the van through the fraudulent deception of the van's lessor, a judgment awarding damages against the lessor and not the lessee was supported by evidence which clearly showed that the lessee had no knowledge of its employee's unauthorized use of the van, so that the jury could properly have found that the lessee was an unwitting victim of its employee's fraud, that the lessee never expressly or impliedly consented to the employee's use of the van on the night of the accident, and that the decision to release the van was based on facts known to the lessor alone and on its own assessment of the situation, thereby permitting a jury further to find that the lessor's liability was separate and distinct from the lessee's in that circumstances which may have constituted an unauthorized taking as far as the lessee was concerned might be viewed differently when measured against the lessor's role in the transaction; moreover there was no due process violation in that the lessor's agent gave permission in fact and had the authority under the rental agreement to refuse to do so; finally, Veh & Tr Law § 388(3) expressly makes the liability of the lessor and lessee joint and several. Hardeman v Mendon Leasing Corp., 58 N.Y.2d 892, 460 N.Y.S.2d 499, 447 N.E.2d 47, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 2870 (N.Y. 1983).

Company leasing vehicle for period in excess of thirty days for its exclusive use considered owner thereof within meaning of § 128 and consequently subject to liability under Vehicle & Traf L § 388(3). Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v World Wide Rent-A-Car, Inc., 28 A.D.2d 286, 284 N.Y.S.2d 807, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2928 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1967).

In action by passenger who was injured while riding in rented vehicle driven by her co-employee during business trip, lessor of vehicle was entitled to summary judgment since passenger could not recover against lessor for negligence of co-employee, who was statutorily immune from suit under Workers' Compensation Law. Houston v Avis Rent A Car Sys., 209 A.D.2d 583, 619 N.Y.S.2d 640, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11532 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994).

N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388 claim against an owner of a vehicle was barred by the Graves Amendment, 49 U.S.C.S. § 30106, since it barred state law vicarious liability actions commenced on or after August 10, 2005, against owners of motor vehicles engaged in the trade or business of renting or leasing motor vehicles. Hernandez v Sanchez, 40 A.D.3d 446, 836 N.Y.S.2d 577, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6277 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2007).

An owner engaged in the car rental business within the context of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388, subd 1 gives its lessee general control of the vehicle without limitation of authority. Febbraro v Hertz Corp., 64 Misc. 2d 794, 315 N.Y.S.2d 702, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1182 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1970).

That lessee allowed another person to drive commercially rented vehicle, even a person who was not licensed, was not enough to allow lessor to disclaim as a self-insurer of vehicle. Banner Casualty Co. v Lazar, 81 Misc. 2d 360, 366 N.Y.S.2d 314, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2389 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1975).

Graves Amendment to the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, Efficient Transportation Equity Act (Graves Amendment), 49 U.S.C.S. § 30106, which effectively preempted the vicarious liability of car leasing companies established by N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388 by providing that leasing companies could not be held vicariously liable for damages sustained in car accidents, did not apply to an allegedly injured party's amended complaint filed against a leasing company after the effective date of the Graves Amendment; under 49 U.S.C.S. § 30106(c), the Graves Amendment applied to actions commenced after its effective date and therefore did not apply to the injured party's vicarious liability claim against the leasing company, which was derivative of her underlying action filed before the effective date of the Graves Amendment and related back to the date the underlying action was commenced. Leuchner v Cavanaugh, 820 N.Y.S.2d 786, 13 Misc. 3d 654, 2006 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2294 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2006), aff'd, 42 A.D.3d 893, 837 N.Y.S.2d 887, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8190 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2007).

Graves Amendment, 49 USCS § 30106, did not apply to an accident in which a motorist struck a trailer leased by leasing company because the leasing company was in the business of leasing trailers which had no motor and were not motor vehicles; nothing required the Graves Amendment to be applied to delivery equipment that did not contain a motor. Lee v Rivera (2009, Sup) 242 NYLJ 24, reargument gr 27 Misc. 3d 1201A (Sup 2010).

54. —Automobiles

In an action against a corporation engaged in the business of renting automobiles to be operated on public highways to recover for injuries received by plaintiff through the negligent operation of one of defendant's cars by the renter thereof, an allegation in the answer that defendant carried insurance protecting renter against liability as required by this section constitutes a complete defense, and a motion by defendant for judgment in its favor upon pleadings is properly granted. Atkins v Hertz Drivurself Stations, Inc., 261 N.Y. 352, 185 N.E. 408, 261 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 352, 1933 N.Y. LEXIS 1293 (N.Y. 1933), aff'd, 291 U.S. 641, 54 S. Ct. 437, 78 L. Ed. 1039, 1934 U.S. LEXIS 527 (U.S. 1934).

An individual defendant, renter of automobiles, in the course of his business, furnished a motor car and driver to defendant corporation, instructing the driver to accept orders or instructions from that company, which in turn, pursuant to a contract to furnish certain equipment, turned over the car and driver to defendant. While the motor car was being used in the business of that defendant, under direction of its employee, an accident happened and plaintiff was injured. In this action to recover for such injuries the owner of the car was properly held liable under this section. No liability attached, however, to defendant corporation which had agreed only to furnish equipment and not to do any of the work. Irwin v Klein, 271 N.Y. 477, 3 N.E.2d 601, 271 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 477, 1936 N.Y. LEXIS 1225 (N.Y. 1936).

Lessor of automobile liable by virtue of statute for injuries caused by negligent driving of party who had rented automobile from lessee despite restrictive terms of lease between lessor and lessee which were violated by the fact that the driver was under 25 years of age and unlicensed. Cooperman v Ferrentino, 37 A.D.2d 474, 326 N.Y.S.2d 675, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2912 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1971).

An automobile lessor's insurer was liable on its policy for the defense of a lawsuit for personal injuries caused by a vehicle covered by its policy and leased to the operator of a day camp where, despite the operator's violation of the lease by allowing the vehicle to be driven by a 19-year-old counselor, on camp business, without a chauffeur's license, public policy prevented insurers of automobile rental companies from availing themselves of a lessee's violation of a rental agreement for the purpose of escaping the duty to indemnify persons covered by the policy for liability for injuries to innocent third parties (see Veh & Tr Law §§ 128, 388; Ins Law [former] § 167[2], [2-a], now § 3420[e], [f]). Tom Sawyer Country Day School v Providence Washington Ins. Co., 108 A.D.2d 810, 485 N.Y.S.2d 126, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 43130 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 65 N.Y.2d 608, 494 N.Y.S.2d 1028, 484 N.E.2d 671, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 14577 (N.Y. 1985).

Rental car company was not entitled to summary judgment dismissing wrongful death action brought on behalf of passenger who was killed while riding in rented automobile which was being driven at time of accident by friend of lessee's brother, notwithstanding fact that car was being used beyond lease period by driver who was neither covered by rental agreement nor given permission by lessee, since company failed to meet burden of overcoming presumption that vehicle was being operated with owner's consent (CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1)). Wynn v Middleton, 184 A.D.2d 1019, 584 N.Y.S.2d 684, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8250 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1992).

In action by car passenger injured when driver swerved to avoid deer and lost control of car, passenger was not entitled to partial summary judgment on issue of vicarious liability of owner of car leased to driver where owner's liability under CLS Veh & Tr § 388 derived from alleged negligence of driver, and there were triable issues of fact concerning driver's alleged negligence, including whether emergency doctrine applied. Fitz-Gerald v Rich, 251 A.D.2d 1017, 674 N.Y.S.2d 232, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7043 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

In plaintiff passengers' personal injury action arising from a vehicle accident, the trial court properly denied the summary judgment motions of defendants, lessee and owner, as the deposition testimony they relied upon was insufficient to rebut the statutory presumption of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1) of permissive use by the lessee's brother. Hamilton v Hunt, 288 A.D.2d 86, 733 N.Y.S.2d 153, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10997 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2001).

Because the words "administrators" and "assigns" in an injured party's release of a lessee did not include the lessor, it remained liable under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388 for injuries resulting from the negligence of any person operating its automobile with its permission; therefore, the trial court properly denied summary judgment to the lessor. Morales v Rotino, 27 A.D.3d 433, 812 N.Y.S.2d 582, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2615 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

Because a lessor did not make a such showing warranting "displacement" of the "normally applicable" New York law in a "split-domicile" wrongful death action, N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388 applied to hold the lessor vicariously liable for any liability found against the lessee. Zatuchny v "John Doe", 34 A.D.3d 398, 825 N.Y.S.2d 458, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14127 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2006).

In an action arising out of an automobile accident which occurred while the car was being driven, contrary to the terms of a lease, by the lessee's minor son, it was held that although the lessee of a car is regarded as the owner with respect to liability for negligence under Vehicle and Traffic Law §§ 128 and 388, under Insurance Law § 167 the self-insured lessor was the owner and the lessee's liability insurance policy constituted excess insurance, since a non-owned car was used without permission of the owner. Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v World Wide Rent-A-Car, Inc., 52 Misc. 2d 552, 276 N.Y.S.2d 401, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1176 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1966), modified, 28 A.D.2d 286, 284 N.Y.S.2d 807, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2928 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1967).

Company which was named as "lessee" in car rental agreement, but which merely acted as go-between in arranging for use of car by another company, was not vicariously liable for deaths of 2 pedestrians while wife of other company's employee was driving car, and court would grant motion to dismiss action against it, since it was not actual party to lease, did not sign lease agreement, and had no possession, use or control of car, and was therefore not "owner" within meaning of CLS Veh & Tr §§ 128 and 388. Giardina v Avis Rent A Car, Inc., 135 Misc. 2d 1052, 517 N.Y.S.2d 349, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3149 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1986).

Under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1), rental agency could be found vicariously liable for injuries resulting from the use of one of its rented vehicles, even though the vehicle was driven by an unauthorized driver. Talron Enters. v Garcia, 191 Misc. 2d 634, 743 N.Y.S.2d 833, 2002 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 595 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 2002).

Rental car company was not entitled to summary judgment against the passenger, who was an authorized driver of the vehicle, but had lent the car to an unauthorized driver to operate, because there were issues remaining over whether or not the driver's use of the car was permissive under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388. Diaz v ELRAC, Inc., 14 A.D.3d 428, 789 N.Y.S.2d 116, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 497 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2005).

Summary judgment dismissal of a wife's personal injury complaint, which was premised on the theory that a domestic rental car company, as apparent agent of the Mexican owner and renter of a vehicle, was vicariously liable for the driver's negligence under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388, was affirmed where it was undisputed that the wife's husband was negligent in causing an automobile accident that resulted in the wife's injuries. The Mexican entity that owned and leased the vehicle was in no way negligent, so the wife could not use the doctrine of apparent agency to impose liability on the Mexican entity's domestic parent company; there was no negligence of the company or the Mexican entity for vicarious liability to be applicable. Ashkenazi v Hertz Rent a Car, 18 A.D.3d 584, 795 N.Y.S.2d 624, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5291 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2005).

Driver could not pursue a vicarious liability claim pursuant to N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388 against a lessor of the vehicle that collided with the driver's vehicle because § 388 was preempted by the Graves Amendment, 49 U.S.C.S. § 30106(a), which eliminated the vicarious liability of motor vehicle lessors. Stampolis v Provident Auto Leasing Co., 586 F. Supp. 2d 88, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 91024 (E.D.N.Y. 2008).

55. — — Theft or conversion

Fact that lessee obtained automobile from leasing company through fraudulent means, i. e., use of credit card issued in name of another and a forged or stolen identification card and license, did not relieve leasing company from its statutory liability as owner for injuries which another motorist sustained in collision with leased vehicle; under circumstances, the leased vehicle was being operated by the lessee with the owner's consent; lessee, having put the automobile into the traffic stream and having at his disposal opportunity to check the means by which the automobile was leased, bore responsibility for the injury. Allstate Ins. Co. v Dailey, 47 A.D.2d 375, 367 N.Y.S.2d 87, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9249 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1975), aff'd, 39 N.Y.2d 759, 384 N.Y.S.2d 776, 349 N.E.2d 876, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 2702 (N.Y. 1976).

The victims of an automobile accident involving a rented vehicle could not recover from the lessor/owner or its insurer, even though it was the policy of the state that there should be recourse to a financially responsible defendant for a person injured by the negligent operation of an automobile, where an innocent victim of an accident may not recover from a lessor or other owner when the offending vehicle was being operated without the owner's permission, where the lessee of the rented automobile was guilty of the unauthorized use of a vehicle for a period of some 21 days beyond the term of his rental agreement, and where the lessor/owner made telephone calls to the lessee's relatives, sent letters to him via certified mail, contacted the local police concerning the vehicle, and filed a criminal complaint regarding the lessee's failure to return the vehicle in accordance with the rental agreement. Utica Mut. Ins. Co. v Lahey, 95 A.D.2d 150, 465 N.Y.S.2d 553, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18532 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1983).

Presumption under CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1) that vehicle was being operated with owner's consent was rebutted where (1) rental agreement listed individual lessee as sole authorized driver, (2) before leaving town, lessee parked and locked car on public street near her home, (3) she did not give permission to anyone to use car, and she kept in her possession lone set of keys supplied to her by rental agency, (4) on discovery that car had been stolen, she immediately notified police, (5) police department and Department of Motor Vehicles records indicated that on day before lessee's return, car was involved in collision with another vehicle in which plaintiff was passenger, (6) operator of lessee's car, identified only as "John Doe," abandoned car at scene and was not apprehended, and (6) plaintiff merely offered affirmation from her attorney, who was not person with knowledge of facts. Guerra v Kings Plaza Leasing Corp., 172 A.D.2d 583, 568 N.Y.S.2d 413, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4676 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1991).

Car rental company successfully rebutted strong presumption of vicarious liability under CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1) where (1) police accident report indicated that driver of rented car had fled scene of accident and was unknown, (2) renter stated that car was stolen while she was at work, and (3) plaintiff's suggestion that car might have been operated with renter's permission was mere speculation. Villamil v Budget Rental, 281 A.D.2d 207, 721 N.Y.S.2d 638, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2191 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2001).

56. —Trucks

Where a motorist recovered against a lessee carrier and driver for negligence of its driver in operation of a tractor-trailer truck leased from another carrier in no way connected with its operation, and also against such lessor the latter's liability is solely derivative under this section, and the lessor may recover over against the lessee and driver for any amount it has paid the motorist. Dittman v Davis, 299 N.Y. 601, 86 N.E.2d 175, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 601, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 1066 (N.Y. 1949).

Verdict against lessor and lessee of truck, but which exonerated driver, was not inconsistent where evidence disclosed that truck was loaded by fellow employees of driver and pedestrian was injured by open door of truck. Guadagno v H. S. Trucking, 29 A.D.2d 979, 289 N.Y.S.2d 691, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4197 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1968).

Truck rental agency would be liable to third persons for personal injuries sustained in collision involving truck if driver of truck had implied permission from his employer and from rental agency to be driving truck for nonbusiness purposes outside business hours at time accident occurred. Samuels v Hertz Truck Rental, Inc., 48 A.D.2d 936, 370 N.Y.S.2d 20, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10228 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1975).

Truck lessor's liability policy, executed in New York, excluding coverage of truck being used in business of any person or organization to whom truck is rented was invalid under New York law for failing to require the existence of other insurance sufficient to meet minimum standards of coverage established by financial responsibility laws. Randazzo v Cunningham, 56 A.D.2d 702, 392 N.Y.S.2d 740, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10864 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1977), aff'd, 43 N.Y.2d 937, 403 N.Y.S.2d 894, 374 N.E.2d 1245, 1978 N.Y. LEXIS 1833 (N.Y. 1978).

Where deceased's death occurred when he fell from truck which was being rented by its owner to deceased's employer and being driven by deceased's coemployee, truck owner was not liable for deceased's death to the extent that it resulted from coemployee's conduct in operating vehicle, but owner could be liable insofar as complaint stated cause of action based solely upon independent acts of negligence on owner's part as in maintaining and renting a defective vehicle. Di Bernardo v Heimroth, 58 A.D.2d 344, 396 N.Y.S.2d 904, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12412 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

Lessee of tractor-trailer was entitled to summary judgment dismissing cause of action alleging that it was vicariously liable under CLS Veh & Tr § 388 for negligence of owner-lessor's employee, who was driving tractor-trailer when it collided with plaintiffs' vehicle, as it was not "owner" under CLS Veh & Tr § 128 because it did not have requisite exclusive control during 30 days preceding accident, where tractor-trailer was leased to other companies on at least 3 occasions during that time. La Plant v Cutlip, 258 A.D.2d 769, 685 N.Y.S.2d 840, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1185 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 811, 694 N.Y.S.2d 633, 716 N.E.2d 698, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1844 (N.Y. 1999).

Where an auto renting company leased trucks to bakeries for route coverage and in an accident the driver of the truck, an employee of the bakery, was killed, the renting company and the bakery were not joint tort-feasors and barred from the use of impleader, but the auto renting company who is the registered owner of the truck can be held liable under this section. Elfeld v Burkham Auto Renting Co., 92 N.Y.S.2d 249, 196 Misc. 446, 1949 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2806 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1949).

In the absence of a failure to show that defendant, a truck rental agency, gave express or implied permission for the operation of the vehicle by an unlicensed driver, the truck lessor may validly restrict the operation of its vehicle to licensed drivers only pursuant to the terms of its written rental agreement signed by the lessee. Platt v Hertz Corp., 66 Misc. 2d 505, 321 N.Y.S.2d 613, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1686 (N.Y. App. Term 1971).

Since lessee and lessee's employee were guilty of active negligence and lessor's liability was based on passive negligence and arose by virtue of its ownership of the truck involved in the accident, the lessor was entitled to judgment over and against the lessee and lessee's employee. Campanile v Yoss-Weiss Baking Corp., 129 N.Y.S.2d 616, 1954 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3197 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1954).

Nontrucking use endorsement to trucking firm's liability policy, which excluded coverage when tractor was rented and used in lessee's business without making provision for coverage when lessee was uninsured, was not valid under Veh & Tr § 388 in those instances in which lessee was in fact insured. Conn. Indem. Co. v 21st Century Transp. Co., Inc., 186 F. Supp. 2d 264, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3164 (E.D.N.Y. 2002).

57. —Buses

The owner of a school bus was not liable under this section where the bus had been leased to one who contracted to transport school children, the owner was not a party to the contract, and the negligence of the driver of the bus, if any, was not in the "operation" of the bus. Scalzo v Vincent, 279 A.D. 1141, 113 N.Y.S.2d 218, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6096 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

58. —Joint liability of lessor and lessee

A corporation that rents motor vehicles is not a joint tort feasor with the operator if the corporation has secured the insurance required under this section. Therefore, a release to the corporation is not a bar to an action against the operator. Landau v Hertz Drivurself Stations, Inc., 237 A.D. 141, 260 N.Y.S. 561, 1932 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5292 (N.Y. App. Div. 1932).

The victims of an automobile accident involving a rented vehicle could not recover from the lessor/owner or its insurer, even though it was the policy of the state that there should be recourse to a financially responsible defendant for a person injured by the negligent operation of an automobile, where an innocent victim of an accident may not recover from a lessor or other owner when the offending vehicle was being operated without the owner's permission, where the lessee of the rented automobile was guilty of the unauthorized use of a vehicle for a period of some 21 days beyond the term of his rental agreement, and where the lessor/owner made telephone calls to the lessee's relatives, sent letters to him via certified mail, contacted the local police concerning the vehicle, and filed a criminal complaint regarding the lessee's failure to return the vehicle in accordance with the rental agreement. Utica Mut. Ins. Co. v Lahey, 95 A.D.2d 150, 465 N.Y.S.2d 553, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18532 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1983).

In action to recover for injuries sustained in collision with automobile under lease for 22-month term, court erred in dismissing complaint as against vehicle lessor since (1) fact that term "owner" in CLS Veh & Tr § 128 "includes any lessee . . . having the exclusive use . . . for a period greater than thirty days" does not exclude title holder as owner for purposes of CLS Veh & Tr § 388, which makes vehicle owner jointly and severally liable with operator owner for negligent use of vehicle, and (2) although secured party in whose favor there is security interest in vehicle out of his possession is not deemed owner by virtue of CLS Veh & Tr § 388(3), it was not shown that lease in question was intended merely to create security interest in lessor. Sullivan v Spandau, 186 A.D.2d 641, 589 N.Y.S.2d 49, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11316 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1992).

Although neither public policy nor CLS Veh & Tr §§ 370 and 388 prohibited self-insured rental car agency from disclaiming any part of its liability to injured pedestrian that exceeded amount for which motor vehicle owners were required to be insured and from seeking indemnification for such sums under parties' agreement, public policy barred agency from obtaining indemnification from operator of rental car that hit pedestrian where agency's liability to pedestrian had been fixed settlement with pedestrian for sum that was less than required coverage. Snorac, Inc. v Skura, 273 A.D.2d 886, 709 N.Y.S.2d 311, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6952 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000).

Where an auto renting company leased trucks to bakeries for route coverage and in an accident the driver of the truck, an employee of the bakery, was killed, the renting company and the bakery were not joint tort-feasors and barred from the use of impleader, but the auto renting company who is the registered owner of the truck can be held liable under this section. Elfeld v Burkham Auto Renting Co., 92 N.Y.S.2d 249, 196 Misc. 446, 1949 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2806 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1949).

Evidence sufficient to justify jury verdict against lessee who operated and controlled vehicle at time of accident and immediately prior thereto and lessor-owner, even if jury verdict was founded solely on defective maintenance or an existing defect, since the lessee for a period of over 30 days, is deemed an owner, and the title owner and lessor are jointly and severally liable. Accelerated Trucking Corp. v McLean Trucking Co., 53 Misc. 2d 321, 278 N.Y.S.2d 516, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1886 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1967).

The term "owner" under Vehicle and Traffic Law § 128 includes any lessee having the exclusive use for a period greater than 30 days, and does not exclude the title holder as an owner for purposes of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 and under Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 subdivision 3 the liability of the lessor and lessee of an automobile is joint and several. Location Auto Leasing Corp. v Lembo Corp., 62 Misc. 2d 856, 310 N.Y.S.2d 365, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1689 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1970).

59. —Action by lessor against lessee or driver

Self-insured car rental companies are not immune from anti-subrogation principles; thus, indemnification clause in rental agreement which sought to disclaim self-insured car rental company's duty to provide primary insurance to renters up to statutory minimum liability limits, and to assign risk to renters themselves, was unenforceable to that extent. ELRAC, Inc. v Ward, 96 N.Y.2d 58, 724 N.Y.S.2d 692, 748 N.E.2d 1, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 695 (N.Y. 2001).

Lessor of truck was entitled to indemnification from lessee where employee of lessee had secured judgment against lessor for injuries received when struck by the truck through the negligence of lessee's driver, where lease provided that lessor would maintain indemnity insurance protecting all parties from damages caused by operation of truck and would pay all expenses of the operation of the truck except wages. Gorham v Arons, 282 A.D. 147, 121 N.Y.S.2d 669, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4420 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953), aff'd, 306 N.Y. 782, 118 N.E.2d 600, 306 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 782, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 1128 (N.Y. 1954).

Where the lessor of a truck settled a tort action resulting from the death of a pedestrian killed by the truck driven by the lessee's agent, where the settlement was for an amount in excess of the coverage specifically provided by the lessor to the lessee, where the lessor's liability was derivative, arising from a statutory obligation imposed by Veh & Tr Law § 388 and not from the lessor's negligence, and where the lessee was the primary and active tortfeasor, the lessee was liable in indemnity to the lessor for the amount of the settlement in excess of the coverage provided by the lessor. Hertz Corp. v Dahill Moving & Storage Co., 79 A.D.2d 589, 434 N.Y.S.2d 386, 1980 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS

In a personal injury action arising out of an automobile accident, there was no basis to impose vicarious liability upon the lessee of a taxi pursuant to Veh & Tr Law § 388, based upon the taxi driver's active negligence where the lessee was at most a lessee for periods of 12 hours and thus could not be deemed an owner for purposes of that section unless he had exclusive use of the vehicle for period greater than 30 days pursuant to Veh & Tr Law § 128. Simon v El Service Corp., 85 A.D.2d 556, 452 N.Y.S.2d 407, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16342 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1981).

Vehicle lessor was entitled to summary judgment on its common-law indemnification claim against lessee for sums it paid to third party, where it submitted evidence that lessee struck rear end of third party's vehicle while it was stopped, and lessee failed to offer any explanation for accident. ELRAC, Inc. v Beckford, 250 A.D.2d 725, 673 N.Y.S.2d 192, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5784 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

In personal injury action arising from accident involving vehicle leased from defendant by plaintiff, personally and as president of closely-held corporation, and operated by plaintiff's son (who was also principal member of lessee corporation), plaintiff was not entitled to summary judgment on counterclaims for common-law and contractual indemnification, where accident occurred after lease term ended and before parties entered into 2-month lease extension retroactive to expiration of original term, and triable issues of fact existed as to whether, inter alia, plaintiff complied with conditions of termination as stated in lease and whether accident occurred while he was still lessee and therefore co-owner of vehicle under CLS Veh & Tr § 128. Kovacs v Andy's Carpentry Co., 270 A.D.2d 394, 705 N.Y.S.2d 254, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2976 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2000).

In personal injury action by lessee of rented van that went off road while lessee's friend was driving it, lessor's enforcement of indemnity provision of rental agreement did not violate public policy as embodied in antisubrogation rule propounded in Penn Gen. Ins. Co. v. Austin Co., 68 NY2d 465; thus, lessor's counterclaim for indemnity remained valid in respect to loss in excess of policy limits of insurance provided in rental agreement. Layaw v Maguire Ford Lincoln Mercury, 164 Misc. 2d 113, 623 N.Y.S.2d 731, 1995 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 65 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1995), aff'd, 219 A.D.2d 73, 639 N.Y.S.2d 544, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2788 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

Since lessee and lessee's employee were guilty of active negligence and lessor's liability was based on passive negligence and arose by virtue of its ownership of the truck involved in the accident, the lessor was entitled to judgment over and against the lessee and lessee's employee. Campanile v Yoss-Weiss Baking Corp., 129 N.Y.S.2d 616, 1954 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3197 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1954).

The vicarious liability imposed on an owner by the statute leaves him with a claim over against the active wrongdoer and against the active wrongdoer's employer. Roscher v Cecere, 132 N.Y.S.2d 840, 1954 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2701 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1954).

Lessor's suit against a lessee of a vehicle seeking indemnification for damages arising from the vehicle use by an unauthorized driver was dismissed because the amounts paid by the lessor for both bodily injury and property damage were below the minimum required by N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 370(1), and thus lessor was not allowed to maintain the instant action; it was a natural extension of the holdings of the Court of Appeals of New York to require a plaintiff rental car company to maintain statutory minimum for every permissive user, whether explicitly authorized to drive the vehicle or not. ELRAC, LLC v Manzo, 957 N.Y.S.2d 826, 38 Misc. 3d 646, 2012 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 5515 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 2012).

60. —Effect of lease terms

Where a tractor and trailer are leased by the owner on a one-trip lease basis, and the lease agreement is ambiguous as to whether the lessor's driver has permission to use and operate the equipment for purposes of seeking and finding a return trip load, the question of whether he has such permission is a question for the jury. Leotta v Plessinger, 8 N.Y.2d 449, 209 N.Y.S.2d 304, 171 N.E.2d 454, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 837 (N.Y. 1960), reh'g denied, 9 N.Y.2d 688, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1809 (N.Y. 1961).

Lessor of truck was entitled to indemnification from lessee where employee of lessee had secured judgment against lessor for injuries received when struck by the truck through the negligence of lessee's driver, where lease provided that lessor would maintain indemnity insurance protecting all parties from damages caused by operation of truck and would pay all expenses of the operation of the truck except wages. Gorham v Arons, 282 A.D. 147, 121 N.Y.S.2d 669, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4420 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953), aff'd, 306 N.Y. 782, 118 N.E.2d 600, 306 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 782, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 1128 (N.Y. 1954).

In personal injury action against car rental company based on its vicarious liability as owner of vehicle, brought by car renter for injuries sustained while her husband drove car and she was passenger, provision which required plaintiff as renter to indemnify rental company applied to any action brought against rental company, whether by renter or by third party; moreover, even if provision applied only to actions brought by third parties, plaintiff commenced action in her capacity as third party victim and not in her capacity as renter. Morris v Snappy Car Rental, 189 A.D.2d 115, 595 N.Y.S.2d 577, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2928 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), reh'g denied, 193 A.D.2d 1148, 600 N.Y.S.2d 673, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5875 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1993), aff'd, 84 N.Y.2d 21, 614 N.Y.S.2d 362, 637 N.E.2d 253, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 1297 (N.Y. 1994).

In personal injury action against car rental company based on its vicarious liability as owner of vehicle, brought by car renter for injuries sustained while her husband drove car and she was passenger, provision which required plaintiff as renter to indemnify rental company in any action brought against rental company, whether by renter or by third party, was not void as against public policy; however, indemnity provision could not deprive plaintiff of her right as injured party to have recourse against financially responsible party under CLS Veh & Tr § 388. Morris v Snappy Car Rental, 189 A.D.2d 115, 595 N.Y.S.2d 577, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2928 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), reh'g denied, 193 A.D.2d 1148, 600 N.Y.S.2d 673, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5875 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1993), aff'd, 84 N.Y.2d 21, 614 N.Y.S.2d 362, 637 N.E.2d 253, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 1297 (N.Y. 1994).

In personal injury action by plaintiff who was involved in accident while passenger in vehicle leased from defendant, defendant was not entitled to summary judgment based on indemnification claus in lease where indemnification clause would permit lessor to avoid all liability, rendering it void as against public policy behind CLS Veh & Tr § 388, and lease did not provide for modification to comport with state law or public policy. Griffin v Fun Jung La, 229 A.D.2d 468, 645 N.Y.S.2d 528, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7776 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

Enforcement of clause in car rental agreement, purporting to prohibit use of rental car in New York, was precluded on public policy grounds as "unreasonable and unrealistic" in that defendant lessor knew or should have known of great likelihood that car rented in Massachusetts would be driven to neighboring New York; thus, lessor of car was not entitled to summary judgment absolving it of responsibility under CLS Veh & Tr § 388. Brown v Agency Rent-A-Car, 234 A.D.2d 82, 650 N.Y.S.2d 220, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12395 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

Car rental company was entitled to summary judgment on its cross claim for contractual indemnity against individual defendant in personal injury action where (1) rental agreement provided that individual defendant, as lessee, would indemnify company for all claims arising from use of rental vehicle, (2) individual defendant was involved in accident while driving rental vehicle, (3) company did not violate CLS CPLR § 4544, and (4) company was not required, as self-insurer, to provide at least minimum uninsured motorist insurance coverage under CLS Veh & Tr § 388, because § 388 was designed to protect injured persons, and individual defendant was not injured person. Cuthbert v Pederson, 266 A.D.2d 255, 698 N.Y.S.2d 254, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11307 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

Policy underlying CLS Veh & Tr § 388 was not undercut by enforcement of indemnification clause of rental agreement, and defendant lessor was entitled to summary judgment on issue of contractual indemnity against defendant lessee, where it was undisputed that member of lessee's family was driving rental vehicle when accident occurred, injuring pedestrian. Ward v ELRAC, Inc., 270 A.D.2d 254, 704 N.Y.S.2d 274, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2506 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. dismissed, 95 N.Y.2d 880, 715 N.Y.S.2d 214, 738 N.E.2d 361, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3770 (N.Y. 2000), modified, 96 N.Y.2d 58, 724 N.Y.S.2d 692, 748 N.E.2d 1, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 695 (N.Y. 2001).

Under Veh & Traf L § 388, automobile lessor's insurer had obligation to defend lessee's son in personal injury action, despite lease clause purporting to restrict insurance coverage to persons named therein, where, at time of accident, son was operating leased vehicle with lessee's permission. Sternberg v Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 72 Misc. 2d 655, 340 N.Y.S.2d 550, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1282 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1972).

No public policy was violated by private contract making rental customer's insurance primary and lessor's insurance secondary, and legislative intent of CLS Veh & Tr §§ 388 and 370 was completely fulfilled, where rental customer was free to either bargain for lower rate by relying on her own coverage or purchase lessor's coverage at slightly higher rental fee or, if rental customer had no coverage, then lessor would provide minimum coverage required by state's financial responsibility law. Miller v Sullivan, 174 Misc. 2d 690, 666 N.Y.S.2d 892, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 553 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

Provision in automobile liability insurance policy on tractor-truck, containing "truckmen's endorsement", exempting from coverage accidents which occur while automobile is being used in business of any person or organization to whom automobile is rented, is against New York public policy by reason of absence of limitation to such provision to effect that provision would only apply when tractor is in custody of lessee under written lease agreement which requires lessee to provide insurance covering tractor. Transport Ins. Co. v Protective Ins. Co., 647 F. Supp. 1381, 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17765 (N.D.N.Y. 1986).

61. — —Designated driver

Lessor of automobile liable by virtue of statute for injuries caused by negligent driving of party who had rented automobile from lessee despite restrictive terms of lease between lessor and lessee which were violated by the fact that the driver was under 25 years of age and unlicensed. Cooperman v Ferrentino, 37 A.D.2d 474, 326 N.Y.S.2d 675, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2912 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1971).

Fine print on reverse side of car rental agreement which limited permissive use of vehicle to certain drivers, and which varied with limitations contained in larger type on front of agreement, was ineffective to cut off lessor's liability as owner of vehicle where accident involving rented auto occurred while being operated by person as to whom small-print exclusion applied. Allstate Ins. Co. v La Perta, 42 A.D.2d 104, 345 N.Y.S.2d 138, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3916 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1973).

A defendant, which rented an automobile to a third party under an agreement providing that no one other than said lessee would drive the vehicle, was not liable to plaintiff where said lessee turned the automobile over to another, who, while driving it, collided with plaintiff's automobile. Stapleton v Hertz Drivurself Stations, Inc., 225 N.Y.S. 661, 131 Misc. 52, 1927 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1238 (N.Y. App. Term 1927).

In an action arising out of an automobile accident which occurred while the car was being driven, contrary to the terms of a lease, by the lessee's minor son, it was held that although the lessee of a car is regarded as the owner with respect to liability for negligence under Vehicle and Traffic Law §§ 128 and 388, under Insurance Law § 167 the self-insured lessor was the owner and the lessee's liability insurance policy constituted excess insurance, since a non-owned car was used without permission of the owner. Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v World Wide Rent-A-Car, Inc., 52 Misc. 2d 552, 276 N.Y.S.2d 401, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1176 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1966), modified, 28 A.D.2d 286, 284 N.Y.S.2d 807, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2928 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1967).

Where motor vehicle rental agreement contained a condition on the back of the agreement to the effect that the vehicle would not be driven by anyone other than an employee of the lessee, which print was very small and very difficult to read, such condition did not rebut the presumption that the car was being driven with the permission of the owner and did not preclude liability of the lessor where the car was involved in an accident while being driven by one other than an employee of the lessee. Febbraro v Hertz Corp., 64 Misc. 2d 794, 315 N.Y.S.2d 702, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1182 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1970).

That lessee allowed another person to drive commercially rented vehicle, even a person who was not licensed, was not enough to allow lessor to disclaim as a self-insurer of vehicle. Banner Casualty Co. v Lazar, 81 Misc. 2d 360, 366 N.Y.S.2d 314, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2389 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1975).

Operator of vehicle was not driving car with permission, express or implied of automobile dealer, where dealer loaned car to operator's wife under agreement providing that wife would not sublet or loan car to any third person, nor could automobile dealer's insurance carrier be held liable as contract of insurance specifically provided that policy would not cover liability resulting from operation of vehicle that was "rented to others", such that insurance company plainly did not undertake to insure rental agency, but instead sought to insure liability arising from automobile dealer's garage operations. Reliance Ins. Co. v Calderon, 685 F. Supp. 72, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4439 (S.D.N.Y. 1988).

62. Bailment of vehicle

A baking corporation maintaining a truck, keeping it in a garage and using it for deliveries with the permission of the owner was legally using the truck within the meaning of this section and the owner may be held liable for negligent operation of the truck by the legal user. Elfeld v Burkham Auto Renting Co., 299 N.Y. 336, 87 N.E.2d 285, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 336, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 940 (N.Y. 1949).

Company which was not named in car rental agreement could be said to be "bailee" of car within meaning of vicarious liability statute, where it was intended that company would have exclusive use of car, but company was not liable as "owner," and was entitled to dismissal of personal injury action against it, although its employee had exclusive use of car for more than 10 months; rental was on monthly basis and could have been terminated at end of any designated period, and thus there was no possessory right "under a lease or otherwise" for more than 30 days, as required by CLS Veh & Tr § 128. Giardina v Avis Rent A Car, Inc., 135 Misc. 2d 1052, 517 N.Y.S.2d 349, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3149 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1986).

In a negligence suit brought by an injured driver against a car manufacturer, its finance company, and a car dealer, their motion to dismiss the complaint was denied since the loaning of a vehicle that was involved in a collision was not a lease or a rental under the Graves Amendment, 42 U.S.C.S. § 30106, entitling them to the protection from vicarious liability under the Graves Amendment. Zizersky v Life Quality Motor Sales, Inc., 866 N.Y.S.2d 501, 21 Misc. 3d 871, 240 N.Y.L.J. 82, 2008 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 5975 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2008).

The negligence of the bailee operator coupled with the owner's permission to drive on a public highway is the basis of the owner's liability under this section. Goschar v Bauer, 13 N.Y.S.2d 328, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2026 (N.Y. City Ct. 1939).

As to third persons, a bailor, under this section, is also made liable for the negligence of a bailee. Kurzon v Union R. Co., 21 N.Y.S.2d 310, 1940 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1916 (N.Y. City Ct. 1940).

Supermarket offering valet parking through an independent contractor was not entitled to summary judgment on a personal injury complaint and cross claims involving a valet-driven vehicle. The vehicle's owner, whose liability was purely vicarious, was presumptively entitled to common-law defense and indemnification; moreover, public policy supported a theory of ostensible agency or apparent authority because an auto business exclusion precluded coverage under the vehicle owner's insurance policy. Berger v Rokeach, 58 Misc. 3d 827, 63 N.Y.S.3d 835, 2017 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4375 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2017).

63. Insurance coverage

In an action against a corporation, engaged in the business of renting automobiles to be operated on public highways, to recover for injuries received by plaintiff through the negligent operation of one of defendant's cars by the renter thereof, an allegation in the answer that defendant carried insurance protecting renter against liability as required by this section constitutes a complete defense, and a motion by defendant for judgment in its favor upon pleadings is properly granted. Atkins v Hertz Drivurself Stations, Inc., 261 N.Y. 352, 185 N.E. 408, 261 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 352, 1933 N.Y. LEXIS 1293 (N.Y. 1933), aff'd, 291 U.S. 641, 54 S. Ct. 437, 78 L. Ed. 1039, 1934 U.S. LEXIS 527 (U.S. 1934).

Although, ordinarily, whether a defendant has or has not obtained liability insurance is irrelevant and the introduction of evidence as to insurance coverage is highly prejudicial, such evidence is admissible where it has bearing upon whether or not the vehicle, at the time of the accident, was being operated with the owner's permission. Leotta v Plessinger, 8 N.Y.2d 449, 209 N.Y.S.2d 304, 171 N.E.2d 454, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 837 (N.Y. 1960), reh'g denied, 9 N.Y.2d 688, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1809 (N.Y. 1961).

Non-trucking-use exclusion referring to lessee's contractual obligation to obtain business coverage, but not expressly providing that exclusion was only operative if lessee had business use liability coverage in effect for accident in question, was not valid because lessee's contractual obligation might be insufficient to provide coverage if lessee breached contract by not having insurance in effect at time of accident. Royal Indem. Co. v Providence Wash. Ins. Co., 92 N.Y.2d 653, 684 N.Y.S.2d 470, 707 N.E.2d 425, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4141 (N.Y. 1998).

A defendant lessor was exempt from liability by reason of carrying insurance pursuant to this section, which inured to the benefit of lessee, and the question as to the liability of the defendant lessor was improperly submitted to the jury. Mauzer v Larmar Auto Co., 243 A.D. 610, 277 N.Y.S. 625, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7311 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 268 N.Y. 570, 198 N.E. 409, 268 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 570, 1935 N.Y. LEXIS 1038 (N.Y. 1935).

This section does not provide coverage to an employee or permittee of the owner of an automobile. The coverage required by this section is coverage of the owner as assured for the acts of his employee or permittee. Kuhn v Auto Cab Mut. Indem. Co., 244 A.D. 272, 279 N.Y.S. 60, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5806 (N.Y. App. Div. 1935), aff'd, 270 N.Y. 587, 1 N.E.2d 343, 270 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 587, 1936 N.Y. LEXIS 1643 (N.Y. 1936).

A mother who resides in the same household with her son, while operating the son's automobile, must be presumed to be operating it with his permission, so as to be covered by his liability insurance and not eligible to sue the Motor Vehicle Accident Indemnification Corporation under § 618 of the Insurance Law. Zuckerman v Motor Vehicle Acci. Indemnification Corp., 13 A.D.2d 574, 212 N.Y.S.2d 179, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12207 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

64. —Insurers

Self-insured automobile rental company is subject to same minimum liability insurance requirements as companies that purchase insurance policies or post surety bonds under CLS Veh & Tr § 370(1). ELRAC, Inc. v Ward, 96 N.Y.2d 58, 724 N.Y.S.2d 692, 748 N.E.2d 1, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 695 (N.Y. 2001).

Judgments in prior actions against a city and one of its employees, for negligent operation of a city automobile, determining that the city had no power to consent to the use of such vehicle for pleasure purposes so as to subject it to liability under this section, are not res judicata as to whether there was permission to use the vehicle under a policy of automobile liability insurance issued to the city and covering said vehicle. Fox v Employers' Liability Assurance Corp., 239 A.D. 671, 268 N.Y.S. 536, 1934 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10914 (N.Y. App. Div. 1934).

The provisions of this section did not render an insurer under an automobile liability policy liable where the insured had sold the car some 23 days before the accident but had left his license plates on the car. Phoenix Ins. Co. v Guthiel, 1 A.D.2d 99, 147 N.Y.S.2d 341, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3621 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1955), aff'd, 2 N.Y.2d 584, 161 N.Y.S.2d 874, 141 N.E.2d 909, 1957 N.Y. LEXIS 1089 (N.Y. 1957).

A default judgment obtained against the driver of an automobile for injuries sustained by plaintiffs does not establish that he was driving the car without the consent of its owner within the meaning of this section so as to entitle the owner's insurer to summary judgment, on principles of res judicata, in a subsequent action by plaintiffs to enforce liability of the insurer under an omnibus coverage clause in the policy. Manard v Hardware Mut. Casualty Co., 12 A.D.2d 29, 207 N.Y.S.2d 807, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6780 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1960), reh'g denied, 12 A.D.2d 891, 212 N.Y.S.2d 1020, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13341 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1961).

Plaintiff car rental agency was entitled to summary judgment directing defendant insurer to pay proportionate share of its litigation expenses in defending underlying personal injury action, where defendant's insured had rented van from plaintiff to transport her family members to family reunion and, although she informed plaintiff that she would not actually be traveling in van and she was not in van at time of accident, complained-of injuries arose out of her "use" of non-owned vehicle within meaning of policy issued by defendant in that she had agreed with her friend (who was sole authorized driver) and other passengers to use van for purpose for which it was rented. Hertz Corp. v GEICO, 250 A.D.2d 181, 683 N.Y.S.2d 483, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12917 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998), app. denied, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5215 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't Apr. 22, 1999), app. dismissed, 93 N.Y.2d 1040, 697 N.Y.S.2d 568, 719 N.E.2d 929, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 2181 (N.Y. 1999).

Plaintiff injured in motor vehicle accident involving taxi cab was entitled to summary judgment declaring that cab owner's insurer was required to provide liability insurance protection to owner under CLS Veh & Tr § 388 for any injuries sustained by plaintiff as result of cab passengers' negligence use of cab where (1) passengers' act of opening cab door in order to exit was "use and operation" of cab under § 388, (2) thus, owner would be liable for plaintiff's injuries if passengers' "use and operation" were negligent, and (3) under liability policy issued by insurer to owner, insurer was required to provide coverage to owner under such circumstances. Cohn v Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 286 A.D.2d 699, 730 N.Y.S.2d 152, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8548 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2001).

A motor vehicle liability insurer was not liable on a policy issued to the owner for its negligent operation by a third person in New York State where the policy was issued to the owner in Iowa and the car was neither principally garaged nor principally operated in New York and the owner was not in the car at the time of the accident since, under the governing law of Iowa, there was no insurance coverage where the owner was not the driver or accompanying the driver. Stobinsky v Kyser, 42 Misc. 2d 53, 247 N.Y.S.2d 567, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2036 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1964).

Where a bus company which had purchased a bus from another bus line was loaned a different bus by the seller until the one purchased was ready for delivery, the seller's liability insurer was not a person for whom the protection of this section was intended and could not avoid a substantial part of its obligation under its insurance contract. Singerman Bus Corp. v American Fidelity Fire Ins. Co., 44 Misc. 2d 4, 252 N.Y.S.2d 780, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1620 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1964).

In an action arising out of an automobile accident which occurred while the car was being driven, contrary to the terms of a lease, by the lessee's minor son, it was held that although the lessee of a car is regarded as the owner with respect to liability for negligence under Vehicle and Traffic Law §§ 128 and 388, under Insurance Law § 167 the self-insured lessor was the owner and the lessee's liability insurance policy constituted excess insurance, since a non-owned car was used without permission of the owner. Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v World Wide Rent-A-Car, Inc., 52 Misc. 2d 552, 276 N.Y.S.2d 401, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1176 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1966), modified, 28 A.D.2d 286, 284 N.Y.S.2d 807, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2928 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1967).

Where a tractor was hauling a trailer, if the driver of the tractor was not the owner of the tractor, but merely the driver of such vehicle, he would be separately covered as an additional insured under a policy covering the trailer by virtue of the omnibus clause mandated by statute, the Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 as implemented by the regulations of the Insurance Department. Hiscock v Kuinlan, 62 Misc. 2d 842, 310 N.Y.S.2d 331, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1741 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1970).

Under Veh & Traf L § 388, automobile lessor's insurer had obligation to defend lessee's son in personal injury action, despite lease clause purporting to restrict insurance coverage to persons named therein, where, at time of accident, son was operating leased vehicle with lessee's permission. Sternberg v Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 72 Misc. 2d 655, 340 N.Y.S.2d 550, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1282 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1972).

The spousal exclusion clauses found in the Vehicle and Traffic Law (§ 388, subd 4) and the Insurance Law (§ 167, subd 3), to the effect that no policy shall be deemed to insure against any liability of an insured because of injuries to his spouse, are inapplicable to payments made by an insurer under the no-fault insurance provisions (Insurance Law, §§ 670–678) to the wife of the operator of a car which hit a utility pole since the no-fault law did not require payment because of any liabiity of the insured, but, rather, the obligation of the insured arose by reason of the law's provisions and their legislatively mandated incorporation into its policy with the insured; payment under no-fault is to be made irrespective of the insured's fault and liability whereas the statutory spousal exclusion is applicable only when an insured seeks indemnification for injuries to his spouse sustained as a result of his negligence. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v State, 94 Misc. 2d 676, 405 N.Y.S.2d 945, 1978 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2295 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1978).

Self-insured car rental company was required to provide minimum coverage for renters of its automobiles, and thus was precluded from enforcing rental agreement to extent that agreement denied coverage to renter up to statutory amount and required renter to indemnify it for liability that fell within statutory amount. Worldwide Ins. Co. v United States Capital Ins. Co., 181 Misc. 2d 480, 693 N.Y.S.2d 901, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 314 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1999).

65. —Particular policy provisions

This section does not require that all policies of liability insurance issued to the owner of a motor vehicle afford coverage not only to the owner for his vicarious liability created by the statute but in addition to every user with permission as an additional insured. General Acci. Fire & Life Assurance Corp. v Piazza, 4 N.Y.2d 659, 176 N.Y.S.2d 976, 152 N.E.2d 236, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 886 (N.Y. 1958).

Where plaintiff was injured while riding in a police vehicle driven by a fellow officer that was struck by an underinsured vehicle, the fellow officer's insurer was not required to provide plaintiff supplementary uninsured/underinsured motorist coverage because a police vehicle was not a "motor vehicle" for purposes of mandatory underinsured motorist coverage under N.Y. Ins. Law § 3420(f)(2)(a). Matter of State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v Fitzgerald, 25 N.Y.3d 799, 38 N.E.3d 325, 16 N.Y.S.3d 796, 2015 N.Y. LEXIS 1526 (N.Y. 2015).

Supplementary uninsured/underinsured motorist (SUM) endorsement prescribed by N.Y. Ins. Law § 3420(f)(2)(a) exempts police vehicles from its definition of the term "motor vehicle" absent a specific provision to the contrary in a given SUM endorsement. Matter of State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v Fitzgerald, 25 N.Y.3d 799, 38 N.E.3d 325, 16 N.Y.S.3d 796, 2015 N.Y. LEXIS 1526 (N.Y. 2015).

In an action brought under the Insurance Law, § 109, the terms and conditions of an omnibus coverage clause extending coverage afforded by the policy to a named assured, "to any person . . . legally responsible for operation of such automobiles, provided such use or operation is with permission of named assured," were not changed or modified by a rider attached to comply with requirements of the Insurance Law, § 109, and this section, which extends the policy to protect the named assured "against liability and responsibility for damages resulting from negligence in operation of such motor vehicles . . . in business of such owner or otherwise, by any person legally using or operating same with permission, express or implied, of such owner." The clauses insure the operator of the vehicle only when he is lawfully using the vehicle in the business of the owner municipality or with the municipality's permission, express or implied. Fox v Employers' Liability Assurance Corp., 243 A.D. 325, 276 N.Y.S. 917, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7062 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 267 N.Y. 609, 196 N.E. 604, 267 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 609, 1935 N.Y. LEXIS 1331 (N.Y. 1935).

In an action for declaratory judgment as to which of defendants could be liable to plaintiff for the payment of any judgment obtained against the driver of an automobile in an underlying negligence action involving a one-car collision, defendant insurance company would be required to defend and indemnify the driver since the insured's policy contained a "replacement vehicle" clause, permissive use of the vehicle by the driver could be presumed, and the insurance company failed to introduce any evidence that its insured did not own the automobile in the accident or that the vehicle was not a newly acquired automobile replacing the insured vehicle within the meaning of that clause. Chang v Utica Mut. Ins. Co., 79 A.D.2d 626, 433 N.Y.S.2d 629, 1980 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13975 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1980).

Because the lessee of a vehicle procured the insurance from an insurer that was required by N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(4) and in compliance with the vehicle lease agreement, the lessor was not required to maintain primary insurance coverage for the subject vehicle; consequently, the trial court properly declared that the insurer had the primary obligation to defend and indemnify the lessor and the lessee in an underlying personal injury action. DePascale v Wolkoff, 37 A.D.3d 399, 829 N.Y.S.2d 633, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1566 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2007).

Incorporation of the provisions of Vehicle & Traffic Law former § 59 into an insurance policy pursuant to Insurance Law § 167(2) did not give any specific primary action on the contract against an insurer to an injured party. Liability can only be fixed in an action against the owner of the vehicle involved. Bornhurst v Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co., 12 Misc. 2d 149, 175 N.Y.S.2d 542, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3115 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1958), rev'd, 11 A.D.2d 632, 200 N.Y.S.2d 955, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10055 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1960).

Subdivision (2) of § 167 of the Insurance Law as well as this section of the Vehicle and Traffic Law require that all liability insurance cover the insured against liability incurred under § 388, but as long as the policy provides that coverage nothing in either of these sections require that it use the precise language of the statutes. Singerman Bus Corp. v American Fidelity Fire Ins. Co., 44 Misc. 2d 4, 252 N.Y.S.2d 780, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1620 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1964).

Where the coverage extended by an insurer to the owner of taxicabs and his drivers included damages "resulting from the use of the vehicle," the insurer was required to defend any action brought against the owner or his drivers as the result of the negligence of a passenger in opening the cab's door with which another vehicle collided. Epstein v Kernon, 68 Misc. 2d 29, 326 N.Y.S.2d 137, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1149 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1971).

Provision contained in motor vehicle rental agreement, limiting lessor's liability to insurance coverage purchased by lessee as part of rental transaction, did not violate law or public policy. Layaw v Maguire Ford Lincoln Mercury, 164 Misc. 2d 113, 623 N.Y.S.2d 731, 1995 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 65 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1995), aff'd, 219 A.D.2d 73, 639 N.Y.S.2d 544, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2788 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

By virtue of this section and by the Insurance Law § 109, subd 3 and 4 (now § 167), a policy of automobile liability insurance in New York must be read as containing a provision insuring the owner against liability for personal injury or property damage resulting from negligence in the operation of a motor vehicle "in the business of such owner or otherwise, by any person legally using or operating the same with the permission, express or implied, of such owner." (American) Lumbermens Mut. (American) Lumbermens Mut. Casualty Co. v Timms & Howard, Inc., 108 F.2d 497, 1939 U.S. App. LEXIS 2598 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1939).

66. — —Exclusions

Former § 2, sub 18 and former §§ 59 and 94-g of the Vehicle and Traffic Law and the Safety-Responsibility Act (Vehicle and Traffic Law, former Art 6-A) do not require a policy which excluded from coverage owners and employees of the owners of hired automobiles to read contrary to its meaning, where the owner, a resident of Ohio, had leased a truck to and operated it for a Massachusetts corporation and an accident occurred in this state. Chesher v United States Casualty Co., 303 N.Y. 589, 105 N.E.2d 99, 303 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 589, 1952 N.Y. LEXIS 786 (N.Y. 1952).

Non-trucking-use exclusion from coverage in insurance policy obtained by owner of commercial vehicle, which did not expressly state that it was effective only if vehicle's lessee was required to obtain insurance coverage, violated New York law and public policy even if insurer established that its standard underwriting policy was to not issue policies containing such exclusion unless vehicle owner provided proof that vehicle's lessee had insurance coverage. Royal Indem. Co. v Providence Wash. Ins. Co., 92 N.Y.2d 653, 684 N.Y.S.2d 470, 707 N.E.2d 425, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4141 (N.Y. 1998).

The clause required to be inserted in automobile liability insurance policies by § 167 of the Insurance Law, with respect to liability while the insured vehicle is being operated with the insured owner's permission, is designed to protect car owners who are affected by the provisions of this section making them liable for negligence of one who is operating the vehicle with their permission and was never intended to extend liability of the insurer to cover negligence of one to whom the car has been sold or otherwise transferred. Mason v Allstate Ins. Co., 12 A.D.2d 138, 209 N.Y.S.2d 104, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6284 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1960).

Automobile insurance policy was valid where it provided limited compulsory bodily injury liability coverage for tractor, even though it contained endorsement excluding coverage for, inter alia, claims arising when tractor or any trailer attached to it was "used to carry property in any business," since policy also provided that endorsement was "not applicable to any compulsory coverages," and it provided excess liability coverage for nontrucking operations. Hanover Ins. Co. v Connor, 232 A.D.2d 925, 648 N.Y.S.2d 839, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11263 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

A policy insuring against liability of a tractor, and another company's policy insuring against the liability of a trailer each contained void exclusions as to the use of the vehicle with another vehicle not insured by that company. Held: each insurer was liable to its insured, and cannot cross-claim against each other, but subrogation was not precluded. Mondelli v Harrison Hub, Bed & Spring Co., 10 Misc. 2d 883, 172 N.Y.S.2d 931, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3549 (N.Y. City Ct. 1958).

Exclusionary clause in truck lessor's nontrucking use policy, providing "bobtail" coverage for truck cab use only and excluding coverage when trailer is attached to truck and is being used to carry property in any business, was invalid as against state's public policy requiring existence of insurance to meet minimum standards of liability coverage, and policy would accordingly be construed to provide coverage whether vehicle was being used in lessor's or lessee's business at time of accident. Planet Ins. Co. v Gunther, 160 Misc. 2d 67, 608 N.Y.S.2d 763, 1993 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 573 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1993).

Truckmen's Endorsement, providing that insurance does not apply while insured vehicle is used to carry property in any business or while insured vehicle is being used in business of any person or organization to whom vehicle is rented or while on route for such purpose, is against public policy of New York as embodied in CLS Veh & Tr L § 388, and thus is unenforceable. Transport Ins. Co. v Protective Ins. Co., 696 F. Supp. 870, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14764 (S.D.N.Y.), aff'd, 868 F.2d 1267, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 18327 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1988).

Exclusion in "bobtail" policy which (under facts of case) operated to defeat coverage because subleasing carrier's insurers refused to extend coverage, thereby creating "gap" in coverage for legal liability accruing to owner under CLS Veh & Tr § 388, was invalid given potential disclaimer of coverage by third party sublessor whose load truck was going to pick up at time of accident. R. E. Turner, Inc. v Connecticut Indem. Co., 925 F. Supp. 139, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6647 (W.D.N.Y. 1996).

Tractor owner's insurer must cover $65,000 environmental cleanup bill resulting from crash of tractor and diesel fuel spill, even though "bobtail" exclusion purports to defeat coverage, because New York public policy as stated in CLS Veh & Tr Law § 388 places ultimate insuring responsibility on owner of vehicle and carrier which issued coverage allowing insured owner's vehicle to be operated on New York's roads when not covered by other insurance, and carrier has not established applicability of any other insurance. R. E. Turner, Inc. v Connecticut Indem. Co., 925 F. Supp. 139, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6647 (W.D.N.Y. 1996).

"Bobtail" exclusion of coverage in liability policy issued to truck lessor (excluding from coverage those instances in which lessor's vehicle was used in business of lessee) was invalid because it contravened public policy as contained in CLS Veh & Tr § 388 and CLS Ins § 3420(a); policy would be interpreted as if bobtail exclusion did not exist. Royal Indem. Co. v Providence Wash. Ins. Co., 952 F. Supp. 125, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1267 (N.D.N.Y.), amended, 966 F. Supp. 149, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9102 (N.D.N.Y. 1997), aff'd, 172 F.3d 38, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 10560 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1999).

67. Workers' compensation

The Workmen's Compensation Law (§ 29(6)) precludes a plaintiff from maintaining an action under Vehicle & Traffic Law former § 59 against an owner of a motor vehicle for personal injuries due to the negligent operation of the motor vehicle by one other than the owner, who at the time of the accident, is a co-employee of the plaintiff-passenger and while both the co-employee and the plaintiff-passenger are acting in the course of their employment. Naso v Lafata, 4 N.Y.2d 585, 176 N.Y.S.2d 622, 152 N.E.2d 59, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 876 (N.Y.), reh'g denied, 5 N.Y.2d 861, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1696 (N.Y. 1958), limited, Bellefeuille v City & County Sav. Bank, 43 A.D.2d 335, 351 N.Y.S.2d 738, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5833 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

Plaintiff, a passenger in a tractor-trailer and a fellow-employee of the operator of the vehicle, was injured solely through the operator's negligence. In an action against the trailer owner (he was neither plaintiff's employer nor a fellow-employee), the Workmen's Compensation Law was set up as a complete defense. Although Vehicle and Traffic Law former § 59-a imposes joint liability on the separate owners of a tractor and trailer, its purpose, with former § 59 of the same law, was to create a remedy for losses to which an injured person has been subjected, in a class of cases where no right to relief existed. Hence, since the Workmen's Compensation Law § 29(6) was an exclusive remedy and it deprived the injured employee of a right to maintain an action against the negligent co-employee, it also barred the derivative action. Rauch v Jones, 4 N.Y.2d 592, 176 N.Y.S.2d 628, 152 N.E.2d 63, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 877 (N.Y. 1958), limited, Bellefeuille v City & County Sav. Bank, 43 A.D.2d 335, 351 N.Y.S.2d 738, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5833 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

A defendant may not pursue a third-party contribution claim under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388 against a vehicle owner where the driver's negligence was a cause of the plaintiff's injuries, but the driver is insulated from a lawsuit under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 29 (6). Isabella v Hallock, 22 N.Y.3d 788, 987 N.Y.S.2d 293, 10 N.E.3d 673, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 569 (N.Y. 2014).

The plaintiff, in the course of his employment, was struck by a car driven by a fellow employee and owned by the fellow employee's wife. The plaintiff could not maintain an action against the wife because Workmen's Compensation was his exclusive remedy. Further, Vehicle and Traffic Law former § 59 was inapplicable because the accident occurred on a private rather than a public road. Roberts v Gagnon, 1 A.D.2d 297, 149 N.Y.S.2d 743, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5935 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

As against derivative liability imposed by subd. 1 of this section on the owner of a grader used by a city for snow removal and, with the owner's permission, operated by a city employee, for injuries sustained by plaintiff's husband, a city policeman, the owner of the grader was entitled to defend on the ground that plaintiff's exclusive remedy was under the Workmen's Compensation Law because plaintiff's decedent and the grader operator were fellow-employees. Castle v North End Contracting Corp., 21 A.D.2d 8, 248 N.Y.S.2d 95, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4181 (N.Y. App. Div.

3d Dep't 1964), limited, Bellefeuille v City & County Sav. Bank, 43 A.D.2d 335, 351 N.Y.S.2d 738, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5833 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

Even if defendant's vehicle which had been leased to decedent's employer and which was being loaded by fellow employee who was allegedly negligent in handling of hand cart had a causal connection with accident, workmen's compensation was the sole remedy available, just as if the fellow employee had been operating the vehicle. Albarran v New York, 56 A.D.2d 822, 393 N.Y.S.2d 37, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11132 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1977).

In a personal injury action grounded in negligence, the court erred in refusing to dismiss the employee's complaint against his employer, a truck and car rental corporation, since the employee had already recovered benefits under the workers' compensation statute, which barred his derivative action against the owner of the vehicle pursuant to Veh & Tr Law § 388. Betancourt v Hertz Corp., 86 A.D.2d 883, 447 N.Y.S.2d 534, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15532 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1982).

Court properly dismissed cab company employee's personal injury action against owner of taxicab that crashed into cab company office where (1) employee did not plead negligence on part of taxi's owner, and (2) driver was injured employee's coemployee, and thus was immune from suit under Workers' Compensation Law, precluding imposition of vicarious liability on taxi's owner. Trizzino v Mildank Taxi Corp., 128 A.D.2d 607, 512 N.Y.S.2d 864, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 44298 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Where plaintiff was seeking to recover for injuries sustained in automobile collision from owner of automobile, plaintiff's right to recovery was statutory one under statute making automobile owner liable for negligence of person operating automobile with permission of owner, and owner could not defend the action on ground that plaintiff and driver were in employ of a common employer and that at time of collision were in scope of their employment, so that award of workmen's compensation was plaintiff's exclusive remedy. Goldwasser v Ranieri, 2 Misc. 2d 606, 151 N.Y.S.2d 170, 1956 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2037 (N.Y. App. Term 1956).

The immunity afforded by the Workmen's Compensation Law to the co-employee-driver of a truck in which plaintiff was injured did not extend to the truck owner who was not the employer or a co-employee. The negligence of the operator could be imputed to the owner of the motor vehicle notwithstanding the fact that the operator was not liable. Milone v Bono, 8 Misc. 2d 826, 162 N.Y.S.2d 1002, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3196 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1957).

Plaintiff's negligence claim against owner of trailer leased to plaintiff's employer for injuries plaintiff sustained when plaintiff fell through hole in floor of trailer was barred because even though N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388, on its face, permitted any negligence by plaintiff's employer to be imputed to owner of trailer, it was improper to impute negligence to owner of trailer because any negligence claim against plaintiff's employer was barred by Workers' Compensation Law, and thus there was nothing to impute to owner of trailer. Black v Consol. Freightways Corp., 219 F. Supp. 2d 243, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13691 (E.D.N.Y. 2002).

68. Passengers invited by driver

The former analogous section did not change the rule that a master is not liable for the acts of his servant unless acting within the scope of his employment. The defendant should have been permitted to prove that the chauffeur, in inviting plaintiffs to ride with him, was acting contrary to her instructions. Grant v Knepper, 245 N.Y. 158, 156 N.E. 650, 245 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 158, 1927 N.Y. LEXIS 604 (N.Y. 1927).

The former analogous section gave a remedy against a defendant where plaintiffs were injured while riding in his car driven by his daughter, if the car were negligently driven by the defendant's daughter on an errand assented to by the defendant. The defendant need not have specifically directed his daughter to drive the plaintiffs. Cohen v Neustadter, 247 N.Y. 207, 160 N.E. 12, 247 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 207, 1928 N.Y. LEXIS 1059 (N.Y. 1928).

Plaintiff passenger may recover for negligent operation of vehicle—no matter what his relationship to the driver might be—unless it is shown that his own personal negligence contributed to the injury; thus, representative of deceased passenger was entitled to recover from owner of rented automobile in which deceased was riding when he was killed and over which he exercised supervisory control where deceased's father-in-law was driving at time of accident and was contributorily negligent in causing accident. Kalechman v Drew Auto Rental, Inc., 33 N.Y.2d 397, 353 N.Y.S.2d 414, 308 N.E.2d 886, 1973 N.Y. LEXIS 871 (N.Y. 1973).

A defendant owner was liable for the negligence of the person to whom she loaned her automobile, although she did not know that plaintiff's intestate was to be invited to ride. Roche v New York C. R. Co., 221 A.D. 497, 224 N.Y.S. 656, 1927 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6480 (N.Y. App. Div. 1927).

Notwithstanding the fact that an employee may have been in his master's employment at the time of the accident, this section is of no avail to plaintiffs, when the employee was without the pale of his employment in respect of inviting passengers to ride with him contrary to instructions. Rhodes v Ocean Acci. Guarantee Corp., 239 A.D. 92, 266 N.Y.S. 681, 1933 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7956 (N.Y. App. Div. 1933), aff'd, 264 N.Y. 436, 191 N.E. 502, 264 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 436, 1934 N.Y. LEXIS 1476 (N.Y. 1934).

It was not the intention of the legislature that the provisions of this section should insure the safety of passengers riding in a car which had been left in the custody of a repairman for the purpose of making repairs, when the passengers were in the car for their own benefit and enjoyment through no invitation of the owner, express or implied, but through invitation of the repairman, who had no authority, express or implied, to invite them. Such an owner reasonably could not have contemplated or anticipated that his car would be used upon the street or roadway for any such purpose. Svenson v Zakrocki, 268 A.D. 777, 48 N.Y.S.2d 567, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3435 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944).

Where plaintiff testified that defendant's truck driver requested plaintiff to accompany him on trip because driver was not feeling well, jury could infer that plaintiff's presence in defendant's truck was not in violation of Public Service Commission's Rule respecting the carrying of passengers, and that plaintiff was therefore entitled to recover for injuries resulting from negligent operation of the truck. Lamica v Vollmer, 270 A.D. 1063, 63 N.Y.S.2d 31, 1946 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5316 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 296 N.Y. 660, 69 N.E.2d 817, 296 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 660, 1946 N.Y. LEXIS 1236 (N.Y. 1946).

Driver's cause of action against vehicle owner pursuant to CLS Veh & Tr § 388, based on theory that defendant passenger was operating or using vehicle with owner's permission, would be dismissed where neither driver nor owner gave passenger permission to interfere with operation of vehicle by reaching across another passenger to yank wheel to right, causing driver to react quickly, in course of which he was injured when he caused vehicle to strike telephone pole and house. Good v MacDonell, 149 Misc. 2d 315, 564 N.Y.S.2d 949, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 661 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1990).

Driver's cause of action against vehicle owner for negligently entrusting vehicle to intoxicated passenger, who interfered with operation of vehicle by reaching across another passenger to yank wheel to right, causing driver to react quickly, in course of which he was injured when vehicle struck telephone pole and house, would be dismissed, even if owner should have known that passenger was intoxicated, since mere fact that owner allowed intoxicated passenger to ride in vehicle he entrusted to driver did not rise to level of negligent entrustment. Good v MacDonell, 149 Misc. 2d 315, 564 N.Y.S.2d 949, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 661 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1990).

69. Operation by driver's permittee

The owner of an automobile could not be held responsible for the act of a person to whom he loaned the automobile in loaning it to a third person without the knowledge of the owner. Owen v Gruntz, 216 A.D. 19, 214 N.Y.S. 543, 1926 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9153 (N.Y. App. Div. 1926).

This section does not make a defendant corporation liable for injuries suffered by plaintiff, its president, where he, on a business trip in a corporate automobile, turned over the operation of vehicle to one of the salesmen of defendant riding solely for his personal convenience, and the salesman negligently struck a bridge, proof showing that the salesman was plaintiff's agent. Glennie v Falls Equipment Co., 238 A.D. 7, 263 N.Y.S. 124, 1933 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9404 (N.Y. App. Div. 1933).

Company is liable for negligence of person driving its automobile with permission of company salesman to whom company gave complete control of automobile. Clarke v Mason Au & Magenheimer Confectionery Mfg. Co., 240 A.D. 1001, 268 N.Y.S. 290, 1933 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7844 (N.Y. App. Div. 1933), aff'd, 264 N.Y. 661, 191 N.E. 614, 264 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 661, 1934 N.Y. LEXIS 1693 (N.Y. 1934).

This section does not render the owner of an automobile responsible for the negligence of a third party to whom the borrower had temporarily intrusted the vehicle without the owner's knowledge or consent and who is using it for his own private purpose. This section has not changed the common-law rules relating to master and servant. Jackson v Brown & Kleinhenz, Inc., 246 A.D. 445, 284 N.Y.S. 44, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8699 (N.Y. App. Div. 1935), rev'd, 273 N.Y. 365, 7 N.E.2d 265, 273 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 365, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1214 (N.Y. 1937).

Former section 59 was never intended to render the owner of a motor vehicle responsible for injuries of the owner's permittee, where the permittee has the car for his own pleasure, takes a guest into it without the owner's knowledge, permits the guest to drive, and is injured by the guest's negligent driving. Parker v Metropolitan Casualty Ins. Co., 20 A.D.2d 951, 248 N.Y.S.2d 985, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3936 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

Operation of vehicle at time of accident fell outside grant of permission where sole purpose for which defendant entrusted car to driver was to permit her to test drive it and have it inspected by mechanic so she could make informed decision regarding prospective purchase, and plaintiff drove car to pick up boyfriend and allowed boyfriend to drive car on excursion during which accident occurred. Walls v Zuvic, 113 A.D.2d 936, 493 N.Y.S.2d 628, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52557 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1985), app. denied, 67 N.Y.2d 602, 499 N.Y.S.2d 1028, 490 N.E.2d 557, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 16716 (N.Y. 1986).

A defendant who owned a taxicab and who had turned it over to a third party to operate was liable where it appeared that the vehicle collided with plaintiffs' automobile while being operated by a person to whom one of said "operator's" chauffeurs, on becoming ill, had turned it over. Katz v Wolff & Reinheimer, Inc., 221 N.Y.S. 476, 129 Misc. 384, 1927 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 744 (N.Y. Mun. Ct. 1927).

Where a plaintiff was injured by an automobile truck operated by an employee of a corporation who was not licensed to operate the truck, and it appeared that the truck belonged to an individual and was being used by the corporation; that the chauffeur of the truck was instructed not to permit his helpers to operate the truck; that the chauffeur and two helpers became drunk and the chauffeur abandoned the truck, but thereafter one of the helpers operated the truck and was operating it when the accident occurred, the owner of the truck was not liable. Rosenbluth v Concourse Van Co., 229 N.Y.S. 609, 132 Misc. 647, 1928 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 910 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1928).

Owner of van was entitled to summary judgment dismissing action under CLS Veh & Tr § 388 for death of 3 men who had borrowed van and, while sleeping in it, suffocated from inhalation of carbon monoxide fumes emitted by propane gas heater, since (1) it was undisputed that vehicle was passenger van, not camper, (2) at time of accident it was being used as shelter, not as motor vehicle, and (3) using vehicle for its intended purpose was not proximate cause of death; under circumstances, vehicle was not being "used or operated" as motor vehicle within meaning of statute, as matter of law. Du Mortier v Bernz-O-Matic Corp., 139 Misc. 2d 303, 526 N.Y.S.2d 755, 1988 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 97 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1988).

Lessor of van was not entitled to dismissal of action by lessee who was injured when van went off road while his friend was driving it, despite fact that lessee had allowed his friend to drive van in violation of his agreement with lessor, where lessee claimed to have asked his friend to drive because he felt drowsy, in which case lessee's paramount duty of reasonable care and prudence would have demanded change of drivers; there is no legal or moral reason to prefer claims of injured third party to claims of injured lessee who may have been equally innocent of any negligence. Layaw v Maguire Ford Lincoln Mercury, 164 Misc. 2d 113, 623 N.Y.S.2d 731, 1995 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 65 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1995), aff'd, 219 A.D.2d 73, 639 N.Y.S.2d 544, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2788 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

70. Operation by co-employee

Vehicle owner was not liable to third-party plaintiffs for contribution or indemnification, because the driver of the vehicle was the co-worker of the injured plaintiff and therefore immune under the Workers' Compensation Law. Isabella v Hallock, 22 N.Y.3d 788, 987 N.Y.S.2d 293, 10 N.E.3d 673, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 569 (N.Y. 2014).

Defendant employer of both plaintiff parking attendant and coworker who backed employer's car into plaintiff was entitled to summary judgment dismissing personal injury action on ground that plaintiff's exclusive remedy against employer was under Workers' Compensation Law, even though that bar does not apply to cases of employer's affirmative negligence toward injured employee, where plaintiff sued his employer based on employer's vicarious liability as owner of car operated by coworker, and there was no allegation of affirmative negligence by employer. Chiriboga v Ebrahimoff, 281 A.D.2d 353, 722 N.Y.S.2d 533, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3150 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2001).

Trial court did not err in granting a contractor's motion for summary judgment dismissing an employee's action alleging that the contractor as vicariously liable for a coworker's negligent acts because at the time of the accident, the skid steer the coworker used was being operated in a parking lot that was not open to the public, rather than on a public highway; thus, the machine was not a motor vehicle for purposes of liability. Calvert v Duggan & Duggan Gen. Contr., Inc., 159 A.D.3d 1490, 73 N.Y.S.3d 331, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2147 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 31 N.Y.3d 912, 106 N.E.3d 754, 81 N.Y.S.3d 371, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 1563 (N.Y. 2018).

The effect of certain decisions of the Court of Appeals dealing with inapplicability of this section to support an action against the owner of an automobile by one who is a coemployee of the person who was driving the car at the time of the accident and whose negligence caused the accident, is simply to prevent a recovery under this section where the motor vehicle is merely the instrument causing the injury, but is at the time an instrument being used by a coemployee of the person injured, and such an action against the owner of the car, based on the common law, is sustainable if the driver of the car was, at the time, a special employee of the owner but not a coemployee of the person injured. Johnson v Freeman, 25 Misc. 2d 140, 202 N.Y.S.2d 639, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3305 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960).

This section is inapplicable to a situation where plaintiff was struck by an automobile owned by defendant and operated with defendant's consent, but by a fellow employee of plaintiff who was then and there engaged with plaintiff in the furtherance of the business of their employer. Hanley v Weisburger, 32 Misc. 2d 672, 223 N.Y.S.2d 434, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4067 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1962).

Plaintiff, an employee of the garage where defendant's automobile was stored, was injured when a fellow employee backed defendant's automobile into him while he was standing on the sidewalk next to the ramp. A contract exempting the garage owner from liability for damages for injury to person resulting from the negligence of its employees was void against public property, however, plaintiff was confined to the exclusive remedy of Workmen's Compensation. Kahne v Lipkind, 145 N.Y.S.2d 884, 1955 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3857 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1955).

71. Operation by garage or parking attendant

This section, making the owner of a car liable for the negligent operation thereof by any person legally using or operating same with the owner's permission is applicable where the owner of an automobile, which he stored in a garage, which gave service including delivery of the car to him when wanted, ordered the car delivered to him and an employee of the garage, not having an operator's license, in delivering the car, ran into a child. Shannon v Samuels, 278 N.Y. 510, 15 N.E.2d 670, 278 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 510, 1938 N.Y. LEXIS 1363 (N.Y. 1938).

Where an automobile owner leaves his car at a repair shop and has reason to know that, in the performance of the work thereon, the car will be used on a public highway by employees of the shop, he is liable for its negligent operation, such use being with his implied permission within this section. Drollinger v McCurdy, 228 A.D. 664, 238 N.Y.S. 219, 1929 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11536 (N.Y. App. Div. 1929).

The owner of an automobile was not liable for an injury sustained while a garage man, acting as an independent contractor, was giving an automobile a road test. Drollinger v McCurdy, 228 A.D. 664, 238 N.Y.S. 219, 1929 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11536 (N.Y. App. Div. 1929).

The mere leaving of car keys with a garageman by an owner storing his car with said garageman may imply consent to the garageman to drive the car out on the sidewalk so as to make the owner liable for the garageman's negligence under this section. Houlihan v Selengut, 263 A.D. 811, 31 N.Y.S.2d 560, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5092 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

It was not the intention of the legislature that the provisions of this section should insure the safety of passengers riding in a car which had been left in the custody of a repairman for the purpose of making repairs, when the passengers were in the car for their own benefit and enjoyment through no invitation of the owner, express or implied, but through invitation of the repairman, who had no authority, express or implied, to invite them. Such an owner reasonably could not have contemplated or anticipated that his car would be used upon the street or roadway for any such purpose. Svenson v Zakrocki, 268 A.D. 777, 48 N.Y.S.2d 567, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3435 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944).

Automobile owner who turns vehicle over to parking lot attendant with keys or who parks vehicle in lot and leaves it there with keys is liable when attendant, who is not licensed operator and who is not familiar with stick shift in automobile, strikes another attendant while moving automobile, notwithstanding fact that owner would not have permitted attendant to move car had he known either that attendant was not licensed or that attendant was not familiar with stick shift. Carter v Travelers Ins. Co., 113 A.D.2d 178, 495 N.Y.S.2d 168, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52347 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1985).

Owner of taxi, owner of garage, and plaintiff's fellow mechanics at garage could not be held vicariously liable under CLS Veh & Tr § 388 for their alleged negligence in using taxi, even though plaintiff was burned when fellow mechanic spilled gasoline on him as consequence of attempting to start taxi during repair, since fellow mechanic, as plaintiff's coemployee, was immune from suit under Workers' Compensation Law, under which plaintiff had previously received compensation. Ulysse v Nelsk Taxi, Inc., 135 A.D.2d 528, 522 N.Y.S.2d 162, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52481 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 702, 536 N.Y.S.2d 743, 533 N.E.2d 673, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 3435 (N.Y. 1988).

An automobile which was in garage on wheel-aligning machine, motor off, brake set, with no one in it when automobile rolled back into street and collided with plaintiff's automobile was not being "operated" at the time within statute imputing liability to owner of automobile being operated on a public highway, and hence automobile owner was not liable for resulting injuries. Blake v Salmonson, 67 N.Y.S.2d 607, 188 Misc. 97, 1946 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3288 (N.Y. Mun. Ct. 1946).

In a claim by plaintiff for personal injuries incurred while attempting to move defendant's vehicle at the parking facility due to defendant's failure to leave her keys, defendant was not entitled to summary judgment for personal injuries claim by plaintiff because there were genuine issues of material fact as to defendant's liability as owner in relation to her conduct, and as to whether she revoked the permission she gave to plaintiff and the parking facility by her failure to leave the keys to her vehicle. Bencosme v Allon, 60 Misc. 3d 531, 78 N.Y.S.3d 876, 2018 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1587 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2018).

72. Public highway

This section does not apply where the damages were not caused by the operation of the motor vehicle upon a public highway. Hogan v Comac Sales, 245 A.D. 216, 281 N.Y.S. 207, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10268 (N.Y. App. Div. 1935), aff'd, 271 N.Y. 562, 2 N.E.2d 695, 271 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 562, 1936 N.Y. LEXIS 1289 (N.Y. 1936).

The plaintiff, in the course of his employment, was struck by a car driven by a fellow employee and owned by the fellow employee's wife. The plaintiff could not maintain an action against the wife because Workmen's Compensation was his exclusive remedy. Further, Vehicle and Traffic Law former § 59 was inapplicable because the accident occurred on a private rather than a public road. Roberts v Gagnon, 1 A.D.2d 297, 149 N.Y.S.2d 743, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5935 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Where plaintiff was struck by the automobile of a co-employee while crossing a private road located on the employer's property when he paused on a safety island, the accident did not occur on a "public highway" within the statute respecting liability of owner for an accident occurring on a public highway when the automobile is driven with his permission, express or implied. Roberts v Gagnon, 1 A.D.2d 297, 149 N.Y.S.2d 743, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5935 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Former § 59, dealing with imputation of negligence of the operator of a car driving it with the owner's permission, to the owner, applied only to operation of motor vehicles upon a public highway and could not impose liability on an owner for death of a passenger in the car from carbon monoxide poisoning while the car was still in the garage with the engine running. Harper v Parker, 12 A.D.2d 327, 211 N.Y.S.2d 325, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12393 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1961), aff'd, 11 N.Y.2d 1095, 230 N.Y.S.2d 719, 184 N.E.2d 310, 1962 N.Y. LEXIS 1052 (N.Y. 1962).

Three actions to recover damages for the wrongful deaths of plaintiffs' decedents, who were killed as the result of a two-car collision, should have been dismissed against defendant, who owned one of the cars, where the driver of the car owned by defendant admitted that she had stolen the vehicle from the parking lot or driveway of the school at which it had been left unattended with the motor running, and where the argument by plaintiffs that proof would be adduced at trial that the vehicle was taken from a public road, thereby establishing defendant's statutory liability, would not have been sufficient to defeat a motion for summary judgment, inasmuch as parties opposing a motion for summary judgment are under a duty to lay bare their proof in opposing papers in order to show that their allegations are capable of being established at trial. Albouyeh v County of Suffolk, 96 A.D.2d 543, 465 N.Y.S.2d 50, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19073 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1983), aff'd, 62 N.Y.2d 681, 476 N.Y.S.2d 522, 465 N.E.2d 29, 1984 N.Y. LEXIS 4288 (N.Y. 1984).

The presence of automobile on public highway does not necessarily imply that it is being "operated" within statute imputing liability to owner of automobile being operated on public highway, since to "operate" means to put into operation or to continue in operation or activity, to manage, to conduct, to carry out or through, and necessarily implies agency of a rational being with intent to carry activity through to accomplishment of original purpose of moving or operating. Blake v Salmonson, 67 N.Y.S.2d 607, 188 Misc. 97, 1946 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3288 (N.Y. Mun. Ct. 1946).

Complaint dismissed in action for personal injuries sustained by plaintiff while alighting from defendant's automobile where there was no allegation that the accident occurred on a public highway. D'Arienzo v Yarwood, 159 N.Y.S.2d 288 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1957), app. dismissed, 6 A.D.2d 1019, 178 N.Y.S.2d 637, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4765 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Former § 59-a of the Vehicle and Traffic Law did not limit an owner's liability to accidents occurring on a public highway. Raspante v Trans. Supply & Management, Inc., 214 N.Y.S.2d 583 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1961).

73. Dealer plates

A dealer, who had permitted the use of his plates by purchaser for more than the five days permitted by § 63, was properly held liable under this section for damages arising from negligent operation of the car with the purchaser's permission. Reese v

Reamore, 292 N.Y. 292, 55 N.E.2d 35, 292 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 292, 1944 N.Y. LEXIS 1363 (N.Y. 1944).

If an automobile dealer fails to comply with the requirements of former § 63 in respect of the use of dealer plates, he will not be permitted to deny his ownership of the vehicle for the purpose of avoiding liability under this section. Hence, the complaint in a wrongful death action against an automobile dealer should not have been dismissed where, four days before a fatal accident, the dealer had sold the truck involved therein and let the purchaser take the vehicle with his dealer's plates thereon. Switzer v Aldrich, 307 N.Y. 56, 120 N.E.2d 159, 307 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 56, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 1000 (N.Y. 1954).

Plaintiff's intestate was killed by a truck operated by the defendant. Four days before the accident, the defendant bought the truck under a conditional sales contract from a used car dealer who let him use a set of dealer's plates. The plates were on the truck at the time of the accident. Then plaintiffs after having an execution against the defendant returned unsatisfied served a notice of the judgment on the dealer's insurer. The insurer disclaimed liability under its garage liability policy. Held: the dealer was liable under this section because the dealer's act in lending the plates made possible the defendant's use of the truck after the sale and that act constituted permission both within the meaning of this section and the policy. Switzer v Merchants Mut. Casualty Co., 2 N.Y.2d 575, 161 N.Y.S.2d 867, 141 N.E.2d 904, 1957 N.Y. LEXIS 1088 (N.Y. 1957).

Automobile dealer was estopped from denying liability for wrongful death of pedestrian struck by automobile bearing dealer's plates, despite plaintiff's failure to trace plates from dealer to automobile, where dealer had violated applicable statutes by failing to report fact that plates had been loaned for more than five days. Jamison v Walker, 48 A.D.2d 320, 369 N.Y.S.2d 469, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9889 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1975).

Automobile dealer who violates statutes effectuating strong public policy to protect victims of injuries caused by negligently driven automobiles is estopped from disclaiming liability. Jamison v Walker, 48 A.D.2d 320, 369 N.Y.S.2d 469, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9889 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1975).

74. Defective brakes

Under the provisions of this section, although the owner of a vehicle involved in an accident was not in the car at the time, and had no notice that the brakes of the vehicle were defective, if the driver had notice that they were defective the owner may be held liable to persons injured as a result of the accident. Lipsman v Warren, 10 A.D.2d 868, 199 N.Y.S.2d 761, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10709 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), reh'g denied, 10 A.D.2d 970, 202 N.Y.S.2d 252, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10001 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1960).

Where an accident results from defective brakes on the vehicle, following their repair by a mechanic, and the owner of the automobile is not aware of the defect, but the driver of the car is, the driver's knowledge and negligence in continuing to drive the car with knowledge of its defective condition may not be imputed to the owner so as to preclude his right of recovery over against the driver and the mechanic on the basis of their active negligence. Lipsman v Warren, 10 A.D.2d 868, 199 N.Y.S.2d 761, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10709 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), reh'g denied, 10 A.D.2d 970, 202 N.Y.S.2d 252, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10001 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1960).

Under above statute if person drives a motor vehicle with actual notice of defective brakes, his negligence is attributable to owner thereof. But such derivative liability would not bar third-party action against manufacturer of car because of such brakes. Alfano v Amchir, 23 A.D.2d 659, 257 N.Y.S.2d 2, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4765 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1965).

In negligence action against owner of truck that was left unattended by owner's employee and rolled down driveway and over plaintiff's arm, plaintiff was not entitled to partial summary judgment on issue of liability where her descriptions of how accident occurred contradicted each other in essential particulars —especially as to whether truck's parking brake was set—and thus raised triable issues of fact and credibility. Vitiello v Mayrich Constr. Corp., 255 A.D.2d 182, 680 N.Y.S.2d 482, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12529 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Although the owner of a car has no knowledge that the brakes are defective, if the driver has such knowledge the owner may be held liable to passengers for passive negligence under this section. Cohen v Wasserman, 28 Misc. 2d 58, 208 N.Y.S.2d 865, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2296 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960).

75. Unlawful use

Where, in an action to recover for a death alleged to have been occasioned through negligent operation of an automobile, uncontradicted evidence proved that the driver of the car was using it at time of the accident for his own purposes exclusively, without permission and against commands of the defendant, his employer, the plaintiff gained nothing from the former analogous section. Fluegel v Coudert, 244 N.Y. 393, 155 N.E. 683, 244 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 393, 1927 N.Y. LEXIS 1067 (N.Y.), reh'g denied, 245 N.Y. 539, 157 N.E. 849, 245 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 539, 1927 N.Y. LEXIS 695 (N.Y. 1927).

In plaintiff's action for injuries sustained in collision which occurred when she and her friend were "joyriding" in defendants' car, summary judgment was properly granted in favor of defendants based on proof that car was operated without their consent, where plaintiff's friend pleaded guilty to theft of car and plaintiff admitted that she knew car was stolen; likewise, plaintiff's claim that defendants violated CLS Veh & Tr § 1210(a) lacked merit, where plaintiff's friend testified that she found car keys under set of papers on front seat of car, out of plain view. Manning by Manning v Brown, 91 N.Y.2d 116, 667 N.Y.S.2d 336, 689 N.E.2d 1382, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3681 (N.Y. 1997), limited, Alami v Volkswagen of Am., Inc., 97 N.Y.2d 281, 739 N.Y.S.2d 867, 766 N.E.2d 574, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 218 (N.Y. 2002).

Owner of vehicle which was stolen and became involved in accident with plaintiff was entitled to summary judgment dismissing complaint, even though vehicle was not reported stolen until 3 ½ hours after accident, since discrepancy between time of accident and time vehicle was reported stolen would not raise issue of fact as to whether statutory presumption that vehicle was being operated with owner's permission was conclusively rebutted. Pow v Black, 182 A.D.2d 484, 582 N.Y.S.2d 186, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5982 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1992).

Defendant, owner of offending vehicle, was properly granted summary judgment in wrongful death action where it was shown that driver, who was subsequently charged with second degree murder in connection with incident in question, intentionally ran down plaintiffs' decedent. Marchetti v Avis Rent-A-Car Sys., 249 A.D.2d 518, 672 N.Y.S.2d 368, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4616 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

Where a plaintiff was injured by an automobile truck operated by an employee of a corporation who was not licensed to operate the truck, and it appeared that the truck belonged to an individual and was being used by the corporation; that the chauffeur of the truck was instructed not to permit his helpers to operate the truck; that the chauffeur and two helpers became drunk and the chauffeur abandoned the truck, but thereafter one of the helpers operated the truck and was operating it when the accident occurred, the owner of the truck was not liable. Rosenbluth v Concourse Van Co., 229 N.Y.S. 609, 132 Misc. 647, 1928 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 910 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1928).

An owner's liability for negligence of one whom she permits to operate the vehicle cannot be avoided by a contention that she did not give the operator permission to violate the law, and accordingly did not "legally" consent to his operation without proper registration plates and without an operator's license. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v Huther, 38 Misc. 2d 346, 238 N.Y.S.2d 176, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2226 (N.Y. County Ct. 1963), aff'd, 22 A.D.2d 747, 253 N.Y.S.2d 727, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3028 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1964).

An automobile owner may give permission to another to use his unlicensed automobile so as to make liability attach to the owner, even though such operator is operating the automobile in violation of law at the time of the accident, both by reason of absence of proper license plates and his own failure to have an operator's license. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v Huther, 38 Misc. 2d 346, 238 N.Y.S.2d 176, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2226 (N.Y. County Ct. 1963), aff'd, 22 A.D.2d 747, 253 N.Y.S.2d 727, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3028 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1964).

Owner of jeep, stolen prior to accident in which plaintiff was injured while riding in jeep, cannot be held vicariously liable to plaintiff under CLS Veh & Tr § 388 based upon owner's possible statutory violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 1210, by leaving keys in jeep prior to its theft, since violation of § 1210 warrants imposition of liability only if violation was proximate cause of accident; as matter of law, lapse of 2 days from time of theft to time of accident mandates finding that owner's negligence was not proximate cause of plaintiff's injuries. Delfino v Ranieri, 131 Misc. 2d 600, 501 N.Y.S.2d 248, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2569 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1986).

76. Atypical vehicle use

A plaintiff was entitled to judgment against an appellant corporation, the owner of an automobile, and an individual appellant, the driver thereof, for personal injuries, where it appeared that plaintiff was injured while assisting the individual appellant, at his request, in changing a tire on the paved portion of a highway, in violation of former § 87, subd 3; that the individual appellant had assured plaintiff that he would watch out for, and protect him from danger of, passing traffic; and that plaintiff was injured when the driver of an automobile, approaching around a curve and being blinded by lights of appellant's automobile, collided therewith. Eckert v G. B. Farrington Co., 262 A.D. 9, 27 N.Y.S.2d 343, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5269 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941), aff'd, 287 N.Y. 714, 39 N.E.2d 932, 287 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 714, 1942 N.Y. LEXIS 1732 (N.Y. 1942).

Statute providing that owners of vehicles used in state shall be liable for death or injuries to personal property resulting from negligence in use or operation of such vehicle by any person using or operating it with express or implied permission of owner was inapplicable to accident in which crane, which was mounted on truck, fell over and dropped load of angle irons on plaintiff's decedent while truck was immobile. Monell v International Business Machines Corp., 47 A.D.2d 637, 363 N.Y.S.2d 657, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8802 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1975), aff'd, 38 N.Y.2d 888, 382 N.Y.S.2d 747, 346 N.E.2d 548, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 2332 (N.Y. 1976).

In negligence action against owner of truck that was left unattended by owner's employee and rolled down driveway and over plaintiff's arm, res ipsa loquitur doctrine did not entitle plaintiff to partial summary judgment on issue of liability where employee was plaintiff's husband, who thus had motive to collude in plaintiff's story as to how accident occurred, and her story was "uncontroverted" only because she chose not to depose her husband, who was sole person with knowledge of facts, and her motion halted discovery process before owner could depose husband. Vitiello v Mayrich Constr. Corp., 255 A.D.2d 182, 680 N.Y.S.2d 482, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12529 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Plaintiff stated cause of action seeking to hold appellants liable under CLS Veh & Tr § 388 where (1) plaintiff was walking in crosswalk when van, owned by and leased to appellants, that was being towed by truck owned by nonappealing defendant became detached from tow truck and struck plaintiff, (2) van was being towed because keys to it were lost, (3) at time of accident, van driver was passenger in tow truck, van was locked, no persons were in it, and its engine was not running, (4) § 388 is not limited to situations in which attached or towed vehicle is operable, but applies "whenever any vehicles" are used in combination, by attachment or tow, and (5) fact that van was not being driven at time of accident did not mean that it was not being "used" under § 388. Alcalay v Fleetmark Inc., 266 A.D.2d 118, 698 N.Y.S.2d 676, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12107 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1999).

In a personal injury action arising out of an accident allegedly caused by a car wash employee's negligence when driving an owner's car while it was being washed, the employer was not entitled to summary judgment dismissing the owner's common-law indemnification claim against it; as a passive vehicle owner vicariously liable under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388, the owner was entitled to common-law indemnification from the employer. Scherer v North Shore Car Wash Corp., 32 A.D.3d 426, 821 N.Y.S.2d 219, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9924 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

Although, as a passive vehicle owner vicariously liable under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388, a car owner was entitled to common-law indemnification from an employer who operated a car wash in a personal injury action arising out of an accident allegedly caused by an employee's negligence while driving the owner's car, the owner was not entitled to summary judgment on the indemnification claim; the owner's refusal to permit the employer to inspect the vehicle for malfunctions before it was repaired prejudiced the employer's defense on the indemnification claim. Scherer v North Shore Car Wash Corp., 32 A.D.3d 426, 821 N.Y.S.2d 219, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9924 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

Pedestrian's negligence action against an owner of a car failed as the pedestrian's injury was caused by the throwing of a cup from the car, and did not arise out of the operation of the car under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1). Ciminello v Sullivan, 65 A.D.3d 1002, 885 N.Y.S.2d 118, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6295 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2009).

Defendant was entitled to summary judgment in personal injury action arising out of plaintiff being hit in eye by egg thrown from car owned by defendant, where complaint was based solely on vicarious liability under CLS Veh & Tr § 388, defendant was not present at time of plaintiff's injury, and he did not participate in conduct complained of; proximate cause of plaintiff's injury was independent act of throwing egg, and thus plaintiff's injury did not arise from "use or operation" of defendant's vehicle and § 388 did not apply. Levitt v Peluso, 168 Misc. 2d 239, 638 N.Y.S.2d 878, 1995 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 680 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1995).

Loading and unloading of a vehicle constituted use thereof within the meaning of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388; there was no basis to vacate the default of an auto insurer since it failed to show a meritorious defense in a declaratory judgment action. N. Ins. Co. v TIG Ins. Co., 2 A.D.3d 422, 767 N.Y.S.2d 809, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12893 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003).

Denial of an owner's summary judgment motion seeking dismissal of a third party complaint in a cable splicer's underlying personal injury claim was proper because the owner failed to establish, prima facie, that N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388 did not apply under circumstances in which the owner's bucket truck slid down an embankment, striking the wire that supported the pole on which the cable splicer was standing and causing injuries to the cable splicer; a triable issue of fact existed as to whether the manner in which a coworker operated the vehicle portion of the truck contributed to the accident. Additionally, it was immaterial that the subject truck was not operated on a public highway. Campbell v City of New York, 50 A.D.3d 722, 855 N.Y.S.2d 232, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3238 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2008).

77. Miscellaneous application of statute

When one leaves his motor vehicle in a busy street in such a position that a reasonably prudent person should anticipate that in the event of an emergency or other necessity, it must be moved, this section imposes upon the owner responsibility for the negligent acts of the person left in charge. Winnowski v Polito, 294 N.Y. 159, 61 N.E.2d 425, 294 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 159, 1945 N.Y. LEXIS 814 (N.Y. 1945).

A judgment for plaintiff in an action for the death of plaintiff's intestate as a result of a collision between a sedan, in which he was a passenger, and a motor truck, where the proof established that the sedan was traveling at an excessive rate of speed and was being used by an employee of defendant owner in the latter's business "or otherwise" and the facts justified the jury in finding that the failure of the operator of the motor truck to turn to the extreme right to avert the collision was a concurring act of negligence resulting in intestate's death. Hartstein v United States Trucking Corp., 260 A.D. 643, 23 N.Y.S.2d 251, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4677 (N.Y. App. Div.), reh'g denied, 260 A.D. 1006, 25 N.Y.S.2d 400, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9035 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

In an action against a foreign diplomat, a permanent representative to the United Nations from the Republic of Chile, the Supreme Court of the United States has exclusive jurisdiction, which could not be waived in an action in a state court by personal appearance or by pleading. Friedberg v Santa Cruz, 274 A.D. 1072, 86 N.Y.S.2d 369, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6116 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

Neither owner of moped operated by 14-year-old boy who was injured in collision nor driver of other vehicle involved in collision was entitled to summary judgment dismissing personal injury action where (1) moped owner, who was accused of negligent entrustment, failed to prove that moped is not dangerous instrument, (2) there was triable issue of fact as to whether moped owner was or should have been aware of its use by her children's friends, and (3) as to driver of other vehicle, who was accused of negligent operation of vehicle, there was triable issue of fact as to whether emergency doctrine applied. Ripton v Gracie, 266 A.D.2d 885, 698 N.Y.S.2d 208, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11875 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1999).

Defendant, owner of negligently parked motor vehicle alleged to be substantial cause of accident, could be held liable to plaintiff under CLS Veh & Tr § 388(1); thus, court improperly granted defendant's summary judgment motion. Bouchard v Canadian Pac. Ltd., 267 A.D.2d 899, 700 N.Y.S.2d 540, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13595 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Owner of motor vehicle was entitled to summary judgment in action to hold it vicariously liable under CLS Veh & Tr § 388 for injuries sustained by plaintiffs when vehicle was driven onto sidewalk, where defendant driver admitted that he intended to injure individual who was standing on sidewalk; owner could not be held liable for driver's intentional act. Beddingfield v LaBarbera, 276 A.D.2d 575, 714 N.Y.S.2d 312, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10407 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2000).

Where an owner has avoided responsibility, under this section, for the death of plaintiff's husband on the ground that the operator had no permission to use the automobile, the defendant operator is guilty of larceny under the Penal Law, § 1293-a. Schillaci v Fountaine, 299 N.Y.S. 944, 164 Misc. 567, 1937 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1885 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1937).

Where a taxicab owned by defendant and operated by one of its employees was hailed by another who directed the employee to assist in pursuing the other's stolen cab which, at the time, was still in sight, and in the pursuit a collision occurred between defendant's cab and plaintiff's car, the plaintiff is not entitled to recover from the defendant for the property damage sustained. Bindert v Elmhurst Taxi Corp., 6 N.Y.S.2d 666, 168 Misc. 892, 1938 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1916 (N.Y. Mun. Ct. 1938).

Negligence of car wash employees in permitting automobile under their control to roll down incline on car wash property into automobile parked on public street was imputed to owner of freshly-washed auto under Vehicle & Traffic Law § 388. Allcity Ins. Co. v Old Greenwich Delicatessen, 75 Misc. 2d 898, 349 N.Y.S.2d 240, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1324 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1973).

Driver's cause of action against vehicle owner for negligently entrusting vehicle to him with knowledge that he was intoxicated would be dismissed, even if owner should have known that driver was intoxicated, where driver's intoxication was not cause of accident, which resulted when passenger interfered with operation of vehicle by reaching across another passenger to yank wheel to right, causing driver to react quickly, in course of which he was injured when vehicle struck telephone pole and house. Good v MacDonell, 149 Misc. 2d 315, 564 N.Y.S.2d 949, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 661 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1990).

Owner of car that struck and killed plaintiff's decedent was not entitled to summary judgment in wrongful death action on ground that she was not liable under CLS Veh & Tr § 388 because driver of car acted recklessly in that he was intoxicated when accident occurred; owner's liability under statute extends to reckless or grossly negligent conduct. Lynch-Fina v Paredes, 164 Misc. 2d 963, 627 N.Y.S.2d 255, 1995 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 228 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1995).

In personal injury action by plaintiff who was run down by driver of taxicab owned by defendant and operated with his permission, defendant was entitled to summary judgment on negligence claim predicated on CLS Veh & Tr § 388 pursuant to doctrine of collateral estoppel, where driver had been convicted of first degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.10(1) as result of incident; criminal jury necessarily concluded beyond reasonable doubt that driver intended physical injury toward plaintiff, driver had full and fair opportunity to litigate issue of intent, and plaintiff's claim against owner of vehicle depended on whether his injury was caused by driver's negligent rather than intentional use of vehicle. DeJesus v New York City Transit Auth., 173 Misc. 2d 918, 661 N.Y.S.2d 952, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 409 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

Because a passenger established that a driver failed to yield to traffic on the roadway while exiting a parking lot, in violation of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1143, and that the vehicle owner was vicariously liable under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388, the trial court erred in denying the passenger's motion for summary judgment on the issue of liability in the passenger's personal injury action. Van Doren v Dressler, 45 A.D.3d 1366, 844 N.Y.S.2d 794, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11482 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2007).

In action against U.S. by driver of a horse-drawn wagon for injuries sustained when the rear end of his wagon was struck by an army truck, evidence that the soldier driving the truck had had a beer on two occasions, had struck an automobile and sped from the scene just prior to the accident in question, and that, at the time of the accident he, being a stranger to the vicinity, was lost, which accounted for his driving in the wrong direction to return to his base, was insufficient under New York law to rebut the presumption that the soldier was not acting in the line of duty at the time of the accident. Mandelbaum v United States, 251 F.2d 748, 1958 U.S. App. LEXIS 3609 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1958).

In action by New York resident against French company for injuries sustained in automobile accident in France, where companion of plaintiff was operating vehicle which was rented by plaintiff from French company, action must be governed by French law. Boxer v Gottlieb, 652 F. Supp. 1056, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 181 (S.D.N.Y. 1987).

IV. Practice Matters

78. In general

In automobile negligence action, wherein father of infant plaintiff testified without objection as to location of center line of street in question, that evidence, standing alone, was sufficient to establish a prima facie case that accident occurred upon the public highway and dismissal of complaint on merits at close of plaintiff's case apparently on ground that there was a failure to prove that accident occurred on public highway was erroneous. Lewis v Meyers, 9 A.D.2d 1022, 194 N.Y.S.2d 160, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5451 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1959).

A 15-year-old daughter could assert a cause of action against the owner of a vehicle driven by her father when she was injured as the car struck a raised manhole cover and went out of control as the father and daughter were traveling on a road in a real estate development having visited a house being built there for their family. Winnick v Kupperman Constr. Co., 29 A.D.2d 261, 287 N.Y.S.2d 329, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4608 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1968).

Automobile owner, who was only statutorily liable under CLS Veh & Tr § 388, could maintain action for indemnification against driver and lessee of automobile after paying settlement to injured party in prior suit; fact that owner, lessee, and driver had negotiated settlement of prior action did not impair their rights to pursue indemnification claims among themselves, and lessee and driver were not entitled to dismissal of indemnification suit where factual issues existed with respect to their negligence. Denton Leasing Corp. v Breezy Point Surf Club, Inc., 133 A.D.2d 95, 518 N.Y.S.2d 634, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49623 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Defendant, registered owner who allegedly sold uninsured vehicle to co-defendant 2 weeks prior to accident, was not entitled to summary judgment in action by Motor Vehicle Accident Indemnification Corporation for reimbursement of monies paid to guardian of infant who was injured when struck by defendant's vehicle by unidentified driver where fact issue existed as to whether use of vehicle was permissive. Motor Vehicle Accident Indemnification Corp. v Levinson, 218 A.D.2d 606, 630 N.Y.S.2d 747, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8853 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1995).

Court erred in denying defendant's motion for summary judgment where it showed that its vehicle was being driven without its permission and consent at time plaintiff was struck and injured, and plaintiff failed to submit admissible proof to rebut defendant's showing. Leonard v Elite Investigations, 221 A.D.2d 322, 633 N.Y.S.2d 214, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11240 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1995).

Defendant, vehicle lessor, should have been granted summary judgment in personal injury action which arose from accident involving leased vehicle where defendant sufficiently rebutted presumption of consent under CLS Veh & Tr § 388, and only evidence submitted in opposition was affirmation of plaintiff's attorney and police report. Molina v NYRAC, Inc., 228 A.D.2d 655, 645 N.Y.S.2d 819, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7435 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

Defendant, rent-a-car company, should have been granted summary judgment where plaintiff failed to submit any proof to rebut defendant's proof that its vehicle was being driven without its permission and consent at time of accident. Benavides v Value Rent-A-Car, 230 A.D.2d 814, 646 N.Y.S.2d 632, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8563 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

It was harmless error to admit evidence that owner had used tractor for excavating purposes some 5 years after accident since there was otherwise ample evidence regarding agreement as to possession and use of tractor between owner and operator when tractor was purchased and as to actual uses to which tractor was put by operator during next 6 weeks leading up to accident; under circumstances, admission of such evidence was not likely to have had substantial influence on jury's finding that tractor was not "used exclusively for agricultural purposes" (CLS Veh & Tr § 388(2)). Palmer v Rouse, 232 A.D.2d 909, 649 N.Y.S.2d 76, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11264 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

Court erred in declaring that plaintiff was obligated to defend and provide primary coverage to its insured in underlying personal injury action, which arose from accident while insured was driving rental vehicle, where rental company's automobile liability insurance policy with defendant, which defined insured to exclude anyone who granted covered auto from named insured under written rental agreement or anyone who operated, drove, or in any way used covered auto rented under such rental agreement, conflicted with CLS Veh & Tr § 345(b)(2) and was unenforceable, and defendant's policy also provided that coverage for any covered auto owned by named insured was primary; further, plaintiff's policy provided that any insurance plaintiff provided for vehicle insured did not own would be excess over any other collectible insurance. Government Emples. Ins. Co. v Chrysler Ins. Co., 256 A.D.2d 1212, 682 N.Y.S.2d 508, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14379 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

Court properly denied insurer's summary judgment motion to declare that it was not obligated to defend estate of insured's brother, even though it was undisputed that brother was not "relative" as defined in policy because he did not reside in same household as insured, where insurer failed to show as matter of law that brother did not have implied permission to drive insured's vehicle, which was involved in accident. Progressive Ins. Cos. v Brouse, 272 A.D.2d 996, 708 N.Y.S.2d 673, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5145 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000).

Where defendant, driver of United States post-office truck which ran into plaintiff's vehicle, failed to plead or prove any facts upon which to base finding that defendant was operating post-office truck in the scope of his employment, defendant was not immune from liability for his negligence under federal statute providing immunity from tort liability to employee of federal government acting within scope of his office or employment. Dwyer v Mott, 87 Misc. 2d 965, 386 N.Y.S.2d 312, 1976 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2334 (N.Y. City Ct. 1976).

Despite fact that automobile accident occurred on September 7, 1974, where insured and insured's wife brought action against driver of other vehicle involved in accident, where such other driver filed counterclaim seeking indemnity from insured for any judgment which might ultimately have been determined in favor of insured's wife, and where issue of such other driver's negligence had not yet been determined, driver's cause of action, if any, was one that was still in futuro and thus arose after August 1, 1976, date on which legislation requiring insurer to defend such a claim became effective, and thus insurer was under duty to defend insured with respect to counterclaim. Lumbermens Mut. Casualty Co. v Barnett, 91 Misc. 2d 3, 396 N.Y.S.2d 1007, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2222 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1977).

Smoke from a brush fire 600 feet from a highway obstructing the vision of motorists was not the "proximate cause" of injuries to passengers in a vehicle which was carelessly and recklessly driven due to the limited light range as compared with the speed of the vehicle. Pfohl v State, 42 N.Y.S.2d 372, 1943 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2012 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1943).

In a personal injury action by an injured child, counsel representing a driver as assigned by an excess insurance carrier was relieved; having multiple counsel representing the defendants was not allowable, as the liability that could be imposed on a defendant was vicarious pursuant to N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1) and (4), and the driver failed to show good cause, a judicially recognized conflict of interest, or a valid disclaimer of coverage by a primary carrier. Lukic v Garrett, 195 Misc. 2d 438, 759 N.Y.S.2d 306, 2003 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 329 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2003).

Trial court properly entered judgment in favor of an injured party in a personal injury action, as the trial court properly charged the jury on N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1), as defendants failed to rebut the presumption that at the time of the accident, a minibus was used or operated with the owner's express or implied consent, but the jury award for past pain and suffering deviated materially from what would have been reasonable compensation under the circumstances pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. 5501(c), and either a new trial or a stipulation to a smaller award was required. Lanigan v United Sch. Bus, Inc., 2 A.D.3d 410, 767 N.Y.S.2d 793, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12824 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003).

In a personal injury action arising from a truck/automobile collision, the truck driver, his employer, and a trailer lessor were entitled to partial summary judgment under Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(b) dismissing the automobile driver's punitive damages claims; although the tires on the trailer were worn and the driver's record was less than perfect, defendants' conduct did not evidence the degree of recklessness and wantonness requisite for an award of punitive damages under New York law; further, N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388 did not subject the trailer lessor to punitive damages for any conduct by the trailer lessee or its truck driver employee. Marcoux v Farm Serv. & Supplies, Inc., 283 F. Supp. 2d 901, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16437 (S.D.N.Y. 2003).

79. Procedural matters

Owner of vehicle who is vicariously liable under CLS Veh & Tr § 388 can be tacked onto primary lawsuit through third-party contribution claim even though injured party initially fails to sue owner and is legally foreclosed from doing so at later point, because vehicle owner remains potentially subject to liability for contribution purposes. Mowczan v Bacon, 92 N.Y.2d 281, 680 N.Y.S.2d 431, 703 N.E.2d 242, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 3209 (N.Y. 1998).

Upon truck owner's rebuttal of statutory presumption that truck was operated with owner's knowledge and consent at time of automobile-truck collision, burden fell upon automobile passengers who brought personal injury action against truck owner to demonstrate owner's responsibility. Speller v Ryder Truck Rental, Inc., 47 A.D.2d 608, 363 N.Y.S.2d 823, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8744 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1975).

New Jersey law to effect that owner and lessee of tractor could not recover over against trailer owner for indemnity on settlement of action to recover for personal injury inflicted on cargo checker due to alleged negligence of driver of tractor trailer was applicable where, inter alia, though checker was New York resident, he worked in New Jersey, where, though lessee was New York corporation, its principal office was in New Jersey, where, though trailer owner was New York corporation, its principal operation took place in New Jersey and where driver was New Jersey resident and accident occurred in New Jersey. Belisario v Manhattan Motor Rental, Inc., 48 A.D.2d 477, 370 N.Y.S.2d 574, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9922 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1975).

Where vehicle owner overcame presumption of permissive use in CLS Veh & Tr § 388 with admissible evidence that her vehicle was being operated without her permission at time of accident, and no defendant came forward with admissible evidence to create issue of fact on such question, owner and her insurer were entitled to judgment declaring that neither had any duty or obligation to injured persons. Government Emples. Ins. Co. v Prudential Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co., 241 A.D.2d 479, 661 N.Y.S.2d 525, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7407 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

Rule that summary judgment should not be granted when facts on which motion is predicated are exclusively within moving party's knowledge was especially applicable where movant was plaintiff in negligence action against owner of truck driven by owner's employee, who was plaintiff's husband, and thus there was danger of collusion by virtue of marital relationship. Vitiello v Mayrich Constr. Corp., 255 A.D.2d 182, 680 N.Y.S.2d 482, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12529 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

A court may not take judicial notice of a foreign statute similar to this section, nor can it presume that such statute exists in another state. Shaw v Blainey, 277 N.Y.S. 466, 154 Misc. 495, 1935 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 972 (N.Y. Mun. Ct. 1935).

Section 3130 of CPLR, which denies to one party the right to submit interrogatories in a negligence action to another party thereto, did not apply where a defendant in an automobile negligence case sought to take the deposition of another out-of-state defendant in one of three unconsolidated actions arriving out of the same accident, since the defendant whose deposition was sought was not a party in the present situation, but a witness. Moreover, rule 3108 of the CPLR expressly authorizes the submission of written questions with respect to out-of-state depositions, and such questions are to be distinguished from the written interrogatories referred to in § 3130 of the CPLR. Ryan v Saunders, 45 Misc. 2d 1089, 259 N.Y.S.2d 31, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1337 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1964).

Family unity doctrine did not operate to bar action by unemancipated minor against corporation for injuries sustained while he was riding in a motor vehicle owned by the corporation and operated and managed by his mother. Kemp v Rockland Leasing, Inc., 51 Misc. 2d 1073, 274 N.Y.S.2d 952, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1361 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1966).

Owner of vehicle is not liable for punitive damages because of the driver's conduct. Ingle v Mark, 58 Misc. 2d 895, 296 N.Y.S.2d 664, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1850 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1969).

Under comparative negligence statute, contributory negligence of driver of vehicle could not be imputed to owner of vehicle. Avis Rent-A-Car System, Inc. v Johnson, 90 Misc. 2d 263, 394 N.Y.S.2d 373, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2034 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1977).

Given the vicarious nature of the statutorily imposed liability upon the owners of vehicles for the negligence of those permitted to use or operate said vehicles, N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388(1), (4), and the mandate that the policies of insurance indemnify the owners, absent good cause, a judicially recognized conflict of interest, or a valid disclaimer of coverage by a primary carrier as to one of the otherwise covered defendants, there can only be one attorney representing those covered under the primary insurance policy. The excess carrier must be relegated to a passive role in the litigation. Lukic v Garrett, 195 Misc. 2d 438, 759 N.Y.S.2d 306, 2003 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 329 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2003).

80. Discovery

In action against employers of allegedly negligent driver on respondeat superior theory that driver was operating his vehicle in course of his employment, plaintiff's claim that facts essential to his opposition to employers' motion for summary judgment were within employers' exclusive possession was unavailing where plaintiff had deposed employers and another person having knowledge of driver's activities. James v Le Feber, 275 A.D.2d 973, 715 N.Y.S.2d 193, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9508 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000).

81. Action by owner

Contributory negligence of lessee operator of automobile is not imputable to absentee lessor of such auto so as to bar recovery for property damage to such auto. Continental Auto Lease Corp. v Campbell, 19 N.Y.2d 350, 280 N.Y.S.2d 123, 227 N.E.2d 28, 1967 N.Y. LEXIS 1597 (N.Y. 1967).

Statute which imputes to an absentee owner the negligence of his driver, for the purpose of imposing liability to an injured third party, does not impute contributory negligence to such an absentee owner in his action to recover his own damage. Molino v County of Putnam, 29 N.Y.2d 44, 323 N.Y.S.2d 817, 272 N.E.2d 323, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 1187 (N.Y. 1971).

The derivative negligence of an owner under this section for the negligence of a driver in actions by 3rd parties, does not apply to an action by the owner against the driver. Lamoureaux v Crowe, 6 A.D.2d 930, 176 N.Y.S.2d 22, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5249 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

In this action by the owner-occupant of an automobile against her chauffeur and railway company for injuries suffered following a collision between her automobile and a street car the negligence of the chauffeur might be imputed to plaintiff as a defense to her action against the railway company, but it may not be imputed so as to defeat her action against her chauffeur. Webb v Elmira W., L. & R. Co., 258 N.Y.S. 892, 144 Misc. 506, 1932 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1539 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1932).

In an action by the owner of automobile against his bailee and another for injury to plaintiff's car, in which it is alleged that both bailee and the other defendant were negligent and an accident happened while plaintiff's car was being driven with his permission by his bailee, such other defendant is not entitled to have the complaint dismissed, on the theory that under this section the bailee became a servant or agent of the owner. Nannes v Ideal Garage, Inc., 269 N.Y.S. 777, 150 Misc. 522, 1934 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1108 (N.Y. App. Term 1934).

In action by owner of automobile to recover for personal injuries and damage to his car, the negligence of the driver of his car should be imputed to the owner when the car was being driven with the permission of the owner, on the business of the owner and with the owner present in the car. Mosher v State, 124 N.Y.S.2d 223, 204 Misc. 580, 1953 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2139 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1953).

The failure of owner of vehicle to give driver instructions to drive with extreme care and at a slow rate of speed was proof of contributory negligence on the part of the owner where there was 6–8 inches of heavy snow and visibility was only about 100 feet. Mosher v State, 124 N.Y.S.2d 223, 204 Misc. 580, 1953 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2139 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1953).

This section did not apply to an action brought by the owner against a third person who was the owner and operator of an automobile involved in a collision with the plaintiff's automobile which was driven by his bailee. Petro v Eisenberg, 138 N.Y.S.2d 705, 207 Misc. 380, 1955 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2668 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1955).

The doctrine of imputed negligence has no application as between joint venturers themselves, when one sues the other as the actual wrongdoer, and the owner of a vehicle made liable by virtue of this section would seem to be in no better position. Breasette v Briscoe, 21 Misc. 2d 968, 197 N.Y.S.2d 866, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3864 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960).

Where owner of vehicle was being sued together with the driver of the vehicle and the claim was in excess of the insurance carried by the owner, the owner could file a cross claim against the driver. Ammann v Devinney, 62 Misc. 2d 225, 308 N.Y.S.2d 237, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1836 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1970).

Vehicle and Traffic Law § 388 apparently is not designed to deny an absentee owner a recovery on the basis of imputed contributory negligence although he may at the very same time be found liable as a defendant when the concurrent negligence attributable to the driver is imputed to him. Cadran v Fanni, 72 Misc. 2d 1, 338 N.Y.S.2d 532, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1413 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1972).

This section which imputes the negligence of a borrower to an owner in actions against the owner, does not impute such negligence in actions by an owner. Hessler v Nelipowitz, 55 N.Y.S.2d 692, 1945 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1905 (N.Y. Mun. Ct. 1945).

82. —Family member drivers

If infant plaintiff were found negligent in operation of motorcycle, application of doctrine of contributory negligence would defeat both his action and derivative causes of father. Zambraski v Eller, 44 A.D.2d 691, 355 N.Y.S.2d 460, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5328 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1974).

Third-party complaint of owner and operator of automobile, who alleged negligence on part of both infant motorcyclist and infant's father, and who asserted that in event that they were found liable to plaintiffs they would be entitled to recovery against the father to extent that he had contributed to happening of collision between motorcycle and automobile, failed to state a cause of action. Zambraski v Eller, 44 A.D.2d 691, 355 N.Y.S.2d 460, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5328 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1974).

Court properly granted defendant's motion to disqualify and remove plaintiff, owner of vehicle. as guardian of infant plaintiffs, his children, where plaintiff's pecuniary interests were adverse to those of infant plaintiffs by reason of CLS Veh & Tr § 388, which renders vehicle owner vicariously liable for injuries caused by negligence of driver. Boyd v Trent, 287 A.D.2d 475, 731 N.Y.S.2d 209, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9428 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2001), app. denied, 98 N.Y.2d 671, 746 N.Y.S.2d 459, 774 N.E.2d 224, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 1584 (N.Y. 2002).

A defendant owner could not sustain a verdict in his favor to recover damages for injuries to his automobile where his wife was operating the automobile with his consent and was acting as his agent, and he was responsible under the former analogous section for her negligence. Her contributory negligence bars the defendant owner from recovering. Swartout v Van Auken, 228 N.Y.S. 671, 132 Misc. 89, 1928 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 850 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1928), aff'd, 227 A.D. 644, 235 N.Y.S. 732, 1929 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6780 (N.Y. App. Div. 1929).

Although considered a statutory owner under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 128, an employee was not precluded from bringing a claim under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388 against other statutory co-owners because the employee's husband was operating a leased company car with the co-owners' consent at the time of an accident. Hassan v Montuori, 99 N.Y.2d 348, 756 N.Y.S.2d 126, 786 N.E.2d 25, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 150 (N.Y. 2003).

83. Action by operator

Even assuming that the owner of the vehicle implicitly consented to plaintiff's operation of the vehicle, plaintiffs pointed to no authority which would permit plaintiff, as the driver of the vehicle rather than an innocent third party, to recover from the owner for injuries sustained in the accident. Heins v Vanbourgondien, 180 A.D.3d 1019, 119 N.Y.S.3d 158, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1403 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2020).

This statute does not give the operator of an automobile a cause of action against the owner for the operator's own negligence. Mordecai v Hollis, 50 Misc. 2d 248, 269 N.Y.S.2d 863, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1908 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1966).

84. Pleading

A complaint must be dismissed as to a defendant insurance company in an action for personal injuries suffered by plaintiff, a passenger in an automobile owned by defendant insurance company and operated by an employee, the individual defendant's intestate, where proof shows that intestate drove the vehicle into a private roadway and across a private railroad crossing, whereupon he immediately turned the vehicle around and drove back onto the grade crossing directly in front of an oncoming train, since the presumption of an employer's liability by virtue of ownership of the automobile was overcome by evidence that the driver was not engaged in the scope of his employment at the time of the accident. Berry v Employers' Liability Assurance Corp., 254 A.D. 424, 5 N.Y.S.2d 887, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6442 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938).

A judgment dismissing a complaint was reversed and a new trial granted in an action for personal injuries suffered by a passenger in an automobile which collided with a motor truck claimed to be owned by the corporate defendant, where it appeared that there were involved issues of fact, which a jury alone should decide, as to whether the truck which collided with the automobile in which plaintiff was a passenger belonged to the corporation, and, if it did, whether at the time of the accident it was being operated in the course of business of the corporation or with its consent, and whether the operator at time of the accident was one of the employees of the corporation, and, if so, the circumstances under which he was driving the truck. Christie v B. F. Vineburg, Inc., 259 A.D. 342, 19 N.Y.S.2d 252, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6144 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

Since personal injury action arising from automobile accident was submitted to jury, without objection by either side, on theory that defendant corporation, which rented vehicle wherein plaintiffs were riding at time of accident, could validly shield itself from derivative liability by clause of rental agreement against more than two people using vehicle, it was unnecessary to determine validity of clause in contract. Furletti v Hertz Corp., 36 A.D.2d 973, 322 N.Y.S.2d 47, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3971 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1971).

In action for damages from personal injury sustained in automobile accident, there was no abuse of discretion in denying motion to amend complaint, made after jury had been selected, to assert new facts and new theory of liability under CLS Veh & Tr § 388 where proposed amendment would have alleged that car was operated by third party rather than defendant at time of accident and that car was being operated with defendant owner's consent, but plaintiffs offered no excuse for delay of more than 3 years in seeking amendment, deposition of third party had not been taken, and proposed amendment would result in prejudice to defendant. Cummings v Calascione, 127 A.D.2d 625, 511 N.Y.S.2d 653, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 43116 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 607, 521 N.Y.S.2d 224, 515 N.E.2d 909, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 18907 (N.Y. 1987).

Driver of offending vehicle and vehicle owner were united in interest where there was no claim that driver was operating vehicle without permission; thus, court properly granted plaintiff's motion to amend complaint to add driver as party defendant after expiration of statute of limitations. Poulard v Papamihlopoulos, 254 A.D.2d 266, 678 N.Y.S.2d 383, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10042 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

A cross-complaint, under Civil Practice Act § 264, of an employer, against whom an action had been brought for personal injuries which arose out of negligent operation of an automobile by one of its employees during course of his employment, against defendant owner of the vehicle, was insufficient, in the absence of specific allegation that the accident was caused by some mechanical defect in the automobile, which would constitute primary negligence on the owner's part, since the Civil Practice Act § 264, contemplates situation wherein there may be a right of indemnification between codefendants, while here the liability of defendant owner is derivative and exists because of this section, and the defendant owner stands in the position of an indemnitee and not that of an active wrongdoer or indemnitor. Miller v Green, 26 N.Y.S.2d 54, 176 Misc. 303, 1941 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1531 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1941).

In an action wherein respondent, as absentee owner of a motor vehicle was sued for damages sustained by plaintiff allegedly by reason of failure of a person operating respondent's car with his consent stopped the car on a grade and left it without setting the brakes, wherein respondent filed a third-party complaint against a garage for negligence in repairing the brakes, the third-party complaint was sufficient to sustain a cause of action in favor of respondent against the garage if, in exercise of due care, he failed to discover the defective condition of the brakes after the repair job. Glassman v Goldman, 35 Misc. 2d 429, 230 N.Y.S.2d 947, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3374 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1962).

The cross-complaints of an owner of an automobile against the car driver and the defendant town filed in an action by an infant passenger injured when the car left a slippery road and struck a tree were dismissed, since if as the owner's answer alleged the car was being operated without his consent, there could be no recovery against the owner and no reason for indemnification; and if upon trial it were determined that the automobile was operated with the owner's consent, the vicarious liability of the owner for the operator's negligence could not be passed on to the town. Vescera v Dancy, 52 Misc. 2d 830, 277 N.Y.S.2d 37, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1800 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1967).

In action against U.S. by driver of a horse-drawn wagon for injuries sustained when the rear end of his wagon was struck by an army truck, evidence that the soldier driving the truck had had a beer on two occasions, had struck an automobile and sped from the scene just prior to the accident in question, and that, at the time of the accident he, being a stranger to the vicinity, was lost, which accounted for his driving in the wrong direction to return to his base, was insufficient under New York law to rebut the presumption that the soldier was not acting in the line of duty at the time of the accident. Mandelbaum v United States, 251 F.2d 748, 1958 U.S. App. LEXIS 3609 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1958).

85. Evidence

In action for death of man struck by truck driven by defendant, who purchased it from co-defendant automobile dealer, plaintiff's evidence that dealer's license plates on truck at time of accident had been issued to co-defendant constituted prima facie evidence that he owned truck. Switzer v Aldrich, 307 N.Y. 56, 120 N.E.2d 159, 307 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 56, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 1000 (N.Y. 1954).

Although, ordinarily, whether a defendant has or has not obtained liability insurance is irrelevant and the introduction of evidence as to insurance coverage is highly prejudicial, such evidence is admissible where it has bearing upon whether or not the vehicle, at the time of the accident, was being operated with the owner's permission. Leotta v Plessinger, 8 N.Y.2d 449, 209 N.Y.S.2d 304, 171 N.E.2d 454, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 837 (N.Y. 1960), reh'g denied, 9 N.Y.2d 688, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1809 (N.Y. 1961).

Evidence justified judgment against bus company for damage to store and its contents into which bus crashed on ground that bus was being operated with permission of company at time of accident. Mattera v Green Bus Lines, Inc., 258 A.D. 800, 15 N.Y.S.2d 458, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7004 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

In actions for injuries and death arising from automobile accident, presumption under provision of the Vehicle and Traffic Law making owner of automobile liable for negligence of one using automobile with owner's permission made prima facie case against automobile owner. Deyo v Belotte, 261 A.D. 1119, 27 N.Y.S.2d 1, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9034 (N.Y. App. Div.), reh'g denied, 262 A.D. 921, 29 N.Y.S.2d 910, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6487 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

Evidence as to whether driver was using automobile with owner's permission so as to make owner liable under the Vehicle and Traffic Law for such driver's negligent operation was for the jury, where much of the evidence was given by interested witnesses. Deyo v Belotte, 261 A.D. 1119, 27 N.Y.S.2d 1, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9034 (N.Y. App. Div.), reh'g denied, 262 A.D. 921, 29 N.Y.S.2d 910, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6487 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

Where deceased was killed when struck by a newspaper delivery truck in the city of New York, evidence that the driver of the truck was convicted of "dangerous driving" in connection with the same accident is inadmissible. Walther v News Syndicate Co., 276 A.D. 169, 93 N.Y.S.2d 537, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3137 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

In action to recover for wrongful death of occupant of motor vehicle arising out of collision between automobile and tractor-trailer, implied finding that intestate was not operating motor vehicle, which was being negligently operated, was against the weight of the evidence, particularly in view of injuries to intestate's chest. Billy v Zajac, 7 A.D.2d 729, 180 N.Y.S.2d 809, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4103 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1958), amended, 7 A.D.2d 929, 183 N.Y.S.2d 1008, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9859 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1959).

Where uncontradicted evidence conclusively destroyed any presumption that owner of motor vehicle gave implied permission to another person to operate the vehicle, owner could not be held liable for wrongful death of an occupant of vehicle caused in part by negligent operation thereof. Billy v Zajac, 7 A.D.2d 729, 180 N.Y.S.2d 809, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4103 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1958), amended, 7 A.D.2d 929, 183 N.Y.S.2d 1008, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9859 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1959).

In a wrongful death action against a city arising from an automobile accident in which plaintiff's wife was killed while riding with a city employee to work in the morning, judgment for plaintiff would be reversed and the complaint dismissed, where liability of the city had been premised on the presumption that the employee had been driving the automobile with the city's consent, and where the evidence showed that the employee had no authorization or permission to use the car after work, that the garage in which the automobile was kept was across the street from the employee's job site, that the employee had no reason to have the car at home absent some work-related necessity, and where the evidence would not support any basis for the inference that the employee's use of the automobile was in any way related to the performance of his duties. Burgin v New York, 91 A.D.2d 926, 457 N.Y.S.2d 814, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16211 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. dismissed, 59 N.Y.2d 763, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 5029 (N.Y. 1983).

In personal injury action involving van owned by defendant and operated by defendant's employee, wherein defendant claimed that it was not liable to plaintiffs under CLS Veh & Tr § 388 because employee lacked authority to operate van and therefore presumption of consensual operation was rebutted, defendant was not entitled to summary judgment prior to examinations before trial; absent proof that employee stole van, summary judgment would be premature, since facts underlying defendant's claim were solely within defendant's knowledge. Silverman v Arrow Linen Supply Co., 131 A.D.2d 459, 516 N.Y.S.2d 92, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 47915 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

In action arising out of hit and run automobile accident, defendant's pretrial testimony that, at time of accident, his vehicle was parked at his place of employment and he possessed only set of keys to it, was insufficient to eliminate issues of fact such as identity of car involved in accident and, if it was defendant's vehicle, presumption of permissive use imputed to owner under CLS Veh & Tr § 388, where defendant never reported his vehicle stolen, and record contained no evidence that it was stolen. Delgado by Velazquez v Sikora, 227 A.D.2d 176, 642 N.Y.S.2d 12, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4852 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

Court erred in admitting evidence that owner had used tractor for excavating purposes some 5 years after accident since that evidence was irrelevant to question of whether tractor was being used "exclusively for agricultural purposes" during period leading up to accident. Palmer v Rouse, 232 A.D.2d 909, 649 N.Y.S.2d 76, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11264 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

Evidence of negligence of one operating an automobile by permission of the owner must be of such a character as to render it admissible as to and binding upon the owner before the statutory liability of the owner for death or injuries to person or property resulting from such negligence is established. Linde v Bracken, 68 N.Y.S.2d 871, 1947 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2170 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1947).

In negligence action arising from automobile accident, plaintiff's offer of proof that former owner of other car would testify that she had transferred car and certificate of title to defendant for $50 was sufficient for jury to infer that defendant owned car; thus, fact that plaintiff did not intend to introduce evidence regarding record ownership of other car did not warrant dismissal of action. Horvath v Lindenhurst Auto Salvage, 60 F.3d 120, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 17083 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1995).

86. Res judicata

Judgments in prior actions against a city and one of its employees, for negligent operation of a city automobile, determining that the city had no power to consent to the use of such vehicle for pleasure purposes so as to subject it to liability under this section, are not res judicata as to whether there was permission to use the vehicle under a policy of automobile liability insurance issued to the city and covering said vehicle. Fox v Employers' Liability Assurance Corp., 239 A.D. 671, 268 N.Y.S. 536, 1934 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10914 (N.Y. App. Div. 1934).

Since a van owner was not in privity with its driver in a prior suit in which claims by a church's van's driver against the van owner's driver were dropped, the van owner was not protected by collateral estoppel in church's van's passengers' suit. N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388's vicarious liability did not create privity for collateral estoppel purposes and the van owner did not control, participate in, or have an interest in the church's driver's action.

Carter v Gospel Temple Church of God in Christ, 19 A.D.3d 353, 796 N.Y.S.2d 417, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6088 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2005).

A judgment in an action brought by the owner of an automobile to recover for property damages is not res judicata on the issue of contributory negligence in an action by the driver of an automobile, subsequently tried, for personal injuries. Applebaum v New York R. Corp., 300 N.Y.S. 526, 166 Misc. 129, 1937 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1952 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1937).

Finding of negligence in action against driver of rented truck was not res judicata in subsequent action against owner of truck. De Laurentis v Firemans Fund Indem. Co., 5 Misc. 2d 706, 165 N.Y.S.2d 942, 1956 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1301 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1956).

For purpose of raising question of res judicata in action by operator of motor vehicle where previous actions between owner thereof and owner of other automobile involved in same accident had resulted in verdict of no cause of action against owner of car which was driven by plaintiff, above statute creates no relationship of privity since the liability created under it is in favor of third parties. Willsey v Strawway, 44 Misc. 2d 601, 255 N.Y.S.2d 224, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1423 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963), aff'd, 22 A.D.2d 973, 254 N.Y.S.2d 830, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2548 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

A judgment against a plaintiff occupant of an automobile for personal injuries in an action brought against the vehicle's owner was res judicata in plaintiff's subsequent suit against the driver of the automobile. Andrasko v Calkins, 47 Misc. 2d 816, 263 N.Y.S.2d 256, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1480 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1965).

In personal injury action arising out of plaintiff being hit in eye by egg thrown from car owned by defendant, defendant was not bound by admissions to reckless conduct made by infant defendants who were in car when egg was thrown, which necessarily included negligence; because defendant was not collaterally estopped from denying negligence, he was entitled to present evidence to rebut claim predicated on vicarious liability statute (CLS Veh & Tr § 388), and plaintiff's summary judgment motion would be denied. Levitt v Peluso, 168 Misc. 2d 239, 638 N.Y.S.2d 878, 1995 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 680 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1995).

Personal injury claimant was entitled to summary judgment against state on liability issue based on res judicata and collateral estoppel effect of Supreme Court's determination that state employee who was driving car was 100 percent responsible for accident for failing to yield right of way to plaintiff's vehicle, considering state's participation in defense of Supreme Court action through appearance by Attorney General pursuant to CLS Pub O § 17 and relation between state and negligent driver through doctrine of respondeat superior and CLS Veh & Tr § 388. Pratt v State, 181 Misc. 2d 488, 694 N.Y.S.2d 604, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 315 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1999).

Injured plaintiff was entitled to partial summary judgment on issue of liability of owner of vehicle involved in accident, although owner appeared and contested liability, where default judgment was granted against driver pursuant to CLS CPLR § 3215, default judgment was entitled to res judicata and collateral estoppel effect, and thus issue of driver's negligence was conclusive as matter of law. Myung H. Ha v T.W. Smith Corp., 185 Misc. 2d 895, 714 N.Y.S.2d 873, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 433 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2000).

Liability of a taxicab corporation for alleged negligence of its driver, being derivative under this section, and the corporation having been absolved of liability by a jury after the operator of the cab failed to appear and defend, the driver, if subsequently called upon to defend, could defend on the ground of res judicata. Campbell v Jat Transp. Corp., 207 N.Y.S.2d 707 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960).

Notes to Unpublished Decisions

I. Generally

1. Common law liability

Unpublished decision: District court's denial of the corporation's motion for indemnification was in error; under the statute which the corporation was liable, N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 388, the common law rule that a vehicle owner could recover indemnity from a negligent user/lessee, even absent an express indemnity provision, was not abrogated. The jury unanimously found that the corporation was not involved in the accident other than as owner of the vehicle. Desena v Pavel, 289 Fed. Appx. 426, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 15636 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2008).

Editor's Notes: Laws 1977, ch 799, §§ 1, 7, 8 and 9, provides as follows:

Section 1. Legislative intent. The legislature hereby finds that a large number of states offer their residents the option of choosing their own personal license plate identification numbers, and such states derive significant revenues from such programs for the support of motor vehicle and other programs. Often these plates contain only letters or combination of letters and numbers of special meaning to the registrant. New York state has for many years offered its residents a limited variety of special number plates, but not to the extent offered to residents of other states. The legislature hereby declares it to be the policy of this state to authroize issuance of special plates in combinations of up to eight letters or numbers and to cause the public to be apprised of the availability of such plates. The legislature further finds that the imposition of surcharges or other taxes by administrative order is an usurpation of legislative powers and prerogatives. Therefore, the commissioner of motor vehicles is directed to refund all moneys collected pursuant to regulations issued by the commissioner imposing a surcharge on certain license renewals.

§ 7. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the commissioner of motor vehicles shall refund to or credit the account of any person who, on and after September first, nineteen hundred seventy-six, paid a surcharge on the fees imposed upon the issuance and renewal of any driver's license pursuant to section five hundred three of the vehicle and traffic law, in accordance with certain regulations promulgated by the commissioner.

§ 8. The amount named in this section, or so much thereof as shall be sufficient to accomplish the purposes designated by the appropriation, is hereby appropriated and authorized to be paid to the commissioner of motor vehicles which amount shall be immediately available for payment when this act becomes a law.

Laws 1994, ch 654, §§ 1, 8, eff Jan 29, 1995 and Aug 2, 1994, respectively, provide as follows:

Section 1. Legislative findings and declaration. The legislature hereby finds that agriculture is an important and unique industry in the state, providing fresh, nutritious food and valuable fiber at an economical cost to the state's consumers. The legislature further finds that agricultural producers occasionally need to make use of the public roadways to transport crops, equipment and supplies from one part of their farms to the other, especially during harvest season, in order to maintain an efficient, viable farm enterprise. The vehicles used to transport such commodities must be equipped to satisfy the production needs of farmers yet meet certain minimum standards to assure the safety of both the farm vehicle driver and the motoring public. Because of the reliance of farmers on registered farm vehicles at critical times in the growing season, it is also important to minimize out-of-service time and expense associated with equipment repairs. Therefore, it is the purpose of this act to address the need of farmers to use farm vehicles in connection with crop production while maintaining the safety of the public roadways, by setting or requiring development of safety equipment and registration standards for farm vehicles registered pursuant to subdivision thirteen of section four hundred one of the vehicle and traffic law.

§ 8. This act shall take effect immediately, provided, however, that sections one through six of this act shall take effect on the one hundred eightieth day after it shall have become a law, except that any rules and regulations necessary for the effective implementation of this act shall be promulgated on or before that date.

Section 1. This act shall be known and may be cited as the "heavy duty vehicle emissions reduction act".

§ 2. Legislative intent. The legislature hereby finds and declares that emissions from diesel-powered heavy duty vehicles such as trucks and buses pose a potential threat to the health and well-being of the citizens of New York State. Recent studies have concluded that particulate emissions from such vehicles have significant health impacts. While the federal Clean Air Act requires that light duty vehicles be regularly inspected to determine if they exceed emission standards, there is currently no federal requirement that diesel-powered heavy duty vehicles be similarly inspected. Therefore, it is the intent of the legislature to protect the health and well-being of New York citizens by requiring that diesel-powered heavy duty vehicles be inspected to determine if they exceed emissions standards.

§ 10. This act shall take effect immediately provided that it shall not apply to vehicles defined by section one hundred forty-two of the vehicle and traffic law or vehicles owned by counties, towns, cities, or villages, and vehicles defined by section one hundred four of the vehicle and traffic law until June 1, 2000. 1. In general

Motorist has general right to be free from arbitrary state intrusion on his freedom of movement even in an automobile. People v Ingle, 36 N.Y.2d 413, 369 N.Y.S.2d 67, 330 N.E.2d 39, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 1821 (N.Y. 1975).

Police may stop automobile to ascertain if occupant has driver's license and motor vehicle registration. People v Merola, 30 A.D.2d 963, 294 N.Y.S.2d 301, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3232 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1968).

Officers have right to stop and question motorist in course of routine traffic check. People v Jeffries, 45 A.D.2d 6, 355 N.Y.S.2d 878, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4849 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1974), aff'd, 38 N.Y.2d 722, 381 N.Y.S.2d 37, 343 N.E.2d 755, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 2314 (N.Y. 1975).

The exceptions set forth in this section are not specifically set forth in the enacting clause and are in the nature of provisos. Under such circumstances, it is not necessary to plead the exceptions in an information charging a defendant with operating an unregistered motor vehicle. Whether the defendant was within the exceptions was a matter of defense and the burden is upon the defendant to show them. People v Rockwell, 123 N.Y.S.2d 201, 1953 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1940 (N.Y. County Ct. 1953).

2. Purpose

The provisions of this statute requiring the owner of a motor vehicle to register same and to display registration number thereon are not intended to afford greater protection to the public. Hyde v McCreery, 145 A.D. 729, 130 N.Y.S. 269, 1911 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4826 (N.Y. App. Div. 1911).

The object and purpose of this section is to promote the safety of those traveling public highways. Schultz v Morrison, 154 N.Y.S. 257, 91 Misc. 248, 1915 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 892 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1915), aff'd, 172 A.D. 940, 156 N.Y.S. 1144, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9675 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

Two objects of requirements of statute for registration of motor vehicles were to facilitate identification of owner and to protect general public using highways by eliminating certain classes of operators and by requiring production of evidence of financial responsibility in the event of injury to others. American Motorists Ins. Co. v Snyder, 63 Misc. 2d 690, 313 N.Y.S.2d 200, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1414 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1970).

A claim against the state to recover damages for the claimant's alleged inability to bring an action against the owner of a vehicle that struck his automobile because the address on the vehicle's registration is incorrect, which claim is predicated upon the state's alleged negligence in failing to establish proper registration procedures for motor vehicles and to properly supervise and insure the registration of motor vehicles within the state, would be dismissed, since the claimant failed to specify in what manner the state's alleged culpability caused his injury, since the system by which the state registers automobiles is purely an exercise of discretion and the state's authorization to maintain motor vehicle records is peculiarly governmental, and since the registration requirements of the Vehicle and Traffic Law are designed for the protection of the general public and do not give rise to a special duty to specific individuals. Chung v State, 122 Misc. 2d 676, 471 N.Y.S.2d 524, 1984 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2885 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1984).

3. Constitutionality

While former § 51 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law may have imposed a burden "of sorts on interstate commerce", the state might under its police power, without violating the commerce clause, regulate the use of its own highways and exact compensation for their use, and, for that purpose, impose moderate, reasonable, uniform, non-discriminatory registration regulations and fees, even on vehicles engaged directly in interstate commerce, at least so long as the State regulations do not contravene congressional enactments on the same subject. People v Learnard, 305 N.Y. 495, 114 N.E.2d 9, 305 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 495, 1953 N.Y. LEXIS 792 (N.Y. 1953).

The provisions of this section providing for higher registration fees for station wagons than for other private passenger vehicles and a shorter time for registering and re-registering station wagons were not confiscatory or discriminatory nor did they deprive an owner of a station wagon of the equal protection of law. Farrall v Bragalini, 11 Misc. 2d 1075, 178 N.Y.S.2d 850, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3558 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), app. dismissed, 4 N.Y.2d 1030, 177 N.Y.S.2d 683, 152 N.E.2d 648, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 947 (N.Y. 1958).

Provisions of the Vehicle and Traffic Law imposing higher registration fees on station wagons than on private passenger vehicles are not constitutional, on ground that they deny equal protection of the laws. Farrall v Bragalini, 11 Misc. 2d 1075, 178 N.Y.S.2d 850, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3558 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), app. dismissed, 4 N.Y.2d 1030, 177 N.Y.S.2d 683, 152 N.E.2d 648, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 947 (N.Y. 1958).

Amendment provision of the Vehicle and Traffic Law shortening the period of grace for use of motor vehicle registrations following expiration date from end of January to January 15, except that passenger motor vehicle registration may still be used during all of the month of January following expiration date, is not unconstitutional on ground that it is a denial of equal protection of the laws. Farrall v Bragalini, 11 Misc. 2d 1075, 178 N.Y.S.2d 850, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3558 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), app. dismissed, 4 N.Y.2d 1030, 177 N.Y.S.2d 683, 152 N.E.2d 648, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 947 (N.Y. 1958).

Statute requiring motor vehicle operator to produce registration certificate or operator's license on demand of policeman is declaratory of common-law right of police to briefly stop and inquire of citizen or criminal to ascertain that only legal activity is being carried on. People v Russo, 38 Misc. 2d 957, 239 N.Y.S.2d 374, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2136 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1963).

CLS Veh & Tr § 401, which penalizes improper registration of vehicle, was not unconstitutional as applied to defendant on grounds of vagueness or failure to provide notice since defendant had clear notice from statutory definition of both "truck" and "suburban" motor vehicle that his pickup truck was improperly registered as suburban vehicle when it should have been registered as commercial vehicle. People v Mulcahy, 149 Misc. 2d 419, 564 N.Y.S.2d 974, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 657 (N.Y. City Ct. 1990).

4. Effect of violation

In an action to recover for personal injuries caused by defendant's alleged negligence in the operation of his automobile it was error to charge the jury that they could consider defendant's failure to register his machine, in violation of law, as prima facie proof of negligence. Hyde v McCreery, 145 A.D. 729, 130 N.Y.S. 269, 1911 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4826 (N.Y. App. Div. 1911).

In weapons prosecution, trial court properly denied motion to suppress gun found in defendant's van–police officer may stop automobile based upon reasonable suspicion that occupants of vehicle have committed violation of law, including traffic violations, and when vehicle has justifiably been stopped, Vehicle and Traffic Law requires that motorist produce, upon demand of police officer, automobile registration, certificate and all other information required concerning his license to operate (Vehicle and Traffic Law § 401 [4])–failure to exhibit valid operator's license to policeman is presumptive evidence that motorist is not duly licensed–accordingly, stop of defendant's van was proper where defendant initially failed to produce his license and drove off, and gun which was discovered in plain view was not product of unlawful search. People v Phillips, 159 A.D.2d 326, 552 N.Y.S.2d 603, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2677 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1990).

An instruction to a jury that defendant was chargeable with negligence in permitting his son to drive the car in violation of this section was proper. Schultz v Morrison, 154 N.Y.S. 257, 91 Misc. 248, 1915 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 892 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1915), aff'd, 172 A.D. 940, 156 N.Y.S. 1144, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9675 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

This section was inapplicable in an action for imputed negligence where the evidence failed to bring the driver within the provisions of this section. Limbacher v Fannon, 169 N.Y.S. 490, 102 Misc. 703, 1918 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 934 (N.Y. App. Term 1918).

Where automobile was sold, but seller failed to remove license plate upon transfer of ownership as required by statute, and buyer failed to register automobile in accordance with statute, seller could not deny ownership in action brought against seller arising out of accident occurring after sale, and seller could be held liable for damages resulting from negligent operation of automobile. Phoenix Ins. Co. v Guthiel, 132 N.Y.S.2d 478, 206 Misc. 3, 1954 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2629 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1954), rev'd, 1 A.D.2d 99, 147 N.Y.S.2d 341, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3621 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1955).

A violation of subdivision 7 of this section did not constitute a misdemeanor and where a certificate of conviction recited that the defendant had committed a misdemeanor for a violation of subdivision 7 a new trial had to be ordered. The error could not be remedied by a mere change in the certificate of conviction. People v Osborn, 10 Misc. 2d 712, 175 N.Y.S.2d 705, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3762 (N.Y. County Ct. 1958).

The fact that the Department of Motor Vehicles allowed defendant to register his pickup truck with passenger plates rather than commercial plates does not prevent his conviction for operating an improperly registered vehicle in violation of section 401 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, since defendant was fully aware that the vehicle was improperly registered and the registration was issued on the basis of defendant's representations on the registration application forms (Vehicle and Traffic Law § 401 [1] [b]). Moreover, the statute is not unconstitutional on grounds of vagueness or failure to provide notice since defendant had clear notice from the statutory definition of both "truck" and "suburban" motor vehicle that his pickup truck was improperly registered as a "suburban" vehicle (Vehicle and Traffic Law § 401 [6]) when it should have been registered as a commercial vehicle. People v Mulcahy, 149 Misc. 2d 419, 564 N.Y.S.2d 974, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 657 (N.Y. City Ct. 1990).

5. Application to particular vehicles or persons

A children's bus is not an "ambulance" within subd 6. In re Children's Bus Service, Inc., 247 A.D. 735, 285 N.Y.S. 477, 1936 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8543 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 272 N.Y. 523, 4 N.E.2d 429, 272 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 523, 1936 N.Y. LEXIS 1018 (N.Y. 1936).

A "go-cart" is a motor vehicle subject to registration as such if operated upon the public highway. Stevenson v Merchants Mut. Ins. Co., 37 Misc. 2d 996, 235 N.Y.S.2d 589, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2149 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1962).

Conventional bicycle from which had been removed various operational parts and which was propelled by a lawnmower gasoline engine and was capable of being stopped only by shorting the spark plug was not, at time it was being operated by 12-year-old boy on public highway prior to fatal collision with automobile, "an automobile" within meaning of any automobile insurance policy issued to various persons who might be conceivably liable since device could not be legally used on public highway as a "motor vehicle" in view of New York statutes; nor was it a "bicycle", "motorcycle" or "motor scooter". Lalomia v Bankers & Shippers Ins. Co., 58 Misc. 2d 530, 296 N.Y.S.2d 464, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 952 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1968), modified, 35 A.D.2d 114, 312 N.Y.S.2d 1018, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3949 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1970).

A "mini-bike" or "mini-motorcycle" comes within the statutory definition of a "motorcycle" or "motor-driven cycle" rather than a "motor vehicle" and would in a proper case be governed by §§ 410 and 503 and not §§ 401 and 501 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law. People v Moe, 62 Misc. 2d 27, 307 N.Y.S.2d 921, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 975 (N.Y. App. Term 1969).

A two-wheeled vehicle with a seat and a motor known as a "mini-bike" is a vehicle which is regulated and required to be registered under the Vehicle and Traffic Law. People v Devlin, 64 Misc. 2d 327, 314 N.Y.S.2d 670, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1280 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1970).

Vehicle, which is commonly known as "The Oliver" and which has four rubber tired wheels with two moveable metal rods or arms as part thereof at end of which a metal scooper dipper is attached and has seat between the two rear wheels and behind the steering wheel for operator, is not a motor vehicle but is a "power shovel" within statute requiring registration of motor vehicles. People v Felder, 116 N.Y.S.2d 39, 1952 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1797 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1952).

In prosecution for violation of statute requiring registration of all motor vehicles operated or driven upon public highways, ruling of commissioner of motor vehicles that shoveloader was not a motor vehicle was not binding upon the magistrate's court, but was entitled to great weight. People v Felder, 116 N.Y.S.2d 39, 1952 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1797 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1952).

Charge of driving an unregistered motor vehicle was dismissed, as defendant was driving an off-road motorcycle, which was not a motor vehicle under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 125. People v Miller, 196 Misc. 2d 591, 764 N.Y.S.2d 498, 2003 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 896 (N.Y. J. Ct. 2003).

Where defendant's van was equipped with bullet restraint features, including the windows and gun ports, and was primarily used to transport money and other valuables to and from defendant's check cashing business, the van had been clearly modified to an "armored truck," requiring commercial registration under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 401(1)(b). People v David's Check Cashing, Inc., 781 N.Y.S.2d 864, 4 Misc. 3d 826, 2004 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1133 (N.Y. City Ct. 2004).

Finding that the corporation's truck exceeded weight limits in violation of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 385(9), 401(7)(F)(b) was supported by substantial evidence and, as a result, the corporation was not entitled to relief under N.Y. C.P.L.R. art. 78; the traffic enforcement agent's testimony regarding the condition of the roadway at the location of the weighing site, the agent's training, the accuracy of the scales, the manner in which the agent weighed the corporation's vehicle, and the weight observed and recorded for each measurement provided a sufficient basis for the determination of the that the truck exceeded the weight limit, and the agent's uncontroverted testimony established that the ground where the scales were placed was level, even, and clear of dirt and debris. Sprint Recycling, Inc. v Martinez, 12 A.D.3d 451, 784 N.Y.S.2d 597, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13301 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2004).

Insurer was obligated to indemnify a driver for a personal injury claim arising from a traffic accident on a public roadway; the fact that the pickup truck being operated by the driver was registered as an agricultural truck, N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 401(7)(E), rather than as a farm vehicle, § 401(13) was not a basis to deny coverage because the pickup truck was used exclusively for farm purposes and the accident occurred along the most direct route between the two farm parcels. Thus, the pickup truck was not subject to regular motor vehicle registration because of its exclusive use as a farm vehicle. McLaughlin v Midrox Ins. Co., 70 A.D.3d 1463, 894 N.Y.S.2d 648, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1263 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 72 A.D.3d 1658, 899 N.Y.S.2d 722, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3540 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2010).

A "Tournament car" owned by the members of the tournament team is required to be registered and to display registration plates. 1953 Ops St Compt File #6035.

A 14-year-old boy who had attached a 2 and ½ horsepower lawnmower motor to his bicycle using the end of a baseball bat as a means of transmitting the power of the motor to the rear wheel of his bicycle could not be convicted of a violation of the regulations pertaining to motor vehicles and motorcycles. People v Garfinkel, 64 Misc. 2d 774, 315 N.Y.S.2d 689, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1216 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1970).

Where defendant's van was equipped with bullet restraint features, including the windows and gun ports, and was primarily used to transport money and other valuables to and from defendant's check cashing business, the van had been clearly modified to an "armored truck," requiring commercial registration under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 401(1)(b). People v David's Check Cashing, Inc., 781 N.Y.S.2d 864, 4 Misc. 3d 826, 2004 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1133 (N.Y. City Ct. 2004).

6. —Publicly owned vehicles

A peremptory mandamus order directing the state tax commission to register as a private motor vehicle for personal use a Ford automobile with the wooden body of the type known as "Station Wagon" was properly granted under this section where it appeared that use of car was entirely personal and not commercial. Zabriskie v Law, 203 A.D. 40, 196 N.Y.S. 423, 1922 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7118 (N.Y. App. Div. 1922).

Where a certificate of registration shows the owner of a motor vehicle to be the "Sheriff, Richmond County," but the vehicle is in fact maintained and repaired by a municipality, and no registration fees have been paid, a denial of ownership by the city will not prevail since the exemption from the payment of registration fees is allowed only with respect to motor vehicles owned or controlled by a municipality. Enstrom v New York, 258 A.D. 672, 17 N.Y.S.2d 964, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8269 (N.Y. App. Div.), reh'g denied, 259 A.D. 832, 19 N.Y.S.2d 1022, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6894 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

Where a motor vehicle of a municipal department of sanitation is illegally parked, the department of sanitation as the registered owner may be the defendant. It may, like any other registered owner, relieve itself of responsibility for the violation by disclosing who actually parked the vehicle. People ex rel. Hunter v Department of Sanitation, 86 N.Y.S.2d 437, 193 Misc. 233, 1948 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3910 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1948).

7. —Non-resident owners

A conviction for operating an unregistered motor vehicle upon New York highways must be reversed where it appeared that the vehicle was owned and operated by New Jersey residents, registered in New Jersey, and merely operated in New York to deliver bakery products produced in New Jersey to New York stores and for return of stale products from such stores to the New Jersey bakery. People v Hager, 14 A.D.2d 556, 218 N.Y.S.2d 180, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9676 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1961).

Defendant was properly convicted of operating an unregistered motor vehicle upon the public highways of New York, although his employer, a New York corporation owning the vehicle, maintained a place of business in New Jersey where the vehicle was garaged and out of which it was operated and in which state it was registered, where he failed to bring himself within the protection of subd. 1 of § 250 by showing that the motor vehicle was one which his employer was "compelled to register" in New Jersey. People v Uzzolino, 14 A.D.2d 559, 218 N.Y.S.2d 895, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9683 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1961).

Defendant found guilty of operating unregistered vehicle where proof established that defendant operated a vehicle which was not registered in the state of New York and defendant failed to establish, by any evidence, that vehicle in question was properly registered in Rhode Island and that Rhode Island and/or Massachusetts would offer like immunity to New York residents, although defendant's employer, owner of vehicle, was Massachusetts corporation and vehicle was registered in Rhode Island. People v Nettleton, 57 Misc. 2d 854, 293 N.Y.S.2d 746, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1198 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1968).

Where the petitioner, who was in the service and stationed in Oklahoma, had registered a car there and that registration expired on January 31, 1968, his conviction for operation of an unregistered vehicle on June 19, 1968 constituted a traffic infraction only; and therefore, would not qualify as a basis for revocation of his operator's license when coupled with two speeding convictions within 18 months. Lyons v Tofany, 60 Misc. 2d 310, 303 N.Y.S.2d 431, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1625 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1969).

8. —Trailers

Trailers and semitrailers are "vehicles" within Vehicle and Traffic Law, but not "motor vehicles" within section thereof declaring motor vehicle owner liable for death or injuries resulting from negligent operation thereof by any person legally using it with owner's express or implied permission, especially since such law as whole clearly shows Legislature's purpose and intent to classify motor vehicles, trailers and other vehicles separately. Hennessy v Walker, 279 N.Y. 94, 17 N.E.2d 782, 279 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 94, 1938 N.Y. LEXIS 802 (N.Y. 1938).

It was error to dismiss a prosecution for operating an unregistered vehicle on a public highway, where, on the basis of testimony of defendant and the arresting officer, a question of fact was presented as to whether the vehicle was a "trailer" requiring registration, it being a portable building equipped with removable wheels and ordinarily used as a field office in connection with construction jobs, but which was susceptible of being used as a habitation, even though it was only moved once a year. People v Guilianti, 10 N.Y.2d 433, 224 N.Y.S.2d 4, 179 N.E.2d 850, 1962 N.Y. LEXIS 1467 (N.Y. 1962).

Trailer held not "motor vehicle" within statute making owner liable for accident from negligent operation of motor vehicle by any one with owner's permission. Herrick v Arborio, 258 N.Y.S. 5, 144 Misc. 15, 1932 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1154 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1932).

The defendant was properly convicted of operating an unregistered trailer where the evidence showed that he was operating a tractor with a 1957 New York registration and a trailer with a New Jersey 1957 registration and that he picked up a load of scrap copper at Mt. Kisco, New York, and was transporting the same over the public highways of New York State in an intrastate shipment to Rome, New York. People v Sauerhafer, 9 Misc. 2d 1022, 171 N.Y.S.2d 174, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3813 (N.Y. County Ct. 1958).

Defendant was properly convicted of operating an unregistered motor vehicle where he drove a trailer of cars, which trailer was unregistered in New York, from Buffalo through New Jersey back into New York. Registration could not be avoided merely by routing the shipment through part of New Jersey and therein into New York where the cargo was unloaded even though the route taken was the most direct route. People v Janusewski, 11 Misc. 2d 866, 171 N.Y.S.2d 298, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4043 (N.Y. County Ct. 1958).

Non-resident owner and operator of truck-trailer was obligated to have trailer hauled by tractor which was duly registered in New York when it hauled the trailer between two points in New York State. People ex rel. Heerbrandt v Dantschisch, 153 N.Y.S.2d 519 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1956).

9. —Tractors, cranes, and the like

A gasoline-driven farm tractor on which was mounted a crane and hoist for the purpose of moving and tiering heavy cargo at steamship piers was a tractor crane within the meaning of former § 2, and the owner was not required to register said vehicle. People v Jarka Corp., 285 N.Y. 548, 33 N.E.2d 239, 285 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 548, 1941 N.Y. LEXIS 1584 (N.Y. 1941).

This section (former § 11) subd. 1, is not applicable to an owner of a crane which comes within the exception contained in former § 2, subd. 8. People v Bay Ridge Operating Co., 259 A.D. 260, 19 N.Y.S.2d 140, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6110 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

A motor truck on which is permanently mounted a large crane is not a "tractor crane" exempt from the license requirements under former § 2, subd. People v P. T. Cox Const. Co., 15 N.Y.S.2d 756, 172 Misc. 244, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2450 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1939), aff'd, 259 A.D. 707, 19 N.Y.S.2d 145, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6299 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

Bottom dump earth mover was required to be registered in accordance with statute which authorized registration of earth moving equipment to be confined in operations solely to contract site, and the machine was thus an "automobile" within comprehensive general liability policy provision excluding from coverage automobiles if accident involved occurred away from premises owned by, rented to, or controlled by insured. McConville, Inc. v Merchants Mut. Ins. Co., 47 Misc. 2d 279, 262 N.Y.S.2d 521, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1611 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1965).

10. Production of license and registration --requirement generally

A single automobile on a public highway may be stopped only upon reasonable suspicion of a violation of the Vehicle and Traffic Law and, absent a minimal degree of such suspicion, a "routine traffic check" may be conducted only according to nonarbitrary, nondiscriminatory, uniform procedures, such as at roadblocks, checkpoints and weighing stations. People v Ingle, 36 N.Y.2d 413, 369 N.Y.S.2d 67, 330 N.E.2d 39, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 1821 (N.Y. 1975).

A police officer is clearly authorized to stop an automobile and demand of its occupants the certificate of its registration and such other information as is set forth in the above statute. People v Hoffman, 24 A.D.2d 497, 261 N.Y.S.2d 651, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3892 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1965).

Police may stop automobile to ascertain if occupant has driver's license and motor vehicle registration. People v Merola, 30 A.D.2d 963, 294 N.Y.S.2d 301, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3232 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1968).

Police officers could not, under vehicle and traffic law sections which authorize inspections for overloading and require production of registration certificates and operator's licenses on demand, stop automobile in absence of probable cause, or even sufficient reasonable suspicion to authorize street detention, in circumvention of Fourth Amendment rights prohibition against warrantless searches. People v Bennett, 47 A.D.2d 322, 366 N.Y.S.2d 639, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9236 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), overruled, People v Simone, 48 A.D.2d 497, 370 N.Y.S.2d 583, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9927 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1975).

In prosecution for third degree possession of stolen property arising from incident in which defendant and companion were found sitting in stolen car which had its steering column partially exposed, defendant's right to remain silent was violated when prosecutor was permitted to ask officer if defendant or companion offered explanation as to what they were doing, where they were going or where they had come from; CLS Veh & Tr § 401(4), which created affirmative duty for operator of vehicle to supply information necessary for identification of vehicle and its owner, did not encompass questions asked by prosecutor. People v Glover, 163 A.D.2d 174, 559 N.Y.S.2d 518, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8443 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 986, 563 N.Y.S.2d 774, 565 N.E.2d 523, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 4598 (N.Y. 1990).

Police report was admissible as business record where driver of offending vehicle was under duty to provide responding officer with certificate of registration under CLS Veh & Tr § 401(4), and report indicated that any information as to ownership of offending vehicle came from that document. Lopez v Ford Motor Credit Co., 238 A.D.2d 211, 656 N.Y.S.2d 257, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3891 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1997).

Subdivision 4 of this section, requiring persons operating motor vehicles to produce registration certificates and provide all information demanded by a peace officer as to their operating licenses, imposes no limitation upon an officer's right to demand production of the documents in question, and a police officer may lawfully stop a moving vehicle for the sole purpose of determining whether its driver has a certificate of registration and an operator's license. People v Isaac, 38 Misc. 2d 1018, 239 N.Y.S.2d 624, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2141 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963).

Where the police have a legitimate reason to believe that surreptitious circumstances may surround the operation of a vehicle, they may inquire into all areas of identification thereof in order to verify the accuracy of any document certifying ownership of the vehicle, all without a warrant. People v Goldstein, 60 Misc. 2d 745, 304 N.Y.S.2d 106, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1180 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1969).

11. —Propriety of request, under particular circumstances

A police officer may not arbitrarily stop an automobile on a public highway, solely because of its unusual appearance, to examine the motorist's license and registration or to inspect the vehicle for possible equipment violations. People v Ingle, 36 N.Y.2d 413, 369 N.Y.S.2d 67, 330 N.E.2d 39, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 1821 (N.Y. 1975).

Where police had observed automobile being driven in suspicious manner in circles in high crime area, they were entitled to stop automobile in order to check registration of vehicle and license of driver. People v Denti, 44 A.D.2d 44, 353 N.Y.S.2d 10, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5506 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1974).

Officer, who, after stopping automobile and asking to see accused-driver's license registration, learned that accused was not man police were looking for in belief that he was carrying gun and who had no further ground to suspect accused of anything, did not have probable cause to question accused about large sealed envelopes which were on front seat and which contained gambling items. People v Jeffries, 45 A.D.2d 6, 355 N.Y.S.2d 878, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4849 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1974), aff'd, 38 N.Y.2d 722, 381 N.Y.S.2d 37, 343 N.E.2d 755, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 2314 (N.Y. 1975).

When policemen found van in street obstructing traffic with its motor still running, he had duty to remove it from line of traffic and it was proper for him to look for registration papers. People v Maier, 47 A.D.2d 344, 366 N.Y.S.2d 660, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9241 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1975).

Undercover narcotics officer was justified in approaching defendant to make reasonable inquiry and in requesting that he produce his license and vehicle registration after officer observed defendant, while stopped at traffic light, tilt his head back and snort what officer believed to be substance, and then followed defendant at rapid speed until he stopped approximately 30 blocks later at phone booth. People v Sanders, 143 A.D.2d 1063, 533 N.Y.S.2d 639, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10834 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 982, 540 N.Y.S.2d 1016, 538 N.E.2d 368, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 1674 (N.Y. 1989).

Police officers, who stopped automobile speeding on turnpike, had duty to enforce traffic laws of state and properly requested operator's license and automobile's registration. People v Anonymous, 56 Misc. 2d 1022, 290 N.Y.S.2d 337, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1594 (N.Y. County Ct. 1968).

Check of car registration and numbers pursuant to Vehicle and Traffic Law § 401 was not an illegal search, even though defendant was not in vehicle when police requested him to permit identification thereof, where state police had requested investigating officer to determine whether defendant still had in his possession a vehicle registered in New York which was the subject of a New Jersey stolen car alarm. People v Hart, 75 Misc. 2d 908, 349 N.Y.S.2d 289, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1329 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1973).

Police officer, who before commencing his tour of duty observed a picture on a wanted poster in precinct house, and who, while later on duty in patrol car which was stopped at traffic light, saw man in a car facing in the opposite direction who officer testified "looked like" the person on the poster, had authority, under the Vehicle and Traffic Law, to stop defendant's vehicle at that time and place, not for purpose of searching the vehicle and arresting defendant, but to satisfy officer's curiosity and suspicions regarding identity of the driver. People v Howell, 78 Misc. 2d 538, 357 N.Y.S.2d 828, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1441 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1974).

Where police officer noticed defendant and two companions looking into and trying door handles on automobiles parked in airport parking lot at 2:30 a.m., stopped defendant's automobile as it left airport, ordered defendant out of automobile upon defendant's failure to produce automobile registration or driver's license, and, upon defendant's exit, noticed paper towel concealing 11 opaque manila envelopes of the type used for packaging small loose quantities of marijuana, officer had probable cause to seize envelopes and, upon verifying that they contained marijuana, arrest defendant and conduct further search of automobile. People v Roldan, 82 Misc. 2d 450, 368 N.Y.S.2d 938, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2698 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1975).

Police officer's stop of vehicle was pretextual, and entitled driver to suppression of evidence of intoxication and driving without valid registration, where officer was primarily motivated to investigate unfounded suspicion that prostitution activity had been, or was about to be, committed, unrelated to any observed traffic infraction. People v Reynolds, 185 Misc. 2d 674, 713 N.Y.S.2d 813, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 376 (N.Y. County Ct. 2000), rev'd, 97 N.Y.2d 341, 741 N.Y.S.2d 147, 767 N.E.2d 638, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 3790 (N.Y. 2001).

A police officer has a clear right to require a person seated behind the wheel of a parked vehicle to produce his license and registration, even though at the time he was not driving said vehicle, since this statute is only declaratory of a long established and recognized common-law right of police officers to briefly stop and inquire of citizens and/or criminals to ascertain that only legal activity was being carried on. United States ex rel. Farrugia v Bhono, 256 F. Supp. 391, 1966 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6527 (S.D.N.Y. 1966).

12. —Propriety of arrest, search, or seizure after stop

Defendant's inability to produce registration for car he was driving, coupled with his statement and that of his passenger that they did not know who owned car, authorized police to detain car and its occupants in order to run radio check to ascertain whether car was properly registered and whether it had been reported stolen. People v Pena, 209 A.D.2d 744, 618 N.Y.S.2d 149, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10854 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1994), app. denied, 85 N.Y.2d 941, 627 N.Y.S.2d 1003, 651 N.E.2d 928, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 1971 (N.Y. 1995).

A state policeman was within his right as a peace officer in asking to see a motorist's ownership registration of the vehicle he was driving and his driver's license, and the actions of the motorist in using obscene, violent and indecent language toward the state troopers were disorderly conduct. Lippert v State, 139 N.Y.S.2d 751, 207 Misc. 632, 1955 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3488 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1955).

Subdivision 4 of this section, in authorizing a police officer to stop a car and ask the driver to produce his registration and driver's license, is declaratory of long- established common-law custom, and, where in pursuance of it, the officer observes that the driver is carrying a loaded gun in the vehicle, contrary to § 245 of the Conservation Law, he can properly arrest the driver for violating that law and seize the gun as evidence. People v Russo, 38 Misc. 2d 957, 239 N.Y.S.2d 374, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2136 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1963).

A motorist's production of his registration certificate and driver's license in court, resulting in dismissal of charges against him for driving without the required documents, does not make his arrest by an officer without a warrant and an incidental search of his person illegal, the arrest having been in good faith on the basis of a misdemeanor committed in the officer's presence. People v Isaac, 38 Misc. 2d 1018, 239 N.Y.S.2d 624, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2141 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963).

A police officer stopping a moving automobile to demand production of registration certificates and information concerning the driver's operating license, can lawfully arrest the operator without a warrant if he fails to produce the requested documents or give the requested information as to identity, etc., and, following such arrest, to search the person of the operator for weapons in the interest of self-protection, and any contraband, such as narcotics, turned up in course of such search is not evidence illegally obtained. People v Isaac, 38 Misc. 2d 1018, 239 N.Y.S.2d 624, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2141 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963).

Peace officer who, after stopping motorist to determine registration of his vehicle and his authorization to drive, arrests the motorist for failure to produce the documents may conduct a search of the motorist's person in order to remove weapons or other instrumentalities which might be used for resisting officer, for escape, or for similar purposes. People v Isaac, 38 Misc. 2d 1018, 239 N.Y.S.2d 624, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2141 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963).

Where defendant stopped for driving over speed limit was arrested for traffic misdemeanors of being unlicensed operator and driving unregistered vehicle and officer did not arrest defendant for possessing stolen car although there was probable cause for arrest on that ground, seizure of brown paper bag found in automobile was reasonable and justifiable as incident to arrest upon probable cause that defendant possessed stolen car. People v Smith, 62 Misc. 2d 473, 308 N.Y.S.2d 909, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1779 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1970).

Where defendant drove into deserted parking lot at 3:00 a.m. while plainclothesed police were in process of arresting another individual for possession of a controlled substance and defendant refused to show his driver's license and registration when ordered to do so by the police and attempted to drive away, police had probable cause to arrest the defendant without a warrant because of the reasonable likelihood that the automobile was to be moved, and thus search which produced allegedly forged license and registration was legal. People v Kelly, 77 Misc. 2d 264, 353 N.Y.S.2d 111, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1121 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct.), modified, 79 Misc. 2d 534, 361 N.Y.S.2d 135, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1700 (N.Y. App. Term 1974).

Where defendant produced driver's license with typeface different from that normally used by Department of Motor Vehicles, police had probable cause to arrest defendant for felony possession of a forged instrument, and subsequent station-house search which produced narcotics was authorized as incident to lawful arrest. People v Kelly, 79 Misc. 2d 534, 361 N.Y.S.2d 135, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1700 (N.Y. App. Term 1974).

Where police officer noticed defendant and two companions looking into and trying door handles on automobiles parked in airport parking lot at 2:30 a.m., stopped defendant's automobile as it left airport, ordered defendant out of automobile upon defendant's failure to produce automobile registration or driver's license, and, upon defendant's exit, noticed paper towel concealing 11 opaque manila envelopes of the type used for packaging small loose quantities of marijuana, officer had probable cause to seize envelopes and, upon verifying that they contained marijuana, arrest defendant and conduct further search of automobile. People v Roldan, 82 Misc. 2d 450, 368 N.Y.S.2d 938, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2698 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1975).

Illegal arrest of individual for traffic violation after officer pursued him to an apartment building and broke down the apartment door was violative of defendant's Fourth Amendment rights and could not be basis for a charge of resisting arrest. People v Jones, 108 Misc. 2d 574, 438 N.Y.S.2d 75, 1981 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2243 (N.Y. City Ct. 1981).

The removal by defendant of a motorcycle from a garage at the request of a policeman, who had immediately before observed defendant operating the motor vehicle on a public street without registration plates affixed to it, was neither a search of the garage nor a seizure of the motorcycle, since the police officer simply wanted to check the motorcycle's vehicle identification number (VIN) to see if the motorcycle had been stolen (it had been). The officer had the right to demand that the motorcycle be produced to check the VIN (Veh & Tr Law § 401), and the fact that the vehicle was then behind the closed door to the garage did not change the officer's authority or the defendant's duty; no expectation of privacy in the garage was violated and there was no random stop of an otherwise lawfully operated vehicle. People v Angelella, 127 Misc. 2d 1001, 487 N.Y.S.2d 643, 1985 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2770 (N.Y. County Ct. 1985).

District court erred in convicting defendant, after a nonjury trial, of operating an unregistered motor vehicle because, while a police officer observed that the vehicle registration tag was expired and confirmed the expiration date of the registration with the State Department of Motor Vehicles, defendant's statements to a police officer that "the plates were expired" constituted admissions that were suppressible, and notice was required. People v Ermmarino (Rocco), 60 Misc. 3d 50, 80 N.Y.S.3d 845, 2018 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3159 (N.Y. App. Term 2018).

State trial judge correctly concluded that arrest for possession of marijuana and search incident to arrest following stop of car, apparently for routine traffic check, were proper, where officers were authorized by statute to stop car for routine check of license and registration and one officer observed the ejection from the stopped car of container of what appeared to be marijuana and cigarette papers. United States ex rel. Gray v New York State Bd. of Parole, 416 F. Supp. 823, 1976 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15413 (S.D.N.Y. 1976).

13. —Parked vehicles

The statute is applicable even though the automobile was parked on a gas station and the defendant was not physically operating the automobile. People v Frank, 61 Misc. 2d 450, 305 N.Y.S.2d 940, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1465 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1969).

Check of car registration and numbers pursuant to Vehicle and Traffic Law § 401 was not an illegal search, even though defendant was not in vehicle when police requested him to permit identification thereof, where state police had requested investigating officer to determine whether defendant still had in his possession a vehicle registered in New York which was the subject of a New Jersey stolen car alarm. People v Hart, 75 Misc. 2d 908, 349 N.Y.S.2d 289, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1329 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1973).

A police officer has a clear right to require a person seated behind the wheel of a parked vehicle to produce his license and registration, even though at the time he was not driving said vehicle, since this statute is only declaratory of a long established and recognized common-law right of police officers to briefly stop and inquire of citizens and/or criminals to ascertain that only legal activity was being carried on. United States ex rel. Farrugia v Bhono, 256 F. Supp. 391, 1966 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6527 (S.D.N.Y. 1966).

14. —Vehicle identification number

Where defendant had a certificate of registration establishing his lawful possession of a truck, and the engine number was incorrectly stated in the certificate because the engine had been changed, he should not be held to have violated this section when he produced a duplicate certificate showing the correction had been made. People v Palter, 271 A.D. 882, 66 N.Y.S.2d 388, 1946 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3566 (N.Y. App. Div. 1946).

The removal by defendant of a motorcycle from a garage at the request of a policeman, who had immediately before observed defendant operating the motor vehicle on a public street without registration plates affixed to it, was neither a search of the garage nor a seizure of the motorcycle, since the police officer simply wanted to check the motorcycle's vehicle identification number (VIN) to see if the motorcycle had been stolen (it had been). The officer had the right to demand that the motorcycle be produced to check the VIN (Veh & Tr Law § 401), and the fact that the vehicle was then behind the closed door to the garage did not change the officer's authority or the defendant's duty; no expectation of privacy in the garage was violated and there was no random stop of an otherwise lawfully operated vehicle. People v Angelella, 127 Misc. 2d 1001, 487 N.Y.S.2d 643, 1985 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2770 (N.Y. County Ct. 1985).

Because of the important role played by the vehicle identification number in the pervasive governmental regulation of the automobile and the efforts by the Federal Government to insure that the vehicle identification number is placed in plain view, there is no reasonable expectation of privacy in the vehicle identification number, for purposes of the Fourth Amendment, even if papers in a car obscure the vehicle identification number from the plain view of a police officer; the placement of obscuring papers is insufficient to create a privacy interest in the vehicle identification number, and a police officer's mere viewing of a vehicle identification number by moving obscuring papers is not a violation of the Fourth Amendment. New York v Class, 475 U.S. 106, 106 S. Ct. 960, 89 L. Ed. 2d 81, 1986 U.S. LEXIS 5 (U.S. 1986).

15. —Evidence; presumptions

In an action to recover for personal injuries caused by defendant's alleged negligence in the operation of his automobile it was error to charge the jury that they could consider defendant's failure to register his machine, in violation of law, as prima facie proof of negligence. Hyde v McCreery, 145 A.D. 729, 130 N.Y.S. 269, 1911 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4826 (N.Y. App. Div. 1911).

Where defendant had a certificate of registration establishing his lawful possession of a truck, and the engine number was incorrectly stated in the certificate because the engine had been changed, he should not be held to have violated this section when he produced a duplicate certificate showing the correction had been made. People v Palter, 271 A.D. 882, 66 N.Y.S.2d 388, 1946 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3566 (N.Y. App. Div. 1946).

The failure to produce for inspection a certificate of registration for a motor vehicle may not be the basis for a conviction under this act, for this section, subd. 4, prescribes a rule of evidence only and the presumption of guilt may be rebutted by uncontradicted evidence of proper registration, such as subsequent production of the certificate itself. People v Simon, 33 N.Y.S.2d 14, 178 Misc. 49, 1942 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1312 (N.Y. County Ct. 1942).

Conviction of traffic offenses of driving without license and without required registration were not "crimes" and could not be introduced to impair credibility of witness. People v Oliver, 80 Misc. 2d 905, 365 N.Y.S.2d 422, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2283 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1975).

Defendant's prior convictions of driving motor vehicle without insurance, without proper driver's license and without required registration were not admissible for impeachment purposes at robbery trial. People v Oliver, 80 Misc. 2d 905, 365 N.Y.S.2d 422, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2283 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1975).

The exceptions set forth in this section are not specifically set forth in the enacting clause and are in the nature of provisos. Under such circumstances, it is not necessary to plead the exceptions in an information charging a defendant with operating an unregistered motor vehicle. Whether the defendant was within the exceptions was a matter of defense and the burden is upon the defendant to show them. People v Rockwell, 123 N.Y.S.2d 201, 1953 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1940 (N.Y. County Ct. 1953).

16. What is "public highway"

Public park owned by municipality with neither roads nor sidewalks was not a "public highway" within statutes prohibiting unlicensed operation and unregistered vehicles. People v Moe, 62

Misc. 2d 27, 307 N.Y.S.2d 921, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 975 (N.Y. App. Term 1969).

Where driveway went around store and on one side was used as parking facility, and driveway appeared to give passage and unrestricted access to road, driveway was "public highway" within statute concerning use of uninspected, uninsured and unregistered vehicle on public highway. People v Garcia, 85 Misc. 2d 693, 380 N.Y.S.2d 491, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3328 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1975).

17. Police power to look under hood

The raising of the hood of an automobile to ascertain whether it is a stolen car, particularly where there was probable cause to believe that it was in fact a stolen car, does not constitute search in violation of the Fourth Amendment. People v Frank, 61 Misc. 2d 450, 305 N.Y.S.2d 940, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1465 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1969).

A police officer has the power to raise the hood of an automobile in order to verify the ownership of a registered car from the serial number appearing on the motor. People v Frank, 61 Misc. 2d 450, 305 N.Y.S.2d 940, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1465 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1969).

18. Ownership of vehicle

There is no presumption that owner of automobile was driving at time of traffic infraction. People v Hildebrandt, 308 N.Y. 397, 126 N.E.2d 377, 308 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 397, 1955 N.Y. LEXIS 996 (N.Y. 1955).

One who has deliberately caused a motor vehicle to be registered in his name as owner will not be permitted, after it has been involved in an accident and caused an injury to deny the truth of a statement as to ownership, and the rule is not altered by the fact that the registration was in another state. People v Simon, 33 N.Y.S.2d 14, 178 Misc. 49, 1942 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1312 (N.Y. County Ct. 1942).

Ownership of a motor vehicle is presumed from proof of registration and in the absence of evidence showing that another is the true owner, the presumption will prevail. Scholick v Fifth Ave. Coach Co., 68 N.Y.S.2d 208, 188 Misc. 476, 1947 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2052 (N.Y. Mun. Ct. 1947).

Proof of registration of motor vehicle constitutes presumptive proof of ownership by person in whose name it is registered which, unexplained, destroys any presumption of ownership which would otherwise arise from evidence that another paid the purchase price and cost of all repairs, maintenance and operation of automobile. Scholick v Fifth Ave. Coach Co., 68 N.Y.S.2d 208, 188 Misc. 476, 1947 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2052 (N.Y. Mun. Ct. 1947).

Distinctions between legal ownership and equitable ownership cannot be recognized in collision cases. Hence, plaintiff, who was not the registered owner of an automobile, and who had the automobile registered in the name of his mother, was not entitled to judgment for collision damage to the automobile. Soos v Soos, 4 Misc. 2d 727, 162 N.Y.S.2d 373, 1956 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1360 (N.Y. County Ct. 1956).

Under CPLR § 4518, the registration of a motor vehicle, in compliance with Vehicle and Traffic Law § 401, may be admitted as prima facie evidence of ownership. People v Meyers, 72 Misc. 2d 1003, 340 N.Y.S.2d 505, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2288 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1973).

Evidence established violation of operating unregistered motor vehicle where officer testified that defendant failed to produce certificate of registration and that teletype check revealed that vehicle was not registered; defendant's lack of ownership and lack of knowledge were immaterial since there is no knowledge requirement and proscription is not limited to owners. People v Hakimi-Fard, 137 Misc. 2d 116, 519 N.Y.S.2d 766, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2656 (N.Y. City Ct. 1987).

19. Report of change of address

Where an insured motorist fails to comply with the statute requiring him to notify the Commissioner of his various changes of address, his failure to receive notices sent to him of cancellation of insurance coverage and license revocations, due to address changes, has no bearing upon the validity of his license revocation. Courtney v Hults, 18 A.D.2d 1091, 239 N.Y.S.2d 562, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3930 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1963).

Petitioner could not be heard to complain of the delay in the receipt of a notice as to the revocation of his operator's license, where he failed to comply with the statute requiring him to notify the respondent of his various changes of address. Triana v Tofany, 66 Misc. 2d 36, 319 N.Y.S.2d 746, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1782 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1971).

In subrogation action arising from motor vehicle accident, court should have granted defendant's motion to vacate default judgment, even though he did not comply with CLS Veh & Tr § 401(3)(a), relating to change of address, and was thus estopped from raising jurisdictional defect, where his moving papers established existence of meritorious defense. USAA Cas. Ins. Co. v Singh, 184 Misc. 2d 296, 714 N.Y.S.2d 627, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 181 (N.Y. App. Term 2000).

As the motorcycle owner was estopped from raising a claim of defective service because she failed to apprise the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles of her current address pursuant to N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 401(3), her motion to vacate the default judgment pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. 5015 should have been denied. Labozzetta v Fabbro, 22 A.D.3d 644, 804 N.Y.S.2d 353, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11132 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2005).

Because a defendant failed to properly notify the department of motor vehicles of a change of address under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 401(3), the defendant's actions could be viewed as a deliberate attempt to avoid notice of a plaintiff's personal injury action; therefore, the defendant was not entitled to relief of a default judgment under N.Y. C.P.L.R. 317, 5015. Cruz v Narisi, 32 A.D.3d 981, 821 N.Y.S.2d 643, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11459 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

20. Use of dealer plates

A dealer violated subd. 1 in allowing the lessee of a customer to use a commercial truck bearing dealer number of plates in the ordinary course of lessee's business for transporting property, prohibited by former § 62 subd. 3. People v Christensen & Weiss, Inc., 250 A.D. 470, 294 N.Y.S. 591, 1937 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8374 (N.Y. App. Div. 1937).

A dealer who permitted his salesman to use a car with dealer plates attached on a personal errand was not barred from recovering damages from driver of the other car, even though the dealer violated subdivision 3 of former § 62, since the violation had nothing to do with the accident. Two Bros. Motors, Inc. v Blackburn, 112 N.Y.S.2d 501, 1952 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2664 (N.Y. County Ct.), aff'd, 280 A.D. 961, 117 N.Y.S.2d 668, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4376 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

21. Administrative matters; disposition of fees, fines, etc.

A regulation by the commissioner of motor vehicles to the effect that the only records which could be inspected in the Albany office were those records which were not available in the offices of various county clerks, and also fixing the period of inspection at one hour per day, which period must be apportioned as between those applying for inspection was unreasonable and deprived public of the right to inspection which is given by this section. Page v Harnett, 223 N.Y.S. 622, 130 Misc. 239, 1927 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1000 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1927).

Statute providing that expenditures from appropriations for administration of driver improvement programs were to be reimbursed from receipts from fees established by Commissioner of Motor Vehicles meant that Commissioner was empowered to spend only so much of said appropriation for driver improvement programs as could be funded from fees which had already been, or could thereafter be, established by Commissioner pursuant to discretionary authority which was already his under existing statutes. Perloff v Melton, 89 Misc. 2d 103, 390 N.Y.S.2d 372, 1976 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2822 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1976), modified, 57 A.D.2d 491, 395 N.Y.S.2d 725, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11402 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

State cannot be held liable for negligently maintaining motor vehicle registration data within its computers for title information allegedly causing claimant insurer to sustain loss when police department released stolen car to former owner who had already been paid by insurer for loss of car, since maintaining and disseminating motor vehicle and operator's records involve exercise of power completely sovereign in nature and State has not waived sovereign immunity for such act. Eagle Ins. Co. v State, 131 Misc. 2d 357, 500 N.Y.S.2d 478, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2395 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1986).

Plaintiff's complaint seeking declaratory and injunctive relief to prevent the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles to sell the lists of driver registrations to the highest bidder as an unconstitutional violation of his right of privacy was dismissed, since the information was not vital or intimate and was in the category of "public records" available to anyone upon demand. Lamont v Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, 269 F. Supp. 880, 1967 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8802 (S.D.N.Y.), aff'd, 386 F.2d 449, 1967 U.S. App. LEXIS 4195 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1967).

Where there was substantial evidence to support an administrative determination under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law art. 2-A that the driver was speeding, driving an uninsured and unregistered vehicle, and had improper plates affixed to the vehicle, the driver's N.Y. C.P.L.R. art. 78 proceeding was dismissed. Stamos v Appeals Bd. of the N.Y. State DMV, 309 A.D.2d 572, 765 N.Y.S.2d 342, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10506 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 505, 775 N.Y.S.2d 782, 807 N.E.2d 895, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 4218 (N.Y. 2003).

This section provides the only method for the legal transfer of an automobile from one person to another. Armstrong v Boomansour, 223 A.D. 511, 228 N.Y.S. 722, 1928 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6253 (N.Y. App. Div. 1928), app. dismissed, 251 N.Y. 590, 168 N.E. 439, 251 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 590, 1929 N.Y. LEXIS 851 (N.Y. 1929), aff'd, 252 N.Y. 590, 170 N.E. 155, 252 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 590, 1929 N.Y. LEXIS 670 (N.Y. 1929).

The state is not liable to the purchaser of an automobile where a registration certificate was issued to the seller on presentation of forged certificate of sale forms stolen from a dealer for an automobile which was stolen after issuance of such certificate, in the absence of sufficient proof to establish the state's negligence; but, assuming that the state was negligent, the issuance of the registration certificate was not the proximate cause of claimant's loss, since such certificate was issued prior to the time that the car was stolen. Paglia v State, 278 A.D. 281, 105 N.Y.S.2d 597, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3793 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951), aff'd, 303 N.Y. 821, 104 N.E.2d 369, 303 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 821, 1952 N.Y. LEXIS 1304 (N.Y. 1952).

Where police officer had probable cause to justify arrest and detention of motorist because of motorist's failure to produce motor vehicle registration and operator's license, and motorist did not attempt to distinguish which items of his alleged damage were attributable to the valid arrest and which were attributable to an invalid arrest for reckless driving, motorist was not entitled to recover from city for false arrest or imprisonment. Burden v Niagara Falls, 44 A.D.2d 754, 352 N.Y.S.2d 42, 354 N.Y.S.2d 42, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5283 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1974).

State was entitled to summary judgment in action to recover for injuries sustained by claimant in motor vehicle accident with driver of vehicle registered as farm vehicle, notwithstanding contention that state negligently issued farm registration for vehicle on registration application that was patently false and made solely to register personal passenger vehicle without purchasing liability insurance, since there was no special duty owed by state to claimant. Swift v State, 166 A.D.2d 833, 562 N.Y.S.2d 825, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12794 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1990), app. denied, 77 N.Y.2d 806, 568 N.Y.S.2d 914, 571 N.E.2d 84, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 558 (N.Y. 1991).

Plaintiff insurer was properly granted summary judgment declaring that defendant insurer had issued farmowner's insurance policy under which it must cover liability of defendant's insured and his employee arising out of ownership, use, and operation of pick-up truck that was involved in accident with vehicle driven by plaintiff's insured where truck was properly registered as farm vehicle under CLS Veh & Tr § 401(13), was used exclusively for farm purposes, and, at time of accident, was traveling along most direct route between 2 farms operated by insured; moreover, under policy, highway where accident occurred was part of "insured premises." Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v Erie & Niagara Ins. Ass'n, 249 A.D.2d 898, 672 N.Y.S.2d 596, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4977 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

Specific and particular authorization of local motor vehicle tax would have to be given effect in preference to general prohibition against local taxes, even if general prohibition were latest legislative expression, since the particular prevails over the general. McLean Trucking Co. v New York, 116 N.Y.S.2d 292, 202 Misc. 604, 1952 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1866 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1952).

The mere payment of registration fees pursuant to this section or the payment of a highway use tax pursuant to article 21 of the Tax Law had no effect whatsoever on the provisions of former § 14 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law. People v Rodenbach, 126 N.Y.S.2d 295, 204 Misc. 905, 1953 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2434 (N.Y. County Ct. 1953), aff'd, 307 N.Y. 614, 120 N.E.2d 826, 307 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 614, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 1383 (N.Y. 1954).

The defendant, charged with driving an unregistered motor vehicle, and who was induced to plead guilty by virtue of the contention by the state trooper that his 10-day temporary certificate issued on June the 3rd expired at midnight on June 12th, was entitled to have his judgment of conviction vacated, since permit did not expire until midnight of June 13th. People v Breckenridge, 16 Misc. 2d 704, 190 N.Y.S.2d 122, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3830 (N.Y. County Ct. 1959).

City ordinance regulating private car rental business, requiring certain equipment and periodic inspections, fell within the broad permissible area provided for under General City Law § 20, subd 13 which empowers cities to regulate and license occupations and businesses under the municipal police power, and said ordinance furthermore did not conflict with state law governing the operation and licensing of motor vehicles generally. Main Private Car Service, Inc. v Mayor of Yonkers, 71 Misc. 2d 417, 336 N.Y.S.2d 207, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1563 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), aff'd, 37 A.D.2d 1044, 327 N.Y.S.2d 583, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7147 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1971).

Even though property being transported originated outside New York, where property was being transported from one point within state to other points within the state in motor vehicle which was registered in another state but not registered in New York, there was a violation of statute prohibiting operation of unregistered vehicles on public highways. People v Schiff, 86 Misc. 2d 90, 381 N.Y.S.2d 957, 1976 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2399 (N.Y. Village Ct. 1976).

An arresting officer would be permitted to testify to an answer given to him by a person stopped for a routine motor vehicle check in connection with his request for the driver's vehicle documents, even though no Miranda warning had been given to the driver, where the officer had observed an expired inspection sticker on the vehicle's windshield thus constituting an articulable and reasonable suspicion that there was a violation of the Veh & Tr Law; Miranda, which does not apply to vehicle and traffic infractions since they are not crimes, would not protect against the use of physical evidence without first giving a warning, and a request for evidentiary material such as the driver's registration and insurance card did not call for any personal statement on the part of the driver. People v Burn, 113 Misc. 2d 481, 449 N.Y.S.2d 569, 1982 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3323 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1982).

Fact that Department of Motor Vehicles allowed defendant to register his pickup truck with passenger rather than commercial plates did not prevent his conviction for operating improperly registered vehicle in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 401 since defendant was fully aware that vehicle was improperly registered, and registration was issued on basis of his misrepresentations on application form. People v Mulcahy, 149 Misc. 2d 419, 564 N.Y.S.2d 974, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 657 (N.Y. City Ct. 1990).

CLS Penal § 450.10 covers key, registration, and insurance identification essential to operation of stolen motor vehicle pursuant to CLS Veh & Tr §§ 312 and 401; thus, police or district attorney were required to at least photocopy key, registration, and insurance identification obtained from defendant's pocket during search incident to his arrest for driving stolen vehicle, and to voucher such photocopies before any release to complainant, just as automobile itself had to be photographed before returning it to complainant. People v Blyden, 160 Misc. 2d 355, 608 N.Y.S.2d 1003, 1994 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 53 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1994).

Information charging defendant with attempted illegal possession of vehicle identification number (VIN) was not fatally defective due to absence of owner's corroborating affidavit, on basis that information did not indicate that defendant lacked owner's permission or authority to possess VIN from car registered in owner's name; VINs are not property of vehicle owner, and thus owner does not have power to authorize anyone else to possess VIN from vehicle registered in his name. People v Codrington, 165 Misc. 2d 214 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1995).

Company's N.Y. C.P.L.R. art. 78 proceeding failed, as the administrative law judge's finding that the company violated N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 401(7)(F)(b) was supported by substantial evidence, as the testimony of the traffic enforcement agent who issued the summons regarding the location of the weighing site and the agent's training, accompanied by certificates establishing the accuracy of the devices the agent used in weighing the company's vehicle, provided a sufficient basis for the determination of the administrative law judge. N.Y. Paving, Inc. v Martinez, 1 A.D.3d 518, 767 N.Y.S.2d 237, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12077 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003).

Accusatory instruments and supporting deposition charging defendant with operating an unregistered motor vehicle were deemed insufficient and were dismissed because they did not set forth the source of the officer's information. People v Singh, 50 Misc. 3d 656, 18 N.Y.S.3d 319, 2015 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3795 (N.Y. J. Ct. 2015).

Plaintiff's complaint seeking declaratory and injunctive relief to prevent the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles to sell the lists of driver registrations to the highest bidder as an unconstitutional violation of his right of privacy was dismissed, since the information was not vital or intimate and was in the category of "public records" available to anyone upon demand. Lamont v Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, 269 F. Supp. 880, 1967 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8802 (S.D.N.Y.), aff'd, 386 F.2d 449, 1967 U.S. App. LEXIS 4195 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1967).

As required under N.Y. C.P.L.R. 7803, substantial evidence supported the administrative law judge's determination that the corporation violated N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 401(7)(F)(b); this evidence included the uncontradicted testimony of the traffic enforcement agent concerning the condition of the roadway at the location of the weigh site, the manner in which the weighing of the vehicle was conducted, the agent's training, and the accuracy of the scales used. Quality Concrete of N.Y., Inc. v Martinez, 11 A.D.3d 697, 783 N.Y.S.2d 292, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12484 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2004).

Motor vehicles purchased by funds of a town but actually used by the town commission must be deemed owned by the commission and therefore exempt from registration fees. 1932 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 174.

3. —Diplomatic vehicles

The fee for registration of motor vehicles in this state is for regulation and for compensation for use of the highways, and a federal treaty, exempting consular officers from all taxation upon their persons or property, has no application thereto. 1929 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 296.

Individuals accredited to the United Nations, who appear on the diplomatic immunity and privilege list of that organization as maintained by the Department of State of the United States, are not subject to the laws of this state as to registration of motor vehicles. Representatives to the United Nations having status equivalent to that of ambassadors are not required to obtain either operators' licenses or registrations for automobiles owned by them. 1949 NY Ops Atty Gen Oct 27.

Motor vehicles of the suburban type, used for both passenger and delivery purposes, should be registered pursuant to this section as station wagons or suburban vehicles. 1955 NY Ops Atty Gen 109 (informal).

7. Production of license and registration --requirement generally

8. —Propriety of arrest, search, or seizure after stop

Police officers may impound vehicles being operated without licenses, registrations or insurance only in accordance with CLS Veh & Tr. 1987 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 87-70.

9. —Evidence; presumptions

A charge of operating an unregistered vehicle may be dismissed when the defendant has rebutted the presumption set forth in Section 401(4) by producing his registration. 1971 NY Ops Atty Gen Jan 14.

10. Use of dealer plates

CLS Veh & Tr § 415 does not authorize use of dealer number plates on vehicles used to transport customers or pick up supplies; such use does not constitute "sale or demonstration" of vehicle or fall within other permitted uses under statute. 1997 NY Ops Atty Gen I 97-27.

11. Administrative matters; disposition of fees, fines, etc.

Fines, penalties and forfeitures collected by a local justice court for violations of sections 306, 401 and 402 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law should be reported to the Justice Court Fund as violations of those sections, even though parking tickets were used by police officers to cite the vehicles. 1981 Op St Compt File #81-85.

The expense incurred by the county clerk in mailing validated driver's licenses and registrations may not be passed on to the applicants. 1982 Op St Compt File #82-120.

12. Miscellaneous matters

The requirement as to exhibiting certain weight figures on specified trucks or trailors applies only to the owner thereof. This section may not be extended by implication to include an operator who is not an owner. 1953 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 191.

Civil penalties and fines imposed for violations of the Vehicle and Traffic Law are not dischargeable in bankruptcy, except where provided for in a Chapter 13 plan and where the debtor completes payments under the plan. Where the debtor's driving or business privileges have been suspended or revoked prior to bankruptcy, the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles is authorized to continue to withhold such privileges after bankruptcy has been filed based upon the debtor's failure to pay such penalties or fines, except where dischargeable in a Chapter 13 case, or based upon the debtor's failure to appear in response to charges of parking or traffic violations. ARTICLE 19 Licensing of Drivers

HISTORY:
Add, L 1972, ch 780, § 9, eff April 1, 1973.

§ 501. Drivers' licenses and learners' permits

1. The commissioner shall issue classified drivers' licenses as provided in this article. Any such license shall be valid only for the operation of the type of vehicles specified for each such class of license but shall not be valid for the operation of any type of vehicle for which an endorsement is required by this section or regulations promulgated hereunder unless the license contains such endorsement and shall be subject to any restrictions contained thereon.

2. Driver license classifications, endorsements and restrictions and exceptions.

(a) License classifications.

(i) Class A. Such license shall be valid to operate any motor vehicle or any combination of vehicles except it shall not be valid to operate a motorcycle other than a class B or C limited use motorcycle.

(ii) Class B. Such license shall be valid to operate any vehicle or combination of vehicles which may be operated with a class E license and shall be valid to operate any motor vehicle or any such vehicle, other than a tractor, towing a vehicle having a GVWR of not more than ten thousand pounds and shall be valid to operate any altered motor vehicle commonly referred to as a "stretch limousine" having a seating capacity of nine or more passengers including the driver except it shall not be valid to operate a motorcycle other than a class B or C limited use motorcycle.

(iii) Class C. Such license shall be valid to operate any vehicle or combination of vehicles which may be operated with a class E license and shall be valid to operate any motor vehicle with a GVWR of not more than twenty-six thousand pounds and any such vehicle towing another vehicle with a GVWR of not more than ten thousand pounds except it shall not be valid to operate a tractor or a motorcycle other than a class B or C limited use motorcycle.

(iv) Class D. Such license shall be valid to operate any passenger or limited use automobile or any truck with a GVWR of not more than twenty-six thousand pounds or any such vehicle towing a vehicle with a GVWR of not more than ten thousand pounds, or any such vehicle towing another vehicle with a GVWR of more than ten thousand pounds provided such combination of vehicles has a GCWR of not more than twenty-six thousand pounds, or any personal use vehicle with a GVWR of not more than twenty-six thousand pounds or any such vehicle towing a vehicle with a GVWR of not more than ten thousand pounds, except it shall not be valid to operate a tractor, a motorcycle other than a class B or C limited use motorcycle, a vehicle used to transport passengers for hire or for which a hazardous materials endorsement is required, or a vehicle defined as a bus in subdivision one of section five hundred nine-a of this title.

(v) Class E. Such license shall be valid to operate only vehicles which may be operated with a class D license, except that in addition it shall be valid to operate any such motor vehicle, other than a vehicle defined as a bus in subdivision one of section five hundred nine-a of this chapter, used to transport up to fourteen passengers for hire and other than an altered motor vehicle commonly referred to as a "stretch limousine" having a seating capacity of nine or more passengers including the driver.

(vi) Class DJ. Such license shall be valid to operate only vehicles which may be operated with a class D license by a person under eighteen years of age, except it shall not be valid to operate a motor vehicle with an unladen weight or a GVWR of more than ten thousand pounds or any motor vehicle towing another vehicle with an unladen weight or GVWR of more than three thousand pounds. Such license shall automatically become a class D license when the holder becomes eighteen years of age.

(vii) Class M. Such license shall be valid to operate any motorcycle, or any motorcycle, other than a limited use motorcycle, towing a trailer.

Shall be required to transport hazardous materials as defined in section one hundred three of the hazardous materials transportation act, public law 93-633, title I, when the vehicle transporting such materials is required to be placarded under the hazardous materials regulation, 49 CFR part 172, subpart F or is transporting any quantity of material listed as a select agent or toxin in 42 CFR part 73. An applicant for a commercial driver's license in this state who wishes to transport hazardous materials must obtain a New York state hazardous materials endorsement even if such applicant holds a valid hazardous materials endorsement issued by another state. A farm vehicle shall be exempt from the requirement for such endorsement when transporting hazardous materials within one hundred fifty miles of the person's farm. However, a separate non-commercial endorsement shall be required for such exempted transportation. In order to obtain such endorsement, the license holder must submit fingerprints for purposes of a criminal history record check pursuant to subdivision six of this section.

(iii) N endorsement. Shall be required to operate tank vehicles.

(iv) P endorsement. Shall be required to operate a bus as defined in sections one hundred four and five hundred nine-a of this chapter, any altered motor vehicle commonly referred to as a "stretch limousine" having a seating capacity of nine or more passengers including the driver or any motor vehicle with a gross vehicle weight or gross vehicle weight rating of more than twenty-six thousand pounds which is designed to transport passengers in commerce. For the purposes of this subparagraph the gross vehicle weight of a vehicle shall mean the actual weight of the vehicle and the load.

(v) X endorsement. Shall be an endorsement combining H and N endorsements.

(vi) [Repealed]

(vii) Personal use vehicle endorsement. Shall be required to operate a personal use vehicle or a combination of personal use vehicles which may not be operated with a class C, D or E license. (viii) W endorsement. Shall be required to operate a tow truck.

(ix) Metal coil endorsement. Shall be required to operate any commercial motor vehicle, as defined in subdivision four of section five hundred one-a of this article, carrying metal coils. The identification and scope of such endorsement shall be as prescribed by regulation of the commissioner.

(c) Restrictions. Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this subdivision, the operation of vehicles may be limited by a restriction or restrictions placed on a license. The following restrictions may be issued by the commissioner based upon the representative vehicle in which the road test was taken, or if the license is issued based on driving experience, the vehicle in which the experience was gained. In addition, the commissioner may by regulation provide for additional restrictions based upon other types of vehicles or other factors deemed appropriate by the commissioner.

(i) A restriction prohibiting the operation of a vehicle with air brakes.

(ii) A restriction limiting the operation of a combination of vehicles to truck-trailer combinations.

(iii) A restriction limiting operation to vehicles of not more than a specified GVWR.

(d) Exceptions. (i) Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this subdivision, a motor vehicle or combination of vehicles, other than a motorcycle, that is (A) a military vehicle operated by a member of the armed forces, or (B) a police vehicle or fire vehicle during its use in an emergency operation as defined in section one hundred fourteen-b of this chapter, or in the performance of official duties, or activities related to the execution of emergency governmental functions pursuant to section 383.3 (d)(2) of title 49 of the code of federal regulations, or (C) a vehicle owned and identified as being owned by the state or a political subdivision thereof or an ambulance service as defined in subdivision two of section three thousand one of the public health law or a voluntary ambulance service as defined in subdivision three of such section and used to provide emergency medical service as defined in section three thousand one of the public health law, or to perform official duties, or activities related to the execution of emergency governmental functions pursuant to section 383.3 (d)(2) of title 49 of the code of federal regulations, may be operated with any class license other than a class DJ, M or MJ license. For the purposes of this paragraph the term "member of the armed forces" shall include active duty military personnel; members of the reserve components of the armed forces; members of the national guard on active duty, including personnel on full time active guard duty, personnel on part-time national guard training, and national guard military technicians (civilians who are required to wear military uniforms); and active duty United States coast guard personnel. The term shall not include United States reserve technicians. Notwithstanding the provisions of section one hundred fourteen-b of this chapter, for the purposes of this subparagraph, the term "emergency operation" shall include returning from emergency service.

(ii) Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this subdivision, a motor vehicle or combination of vehicles which is designed and primarily used for purposes other than the transportation of persons or property which is excluded from the definition of commercial motor vehicle pursuant to the provisions of subparagraph (iv) of paragraph (a) of subdivision four of section five hundred one-a of this chapter may be operated with any class license other than a class DJ, M or MJ license.

3. Restrictions on use of class DJ and class MJ licenses. A class DJ or class MJ license shall permit the holder to operate a vehicle in accordance with the following restrictions:

(a) in the counties of Nassau and Suffolk:

(i) for the purpose of driving to and from a state-approved cooperative work-study educational program, or to or from an approved program for credit in a post-secondary institution, or to or from a state-approved registered evening high school or while engaged in farm employment, or to or from an approved driver education course; or

(ii) from five o'clock in the morning to nine o'clock in the evening, to and from a place of business where the holder is regularly employed, or when accompanied by a duly licensed parent, guardian, person in a position of loco parentis, driver education teacher, or driving school instructor.

(b) in all other areas of the state, except for the city of New York:

(i) from five o'clock in the morning to nine o'clock in the evening; or

(ii) from nine o'clock in the evening to five o'clock in the morning when going to or from school, or to or from a place of business where the holder is employed on a regularly scheduled basis, or when accompanied by a duly licensed parent, guardian or one in a position of loco parentis to the licensee.

(c) in the city of New York, driving shall be prohibited.

(d) for the purpose of this subdivision, the term "school" shall mean instruction, education or training licensed or approved by a department or agency of the state or training conducted by the armed forces of the United States except it shall not include extra-curricular activities or social events for which scholastic credits are not given.

(e) any person operating a motor vehicle to or from school or to or from a place of business as authorized by this subdivision must possess documentation signed by such person's instructor or employer. The commissioner shall, by regulation, prescribe the form and content of such documentation.

4. Probationary licenses. Any driver's license, other than a class DJ and class MJ license, shall be considered probationary until the expiration of six months following the date of issuance thereof, and thereafter as provided in section five hundred ten-b of this title, but this subdivision shall not apply to renewals of a license, or, unless so provided by the commissioner, to a license for which a road test has been waived by the commissioner.

5. Learners' permits. (a) The commissioner shall issue learner's permits as provided in this article. Such permit shall be valid only

(i) for the operation of a motor vehicle of a type which could be operated by the holder of the class of license for which application is being made;

(ii) when the holder is under the immediate supervision and control of a person at least twenty-one years of age who holds a license valid in this state for the operation of the type of vehicle being operated; and

(iii) in accordance with any additional restrictions prescribed by the commissioner and noted on such permit.

(b) In addition to the restrictions contained in paragraph (a) of this subdivision, a learner's permit issued to a person applying for a class DJ or class MJ license shall be subject to the restrictions contained in section five hundred one-b of this article and shall not be valid for the operation of any motor vehicle:

(i) within the city of New York, except that the holder of such permit may operate a motor vehicle within the city of New York from five o'clock in the morning to nine o'clock in the evening when such person is under the immediate supervision and control of a person at least twenty-one years of age who is such holder's parent, guardian, person in a position of loco parentis, driver education teacher for the purpose of certification pursuant to section eight hundred six-a of the education law or driving school instructor for the purpose of certification pursuant to subdivision seven-a of section three hundred ninety-four of this chapter and such vehicle is equipped with dual controls as prescribed by the commissioner;

(ii) in the counties of Nassau and Suffolk, except that the holder of such permit may operate a motor vehicle within the counties of Nassau and Suffolk from five o'clock in the morning to nine o'clock in the evening when such person is under the immediate supervision and control of a person at least twenty-one years of age who is such holder's licensed parent, guardian, person in a position of loco parentis, driver education teacher for the purpose of certification pursuant to section eight hundred six-a of the education law, or driving school instructor for the purpose of certification pursuant to subdivision seven-a of section three hundred ninety-four of this chapter, or a person at least twenty-one years of age who holds a license valid in this state for the operation of the type of vehicle being operated, for the purpose of certification pursuant to subdivision two of section five hundred two of this article, and who has been designated by such holder's parent, guardian or person in a position of loco parentis to accompany such holder, as evidenced by a written statement to that effect;

(iii) from nine o'clock in the evening to five o'clock in the morning, unless the holder of such permit is under the immediate supervision and control of a person at least twenty-one years of age who is such holder's licensed parent, guardian, person in a position of loco parentis, driver education teacher for the purpose of certification pursuant to section eight hundred six-a of the education law, or driving school instructor for the purpose of certification pursuant to subdivision seven-a of section three hundred ninety-four of this chapter.

(c) The restrictions contained in paragraphs (a) and (b) of this subdivision shall apply to a learner's permit which has been issued to a person who has made application for a class M or class MJ license, except that the required supervising driver need exercise only general supervision and control over the learner as prescribed by regulation of the commissioner when the learner is operating a motorcycle, provided, however, a person who possesses a learner's permit and who has made application for a class M or class MJ license, shall not operate a motorcycle while there is another person on such motorcycle unless such other person possesses a valid class M license.

6. H endorsement criminal history record check. Upon receipt of an application and completion of all other requirements imposed by the commissioner for an H endorsement to permit the operator to transport hazardous materials as defined in section one hundred three of the hazardous materials transportation act, public law 93-633, title I, when the vehicle transporting such materials is required to be placarded under the hazardous materials regulation, 49 CFR part 172, subpart F, or is transporting any quantity of material listed as a select agent or toxin in 42 CFR part 73, the commissioner, subject to the rules and regulations of the division of criminal justice services, shall initiate a criminal history record check of the person making the application. The commissioner shall obtain from each applicant two sets of fingerprints and the division of criminal justice services processing fee imposed pursuant to subdivision eight-a of section eight hundred thirty-seven of the executive law and any fee imposed by the federal bureau of investigation. The commissioner shall promptly transmit such fingerprints and fees to the division of criminal justice services for processing. The federal bureau of investigation and the division of criminal justice services shall forward such criminal history record, if any, to the commissioner. All such criminal history records processed and sent pursuant to this section shall be confidential pursuant to the applicable federal and state laws, rules and regulations, and shall not be published or in any way disclosed to persons other than authorized personnel, unless otherwise authorized by law. No cause of action against the commissioner, the department or the division of criminal justice services for damages related to the dissemination of criminal history records pursuant to this section shall exist when the commissioner, department or division of criminal justice services has reasonably and in good faith relied upon the accuracy and completeness of criminal history information furnished to it by qualified agencies. The provision of such information by the division of criminal justice services shall be subject to the provisions of subdivision sixteen of section two hundred ninety-six of the executive law. The consideration of such criminal history record by the commissioner shall be subject to article twenty-three-A of the correction law. The commissioner shall review such criminal history record for a conviction within the previous ten years for: (i) any violent felony offense, as defined in section 70.02 of the penal law; or (ii) any felony defined in article one hundred twenty, one hundred twenty-five, one hundred thirty, one hundred thirty-five, one hundred forty, one hundred forty-five, one hundred fifty, one hundred fifty-five, one hundred sixty, one hundred seventy, one hundred seventy-five, two hundred, two hundred ten, two hundred twenty, two hundred twenty-one, two hundred forty, two hundred sixty-five, four hundred sixty, four hundred seventy, four hundred eighty-five, or four hundred ninety of the penal law or section fifty-three-e of the railroad law; or (iii) any offense in another jurisdiction which includes all of the essential elements of such offenses described in paragraphs (i) and (ii) of this subdivision and for which a sentence of imprisonment for more than one year was authorized in the other jurisdiction and is authorized in this state, regardless of whether such sentence was imposed; or any of the following federal offenses: improper transportation of a hazardous material, as defined in 49 U.S.C. 46312, conveying false information or threats, as defined in 49 U.S.C. 46507, espionage, as defined in 18 U.S.C. 793, 794 or 3077, sedition, as defined in 18 U.S.C. 2384, 2385 or section 4 of the subversive activities control act of 1950, treason, as defined in 18 U.S.C. 2381 or conspiracy or solicitation, as defined in 18 U.S.C. 371 or 373; or (iv) an attempt or conspiracy to commit any of the offenses specified in paragraphs (i), (ii), or (iii) of this subdivision. In calculating such ten year period, any period of time during which the person was incarcerated for any reason between the time of commission of the previous felony and the time of commission of the present felony shall be excluded and such ten year period shall be extended by a period or periods equal to the time served under such incarceration. After receipt of a criminal history record from the division of criminal justice services, if any, and review of such record, the commissioner shall promptly notify the applicant whether he or she will be granted an H endorsement based upon the applicant's criminal history and promptly notify such applicant of the determination and the procedure for requesting a hearing pursuant to this subdivision. If the commissioner denies an applicant an H endorsement based either in whole or in part on such applicant's criminal record, the commissioner must notify such applicant of the basis for such denial, and afford such applicant notice and an opportunity to be heard and offer proof in opposition to such determination. If the applicant requests a hearing to contest the commissioner's determination, such hearing must be requested no later than thirty days after the applicant's receipt of the determination and must be scheduled by the commissioner within sixty days of such request. Upon request and pursuant to the rules and regulations of the division of criminal justice services, any applicant may obtain, review and seek correction of his or her criminal history record.

Amendment Notes The 2016 amendment by ch 58, §§ 1, 4 (Part E), in 2(b)(iv), added "or any motor vehicle with a gross vehicle weight or gross vehicle weight rating of more than twenty-six thousand pounds which is designed to transport passengers in commerce" in the first sentence and added the second sentence and repealed 2(b)(vi), which read: "Farm endorsement. Shall be required to operate a farm vehicle or a combination of farm vehicles which may not be operated with a class C, D or E license. The identification and scope of any such endorsement or endorsements shall be as prescribed by regulation of the commissioner. Such identification and scope shall, at a minimum, include a distinction between the operation of a farm vehicle having a GVWR of more than twenty-six thousand pounds within one hundred fifty miles of the person's farm and the operation of a combination of farm vehicles having a GVWR of more than twenty-six thousand pounds within one hundred fifty miles of the person's farm."

The 2020 amendment by ch 6, §§ 3, 4, added "and shall be valid to operate any altered motor vehicle commonly referred to as a 'stretch limousine' having a seating capacity of nine or more passengers including the driver" in 2(a)(ii); added "and other than an altered motor vehicle commonly referred to as a 'stretch limousine' having a seating capacity of nine or more passengers including the driver" in 2(a)(v); and added "any altered motor vehicle commonly referred to as a 'stretch limousine' having a seating capacity of nine or more passengers including the driver" in 2(b)(iv).

These sections were repealed by Chapter 780 of the Laws of 1972. The reduced time period contained in the sections repealed are reenacted in the appropriate sections added by Chapter 780. The repeal of the two sections was intended to clarify the intended results of the two separate acts enacted at the 1972 Legislative Session.

1. In general; purpose

Manifest purpose of Vehicle and Traffic Law is to extend liability of owner of automobile for injuries caused by persons operating automobile with owner's permission regardless of operator's competency or whether operator is authorized by law to operate automobiles on highway. Devitt v Continental Casualty Co., 245 A.D. 115, 281 N.Y.S. 336, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10241 (N.Y. App. Div. 1935), rev'd, 269 N.Y. 474, 199 N.E. 765, 269 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 474, 1936 N.Y. LEXIS 1413 (N.Y. 1936).

A license to operate an automobile is something of real value and may not be revoked arbitrarily or taken away capriciously. Application of Wignall, 278 A.D. 28, 103 N.Y.S.2d 7, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3728 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951), aff'd, 303 N.Y. 435, 103 N.E.2d 728, 303 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 435, 1952 N.Y. LEXIS 806 (N.Y. 1952).

A rule of the police commission, which attempts to prohibit a certain class of persons holding chauffeur's licenses from using such license, is unenforceable since such rule contravenes the underlying purpose of former § 10 to establish a uniform system of operation and use of motor vehicles. Boord v Wallander, 89 N.Y.S.2d 796, 195 Misc. 557, 1949 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2343 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1949), modified, 277 A.D. 253, 98 N.Y.S.2d 1, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3035 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

It does not follow, from the fact that this statute requires an applicant for operator's license to furnish such proof of fitness "as the Commissioner shall in his discretion determine" that a driver's license is nothing but a privilege solely within the discretion of the Commissioner to grant or withhold. Davis v Hults, 24 Misc. 2d 954, 204 N.Y.S.2d 865, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2738 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960).

A roadway over lands in an Indian reservation must be regarded as a private roadway under Art. I § 13 of the Constitution, and a member of the tribe driving over such roads is entitled to operate a motor vehicle over them without a driver's license. People v Williams, 43 Misc. 2d 790, 252 N.Y.S.2d 347, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1538 (N.Y. County Ct. 1964).

One of the objects of this section is to protect users of highways from the inexperience and immaturity of those under 18 years of age. Plunkett v Heath, 1 N.Y.S.2d 778, 1938 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1226 (N.Y. City Ct. 1938).

2. Construction

The amendment of the former analogous section in 1924 merely relieved the person who was legally authorized to drive an automobile on July 1, 1924, from the duty of procuring an operator's license before Oct. 1, 1924, but did not authorize any person, without regard to age, to drive an automobile during that period. Wagoner v Fidelity & Casualty Co., 215 A.D. 170, 213 N.Y.S. 188, 1926 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10930 (N.Y. App. Div. 1926), aff'd, 253 N.Y. 608, 171 N.E. 803, 253 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 608, 1930 N.Y. LEXIS 979 (N.Y. 1930).

Violations of Vehicle and Traffic Law, though classed as misdemeanors and punishable by imprisonment in penitentiary, should be punished, in cities of first class as well as in State at large, as specifically provided in Vehicle and Traffic Law, and with respect to such violations it was not intended that offenders should be sentenced to indeterminate terms. People v Guariglia, 13 A.D.2d 809, 216 N.Y.S.2d 22, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10907 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1961).

Subdivision 7 of this section, providing that no person shall at the same time hold more than one unexpired driver's license issued by the Commissioner "pursuant to this section," does not make it illegal for a motorist to hold an unexpired license issued by another state as well as an unexpired New York driver's license. Snyder v State, 20 A.D.2d 827, 247 N.Y.S.2d 757, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4209 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

The word "business" as used in this section, subd. 1 means the interest, concern or duty of a parent or guardian, and is not limited to productive trade, profession or occupation. People v Gillette, 16 N.Y.S.2d 361, 172 Misc. 847, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2542 (N.Y. City Ct. 1939).

3. Constitutionality

One-year delay between defendant's arraignment on attempted murder and other charges and his subsequent indictment on such charges did not result in violation of constitutional and statutory rights to speedy trial where, although delay occurred because of clerical error in district attorney's office, where papers on defendant's case were mislaid, charges were serious, defendant was incarcerated for only eight days, and there was no indication that defense had been impaired by delay. People v Taranovich, 37 N.Y.2d 442, 373 N.Y.S.2d 79, 335 N.E.2d 303, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 2044 (N.Y. 1975).

Vehicle and Traffic Law § 501, subd 1, ¶ b, is constitutional insofar as it provides that junior-operators' licenses do not entitle the licensees thereunder to operate motor vehicles in Nassau County. Pratt v Tofany, 37 A.D.2d 854, 326 N.Y.S.2d 257, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3290 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1971).

The restriction in former Vehicle and Traffic Law § 501, subd 1(b), prohibiting a junior operator from operating an automobile within Nassau County, except for the purpose of driving to and from a state approved co-operative work-study educational program does not violate the equal protection clause of the New York State Constitution. Pratt v Tofany, 37 A.D.2d 854, 326 N.Y.S.2d 257, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3290 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1971).

While constitutionality of subd. 8 of this section has admittedly been upheld as against the contention that due process requires a hearing before revocation, its constitutionality has been questioned if made to apply to a motor vehicle operator without distinction as to whether or not he was at fault in any of the three accidents within 18 months on the basis of which his license is suspended. Devine v Hults, 25 Misc. 2d 59, 202 N.Y.S.2d 886, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2896 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), rev'd, 12 A.D.2d 624, 208 N.Y.S.2d 227, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6697 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1960).

Statute insofar as it restricts use of junior operators' licenses in Nassau county is unreasonable and unconstitutional. People v Joy, 50 Misc. 2d 690, 271 N.Y.S.2d 15, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1750 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1966).

4. Right to counsel

Where a motorist was not informed of his right to counsel but was convicted of operating a motor vehicle without being duly licensed, the judgment of conviction was reversed and a new trial ordered. People v Warcup, 285 A.D. 1077, 139 N.Y.S.2d 721, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6711 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

The right to drive an automobile is not an inherent or acquired property right but a license granted to an individual which can be revoked by proper legislation. An arbitrary procedure is not to be countenanced but inasmuch as a traffic infraction is not for any purpose a penal or criminal act, it is not necessary to advise the accused of his rights to counsel if he is advised of the penalty and given a sufficient opportunity to defend himself. People ex rel. Joyce v Hogenson, 117 N.Y.S.2d 260, 1952 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2015 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1952).

5. Violation as negligence

No presumption of negligence or contributory negligence arose from the fact that the driver of an automobile had no operator's license. Adams v Surlock, 286 N.Y. 667, 36 N.E.2d 699, 286 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 667, 1941 N.Y. LEXIS 2210 (N.Y. 1941).

A violation of this section is not evidence of negligence nor does it establish a prima facie case against the violator. Phass v MacClenathen, 274 A.D. 535, 85 N.Y.S.2d 643, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3123 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

An error in charging that an unlicensed operator is prima facie guilty of negligence in the operation of his automobile is not cured by additional statements to the effect that he might rebut the presumption. Phass v MacClenathen, 274 A.D. 535, 85 N.Y.S.2d 643, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3123 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

The failure to carry a driver's license by a licensed driver at the time of an accident does not constitute contributory negligence as a matter of law. Balterman v Flores, 103 N.Y.S.2d 815, 199 Misc. 830, 1951 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1679 (N.Y. App. Term 1951).

6. Insurance provisions

A clause in a policy of liability insurance excluding insurer from obligation where the liability of insured arises from injuries caused by an automobile owned by him while being driven "by any person under age fixed by law" does not constitute a defense in an action upon the policy where the facts are undisputed that the accident occurred after midnight, while the automobile was being driven, with permission of insured, by his son, a boy of seventeen years, who possessed a junior operator's license. The fact that the boy, in driving the automobile at the time of the accident, was violating this section does not relieve insurer from liability. The clause in policy relates solely to the question of age, not to violations of traffic law, and the boy was old enough lawfully to drive the automobile. S. & E. Motor Hire Corp. v New York Indem. Co., 255 N.Y. 69, 174 N.E. 65, 255 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 69, 1930 N.Y. LEXIS 710 (N.Y. 1930).

A clause in a policy of liability insurance excluding the insurer from an obligation where liability arises from injuries caused by an automobile owned by him while being driven "by any person under age limit fixed by law" constitutes sufficient defense in an action on the policy where it appears that the accident occurred while the automobile was being driven, in the presence of the insured, by his son, a boy under the age of sixteen years. Devitt v Continental Casualty Co., 269 N.Y. 474, 199 N.E. 765, 269 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 474, 1936 N.Y. LEXIS 1413 (N.Y. 1936).

A holder of a junior operator's license could not be considered as outside the coverage of his mother's liability insurance policy on her car because he was operating it during hours of darkness while unaccompanied by a licensed operator over 18 where it appeared that his operator's license was not revoked or suspended after a hearing at which there was unequivocal testimony that the accident in which he was involved occurred during twilight. Motor Vehicle Acci. Indemnification Corp. v Carilli, 39 Misc. 2d 335, 240 N.Y.S.2d 666, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1994 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963).

7. Learner's permit

An ordinance by the Westchester County Park Commission which prohibited the use of drives and parkways by learners and their instructors was a reasonable enactment. The ordinance in no way encroached upon the power to license, which belonged exclusively to the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, since the Legislature specifically provided that persons driving with learners' permits and their licensed instructors shall be liable for any breach of the Vehicle & Traffic Law or of any local ordinance, rule, or regulation. People v Alexander, 7 N.Y.2d 39, 194 N.Y.S.2d 495, 163 N.E.2d 323, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 963 (N.Y. 1959).

In view of statute to effect that persons driving with learner's permits and their licensed instructors shall be liable for any breach of Vehicle and Traffic Law or of any local ordinance, rule or regulation, power of Westchester County Park Commission to restrict use of its parkways by learners in no way encroached upon power to license which belonged exclusively to Commissioner of Motor Vehicles. People v Alexander, 7 N.Y.2d 39, 194 N.Y.S.2d 495, 163 N.E.2d 323, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 963 (N.Y. 1959).

In view of traffic conditions on Saw Mill River Parkway in Village of Pleasantville, ordinance of Westchester County Park Commission prohibiting person having automobile under his control from permitting unlicensed operator to drive it on parkway and prohibiting person to receive instructions to operate, under a learner's permit, a motor vehicle on parkway in village, was not unreasonable and Park Commission had authority to enact such ordinance. People v Alexander, 7 N.Y.2d 39, 194 N.Y.S.2d 495, 163 N.E.2d 323, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 963 (N.Y. 1959).

In an action by a three-year old grandson of defendant for injuries suffered while a passenger with his mother in an automobile driven by defendant under a learner's permit, the negligence of the mother in connection with the operation of the automobile is not imputable to plaintiff and the operation of the automobile under a learner's permit is immaterial to case. Spaulding v Mineah, 239 A.D. 460, 268 N.Y.S. 772, 1933 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8067 (N.Y. App. Div. 1933), aff'd, 264 N.Y. 589, 191

Licensed driver is not in same position with respect to learner-driver as passenger, in view of statute placing control of learner-driver in licensed driver, and if learner-driver is negligent, it is duty of licensed driver to take necessary measures to have learner-driver cease and desist his negligent conduct. Lazofsky v New York, 22 A.D.2d 858, 254 N.Y.S.2d 349, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2656 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1964).

Traffic Regulations of the City of New York requiring a motor vehicle operator, holding a learner's permit, to operate a vehicle only on streets designated by the Police Commissioner of the city does not violate this section. Schwartzberg v Wallander, 73 N.Y.S.2d 675, 190 Misc. 236, 1947 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3102 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1947).

Defendant, an unlicensed motorcycle operator with a learner's permit who was doing carpentry work with his alleged supervisor when he rode to a shopping center an eighth of a mile away to get some food and got into an accident, may lawfully be convicted of operating a motorcyle without a license while unsupervised (Vehicle and Traffic Law, § 509) since his supervisor could not have been exercising the required "general supervision and control over the learner" (Vehicle and Traffic Law, § 501, subd 5, par [a]) while he was located in a house an eighth of a mile away from the accident; had there been testimony that the supervisor was outside the house where they were doing the carpentry work and that defendant was within his sight at all times the outcome might be different but it is inconceivable that the Department of Motor Vehicles would ever authorize anyone to supervise a learner from a distance of an eighth of a mile away when the alleged supervisor is in a house and could not possibly see the operator of the motorcycle. People v Tropiano, 103 Misc. 2d 940, 427 N.Y.S.2d 155, 1980 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2227 (N.Y. Village Ct. 1980).

A designation of "learner's streets" and a prohibition against learner licensees operating motor vehicles on streets not so designated is not a valid regulation of traffic. People v Velich, 70 N.Y.S.2d 49, 1947 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2339 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1947).

8. Driver's test

A test may be taken in an automobile owned and furnished by an automobile driving school. Leder v Harnett, 252 N.Y. 619, 170 N.E. 166, 252 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 619, 1930 N.Y. LEXIS 691 (N.Y. 1930).

Where a bus driver's driving license was revoked for being involved in three accidents within an 18-month period and he was required to submit to re-examination under subd. 8 of this section, the evidence was insufficient to support a finding that the examiner giving him a road test in connection with the re-examination acted arbitrarily and capriciously in connection with administering the road test and refusing to pass petitioner where the only evidence of antagonism was testimony that the examiner had a hostile tone of voice. Devine v Hults, 12 A.D.2d 624, 208 N.Y.S.2d 227, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6697 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1960).

Although the holder of a driver's license has driven automobiles for many years, without being charged with any traffic infraction, where, following involvement in a minor traffic accident, and at age 83, he is required to take a road test as the result of a hearing held by the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, fails to pass that test, and his license is revoked, a court can accord him no relief unless satisfied from the record that the action of the Commissioner was unreasonable, arbitrary, or capricious. Harris v Hults, 23 Misc. 2d 1086, 206 N.Y.S.2d 722, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2632 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960).

Where petitioner, aged 83, had his driver's license revoked under subd. 8 of this section after being involved in a collision with an unattended parked truck resulting in damage exceeding $100, and thereafter was twice, upon his request, given a road test to determine his qualifications, but failed both tests, so that his license stood revoked, the determinations resulting from the road test could not be upset as arbitrary or malicious merely because the petitioner had a clear record as a driver up to the time of his first accident. Application of Sidney, 24 Misc. 2d 335, 208 N.Y.S.2d 291, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2900 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960), aff'd, 13 A.D.2d 613, 214 N.Y.S.2d 671, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11735 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1961).

9. Junior operator --generally

A clause in a policy of liability insurance excluding insurer from obligation where the liability of insured arises from injuries caused by an automobile owned by him while being driven "by any person under age fixed by law" does not constitute a defense in an action upon the policy where the facts are undisputed that the accident occurred after midnight, while the automobile was being driven, with permission of insured, by his son, a boy of seventeen years, who possessed a junior operator's license. The fact that the boy, in driving the automobile at the time of the accident, was violating this section does not relieve insurer from liability. The clause in policy relates solely to the question of age, not to violations of traffic law, and the boy was old enough lawfully to drive the automobile. S. & E. Motor Hire Corp. v New York Indem. Co., 255 N.Y. 69, 174 N.E. 65, 255 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 69, 1930 N.Y. LEXIS 710 (N.Y. 1930).

Junior operator was properly convicted of a misdemeanor under this section where he drove an automobile from a basketball game at night, unaccompanied by a driver over 18. People v Harms, 308 N.Y. 35, 123 N.E.2d 627, 308 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 35, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 940 (N.Y. 1954).

Task of court in construing statute prohibiting holders of "junior operator's" licenses from driving automobile after dark unaccompanied by senior operator, except going to and from school, is to discover legislative intent, considering, among other things, that such statute is a public safety law and part of effort to reduce number of accidents. People v Harms, 308 N.Y. 35, 123 N.E.2d 627, 308 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 35, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 940 (N.Y. 1954).

Owner was absolved from liability for injuries resulting from the negligence of her 17-year-old grandson in operating her car in 2 a.m. accident, where she had told him to drive her car to get a flat tire fixed and to be home before dark, and her grandson's junior-operator's license did not permit his driving a car during hours of darkness except going to and from school. Rachon v Cheuvant, 37 A.D.2d 911, 325 N.Y.S.2d 452, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3151 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1971).

The holder of a junior operator's license was properly operating a family vehicle under this section sub 1 ¶ b of the Vehicle and Traffic Law prior to the 1949 amendment thereto, when he is returning from arranging a summer job for himself, and his conviction of violating this section sub 4 of this law must be reversed. People v Gray, 77 N.Y.S.2d 805, 191 Misc. 541, 1948 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2197 (N.Y. County Ct. 1948).

Purpose of junior license would normally be to permit a young person to run errands for his parents, to drive to beach on a summer day and to drive to school or to work. People v Joy, 50 Misc. 2d 690, 271 N.Y.S.2d 15, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1750 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1966).

Where original junior license reciting statutory restriction that operator should not drive during hours of darkness unaccompanied by parent or one in loco parentis was lost and duplicate license failed to contain such a restriction, absence of notations of conditions did not relieve minor driver from duty of complying with statutory restrictions. People v Erickson, 51 Misc. 2d 149, 273 N.Y.S.2d 7, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1658 (N.Y. City Ct. 1966).

10. —School exception

Under statute prohibiting holders of "junior operator's" licenses from operating automobile after dark except in going to and from school, phrase "to and from school" means regular school sessions, and does not authorize such license holders to drive to and from school to take part in, or attend, extra-curricular activities of school held at night, and high school student who held junior operator's license was properly convicted for driving unaccompanied to and from high school basketball game at night. People v Harms, 308 N.Y. 35, 123 N.E.2d 627, 308 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 35, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 940 (N.Y. 1954).

11. —Work or parent's business exception

An information charging defendant with unlawfully operating a motor vehicle without being duly licensed was dismissed and defendant discharged where it appeared that a junior license had been issued to defendant and that he was operating his father's automobile with his permission in the "usual and ordinary pursuit of the business of the parent," within the meaning of this section, subd. 1. People v Gillette, 16 N.Y.S.2d 361, 172 Misc. 847, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2542 (N.Y. City Ct. 1939).

Failure of defendant, who had a class 6 license and who was stopped while driving at 1:30 in the morning, to produce a letter indicating that he was driving to work demonstrated that defendant was driving in noncompliance with the law. People v Masciarelli, 87 Misc. 2d 3, 384 N.Y.S.2d 980, 1976 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2140 (N.Y. City Ct. 1976).

12. —Night driving restriction

A holder of a junior operator's license could not be considered as outside the coverage of his mother's liability insurance policy on her car because he was operating it during hours of darkness while unaccompanied by a licensed operator over 18 where it appeared that his operator's license was not revoked or suspended after a hearing at which there was unequivocal testimony that the accident in which he was involved occurred during twilight. Motor Vehicle Acci. Indemnification Corp. v Carilli, 39 Misc. 2d 335, 240 N.Y.S.2d 666, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1994 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963).

Where original junior license reciting statutory restriction that operator should not drive during hours of darkness unaccompanied by parent or one in loco parentis was lost and duplicate license failed to contain such a restriction, absence of notations of conditions did not relieve minor driver from duty of complying with statutory restrictions. People v Erickson, 51 Misc. 2d 149, 273 N.Y.S.2d 7, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1658 (N.Y. City Ct. 1966).

13. —Person in locl parentis

Eighteen-year-old friend who had allegedly been told by defendant's mother to make sure that defendant did not get into any trouble was not in position of loco parentis in order to permit defendant to drive at 1:30 in the morning on a junior operator's license. People v Masciarelli, 87 Misc. 2d 3, 384 N.Y.S.2d 980, 1976 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2140 (N.Y. City Ct. 1976).

14. —Restriction in certain cities or counties

Decision revoking 17-year-old boy's junior operator's license on plea of guilty to second violation consisting of operating motor vehicle within county of Nassau while holding junior operator's license was recalled, where violation was crime and established criminal record for juvenile and it was court's opinion that restriction which prevents use of junior operator's license in Nassau county seemed to be unreasonable and perhaps unconstitutional. People v Joy, 50 Misc. 2d 690, 271 N.Y.S.2d 15, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1750 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1966).

15. Requiring exhibition of license

Motorist has right to detach convictions stub from his operator's license and withhold the stub from police inspection. People v Lawton, 17 N.Y.2d 637, 269 N.Y.S.2d 137, 216 N.E.2d 340, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 1511 (N.Y. 1966).

Where arrested motorist voluntarily gives police officer motorist's operator's license without detaching convictions stub, examination of convictions stub by police officer is not a violation of section of Vehicle and Traffic Law providing that convictions stub shall not be subject to inspection by any officer. People v Lawton, 17 N.Y.2d 637, 269 N.Y.S.2d 137, 216 N.E.2d 340, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 1511 (N.Y. 1966).

That part of this section by which failure of an operator to exhibit his license on demand by an officer is made presumptive evidence that he is not licensed, is a rule of evidence merely. People ex rel. Keegan v Meyer, 194 A.D. 822, 186 N.Y.S. 434, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9363 (N.Y. App. Div. 1921).

Officers checking registration of vehicle and license of driver of that vehicle which they had observed driving in erratic and suspicious manner in circles in high crime area was legitimate action and in conformity with normal police duty to know what is going on in the streets. People v Denti, 44 A.D.2d 44, 353 N.Y.S.2d 10, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5506 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1974).

Where police officer had probable cause to justify arrest and detention of motorist because of motorist's failure to produce motor vehicle registration and operator's license, and motorist did not attempt to distinguish which items of his alleged damage were attributable to the valid arrest and which were attributable to an invalid arrest for reckless driving, motorist was not entitled to recover from city for false arrest or imprisonment. Burden v Niagara Falls, 44 A.D.2d 754, 352 N.Y.S.2d 42, 354 N.Y.S.2d 42, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5283 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1974).

A state policeman was within his right as a peace officer in asking to see a motorist's ownership registration and his driver's license, and the actions of the motorist in using obscene, violent and indecent language toward the state trooper was disorderly conduct. Lippert v State, 139 N.Y.S.2d 751, 207 Misc. 632, 1955 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3488 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1955).

Peace officer who, after stopping motorist to determine registration of his vehicle and his authorization to drive, arrests the motorist for failure to produce the documents may conduct a search of the motorist's person in order to remove weapons or other instrumentalities which might be used for resisting officer, for escape, or for similar purposes. People v Isaac, 38 Misc. 2d 1018, 239 N.Y.S.2d 624, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2141 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963).

That arresting officer looked at conviction part of defendant's operator's license at time of arrest for traffic violations, when summons was issued, infringed upon defendant's statutory rights, violated his right to fair and impartial trial and constituted prejudicial error. People v Murdock, 44 Misc. 2d 498, 254 N.Y.S.2d 295, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1270 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1964).

Motorist is not required and cannot be compelled to exhibit to arresting officer his "record of conviction stub" prior to or at time of his arrest for motor vehicle violation, and if compelled a resultant conviction is nullified, but fact that motorist upon demand of arresting officer to see his operator's license exhibits to officer the license in toto, including portion known as "record of conviction stub" does not prevent arrest or conviction. People v Lobdell, 46 Misc. 2d 888, 261 N.Y.S.2d 321, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1722 (N.Y. County Ct. 1965).

Failure of arresting officer, who asked only to see defendant's driver's license, to advise defendant of his right to detach conviction stub, did not require reversal of speeding conviction. People v Misch, 48 Misc. 2d 204, 264 N.Y.S.2d 419, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1334 (N.Y. County Ct. 1965).

Where printed summons, in lieu of oral warning, issued to petitioner contained statutory warning required to be made by presiding criminal court judge before accepting plea of guilty to traffic violation, attempt to find infirmity in petitioner's suspension based on size of type and location of warning on summons form constituted attempt to exalt form over substance. Lewitus v Hults, 52 Misc. 2d 539, 276 N.Y.S.2d 347, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1204 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1966).

Where trooper, after stopping automobile, observed driver and passenger attempting to swap places, trooper could reasonably suspect that the passenger was violating Vehicle and Traffic L § 501, subd 4 by permitting unlicensed operation and could in investigation of such violation require the passenger to produce his driver's license. People v Williams, 69 Misc. 2d 1038, 332 N.Y.S.2d 693, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1572 (N.Y. Town Ct. 1970).

16. Driving without license

A conviction of operating a motor vehicle without a license in violation of this section was improper where defendant, who was driving an automobile bearing a Massachusetts license plate, had a New York operator's license on his person and an operator's button on his hat at the time the officer demanded that he exhibit his New York license. People ex rel. Keegan v Meyer, 194 A.D. 822, 186 N.Y.S. 434, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9363 (N.Y. App. Div. 1921).

It is permissible on cross-examination to elicit the fact that the operator of an automobile did not possess an operator's license at the time of the accident, as bearing upon the issue of his credibility. Phass v MacClenathen, 274 A.D. 535, 85 N.Y.S.2d 643, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3123 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

A conviction of reckless driving should be reversed and the information dismissed where the defendant was charged with a violation of "section 20 of subdivision 1" in that he drove a motor vehicle "without being of age" and the court on its own motion amended the complaint when the defendant was arraigned for decision and sentence to charge a violation of "subdivision 4 of section 20" in that he drove without being "duly licensed". People v Grogan, 281 A.D. 706, 117 N.Y.S.2d 617, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3317 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

An infant, under sixteen years of age, who drove an automobile without a license in violation of subdivision 4 of this section was a juvenile delinquent within the definition contained in paragraph (a) of subdivision 2 of § 2 of the Children's Court Act. In re Jacobsen, 283 A.D. 719, 127 N.Y.S.2d 356, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5061 (N.Y. App. Div.), app. dismissed, 307 N.Y. 675, 120 N.E.2d 849, 307 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 675, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 1415 (N.Y. 1954).

A conviction for violating subd. 4, par. a of this section was reversed because the complaint upon which the prosecution was based made no mention of defendant and was against a person having an entirely different name. People ex rel. McCabe v Blasenstein, 15 A.D.2d 778, 224 N.Y.S.2d 951, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11219 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1962).

Because of the definitions of "sidewalk" and "street" in §§ 134 and 144, a motorist can be found guilty of operating a vehicle without an operating license although he is merely operating it at an extremely moderate rate over the sidewalk adjacent to a filling station. People v Marcus, 19 A.D.2d 813, 243 N.Y.S.2d 463, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3129 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1963), aff'd, 14 N.Y.2d 505, 248 N.Y.S.2d 227, 197 N.E.2d 622, 1964 N.Y. LEXIS 1360 (N.Y. 1964).

An oral charge of a violation of subdivision 4, par a, in permitting the operation of a motor vehicle by one not licensed to drive was insufficient and was not waived by defendant's plea of guilty. Moreover, the charge failed to include the word "knowingly" and that the vehicle was operated on a public highway of this State. People v Tompkins, 114 N.Y.S.2d 297, 202 Misc. 147, 1952 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2887 (N.Y. County Ct. 1952).

A nonresident with a Tennessee driver's license who had been present in New York for more than 30 days was convicted of driving without a license under this section. People v Utsman, 8 Misc. 2d 501, 166 N.Y.S.2d 358, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2543 (N.Y. Police Ct. 1957).

Evidence held sufficient to sustain conviction of defendant of driving a car without an operator's license where defendant admitted that she did not have a driver's license and had operated the car for a short distance, and there was testimony that she was seen in the operator's seat and that the car had moved that distance. People v Tavani, 27 Misc. 2d 604, 213 N.Y.S.2d 843, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3053 (N.Y. County Ct. 1961).

In a prosecution for driving without an operator's license, the over-all burden of proof is upon the prosecution to establish guilt, notwithstanding the burden of making out a prima facie defense of exemption from the New York operator's license requirements by possession of a foreign driver's license rests, in the first instance, upon defendant. People v Cooper, 35 Misc. 2d 90, 229 N.Y.S.2d 287, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3100 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

An information is sufficient to charge the offense of driving without an operator's license where it specifically refers to this section and charges defendant with the crime of "unlicensed operator," and likewise states details as to time and place, gives the manner in which the offense was committed, and identifies the vehicle. People v Cooper, 35 Misc. 2d 90, 229 N.Y.S.2d 287, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3100 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

An information charging a motorist with driving without an operator's license need not negative his possession of a driver's license issued under the law of another state, as possession of a foreign driver's license is matter of defense, if available, under § 250. People v Cooper, 35 Misc. 2d 90, 229 N.Y.S.2d 287, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3100 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

Fact that charges of driving unregistered vehicle and driving while being an unlicensed operator for which defendant had been arrested were dismissed when defendant later produced the required documents in court did not establish illegality of arrest or search of driver's person which was conducted pursuant thereto and which disclosed illegal narcotics in view of fact that failure to exhibit the requested documents to the officer would also have justified an arrest. People v Isaac, 38 Misc. 2d 1018, 239 N.Y.S.2d 624, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2141 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963).

The owner of an automobile may not permit his son to drive his car without a license and then claim recompense for damages arising out of a collision between the son and plaintiff-motorist, since driving without a license is a misdemeanor and one may not permit another to violate the law and then claim damages growing out of such violation. Plunkett v Heath, 1 N.Y.S.2d 778, 1938 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1226 (N.Y. City Ct. 1938).

17. Permitting unlicensed operator to drive

Proof was not sufficient to sustain a conviction of knowingly permitting an unlicensed person to operate a car solely on testimony of policeman who said he stopped car, questioned operator, learned he was unlicensed, found defendant in front seat on passenger's side and on his admission of ownership, arrested him. People v Shapiro, 4 N.Y.2d 597, 176 N.Y.S.2d 632, 152 N.E.2d 65, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 878 (N.Y. 1958).

The fact that an automobile which was damaged by a collision with another automobile was being driven at the time of the accident by an unlicensed chauffeur in violation of this section does not absolutely bar the owner from recovering damages. Clark v Doolittle, 205 A.D. 697, 199 N.Y.S. 814, 1923 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5119 (N.Y. App. Div. 1923).

A motorcycle is not a motor vehicle. Hence, the defendant who allegedly permitted an unlicensed person to drive his motorcycle on a public highway should not have been charged with a violation of (former) § 20 but should have been charged with a violation of (former) § 41. People v Asselta, 1 A.D.2d 960, 150 N.Y.S.2d 32, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5791 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1956).

Judgment of conviction for a violation of paragraph a of subdivision 4 of this section was reversed where there was no proof from which it could be found that defendant authorized or permitted the operation of his automobile by a person he knew to be an unlicensed driver. People ex rel. Gittens v Shapiro, 5 A.D.2d 821, 170 N.Y.S.2d 762, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6916 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), aff'd, 4 N.Y.2d 597, 176 N.Y.S.2d 632, 152 N.E.2d 65, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 878 (N.Y. 1958).

The owner of a motor vehicle is not under a duty to make inquiry as to whether a person permitted to operate the vehicle is duly licensed. A conviction of subdivision 4 could not therefore be sustained in the absence of knowledge or facts from which knowledge could reasonably be inferred. People v Crean, 136 N.Y.S.2d 688, 206 Misc. 311, 1954 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3490 (N.Y. County Ct. 1954).

To sustain a conviction of violating subd. 4 par. a of this section, for permitting an unlicensed operator to drive one's automobile, the prosecution must establish some fact or circumstance from which it may be inferred that the owner had knowledge that the person allowed to operate the vehicle was not properly licensed to drive, and it is not sufficient merely to establish that the driver was unlicensed. People v Irving, 24 Misc. 2d 37, 203 N.Y.S.2d 531, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2627 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960).

A father, by permitting his son to use his automobile illegally upon a public highway, aided and abetted his son in the commission of a misdemeanor, and thereby became a principal as defined in former § 2. Plunkett v Heath, 1 N.Y.S.2d 778, 1938 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1226 (N.Y. City Ct. 1938).

18. Revocation or refusal to renew

The Commissioner of Motor Vehicles was without power to revoke an operator's license as a result of a proceeding instituted under former § 71 (subd 3, par [b]) to determine the operator's physical ability to hold the license. Wignall v Fletcher, 303 N.Y. 435, 103 N.E.2d 728, 303 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 435, 1952 N.Y. LEXIS 806 (N.Y. 1952).

Where hearing of motorist was scheduled under provision of Vehicle and Traffic Law that driver's license may be revoked where driver is physically or mentally disabled, it was improper to revoke license under provision that, if Commissioner of Motor Vehicles had reasonable grounds to believe that holder of driver's license is not qualified to operate a motor vehicle, he may require holder to submit to an examination. Wignall v Fletcher, 303 N.Y. 435, 103 N.E.2d 728, 303 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 435, 1952 N.Y. LEXIS 806 (N.Y. 1952).

A petitioner was not entitled to an order rescinding, revoking and annulling a chauffeur's license issued by the bureau of motor vehicles to a subject of Great Britain, in alleged violation of former § 20, subd. 1-a. Magnani v Harnett, 257 A.D. 487, 14 N.Y.S.2d 107, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7790 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939), aff'd, 282 N.Y. 619, 25 N.E.2d 395, 282 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 619, 1940 N.Y. LEXIS 1432 (N.Y. 1940).

In determining whether to refuse to issue an operator's license, the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles was not restricted to a determination of the applicant's capacity to operate a motor vehicle in determining his "fitness". He could properly consider the applicant's convictions for bookmaking, reckless driving and speeding, revocations of his licenses and other criminal activities. Bernola v Fletcher, 280 A.D. 870, 114 N.Y.S.2d 152, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3954 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

The Commissioner was not arbitrary in denying a license to petitioner who had suffered one epileptic seizure. The Commissioner established as prerequisite for the issuance of the license that the statement of a neuropsychiatrist be submitted showing, among other things, that petitioner had been free from seizures for a period of at least two years after discontinuance of medication. Derouchie v Kelly, 1 A.D.2d 921, 149 N.Y.S.2d 694, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5973 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Results of examination of driver may not be utilized to sustain preliminary requirement of reasonable grounds within section of Vehicle and Traffic Law providing that if commissioner has reasonable grounds to believe that person holding license is not qualified to drive, commissioner may require such person to submit to examination to determine his qualifications. Breslow v Hults, 26 A.D.2d 931, 275 N.Y.S.2d 226, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2990 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1966).

Where motorist was advised by magistrate that a plea of guilty to speeding would subject motorist to a penalty and that his probationary operator's license would be subject to suspension and revocation, and traffic ticket issued to motorist contained instructions required by statute, motorist was not entitled to a hearing on ground that "someone" had advised him that plea of guilty would have no effect on his license, and hence Commissioner of Motor Vehicles properly cancelled motorist's license. Marino v Tofany, 29 A.D.2d 588, 285 N.Y.S.2d 546, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2760 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1967).

Commissioner did not act in an arbitrary manner in revoking license of petitioner age 75 where the petitioner on an ordered road test accumulated 47 demerits; 16 demerits being sufficient under departmental procedure to cause an applicant to fail. Walsh v Kelly, 19 Misc. 2d 971, 186 N.Y.S.2d 513, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4129 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1959).

The Commissioner may refuse to grant or renew an operator's license upon any ground specified in § 71 for revocation of such a license. Davis v Hults, 24 Misc. 2d 954, 204 N.Y.S.2d 865, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2738 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960).

Statute governing cancellation of probationary drivers' licenses was not intended to apply to persons who have driven for a considerable length of time but merely to new operators who are just commencing to drive. Lewitus v Hults, 52 Misc. 2d 539, 276 N.Y.S.2d 347, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1204 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1966).

Determination of Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, which had effect of extending period of revocation of petitioner's license by the time during which petitioner illegally operated his automobile with a license which had been ordered revoked, was in furtherance of duty imposed upon Commissioner to carry out State's public policy, so that period of suspension ordered by the revocation, while operative immediately, did not begin to run so far as a renewal of petitioner's license was concerned until such license and registration plates were surrendered in accordance with notice of revocation. Simpson v Tofany, 58 Misc. 2d 843, 296 N.Y.S.2d 845, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1847 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1969).

The right to drive an automobile is not an inherent or acquired property right but a license granted to an individual which can be revoked by proper legislation. An arbitrary procedure is not to be countenanced but inasmuch as a traffic infraction is not for any purpose a penal or criminal act, it is not necessary to advise the accused of his rights to counsel if he is advised of the penalty and given a sufficient opportunity to defend himself. People ex rel. Joyce v Hogenson, 117 N.Y.S.2d 260, 1952 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2015 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1952).

19. —Necessity of hearing

Under sub 3 of former § 20, the permissive revocation is authorized when the licensee is guilty of certain prohibited conduct and the hearing is, therefore, to determine the fact of the licensee's misconduct. Former section 20(8), on the contrary, authorizes and directs the commissioner to re-examine a licensee to determine his qualifications to operate a motor vehicle, thus supplying the commissioner directly with personal knowledge of those qualifications. The provisions of the two sections are entirely distinct and independent of each other, each dealing with a separate problem—the one providing in substance for the trial of an issue of fact, the other for an examination by the commissioner to determine the licensee's qualifications. Application of Muscarella, 281 A.D. 565, 121 N.Y.S.2d 382, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3097 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

A licensee who had his automobile driver's license revoked for failure to pass a driver's examination given under sub 8 of this section, after having had three accidents within 18 months, is not entitled to a hearing. Application of Muscarella, 281 A.D. 565, 121 N.Y.S.2d 382, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3097 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Subdivision 5 of this section does not provide for a hearing procedure with respect to the refusal of the Commissioner to issue or renew an operator's license. It is expressly stated therein that such administrative action may be reviewed by a proceeding under Article 78 of the Civil Practice Act. Therefore, there is no statutory or implied right to a hearing. Hence, where petitioner's renewal application for a license was refused and he failed to institute an action to review under Article 78 for more than 4 months after the denial of his application, his petition was dismissed. Nelson v Kelly, 4 A.D.2d 596, 168 N.Y.S.2d 74, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3802 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1957).

The Commissioner of Motor Vehicles followed proper procedure, in respect to an operator who was over 65 years of age and was involved in an accident where he held a hearing pursuant to former § 71, closed the hearing without making any determination other than that operator would be asked to take a road test, served a new notice on the operator pursuant to § 20(8) to take the road test and revoked the operator's license when he failed the road test. Applebaum v Kelly, 9 Misc. 2d 748, 170 N.Y.S.2d 921, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3737 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1957).

In effect, hearing officer's statement that he was going to close case, involving issue as to whether driver's license should be suspended or revoked because of automobile accident in which he had been involved, constituted a determination that no grounds existed for suspension or revocation under any part of section 71 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, and that no such suspension or revocation would be made thereunder, notwithstanding hearing officer's recommendation that driver be asked to submit to road test; and where new notice was thereafter served on driver, pursuant to section 20, subdivision 8, requiring him to appear at time and place fixed for road test, there was no failure of due process when driver's license was revoked for failure to pass such test. Applebaum v Kelly, 9 Misc. 2d 748, 170 N.Y.S.2d 921, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3737 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1957).

There was no provision under subd. 8 of former § 20 for any hearing before revocation of a license following failure of the holder, after being required by the Commissioner to take a road test, to pass such test. Harris v Hults, 23 Misc. 2d 1086, 206 N.Y.S.2d 722, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2632 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960).

20. —Criminal record of applicant

In determining whether to refuse to issue an operator's license, the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles was not restricted to a determination of the applicant's capacity to operate a motor vehicle in determining his "fitness". He could properly consider the applicant's convictions for bookmaking, reckless driving and speeding, revocations of his licenses and other criminal activities.

Bernola v Fletcher, 280 A.D. 870, 114 N.Y.S.2d 152, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3954 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

Commissioner of motor vehicles in determining the fitness of an applicant for license to operate motor vehicle is not limited to consideration of the applicant's capacity to operate a motor vehicle, but may consider also applicant's past criminal record and traffic violations. Bernola v Fletcher, 280 A.D. 870, 114 N.Y.S.2d 152, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3954 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

It was within the discretion of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, under subds. 1 and 5 of this section, to refuse to grant renewal of petitioner's chauffeur's license on the basis of his criminal record and failure to give full and true answer to one of the questions on the renewal application, and the Commissioner's exercise of discretion, being neither arbitrary nor capricious, was not subject to judicial review. Funaro v Hults, 16 A.D.2d 654, 226 N.Y.S.2d 618, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10640 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1962).

The fact that an applicant for renewal of operator's license is a known and active Communist who has been found guilty of seditious conspiracy against the Government of the United States, and likewise of contempt of court, will not sustain a determination of the Commissioner to deny his application for renewal of operator's license, in the absence of any indication of legislative policy to deny drivers' licenses to Communists. Davis v Hults, 24 Misc. 2d 954, 204 N.Y.S.2d 865, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2738 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960).

New regulations under N.Y. Comp. Codes R. & Regs. tit. 15, Part 136, as applied to an applicant for a driver's license, were not in conflict with N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1193. Further, the decision to deny the applicant's application for a renewed license under the regulations was rationally based and neither arbitrary, nor capricious because of the applicant's three alcohol or drug related incidents or convictions and revocation of the applicant's license for an alcohol or drug related incident or conviction. Matter of Brown v New York State Dept. of Motor Vehs., 988 N.Y.S.2d 428, 44 Misc. 3d 182, 2014 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1399 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2014).

21. —Requiring proof of fitness

The requirement that the applicant furnish such "proof of his fitness as the Commissioner shall in his discretion determine," was not intended to be limited to "fitness" in the sense of "physical and mental capacity." Davis v Hults, 24 Misc. 2d 954, 204 N.Y.S.2d 865, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2738 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960).

It does not follow, from the fact that this statute requires an applicant for operator's license to furnish such proof of fitness "as the Commissioner shall in his discretion determine" that a driver's license is nothing but a privilege solely within the discretion of the Commissioner to grant or withhold. Davis v Hults, 24 Misc. 2d 954, 204 N.Y.S.2d 865, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2738 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960).

Although subd. 1 of former § 20 required an applicant for operator's license to furnish proof of his "fitness", and the requirement could mean more than proof of fitness to operate an automobile, the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles was not entitled to rely upon this requirement in refusing to consider, after lapse of a year from revocation, issuance of a new driver's license to one whose license had been revoked, under former § 93-h, for operating a vehicle while proof of financial security was not in effect. Boiko v Hults, 25 Misc. 2d 995, 206 N.Y.S.2d 261, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2739 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960), vacated, 13 A.D.2d 888, 215 N.Y.S.2d 429, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10963 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1961).

22. Discretion of commissioner

It was within the discretion of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, under subds. 1 and 5 of this section, to refuse to grant renewal of petitioner's chauffeur's license on the basis of his criminal record and failure to give full and true answer to one of the questions on the renewal application, and the Commissioner's exercise of discretion, being neither arbitrary nor capricious, was not subject to judicial review. Funaro v Hults, 16 A.D.2d 654, 226 N.Y.S.2d 618, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10640 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1962).

In renewing operator's license, the Commissioner's determination involves judgment or discretion as distinguished from a ministerial act. Nelson v Kelly, 7 Misc. 2d 655, 164 N.Y.S.2d 309, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3320 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), rev'd, 4 A.D.2d 596, 168 N.Y.S.2d 74, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3802 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1957).

Reviewing court would not interfere with order of commissioner of motor vehicles revoking operator's license, where record disclosed reasonable basis for revocation and would not warrant conclusion that revocation was arbitrary or capricious. Walsh v Kelly, 19 Misc. 2d 971, 186 N.Y.S.2d 513, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4129 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1959).

That two friends of driver who rode in rear seat of automobile during road test disagreed with findings of examiners as to driver's qualifications to be a licensed motor vehicle operator was not a sufficient basis for judicial interference with determination of commissioner of motor vehicles revoking operator's license. Walsh v Kelly, 19 Misc. 2d 971, 186 N.Y.S.2d 513, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4129 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1959).

Record, showing failure of licensee to pass two successive road tests following hearing to determine his physical condition after minor collision, disclosed reasonable basis for action of commissioner of motor vehicles in revoking operator's license and would not warrant conclusion that revocation was arbitrary or capricious. Walsh v Kelly, 19 Misc. 2d 971, 186 N.Y.S.2d 513, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4129 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1959).

Where reviewing court stayed order of commissioner of motor vehicles revoking operator's license upon his failure to pass road test and directed that he be given another road test, commissioner could have left revocation order in existence, but stayed until date specified by court, and licensee could not complain of action of commissioner in rescinding revocation order. Walsh v Kelly, 19 Misc. 2d 971, 186 N.Y.S.2d 513, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4129 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1959).

Although the holder of a driver's license has driven automobiles for many years, without being charged with any traffic infraction, where, following involvement in a minor traffic accident, and at age 83, he is required to take a road test as the result of a hearing held by the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, fails to pass that test, and his license is revoked, a court can accord him no relief unless satisfied from the record that the action of the Commissioner was unreasonable, arbitrary, or capricious. Harris v Hults, 23 Misc. 2d 1086, 206 N.Y.S.2d 722, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2632 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960).

It does not follow, from the fact that this statute requires an applicant for operator's license to furnish such proof of fitness "as the Commissioner shall in his discretion determine" that a driver's license is nothing but a privilege solely within the discretion of the Commissioner to grant or withhold. Davis v Hults, 24 Misc. 2d 954, 204 N.Y.S.2d 865, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2738 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960).

A refusal to renew an operator's license is tantamount to taking it away, and unless the applicant is not "fit" to receive an operator's license it may not be denied him on the basis of the personal and unrestrained edict of the Commissioner. Davis v Hults, 24 Misc. 2d 954, 204 N.Y.S.2d 865, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2738 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960).

The provisions of subd. 1, par. a, of former § 20 did not give the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles any discretion to extend the mandatory suspension period of one year specified in former § 93-h, for operating a vehicle while proof of financial responsibility was not in effect, under the guise of a determination of unfitness of the applicant. Boiko v Hults, 25 Misc. 2d 995, 206 N.Y.S.2d 261, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2739 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960), vacated, 13 A.D.2d 888, 215 N.Y.S.2d 429, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10963 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1961).

New York State Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) was enjoined and restrained during the pendency of a declaratory action from requiring or any way imposing a legal presence requirement or any immigration status as a condition to receipt of a driver's license, renewal license, learner's permit, or non-driver identification card. The internal rules instituted by DMV requiring such documentation was an unauthorized exercise of its rule-making power and, as such, the plaintiffs made a prima facie showing of the likelihood that they would prevail at trial on the merits of its claims as well as demonstrated irreparable injury in that DMV's rules made certain persons afraid to apply for a license, caused the plaintiffs to be unable to travel to their work, or bring their children to necessary medical treatment. Cubas v Martinez, 233 N.Y.L.J. 93, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3358 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. May 16, 2005), rev'd, 33 A.D.3d 96, 819 N.Y.S.2d 10, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8662 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2006).

23. Liability of instructor

In a civil action for damages against an instructor and learner-driver, where the case was submitted to the jury on both the erroneous theory of imputed negligence under this section and upon the correct theory of the instructor's failure to use reasonable care, a judgment for the plaintiff will be reversed, where it cannot be determined upon which theory the jury arrived at its verdict. Wolpert v Garrett, 278 A.D. 893, 105 N.Y.S.2d 21, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5094 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

In action brought by holder of learner's permit for the operation of motorcycle against operator of automobile to recover for injuries sustained in collision, substantial fact issue existed as to liability of third-party defendant motorcyclist who was supervising plaintiff at time of collision, precluding summary judgment as to third-party claim against such motorcyclist. McEwen v Keator, 57 A.D.2d 1030, 395 N.Y.S.2d 260, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12331 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

It is duty of licensed automobile driver to use general care in the instruction of a learner under his supervision, and there is no reason to depart from such basic rule merely because standards governing the discharging of that duty might have to be measured or evaluated somewhat differently when motorcycles are involved. McEwen v Keator, 57 A.D.2d 1030, 395 N.Y.S.2d 260, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12331 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

Licensed driver who accompanies holder of learner's permit has duty of reasonable care in instruction and supervision of learner-driver, but negligence of learner-driver is not imputable to licensed driver. Savone v Donges, 122 A.D.2d 34, 504 N.Y.S.2d 474, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 59106 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Sub. 5 of this section does not make a duly licensed driver accompanying a learner civilly liable for the latter's negligence. A licensed operator is liable penally for violation of the statute but the statute has no effect on his civil liability or rights. Sardo v Herlihy, 256 N.Y.S. 690, 143 Misc. 397, 1932 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1016 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1932).

24. Judicial review

Coram nobis is available in a Court of Special Sessions but not in a case where defect is made clear by the record. People v Eastman, 306 N.Y. 658, 116 N.E.2d 494, 306 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 658, 1953 N.Y. LEXIS 937 (N.Y. 1953).

Conviction under this section by city court of Ithaca may not be vacated by county court and fine remitted after time for appeal has expired. People v Eastman, 282 A.D. 330, 123 N.Y.S.2d 147, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4470 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 306 N.Y. 658, 116 N.E.2d 494, 306 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 658, 1953 N.Y. LEXIS 937 (N.Y. 1953).

An appeal from a determination of the commissioner of motor vehicles does not become academic even though a motor vehicle operator has complied with the order for suspension and has his license back. The suspension order could effect the operator's future qualification and if there were no evidence to support the determination, he was entitled to have it annulled. Strasser v MacDuff, 282 A.D. 1106, 126 N.Y.S.2d 357, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5921 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

A fine imposed for violating this section by operating a commercial type motor vehicle without a chauffeur's license could not be sustained under the existing definition of "chauffeur" in this law where defendant was not, at the time, employed for the principal purpose of operating a motor vehicle and the one which he was operating was not in use as a public or common carrier of persons or property. People v Moroney, 10 A.D.2d 858, 199 N.Y.S.2d 100, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10835 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1960).

In dismissing an appeal from a Special Term order annulling denial of a driver's license application, as moot, the Appellate Division nevertheless states that it was improper for the Commissioner to fix a future date when petitioner might reapply for a license, his former license having been revoked for driving without insurance, and the postponement of time for reconsidering a new license application being by reason of an interim conviction for driving without a license. Boiko v Hults, 13 A.D.2d 888, 215 N.Y.S.2d 429, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10963 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1961).

A conviction for violating subd. 4, par. a of this section was reversed because the complaint upon which the prosecution was based made no mention of defendant and was against a person having an entirely different name. People ex rel. McCabe v Blasenstein, 15 A.D.2d 778, 224 N.Y.S.2d 951, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11219 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1962).

Reviewing court would not interfere with order of commissioner of motor vehicles revoking operator's license, where record disclosed reasonable basis for revocation and would not warrant conclusion that revocation was arbitrary or capricious. Walsh v Kelly, 19 Misc. 2d 971, 186 N.Y.S.2d 513, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4129 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1959).

A sentence for driving without an operator's license to a fine of $100 and 60 days in jail is not excessive. People v Cooper, 35 Misc. 2d 90, 229 N.Y.S.2d 287, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3100 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

Where defendant motorist was charged with violating § 501 by operating a motor vehicle without a license on the same occasion as violating § 1180 by speeding, but the magistrate dismissed the charge of operating without a license at request of the District Attorney for "insufficient identification," his conviction for speeding was reversed by the County Court on the ground that the evidence must have been likewise insufficient to establish his identity as operator of the speeding vehicle. People v Quinzi, 39 Misc. 2d 1070, 242 N.Y.S.2d 334, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1713 (N.Y. County Ct. 1963).

Conviction for operating motor vehicle while unlicensed was unwarranted, where, aside from defendant's confession, there was no proof of defendant's operation of vehicle on public highway other than circumstances that she was found by officer near automobile registered in her husband's name and parked in private driveway of third party following accident which was not described. People v Herman, 50 Misc. 2d 644, 270 N.Y.S.2d 809, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1791 (N.Y. Police Ct. 1966).

25. Miscellaneous matters

Wording of printed warning on summons substantially complied with provisions of code section in reference to type size and there was no merit to contention that code section was not properly complied with in connection with conviction for speeding. Application of Lewitus, 28 A.D.2d 1097, 284 N.Y.S.2d 386, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3088 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1967).

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles was authorized to cancel petitioner's probationary license for conviction for two violations within probationary six-month period. Britt v Hults, 30 A.D.2d 535, 291 N.Y.S.2d 269, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4078 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1968).

A licensed operator who accompanies an operator possessing only a learner's permit, in order to instruct the unlicensed operator, assumes the risk of the permittee's inexperience and cannot recover damages for injuries caused by the latter's inexperience or lack of skill, even though the learner may have completed an adult education driver training course, as such a permittee is presumed by law to be an incompetent operator until she has passed her operator's examination. Aloisio v Nelson, 27 Misc. 2d 343, 209 N.Y.S.2d 674, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3606 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1961).

Where a motorist was arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated and without a license, but no immediate search of his car was made until, sometime later, an officer searched it for liquor, found none, but turned up a switch blade knife and bludgeon, the articles found and seized are illegally obtained and subject to suppression as evidence because the search was not incidental to the primary purpose of arrest and was too remote in time and place from the time and place of arrest. People v

Public park owned by municipality with neither roads nor sidewalks was not a "public highway" within statutes prohibiting unlicensed operation and unregistered vehicles. People v Moe, 62 Misc. 2d 27, 307 N.Y.S.2d 921, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 975 (N.Y. App. Term 1969).

Where defendant stopped for driving over speed limit was arrested for traffic misdemeanors of being unlicensed operator and driving unregistered vehicle and officer did not arrest defendant for possessing stolen car although there was probable cause for arrest on that ground, seizure of brown paper bag found in automobile was reasonable and justifiable as incident to arrest upon probable cause that defendant possessed stolen car. People v Smith, 62 Misc. 2d 473, 308 N.Y.S.2d 909, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1779 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1970).

Driver's operation of a vehicle in violation of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 501(3)(b) could not be used as evidence of negligence regarding an accident in which the driver struck a minor pedestrian because the provision only related to the authority of a junior operator to drive and did not create any standard of care relating to the vehicle's operation. St. Andrew v O'Brien, 45 A.D.3d 1024, 845 N.Y.S.2d 184, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11159 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007), app. denied, app. dismissed, 10 N.Y.3d 929, 862 N.Y.S.2d 332, 892 N.E.2d 398, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 1898 (N.Y. 2008).

The driver of a school bus need not be licensed as a chauffeur if he does not drive the school bus within a city. 1962 Ops St Compt #1009.

3. Junior operator --generally
4. Miscellaneous matters

1. In general; purpose

Where the legislature has granted to the Westchester County Park Commission authority to enact "traffic ordinances" this does not include authority to prohibit operation of motor vehicles by unlicensed drivers, such act being expressly prohibited by the Vehicle and Traffic Law. 1934 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 129.

Tribal Indians residing on a reservation must secure operators' licenses in accordance with this section in order to use motor vehicles upon any public highway. 1939 NY Ops Atty Gen Apr. 19.

Farm tractors and vehicles drawn by them may be operated by an unlicensed operator. 1962 NY Ops Atty Gen July 31.

An operator of a fire vehicle must be a licensed driver. 1978 Op St Compt File #999.

2. Learner's permit

Outside of New York City, a holder of a learner's permit may lawfully drive a motor vehicle during daylight hours when accompanied by a licensed junior operator, who supervises and controls the learner's driving. 1955 NY Ops Atty Gen 113 (informal).

3. Junior operator --generally

A junior operator may accompany and instruct a learner if the junior operator himself could legally operate a motor vehicle at the time and place of operation. 1958 NY Ops Atty Gen Apr 21 (informal).

A licensed automobile operator, over 18 years of age, who accompanies a licensed junior operator at night is not liable with the junior operator for the latter's reckless driving. However, the law provides that a licensee, when instructing a learner, shall be answerable with the learner for any traffic violation. 1959 NY Ops Atty Gen Aug. 17 (informal).

4. Miscellaneous matters

A road on state-owned hospital grounds is a public place or highway within the meaning of the Vehicle and Traffic Law and consequently the operation of a motor vehicle thereon without an operator's license is illegal. 1941 NY Ops Atty Gen Apr. 23.

Volunteer fireman operating a fire truck to a fire and returning to fire house is not required to have operator's license. 1956 NY Ops Atty Gen Apr 9 (informal).

Although there is no specific provision to this effect, the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles would seem to have implied authority to accept surrender of an operator's license from one who no longer desires to drive, but he should not accept such a license for cancellation where possible penalty proceedings are contemplated or pending against the holder. 1962 NY Ops Atty Gen Nov 29.

Volunteer firemen of the Village of Port Chester who reside in Connecticut and hold a Connecticut driver's license may drive an emergency vehicle owned by the Village of Port Chester. 1974 NY Ops Atty Gen July 26 (informal).

The expense incurred by the county clerk in mailing validated driver's licenses and registrations may not be passed on to the applicants. 1982 Op St Compt File #82-120.

§ 501-a. Definitions

The following terms when used in this article and in articles twenty and thirty-one of this chapter, shall have the following meanings:

1. Commercial driver's license or CDL. A class A or B driver's license or a class C driver's license which bears an H, P or X endorsement, which licenses contain the legend commercial driving license or CDL thereon and which is issued in accordance with the commercial motor vehicle safety act of 1986, public law 99-570, title XII, and this article which authorizes a person to operate a commercial motor vehicle and an altered motor vehicle commonly referred to as a "stretch limousine" having a seating capacity of nine or more passengers including the driver.

2. Gross vehicle weight rating or GVWR. The weight of a vehicle consisting of the unladen weight and the maximum carrying capacity recommended by the manufacturer of such vehicle. The GVWR of a combination of vehicles (commonly referred to as the "Gross Combination Weight Rating" or GCWR) is the GVWR of the power unit plus the GVWR of each vehicle in the combination.

3. Hazardous materials. Any material that has been designated as hazardous under 49 U.S.C. 5103 and is required to be placarded under subpart F of 49 CFR part 172 or any quantity of a material listed as a select agent or toxin in 42 CFR part 73.

4. Commercial motor vehicle. (a) A motor vehicle or combination of vehicles designed or used to transport passengers or property:

(i) which has a GVWR of more than twenty-six thousand pounds; or

(ii) which has a GCWR of more than twenty-six thousand pounds, including any towed unit with a GVWR of more than ten thousand pounds; or

(iii) designed or used to transport fifteen or more passengers, in addition to the driver; or

(iv) defined as a bus in subdivision one of section five hundred nine-a of this chapter; or

(v) of any size, other than a farm vehicle operated within one hundred fifty miles of the operator's farm, used in the transportation of materials found by the United States secretary of transportation to be hazardous under the hazardous materials transportation act and which requires the motor vehicle transporting such materials to be placarded under the hazardous materials regulation, 49 CFR part 172, subpart F or is transporting any quantity of a material listed as a select agent or toxin in 42 CFR part 73.

(b) However, a commercial motor vehicle shall not include: (i) a personal use vehicle or a covered farm vehicle or a combination of such vehicles; (ii) any motor vehicle or combination of motor vehicles operated by a member of the armed forces for military purposes; (iii) a police vehicle or fire vehicle, or combination of such vehicles during its use in an emergency operation as defined in section one hundred fourteen-b of this chapter, or in the performance of official duties, or activities related to the execution of emergency governmental functions pursuant to section 383.3 (d)(2) of title 49 of the code of federal regulations; (iv) a vehicle or combination of vehicles owned and identified as being owned by the state or a political subdivision thereof or an ambulance service as defined in subdivision two of section three thousand one of the public health law or a voluntary ambulance service as defined in subdivision three of such section and used to provide emergency medical service as defined in section three thousand one of the public health law, or to perform official duties, or activities related to the execution of emergency governmental functions pursuant to section 383.3 (d)(2) of title 49 of the code of federal regulations; or (v) a vehicle or combination of vehicles which is designed and primarily used for purposes other than the transportation of persons or property and which is operated on a public highway only occasionally for the purpose of being transported to a construction or off-highway site at which its primary purpose is to be performed except as may otherwise be specifically provided by regulation of the commissioner. For the purposes of this paragraph, the term "member of the armed forces" shall include active duty military personnel; members of the reserve components of the armed forces; members of the national guard on active duty, including personnel on full time active guard duty, personnel on part-time national guard training, and national guard military technicians (civilians who are required to wear military uniforms); and active duty United States coast guard personnel. The term shall not include United States reserve technicians. Notwithstanding the provisions of section one hundred fourteen-b of this chapter, for the purposes of this paragraph, the term "emergency operation" shall include returning from emergency service.

(c) [Repealed]

5. Representative vehicle. The type of motor vehicle or combination of vehicles specified by regulation of the commissioner that an applicant for a driver's license must operate during a road test in order to receive a specific class of license or endorsement.

6. Tank vehicle. Any commercial motor vehicle designed to transport any liquid or gaseous material within a tank or tanks having an individual rated capacity of more than one hundred nineteen gallons and an aggregate rated capacity of one thousand gallons or more that is either permanently or temporarily attached to the vehicle or the chassis. Such term shall not include a commercial motor vehicle transporting an empty storage container tank, not designed for transportation, with a rated capacity of one thousand gallons or more that is temporarily attached to a flatbed trailer.

7. Personal use vehicle. A vehicle constructed or altered to be used for recreational purposes which is exclusively used to transport family members and/or personal possessions of such family members for non-business recreational purposes by the operator, or a rental truck which is exclusively used to transport personal possessions of the person who has rented the truck for non-business purposes.

8. Covered farm vehicle. (a) A vehicle or combination of vehicles registered in this state, which (i) displays a covered farm vehicle designation issued by the commissioner, (ii) is operated by the owner or operator of a farm or ranch, or an employee or family member of an owner or operator of a farm or ranch, (iii) is used to transport agricultural commodities, livestock, machinery or supplies to or from a farm or ranch, (iv) is not used in for-hire motor carrier operations, exclusive of operation by a tenant pursuant to a crop share farm lease agreement to transport the landlord's portion of the crops under that agreement; and (v) is not used for the transportation of hazardous materials.

(b) A covered farm vehicle with a gross vehicle weight or gross vehicle weight rating, whichever is greater, of more than twenty-six thousand pounds may only be operated within one hundred fifty air miles of the farm or ranch.

(c) The commissioner shall, by regulation, designate an endorsement or endorsements for the operation of covered farm vehicles with a gross vehicle weight or gross vehicle weight rating of more than twenty-six thousand pounds. Such endorsement or endorsements shall be required to operate such a covered farm vehicle or combination of covered farm vehicles. (d) For the purposes of this subdivision, the gross vehicle weight of a vehicle shall mean the actual weight of the vehicle and the load.

Editor's Notes Laws 1983, ch 719, § 1, eff Jan 1, 1984, provides as follows:

Section 1. Legislative findings. National studies indicate that nearly one-half of all annual highway fatalities are attributable to drunk driving. Statistics reveal, in fact, that sixteen to twenty-four year olds account for over forty-five percent of the drivers involved in alcohol related accidents, yet comprise only seventeen percent of the driving population. New, tougher laws have been enacted in recent years to deter drunk driving. However, these measures were designed to effect a positive result mainly after a drunk driving arrest has occurred and after loss of life or infliction of injury has resulted. In addition, little emphasis has been placed on preventive education as a means of curtailing driving while intoxicated episodes. Since young people are provided the opportunity to learn to drive a motor vehicle before acquiring the legal drinking age, incorporating an alcohol and drug prevention component to the present pre-licensing curriculum, would inform prospective new drivers of the potential dangers of drinking and driving. A combined effort to impose harsh penalties with statewide implementation of the revised pre-licensing course is necessary in order to redirect society's acceptance of alcohol and drug use in conjunction with driving. As a result, lives will be saved and injuries prevented.

1. Privacy rights

Mandamus did not lie to compel Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) to issue driver's license to petitioner who refused, on privacy grounds, to supply his Social Security number, because petitioner was explicitly asking DMV to perform discretionary act not premised on any specific authority, and he did not establish clear right to relief on ground that he was noncommercial driver and was not liable for child support. Adler v Jackson, 185 Misc. 2d 45, 712 N.Y.S.2d 240, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 279 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2000).

Department of Motor Vehicles' refusal to process petitioner's license renewal application, due to petitioner's refusal to comply with provisions of CLS Veh & Tr § 502 on privacy grounds, did not constitute denial of due process. Adler v Jackson, 185 Misc. 2d 45, 712 N.Y.S.2d 240, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 279 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2000).

Petitioner's refusal to supply Social Security number on his license renewal application, as required by CLS Veh & Tr § 502, was not protected by Federal Privacy Act of 1974 (5 USCS § 552a) based on his concerns about information sharing permitted by Driver's Privacy Protection Act of 1994 (18 USCS §§ 2721-2725), considering policies behind 1976 amendment to Social Security relating to driver's licenses (42 USCS § 405). Adler v Jackson, 185 Misc. 2d 45, 712 N.Y.S.2d 240, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 279 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2000).

2. Constitutionality

Department of Motor Vehicles did not unconstitutionally impede petitioner's right to interstate travel by denying him driver's license because he refused to supply his social security number pursuant to CLS Veh & Tr § 502, because petitioner did not have fundamental right to drive motor vehicle. Adler v Jackson, 185 Misc. 2d 45, 712 N.Y.S.2d 240, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 279 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2000).

Veh § Tr § 502 did not violate applicant's First Amendment right to free exercise of religion, despite claim that result of disclosure was confiscation of driver's licenses of predominantly poor individuals who were delinquent in paying spousal and child support obligations, and that such discrimination was contrary to applicant's religion, since statute was facially neutral toward religion, and any effect on applicant's religion was incidental and permitted. Stoianoff v Comm'r of Motor Vehicles, 107 F. Supp. 2d 439, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11019 (S.D.N.Y. 2000), aff'd, 12 Fed. Appx. 33, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 11000 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2001).

3. Immigration status

N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 502(1) and 508 granted broad discretionary powers to the Commissioner of the New York State Department of Motor Vehicles, obviating the need for him to resort to the State Administrative Procedures Act to implement internal administrative procedures such as the designation of documents acceptable to prove ineligibility for a Social Security number. It was a reasonable exercise of this discretion for the Commissioner to require that to receive a driver's license or a non-driver identification card, an alien claiming to be ineligible for a Social Security number had to supply Department of Homeland Security documentation together with a Social Security Administration ineligibility letter; the fact that the documentation requirements had an adverse impact on those who did not possess the documentation did not render them ultra vires. Cubas v Martinez, 33 A.D.3d 96, 819 N.Y.S.2d 10, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8662 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2006), aff'd in part, modified, 8 N.Y.3d 611, 838 N.Y.S.2d 815, 870 N.E.2d 133, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 1456 (N.Y. 2007).

New York State Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) was enjoined and restrained during the pendency of a declaratory action from requiring or any way imposing a legal presence requirement or any immigration status as a condition to receipt of a driver's license, renewal license, learner's permit, or non-driver identification card. The internal rules instituted by DMV requiring such documentation was an unauthorized exercise of its rule-making power and, as such, the plaintiffs made a prima facie showing of the likelihood that they would prevail at trial on the merits of its claims as well as demonstrated irreparable injury in that DMV's rules made certain persons afraid to apply for a license, caused the plaintiffs to be unable to travel to their work, or bring their children to necessary medical treatment. Cubas v Martinez, 233 N.Y.L.J. 93, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3358 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. May 16, 2005), rev'd, 33 A.D.3d 96, 819 N.Y.S.2d 10, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8662 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2006).

Immigrants' action challenging the enforcement of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 502(1) and 508 (2) had to be dismissed, as the immigrants failed to show that a policy of requiring Department of Homeland Security documents as proof of ineligibility for a Social Security number prior to issuance of a driver's license was invalid, as the obligation to supply proof that an applicant was not eligible for a Social Security number was imposed by a pre-existing regulation which the immigrants admitted was valid, and the policy merely specified what proof was acceptable; furthermore, the implementation of the policy did not violate N.Y. Const. art. IV, § 8, or N.Y. A.P.A. Law § 202(1), as the documentation requirement was merely an interpretation or explanation of a pre-existing rule, and thus the rule did not have to be filed with the Secretary of State prior to implementation. In view of the varying degrees of color blindness, the granting of a driver's license to an applicant, who on examination is found to be color blind, is for the commissioner's determination, denial being justified where the degree of color blindness is such that an applicant cannot distinguish colors in a matter consistent with public safety. 1940 NY Ops Atty Gen June 18.

ARTICLE 22 Accidents and Accident Reports

HISTORY:

Add, L 1959, ch 775, eff Oct 1, 1960.

§ 605. Report required upon accident

(a) 1. Every person operating a motor vehicle, except a police officer (as defined in subdivision thirty-four of section 1.20 of the criminal procedure law), a correction officer, or a firefighter, operating a police department, a correction department, or fire department vehicle respectively while on duty, if a report has been filed by the owner of such vehicle, which is in any manner involved in an accident, anywhere within the boundaries of this state, in which any person is killed or injured, or in which damage to the property of any one person, including himself, in excess of one thousand dollars is sustained, shall within ten days after such accident, report the matter in writing to the commissioner. If such operator or chauffeur be physically incapable of making such report and there be another participant in the accident not incapacitated, such participant shall make such report within ten days after such accident. If the operator or chauffeur involved in such accident be unable to make such report, the owner of the motor vehicle involved in such accident, if such owner be not involved in such accident or incapacitated, shall within ten days after he learns of the fact of such accident report the matter to the commissioner together with such information as may have come to his knowledge relating to such accident. Every such operator or chauffeur of a motor vehicle, or participant in any such accident, or owner of the motor vehicle involved in any such accident, shall make such other and additional reports as the commissioner shall require.

2. Failure to report an accident as herein provided or failure to give correctly the information required of him by the commissioner in connection with such report shall be a misdemeanor and shall constitute a ground for suspension or revocation of the operator's (or chauffeur's) license or all certificates of registration for any motor vehicle, or of both, of the person failing to make such report as herein required. In addition, the commissioner may temporarily suspend the driver's license or permit or certificate of registration of the motor vehicle involved in the accident, or of both, of the person failing to report an accident within the period prescribed in paragraph one of this subdivision, until such report has been filed. However, no suspension or a revocation shall be made of a license or certificate of registration of any police officer, correction officer, or firefighter involved in an accident while on duty for failure to report such accident within ten days thereof if a report has been filed by the owner of such vehicle.

3. In the case of a non-resident the failure to report an accident as herein provided shall constitute ground for suspension or revocation of his privileges of operating a motor vehicle in this state and of the operation within this state of any motor vehicle owned by him.

4. When a report required by this section is made by an owner or an operator of a fire vehicle, as defined by section one hundred fifteen-a of this chapter, or a police vehicle, as defined by section one hundred thirty-two-a of this chapter, when such accident occurred during the operation of such vehicle in response to an emergency where the operator was responding to a call to duty as a paid or volunteer member of any fire department, or in the case of a police vehicle, when such accident occurred during emergency operation, as defined by section one hundred fourteen-b of this chapter, the commissioner shall omit the event described in such report from the operator's external license abstract. Provided, however, the commissioner shall not omit the event described in such report from the operator's external license abstract if as a result of such event such operator has either (i) been charged with a violation of this chapter or of the penal law, unless the commissioner receives evidence that such charge has been dismissed, or that the action has otherwise been terminated in favor of the accused pursuant to section 160.50 of the criminal procedure law, or that the charge has otherwise been adjudicated in an administrative or other proceeding in favor of the defendant operator or (ii) been found to have been grossly negligent by a final order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

(b) Every person operating a bicycle which is in any manner involved in an accident on a public highway in this state in which any person is killed, other than the operator, or suffers serious physical injury as defined pursuant to subdivision ten of section 10.00 of the penal law, shall within ten days after such operator learns of the fact of such death or serious physical injury, report the matter in writing to the commissioner. If such operator is physically incapable of making such report within ten days, he or she shall make the report immediately upon recovery from the physical incapacity. If such operator is an unemancipated minor who is incapable of making such report for any reason, the parent or guardian of such operator shall make such report within ten days after learning of the fact of such accident. Every such operator of a bicycle, or parent or guardian of such unemancipated minor operator, shall make such other and additional reports as the commissioner shall require.

(c) The report required by this section shall be made in such form and number as the commissioner may prescribe. Such report shall include information on the width and length of trucks, tractors, trailers and semitrailers, which are in excess of ninety-five inches in width or thirty-four feet in length and which are involved in such accidents, whether such accident took place in a work area and whether it was being operated with an overweight or over dimension permit. Such report shall distinctly indicate and include information as to whether the inflatable restraint system inflated and deployed.

Editor's Notes: Laws 1989, ch 254, §§ 1, 3, eff Nov 4, 1989, provide as follows:

Section 1. Legislative findings. The legislature finds that bicycle-related injuries and fatalities constitute a significant ongoing problem. The legislature further finds that the available statistical data on bicycle accidents is too imprecise to allow the development of effectively focused safety countermeasures. Since the existing reporting system for motor vehicle accidents can readily accommodate bicycle accident reporting, additional information can be derived relatively easily and inexpensively. Therefore, it is the intent of the legislature to improve the quality of bicycle safety information through the establishment of a bicycle accident reporting system.

§ 11. This act shall take effect immediately, provided, that subdivision 7 of section 398-d of the vehicle and traffic law as added by section five of this act and the amendment to subdivision (c) of section 605 of the vehicle and traffic law made by section ten of this act shall take effect January 1, 1997, provided, further, the commissioner of motor vehicles shall promulgate such rules and regulations as are necessary to implement the provisions of this act on or before January 1, 1997.

Analysis

1. In general
2. Constitutionality

1. In general

Statute requiring motor vehicle operator involved in accident, whether culpable or not, to remain at scene of accident, identify himself and report accident to police is valid; duties imposed by it are reasonable exercises of police power by state to regulate activities directly relevant to public safety, and incidental and limited risk of inculpation by identification and report of motor vehicle operators whose conduct involves, or is likely to involve, criminal accusations is insufficient to inhibit regulatory power by interposition of privilege against self-incrimination. People v Samuel, 29 N.Y.2d 252, 327 N.Y.S.2d 321, 277 N.E.2d 381, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 967 (N.Y. 1971).

It was not legislative intent, in statute requiring motor vehicle operator involved in accident to remain at scene, identify himself and report accident to police, to prohibit use of such information in any criminal prosecution which might ensue. People v Samuel, 29 N.Y.2d 252, 327 N.Y.S.2d 321, 277 N.E.2d 381, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 967 (N.Y. 1971).

In a negligence action arising out of an automobile collision denial of motion to compel disclosure of report filed by operator of car under the provisions of the above statute, sustained on the ground that such report is a public record and hence requirement thereof on disclosure was receivable in evidence as an admission by the defendant. Yeargans v Yeargans, 24 A.D.2d 280, 265 N.Y.S.2d 562, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2693 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1965).

An accident report made by the defendant to the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, when properly certified, was receivable in evidence as an admission by the defendant in plaintiff's action to recover damages arising out of the collision of defendant's automobile with the rear end of plaintiff's allegedly stopped automobile. Carter v Castle Electric Contracting Co., 26 A.D.2d 83, 271 N.Y.S.2d 51, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4006 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1966).

Automobile accident case defendant who gave his former address to plaintiff at time of accident and who had not filed accident report or notified Motor Vehicle Commissioner of change of address was estopped from contending that notice affixed at former residence did not comply with statutory requirement that summons be affixed to dwelling place or usual place of abode. Cohen v Arista Truck Renting Corp., 70 Misc. 2d 729, 335 N.Y.S.2d 30, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1805 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1972).

New York Department of Motor Vehicles form MV-104, required to be filed following accident in which person is killed or injured or damage exceeds $600, does not constitute prima facie evidence of insurance coverage so as to shift burden of proving lack of coverage to insurer since (1) form is unsupported by any independent proof of insurance coverage, (2) form is not certificate or affidavit as to fact ascertained or act performed by public officer in course of official duty (CLS CPLR § 4520), and (3) form is unlike police report containing insurance information based on insurance identification card, which does shift burden of proof to named insurer. Mona Leasing, Inc. v Travelers Indem. Co., 148 Misc. 2d 877, 564 N.Y.S.2d 665, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 636 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1990).

New York Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) form MV-104, required to be filed following accident in which person is killed or injured or damage exceeds $600, does not constitute prima facie evidence of insurance coverage so as to shift burden of proving lack of coverage to insurer since form is unsupported by any independent proof of insurance coverage and is thus unlike either DMV form FS-25, which does constitute prima facie evidence of insurance coverage, or registration application, which has been held barely adequate to shift burden of proof to named insurer. Mona Leasing, Inc. v Travelers Indem. Co., 148 Misc. 2d 877, 564 N.Y.S.2d 665, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 636 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1990).

2. Constitutionality

Rationale that automobile operation is privilege and not right, and that acceptance of such privilege with its conditions constitutes waiver of constitutional rights is no longer acceptable. People v Samuel, 29 N.Y.2d 252, 327 N.Y.S.2d 321, 277 N.E.2d 381, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 967 (N.Y. 1971).

The contention that it is contrary to public policy to disclose confidential accident reports and that this section would compel that person to be a witness against himself in a criminal action, in violation of the New York Constitution Art. I, § 6, can be raised only by a person making statements at the time when those statements are offered in evidence, and not before. People ex rel. Stenstrom v Harnett, 224 A.D. 127, 230 N.Y.S. 28, 1928 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9947 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 249 N.Y. 606, 164 N.E. 602, 249 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 606, 1928 N.Y. LEXIS 965 (N.Y. 1928).

Where defendant was convicted upon a plea of guilty of violating § 600, following an adjournment for two and one-half weeks to enable him to obtain counsel after original arraignment and being advised of his right to counsel, and likewise of the danger of pleading guilty under § 335-a of the Code of Criminal Procedure and § 605 of this law relating to leaving the scene of an accident without reporting it, his conviction would not be reversed because of alleged confusion on his part caused by the court's reading to him provisions other than that under which he was charged. People v Witt, 26 Misc. 2d 836, 207 N.Y.S.2d 194, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2204 (N.Y. County Ct. 1960).

While acts of uttering a vulgarity, failure to produce a certificate of registration, refusing to comply with a lawful order and direction of a police officer and reckless endangerment, growing out of the disturbance at a downtown tavern and imputed to the licensee, might be characterized as stubborn or childish, they are not those of a dissolute person nor do they demonstrate lack of moral turpitude rather they show nothing more than a traffic infraction; with the spotless license history of the licensee as well as the lack of showing of an unsavory background for the corporate officer, the acts do not evince "unsatisfactory character and/or fitness" of the licensee such as to properly justify denial of the issuance of a license or renewal and, the cancellation was arbitrary and capricious and not justified. Ogdensburg Hotel Corp. v State Liquor Authority, 35 A.D.2d 869, 315 N.Y.S.2d 229, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3515 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

A person cannot be convicted of failing or refusing to comply with a lawful order or direction where the evidence does not clearly establish that the officer or other person directing traffic gave any particular order or direction. The tort of false arrest is essentially the same as the tort of false imprisonment and every false arrest is itself a false imprisonment, with the imprisonment commencing with the arrest; since, applying the reasonable and prudent person test, claimant's conduct in blowing his horn at a State trooper's vehicle after the vehicle suddenly and without warning made a U-turn in front of his car, tossing his insurance card at the trooper through his open window to avoid receiving a ticket and then having a heated argument with the trooper, did not afford the trooper probable cause to arrest claimant for disorderly conduct (Penal Law, § 240.20), refusing to comply with a lawful order of a police officer (Vehicle and Traffic Law, § 1102) or resisting arrest (Penal Law, § 205.30), there being no lawful arrest to begin with, there exists a cause of action for false arrest and false imprisonment. Defendant could not be charged with violating CLS Veh & Tr § 1102 by reason of his disobedience of direction to stop by school security officer as he was driving on school property, since (1) even though school crossing guards are duly empowered to regulate traffic pursuant to § 1102 (because CLS Gen Mun § 208-a provides for municipal appointment of crossing guards and specifically grants them authority to regulate traffic), no similar authority exists with respect to school security guards, and (2) while school district has authority under CLS Veh & Tr § 1670 to regulate traffic through traffic control devices, there is no legal requirement that driver obey school security officer's direction. Defendant's conviction of violating N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1102 was reversed; N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1102 was designed to compel obedience to an order regulating traffic, and an officer's order directing defendant to return to his vehicle while the officer administered field sobriety tests to defendant's son did not fall within the scope of the statute. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1602; although the firefighters were not fire police officers, pursuant to N.Y. Gen. Mun. Law § 209-c, they were acting under the direction and control of their chief pursuant to N.Y. Village Law § 10-1018. People v Loren, 4 N.Y.3d 411, 796 N.Y.S.2d 26, 828 N.E.2d 983, 2005 N.Y. 2. Police officers

In a prosecution for resisting a police officer in the discharge of his duty in that defendants refused to drive their trucks onto a scale for weighing (§ 69) and refused to deliver the truck keys to the police, the jury should not have been allowed to convict defendants, in effect, of disobeying an order of a peace officer engaged in the direction of traffic (§ 88, sub 6). Substantial evidence supported determination that petitioner failed to comply with lawful direction of police officer in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 1102 where officer testified that while he was directing traffic, he raised his hand to allow child and school crossing guard to cross street, that light-colored mid-sized vehicle ignored officer's signal and kept going, that license plate number taken down by officer matched petitioner's vehicle, and that petitioner fit officer's description of driver. It was appropriate to suspend petitioner's driving license and privileges for 45 days based on his failure to comply with police officer's direction to stop his vehicle to allow child and school crossing guard to cross street, especially given that petitioner's vehicle almost struck child. Ortenberg v Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, 191 A.D.2d 898, 595 N.Y.S.2d 127, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2355 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1993).

Charged violations of CLS Penal §§ 120.05(3) and 205.30(a) and CLS Veh & Tr §§ 1225-a and 1102 could properly serve as predicate for action under CLS Gen Mun § 205-e where complaint alleged that (1) while on duty as police officer, plaintiff saw defendant drive vehicle onto sidewalk, (2) defendant refused plaintiff's continuing directions to stop and then jumped out of car and "came up at" him, and (3) defendant refused to be handcuffed and struggled with plaintiff, causing him to fall on ground and be injured. Healy v Moeller, 242 A.D.2d 366, 661 N.Y.S.2d 279, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8466 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

State trooper did not act recklessly in pursuing dirt bike that accelerated after driver ignored his gesture to pull over (for failure of driver and passenger to wear helmets), trooper's conduct was not proximate cause of accident in which driver lost control of bike, even though trooper's car came to rest on top of injured passenger, and thus state was not liable for passenger's injuries, where (1) passenger's own expert acknowledged that operation of bike was threat to public safety and that trooper, having perceived Vehicle and Traffic Law violation, had authority and duty to follow bike and remove it from highway, (2) although trooper exceeded 35 miles-per-hour speed limit during part of brief pursuit, he never exceeded 50 and was traveling only 17 to 20 miles per hour when he left road, (3) trooper's exceeding of speed limit did not warrant liability, given that weather was clear and dry, it was light outside, and there was no traffic in rural area of pursuit, and (4) although trooper's car ultimately came into contact with bike and passenger's ejected body on side of road, that unintentional contact resulted from trooper's reasonable efforts to avoid what he thought was going to be collision on road. Schieren v State, 281 A.D.2d 828, 722 N.Y.S.2d 128, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3011 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

A truck driver would be subject to conviction for violating this section in failing or refusing to comply with a traffic officer's order or direction to drive his truck onto a portable scale, but only if he was clearly directed to do so. People v Mann, 43 Misc. 2d 786, 251 N.Y.S.2d 976, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1598 (N.Y. County Ct. 1964).

Motorcycle operator, who was stopped for violating § 1181 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, relating to minimum speeds, was properly arrested a second time for violating this section, when he refused to comply with the order and direction of a state trooper to start the motor so a determination could be made whether the muffler complied with subdivision 1 of section 381. Krafft v State, 52 Misc. 2d 35, 275 N.Y.S.2d 109, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1276 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1966).

The tort of false arrest is essentially the same as the tort of false imprisonment and every false arrest is itself a false imprisonment, with the imprisonment commencing with the arrest; since, applying the reasonable and prudent person test, claimant's conduct in blowing his horn at a State trooper's vehicle after the vehicle suddenly and without warning made a U-turn in front of his car, tossing his insurance card at the trooper through his open window to avoid receiving a ticket and then having a heated argument with the trooper, did not afford the trooper probable cause to arrest claimant for disorderly conduct (Penal Law, § 240.20), refusing to comply with a lawful order of a police officer (Vehicle and Traffic Law, § 1102) or resisting arrest (Penal Law, § 205.30), there being no lawful arrest to begin with, there exists a cause of action for false arrest and false imprisonment. Budgar v State, 98 Misc. 2d 588, 414 N.Y.S.2d 463, 1979 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2119 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1979).

Cab driver found guilty of violating CLS Veh & Tr § 1102 was not denied due process by officer's mistake in checking "Traffic Rules" box on summons instead of box labeled "VTL" (Vehicle and Traffic Law) where correct section number was specified, infraction was described in words, and it was clear that driver was not confused as to nature of charge. Sei Young Choi v Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, 185 Misc. 2d 502, 713 N.Y.S.2d 806, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 374 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2000).

3. Crossing guards

A school crossing guard, having power to direct traffic under General Municipal Law § 208-a, was a "person duly empowered to regulate traffic" within the meaning of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 1102, and guard's request that defendant remove her car was a "lawful order" within the meaning of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 1102, where guard's belief that stopping of auto created a potentially hazardous situation was supported by fact that auto was blocking traveling lane, preventing free passage of other vehicles unless they crossed into oncoming traffic. People v Jennings, 75 Misc. 2d 408, 347 N.Y.S.2d 818, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1663 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1973).

A village may appoint school crossing guards on a part time basis. Such guards must be village policemen. 1955 Ops St Compt File #7360.

Agency Opinions

1. Crossing guards

The only county police departments or police districts in the state are in counties which by charter have established a police department or police district. The boards of supervisors in other counties have no authority to appoint school crossing guards. A sheriff is an independent elected official and may assign a deputy to perform school crossing guard duty but the deputy, when performing this activity, is acting in his capacity as deputy sheriff and not as a school crossing guard. When appropriate, the deputy sheriff may direct a school bus to cross railroad tracks without first coming to a stop. Two towns may enter into a municipal cooperation agreement to provide the service. Also, the two towns may appoint a single school crossing guard to act at an unguarded railroad grade crossing of a town highway which is divided longitudinally by the boundary line of the two towns. Under these circumstances, the school crossing guard would not be performing duties outside the municipality making the appointment. 1975 NY Ops Atty Gen Dec 5 (informal).

A school crossing guard may control vehicular traffic for purposes of protecting school children in school buses going to and from school. N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 84-30.

§ 1103. Public officers and employees to obey title; exceptions

(a) The provisions of this title applicable to the drivers of vehicles upon the highways shall apply to drivers of all vehicles owned or operated by the United States, this state, or any county, city, town, district, or any other political subdivision of the state, except as provided in this section and subject to such specific exceptions as are set forth in this title with reference to authorized emergency vehicles.

(b) Unless specifically made applicable, the provisions of this title, except the provisions of sections eleven hundred ninety-two through eleven hundred ninety-six of this chapter, shall not apply to persons, teams, motor vehicles, and other equipment while actually engaged in work on a highway nor shall the provisions of subsection (a) of section twelve hundred two apply to hazard vehicles while actually engaged in hazardous operation on or adjacent to a highway but shall apply to such persons and vehicles when traveling to or from such hazardous operation. The foregoing provisions of this subdivision shall not relieve any person, or team or any operator of a motor vehicle or other equipment while actually engaged in work on a highway from the duty to proceed at all times during all phases of such work with due regard for the safety of all persons nor shall the foregoing provisions protect such persons or teams or such operators of motor vehicles or other equipment from the consequences of their reckless disregard for the safety of others.

Analysis

1. In general
2. Applicability
3. Negligence standard
4. Recklessness
5. —Reckless disregard

1. In general

In a case in which plaintiff sued a city's sanitation department and others for personal injuries incurred when a street sweeper collided with plaintiff's vehicle, the sweeper operator was engaged in highway maintenance and thus subject to the recklessness standard of care. Defendants were not entitled to summary judgment because material issues of fact existed as to whether the sweeper operator operated the sweeper in a reckless manner and the extent of plaintiff's own negligence. Deleon v New York City Sanitation Dept., 25 N.Y.3d 1102, 35 N.E.3d 448, 14 N.Y.S.3d 280, 2015 N.Y. LEXIS 1362 (N.Y. 2015).

Court of Claims properly concluded that CLS Veh & Tr § 1103 need not be pleaded as affirmative defense. Wilson v State, 269 A.D.2d 854, 703 N.Y.S.2d 848, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1810 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), aff'd sub. nom., Riley v County of Broome, 95 N.Y.2d 455, 719 N.Y.S.2d 623, 742 N.E.2d 98, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3523 (N.Y. 2000).

City had the obligation to take steps to prevent the automatic erasure of any audio recording, and its failure to do so constituted spoliation because it was placed on notice of pedestrians' claim and its claimed "emergency operation" affirmative defense within the 180 days after the recording was made; preventing the city from introducing testimony as to the contents of the audio recording was appropriate. Strong v City of New York, 112 A.D.3d 15, 973 N.Y.S.2d 152, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6601 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2013).

County employee operating a street sweeper was entitled to immunity in a driver's action alleging she sustained injuries when the street sweeper struck her car because, inter alia, the street sweeper did not necessarily need to be in the debris area in order to be "actually engaged" in protected work, the employee checked her mirror and looked to the left and right before moving to the passing lane, and the employee's conduct did not amount to reckless disregard for the safety of others. Matsch v Chemung County Dept. of Pub. Works, 128 A.D.3d 1259, 9 N.Y.S.3d 724, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4321 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 26 N.Y.3d 997, 41 N.E.3d 76, 19 N.Y.S.3d 218, 2015 N.Y. LEXIS 3559 (N.Y. 2015).

CLS Veh & Tr § 1103 need not be pleaded as affirmative defense; thus, in negligence action by claimants who were involved in accident with state vehicle engaged in work on highway, defendant did not waive its qualified immunity by failing to interject "reckless disregard" standard of care into litigation until close of evidence. McDonald v State, 176 Misc. 2d 130, 673 N.Y.S.2d 512, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 83 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1998).

Higher court's analysis of whether CLS Gen Oblig § 9-103 constituted affirmative defense was not dispositive of whether CLS Veh & Tr §§ 1103(b) and 1104(e) constituted affirmative defenses. Culhane v State, 180 Misc. 2d 61, 687 N.Y.S.2d 542, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 105 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1999).

2. Applicability

Because Veh and Tr Law § 1103(b) does not apply in the City of New York and there is no comparable provision in the City of New York Traffic Regulations, a public service corporation vehicle double-parked on a city street for a purpose other than actual work on the street is unlawfully parked. Somersall v New York Tel. Co., 52 N.Y.2d 157, 436 N.Y.S.2d 858, 418 N.E.2d 373, 1981 N.Y. LEXIS 2114 (N.Y. 1981).

Protections of CLS Veh & Tr § 1103(b) do not apply only to vehicles operating in designated "work area" as defined in CLS Veh & Tr 160. Riley v County of Broome, 95 N.Y.2d 455, 719 N.Y.S.2d 623, 742 N.E.2d 98, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3523 (N.Y. 2000).

Statute prohibiting stopping or parking of vehicle on expressway except in emergency was applicable to city's department of sanitation's foreman, whose departmental car was struck from the rear after he had stopped car partially off highway and proceeded to instruct driver of snowplow to clear exits and entrances, contrary to contention that foreman was exempt from operation of statutes governing motorists generally because he was a person "actually engaged in work on a highway." Petosa v New York, 52 A.D.2d 919, 383 N.Y.S.2d 397, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12763 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1976).

Court of Claims properly determined that snowplow, plowing snow on highway at time of accident, was "vehicle ... (or) other equipment ... actually engaged in work on highway" within meaning of CLS Veh & Tr § 1103(b). Wilson v State, 269 A.D.2d 854, 703 N.Y.S.2d 848, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1810 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), aff'd sub. nom., Riley v County of Broome, 95 N.Y.2d 455, 719 N.Y.S.2d 623, 742 N.E.2d 98, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3523 (N.Y. 2000).

Trial court properly granted partial summary judgment pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. 3212 to injured parties in a personal injury action, holding that municipal defendants were not entitled to a "rules of the road" exemption pursuant to N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1103(b), because an employee was not engaged in work on a highway when he caused an auto accident, and therefore did not qualify for the exemption. Davis v Inc. Vill. of Babylon, 13 A.D.3d 331, 786 N.Y.S.2d 550, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14919 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2004).

N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1103(b) applied only to vehicles actually engaged in work upon a highway, which was construed as being limited to vehicles performing construction, repair, maintenance, or similar work; since the ordinary municipal refuse collection in which a garbage truck was engaged at the time of the accident at issue was not such work, the statute was inapplicable. Guzman v Bowen, 38 A.D.3d 837, 833 N.Y.S.2d 548, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4014 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2007).

State was not entitled to summary judgment as to related claims to recover damages for personal injuries because triable issues of fact existed as to whether a state employee operating a snowplow truck was actually engaged in work on a highway at the time of the accident; thus, it was not clear if N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1103(b) applied as the standard for the State's liability. O'Keeffe v State of New York, 40 A.D.3d 607, 835 N.Y.S.2d 434, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5637 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2007).

This section applied in the negligence action because the truck operated by the municipal employee was actually engaged in work, albeit unassigned work, on a highway at the time of the accident, but there were triable issues of fact whether the employee acted with reckless disregard at the time of the accident; this section does not exempts only those vehicles engaged in "assigned" work. Gawron v Town of Cheektowaga, 117 A.D.3d 1410, 984 N.Y.S.2d 715, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3089 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2014).

Municipal parking lot where a pedestrian was injured by a front-end loader operated by a village employee was a "highway" for purposes of this statute because the lot was publicly maintained and the traveling public had a general right of passage through it at the time the accident occurred. Freitag v Village of Potsdam, 155 A.D.3d 1227, 64 N.Y.S.3d 396, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7869 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2017).

Snowplow operator was actually engaged in work on highway, and CLS Veh & Tr § 1103 therefore applied, where she collided with claimant's vehicle while making U-turn to plow road surfaces on her return to Department of Transportation. McDonald v State, 176 Misc. 2d 130, 673 N.Y.S.2d 512, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 83 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1998).

3. Negligence standard

Vehicles actually engaged in work on highway have benefit of same lesser standard of care as emergency vehicles. Riley v County of Broome, 95 N.Y.2d 455, 719 N.Y.S.2d 623, 742 N.E.2d 98, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3523 (N.Y. 2000).

In action for personal injuries sustained when plaintiffs' vehicle struck city's department of sanitation's foreman's departmental car from rear after he stopped car partially off expressway and proceeded to give instructions to driver of snowplow, mere objection to "charging the Traffic Regulations and the Vehicle and Traffic Code, and particularly the Vehicle and Traffic Code as constituting negligence merely if there is a violation" was insufficient to preserve for review the contention that giving charge on statute prohibiting stopping or parking vehicle on expressway except in emergency was error on ground that foreman was exempt from operation of statute. Petosa v New York, 52 A.D.2d 919, 383 N.Y.S.2d 397, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12763 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1976).

Denial of summary judgment was ordered where the movants, two construction companies and a trucking company being sued by the administratrix of the decedent's estate, failed meet their initial burden of proof as to overcoming the administratrix's claims of negligence as N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1103 did not, as they claimed, eliminate the duty that they owed the decedent not to act negligently at the construction site. Godinez v Siena College, 288 A.D.2d 659, 733 N.Y.S.2d 262, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10862 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 722, 740 N.Y.S.2d 691, 767 N.E.2d 148, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 646 (N.Y. 2002).

In an action by plaintiff motorist against defendants, a town and its employee, seeking damages for personal injuries which the motorist suffered when the motorist's vehicle was struck by a snowplow operated by the employee, the trial court properly granted defendants' cross motion for dismissal of the motorist's cause of action against the town for negligent or reckless hiring or retention of the employee given that (1) the employee was operating a hazard vehicle within the meaning of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 117-a, which meant that the employee was exempt from the rules of the road under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1103(b) except insofar as the employee acted with reckless disregard for others' safety; (2) since negligence was therefore not a basis for liability against the employee, it was not a basis for liability against the town for negligent hiring because an underlying requirement in actions for negligent hiring or retention was that the employee was individually liable for a tort or guilty of a claimed wrong against a third person; and (3) if the employee was reckless, then the town was vicariously liable under the motorist's second cause of action for vicarious liability without a need for the reckless hiring or retention claim. Primeau v Town of Amherst, 303 A.D.2d 1035, 757 N.Y.S.2d 201, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2960 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2003).

Summary judgment for town and its street sweeper operator against car passenger was properly denied; town and operator did not make prima facie case, under under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law 1103(b), that sweeper was actually engaged in hazardous operation at time of sweeper's collision with car. Ibarra v Town of Huntington, 6 A.D.3d 391, 773 N.Y.S.2d 897, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3841 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2004).

State was entitled to summary judgment in personal injury action by claimant whose pickup truck was hit by snowplow which was engaged in clearing snow in opposite lane of traffic, where accident report and testimony of both drivers established that at time of accident combination of snow and wind had created almost total "whiteout" condition which frequently obscured all pavement markings, and claimant could, at most, prove negligence on part of snowplow driver. Gawelko v State, 184 Misc. 2d 581, 710 N.Y.S.2d 762, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 238 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 2000).

State of New York was not shielded from liability under the statute where its employee negligently operated a tractor and damaged a gas company's property because the statute was intended to address multi-vehicle collisions resulting from the hazards inherent in highway maintenance and not property damage of the sort at issue. New York State Elec. & Gas Corp. v State, 194 Misc. 2d 356 (Ct Cl 2002).

4. Recklessness

Street sweepers cleaning streets and snowplows clearing roads during snowstorms are "hazard vehicles" exempt from "rules of the road" under CLS Veh & Tr § 1103(b) and subject only to recklessness standard. Riley v County of Broome, 95 N.Y.2d 455, 719 N.Y.S.2d 623, 742 N.E.2d 98, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3523 (N.Y. 2000).

Under CLS Veh & Tr § 1103(b), recklessness standard applied in personal injury action arising out of accident allegedly caused by New York State Thruway truck engaged in dismantling lane closure on highway. Bliss v State, 95 N.Y.2d 911, 719 N.Y.S.2d 631, 742 N.E.2d 106, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3525 (N.Y. 2000).

In a case in which plaintiff sued a city's sanitation department and others for personal injuries incurred when a street sweeper collided with plaintiff's vehicle, the sweeper operator was engaged in highway maintenance and thus subject to the recklessness standard of care. Defendants were not entitled to summary judgment because material issues of fact existed as to whether the sweeper operator operated the sweeper in a reckless manner and the extent of plaintiff's own negligence. Deleon v New York City Sanitation Dept., 25 N.Y.3d 1102, 35 N.E.3d 448, 14 N.Y.S.3d 280, 2015 N.Y. LEXIS 1362 (N.Y. 2015).

Town was entitled to immunity in a case arising from a traffic accident allegedly caused by a town employee who was driving slowly on the shoulder of a road, inspecting a job site, and using the blinking yellow hazard light on the top of his truck along with the four was flashers to warn of his slow travel; the burden of proving an exception to the rule of immunity shifted to the plaintiff, but no testimony contradicted the employee's description of his work, and there was no viable contention of recklessness. Sullivan v Town of Vestal, 301 A.D.2d 824, 753 N.Y.S.2d 607, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 277 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

Trial court erred in granting summary judgment pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. 3212 to defendants in a personal injury action; there was a triable issue of fact as to whether defendant's use of a backhoe near traffic without a flagman constituted reckless conduct, and therefore on whether defendants were subject to liability under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1103(b). Mendoza v Grace Indus., 4 A.D.3d 272, 772 N.Y.S.2d 687, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1986 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2004).

Trial court erred in denying defendants' motion pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. 4404 to set aside a verdict in favor of an injured party in a personal injury action; because the driver of a city snowplow did not act recklessly in allowing the plow to enter an intersection, the city and the driver could not be held liable for the injuries pursuant to N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1103(b). Primeau v Town of Amherst, 17 A.D.3d 1003, 794 N.Y.S.2d 169, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4567 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), aff'd, 5 N.Y.3d 844, 806 N.Y.S.2d 145, 840 N.E.2d 114, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 2719 (N.Y. 2005).

Trial court erred in denying a town's motion to set aside a verdict in favor of a corporation in its suit seeking damages arising from a collision between the town's snowplow and the corporation's bus because the evidence was insufficient to support a finding that the town's employee operated the snowplow recklessly within the meaning of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1103(b); according to his testimony, the town's employee looked in his side mirrors as he approached the intersection where the accident occurred, but did not look in them immediately before turning, and he either failed to see the bus, or believed that the bus was far enough behind him that he could safely make the turn. He then moved into the left U-turn lane to make the wide turn, and made a right turn into the approaching bus. Rockland Coaches, Inc. v Town of Clarkstown, 49 A.D.3d 705, 854 N.Y.S.2d 172, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2501 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2008).

Because the municipal defendants complied N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1103(b), the applicable regulations, and were not reckless in operating a front-end loader while removing snow at a bus stop, and because a collision was caused solely by an intoxicated driver's negligence, they were entitled to summary judgment in an administrator's wrongful death actions. Small v City of New York, 54 A.D.3d 747, 864 N.Y.S.2d 437, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6708 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2008).

Village and an employee were not entitled to summary judgment in a pedestrian's personal injury action because the village chose not to implement the safety zone policy in place during the daytime during nighttime operations, the employee testified that a flagperson would have been helpful and possibly able to stop the pedestrian before she crossed behind the loader, and there was no admissible expert opinion dispositive of the village's claim that it did not act with recklessness. Freitag v Village of Potsdam, 155 A.D.3d 1227, 64 N.Y.S.3d 396, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7869 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2017).

Where claimant sought to recover for injuries he sustained when a snowplow sideswiped a disabled minivan on the road's shoulder, the court of claims erred in applying Vehicle and Traffic Law 1104, which applied to the driver of an authorized emergency vehicle and which applied an ordinary negligence standard of care, instead of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 1103(b), which imposed a recklessness standard of care. On an independent review of the probative weight of the evidence, the court found that the driver was plowing at an appropriate speed when he spotted the disabled minivan, and his actions, which led to the wing plow sideswiping rather than running headlong into the minivan, were not in any way reckless. Howell v State of New York, 169 A.D.3d 1208, 93 N.Y.S.3d 736, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1299 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 33 N.Y.3d 907, 127 N.E.3d 317, 103 N.Y.S.3d 359, 2019 N.Y. LEXIS 1657 (N.Y. 2019).

In action by claimants whose vehicle collided with snowplow engaged in task of plowing snow from highway, facts did not warrant holding that snowplow operator's failure to observe claimants' vehicle prior to changing lanes, whether resulting from blind spot or inattention, rose to level of "reckless disregard for safety of others" so as to warrant recovery by claimants under CLS Veh & Tr § 1103(b), where all warning lights on snowplow were in operation and there was credible testimony that left-hand turn directional signal was on before snowplow changed lanes. McDonald v State, 176 Misc. 2d 130, 673 N.Y.S.2d 512, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 83 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1998).

City was entitled to summary judgment on a victim's tort claim, after he was struck by a snowplow, because under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1103(b), the snowplow operator was actually engaged in a hazardous operation, and thus was held to a recklessness standard instead of a negligence standard. Oliveira v City of Mt. Vernon, 401 F. Supp. 2d 379, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 31085 (S.D.N.Y. 2005), aff'd in part, vacated in part, 209 Fed. Appx. 82, 2006 U.S. App. LEXIS 31486 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2006).

5. —Reckless disregard

Court of Claims correctly determined that "reckless disregard" standard under CLS Veh & Tr § 1103(b) is same as that under CLS Veh & Tr § 1104(e). Bliss v State, 272 A.D.2d 567, 709 N.Y.S.2d 417, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6004 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), aff'd in part, modified, 95 N.Y.2d 911, 719 N.Y.S.2d 631, 742 N.E.2d 106, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3525 (N.Y. 2000).

In action arising from collision between plaintiff's vehicle and village sand truck, village employees who were operating truck were entitled to summary judgment on ground that "reckless disregard" standard set forth in CLS Veh & Tr § 1103(b) governed their conduct and plaintiff could not prove that they had acted with reckless disregard for her safety, where they were applying sand/salt mixture to icy road surface at time of accident, truck was traveling at less than 20 miles per hour on moderate downgrade, and driver downshifted and gradually applied brakes when approaching intersection but truck failed to stop because its wheels locked. Kearns v Piatt, 277 A.D.2d 677, 716 N.Y.S.2d 418, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12052 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

In action for personal injuries to passenger in car that was hit from behind by tow truck while car was stopped to allow town's snow plow to complete turn after banking snow at intersection, town and driver of plow were entitled to summary judgment dismissing cross claim by owner and driver of truck for contribution where (1) plow was "actually engaged in work on a highway" and thus exempt from rules of road under CLS Veh & Tr § 1103(b) unless its driver acted recklessly, and (2) there was no evidence that plow driver recklessly disregarded safety of motorists. Guereschi v Bouchard, 286 A.D.2d 997, 730 N.Y.S.2d 659, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8966 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2001), app. denied, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12825 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't Dec. 21, 2001), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 613, 742 N.Y.S.2d 606, 769 N.E.2d 353, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 552 (N.Y. 2002).

Where defendants, a highway department and a town employee, established that the town employee was actually engaged in work on a highway within the meaning of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. § 1103(b) when plaintiff motorcyclist suddenly came upon the tractor the employee was operating and was injured in trying to avoid driving into it, and where the motorcyclist failed to raise an issue of fact as to whether the tractor was being operated in reckless disregard of others resulting in a risk so great as to make it highly probable that harm would follow, the supreme court should have granted defendants' motion for summary judgment dismissing the motorcyclist's personal injury complaint. Farese v Town of Carmel, 296 A.D.2d 436, 745 N.Y.S.2d 197, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7314 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2002).

Where a village employee was plowing the employee's own driveway with a village vehicle when the employee ran into plaintiff, defendants were not entitled to have the employee's conduct judged by the "reckless disregard" standard applicable to public employees while acting within the scope of their employment under § 1103(b). Niro v Vill. of Lake George, 299 A.D.2d 689, 749 N.Y.S.2d 589, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10766 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2002).

Utility technician's actions of parking his utility truck as far off the road as possible, with some 17 feet of paved roadway adjacent to it for passing, leaving the truck's lights flashing and three cones placed behind it to a distance of 18 feet, and fact that the sun was shining such that the truck could be seen from a distance of nearly 600 feet by southbound motorists, did not create a hazardous condition, such that an injured driver could not prove that the technician's actions arose to the level of reckless disregard; thus, summary judgment against the injured driver was appropriate. Green v Covington, 299 A.D.2d 636, 750 N.Y.S.2d 162, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10581 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2002).

In a personal injury action, denial of defendants' summary judgment motion was proper, as defendants failed to establish as a matter of law that a snowplow operator did not act with reckless disregard for the safety of others, N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1103(b), by allegedly crossing over into another lane of travel. In support of their motion, defendants submitted the deposition testimony of plaintiffs wherein they testified that the operator was traveling too fast and veered into plaintiffs' lane to avoid hitting a mailbox. Haist v Town of Newstead, 27 A.D.3d 1133, 811 N.Y.S.2d 518, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3252 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2006).

In a personal injury action, a town met its burden of establishing entitlement to summary judgment, that its employees did not act in "reckless disregard for the safety of others" (N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1103(b)), by submitting deposition testimony of a snowplow driver and snowplow "wing man" wherein they each testified that the snowplow stopped behind two vehicles that were stopped on the side of the road and waited for traffic in the opposite direction to clear, and once that traffic had cleared the snowplow proceeded around the stopped vehicles at a very low rate of speed. In response, plaintiff failed to raise a triable issue of fact. Ferreri v Town of Penfield, 34 A.D.3d 1243, 824 N.Y.S.2d 835, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15989 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2006).

Neither party was entitled to summary judgment on the reckless disregard standard because there were conflicting descriptions of the circumstances surrounding the accident and, as such, issues of fact existed to whether the city's snowplow was a vehicle actually engaged in work on a highway at the time of the accident with the driver. Martinez v City of Buffalo, 149 A.D.3d 1469, 53 N.Y.S.3d 419, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3258 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2017).

Trial court erred in imposing liability against a truck driver because the driver's actions—positioning the truck completely off of the travel lane and activating various hazard lights—were not so unreasonable as to make it highly probable that harm would follow given the favorable weather and road conditions for motorists, and, even if the driver could have positioned the truck even farther to the left and off of the rumble strips, that failing established, at most, a lack of due care under the circumstances, which was insufficient to impose liability under the recklessness standard. Alexandra R. v Krone, 186 A.D.3d 981, 129 N.Y.S.3d 579, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4784 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. dismissed, 36 N.Y.3d 933, 2020 N.Y. LEXIS 2854 (N.Y. 2020).

Court of claims erred in finding the department of transportation (DOT) to be 100% at fault in the happening of an accident—a DOT dump truck, engaged in the task of locating and retrieving a deer carcass, collided with the claimant's moped while he was traveling in the bike lane of a county highway—because the DOT workers were "actually engaged in work on a highway" at the time of the accident, and the claimant failed to show that their actions constituted a "reckless disregard for the safety of others." Rascelles v State of New York, 187 A.D.3d 953, 130 N.Y.S.3d 739, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5943 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2020).

Snowplow engaged in task of plowing snow from highway is vehicle engaged in work on highway, and therefore is subject to "reckless disregard" standard of care prescribed in CLS Veh & Tr § 1103(b). McDonald v State, 176 Misc. 2d 130, 673 N.Y.S.2d 512, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 83 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1998).

None of the parties in a passenger's personal injury action were entitled to summary judgment because there were triable issues of fact as to whether a city employee acted with reckless disregard while driving a snowplow and as to whether the driver of the passenger's vehicle should have seen the snowplow and whether he used reasonable care to avoid the accident where the employee was actively engaged in work within the scope of his duties on the highway, the employee continued at a speed of at least 10-15 mph, ran two red lights, had an obstructed view, knew that there might have been a car behind the obstruction, and provided no rationale as to why his running of the red lights was justified. Holmes v Fiore, 52 Misc. 3d 171, 28 N.Y.S.3d 225, 2014 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 6129 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2014), aff'd, 136 A.D.3d 1326, 24 N.Y.S.3d 562, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 789 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2016).

§ 1104. Authorized emergency vehicles

(a) The driver of an authorized emergency vehicle, when involved in an emergency operation, may exercise the privileges set forth in this section, but subject to the conditions herein stated.

(b) The driver of an authorized emergency vehicle may:

1. Stop, stand or park irrespective of the provisions of this title;

2. Proceed past a steady red signal, a flashing red signal or a stop sign, but only after slowing down as may be necessary for safe operation;

3. Exceed the maximum speed limits so long as he does not endanger life or property;

4. Disregard regulations governing directions of movement or turning in specified directions.

(c) Except for an authorized emergency vehicle operated as a police vehicle or bicycle, the exemptions herein granted to an authorized emergency vehicle shall apply only when audible signals are sounded from any said vehicle while in motion by bell, horn, siren, electronic device or exhaust whistle as may be reasonably necessary, and when the vehicle is equipped with at least one lighted lamp so that from any direction, under normal atmospheric conditions from a distance of five hundred feet from such vehicle, at least one red light will be displayed and visible.

(d) An authorized emergency vehicle operated as a police, sheriff or deputy sheriff vehicle may exceed the maximum speed limits for the purpose of calibrating such vehicles' speedometer. Notwithstanding any other law, rule or regulation to the contrary, a police, sheriff or deputy sheriff bicycle operated as an authorized emergency vehicle shall not be prohibited from using any sidewalk, highway, street or roadway during an emergency operation.

(e) The foregoing provisions shall not relieve the driver of an authorized emergency vehicle from the duty to drive with due regard for the safety of all persons, nor shall such provisions protect the driver from the consequences of his reckless disregard for the safety of others.

(f) Notwithstanding any other law, rule or regulation to the contrary, an ambulance operated in the course of an emergency shall not be prohibited from using any highway, street or roadway; provided, however, that an authority having jurisdiction over any such highway, street or roadway may specifically prohibit travel thereon by ambulances if such authority shall deem such travel to be extremely hazardous and would endanger patients being transported thereby.

1. In general

The driver of an automobile, approaching at right angles a street over which fire apparatus is proceeding to a fire, is required, to stop on hearing a siren. Auburn v Roate, 246 A.D. 461, 284 N.Y.S. 1, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8702 (N.Y. App. Div. 1935).

The privilege accorded by Vehicle and Traffic Laws § 1104 to an emergency vehicle driver can only be denied when there is evidence of an exercise of these privileges that is not reasonable under the circumstances. Strobel v State, 36 A.D.2d 485, 321 N.Y.S.2d 11, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3993 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1971), aff'd, 30 N.Y.2d 629, 331 N.Y.S.2d 442, 282 N.E.2d 331, 1972 N.Y. LEXIS 1425 (N.Y. 1972).

Although subd. (a) of this section permits the driver of an authorized emergency vehicle in pursuit of a violator of the law to exceed maximum speed limits, a private citizen, driving his own automobile in pursuit of a speeder, is not within the protection of this provision. People v Nagell, 23 Misc. 2d 452, 206 N.Y.S.2d 654, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3055 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1960).

Recklessness standard set forth in CLS Veh & Tr § 1103(b) applied in personal injury action by claimant whose car impacted with rear of New York State Thruway Authority truck which was operating in reverse as part of crew dismantling lane closure on Thruway bridge. Bliss v State, 179 Misc. 2d 549, 686 N.Y.S.2d 556, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 661 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1998).

State defendants were entitled to summary judgment in personal injury action by claimant whose car impacted with rear of New York State Thruway Authority (NYSTA) truck, which was operating in reverse as part of crew dismantling lane closure on Thruway bridge, as truck driver's alleged failure to adhere to NYSTA rules and regulations, even coupled with his plea of guilty to unsafe backing under CLS Veh & Tr § 1211, did not meet recklessness standard under CLS Veh & Tr § 1103(b). Bliss v State, 179 Misc. 2d 549, 686 N.Y.S.2d 556, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 661 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1998).

In action by claimant whose car was hit by state trooper responding to nearby accident scene, state was permitted to amend its answer to assert recklessness standard under CLS Veh & Tr § 1104(e) as claimant could not claim resulting surprise or prejudice in that trooper car accelerating toward oncoming traffic with its emergency lights activated should have alerted her, at time of accident, that trooper was involved in emergency operation. Culhane v State, 180 Misc. 2d 61, 687 N.Y.S.2d 542, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 105 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1999).

City had the obligation to take steps to prevent the automatic erasure of any audio recording, and its failure to do so constituted spoliation because it was placed on notice of pedestrians' claim and its claimed "emergency operation" affirmative defense within the 180 days after the recording was made; preventing the city from introducing testimony as to the contents of the audio recording was appropriate. Strong v City of New York, 112 A.D.3d 15, 973 N.Y.S.2d 152, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6601 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2013).

2. Construction

An ambulance was not entitled to emergency status since its operator did not, as required by Vehicle & Traf L § 1104(c), give an audible warning as it approached and entered an intersection against a red signal. Abood v Hospital Ambulance Service, Inc., 30 N.Y.2d 295, 332 N.Y.S.2d 877, 283 N.E.2d 754, 1972 N.Y. LEXIS 1322 (N.Y. 1972).

Judgment in favor of plaintiffs on issue of liability affirmed–defendant's vehicle turned into path of emergency vehicle driven by paramedic third-party defendant; plaintiff also paramedic who was riding in emergency vehicle, sustained injuries; jury found defendant's negligent operation of vehicle was proximate cause of collision and plaintiff and third-party defendant did not operate their emergeny vehicle recklessly–Supreme Court properly charged jury as to standard of care required of operator of emergency vehicle; Supreme Court charged jury it could find ageinst third-party defendant as long as it found he had operated his emergency vehicle in "manner more than just ordinarily negligent, that is with a ... reckless disregard for the safety of others"; although defendants apparently argue that Vehicle and Traffic Law § 1104 (e) indicates that standard of care incumbent upon operator of emergency vehicle is same standard of care imposed under ordinary principles of negligence, such argument is illogical and has been rejected by court. Dugan v Longo, 169 A.D.2d 872, 564 N.Y.S.2d 601, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 43 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1991).

With respect to a collision between plaintiff's car and an ambulance driven by defendant at a street intersection, issues of negligence and contributory negligence could not be determined as matter of law where there were issues of fact as to whether the ambulance siren was operating when it entered the intersection against a red light and whether the ambulance speed was reduced and due caution exercised in proceeding into the intersection. Meighan v Wehnau, 17 A.D.2d 879, 233 N.Y.S.2d 357, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7313 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

For sound policy reasons a defendant's judgment of conviction following a trial for a traffic infraction may not be used by plaintiffs in an ensuing negligence action as a basis for pleading the affirmative defense of collateral estoppel—because of the impracticality of allowing Traffic Court to become the crucial forum in a negligence suit, possible injustice to codefendants in the civil litigation who could not participate in the disposition of the traffic infraction charge, and the detrimental effect of inviting a piecemeal approach to the determination of several issues which may be involved in a negligence case, which approach is inconsistent with the orderly and fair resolution of such issues. Accordingly, defendant ambulance driver and two codefendants, the owners of the vehicle, are not collaterally estopped from alleging that the defendant driver was free from negligence and that the plaintiff was wholly or partially culpable where defendant was found guilty of failing to obey the instruction of an official traffic control device while driving an emergency vehicle (Vehicle and Traffic Law, § 1110, subd [a]), and fined $25, upon a finding that he failed to comply with requirements that the vehicle have lights on and siren sounding and that the operator of an emergency vehicle use due care for the safety of others. Augustine v Interlaken, 68 A.D.2d 705, 418 N.Y.S.2d 683, 1979 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11308 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. dismissed, 48 N.Y.2d 608, 424 N.Y.S.2d 1025, 399 N.E.2d 1205 (N.Y. 1979), app. dismissed, 48 N.Y.2d 881, 1979 N.Y. LEXIS 7850 (N.Y. 1979).

Ambulance owner was entitled to summary judgment dismissing action for wrongful death of individual killed when struck by ambulance being driven by person who had stolen it after emergency workers entered building to render assistance and left engine running with key in ignition, since ambulance is emergency vehicle and is exempt from provisions of CLS Veh & Tr § 1210 which require driver to turn off his car's engine and remove keys when leaving vehicle unattended. Cox v Kelly, 131 A.D.2d 809, 517 N.Y.S.2d 174, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 48255 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

It was reversible error to deny request to charge jury that plaintiff was operating authorized "emergency vehicle" engaged in "emergency operation" at time that ambulance she was driving collided with truck since ambulance is authorized emergency vehicle, and it was undisputed that she was transporting patient who had experienced respiratory distress to hospital at time of accident. Mulholland v Nabisco, Inc., 264 A.D.2d 411, 693 N.Y.S.2d 242, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8647 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

Ambulance driver operating his vehicle at 75 miles per hour in a 50 mile per hour zone was justified where there was ample evidence to show that defendant reasonably believed he was responding to an emergency call. People v Bisig, 46 Misc. 2d 299, 259 N.Y.S.2d 452, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1988 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1965).

The motion of the driver of a private ambulance to dismiss an information charging him with the violation of a speeding ordinance on the Long Island State Parkway was denied, since pursuant to Vehicle and Traffic Law § 1630 the parkway commission established maximum speed limits and provided for the operation of authorized emergency vehicles upon its roads in accordance with those speed limits fixed for all users of the highway. People v Bartlett, 56 Misc. 2d 185, 287 N.Y.S.2d 850, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1222 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1967), aff'd, 57 Misc. 2d 914, 293 N.Y.S.2d 741, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1353 (N.Y. App. Term 1968).

Emergency medical technician/member of volunteer ambulance service was authorized to have red light affixed to dashboard of his personal vehicle, and thus could not be convicted of violating CLS Veh & Tr § 375(41)(2) although he was not involved in emergency situation at time, as his personal vehicle was "emergency ambulance service vehicle" under CLS Veh & Tr § 115-c, as broadly defined in CLS Pub Health § 3001(2). People v Levy, 188 Misc. 2d 103, 727 N.Y.S.2d 248, 2001 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 167 (N.Y. App. Term 2001).

Reckless disregard, which removes the protection from liability of an "authorized emergency vehicle" engaged in an "emergency operation," under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104, is described as the conscious or intentional doing of an act of an unreasonable character in disregard of a known or obvious risk so great as to make it highly probable that harm would follow, and done with conscious indifference to the outcome. Gonyea v County of Saratoga, 23 A.D.3d 790, 803 N.Y.S.2d 764, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12390 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2005).

N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(a) exempted the drivers of authorized emergency vehicles from the requirements of certain traffic laws when they were involved in an emergency operation, and the statute precluded the imposition of liability for otherwise privileged conduct except where the conduct rose to the level of recklessness. Muniz v City of Schenectady, 38 A.D.3d 989, 830 N.Y.S.2d 622, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2246 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

Summary judgment for a county in a motorist's claim arising from a rear-end accident in which a deputy's vehicle rear-ended the motorist's vehicle was error because, even if the deputy was involved in an emergency operation at the time of the accident, the "reckless disregard" provision of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(e) was inapplicable as the deputy's conduct did not fall within the four categories of privileged activity set forth in § 1104(b); the deputy was merely traveling in a normal stream of traffic, driving well within the speed limit and in the proper lane of the roadway when he looked down at his data terminal to ascertain the location of a burglary, leading to the accident. Thus, the liability exemption of § 1104(e) never became applicable, and the county and the deputy failed to provide a non-negligent explanation for the rear-end collision, while the motorist met her burden in support of her cross motion for partial summary judgment. Kabir v County of Monroe, 68 A.D.3d 1628, 892 N.Y.S.2d 714, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9555 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2009), aff'd, 16 N.Y.3d 217, 920 N.Y.S.2d 268, 945 N.E.2d 461, 2011 N.Y. LEXIS 156 (N.Y. 2011).

This section requires an emergency vehicle to slow down to the extent necessary for its safe operation. People ex rel. Donnelly v Rosen, 40 Misc. 2d 583, 243 N.Y.S.2d 449, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1704 (N.Y. County Ct. 1963).

This section qualifies the right of way of emergency vehicles at intersections by requiring them to slow down as may be necessary for safe operation, requiring them to proceed with due regard for safety of all persons, etc., thus prescribing certain procedures to be followed when exercising the statutory privilege of emergency right of way. People ex rel. Donnelly v Rosen, 40 Misc. 2d 583, 243 N.Y.S.2d 449, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1704 (N.Y. County Ct. 1963).

The provision in this section that the driver of an authorized emergency vehicle is not relieved of the duty to drive with due regard for safety of all persons or protected from consequences of reckless disregard of safety of others does not require that he operate with the degree of care necessary to avoid guilt of common-law negligence but only that he avoid gross negligence through reckless disregard for safety of others. Bravata v Russo, 41 Misc. 2d 376, 245 N.Y.S.2d 702, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1270 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963), rev'd, 21 A.D.2d 689, 250 N.Y.S.2d 582, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3706 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1964).

In action by claimant whose car was hit by state trooper responding to nearby accident scene, state's general denial in its answer and its assertion that it was "not negligent in any manner, nor guilty of any culpable conduct" did not embrace recklessness standard set forth in CLS Veh & Tr § 1104(e); defense under § 1104(e) should have been affirmatively raised in state's answer, to enable claimant to evaluate merits of claim before proceeding to trial. Culhane v State, 180 Misc. 2d 61, 687 N.Y.S.2d 542, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 105 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1999).

3. Construction with other laws

Summary judgment dismissal of plaintiff's suit against a city and police officer whose patrol car he collided with was proper because the officer's operation of his vehicle did not rise to the level of "reckless disregard" for the safety of others necessary for liability under this section; while he had driving against the flow of traffic, he had activated his lights and siren, was traveling at only 15 to 25 mph in a 30 mph zone, and tried to avoid the collision by braking hard and veering. Frezzell v City of New York, 24 N.Y.3d 213, 997 N.Y.S.2d 367, 21 N.E.3d 1028, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 3191 (N.Y. 2014).

CLS Veh & Tr §§ 1104 and 1144 can serve as predicates for action under CLS Gen Mun § 205-e, and those sections applied where police officer was injured when patrol car in which he was passenger collided with another vehicle. Kelly v City of New York, 240 A.D.2d 709, 661 N.Y.S.2d 515, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7078 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

Court should have permitted plaintiff to amend her complaint to cite CLS Veh & Tr § 1104 in support of her cause of action under CLS Gen Mun § 205-e because, if finder of fact ultimately concluded that vehicle in which plaintiff was passenger was being operated in emergency situation, her § 205-e claim could be predicated on finding that operation of vehicle violated § 1104. Liguori v City of New York, 250 A.D.2d 738, 672 N.Y.S.2d 916, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5773 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

Court of Claims correctly determined that "reckless disregard" standard under CLS Veh & Tr § 1103(b) is same as that under CLS Veh & Tr § 1104(e). Bliss v State, 272 A.D.2d 567, 709 N.Y.S.2d 417, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6004 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), aff'd in part, modified, 95 N.Y.2d 911, 719 N.Y.S.2d 631, 742 N.E.2d 106, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3525 (N.Y. 2000).

Where claimant sought to recover for injuries he sustained when a snowplow sideswiped a disabled minivan on the road's shoulder, the court of claims erred in applying Vehicle and Traffic Law 1104, which applied to the driver of an authorized emergency vehicle and which applied an ordinary negligence standard of care, instead of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 1103(b), which imposed a recklessness standard of care. On an independent review of the probative weight of the evidence, the court found that the driver was plowing at an appropriate speed when he spotted the disabled minivan, and his actions, which led to the wing plow sideswiping rather than running headlong into the minivan, were not in any way reckless. Howell v State of New York, 169 A.D.3d 1208, 93 N.Y.S.3d 736, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1299 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 33 N.Y.3d 907, 127 N.E.3d 317, 103 N.Y.S.3d 359, 2019 N.Y. LEXIS 1657 (N.Y. 2019).

Section 1104 (subd [b], par 3) of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, which provides that the driver of an authorized emergency vehicle may exceed the maximum speed limits, is not an exception to subdivision (b) of section 1180 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, which prohibits driving a vehicle at a speed in excess of 55 miles per hour and is not required to be pleaded and proved by the prosecution in order to make out a prima facie case under subdivision (b) of section 1180, as would be a true exception; subdivision (b) of section 1104 is not an exception to section 1180 since it is not set forth in the enacting clause of section 1180; in order to be a proviso, it need not be set forth subsequent to section 1180 since the distinction between exception and proviso should not be mechanically applied; furthermore, the prosecution is not required to adduce proof of a negative such as the status of the driver as a driver of an emergency vehicle since the exceptive fact is peculiarly within the driver's knowledge; therefore, the prosecution is not required to plead or prove that a defendant is not the driver of an emergency vehicle in order to make a prima facie case of speeding. People v Baur, 102 Misc. 2d 971, 423 N.Y.S.2d 800, 1980 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2046 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1980).

Higher court's analysis of whether CLS Gen Oblig § 9-103 constituted affirmative defense was not dispositive of whether CLS Veh & Tr §§ 1103(b) and 1104(e) constituted affirmative defenses. Culhane v State, 180 Misc. 2d 61, 687 N.Y.S.2d 542, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 105 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1999).

4. Ambulance

State trooper did not act recklessly in pursuing dirt bike that accelerated after driver ignored his gesture to pull over (for failure of driver and passenger to wear helmets), trooper's conduct was not proximate cause of accident in which driver lost control of bike, even though trooper's car came to rest on top of injured passenger, and thus state was not liable for passenger's injuries, where (1) passenger's own expert acknowledged that operation of bike was threat to public safety and that trooper, having perceived Vehicle and Traffic Law violation, had authority and duty to follow bike and remove it from highway, (2) although trooper exceeded 35 miles-per-hour speed limit during part of brief pursuit, he never exceeded 50 and was traveling only 17 to 20 miles per hour when he left road, (3) trooper's exceeding of speed limit did not warrant liability, given that weather was clear and dry, it was light outside, and there was no traffic in rural area of pursuit, and (4) although trooper's car ultimately came into contact with bike and passenger's ejected body on side of road, that unintentional contact resulted from trooper's reasonable efforts to avoid what he thought was going to be collision on road. Schieren v State, 281 A.D.2d 828, 722 N.Y.S.2d 128, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3011 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

In a personal injury action, municipal defendants failed to eliminate all triable issues of fact regarding whether an ambulance entered an intersection with the traffic light in its favor and whether another driver's alleged failure to yield the right-of-way was the sole proximate cause of the accident. Municipal defendants also failed to establish, prima facie, their entitlement to judgment as a matter of law under the reckless disregard standard of care, as they did not demonstrate that the siren and lights on the ambulance were activated. Wynter v City of New York, 173 A.D.3d 1122, 104 N.Y.S.3d 645, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4985 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2019).

In a car driver's personal injury action arising an ambulance colliding with his vehicle at an intersection, the ambulance driver and his ambulance service employer were not entitled to summary judgment on the issue of liability pursuant to this section because they had failed to eliminate all material issues of fact as to whether the ambulance driver had activated the ambulance's siren and lights prior to the accident, given the car driver's conflicting version of the accident; although the ambulance driver alleged that he engaged the lights and sirens before entering the intersection, the car driver alleged that he was in the intersection first when he was hit by the ambulance and that the ambulance's lights and sirens were not engaged. Sardar v Park Ambulance Serv. Inc., 56 Misc. 3d 756, 53 N.Y.S.3d 515, 2017 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2007 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2017).

5. Police vehicle

CLS Gen Mun § 205-e supported lawsuit by injured police officer against New York City based on fellow officer's violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 1104(e) which resulted in traffic accident. Gonzalez v Iocovello, 93 N.Y.2d 539, 693 N.Y.S.2d 486, 715 N.E.2d 489, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1422 (N.Y. 1999).

Former §§ 56, subd 1-a, 58 and 67 do not relate to police vehicles, and it was prejudicial error for the trial court so to charge. Booth v Rochester, 258 A.D. 849, 15 N.Y.S.2d 945, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7226 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

A driver of a police patrol car when in pursuit of an actual or suspected violator may exceed the maximum speed limits and may disregard regulations governing directions of movement or turning in specified directions, as long as the officer does not endanger life or property. The requirement that the operator of an emergency vehicle have "due regard for the safety of all persons," and the imposition of responsibility for "the consequences of his reckless disregard for the safety of others" are not such as to require compliance with generally accepted definitions of negligence. Stanton v State, 29 A.D.2d 612, 285 N.Y.S.2d 964, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2643 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1967), aff'd, 26 N.Y.2d 990, 311 N.Y.S.2d 28, 259 N.E.2d 494, 1970 N.Y. LEXIS 1346 (N.Y. 1970).

Police vehicles generally have right-of-way over pedestrians. Booth v Rochester, 258 A.D. 849, 15 N.Y.S.2d 945, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7226 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

Where there is clear and immediate threat to public safety, officer has right to use whatever means necessary, short of recklessness, to overtake and apprehend offending driver. Mullane v City of Amsterdam, 212 A.D.2d 848, 622 N.Y.S.2d 346, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 931 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1995).

Police officer engaged in high-speed pursuit of another vehicle must comply with instructions set forth in CLS Veh & Tr § 1104 and departmental procedures; although certain emergency allowances are accorded to police officers engaged in hot pursuit, due care to ensure safety of all persons must nevertheless be exercised. Mercado v Vega, 161 A.D.2d 365, 556 N.Y.S.2d 30, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5299 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1990), rev'd, 77 N.Y.2d 918, 569 N.Y.S.2d 595, 572 N.E.2d 36, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 368 (N.Y. 1991).

Jury charge in a negligence suit against an officer who was responding to an emergency call was not confusing because the trial court did not rely solely on N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(e), but after reading the statute, went on to give a charge that closely mirrored the pattern jury instruction, and referenced the fact that the officer and a driver were to be judged by different standards; the verdict sheet clearly indicated these differing standards. Further, the jury did not request a clarification on the instructions given. Alvarado v Dillon, 67 A.D.3d 1214, 888 N.Y.S.2d 673, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8367 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2009).

The freedom of police officers from the requirement of compliance with the generally accepted definition of negligence applies to the permissible manner of operation of emergency vehicles as authorized by the statute, but not as to the conduct or actions of police officers in the general discharge of their duties; as to such conduct, the generally accepted definition of negligence applies. Jansen v State, 60 Misc. 2d 36, 301 N.Y.S.2d 811, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1566 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1968), aff'd, 32 A.D.2d 889, 302 N.Y.S.2d 1016 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1969).

In action by plaintiff whose car was struck by another vehicle that city police had been pursuing, city was entitled to summary judgment as plaintiff was unable to show excessive speed or disregard for traffic devices on part of police, and police did not act with reckless disregard for safety of others where they were in constant communication with dispatcher, they reasonably believed that vehicle they were pursuing was stolen, and they ended chase well before accident occurred. Foster v Abrams, 167 Misc.

Trial court erred by dismissing a couple's affirmative defense alleging that the suing officer's own culpable conduct caused or contributed to his damages such that any damage award must be proportionately diminished in the negligence suit brought by the officer as a result of a motor vehicle collision as the officer, as the operator of an emergency vehicle, was precluded from invoking the reckless disregard standard outlined under Vehicle and Traffic Law § 1104(e) in seeking to hold a bystander liable for such operator's own injuries. Ayers v O'Brien, 60 A.D.3d 27, 870 N.Y.S.2d 587, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9975 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008), aff'd, 13 N.Y.3d 456, 896 N.Y.S.2d 295, 923 N.E.2d 578, 2009 N.Y. LEXIS 4483 (N.Y. 2009).

Trial court erred in denying summary judgment pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. 3212 to a city and a police officer in a personal injury action; the officer was not acting with reckless disregard for the safety of others when the automobile accident occurred, and defendants were therefore immune pursuant to N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(e). Palmer v City of Syracuse, 13 A.D.3d 1229, 787 N.Y.S.2d 802, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16222 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2004).

Motorist's affirmative defense of negligence was dismissed in a deputy's case seeking damages for injuries suffered when a vehicle driven by the motorist collided with the vehicle of the deputy who was making a U-turn on a highway to pursue a speeding vehicle; N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104 applied to the deputy's claim, and the deputy's conduct did not rise to the level of reckless disregard as a matter of law. There was no doubt that, for purposes of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104, an officer in a patrol car responding to a speeding vehicle was deemed to be engaged in an emergency operation, and the deputy had every right to assume that the motorist was going to yield the right of way to an emergency vehicle with lights activated. Ayers v O'Brien, 852 N.Y.S.2d 730, 19 Misc. 3d 449, 2008 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 621 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), aff'd in part, modified, 60 A.D.3d 27, 870 N.Y.S.2d 587, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9975 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

Police officer's conduct in pursuing a suspected lawbreaker may not form the basis of civil liability to an injured bystander unless the officer acted in reckless disregard for the safety of others. Ayers v O'Brien, 60 A.D.3d 27, 870 N.Y.S.2d 587, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9975 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008), aff'd, 13 N.Y.3d 456, 896 N.Y.S.2d 295, 923 N.E.2d 578, 2009 N.Y. LEXIS 4483 (N.Y. 2009).

Although a parole officer failed to use a turn signal or sound the horn while driving a police vehicle that was involved in an emergency operation pursuant to N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 1104(a), 114-b, the officer's conduct did not rise to the level of reckless disregard or conscious indifference required for liability to attach. Rusho v State of New York, 878 N.Y.S.2d 855, 24 Misc. 3d 752, 2009 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1018 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 2009), rev'd, 76 A.D.3d 783, 906 N.Y.S.2d 836, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6551 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2010).

In a driver's personal injury suit against a county, its police department, and one of its police officers, there was legally sufficient evidence to support the jury verdict on liability, finding that the police officer was 50 percent negligent with regard to a motor vehicle collision, as the evidence established that the police officer came to a virtual stop extremely abruptly in front of the driver's vehicle, in rush hour traffic, proceeding at 40 miles per hour, without any warning and just seconds before the collision while responding to a dispatch call regarding a disabled vehicle. Thus, it could not be said that there was no rational process by which the jury could have found that the police officer operated his vehicle in reckless disregard for the safety of others and that he was partially at fault for the accident. Tutrani v County of Suffolk, 64 A.D.3d 53, 878 N.Y.S.2d 412, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3633 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2009).

6. —Emergency operation

Officer did not act with reckless disregard for the safety of others as: (1) he was responding to a highest priority disturbance; (2) he almost stopped his vehicle, looked to his right and left, and slowly proceeded into the intersection at about 5 miles per hour; and (3) when he saw the driver's vehicle, he slammed his brake and attempted to avoid colliding with the driver's vehicle. Levere v City of Syracuse, 173 A.D.3d 1702, 103 N.Y.S.3d 212, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4585 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2019).

Conduct of police officer, who was struck by a tractor trailer, was subject to the principles of ordinary negligence rather than the reckless disregard standard under this statute because at the time that the officer parked his vehicle on the roadway, the officer was conducting a seatbelt traffic checkpoint and was not engaged in an emergency operation. Cioffi v S.M. Foods, Inc., 178 A.D.3d 1006, 116 N.Y.S.3d 306, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9339 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2019).

City was entitled to summary judgment on a driver's personal injury action because the police officer, who collided with the driver, was responding to the scene of a police call at the time of the accident and, thus, was engaged in an emergency operation; the officer's conduct in making a sharp left turn and not seeing the driver's vehicle before the collision might have constituted a momentary lapse in judgment, but it did not rise to the level of reckless disregard for the safety of others. Proce v Town of Stony Point, 185 A.D.3d 975, 127 N.Y.S.3d 541, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4290 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2020).

In view of the dictionary definition of "emergency", there was no pressing necessity or urgency for a game protector driving at almost 60 miles an hour in a 30-mile an-hour zone in response to a tip that a game law violation was going on in the vicinity. People v McIntosh, 35 Misc. 2d 865, 231 N.Y.S.2d 714, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2762 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

Assuming that a police car is on an emergency trip, it has the right of way, even against a red light, providing it is being driven with caution and adequate warning is sounded. Brennan v Albany, 284 A.D. 997, 135 N.Y.S.2d 293, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4355 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

A state conservation department game protector was not exempt from prosecution for violating a village speed limit where the village police justice found, as matter of fact, that he was not operating the car in an "emergency" in responding to an anonymous phone message that the game law was being violated at a certain spot not too far from the village. People v McIntosh, 35 Misc. 2d 865, 231 N.Y.S.2d 714, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2762 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

Police officer who was driving patrol car in response to 911 dispatch call to investigate family dispute was engaged in "emergency operation" of vehicle as defined in CLS Veh & Tr § 114-b as matter of law, although police department classified family disputes as "non-crime" incidents and both officers in car testified that they considered call "non-emergency," and consequently defendant driver's actions should not have been measured by jury under ordinary negligence standard, but rather under "reckless disregard" standard of CLS Veh & Tr 1104(e). Criscione v City of New York, 97 N.Y.2d 152, 736 N.Y.S.2d 656, 762 N.E.2d 342, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 3738 (N.Y. 2001).

In action arising from police officer's operation of authorized emergency vehicle while responding to report of 5 men fighting, police defendants were properly granted trial order of dismissal at close of proof as evidence that police vehicle struck plaintiff's decedent, who was attempting to cross street on bicycle, when police officer looked down momentarily to turn on emergency equipment, was insufficient to establish that officer acted in reckless disregard of known and obvious risk that was so great as to make it highly probable that harm would follow. Szczerbiak v Pilat, 229 A.D.2d 977, 645 N.Y.S.2d 256, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9022 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1996), aff'd, 90 N.Y.2d 553, 664 N.Y.S.2d 252, 686 N.E.2d 1346, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3221 (N.Y. 1997).

In an action for injuries sustained by an infant passenger in a car being pursued by a state trooper, where the car in which the infant was riding was involved in a one-car accident, the claim was dismissed under evidence that the trooper drove through the city, at times at high speed, at other times slowly, but always with his lights and siren on for warning, watching others on the highway for safety sake and continually re-evaluating the wisdom of continuing or discontinuing the chase, his conduct thereby being reasonable under the circumstances. Strobel v State, 36

A.D.2d 485, 321 N.Y.S.2d 11, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3993 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1971), aff'd, 30 N.Y.2d 629, 331 N.Y.S.2d 442, 282 N.E.2d 331, 1972 N.Y. LEXIS 1425 (N.Y. 1972).

CLS Veh & Tr § 1104(a) applied to police van being driven by civilian operator while transporting prisoners even though it was not equipped with lights or siren, because every police vehicle is authorized emergency vehicle (CLS Veh & Tr §§ 101, 132) and use of authorized emergency vehicle to transport prisoners is emergency operation (CLS Veh & Tr § 114-b), there being no limiting language in statute bearing on either definition. Church v City of New York, 268 A.D.2d 382, 702 N.Y.S.2d 274, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 784 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

Because a police officer's admitted failure to observe a pedestrian while turning into a parking lot in response to an emergency call did not fall within any of the categories of privileged conduct set forth in N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(b), and because notations of significant limitations in the pedestrian's shoulders and neck by the defendants' orthopedic surgeon were sufficient to invoke N.Y. Ins. Law § 5102(d), the officer, police department, county were not entitled to summary judgment in the pedestrian's personal injury action. Katanov v County of Nassau, 91 A.D.3d 723, 936 N.Y.S.2d 285, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 343 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2012).

Accident victim was entitled to summary judgment on the issue of liability because a police officer was not aware of any emergency situation that needed to be addressed, the officer did not see the victim until after the officer struck the victim with the police car, and the officer's conduct was not specified in N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(b) as exempt from the rules of the road. Starkman v City of Long Beach, 106 A.D.3d 1076, 965 N.Y.S.2d 609, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3761 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2013).

A police patrol car is an "emergency vehicle" responding to an "emergency message" when it has received an emergency call for apprehension of a man with a gun in the general vicinity of the region which it is patrolling whether or not it is then within the five-block radius of the stated location within which, according to police department rules, it is required to respond. Bravata v Russo, 41 Misc. 2d 376, 245 N.Y.S.2d 702, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1270 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963), rev'd, 21 A.D.2d 689, 250 N.Y.S.2d 582, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3706 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1964).

An "emergency call" exists when, on receipt of a message, police car occupants truly believe that an emergency exists and have reasonable grounds for such belief. Bravata v Russo, 41 Misc. 2d 376, 245 N.Y.S.2d 702, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1270 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963), rev'd, 21 A.D.2d 689, 250 N.Y.S.2d 582, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3706 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1964).

Because there was a triable issue of fact as to whether a police officer's conduct in rear-ending an insured's vehicle while responding to a 911 call rose to the level of reckless disregard, in violation of the qualified privilege in N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104, the insurer was not entitled to summary judgment. Allstate Ins. Co. v City of New York, 833 N.Y.S.2d 859, 15 Misc. 3d 450, 2007 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 316 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 2007).

Where the officer, while attempting to replace the officer's patrol car microphone after receiving a dispatch for a traffic stop, drifted into an intersection and struck the injured party, the officer and city were entitled to summary judgment pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. 3212 in the injured party's personal injury action; the officer was deemed to have been driving an emergency vehicle involved in an emergency operation pursuant to N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 101, 114-b, and the officer's actions were measured under the reckless disregard standard pursuant to N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(e), which the injured party failed to satisfy in the instant case. Hughes v Chiera, 4 A.D.3d 872, 772 N.Y.S.2d 772, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1382 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2004).

Trial court erred in denying summary judgment pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. 3212 to defendants in a wrongful death action; defendants were not liable for the decedent's death, as a police officer was driving reasonably in an emergency situation pursuant to N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(b)(1-4), (e), when the auto accident in question occurred. Turini v County of Suffolk, 8 A.D.3d 260, 778 N.Y.S.2d 66, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7487 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 3 N.Y.3d 611, 786 N.Y.S.2d 814, 820 N.E.2d 293, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 3505 (N.Y. 2004).

Vehicle owned by county Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children, and operated by society employee, was not "police vehicle" under CLS Veh & Tr § 132-a for purposes of claiming exemption from enforcement of traffic laws under CLS Veh & Tr § 1104 since society is not equivalent to state or public authority by virtue of its limited powers under CLS N-PCL § 1403, and is not authorized to maintain law enforcement unit under CLS N-PCL § 202. People v Ellman, 135 Misc. 2d 1010, 517 N.Y.S.2d 664, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2351 (N.Y. City Ct. 1987).

While the nature of an underlying police call or an officer's perception of its urgency was irrelevant for purposes of ascertaining whether the officer was engaged in an emergency operation within the meaning of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(a), the nature of the call nevertheless was relevant in determining whether a responding officer's conduct was in reckless disregard for the safety of others. Muniz v City of Schenectady, 38 A.D.3d 989, 830 N.Y.S.2d 622, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2246 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

Summary judgment for a city and a police department was proper in passengers' personal injury suit because the city and the police department established that police officers were engaged in an emergency operation at the time of the collision with the passengers' vehicle, and the officers' conduct did not rise to reckless disregard, as required by N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 114-b, 1104(e); in opposition, the passengers failed to raise a triable fact issue. Meade v Chestnut, 53 A.D.3d 645, 863 N.Y.S.2d 446, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6299 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2008).

Neither an injured plaintiff, a city, its police department, nor a police officer were entitled to summary judgment in the plaintiff's negligence action because, even if the officer was "speeding" by driving 4 m.p.h., or 6 m.p.h., when he turned into the plaintiff's driveway and struck him, he was responding to the plaintiff's 911 call, and issues of fact existed as to whether the defendants were negligent given the expert testimony of the driver's obstructed line-of-sight, the lighting condition, and the other circumstances. Barcacel v City of Yonkers, 52 Misc. 3d 544, 32 N.Y.S.3d 460, 2016 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1627 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2016), app. dismissed, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5847 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't July 5, 2017).

7. —Police negligence

Although a deputy sheriff responding to an emergency was authorized to proceed past a stop sign but only after slowing down as might be necessary for safe operation, he was in no event relieved from the duty to drive with due regard for the safety of all persons. Tompkins County v Day, 29 A.D.2d 709, 286 N.Y.S.2d 157, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4893 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1968).

It is prejudicial error to charge a statute where there is no evidence to support a finding that the statute was violated; accordingly, in an action by plaintiff who was injured when the taxi in which she was a passenger struck the rear of a stopped unmarked police car on an expressway, the trial court committed reversible error by charging the jury concerning a city regulation which prohibits persons from stopping vehicles on a highway, since the police were authorized to stop after they observed a car parked on the expressway with its apparent passengers standing in the roadway in front of the vehicle looking for help and, therefore, the parties were entitled to a charge to the jury that it should consider whether the timing and the place of the stop were negligent, and if so, whether that negligence was a proximate cause of the accident. Wilmot v New York, 73 A.D.2d 201, 426 N.Y.S.2d 8, 1980 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10041 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1980).

City was not entitled to summary judgment in action for injuries sustained when officer in police vehicle, while responding to call for assistance from another officer, struck plaintiff as he crossed street since fact issues existed as to whether officer drove his vehicle in reckless disregard for safety of others. McKenica v City of Tonawanda, 239 A.D.2d 951, 661 N.Y.S.2d 814, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6379 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1997).

County and a deputy were not entitled to summary judgment in a motorist's injury claim arising from a traffic accident because the reckless disregard standard of care in N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(e) was limited to accidents or incidents caused by the exercise of a privilege identified in § 1104(b); N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(e) did not create a reckless disregard standard of care independent of the privileges in § 1104(b). The accident at issue occurred when the deputy glanced down at his terminal display to view the names of the cross streets involved in a burglar alarm. Kabir v County of Monroe, 16 N.Y.3d 217, 920 N.Y.S.2d 268, 945 N.E.2d 461, 2011 N.Y. LEXIS 156 (N.Y. 2011).

As the trial court properly found in an action for negligence and wrongful death arising out of a high-speed pursuit, the argument of county defendants that they were entitled to immunity outside of the qualified immunity granted by N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104, an argument which had been raised and rejected in factually similar cases, was without merit. Foster v Suffolk County Police Dept., 137 A.D.3d 855, 26 N.Y.S.3d 781, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1632 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2016).

In plaintiffs personal injury suit arising from car crash with police vehicle, the city and its police department were not prejudiced by thea court's failure to redact the portion of a police investigator's report that stated that the driver of the police vehicle misjudged the clearance while attempting to pass another vehicle because the standard of care was not whether the driver of the police car was negligent but, pursuant to N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104, whether he drove with reckless disregard for the safety of others. Ramirez v Luna, 780 N.Y.S.2d 840, 4 Misc. 3d 46, 2004 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 731 (N.Y. App. Term 2004).

Trial court erred in vacating its prior order that an officer's failure to come to a complete stop did not constitute recklessness, as the expert's report stated that the officer's failure to stop and the obstructed view of the road were proximate causes of the accident; expert's report failed to identify any reckless conduct on the part of the officer. Salzano v Korba, 296 A.D.2d 393, 745 N.Y.S.2d 56, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7051 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2002).

Trial court properly denied defendants' summary judgment motion pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. 3212 in a personal injury action, because there was an issue of fact as to whether a police officer was acting recklessly pursuant to N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104 when the automobile accident in question occurred. Lupole v Romano, 307 A.D.2d 697, 762 N.Y.S.2d 838, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8505 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

Trial court properly denied a trooper's summary judgment motion pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. 3212 in a personal injury action; there was an issue of fact as to whether the trooper's driving in an emergency situation, which caused an accident, demonstrated a reckless disregard for the safety of others, as required by N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(e). Sweeney v Peterson, 1 A.D.3d 650, 766 N.Y.S.2d 255, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11582 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

When alleged injured parties were hurt because their vehicle struck a police vehicle making a left turn in front of them, there were genuine fact issues as to whether the driver of the police vehicle was reckless, depriving him of immunity, under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(a), because he testified that (1) while he was responding to a routine, nonemergency call, he made a left turn despite his limited visibility, (2) the accident occurred at about 11:00 p.m. on wet roads, but he did not activate his siren or emergency lights, and (3) rather than completing his turn onto a street that was free of traffic, he stopped in the alleged injured parties' lane of travel when their vehicle was 20 to 30 yards away. Muniz v City of Schenectady, 38 A.D.3d 989, 830 N.Y.S.2d 622, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2246 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

8. —Citizen's negligence

Defendant motorist, who skidded off thruway in severe snow storm and collided with police car parked on shoulder, was not entitled to summary judgment dismissing police officer's cause of action under CLS Gen Mun § 205-e(1), regardless of persuasiveness of motorist's explanation, where mere happening of collision outside of motorist's authorized lanes of travel created triable issue of fact as to whether she was negligent, and there were similar issues as to whether she was traveling too fast for weather conditions in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 1180 and negligent in sliding off side of road in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 1131. Dubois v Vanderwalker, 245 A.D.2d 758, 665 N.Y.S.2d 460, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12940 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

In action arising from collision between 2 police cars, both of which were responding to police radio call, defendants were not entitled to judgment as matter of law at close of evidence on issue of defendant officer's recklessness, where defendant, whose marked car was behind plaintiff's unmarked car, attempted to cut plaintiff off as they turned left on wet road in fog with no emergency signals in use, colliding with enough force to push plaintiff's car 20 to 30 feet. McCarthy v City of New York, 250 A.D.2d 654, 673 N.Y.S.2d 160, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5509 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

State could not be held liable for head-on collision on ground that state trooper parked patrol car too close to crest of hill with its emergency lights flashing (while ticketing speeder) since sole proximate cause of collision was negligence of driver who, on approaching patrol car, crossed center line of highway and struck oncoming car; trooper's actions were reasonable, and accorded with CLS Veh & Tr §§ 1104 and 1201, and in any event conduct of approaching driver was intervening act not chargeable to state. Nikolaus v State, 129 A.D.2d 865, 513 N.Y.S.2d 893, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 45554 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. dismissed, 70 N.Y.2d 728, 519 N.Y.S.2d 645, 513 N.E.2d 1306, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 18184 (N.Y. 1987), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 616, 526 N.Y.S.2d 437, 521 N.E.2d 444, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 105 (N.Y. 1988).

Estate of state trooper, who was killed when his police vehicle was struck by second tractor trailer after parking behind disabled tractor trailer, was not entitled to summary judgment on ground that trooper was subject to protection of CLS Veh & Tr Hudson v Boutin, 239 A.D.2d 624, 656 N.Y.S.2d 781, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4499 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Summary judgment was granted dismissing a motorist's suit against the State to recover for damages sustained in a car accident with another car, which was traveling at a high rate of speed, because the motorist was unable to show that the driver of the speeding vehicle was aware that he was being pursued by state troopers, in that the troopers never activated their sirens or lights, and thus, the motorist could not prove that police action was a proximate cause of the driver's unsafe driving. Further, the motorist could not show that the failure of the troopers to engage in a formal pursuit of the car rose to the level of recklessness, thereby imposing liability under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(e), in that there was no special relationship between the motorist and the troopers. Bracci v State, 800 N.Y.S.2d 290, 9 Misc. 3d 874, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1777 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 2005).

9. —Safety required

In action arising from collision between police car engaged in emergency operation and car driven by plaintiff, it was error to grant defendants' motion for judgment as matter of law at close of plaintiff's case, where evidence indicated that police officer, after hearing on his radio that fellow officer and ambulance had been dispatched to medical emergency at nearby location, drove at high rate of speed down center turning lane of main thoroughfare heavily congested with traffic, without engaging emergency siren or attempting to decelerate when he approached red light. Gordon v County of Nassau, 261 A.D.2d 359, 689 N.Y.S.2d 192, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4505 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

When a cyclist was hurt when trying to pass a sheriff's department vehicle parked partly in a two-lane roadway while investigating an accident, because he collided with a vehicle traveling the opposite direction, the operator of the sheriff's department vehicle was not liable for the cyclist's injuries because the vehicle was an "authorized emergency vehicle," under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 101, and its operator was engaged in an "emergency operation," under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 114-b, so the operator was afforded the benefits of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104, protecting her from civil liability because she was not engaged in an act of reckless disregard, as her vehicle's emergency lights were clearly visible to both parties involved in the accident for at least half a mile, it was daylight and not raining, and her vehicle was parked pursuant to sheriff's department policies to insure maximum safety. Gonyea v County of Saratoga, 23 A.D.3d 790, 803 N.Y.S.2d 764, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12390 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2005).

City was properly found liable where its police officer, who was responding to emergency, drove his police vehicle into subject intersection at unsafe speed and against red light without sounding his siren or adequately reducing speed before suddenly stopping and blocking plaintiff's lane of traffic, making no attempt to avoid colliding with plaintiff's oncoming vehicle. Baines v City of New York, 269 A.D.2d 309, 703 N.Y.S.2d 463, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2029 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 757, 713 N.Y.S.2d 1, 734 N.E.2d 1212, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 1770 (N.Y. 2000).

In a personal injury action, the trial court properly denied the motion for summary judgment filed by a police officer and a city because there was an issue of fact as to whether the officer was operating his police vehicle in reckless disregard of others within the meaning of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(e) when he entered a blind intersection against the red traffic light at a questionable speed without first activating his emergency lights and siren. Ham v City of Syracuse, 37 A.D.3d 1050, 829 N.Y.S.2d 770, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1071 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. dismissed, 8 N.Y.3d 976, 836 N.Y.S.2d 545, 868 N.E.2d 228, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 1022 (N.Y. 2007).

Trooper was entitled to qualified immunity under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(e) in a claim arising from an accident in which the trooper's car was struck by a motorist while the trooper was making a U-turn because, given the evidence of precautions taken by the trooper, he did not act with "conscious indifference" to the consequences of his actions; the trooper testified that after he stopped in the breakdown lane, he activated his left turn signal and looked over his shoulder and out the front window several times to ensure that traffic had stopped in both directions. Before starting his turn, he saw that the motorist's car appeared to have stopped about 20 yards behind him. Green v State of New York, 71 A.D.3d 1310, 897 N.Y.S.2d 536, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2020 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2010).

Summary judgment for a city in plaintiff's N.Y. Gen. Mun. Law § 205-e claim arising from a traffic accident with a police officer at an intersection was improper because the city failed to meet its initial burden of establishing, prima facie, that the police officer did not act in reckless disregard for the safety of others when she entered the intersection; the city's submissions failed to eliminate questions of fact as to whether the police vehicle had its emergency siren and flashers on and whether the police officer operating the vehicle accelerated, rather than slowed down, as she approached the intersection. Moreover, there were issues of fact as to whether the police officer's view of the intersection was obstructed by a parked vehicle and/or the inclement weather. Burrell v City of New York, 49 A.D.3d 482, 853 N.Y.S.2d 598, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1907 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2008).

The statute permits the state police under certain circumstances to operate their vehicles at rates of speed in excess of legally prescribed limits and to disregard regulations governing directions of movement. Furthermore the responsibility imposed on the police officers under the statute to drive with due regard for the safety of all persons does not require compliance with the generally accepted definitions of negligence. Jansen v State, 60 Misc. 2d 36, 301 N.Y.S.2d 811, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1566 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1968), aff'd, 32 A.D.2d 889, 302 N.Y.S.2d 1016 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1969).

In automobile accident case, sufficient evidence existed from which jury could find that New York City Department of Corrections officer, as driver of police vehicle in emergency operation, was at fault when he drove through intersection against signal and struck crossing vehicles, where factual questions existed as to (1) whether vehicle's siren was on at all, or, if it was operating, whether it was loud enough to be heard by motorists at intersection so as to avoid collision, and (2) whether officer, who was familiar with obstructed nature of intersection, slowed down sufficiently to safely proceed past steady red signal facing him. Klayman v New York, 130 A.D.2d 551, 515 N.Y.S.2d 285, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 46553 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), amended, 134 A.D.2d 408, 520 N.Y.S.2d 1015, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50598 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

10. —Injuries caused by pursuit

Police officer's use of her white "wiggle-waggle" headlights (which alternate back and forth) in attempt to pull over reckless driver was not unexcused violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 375(3). Martin v Miller, 255 A.D.2d 816, 680 N.Y.S.2d 300, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12927 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Police officer did not act in reckless disregard for safety of others, in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 1104, where he received report of reckless driving, saw vehicle that matched description round corner with its tires squealing, and pursued vehicle briefly at speed not exceeding 40 miles per hour in effort to pull it over by activating first red patrol car lights and then white "wiggle-waggle" headlights, and motorist increased his speed as he approached curve and ultimately crashed into plaintiff's house. Martin v Miller, 255 A.D.2d 816, 680 N.Y.S.2d 300, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12927 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

In action for injuries sustained in collision with police car that was responding to emergency radio call, court erred in refusing to allow defendant to amend its answer to interpose emergency doctrine defense where defense had merit, plaintiffs were aware of emergency claim from police report, which they received some 6 years before trial, and they also possessed SPRINT report of radio-run received by officer and deposed officer, whom they did not serve, prior to trial. Romero v Romero, 231 A.D.2d 460, 647 N.Y.S.2d 502, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9411 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

City was entitled to dismissal of police officer's personal injury action under CLS Gen Mun § 205-e, because plaintiff and another officer were engaged in "emergency operation" under CLS Veh & Tr § 114-b, and thus other officer's driving was privileged, where officers used portable light and siren of unmarked patrol car to get suspected stolen car to pull over, driver of patrol car triple parked and left driver's side door open on exiting, passing bus hit open door, and impact caused patrol car to hit plaintiff. Williams v City of New York, 240 A.D.2d 734, 659 N.Y.S.2d 302, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7076 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

City should have been granted summary judgment where there was nothing in police officer's high speed pursuit of offending vehicle showing that officer intentionally committed acts of unreasonable character, in disregard of known risk so great that harm to others was probable. Powell v City of Mount Vernon, 228 A.D.2d 572, 644 N.Y.S.2d 766, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7213 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 807, 654 N.Y.S.2d 717, 677 N.E.2d 289, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 19 (N.Y. 1997), app. denied sub. nom., Black v City of Mount Vernon, 89 N.Y.2d 806, 654 N.Y.S.2d 716, 677 N.E.2d 288 (N.Y. 1997).

In an action for damages for personal injuries arising out of an accident in which the driver of an automobile struck a tree while being pursued by a state trooper, the Court of Claims properly granted the state's motion for a summary judgment on the ground that, as a matter of law, the state trooper's actions did not violate the appropriate standard of care and that, in any event, the trooper's conduct was not a proximte cause of the accident, where the trooper began to follow the car on noticing that its inspection sticker had expired and, as the trooper attempted to follow the car, the vehicle backed up rapidly and sped off down another street so that the trooper activated his grill lights and siren and broadcast that he was in active pursuit, but lost sight of the automobile and then discovered the demolished vehicle against the tree, as the trooper's action as of the time and under the circumstances, and judged in light of Veh & Tr Law § 1104 and by departmental training, complied with the prevailing standard of care and his conduct was not unreasonable. Rightmyer v State, 108 A.D.2d 1047, 486 N.Y.S.2d 99, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 43366 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1985).

In automobile accident case involving city police vehicle, plaintiff was properly precluded from questioning driver and his partner as to police driver training which they had undergone where principal issue was whether driver was negligent at time of accident, not whether he was improperly trained; moreover, since officers were not operating under emergency conditions, they were bound to exercise reasonable care under circumstances so that statutory provision governing standard of care imposed on officers when responding to emergency was inapplicable. La Motta v New York, 130 A.D.2d 627, 515 N.Y.S.2d 554, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 46641 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Decision to ignore grave risk, which is likely to result in harm to others, may satisfy intentional aspect sufficient to impose liability for violation of privileges of emergency vehicle under CLS Veh & Tr § 1104. Campbell v City of Elmira, 84 N.Y.2d 505, 620 N.Y.S.2d 302, 644 N.E.2d 993, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 4111 (N.Y. 1994).

Jury had rational evidentiary basis to find that city, through its fire truck driver, acted with reckless disregard for safety of others, where driver proceeded through intersection at speed of 10 to 15 miles per hour against red light, despite disputed issues of fact as to whether driver looked toward lane that plaintiff was travelling before entering intersection, whether driver noticed color of light when he entered intersection, and whether any emergency soundings were heard by plaintiff. Campbell v City of Elmira, 84 N.Y.2d 505, 620 N.Y.S.2d 302, 644 N.E.2d 993, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 4111 (N.Y. 1994).

Because a pursuing police officer's conduct fell within the protection of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 1104 when he ran a red light in pursuit of a driver, and nothing in the record refuted that the driver passed through two red lights prior to losing control and hitting the injured pedestrians, the City was entitled to summary judgment. Rodriguez v City of New York, 105 A.D.3d 623, 963 N.Y.S.2d 640, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2634 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2013).

Defendants, a city and its police department, were entitled to summary judgment on plaintiffs' personal injury and wrongful death claims because the police officers did not act in reckless disregard for the safety of others in commencing, conducting, or failing to terminate their pursuit of a vehicle prior to the driver's decision to abruptly accelerate his vehicle to an excessive speed and run through a red light. Wonderly v City of Poughkeepsie, 185 A.D.3d 632, 125 N.Y.S.3d 734, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3772 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2020).

Where stolen automobile crashed into vehicle being driven by claimant, and being pursued by state troopers, it was held that upon all the evidence and upon all the facts and circumstances of the accident, the state of New York through its said agents and employees was guilty of negligence that was a concurring proximate cause of said accident and the resulting injuries and damages sustained by claimant that were attributable thereto. Jansen v State, 60 Misc. 2d 36, 301 N.Y.S.2d 811, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1566 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1968), aff'd, 32 A.D.2d 889, 302 N.Y.S.2d 1016 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1969).

Where the estate's decedent sped away from a police traffic stop and operated his vehicle at breakneck speeds and he repeatedly crossed the double yellow line into oncoming traffic prior to the accident that resulted in his death, the estate could not recover on a theory of negligence because the claim was subject to the enhanced reckless disregard standard applicable to emergency police operations whereby civil liability could not be imposed for a police officer's conduct in pursuing a suspected lawbreaker unless the officer acted in reckless disregard for the safety of others. Estate of Nicholas Christian Gambino-Vasile v Town of Warwick, 62 Misc. 3d 646, 89 N.Y.S.3d 577, 2018 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 6025 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2018).

In a personal injury case in which plaintiff appealed district court's entry of summary judgment in favor of a county and a sheriff's department, no reasonable jury could conclude that the police officers were reckless, as the New York courts had defined that term, in their pursuit of an individual in a nine-mile, ten-minute car chase; plaintiff's unfortunate injuries were not caused by police recklessness, but by the individual's unlawful attempts to evade the authorities. Mfon v Cty. of Dutchess, 722 Fed. Appx. 46, 2018 U.S. App. LEXIS 1859 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2018).

11. —Standard of care

Police officer's conduct in pursuing suspected lawbreaker may not form basis of civil liability to injured bystander unless officer acted in reckless disregard for safety of others; such standard demands more than showing of lack of "due care under the circumstances" and instead requires evidence that "the actor has intentionally done an act of an unreasonable character in disregard of a known or obvious risk that was so great as to make it highly probable that harm would follow," and has done so with conscious indifference to outcome. Saarinen v Kerr, 84 N.Y.2d 494, 620 N.Y.S.2d 297, 644 N.E.2d 988, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 4131 (N.Y. 1994).

Trial court properly refused to grant defendants' request to instruct the jury on the reckless disregard standard of care in plaintiff's personal injury action, as defendant, a police officer, was not involved in an emergency operation pursuant to N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(b) when he entered a highway without his vehicle's lights on after plaintiff reported a minor traffic infraction by another driver to the officer, which caused another vehicle to swerve to avoid the patrol car and hit plaintiff, who was standing on the shoulder of the highway. DeLuca v Blanco, 31 A.D.3d 600, 819 N.Y.S.2d 86, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9395 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

In proceeding on claims brought against State by passengers in car, which was struck from the rear by one of two cars after they were struck by motorist while such two cars were stopped at red light and while such motorist was being chased by police vehicle, on theory that pursuing officer violated his duty to conduct himself with due regard for safety of others because he "boxed in" pursued vehicle, evidence supported finding that officer used his best judgment and acted without disregard for safety of others, and, thus, that no liability should attach to his conduct. Selkowitz v State, 55 A.D.2d 709, 389 N.Y.S.2d 45, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15482 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976).

In an action against the state resulting from the collision of an automobile driven by plaintiff with an automobile that had been pursued by a state trooper, the Court of Claims properly dismissed the claim on the basis that it was not unreasonable for the trooper initially to have undertaken pursuit of the car in an effort to apprehend its driver, whose operation of the vehicle had posed a serious threat to other users of the highway, to the occupants of the vehicle and to himself, where, at the time of claimant's collision with the other vehicle, the trooper was following the car at a speed of about 50 miles per hour and, although the trooper was not then using his siren and emergency lights in contravention of departmental regulations, his failure to do so at that time, even if considered negligent, could not be said to have risen to the level of reckless disregard for the safety of others that would be required to find him responsible for the accident, and where the trooper's failure to use his siren and emergency lights was not a proximate cause of the accident when all that the trooper was doing on the road was following the vehicle at a speed that was neither dangerous nor unreasonable in the circumstances. Mitchell v State, 108 A.D.2d 1033, 486 N.Y.S.2d 97, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 43356 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. dismissed, 64 N.Y.2d 1128, 490 N.Y.S.2d 189, 479 N.E.2d 825, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 18647 (N.Y. 1985), app. denied, 64 N.Y.2d 611, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 18911 (N.Y. 1985).

In negligence action against county to recover damages for personal injuries sustained by passengers in automobile which was struck by a speeding automobile being pursued by police, jury was adequately instructed as to obligations of a police officer to use due care while discharging his duties and as to the law dealing with authorized emergency vehicles. Selkowitz v County of Nassau, 58 A.D.2d 888, 396 N.Y.S.2d 885, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13071 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1977), aff'd, 45 N.Y.2d 97, 408 N.Y.S.2d 10, 379 N.E.2d 1140, 1978 N.Y. LEXIS 2101 (N.Y. 1978).

In action against county, sheriff's department, and deputy for injuries sustained when plaintiff's truck was struck by vehicle being pursued by deputy, court properly instructed jury that standard to be used was whether deputy acted with "reckless disregard for the safety of others." Kerwin v County of Broome, 134 A.D.2d 812, 521 N.Y.S.2d 871, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50967 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 802, 527 N.Y.S.2d 768, 522 N.E.2d 1066, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 1200 (N.Y. 1988).

In action for injuries sustained in collision with police car that was responding to emergency radio call as to burglary in progress, court erred by charging jury with standard principles of negligence—whether defendant had failed to exercise ordinary or reasonable care—rather than whether officer had acted with reckless disregard. Romero v Romero, 231 A.D.2d 460, 647

Fact that police officer pursuing suspect in car may have been speeding during some part of pursuit could not alone constitute predicate for liability of city and its police department, and did not preclude summary judgment in their favor in action by persons injured in collision with suspect's car. Dorsey v City of Poughkeepsie, 275 A.D.2d 386, 712 N.Y.S.2d 604, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8843 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2000).

In action for injuries sustained in accident arising from police officers' pursuit of suspected lawbreaker, it was reversible error for court to fail to instruct jury, as matter of law, that city could only be held liable if conduct of operator of vehicle demonstrated reckless disregard for safety of others. Molinari v City of New York, 267 A.D.2d 436, 700 N.Y.S.2d 489, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13340 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

Standard of "reckless disregard for the safety of others," set forth in Saarinen v Kerr, 84 NY2d 494, to govern police officer's conduct in pursuing suspected law breaker, is not limited to high-speed pursuits. Martin v Miller, 255 A.D.2d 816, 680 N.Y.S.2d 300, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12927 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Color of the traffic light was a material issue of fact precluding summary judgment in a driver's action that sought to recover damages for injuries she sustained when she collided with a police vehicle because if the police officer was engaged in the exempt conduct of proceeding past a steady red signal, the reckless disregard standard of care applied, but if he was proceeding through a green light, the principles of ordinary negligence applied. Oddo v City of Buffalo, 159 A.D.3d 1519, 72 N.Y.S.3d 706, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1944 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2018).

Reckless disregard standard of care applied as an officer was operating an authorized emergency vehicle and was involved in an emergency operation at the time of the accident, and the officer was performing exempted conduct when he proceeded past a steady red signal, but only after slowing down as might be necessary for safe operation. Levere v City of Syracuse, 173 A.D.3d 1702, 103 N.Y.S.3d 212, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4585 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2019).

12. —Driving Conditions

Although a police officer was operating an emergency vehicle and was involved in an emergency operation when he was in pursuit of a speeding vehicle, the officer acted recklessly and was not entitled to qualified immunity regarding a traffic accident where the officer pursued the vehicle at a speed in excess of 80 miles per hour, it was raining heavily at the time, all other traffic was traveling below the speed limit, the road contained S-curves and knolls, and the officer knew that there recently had been other serious accidents caused by inappropriate speed in the area where the subject collision occurred. Flack v State of New York, 57 A.D.3d 1199, 870 N.Y.S.2d 500, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9575 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

Failure of police officers of different city to sound their siren or operate their flashing lights during pursuit of a traffic violator, prior to time fleeing vehicle ran through a red traffic light and collided with vehicle driven by plaintiff, who had entered intersection with a green light in his favor, constituted negligence and was a concurrent proximate cause of accident, where, had siren been sounding and lights flashing at time plaintiff-driver observed fleeing vehicle, plaintiff would have been warned and would not have entered intersection. Thain v New York, 35 A.D.2d 545, 313 N.Y.S.2d 484, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4150 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1970), aff'd, 30 N.Y.2d 524, 330 N.Y.S.2d 67, 280 N.E.2d 892, 1972 N.Y. LEXIS 1509 (N.Y. 1972).

Village police officer's pursuit of suspected drunken driver did not, as matter of law, overstep limits of qualified privilege under CLS Veh & Tr § 1104, even though officer exceed posted speed limit, road was wet, there was possibility of other vehicular traffic in vicinity and officer did not immediately call his headquarters before pursuit; officer was entitled to act quickly and to take certain risk in interest of stopping motorist whose conduct on road presented clear and immediate threat to public safety. Saarinen v Kerr, 84 N.Y.2d 494, 620 N.Y.S.2d 297, 644 N.E.2d 988, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 4131 (N.Y. 1994).

In personal injury action against county, sheriff's department, and deputy, jury was adequately apprised of role of departmental regulations in considering deputy's conduct during high-speed chase where court's charge stated that "conduct of a police officer, while in pursuit of another vehicle, is governed by Section 1104 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law and by the particular departmental training which the officer has received," and court told jury to review exhibits, most of which consisted of departmental guidelines used in officer's training. Kerwin v County of Broome, 134 A.D.2d 812, 521 N.Y.S.2d 871, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50967 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 802, 527 N.Y.S.2d 768, 522 N.E.2d 1066, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 1200 (N.Y. 1988).

In an action by persons injured when an automobile being pursued by a state trooper went out of control and crashed into their car, the trial court erred in finding the state liable where the trooper's conduct in tracking a motorist to ascertain its speed after seeing the motorist run a red light and before activating his siren to stop the motorist was negligent inasmuch as the trooper had no reason to believe or to expect that the motorist would not stop; the trooper was not negligent in pursuing the motorist since the pursuit took place during the early hours of morning when no other traffic impeded the pursuit and less than one minute elapsed before the collision occurred. Simmen v State, 81 A.D.2d 398, 442 N.Y.S.2d 216, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10924 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981), aff'd, 55 N.Y.2d 924, 449 N.Y.S.2d 173, 434 N.E.2d 242, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3117 (N.Y. 1982).

Defendants, including city housing authority, were not entitled to summary judgment where patrol car driven by 2 housing police officers, responding to emergency radio run, collided with another vehicle, as result of which police car jumped curb and hit infant plaintiffs, where parties disputed whether (1) police car had both lights and siren on at time of impact, (2) driver of other vehicle cut in front of speeding police car, and (3) police car was traveling too fast in crowded commercial district. Foster v New York City Hous. Auth., 251 A.D.2d 42, 672 N.Y.S.2d 718, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6427 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

There was sufficient evidence of reckless disregard for the safety of others under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(e) to withstand summary judgment, where although the defendant city's officers claimed that they never saw the suspect vehicle while in pursuit, and were going at or under the speed limit, disinterested witnesses claimed that the officers were chasing the suspect vehicle at approximately 90 miles per hour on a curvy highway while it was raining heavily; further, the officers knew or should have known that the suspect was not armed, that the car was equipped with an electronic locator so that it could be located at a later time, and that the heavy rain and the dangerous curves of the highway, in combination with the extremely high rates of speed they were traveling, made it highly probable that harm would (as it did) follow. Greges v City of White Plains, 200 F. Supp. 2d 302, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7035 (S.D.N.Y. 2002).

Denial of the city's summary judgment motion was reversed, and the complaint seeking damages for the death of a decedent from a high speed police pursuit was dismissed, where city showed that officers did not act with reckless disregard for safety of others; the city established that the pursuing officers had followed the third party at a safe distance, did not exceed speed limits by more than 20 miles per hour, in compliance with the police pursuit policy, that the dispatcher was kept apprised of the actions of the police, and that other officers took measures to protect the public. Pacelli v City of Syracuse, 305 A.D.2d 1062, 760 N.Y.S.2d 790, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4822 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2003).

The trial court erred in granting a village's summary judgment motion in an injured party's action to recover for injuries sustained when the injured party's vehicle was struck by a police vehicle involved in a high-speed chase, as the injured party submitted the affidavits of two experts, each of whom opined that the speed of the police vehicles during the pursuit averaged over 70 miles per hour and at times approached 90 miles per hour through congested areas and ultimately into a heavily traveled intersection, and this raised triable issues of fact whether the officers acted in reckless disregard for the safety of others in violation of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(e), and, if so, whether the recklessness of the officers was a proximate cause of the accident. Spalla v Vill. of Brockport, 295 A.D.2d 900, 744 N.Y.S.2d 731, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6347 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2002).

Jury verdict for plaintiff motorist hit by another car being pursued by police car was not against weight of evidence, even though car being pursued had violated 2 traffic regulations, where pursuit was through residential area in dark during rush hour at speeds of 60 to 80 miles per hour in 25 to 30 speed zone, officer was aware of police procedures dictating that he slow down if automobile pursuit "gets out of hand," officer continued even though he had considered that someone might be killed, and there was conflicting evidence as to whether officer activated his siren and flashing lights. Fioriello v Sasson, 255 A.D.2d 549, 680 N.Y.S.2d 662, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12944 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 817, 697 N.Y.S.2d 564, 719 N.E.2d 925, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 2920 (N.Y. 1999).

Deputy sheriff, whose police vehicle struck plaintiffs' car while he was responding to report of fight in vicinity, was not entitled to summary judgment on ground that he was immune from liability under CLS Veh & Tr § 1104 where he failed to prove that he did not act in reckless disregard for safety of others when he crossed into turning lane for oncoming traffic and proceeded through congested intersection at speed exceeding 50 miles per hour. Schaeffer v DiDomenico, 238 A.D.2d 931, 661 N.Y.S.2d 154, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4749 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1997).

City was entitled to summary judgment in action for injuries sustained by plaintiffs when vehicle being pursued by police officer crashed into their vehicle, since officer had duty to investigate and stop progress of vehicle which was involved in race and which was being driven recklessly; officer was entitled to take risk posed by speed of offending vehicle and his own vehicle in order to protect public from clear and immediate threat to public safety where night was clear and roads were dry. Mullane v City of Amsterdam, 212 A.D.2d 848, 622 N.Y.S.2d 346, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 931 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1995).

In an action by the estates of decedents who died from injuries sustained when their vehicle was struck during a high-speed police chase while it was stopped at a railroad crossing waiting for a train to pass, a state trooper whose hot pursuit of speeding vehicles precipitated the accident would not be entitled to the immunity accorded to drivers of authorized emergency vehicles under the privilege, conferred by Veh & Tr Law § 1104, to disregard various traffic regulations and maximum speed limits, since the trooper, by failing to reduce his speed and instead accelerating his vehicle in disregard of the railroad crossing signal, failed to exercise his best judgment under the circumstances and displayed a lack of due regard for the safety of others; furthermore, even were the privileges and immunities granted by Veh & Tr Law § 1104 inapplicable to railroad grade crossings and railroad crossing signals, the trooper was negligent in the operation of his vehicle even under a common law analysis. Zulauf v State, 119 Misc. 2d 135, 462 N.Y.S.2d 560, 1983 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3473 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1983), aff'd, 110 A.D.2d 1042, 489 N.Y.S.2d 1019, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 48917 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1985).

Because a motorcyclist's operation of a motorcycle in attempting to elude the police, not the manner in which the police officers conducted their pursuit, was the proximate cause of the motorcyclist's accident, the officers were properly granted summary judgment in the motorcyclist's personal injury action based on the immunities in N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104. Greenawalt v Village of Cambridge, 67 A.D.3d 1158, 888 N.Y.S.2d 295, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7963 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2009).

Court properly determined, as matter of law, that driver of patrol car in which plaintiff was seated did not act with "reckless disregard for the safety of others," ignoring known serious risks of harm (CLS Veh & Tr § 1104(e) while pursuing stolen moped, where it was undisputed that police officer was unaware that he was turning in wrong direction onto one-way street and that he was not driving at excessive rate of speed; thus, court properly granted defendant city's summary judgment motion dismissing action under CLS Gen Mun § 205-e. Gervasi v Peay, 254 A.D.2d 172, 679 N.Y.S.2d 45, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11179 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Village police officer's conduct in his pursuit of plaintiff fell within ambit of qualified privilege afforded by CLS Veh & Tr § 1104 and was not proximate cause of accident as matter of law, and thus village defendants were entitled to summary judgment in action for injuries sustained by plaintiff who crashed his motorcycle while intoxicated and fleeing from officer; officer was justified in trying to stop plaintiff after hearing bar employee tell him that he should not be driving because he had too much to drink and after observing plaintiff's erratic driving as he exited parking lot of bar, department procedures authorized officer to engage in high-speed pursuit when it was safe for himself and others, road block was utilized as alternative to high-speed pursuit but plaintiff drove around it, and there was no evidence that officer intentionally tried to impact motorcycle in effort to stop it, or in any way attempted to force plaintiff off road. King v Village of Cobleskill, 237 A.D.2d 689, 654 N.Y.S.2d 439, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2230 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

State trooper did not act in reckless disregard for safety of others under CLS Veh & Tr § 1104(e) where (1) on receiving radio report of motorcycle accident, he activated his emergency lights and siren and proceeded at speed variously estimated at 55 to 70 miles per hour to scene of accident, (2) as he approached scene, he saw car ahead slow down, and (3) although he assumed that car ahead was yielding to right so that he could pass, as required by CLS Veh & Tr § 1144, car instead turned left without signaling and was struck in rear by patrol car, causing injuries to plaintiff passenger. Notorangelo v State, 240 A.D.2d 716, 659 N.Y.S.2d 312, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7114 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 811, 666 N.Y.S.2d 100, 688 N.E.2d 1382, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3576 (N.Y. 1997).

In action for injuries sustained when plaintiff's truck was struck by vehicle being pursued by deputy sheriff in high-speed chase, finding of no liability on part of deputy, county, and sheriff's department was not against weight of evidence where (1) incident occurred on Sunday morning when traffic was light, (2) testimony indicated that area of chase was not heavily populated and parts of route were flat, straight and 3 lanes, (3) deputy was very familiar with area, and (4) there was evidence that deputy terminated pursuit over one mile before accident occurred. Kerwin v County of Broome, 134 A.D.2d 812, 521 N.Y.S.2d 871, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50967 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 802, 527 N.Y.S.2d 768, 522 N.E.2d 1066, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 1200 (N.Y. 1988).

Court erred in denying town's motion for summary judgment dismissing action for injuries allegedly sustained when car plaintiff was driving was struck by motorcycle being chased at high speed by police since (1) it was undisputed that, at time of accident, no town police officer was engaged in high speed chase of motorcycle, (2) assuming that such chase were in progress, officer's conduct was reasonable and did not show reckless disregard for safety of others, (3) sole proximate cause of accident was manner in which motorcyclist operated motorcycle, (4) there was no support for plaintiff's general and conclusory allegation that another officer located at intersection where accident occurred was negligent in failing to monitor traffic, and (5) officer's failure to act, even assuming that such failure constituted negligence, was not proximate cause of accident. Friel v Town of Brighton, 206 A.D.2d 863, 615 N.Y.S.2d 207, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7774 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1994).

Court erred in granting deputy sheriff's motion for summary judgment where fact issue existed as to whether deputy, who was involved in police pursuit of plaintiff's motorcycle, deliberately drove his vehicle into path of plaintiff's motorcycle in such manner that collision was likely, if not unavoidable, and thereby consciously disregarded known serious risk of harm. Rouse v Dahlem, 228 A.D.2d 777, 643 N.Y.S.2d 744, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6428 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

14. —Pursuit stopped

City and its police department were immune from tort liability based on discretionary decision allegedly made by police lieutenant in failing to call off police pursuit in which suspect being pursued collided with plaintiffs' car, and thus municipal defendants were entitled to summary judgment in plaintiffs' personal injury action. Dorsey v City of Poughkeepsie, 275 A.D.2d 386, 712 N.Y.S.2d 604, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8843 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2000).

State troopers were not entitled to summary judgment dismissing action for wrongful death of occupants of vehicle struck by pickup truck pursued by troopers where troopers' testimony that they slowed down and broke off chase on entering village was contradicted by 4 independent witnesses, who stated that troopers pursued truck through village at 90 to 100 miles per hour, and one witness averred that, because of its speed and closeness of pursuit, troopers' vehicle narrowly missed crashing into other vehicles at scene of accident. Sisson v Baritot, 245 A.D.2d 1084, 666 N.Y.S.2d 85, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13863 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1997).

Defendant town's motion for summary judgment was properly denied, even though town presented evidence that its police officers never exceeded 60 miles per hour and they broke off chase well before collision occurred, since plaintiffs submitted proof that average speed of pursuing officers exceeded 90 miles per hour and that collision occurred within moments after they terminated pursuit; under circumstances, fact issues existed as to whether officers acted in reckless disregard for safety of others and, if so, whether their recklessness was proximate cause of accident. Lopez v Town of Gates, 249 A.D.2d 934, 672 N.Y.S.2d 576, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5026 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

State was entitled to summary judgment dismissing claim for injuries sustained when automobile in which claimant was passenger overturned while being pursued by state trooper since (1) it was proper for trooper to initiate pursuit of stolen vehicle and to maintain pursuit given erratic operation of vehicle, and (2) trooper exercised due regard for safety of others as evidenced by his discontinuance of pursuit on 3 occasions when he lost visual contact. Palella v State, 141 A.D.2d 999, 530 N.Y.S.2d 650, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7219 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

Town should have been granted summary judgment dismissing action for its police officer's alleged recklessness in pursuing traffic violator whose car struck plaintiffs' car where officer acted "swiftly and resolutely" but prudently in pursuing driver at comparatively low speeds over course of several miles, after observing him speeding and driving erratically, and when driver suddenly accelerated to 80 miles per hour, officer briefly followed suit, but within seconds decelerated and broke off chase. Lorber v Town of Hamburg, 225 A.D.2d 1062, 639 N.Y.S.2d 607, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2899 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1996), reh'g denied, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7036 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't May 31, 1996).

Because the police officers involved in a car chase did not intentionally commit any unreasonable acts with conscience indifference to known or obvious risks so great as to make harm highly probable, which would have violated N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104, and because the officers disengaged from their pursuit almost two minutes before the accident occurred, the city was entitled to summary judgment in the plaintiff's wrongful death action. Aqeel v Tony Casale, Inc., 44 A.D.3d 572, 845 N.Y.S.2d 8, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10940 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2007).

15. Fire department vehicle

The rule of a municipal fire department that members driving apparatus in response to an alarm of fire should "use all speed consistent with safety," is warranted and the driver of such apparatus, all other things being equal, has the right of way. Garrett v Schenectady, 268 N.Y. 219, 197 N.E. 257, 268 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 219, 1935 N.Y. LEXIS 928 (N.Y.), reh'g denied, 268 N.Y. 708, 198 N.E. 569, 268 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 708, 1935 N.Y. LEXIS 1167 (N.Y. 1935).

Summary judgment was properly denied to defendant driver of vehicle in which passenger was injured when that vehicle was struck in rear by fire engine, despite defendant driver's reliance on inference of negligence created by rear-end collision, where fire engine was on its way to fire and had its red rotating lights, siren, and air horn activated, defendant driver violated CLS Veh & Tr § 1144 by failing to yield right of way and stay clear of intersection, and thus there was triable issue of fact as to whether that violation was negligent under circumstances. Tobacco v North Babylon Fire Dep't, 251 A.D.2d 398, 674 N.Y.S.2d 125, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6646 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

In action by passenger injured when vehicle in which she was riding was struck in rear by fire engine, driver of fire engine was entitled to summary judgment dismissing all cross claim against him where (1) as member of volunteer fire company, he could not be held liable for act done in performance of his duties "except for wilful negligence or malfeasance," (2) on observing vehicle stopped about 200 feet in front of him, fire engine driver repeatedly applied brakes and slowed to 5 to 7 miles per hour when he skidded into stopped vehicle, (3) there was no evidence that his failure to avoid accident was wilful negligence or malfeasance, and (4) he was also entitled to privilege under CLS Veh & Tr § 1104 because there was no evidence that he acted with "reckless disregard for the safety of others." Tobacco v North Babylon Fire Dep't, 251 A.D.2d 398, 674 N.Y.S.2d 125, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6646 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

City was entitled to summary judgment in a passenger's personal injury case, alleging the passenger was injured in a collision with a city-owned fire truck, because the firefighter was engaged in an emergency operation at the time of the collision the firefighter's conduct did not rise to the level of reckless disregard for the safety of others, the fire truck's emergency lights and siren were activated, and the firefighter either stopped or slowed sufficiently before entering the intersection. Jobson v SM Livery, Inc., 175 A.D.3d 1510, 109 N.Y.S.3d 376, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6771 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2019).

General Municipal Law provision giving additional right of action to fireman injured as a result of any neglect, omission, willful or culpable negligence of any person in failing to comply with statutes or ordinances was available to one who, while performing duties as fireman, driving official automobile, was injured in collision with defendant's automobile, allegedly as result of defendant's negligence in failing to comply with Vehicle and Traffic Law provisions requiring defendant to stop and yield. Burigo v Di Leo, 38 Misc. 2d 851, 239 N.Y.S.2d 166, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2213 (N.Y. County Ct. 1963).

Statute giving an additional right of action for injury or death of a fireman as result of negligence of any person in failing to comply with statutes and ordinances is not limited to injuries sustained by firemen while engaged in extinguishing a fire on premises, and claims by firemen whose official automobile was in collision on public highway with automobile owned and driven by defendants, who allegedly failed to yield right of way to firemen's emergency-vehicle, was sufficient to state a cause of action for personal injuries. McAvoy v Di Leo, 40 Misc. 2d 46, 242 N.Y.S.2d 682, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1798 (N.Y. County Ct. 1963), rev'd, 43 Misc. 2d 164, 250 N.Y.S.2d 444, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1848 (N.Y. App. Term 1964).

In personal injury action arising from collision between car and fire truck driven by volunteer firefighter, defendant volunteer fire department was not entitled CLS CPLR § 4401 dismissal on ground that firefighter had been granted summary judgment due to lack of proof that he acted with reckless disregard for safety of others and only claim against fire department was based on vicarious liability for his conduct, as immunity granted to volunteer firefighters by CLS Gen Mun § 205-b does not extend to volunteer fire departments, which remain liable for negligence of volunteer firefighters while operating department vehicles in discharge of their duties. Tobacco v North Babylon Volunteer Fire Dep't, 182 Misc. 2d 480, 696 N.Y.S.2d 340, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 403 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1999), app. dismissed, 276 A.D.2d 551, 714 N.Y.S.2d 450, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10154 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2000).

Where a village's fire truck was responding to an emergency call when its rear compartment door swung open and struck plaintiff's car, as N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104 did not immunize occurrences that were ancillary to the operation of an emergency vehicle, nor did it contemplate a defect in an authorized emergency vehicle that was exacerbated by reckless driving, the village was not immune from liability for negligence. Wenger v

Although a village's fire truck was involved in an emergency operation at the time its rear door swung open and struck plaintiff's car, and had its lights flashing and sirens sounding, as the village did not establish that the fire truck was engaged in any of the four enumerated privileged categories of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104(b), the qualified immunity set forth in § 1104(e) never became applicable. Wenger v Incorporated Vil. of Rockville Ctr., 909 N.Y.S.2d 333, 29 Misc. 3d 1086, 2010 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4964 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2010).

Where plaintiff, a volunteer firefighter, suffered injuries in a traffic accident on the way to a structure fire, his complaint against the driver (another volunteer firefighter) was dismissed, as he failed to demonstrate a triable issue as to whether the conduct of the driver constituted willful negligence or malfeasance, as his driving did not bespeak conscious indifference to a highly probable risk that calamity would ensue. Plaintiff's claims against the town were dismissed, as the benefits of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 19 were the exclusive remedy of a volunteer firefighter for a line of duty injury as against the town. Lee v Verstraete, 65 Misc. 3d 531, 109 N.Y.S.3d 594, 2019 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4781 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2019).

1. In general; legislative intent

The direction, maintenance and control of traffic lights in question were under the supervision of the state through the state traffic commission; and passenger claimants were improperly denied recovery on the theory that the negligence of both drivers was the sole proximate cause of the accident and that the acts of both drivers were superseding acts of negligence sufficient to relieve the state from liability. Foley v State, 265 A.D. 682, 41 N.Y.S.2d 256, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6384 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943), aff'd, 294 N.Y. 275, 62 N.E.2d 69, 294 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 275, 1945 N.Y. LEXIS 801 (N.Y. 1945).

Where truckdriver, at time of accident, had passed not only first intersection from which warning sign was allegedly absent, but had also passed second intersection, and prior to continuing south in northbound traffic lane where accident occurred, had disregarded the "DO NOT ENTER" and "KEEP RIGHT" signs designed to divert southbound traffic from northbound lane, absence of first sign was not proximate cause of accident. Henderberg v State, 52 A.D.2d 713, 381 N.Y.S.2d 562, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12398 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1976).

Determination of administrative law judge that petitioner disobeyed official traffic-control device in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 1110(a) was supported by substantial evidence where testimony adduced at hearing established that vehicle driven by petitioner crossed over continuous cone line on exiting tunnel. Schwartz v Traffic Violations Appeals Bd. of N.Y. State Dep't of Motor Vehicles, 189 A.D.2d 876, 592 N.Y.S.2d 981, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 570 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1993).

In personal injury action arising from intersectional collision, lessee of storage container that blocked motorist's view was not entitled to summary judgment dismissing all claims and cross claims against it where there were material issues of fact as to whether its container was illegally parked at intersection and whether container contributed to accident. Dixon v Cassone Leasing, Inc., 251 A.D.2d 534, 674 N.Y.S.2d 727, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7576 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

County was properly granted summary judgment dismissing action alleging that there should have been route junction signs at intersection in question and advance warning sign, where County showed that under CLS Veh & Tr § 1681 New York State Department of Transportation exclusively controlled area where such signs would be placed, and county further showed that, according to studies performed by it under 17 NYCRR § 200.2(f), no advance warning sign was necessary. Monica v County of Jefferson, 262 A.D.2d 947, 692 N.Y.S.2d 553, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7103 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 753, 700 N.Y.S.2d 427, 722 N.E.2d 507, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 3697 (N.Y. 1999).

Defendant, which had contracted with city to maintain and repair traffic lights, should have been granted summary judgment in action arising from motor vehicle accident resulting, in part, from malfunction of traffic light at intersection since contract between defendant and city did not indicate intention that city's nondelegable duty to maintain its highways in reasonably safe condition be supplemented with comparable duty on part of defendant, or that defendant's orbit of duty be broadened to members of general public. Ray v Hertz Corp., 271 A.D.2d 374, 707 N.Y.S.2d 161, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4622 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 766, 716 N.Y.S.2d 641, 739 N.E.2d 1146, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 2920 (N.Y. 2000), app. denied sub. nom., Eagle Ins. Co. v Hertz Corp., 95 N.Y.2d 766, 716 N.Y.S.2d 640, 739 N.E.2d 1145, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 4469 (N.Y. 2000), app. denied sub. nom., Graham v City of New York, 95 N.Y.2d 766, 716 N.Y.S.2d 641, 739 N.E.2d 1146, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 4481 (N.Y. 2000).

Legislative field pertaining to vehicular traffic at intersections controlled by traffic signals has been pre-empted by state in Vehicle and Traffic Law. People v Scanlan, 27 Misc. 2d 442, 211 N.Y.S.2d 635, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3481 (N.Y. County Ct. 1961).

Legislature, in enacting Vehicle and Traffic Law intended to enact a uniform law throughout state regulating use of motor vehicles on streets and highways. People v Scanlan, 27 Misc. 2d 442, 211 N.Y.S.2d 635, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3481 (N.Y. County Ct. 1961).

Where a question was raised under subd c of the above statute as to the admissibility of a letter from the State Traffic Commission relative to posting of signs, it was held that the letter clearly came within the exception to the hearsay rule in regard to records made in the regular course of business. People v Hollingsworth, 46 Misc. 2d 1017, 261 N.Y.S.2d 470, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1841 (N.Y. County Ct. 1965).

In a prosecution for failure to obey a traffic-control device, where the arresting officer failed to testify as to the size, shape, height, background color, color of letters, or location of the devices in regard to the intersection they were to control, the state failed to meet its burden and the charge would be dismissed. People v Cooper, 112 Misc. 2d 277, 446 N.Y.S.2d 965, 1981 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3422 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1981).

In trial for traffic infraction of disobeying traffic control device in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 1110(a), People made out prima facie identification of defendant where (1) simplified traffic information contained defendant's name and address, date of birth, operator's license number and date of expiration, and registration number and description of vehicle, and (2) arresting officer testified that he recognized defendant in court, even though he did not point her out. People v Northrup, 142 Misc. 2d 973, 539 N.Y.S.2d 246, 1988 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 836 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1988).

Under presumption established by CLS Veh & Tr § 1110(d), testimony was sufficient to establish that speed limit sign complied with requirements of law where police officer testified that sign was 30-mile-per-hour sign that was approximately one foot by 2 feet in size. People v Praete, 144 Misc. 2d 801, 545 N.Y.S.2d 499, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 549 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1989), aff'd, 150 Misc. 2d 389, 575 N.Y.S.2d 623, 1991 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 608 (N.Y. App. Term 1991).

Defendant was entitled to dismissal of speeding charge where village speed sign was obliterated by foliage since (1) pursuant to CLS Veh & Tr § 1110(b), signs not properly positioned and sufficiently legible cannot be enforced against alleged violator, (2) in enacting CLS Veh & Tr §§ 1683-1685, legislature intended that motorists could not be presumed to know various speed limits enacted by cities and villages, and therefore required municipalities to erect signs warning motorists of such speed limits, and (3) any presumption of validity of signs arising from CLS Veh & Tr § 1110(b) was overcome by village prosecutor's previous dismissal of several other cases for alleged speeding violations in same geographic area because of obliteration of speed sign, and by photographic exhibits. People v Fox, 157 Misc. 2d 238, 596 N.Y.S.2d 984, 1993 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 104 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1993).

In the absence of any evidence offered by defendant to the contrary, the testimony of the police officer, who ticketed defendant for making an illegal left turn (Vehicle and Traffic Law § 1110 [a]), regarding the description, size and location of the no-left turn signs (see, 17 NYCRR 213.2) entitles the People to the presumption that the signs were placed by lawful act or authority and comply with all requirements necessary to give fair notice of the traffic regulation (Vehicle and Traffic Law § 1110 [c], [d]). The People are not required to prove that a police officer was not directing traffic at the intersection since the presence of a police officer taking precedence over a traffic control device is in the nature of a defense rather than an element which the People must prove. Finally, the testimony of the police officer that he recognized defendant in court, although he did not point her out, was sufficiently reliable identification of defendant to make out a prima facie case when coupled with the simplified traffic information containing defendant's name and address, date of birth, operator's license number and date of expiration, and the registration and ownership of the vehicle. People v Northrup, 142 Misc. 2d 973, 539 N.Y.S.2d 246, 1988 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 836 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1988).

Defendant, charged with a violation of section 1110 (a) of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, failure to obey a traffic control device, a moving violation, in that he parked his vehicle at approximately 9:00 A.M. at a location where a sign was posted which specifically stated "no stopping between 8:00 A.M. and 4:00 P.M." and brought his daughter into a nearby school, is found not guilty and the violation is dismissed. While the subject sign clearly constituted a traffic control device within the meaning of section 153 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, defendant's actions were tantamount to parking and did not constitute the active operation of the automobile. The point system promulgated by the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, pursuant to which a driver's license may be suspended for habitual violations of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, provides for a penalty of two points for a conviction of a failure to obey a traffic control device while a conviction of a parking violation carries no points and the applicable regulations state that no points shall be imposed for any violation not resulting from the operation of a motor vehicle. Accordingly, defendant did not violate Vehicle and Traffic Law § 1110 (a). The statute should be construed to avoid an absurd result, unreasonableness and injustice; the spirit of the law would be violated by assessing points against the defendant, since the vehicle was not in operation and no true moving violation occurred. People v Erdman, 145 Misc. 2d 358, 546 N.Y.S.2d 775, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 653 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1989).

Defendant was entitled to withdraw his plea of guilty to violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 1110(a) on ground that it was involuntarily entered, where neither defense counsel nor court advised him of civil penalties that were ultimately imposed against him by Department of Motor Vehicles. People v Woodward, 188 Misc. 2d 7, 727 N.Y.S.2d 575, 2001 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 123 (N.Y. J. Ct. 2001).

The legislature, by enactment of former § 84, never intended that the presence of traffic control signals at intersections should excuse the use of reasonable care and caution on the part of motorists. Adams v Berkun, 2 N.Y.S.2d 98, 1938 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1258 (N.Y. City Ct. 1938).

Where the no-left-turn sign at an intersection where defendant made a left turn was not in a proper position to be seen by an ordinarily observant person, N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1110(b) precluded enforcing N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1110(a) against defendant, and defendant's conviction for disobeying a traffic-control device was reversed. People v Brahms, 192 Misc. 2d 357, 746 N.Y.S.2d 529, 2002 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1036 (N.Y. App. Term 2002).

Trial court did not grant defendant's N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 170.30(1)(f) motion to dismiss a violation of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1110(a), failure to obey a traffic control device, because State failed to timely provide a supporting deposition; under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 100.25(2) did not authorize, nor did trial court deem it advisable to allow, a defendant's requests for depositions by fax. People v Smith, 195 Misc. 2d 41, 757 N.Y.S.2d 217, 2002 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1825 (N.Y. County Ct. 2002).

Because the plaintiff established that the defendant negligently disregarded a sign that prohibited turns, in violation N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 1110(a), 1160(a), the trial court erred in denying the plaintiff's motion for summary judgment in an action for personal injuries. Blangiardo v Hirsch, 29 A.D.3d 841, 815 N.Y.S.2d 692, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6853 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

Failure of a motorist to obey a traffic control signal or device located in the village is in violation of subd. (a) of this section, and the fine or money collected is the property of the village but must be remitted to the State Comptroller with the justice's monthly report. 1962 Ops St Compt #937.

2. Construction

Substantial evidence supported finding that motorist failed to obey traffic control device where (1) in order to make left turn at congested intersection with expressway, motorist entered marked safety zone separating opposing traffic lanes, (2) motorist merely "assumed" that he was being directed to do so by police officer directing traffic at intersection, (3) there was no description of officer's alleged verbal or nonverbal direction, and (4) police were present in area for purpose of discouraging drivers from doing what motorist did. Levy v Jackson, 266 A.D.2d 636, 697 N.Y.S.2d 747, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11215 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

In Article 78 proceeding challenging finding of Department of Motor Vehicles that motorist failed to obey traffic control device, Appellate Division would not substitute its judgment and find that police officer's testimony was perjured where inconsistency in officer's testimony concerned conversation with motorist that was irrelevant to motorist's guilt or innocence. Levy v Jackson, 266 A.D.2d 636, 697 N.Y.S.2d 747, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11215 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

The provisions of former § 83 that signs, signals and markings shall be visible at all times for a distance of at least 50 feet, referred to normal conditions only, and not conditions where compliance is impossible such as continuing snowfall, smoke, fog, etc. Mosher v State, 124 N.Y.S.2d 223, 204 Misc. 580, 1953 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2139 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1953).

The effect of the adoption of subd c and d of the above statute was to shift the burden of proof as to whether special zones were properly established from the prosecution to the defendant. But it does not follow that because the District Attorney formerly had to produce a certified statement, that the defendant is now required to do so since he is entitled to a narrow construction of such statute. People v Hollingsworth, 46 Misc. 2d 1017, 261 N.Y.S.2d 470, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1841 (N.Y. County Ct. 1965).

Obviously § 21 of the Penal Law is not pertinent to the construction of the above statute. People v Hollingsworth, 46 Misc. 2d 1017, 261 N.Y.S.2d 470, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1841 (N.Y. County Ct. 1965).

People are entitled to rely on statutory presumption that speed ordinance had been properly enacted when signs and traffic devices in approximate conformity with the Vehicle and Traffic Law had been erected and need not prove enactment and filing of an ordinance in absence of proof to the contrary by defense in prosecution for speeding. People v Bradfute, 49 Misc. 2d 1092, 269 N.Y.S.2d 192, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1944 (N.Y. County Ct. 1966).

Road was not properly posted, and state speed limit rather than lower village speed limit applied, where defendant at time of his arrest had passed only one 18-inch by 24-inch R5C sign. People v Churton, 67 Misc. 2d 645, 324 N.Y.S.2d 500, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1298 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1971).

3. Signal light

For sound policy reasons a defendant's judgment of conviction following a trial for a traffic infraction may not be used by plaintiffs in an ensuing negligence action as a basis for pleading the affirmative defense of collateral estoppel—because of the impracticality of allowing Traffic Court to become the crucial forum in a negligence suit, possible injustice to codefendants in the civil litigation who could not participate in the disposition of the traffic infraction charge, and the detrimental effect of inviting a piecemeal approach to the determination of several issues which may be involved in a negligence case, which approach is inconsistent with the orderly and fair resolution of such issues. Accordingly, defendant ambulance driver and two codefendants, the owners of the vehicle, are not collaterally estopped from alleging that the defendant driver was free from negligence and that the plaintiff was wholly or partially culpable where defendant was found guilty of failing to obey the instruction of an official traffic control device while driving an emergency vehicle (Vehicle and Traffic Law, § 1110, subd [a]), and fined $25, upon a finding that he failed to comply with requirements that the vehicle have lights on and siren sounding and that the operator of an emergency vehicle use due care for the safety of others. Augustine v Interlaken, 68 A.D.2d 705, 418 N.Y.S.2d 683, 1979 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11308 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. dismissed, 48 N.Y.2d 608, 424 N.Y.S.2d 1025, 399 N.E.2d 1205 (N.Y. 1979), app. dismissed, 48 N.Y.2d 881, 1979 N.Y. LEXIS 7850 (N.Y. 1979).

In personal injury action, plaintiff was properly granted summary judgment on issue of liability based on accident report in which operator of offending vehicle admitted that he had "run" red light, where only evidence submitted by defendants in opposition was deposition testimony of plaintiff which failed to indicate that she had been contributorily negligent in failing to exercise reasonable care in entering intersection or in avoiding collision. Salenius v Lisbon, 217 A.D.2d 692, 630 N.Y.S.2d 531, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8212 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1995).

Motorist was entitled to summary judgment dismissing all claims, cross claims, and counterclaims against her where her car was hit in rear while lawfully stopped at red light, vehicle that hit her car was then struck by third vehicle, and there was no explanation in record for either collision—especially second collision, in which driver of third vehicle saw second vehicle when it was about 75 feet away. Rigo v Ludke, 246 A.D.2d 588, 667 N.Y.S.2d 302, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 409 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

Substantial evidence supported finding of Department of Motor Vehicles that motorist entered intersection without sufficient unobstructed space beyond it where he was stopped in intersection "blocking the box" when light turned red against his direction of traffic, and he conceded that traffic was "incredibly heavy"; his claim that he would have made it through intersection before light turned red if his forward movement had not been impeded by cars in parallel lanes to his left that were turning right in front of him raised issues of credibility inappropriate for appellate review. Carver v State, 251 A.D.2d 268, 675 N.Y.S.2d 58, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7803 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Substantial evidence supported finding of Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) that motorist made illegal right turn where turn was in violation of signs prohibiting right turn during certain hours; although motorist claimed that, once he found himself "blocking the box" at intersection, his turn was justified because it enabled him to leave intersection more quickly, that claim required knowledge of intersection's traffic pattern, and drawing of inferences therefrom as to efficacy and safety of intersection's traffic rules when traffic through it becomes blocked, and thus his claim should be left to DMV's expertise. Carver v State, 251 A.D.2d 268, 675 N.Y.S.2d 58, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7803 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Plaintiff, whose northbound vehicle was struck by defendant's eastbound vehicle, should have been granted summary judgment where she submitted affidavit averring that she had stopped at red light and entered intersection after light turned green, and unsworn motor vehicle accident report filed by defendant did not constitute evidence in admissible form and, in any event, was ambiguous. Hegy v Coller, 262 A.D.2d 606, 692 N.Y.S.2d 463, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7658 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

Motorist was entitled to summary judgment dismissing action by injured pedestrian where pedestrian suddenly walked into passenger side of motorist's car between front wheel and sideview mirror while motorist was slowly approaching red light. Carrasco v Monteforte, 266 A.D.2d 330, 698 N.Y.S.2d 326, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11549 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

Defendant should have been granted summary judgment where codefendant's admission that his truck entered intersection where accident occurred while light was red established, prima facie, that he was solely at fault for accident, and no fact issue was raised as to whether defendant had been negligent in failing to exercise reasonable care in entering intersection, or in avoiding collision. King v Dalton, 267 A.D.2d 208, 699 N.Y.S.2d 465, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12608 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

Defendants, owner and driver of vehicle in which plaintiff was passenger, were properly granted summary judgment where sole proximate cause of collision was failure of driver of other vehicle to stop for red light. White v Clyburn, 284 A.D.2d 328, 725 N.Y.S.2d 557, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5570 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2001).

In a personal injury action, municipal defendants failed to eliminate all triable issues of fact regarding whether an ambulance entered an intersection with the traffic light in its favor and whether another driver's alleged failure to yield the right-of-way was the sole proximate cause of the accident. Municipal defendants also failed to establish, prima facie, their entitlement to judgment as a matter of law under the reckless disregard standard of care, as they did not demonstrate that the siren and lights on the ambulance were activated. Wynter v City of New York, 173 A.D.3d 1122, 104 N.Y.S.3d 645, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4985 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2019).

In trial for traffic infraction of disobeying traffic control device in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 1110(a), People were entitled to presumption that traffic control signs were placed by lawful act or authority and complied with all requirements necessary to give fair notice where patrolman testified to size and content of signs, his description showed that signs substantially complied with requirements of 17 NYCRR § 213.2, and there was no contrary evidence. People v Northrup, 142 Misc. 2d 973, 539 N.Y.S.2d 246, 1988 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 836 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1988).

4. Stop sign

Testimony showing that a stop sign had the appearance of a usual lawfully erected and maintained traffic signal and was erected at a place in respect to an intersection where a lawful sign would be customarily placed, was sufficient showing of validity and authority of the sign, its construction and location under statute. Such testimony forms an adequate basis for presumption that the sign was suitably constructed, erected and maintained and for the further presumption that it was not constructed, erected and maintained in violation of provisions of subd. 9 of former § 88. Meadows v Lewis, 235 A.D. 243, 257 N.Y.S. 137, 1932 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7932 (N.Y. App. Div. 1932).

Subd. 6 of former § 88 prescribed, in effect, that such nonfeasance as failure to stop in accordance with the direction on a stop sign, erected pursuant to a city ordinance, would be a violation of a direct statutory command. Manard v Sheppard, 243 A.D. 265, 276 N.Y.S. 494, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7049 (N.Y. App. Div. 1935).

Evidence authorized finding that plaintiff who stopped for stop sign and allowed one automobile to pass on cross-street and, after waiting about 30 seconds, proceeded into intersection at about five miles per hour and was hit by defendant on left had not been contributorily negligent. Harker v Chase, 26 A.D.2d 854, 274 N.Y.S.2d 64, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3350 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1966).

Jury could rationally find that driver's heedless driving was overriding cause of automobile accident where credible eyewitness testimony established that other vehicle was proceeding at proper speed with right-of-way and that accident occurred when driver's vehicle ran stop sign at 45 miles per hour. Sansone v Lake, 124 A.D.2d 990, 508 N.Y.S.2d 1021, 508 N.Y.S.2d 957, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 62310 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1986), app. denied, 69 N.Y.2d 611, 517 N.Y.S.2d 1025, 511 N.E.2d 84, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 16848 (N.Y. 1987).

There was no fair interpretation of evidence by which jury could have entered verdict finding no negligence by defendant motorist where plaintiff proved that, despite presence of stop sign, defendant proceeded into intersection without yielding right of way to plaintiff and hit side of plaintiff's car. Iqbal v Rubin, 238 A.D.2d 378, 657 N.Y.S.2d 329, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3832 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

Plaintiffs, car driver and 2 passengers, were entitled to summary judgment in negligence action arising from intersectional collision with cab where (1) car driver averred that she entered intersection when cab was about 2 car lengths away from stop signs, that from time she first saw cab until collision she had "no more than a second or two" to try to avoid accident, that cab was traveling at over 30 miles per hour and made no effort to avoid collision, that she heard no sound of brakes or screeching tires coming from cab, and that after collision cab driver said "I'm sorry, it's all my fault," (2) car driver's description of accident was confirmed by passengers, 2 nonparty witnesses, and certified police report, and (3) defendants submitted only their attorney's unsubstantiated and speculative assertions and cab driver's unsworn and self-serving "accident report." Perez v Brux Cab Corp., 251 A.D.2d 157, 674 N.Y.S.2d 343, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7316 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Plaintiff driver in intersectional collision case had no duty to watch for and avoid driver who might fail to stop or fail to proceed with due caution at stop sign. Perez v Brux Cab Corp., 251 A.D.2d 157, 674 N.Y.S.2d 343, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7316 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

There was no evidence of plaintiff driver's comparative negligence in intersectional collision case where she had right of way at intersection and no chance to avoid accident in "split second" in which accident occurred as result of defendant driver's failure to stop at stop sign. Perez v Brux Cab Corp., 251 A.D.2d 157, 674 N.Y.S.2d 343, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7316 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Plaintiff was entitled to partial summary judgment on issue of liability where defendant, after bringing his vehicle to stop at stop sign at intersection, proceeded into intersection and collided with plaintiff's oncoming vehicle, which had right of way. Rumanov v Greenblatt, 251 A.D.2d 566, 673 N.Y.S.2d 614, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7483 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. dismissed, 92 N.Y.2d 946, 681 N.Y.S.2d 476, 704 N.E.2d 229, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 3680 (N.Y. 1998).

Plaintiffs were entitled to partial summary judgment on issue of liability where their car had right of way at intersection, defendants' car failed to stop at stop sign, and testimony that plaintiff driver did not see defendants' car until contact was insufficient to show that accident did not result solely from defendant driver's negligence. Gravina v Wakschal, 255 A.D.2d 291, 679 N.Y.S.2d 420, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11610 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

Plaintiff should have been granted summary judgment where she established prima facie case that defendant's vehicle proceeded into intersection governed by stop sign without yielding to vehicle in which plaintiff was passenger, which had right of way, and defendant failed to raise fact issue in opposition thereto. Wolfson v Milillo, 262 A.D.2d 636, 692 N.Y.S.2d 679, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7665 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

Plaintiff motorist was entitled to summary judgment on issue of liability of motorist who turned left in front of her at intersection without stopping at stop sign or yielding right of way where plaintiff was traveling at 40 to 45 miles per hour in 45 zone, there was no stop sign in her direction at intersection, she had time only to apply brakes but not to take other action before collision, she had right of way and right to anticipate that defendant would stop and yield right of way, there was no evidence of plaintiff's comparative fault, defendant did not see plaintiff's vehicle before collision, and defendant pleaded guilty to charge of failure to yield right of way. Kelsey v Degan, 266 A.D.2d 843, 697 N.Y.S.2d 426, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11884 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1999).

Defendant, driver of vehicle in which plaintiff was passenger, should have been granted summary judgment where, inter alia, defendant's unrebutted deposition testimony indicated that as she approached intersection, she was going "slow," and that she looked both ways before proceeding through intersection, there were no traffic control devices for defendant to heed, driver of other vehicle admitted passing through stop sign which he did not notice, and that he did not remember having ever looked in direction of defendant's vehicle before proceeding into intersection, and defendant did not see other vehicle until it struck her vehicle from side, causing "heavy" impact. Gramble v Precision Health, Inc., 267 A.D.2d 66, 699 N.Y.S.2d 393, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12637 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1999).

In action arising from automobile accident at intersection, defendant town was improperly granted summary judgment on ground that 13 days was insufficient time to charge town with constructive notice of missing stop sign. Herrera v Moran, 272 A.D.2d 374, 707 N.Y.S.2d 217, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5068 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2000).

The driver of an automobile is not required to obey a stop sign where no proof is offered of the existence of an ordinance designating a street as a main artery of travel. Epolito v Epolito, 71 N.Y.S.2d 611, 189 Misc. 424, 1947 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2604 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1947).

Conviction for passing a stop sign reversed for failure to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that sign was proper, and properly placed. People v Gay, 5 Misc. 2d 648, 164 N.Y.S.2d 526, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3705 (N.Y. County Ct. 1957).

In trial for traffic infraction of disobeying traffic control device in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 1110(a), court would infer that no police officer was directing traffic at intersection at which defendant made illegal left turn from arresting officer's testimony that he was able to observe intersection and saw defendant turn left contrary to sign; moreover, possible presence of officer directing traffic was in nature of defense rather than element that People were required to prove or disprove. People v Northrup, 142 Misc. 2d 973, 539 N.Y.S.2d 246, 1988 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 836 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1988).

In an injured party's personal injury action against a driver, the driver raised no issues of fact as to the injured party's negligence when the driver's car struck her car in an intersection because the driver was stopped at a stop sign when the injured party, who had the right of way, entered the intersection, and she was entitled to expect him to yield; he pled guilty to failing to obey a traffic control device under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1110(a), and neither his argument that the injured party did not take reasonable evasive action nor his use of an accident reconstruction expert were persuasive. Horton v Warden, 32 A.D.3d 570, 819 N.Y.S.2d 356, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9817 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

Defendant who parked vehicle in violation of "no stopping" sign to bring daughter to nearby school would be found not guilty of violating CLS Veh & Tr § 1110(a), defining moving violation of failure to obey traffic control device, since although sign was traffic control device within meaning of CLS Veh & Tr § 153, defendant was not involved in active operation of vehicle. People v Erdman, 145 Misc. 2d 358, 546 N.Y.S.2d 775, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 653 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1989).

§ 1131. Driving on shoulders and slopes

Except for bicycles and those classes of vehicles required to travel on shoulders or slopes, no motor vehicle shall be driven over, across, along, or within any shoulder or slope of any state controlled-access highway except at a location specifically authorized and posted by the department of transportation. The foregoing limitation shall not prevent tow trucks from using shoulders or slopes in as limited and incidental a manner as practicable when dispatched to the scene of an accident by a law enforcement agency or an authority, department or agency having jurisdiction over such controlled-access highway and all lanes are obstructed by traffic, provided, however, that the foregoing shall not relieve the driver of a tow truck from the duty to drive with due regard for the safety of all persons nor shall such provision protect the tow truck driver from the consequences of his or her reckless disregard for the safety of others and shall at all times operate such tow truck in compliance with all standards of care imposed to prevent those injuries or damages to persons or property of another which may result from the operator's negligence, recklessness or intentional misconduct, nor shall it prevent motor vehicles from using shoulders or slopes when directed by police officers or flagpersons, nor does it prevent motor vehicles from stopping, standing, or parking on shoulders or slopes where such stopping, standing, or parking is lawful.

Amendment Notes The 2016 amendment by ch 294, § 1, added "tow trucks from using shoulders or slopes in as limited and incidental a manner as practicable when dispatched to the scene of an accident by a law enforcement agency or an authority, department or agency having jurisdiction over such controlled-access highway and all lanes are obstructed by traffic, provided, however, that the foregoing shall not relieve the driver of a tow truck from the duty to drive with due regard for the safety of all persons nor shall such provision protect the tow truck driver from the consequences of his or her reckless disregard for the safety of others and shall at all times operate such tow truck in compliance with all standards of care imposed to prevent those injuries or damages to persons or property of another which may result from the operator's negligence, recklessness or intentional misconduct, nor shall it prevent" in the second sentence.

Repeal Notes: [1968, ch 522] This act repealed former § 1131 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law which required a vehicle to be driven in the extreme right traffic lane when practicable and consistent with traffic conditions. The basic requirements of this section are contained in subdivision (b) of § 1120 as amended by this act.

Prior Law: Former § 1131, add, L 1963, ch 619, § 1; repealed, L 1968, ch 522, § 2, eff Oct 1, 1968.

Notes to Decisions

Defendants' conduct could not be deemed proximate cause of rear-end collision, even if their vehicle were illegally stopped on shoulder without any warning lights, where plaintiffs' vehicle was travelling, in daylight, in left westbound lane of interstate at speed of 70 to 80 miles per hour, and it abruptly changed to right lane and then onto shoulder, where it smashed into right rear of defendant's trailer. Lectora v Gundrum, 225 A.D.2d 738, 640 N.Y.S.2d 202, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3139 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 807, 647 N.Y.S.2d 164, 670 N.E.2d 448, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 1605 (N.Y. 1996).

Defendant motorist, who skidded off thruway in severe snow storm and collided with police car parked on shoulder, was not entitled to summary judgment dismissing police officer's cause of action under CLS Gen Mun § 205-e(1), regardless of persuasiveness of motorist's explanation, where mere happening of collision outside of motorist's authorized lanes of travel created triable issue of fact as to whether she was negligent, and there were similar issues as to whether she was traveling too fast for weather conditions in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 1180 and negligent in sliding off side of road in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 1131. Dubois v Vanderwalker, 245 A.D.2d 758, 665 N.Y.S.2d 460, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12940 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Although it was undisputed that a driver struck the mother's child with the driver's vehicle, the mother's submissions raised triable issues of fact as to whether the child was comparatively negligent and as to whether the driver exercised due care to avoid striking the child; therefore, the mother failed to make a prima facie showing that the driver violated N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 1131, 1146, or a similar duty of care. Sauter v Calabretta, 90 A.D.3d 1702, 936 N.Y.S.2d 469, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9511 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2011).

1. In general

Jury verdict exonerating defendant from all liability in personal injury action was against weight of evidence where it was shown that defendant, unable to see source of sirens and unable to pull over to right due to traffic, stopped in left-hand, northbound lane at intersection for some 15 to 20 seconds before signaling and making left turn, whereupon she was truck by unmarked police car which had pulled out of northbound lanes and was proceeding north in southbound lanes with its headlights and siren operating, following which defendant's car jumped curb and struck plaintiff and her child; however, court erred by directing judgment against defendant and should have ordered new trial on issue of defendant's liability since question of whether defendant was negligent in light of CLS Veh & Tr § 1144, requiring motorists to yield right-of-way to emergency vehicles, was essentially factual in nature. Plowden v Manganiello, 138 A.D.2d 243, 525 N.Y.S.2d 218, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2073 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. dismissed, 72 N.Y.2d 1042, 534 N.Y.S.2d 940, 531 N.E.2d 660, 1988 N.Y. CLS Veh & Tr §§ 1104 and 1144 can serve as predicates for action under CLS Gen Mun § 205-e, and those sections applied where police officer was injured when patrol car in which he was passenger collided with another vehicle. A violation of the rule giving emergency vehicles the right-of-way is at most merely evidence of negligence or reckless driving, not a crime of itself. People v Simmons, 7 Misc. 2d 517, 168 N.Y.S.2d 485, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2866 (N.Y. County Ct. 1957).

2. Police vehicle

Village police officer's pursuit of suspected drunken driver did not, as matter of law, overstep limits of qualified privilege under CLS Veh & Tr § 1104, even though officer exceed posted speed limit, road was wet, there was possibility of other vehicular traffic in vicinity and officer did not immediately call his headquarters before pursuit; officer was entitled to act quickly and to take certain risk in interest of stopping motorist whose conduct on road presented clear and immediate threat to public safety. Saarinen v Kerr, 84 N.Y.2d 494, 620 N.Y.S.2d 297, 644 N.E.2d 988, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 4131 (N.Y. 1994).

As between a police car and a pedestrian, all other things being equal, the police car has the right of way, notwithstanding the right of way granted to a pedestrian by former § 85, subd. 1, and the failure of the court so to charge constitutes reversible error. Booth v Rochester, 258 A.D. 849, 15 N.Y.S.2d 945, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7226 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

Assuming that a police car is on an emergency trip, it has the right of way, even against a red light, providing it is being driven with caution and adequate warning is sounded. Brennan v Albany, 284 A.D. 997, 135 N.Y.S.2d 293, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4355 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

State trooper did not act in reckless disregard for safety of others under CLS Veh & Tr § 1104(e) where (1) on receiving radio report of motorcycle accident, he activated his emergency lights and siren and proceeded at speed variously estimated at 55 to 70 miles per hour to scene of accident, (2) as he approached scene, he saw car ahead slow down, and (3) although he assumed that car ahead was yielding to right so that he could pass, as required by CLS Veh & Tr § 1144, car instead turned left without signaling and was struck in rear by patrol car, causing injuries to plaintiff passenger. Notorangelo v State, 240 A.D.2d 716, 659 N.Y.S.2d 312, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7114 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 811, 666 N.Y.S.2d 100, 688 N.E.2d 1382, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3576 (N.Y. 1997).

Motorist whose vehicle was struck from behind when he stopped at yield sign was free of negligence and entitled to summary judgment dismissing complaint where he stopped to allow police vehicle to pass. Fassbender v Conrey, 273 A.D.2d 22, 708 N.Y.S.2d 396, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6360 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

State trooper did not act recklessly in pursuing dirt bike that accelerated after driver ignored his gesture to pull over (for failure of driver and passenger to wear helmets), trooper's conduct was not proximate cause of accident in which driver lost control of bike, even though trooper's car came to rest on top of injured passenger, and thus state was not liable for passenger's injuries, where (1) passenger's own expert acknowledged that operation of bike was threat to public safety and that trooper, having perceived Vehicle and Traffic Law violation, had authority and duty to follow bike and remove it from highway, (2) although trooper exceeded 35 miles-per-hour speed limit during part of brief pursuit, he never exceeded 50 and was traveling only 17 to 20 miles per hour when he left road, (3) trooper's exceeding of speed limit did not warrant liability, given that weather was clear and dry, it was light outside, and there was no traffic in rural area of pursuit, and (4) although trooper's car ultimately came into contact with bike and passenger's ejected body on side of road, that unintentional contact resulted from trooper's reasonable efforts to avoid what he thought was going to be collision on road. Schieren v State, 281 A.D.2d 828, 722 N.Y.S.2d 128, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3011 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

Police officer whose squad car hit a motorist's vehicle could not use collateral estoppel to bar her suit against him based on her conviction of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1144(a) (operation of vehicles on approach of authorized emergency vehicles), as a determination concerning a traffic violation could not be given collateral estoppel effect in a subsequent negligence action. Marotta v Hoy, 55 A.D.3d 1194, 866 N.Y.S.2d 415, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8102 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

No crime was charged by the simple statement in an information that the defendant violated this section by failing to yield the right of way to a police vehicle on an emergency call. Hence, a judgment of conviction for a violation of this section was reversed and the information dismissed. People v Simmons, 7 Misc. 2d 517, 168 N.Y.S.2d 485, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2866 (N.Y. County Ct. 1957).

A police vehicle in performance of duty has right of way notwithstanding the right of way that another motorist might otherwise have. Lederman v Kavanaugh, 24 Misc. 2d 1037, 209 N.Y.S.2d 426, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2400 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960).

Where a police car answering an emergency call with the sirens sounding and lights flashing swung over into the nearest westbound lane of a four-lane highway to pass congested eastbound traffic, it had the right of way over a motorist in that lane who had ample time to get out of the way and avoid a collision. Lederman v Kavanaugh, 24 Misc. 2d 1037, 209 N.Y.S.2d 426, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2400 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960).

Defendant motorist did not have a reasonable opportunity to avoid collision with a police car chasing a speeder through an intersection red light where the police car was approaching the intersection at 80 miles an hour and sped into it at about 75 miles and the time lapse after he first observed the police car approaching with its red light in action and siren sounding was less than one second. People ex rel. Donnelly v Rosen, 40 Misc. 2d 583, 243 N.Y.S.2d 449, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1704 (N.Y. County Ct. 1963).

Trial court properly dismissed a deputy sheriff's N.Y. Gen. Mun. Law § 205-e claim against a driver because the driver did not violate any statute. The driver did not violate N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1129 or § 1144 where she struck the deputy while he was attempting to make a U-turn to pursue another driver without utilizing his directional or otherwise signaling his intention to reenter the roadway from the shoulder. Aldrich v Sampier, 2 A.D.3d 1101, 769 N.Y.S.2d 338, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13546 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

Motorist's affirmative defense of negligence was dismissed in a deputy's case seeking damages for injuries suffered when a vehicle driven by the motorist collided with the vehicle of the deputy who was making a U-turn on a highway to pursue a speeding vehicle; N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104 applied to the deputy's claim, and the deputy's conduct did not rise to the level of reckless disregard as a matter of law. There was no doubt that, for purposes of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1104, an officer in a patrol car responding to a speeding vehicle was deemed to be engaged in an emergency operation, and the deputy had every right to assume that the motorist was going to yield the right of way to an emergency vehicle with lights activated. Ayers v O'Brien, 852 N.Y.S.2d 730, 19 Misc. 3d 449, 2008 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 621 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), aff'd in part, modified, 60 A.D.3d 27, 870 N.Y.S.2d 587, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9975 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

3. Fire apparatus

Jury had rational evidentiary basis to find that city, through its fire truck driver, acted with reckless disregard for safety of others, where driver proceeded through intersection at speed of 10 to 15 miles per hour against red light, despite disputed issues of fact as to whether driver looked toward lane that plaintiff was travelling before entering intersection, whether driver noticed color of light when he entered intersection, and whether any emergency soundings were heard by plaintiff. Campbell v City of Elmira, 84 N.Y.2d 505, 620 N.Y.S.2d 302, 644 N.E.2d 993, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 4111 (N.Y. 1994).

The driver of an automobile approaching at right angles a street over which fire apparatus is proceeding to a fire, is required to stop on hearing a siren. Auburn v Roate, 246 A.D. 461, 284 N.Y.S. 1, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8702 (N.Y. App. Div. 1935).

Summary judgment was properly denied to defendant driver of vehicle in which passenger was injured when that vehicle was struck in rear by fire engine, despite defendant driver's reliance on inference of negligence created by rear-end collision, where fire engine was on its way to fire and had its red rotating lights, siren, and air horn activated, defendant driver violated CLS Veh & Tr § 1144 by failing to yield right of way and stay clear of intersection, and thus there was triable issue of fact as to whether that violation was negligent under circumstances. Tobacco v North Babylon Fire Dep't, 251 A.D.2d 398, 674 N.Y.S.2d 125, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6646 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

In action by passenger injured when vehicle in which she was riding was struck in rear by fire engine, driver of fire engine was entitled to summary judgment dismissing all cross claim against him where (1) as member of volunteer fire company, he could not be held liable for act done in performance of his duties "except for wilful negligence or malfeasance," (2) on observing vehicle stopped about 200 feet in front of him, fire engine driver repeatedly applied brakes and slowed to 5 to 7 miles per hour when he skidded into stopped vehicle, (3) there was no evidence that his failure to avoid accident was wilful negligence or malfeasance, and (4) he was also entitled to privilege under CLS Veh & Tr § 1104 because there was no evidence that he acted with "reckless disregard for the safety of others." Tobacco v North Babylon Fire Dep't, 251 A.D.2d 398, 674 N.Y.S.2d 125, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6646 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

A motorist who is guilty of negligence in failing to yield the right of way to fire equipment is not liable to suit by a fireman riding in the equipment who was injured as the result of the collision under § 205-a of the General Municipal Law. McAvoy v Di Leo, 43 Misc. 2d 164, 250 N.Y.S.2d 444, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1848 (N.Y. App. Term 1964).

A pump truck of a fire district did not abuse the statutory right of preference at an intersection, despite the fact that the stop sign was against it, where both the siren and the oscillating red light was flashing, and it was daylight. Hashey v Board of Fire Comm'rs, 192 N.Y.S.2d 767, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4637 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1959).

With respect to a collision between an ambulance and a truck at an intersection controlled by traffic signals, jury questions were presented by conflicting evidence as to whether the siren on the ambulance was being so sounded at approach of the intersection as to give adequate warning of its approach, whether the truck driver entered the intersection with due caution in view of partial impairment of his view, and likewise, in view of diverse permissible inferences, as to whether the ambulance was on an emergency mission. Wood v County of Broome, 13 A.D.2d 881, 215 N.Y.S.2d 338, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10711 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 14 A.D.2d 593, 219 N.Y.S.2d 236, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9456 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961), app. denied, 10 N.Y.2d 707, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 2110 (N.Y. 1961).

With respect to a collision between plaintiff's car and an ambulance driven by defendant at a street intersection, issues of negligence and contributory negligence could not be determined as matter of law where there were issues of fact as to whether the ambulance siren was operating when it entered the intersection against a red light and whether the ambulance speed was reduced and due caution exercised in proceeding into the intersection. Meighan v Wehnau, 17 A.D.2d 879, 233 N.Y.S.2d 357, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7313 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

There were questions of fact presented for the jury's determination whether the defendant in driving his vehicle into an intersection acted reasonably in entering and remaining in the intersection; upon the most favorable inferences to be drawn for the patrolman, who was riding as a passenger in the ambulance, which was coming toward the intersection with its siren and light audible and visible, the complaint was improperly dismissed without submitting the case to the jury. Felice v Gershkon, 34 A.D.2d 1008, 312 N.Y.S.2d 824, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4299 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1970).

Verdict for automobile owner and operator was set aside where the operator of the automobile, involved in a collision with an ambulance, violated the statute giving emergency vehicles the right of way, and this violation contributed to the happening of the accident. Parisi v Moore, 37 A.D.2d 783, 325 N.Y.S.2d 378, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3416 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1971).

Court properly dismissed action brought by plaintiff, who was injured while passenger in defendant's car, where parties' deposition testimony conclusively showed that defendant's vehicle was struck in rear when she stopped in intersection to yield to ambulance displaying emergency lights. DiPaola v Scherpich, 239 A.D.2d 459, 657 N.Y.S.2d 883, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5355 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

Plaintiff was properly granted summary judgment where parties' deposition testimony conclusively showed that defendants' vehicle struck plaintiff's vehicle in rear when she stopped in intersection to yield to ambulance displaying emergency lights. DiPaola v Scherpich, 239 A.D.2d 459, 657 N.Y.S.2d 883, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5355 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

In an action involving whether or not the operator of an ambulance, being an authorized emergency vehicle, was "responding to an emergency call," and exceeding speed limits, proceeding past signals and stop signs, etc., the state of mind of the operator at the time, based upon facts known by him or brought to his attention, must necessarily be a factor in determining whether he had a reasonable basis for his belief that an emergency did exist. Delgado v Brooklyn Ambulance Service Corp., 29 Misc. 2d 454, 211 N.Y.S.2d 297, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3449 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1961).

§ 4. This act shall take effect immediately, provided that: (a) sections one and two of this act shall take effect September 1, 2011, except that the promulgation of any rules and regulations, and the taking of any other actions necessary to implement the provisions of such sections of this act are authorized and directed to be made on or before the effective date of such sections; and (b) section three of this act shall take effect January 1, 2012.

Amendment Notes The 2016 amendment by ch 97, §§ 3, 4, added "or vehicle displaying a blue or green light" in the section heading and added (c).

The 2020 amendment by ch 58, § 3 (Part C), in (3)(b), added "or, if such hazard vehicle is designed for the towing or pushing of disabled vehicles such hazard vehicle is displaying one or more amber lights or one or more blue or combination blue and amber lights pursuant to the provisions of paragraph three or subparagraph b-1 of paragraph four, as applicable, of subdivision forty-one of section three hundred seventy-five of this chapter" in the first sentence, and in the second sentence, added "(i)" and "or (ii) such hazard vehicle designed for the towing or pushing of disabled vehicles displaying one or more amber lights or one or more blue or combination blue and amber lights pursuant to the provisions of paragraph three or subparagraph b-1 of paragraph four, as applicable, of subdivision forty-one of section three hundred seventy-five of this chapter."

ARTICLE 28 Turning and Starting and Signals on Stopping and Turning

HISTORY:

Add, L 1959, ch 775, eff Oct 1, 1960, with substance transferred from former Art 17.

§ 1164. Signals by hand and arm or signal lamps

(a) Any stop or turn signal when required herein shall be given either by means of the hand and arm or by signal lamps, except as otherwise provided in subsection (b).

(b) Any motor vehicle in use on a highway shall be equipped with, and required signal shall be given by, signal lamps when the distance from the center of the top of the steering post to the left outside limit of the body, cab, or load of such motor vehicle exceeds twenty-four inches, or when the distance from the center of the top of the steering post to the rear limit of the body or load thereof exceeds fourteen feet. The latter measurement shall apply to any single vehicle, also to any combination of vehicles. On a combination of vehicles, the rear signal lamps shall be at the rear of the last vehicle in the combination. The provisions of this subdivision shall not apply to a vehicle, alone or in combination with other vehicles or implements, if such vehicle is used solely for agricultural purposes, and is not designed and intended primarily for use on the highway, or to fire vehicles, or to special purpose commercial motor vehicles registered under schedule F of subdivision seven of section four hundred one of this chapter.

Notes to Decisions

1. In general

Failure to give directional signal as required by above statute held not to be sole proximate cause of accident to the happening of which it was held that negligence of both drivers contributed. Martucci v Suess, 23 A.D.2d 519, 255 N.Y.S.2d 325, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5066 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

In action to recover damages for injuries sustained in automobile collision, in which defendant conceded his own negligence, leaving as sole issue whether plaintiff was contributorily negligent in coming to sudden and unexpected stop, trial court did not err in charging jury that no person shall stop or suddenly decrease speed of vehicle without first giving appropriate signal, in charging jury as to method of giving hand and arm signals, and in refusing plaintiff's requested charge providing that driver shall not follow another vehicle more closely than is reasonable and prudent. Walczyk v Chresfield, 52 A.D.2d 601, 382 N.Y.S.2d 274, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12215 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1976), aff'd, 42 N.Y.2d 934, 397 N.Y.S.2d 1008, 366 N.E.2d 1362, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 2263 (N.Y. 1977).

It was abuse of discretion to set aside jury verdict of no cause of action for negligence against defendant truck driver arising from accident in which plaintiff's car rearended truck as it was making right turn, since defendant's testimony, which was generally corroborated by state trooper who arrived at scene immediately after collision, indicated that rear taillights of truck were operational, that right directional signal was flashing, and that truck was struck by plaintiff's car while in process of making turn; moreover, trooper stated that force of impact pushed truck forward about one foot and caused car to rebound several feet, and skid marks of plaintiff's car from point of braking to impact were 110 feet long. Lachanski v Craig, 141 A.D.2d 995, 530 N.Y.S.2d 648, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7238 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

Defendant, as owner of rental car, was not entitled to summary judgment in action to recover for injuries sustained by driver rear-ended by codefendant's car, notwithstanding contention that codefendant was negligent in failing to maintain safe following distance as vehicles approached changing traffic light, where brake lights on rented car failed to function when plaintiff braked immediately before accident. Bradt v Scardillo, 192 A.D.2d 860, 596 N.Y.S.2d 483, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3750 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1993).

Defendant should have been granted summary judgment, despite his alleged failure to illuminate his turn signal, where plaintiff saw defendant's vehicle when it was stopped to make lawful turn into driveway about 400 feet ahead of plaintiff's vehicle, and accident occurred when plaintiff applied his brakes, skidded on snowy road, crossed into oncoming traffic, and collided with another vehicle. Velez v Hurley, 264 A.D.2d 513, 694 N.Y.S.2d 705, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8916 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

Defendant was entitled to summary judgment dismissing wrongful death action where decedent, without signaling or yielding right of way, turned left about 12 to 15 feet in front of defendant's oncoming vehicle, and there were no triable issues of fact as to whether defendant acted reasonably or could have avoided accident. Loweth v Estate of Cusack, 273 A.D.2d 283, 708 N.Y.S.2d 720, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6522 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2000).

In a personal injury action, a bicyclist was entitled to set aside a jury verdict under N.Y. C.P.L.R. § 4404(a) as inconsistent because a finding that an automobile driver was negligent but not the proximate cause of the accident was against the weight of the evidence as although the bicyclist failed to signal in violation of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 1163, 1164, the driver saw the bicyclist change lanes to avoid an obstruction and it was foreseeable that she would move back; the driver should have sounded his horn as required by N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1146. Doubrovinskaya v Dembitzer, 858 N.Y.S.2d 874, 20 Misc. 3d 440, 239 N.Y.L.J. 113, 2008 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3074 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2008), app. dismissed, 77 A.D.3d 608, 908 N.Y.S.2d 590, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7231 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2010).

ARTICLE 30 Speed Restrictions

HISTORY:
Add, L 1959, ch 775, eff Oct 1, 1960, with substance transferred from former Art 5.

§ 1180. Basic rule and maximum limits

(a) No person shall drive a vehicle at a speed greater than is reasonable and prudent under the conditions and having regard to the actual and potential hazards then existing.

(b) Except as provided in subdivision (g) of this section and except when a special hazard exists that requires lower speed for compliance with subdivision (a) of this section or when maximum speed limits have been established as hereinafter authorized, no person shall drive a vehicle at a speed in excess of fifty-five miles per hour.

(c) Except as provided in subdivision (g) of this section, whenever maximum school speed limits have been established on a highway adjacent to a school as authorized in section sixteen hundred twenty, sixteen hundred twenty-two, sixteen hundred thirty, sixteen hundred forty-three or sixteen hundred sixty-two-a, no person shall drive in excess of such maximum school speed limits during:

(1) school days at times indicated on the school zone speed limit sign, provided, however, that such times shall be between the hours of seven o'clock A.M. and six o'clock P.M. or alternative times within such hours; or

(2) a period when the beacons attached to the school zone speed limit sign are flashing and such sign is equipped with a notice that indicates that the school zone speed limit is in effect when such beacons are flashing, provided, however, that such beacons shall only flash during student activities at the school and up to thirty minutes immediately before and up to thirty minutes immediately after such student activities.

(d) 1. Except as provided in subdivision (g) of this section, whenever maximum speed limits, other than school speed limits, have been established as authorized in sections sixteen hundred twenty, sixteen hundred twenty-two, sixteen hundred twenty-three, sixteen hundred twenty-seven, sixteen hundred thirty, sixteen hundred forty-three, sixteen hundred forty-four, sixteen hundred fifty-two, sixteen hundred sixty-two-a, sixteen hundred sixty-three, and sixteen hundred seventy, no person shall drive in excess of such maximum speed limits at any time.

2. Except as provided in subdivision (g) of this section, whenever maximum speed limits, other than school speed limits, have been established with respect to any restricted highway as authorized in section sixteen hundred twenty-five, no person shall drive in excess of such maximum speed limits at any time.

(e) The driver of every vehicle shall, consistent with the requirements of subdivision (a) of this section, drive at an appropriate reduced speed when approaching and crossing an intersection or railway grade crossing, when approaching and going around a curve, when approaching a hill crest, when approaching and passing by an emergency situation involving any authorized emergency vehicle which is parked, stopped or standing on a highway and which is displaying one or more red or combination red, white, and/or blue lights pursuant to the provisions of paragraph two and subparagraph b of paragraph four of subdivision forty-one of section three hundred seventy-five of this chapter, when traveling upon any narrow or winding roadway, and when any special hazard exists with respect to pedestrians, or other traffic by reason of weather or highway conditions, including, but not limited to a highway construction or maintenance work area, or when approaching a hazard vehicle which is parked, stopped or standing on the shoulder or on any portion of such highway and such hazard vehicle is displaying one or more amber lights pursuant to the provisions of paragraph three of subdivision forty-one of section three hundred seventy-five of this chapter.

(f) Except as provided in subdivision (g) of this section and except when a special hazard exists that requires lower speed for compliance with subdivision (a) or (e) of this section or when a lower maximum speed limit has been established, no person shall drive a vehicle through a highway construction or maintenance work area at a speed in excess of the posted work area speed limit. The agency having jurisdiction over the affected street or highway may establish work area speed limits which are less than the normally posted speed limits; provided, however, that such normally posted speed limit may exceed the work area speed limit by no more than twenty miles per hour; and provided further that no such work area speed limit may be established at less than twenty-five miles per hour.

(g) (i) No person who uses a radar or laser detector in a vehicle with a gross vehicle weight rating of more than eighteen thousand pounds, or a commercial motor vehicle with a gross vehicle weight rating of more than ten thousand pounds, shall drive at a speed in excess of fifty-five miles per hour or, if a maximum speed limit other than fifty-five miles per hour as hereinbefore authorized has been established, at a speed in excess of such speed limit. The presence in any such vehicle of either: (1) a radar or laser detector connected to a power source and in an operable condition; or (2) a concealed radar or laser detector where a part of such detector is securely affixed to some part of the vehicle outside of the cab, in a manner which renders the detector not readily observable, is presumptive evidence of its use by any person operating such vehicle. Either such presumption shall be rebutted by any credible and reliable evidence which tends to show that such radar or laser detector was not in use.

(ii) The provisions of this section shall not be construed as authorizing the seizure or forfeiture of a radar or laser detector, unless otherwise provided by law.

(h) Upon a conviction for a violation of subdivision (b), (c), (d), (f) or (g) of this section, the court shall record the speed upon which the conviction was based on the certificate required to be filed with the commissioner pursuant to section five hundred fourteen of this chapter, or if the conviction occurs in an administrative tribunal established pursuant to article two-A of this chapter, the speed upon which the conviction was based shall be entered in the department's records.

1. Every person convicted of a violation of subdivision (b) or paragraph one of subdivision (d) of this section shall be punished as follows:

(i) Where the court or tribunal records or enters that the speed upon which the conviction was based exceeded the applicable speed limit by not more than ten miles per hour, by a fine of not less than forty-five nor more than one hundred fifty dollars;

(ii) Where the court or tribunal records or enters that the speed upon which the conviction was based exceeded the applicable speed limit by more than ten miles per hour but not more than thirty miles per hour, by a fine of not less than ninety nor more than three hundred dollars or by imprisonment for not more than fifteen days or by both such fine and imprisonment;

(iii) Where the court or tribunal records or enters that the speed upon which the conviction was based exceeded the applicable speed limit by more than thirty miles per hour, by a fine of not less than one hundred eighty nor more than six hundred dollars, or by imprisonment for not more than thirty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

2. Every person convicted of a violation of subdivision (a) or (e) of this section shall be punished by a fine of not less than forty-five nor more than one hundred fifty dollars, or by imprisonment for not more than fifteen days, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

3. Every person convicted of a violation of paragraph two of subdivision (d), subdivision (f) or (g) of this section shall be punished as follows:

(i) Where the court or tribunal records or enters that the speed upon which the conviction was based exceeded the applicable speed limit by not more than ten miles per hour, by a fine of not less than ninety nor more than one hundred fifty dollars;

(ii) Where the court or tribunal records or enters that the speed upon which the conviction was based exceeded the applicable speed limit by more than ten miles per hour, but not more than thirty miles per hour, by a fine of not less than one hundred eighty nor more than three hundred dollars or by imprisonment for not more than thirty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment, provided, however, that where the vehicle is either (A) in violation of any rules or regulations involving an out-of-service defect relating to brake systems, steering components and/or coupling devices, or (B) transporting flammable gas, radioactive materials or explosives, the fine shall be three hundred dollars or imprisonment for not more than thirty days, or both such fine and imprisonment;

(iii) Where the court or tribunal records or enters that the speed upon which the conviction was based exceeded the applicable speed limit by more than thirty miles per hour, by a fine of not less than three hundred sixty nor more than six hundred dollars or by imprisonment for not more than thirty days or by both such fine and imprisonment, provided, however, that where the vehicle is either (A) in violation of any rules or regulations involving an out-of-service defect relating to brake systems, steering components and/or coupling devices, or (B) transporting flammable gas, radioactive materials or explosives, the fine shall be six hundred dollars or imprisonment for not more than thirty days, or both such fine and imprisonment.

4. Every person convicted of a violation of subdivision (c) of this section when such violation occurs in a school speed zone during a school day between the hours of seven o'clock A.M. and six o'clock P.M., shall be punished as follows:

(i) Where the court or tribunal records or enters that the speed upon which the conviction was based exceeded the applicable speed limit by not more than ten miles per hour, by a fine of not less than ninety nor more than three hundred dollars;

(ii) Where the court or tribunal records or enters that the speed upon which the conviction was based exceeded the applicable speed limit by more than ten miles per hour but not more than thirty miles per hour, by a fine of not less than one hundred eighty nor more than six hundred dollars or by imprisonment for not more than fifteen days or by both such fine and imprisonment;

(iii) Where the court or tribunal records or enters that the speed upon which the conviction was based exceeded the applicable speed limit by more than thirty miles per hour, by a fine of not less than three hundred sixty nor more than one thousand two hundred dollars, or by imprisonment for not more than thirty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

5. Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this subdivision, the maximum fine provided herein for the violation for which the person is sentenced may be increased by an additional one hundred fifty dollars if the conviction is for a second violation of any subdivision of this section where both violations were committed within an eighteen month period, and the maximum fine provided herein for the violation for which the person is sentenced may be increased by an additional three hundred seventy-five dollars if the conviction is for a third or subsequent violation of any subdivision of this section where all such violations were committed within an eighteen month period. Where an additional fine is provided by this paragraph, a sentence of imprisonment for not more than thirty days may be imposed in place of or in addition to any fine imposed.

Editor's Notes: Laws 1995, ch 446, § 1, eff Sept 1, 1995, provides as follows:

Section 1. Legislative findings. The legislature hereby finds and declares that highway work areas pose a significant hazard to the travelling public and to maintenance and construction employees who work on highways in New York state. It further finds and declares that the highway work zone is among the most hazardous work environments and that drivers who fail to obey posted speed limits in highway work areas are a great danger. It is appropriate, therefore, that severe penalties be imposed on drivers who violate posted speed limits in work areas.

Laws 1997, ch 432, § 96(7), eff Aug 20, 1997, provide as follows:

§ 96. This act shall take effect immediately and shall be deemed to have been in full force and effect on and after April 1, 1997, provided, that:

(7) nothing contained herein shall be deemed to affect the application, qualification, expiration, reversion or repeal of any provision of law amended by any section of this act and the provisions of this act shall be applied or qualified or shall expire or revert or be deemed repealed in the same manner, to the same extent and on the same date as the case may be as otherwise provided by law.

Laws 2002, ch 563, § 7, eff Sept 24, 2003, provides as follows:

§ 7. Notwithstanding any inconsistency with sections two, three, four, five and six of this act, any school zone speed limit established prior to the effective date of this act on a highway passing a school building for not more than three hundred feet in either direction from the building line of a school abutting on the highway may be continued.

Repeal Notes: [1989, ch 61] Subdivision (f) of section 1180 of the vehicle and traffic law repealed by section forty-seven of this act contained penalties for speeding convictions and is reenacted in a modified form in a new subdivision (f) [(g)].

Amendment Notes The 2016 amendment by ch 293, § 4, added "or when approaching a hazard vehicle which is parked, stopped or standing on the shoulder or on any portion of such highway and such hazard vehicle is displaying one or more amber lights pursuant to the provisions of paragraph three of subdivision forty-one of section three hundred seventy-five of this chapter" in (e).

1. In general

Although a traffic infraction is differentiated from a crime, the rules of criminal law are applicable to prosecutions for such infractions. People v Lewis, 13 N.Y.2d 180, 245 N.Y.S.2d 1, 194 N.E.2d 831, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 867 (N.Y. 1963).

The enforcement of speeding statute by police officers depends upon the individual officer's judgment. In re Application of Blackburn, 134 N.Y.S.2d 138, 206 Misc. 393, 1954 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2494 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1954).

The general purpose of laws regulating traffic is not primarily to protect fast driver from consequences of his folly; rather the purpose is to protect life and property of others lawfully using highway. People v Staples, 5 Misc. 2d 619, 162 N.Y.S.2d 131, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3222 (N.Y. County Ct. 1957).

Under the definition of "authorized emergency vehicle", a private citizen driving his own car in pursuit of a speeder, and himself violating the speed limit, is subject to conviction of speeding, regardless of his good faith. People v Nagell, 23 Misc. 2d 452, 206 N.Y.S.2d 654, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3055 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1960).

2. —Negligence

In automobile negligence action, contention that Supreme Court erred in failing to direct verdict for plaintiff on issue of liability is without merit; such motion is to be directed to court at close of defendant's case (see, CPLR 4401); no such motion was made by plaintiff's counsel; rather, counsel merely stated his opposition to defendant's motion to dismiss plaintiff's cause of action; however, even if such motion had been made by plaintiff, denial would have been appropriate; although defendant driver made admission by way of his plea of guilty to violating Vehicle and Traffic Law § 1180 (e), operating his vehicle too fast for conditions present, there was also evidence that boisterous behavior of plaintiff's 14- year-old daughter, passenger in defendant's car, and other passengers was contributing factor to accident; issue of liability was thus created and directed verdict would have been inappropriate. Cavuto v Lilledah, 161 A.D.2d 853, 555 N.Y.S.2d 901, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4935 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 710, 563 N.Y.S.2d 61, 564 N.E.2d 671, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 3352 (N.Y. 1990).

Whether northbound motorist was negligent in proceeding through intersection after left-turning motorist had cleared the intersection and traffic light favored east-west traffic was question for jury in passenger's action against the northbound motorist and the driver of westbound vehicle which struck the northbound vehicle. Kinsfather v Grueneberg, 47 A.D.2d 789, 365 N.Y.S.2d 903, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9105 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

Drivers are under duty to maintain a reasonably safe rate of speed, have the automobile under reasonable control, and to use reasonable care under the circumstances to avoid an accident. Oberman v Alexander's Rent-A-Car, 56 A.D.2d 814, 392 N.Y.S.2d 662, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11110 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 42 N.Y.2d 806, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 3768 (N.Y. 1977).

Whether speed of driver on favored street was reasonable under conditions was question of fact for jury. Smart v Wozniak, 58 A.D.2d 993, 397 N.Y.S.2d 489, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13205 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 43 N.Y.2d 643, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 4955 (N.Y. 1977).

Statute did not mandate that a driver reduce his or her speed at every intersection, but only when warranted by the conditions presented; summary judgment in favor of defendant motorists was affirmed where they entered an intersection under a green light and plaintiff entered the intersection against a red light, leading to a collision. Mosch v Hansen, 295 A.D.2d 717, 744 N.Y.S.2d 222, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6102 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2002).

In plaintiff's personal injury suit arising from a single-vehicle accident that occurred when he was the passenger in a van that defendant drove on a snowy road while under the influence of drugs, plaintiff was entitled to summary judgment on the issue of liability; as a result of the incident, defendant pleaded guilty to driving while ability impaired by drugs and speed not prudent for the conditions. The evidence that defendant was consuming alcoholic drinks and taking a prescription pain pill before the accident established a prima facie case of negligence that was the proximate cause of the accident. Norris v Menard, 135 A.D.3d 1127, 23 N.Y.S.3d 672, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 228 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2016).

3. —Criminal procedure

Speed at which a defendant was traveling and specific area in which he was traveling were essential elements of offense of speeding in a controlled zone. People v Rich, 8 Misc. 2d 148, 167 N.Y.S.2d 244, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2265 (N.Y. County Ct. 1957).

To warrant a conviction for violating former subd. 1 of this section, the prosecution has the burden of establishing beyond a reasonable doubt that (1) defendant was traveling at a speed greater than reasonable and prudent, (2) under conditions existing, and (3) with regard to actual and potential hazards then existing. People v Le Bous, 29 Misc. 2d 850, 215 N.Y.S.2d 829, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2984 (N.Y. City Ct. 1961).

Whether defendant was speeding was question for trier of fact. People v Murdock, 44 Misc. 2d 498, 254 N.Y.S.2d 295, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1270 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1964).

Person who had been arraigned on a speeding charge and had pleaded not guilty was entitled to a speedy and public trial. Santacrose v Bean, 52 Misc. 2d 167, 275 N.Y.S.2d 418, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1161 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1964).

The special rules for protection against self-incrimination laid down in the Miranda Case have no bearing in traffic infraction cases, nor is there any statutory requirement for such warning and waiver in traffic infraction cases at the police apprehension and preliminary interrogation stage. Unless the traditional rules as to coercion have been violated so as to render a confession "involuntary" as determined by a hearing held under Title 2C of Part 6 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, admissions or confessions are admissible in traffic infraction cases. People v Bliss, 53 Misc. 2d 472, 278 N.Y.S.2d 732, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1640 (N.Y. County Ct. 1967).

Where reliance is placed upon an emergency as the justification for exceeding the speed limit, careful scrutiny of the situation should be made. People v Hariton, 61 Misc. 2d 209, 305 N.Y.S.2d 247, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1401 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1969).

Offenses of speeding and passing red traffic light had substantial different elements from driving while intoxicated and reckless endangerment, and acts establishing each offense were clearly distinguishable from those establishing others, and traffic offenses would not be dismissed merely because of disposition of offenses of driving while intoxicated and reckless endangerment. People v Green, 89 Misc. 2d 639, 392 N.Y.S.2d 804, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1910 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1977).

Jury acted reasonably in crediting the highly experienced sergeant's professional opinion as the sole witness that a defendant was drunk driving in violation of the law; the odor of alcohol, the defendant's bloodshot eyes and unsteadiness, the admission to drinking beers and attempt to dispose of an open beer can, his failure on two field tests and refusal to take a chemical test despite warnings all supported the conclusion that the defendant was intoxicated. People v Gallup, 302 A.D.2d 681, 755 N.Y.S.2d 498, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1255 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 594, 766 N.Y.S.2d 169, 798 N.E.2d 353, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 3508 (N.Y. 2003).

Defendant was not guilty of violating N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1180(d) and N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1180(a) because defendant was deprived of the investigator's notes as material for cross-examination since the People, in the course of discovery, neither brought to the trial court nor produced the large file containing all of the investigator's notes pertaining to defendant's vehicle speed at the time of the collision. People v Lamb, 59 Misc. 3d 699, 72 N.Y.S.3d 799, 2018 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 821 (N.Y. City Ct. 2018).

4. —Administrative procedure

Criminal Procedure Law did not apply to proceedings before administrative adjudication bureau on charges of speeding in violation of Vehicle and Traffic Law to require complaining officer to provide deposition. Sulli v Appeal Bd. of Administrative Adjudication Bureau, 55 A.D.2d 457, 390 N.Y.S.2d 758, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10000 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1977).

In administrative adjudication of motorist's speeding infraction, police officer's estimate that motorist was exceeding 35-mile per hour speed limit by 45 miles per hour was sufficient, unaided by mechanical devices, to establish that motorist was exceeding speed limits under reasonable doubt test. Sulli v Appeal Bd. of Administrative Adjudication Bureau, 55 A.D.2d 457, 390 N.Y.S.2d 758, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10000 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1977).

5. Construction

Insofar as this section defines a traffic infraction of driving at a speed greater than reasonable and prudent under existing conditions, recklessness is not an element of the offense, or intentional disregard of safety of others, the statute being directed only to speed under existing conditions. People v Lewis, 13 N.Y.2d 180, 245 N.Y.S.2d 1, 194 N.E.2d 831, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 867 (N.Y. 1963).

Where defendant was traveling at about 20 to 25 miles per hour and as he applied his brakes to halt for a traffic signal his car skidded and collided with a stopped police car with an impact so slight as to cause no damage or injury, his conviction pursuant to Veh & Tr L § 1180(a) was reversed. The Court of Appeals held that as a matter of law the evidence was insufficient to establish that defendant was driving at an unsafe or imprudent speed, and that subdivision (a) of § 1180 was not intended to cover all possible acts of careless driving, but specifically directed against excessive speed. People v Davis, 24 N.Y.2d 796, 300 N.Y.S.2d 580, 248 N.E.2d 437, 1969 N.Y. LEXIS 1422 (N.Y. 1969).

The language of this section in clear and positive terms prohibits the driving of a motor vehicle at a rate of speed greater than will permit the bringing of the vehicle to a stop without injury to another or his property and a violation thereof is an infraction. McNellis v Fletcher, 96 N.Y.S.2d 599, 197 Misc. 80, 1950 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1576 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1950).

The plain language of this section prohibits the operation of a motor vehicle at such a speed as to endanger the life, limb or property of another or at a rate of speed greater than will permit such operator to bring the vehicle to a stop without injury to another or his property. A violation of this section constitutes an infraction and does furnish a proper basis for a charge set forth in an information to that effect. People v Pier, 121 N.Y.S.2d 342, 203 Misc. 117, 1952 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2290 (N.Y. County Ct. 1952).

An examination of the memorandum of the Joint Legislative Committee, in respect to the bill in 1957 amending this subdivision indicates that the purpose of the bill was to eliminate the requirement of a certificate of the State Traffic Commission which prior thereto was a necessary part of the People's case in speeding violations. People v Van Wieren, 15 Misc. 2d 106, 180 N.Y.S.2d 560, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2255 (N.Y. County Ct. 1958).

Section 1104 (subd [b], par 3) of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, which provides that the driver of an authorized emergency vehicle may exceed the maximum speed limits, is not an exception to subdivision (b) of section 1180 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, which prohibits driving a vehicle at a speed in excess of 55 miles per hour and is not required to be pleaded and proved by the prosecution in order to make out a prima facie case under subdivision (b) of section 1180, as would be a true exception; subdivision (b) of section 1104 is not an exception to section 1180 since it is not set forth in the enacting clause of section 1180; in order to be a proviso, it need not be set forth subsequent to section 1180 since the distinction between exception and proviso should not be mechanically applied; furthermore, the prosecution is not required to adduce proof of a negative such as the status of the driver as a driver of an emergency vehicle since the exceptive fact is peculiarly within the driver's knowledge; therefore, the prosecution is not required to plead or prove that a defendant is not the driver of an emergency vehicle in order to make a prima facie case of speeding. People v Baur, 102 Misc. 2d 971, 423 N.Y.S.2d 800, 1980 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2046 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1980).

6. Constitutionality

The provisions of this section as amended in 1960, making it a traffic infraction to drive a motor vehicle on a public highway at a speed greater than reasonable and prudent under existing conditions and having regard to actual and potential hazards, are not unconstitutional as too vague or insufficiently defining the offense. People v Lewis, 13 N.Y.2d 180, 245 N.Y.S.2d 1, 194 N.E.2d 831, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 867 (N.Y. 1963).

Subd (c) of this section applies the provisions of subd (a) to the specific situations enumerated therein, and is not unconstitutionally vague and indefinite. People v Nappi, 18 N.Y.2d 136, 272 N.Y.S.2d 347, 219 N.E.2d 176, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 1177 (N.Y. 1966).

Legislature could, despite claim of denial of equal protection of law, in cities above certain population floor, constitutionally authorize administrative rather than judicial adjudication of traffic infractions and as an incident thereto, despite claim of denial of due process, establish "clear and convincing evidence" as the required quantum of proof for a determination of guilt where such determination could result in the imposition of a fine but not imprisonment. Rosenthal v Hartnett, 36 N.Y.2d 269, 367 N.Y.S.2d 247, 326 N.E.2d 811, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 1750 (N.Y. 1975).

Statute prohibiting operation of motor vehicle upon public highway at a rate of speed greater than will permit operator to bring vehicle to a stop without injury to another or his property, imposed an unreasonable standard of care under which motorist could have been found negligent merely because he was unable to prevent a collision under any circumstances, and giving of charge in words of objectionable statute in action arising out of collision when motorist struck automobile being backed into road from between eight-foot snowbanks bordering driveway, constituted reversible error. Armondi v Johnson, 16 A.D.2d 712, 226 N.Y.S.2d 714, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10318 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

It was reversible error for the trial court, in its charge to the jury, to invoke former § 56 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law (now § 1180) as a basis for finding negligence on the part of the defendant, since that section had been declared to be unconstitutional prior to the date of the accident upon which plaintiff instituted suit. Karnbach v Bould, 24 A.D.2d 600, 262 N.Y.S.2d 265, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3588 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1965).

Since the legislature has relegated to the jurisdiction of an administrative agency traffic infraction such as speeding, quantum of proof prescribed, i. e., "clear and convincing evidence," meets the requirements of due process, despite contention that such standard is uncertain, vague and indefinite. Beck v Melton, 54 A.D.2d 919, 388 N.Y.S.2d 117, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14763 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1976), app. dismissed, 42 N.Y.2d 1101, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 4879 (N.Y. 1977).

The uncertainty in subd. 1 of former § 56, dealing with driving at excessive speed under existing conditions, being declared unconstitutional, was eliminated in the revision of subd. 1 of this section, the provisions of which are now sufficiently definite, clear, and positive to give unequivocal meaning to citizens of the rule to be obeyed. People v Le Bous, 29 Misc. 2d 850, 215 N.Y.S.2d 829, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2984 (N.Y. City Ct. 1961).

Subdivision (a) of this section is a mere revision of former § 56, which was declared unconstitutional as being too vague and indefinite, to establish violation of it by driving at a speed greater than reasonable and prudent under existing conditions requires a clear and positive showing that something more was involved than an error of judgment or simple negligence and of conduct amounting to gross negligence, and where the prosecution fails to establish that defendant was thus guilty of violating this section beyond reasonable doubt, the charge against him must be dismissed. People v Benway, 41 Misc. 2d 39, 244 N.Y.S.2d 163, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1691 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1963).

6.5. Sufficiency of evidence

Trial court erred in convicting defendant of speeding and driving while intoxicated because the People laid no basis for a deputy's "professional opinion," the fact that defendant lost control of his vehicle on a snow and ice-covered road was insufficient to conclude that he operated it at an unreasonable or imprudent speed or an intoxicated or unsafe manner where his admissions were corroborated by his presence at the scene, the deputy's observations, defendant's performance on the field sobriety tests, and the results of the breath test, no testimony was elicited as to whether the deputy formed an opinion that defendant was intoxicated, and the evidence established the lesser-included offense of driving while ability impaired. People v Elithorpe, 50 Misc. 3d 1077, 21 N.Y.S.3d 848, 2015 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4712 (N.Y. County Ct. 2015).

7. Speeding as traffic infraction

Although a violation of this section is a traffic infraction, a violation thereof cannot be inferred merely because of an accident. Hence, it was error to revoke a license upon proof that the operator was driving well under the statutory speed limit, came upon ice, lost control of his car and car travelled up to 200 feet before overturning. Hessney v MacDuff, 284 A.D. 70, 130 N.Y.S.2d 405, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3344 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Violation of rule of reasonable care provided by statute regulating speeds of motor vehicles is a traffic infraction. Hessney v MacDuff, 284 A.D. 70, 130 N.Y.S.2d 405, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3344 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

A violation of this section itself is not made a misdemeanor. People v Kitendaugh, 77 N.Y.S.2d 321, 190 Misc. 410, 1947 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3697 (N.Y. County Ct. 1947).

The language of this section in clear and positive terms prohibits the driving of a motor vehicle at a rate of speed greater than will permit the bringing of the vehicle to a stop without injury to another or his property and a violation thereof is an infraction. McNellis v Fletcher, 96 N.Y.S.2d 599, 197 Misc. 80, 1950 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1576 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1950).

The plain language of this section prohibits the operation of a motor vehicle at such a speed as to endanger the life, limb or property of another or at a rate of speed greater than will permit such operator to bring the vehicle to a stop without injury to another or his property. A violation of this section constitutes an infraction and does furnish a proper basis for a charge set forth in an information to that effect. People v Pier, 121 N.Y.S.2d 342, 203 Misc. 117, 1952 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2290 (N.Y. County Ct. 1952).

A violation of sub 1 of former § 56 is an infraction, for the language used therein is clear and positive and prohibits the driving of a motor vehicle at a speed greater than will permit the bringing of the vehicle to a stop without injury to another or his property. People v Sprague, 120 N.Y.S.2d 725, 204 Misc. 99, 1953 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1673 (N.Y. County Ct. 1953).

A charge of speeding is criminal in nature if not in fact. People v Wiltse, 28 Misc. 2d 410, 212 N.Y.S.2d 713, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3161 (N.Y. County Ct. 1961).

This section does not make the driving of an automobile in excess of the specified miles an hour a criminal act. People v Marketos, 54 N.Y.S.2d 857, 1945 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1781 (N.Y. County Ct. 1945).

Where there was substantial evidence to support an administrative determination under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law art. 2-A that the driver was speeding, driving an uninsured and unregistered vehicle, and had improper plates affixed to the vehicle, the driver's N.Y. C.P.L.R. art. 78 proceeding was dismissed. Stamos v Appeals Bd. of the N.Y. State DMV, 309 A.D.2d 572, 765 N.Y.S.2d 342, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10506 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 505, 775 N.Y.S.2d 782, 807 N.E.2d 895, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 4218 (N.Y. 2003).

Motion to suppress the officer's observations was not allowed because probable cause existed for defendant's arrest since defendant was observed driving approximately twenty miles over the posted speed limit, and failing to maintain his lane on a public highway, in violation of vehicle and traffic laws. People v Buelelituma, 64 Misc. 3d 219, 101 N.Y.S.3d 566, 2019 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2630 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2019).

8. Burden of proof

Ownership of an automobile did not create a presumption that the owner was the driver where police used a "photo traffic camera" which took 2 pictures at time intervals thereby showing that defendant's automobile was proceeding at an illegal rate of speed. People v Hildebrandt, 308 N.Y. 397, 126 N.E.2d 377, 308 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 397, 1955 N.Y. LEXIS 996 (N.Y. 1955).

Where defendant was charged with driving in excess of 50 miles per hour in violation of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 1180, subdivision [b] which statute provided such limit except "when maximum speed limits have been established as hereinafter authorized", the court could take judicial notice of the Official Compilation of Codes, Rules and Regulations of the State of New York, which did not contain any change in the 50-mile-per-hour speed limit for the village in question and, thus, the people met the burden of proof placed upon them by law. People v Foster, 27 N.Y.2d 47, 313 N.Y.S.2d 384, 261 N.E.2d 389, 1970 N.Y. LEXIS 1156 (N.Y. 1970).

Because of the former analogous section a defendant charged with driving his motor vehicle at the rate of forty-two miles per hour had the burden of showing that in the circumstances he was not driving in a reckless or imprudent manner. People v Mellen, 172 N.Y.S. 165, 104 Misc. 355, 1918 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 702 (N.Y. County Ct. 1918).

In a speeding violation prosecution, the question as to whether or not the state traffic commission may possibly have a rule or regulation whereby a speed in excess of 50 miles per hour on the state highways would not be a violation of the speed limit is a question of fact to be pleaded and proved by the People in its prima facie case, and in such case the certificate of the state traffic commission which was duly received in evidence that no such rule or regulation existed was sufficient. People v Thomas, 105 N.Y.S.2d 611, 199 Misc. 163, 1950 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2522 (N.Y. County Ct. 1950).

In a prosecution for speeding, the People have the burden of establishing beyond a reasonable doubt every fact essential to the conviction of the defendant. People v Harndon, 15 Misc. 2d 100, 180 N.Y.S.2d 799, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4569 (N.Y. County Ct. 1959).

Under subd. 3 of this section, providing that a rate of speed by a motor vehicle on a public highway in excess of 50 miles an hour for a distance of one-fourth mile, except as otherwise provided, shall be unlawful, the prosecution has the burden of establishing the offense beyond a reasonable doubt and evidence merely that an officer "clocked" a car at a speed considerably in excess of 50 mph, without testimony as to the distance at which the excessive speed was maintained, is insufficient to sustain a conviction. People v Canham, 23 Misc. 2d 441, 201 N.Y.S.2d 386, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2974 (N.Y. County Ct. 1960).

In a prosecution for exceeding the speed limit in a restricted speed zone the prosecution has the burden of establishing beyond reasonable doubt every fact essential to conviction, defendant being presumed innocent. People v Radzinski, 24 Misc. 2d 109, 205 N.Y.S.2d 440, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2417 (N.Y. County Ct. 1960).

Where a speeding charge is based upon violation of subd. 3 of this section, the prosecution must prove all elements of the charge beyond a reasonable doubt and has the burden of proving (1) that defendant was operating his motor vehicle on a public highway in excess of 50 miles per hour, and (2) that no greater speed was permitted by the State Traffic Commission at the time and place where the violation is alleged to have occurred. People v Riordan, 29 Misc. 2d 174, 212 N.Y.S.2d 515, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3130 (N.Y. County Ct. 1961).

People had burden of proving that defendant was driving over 50 miles per hour for one-fourth mile and that no greater speed was permitted by State Traffic Commission. People v Metz, 29 Misc. 2d 181, 212 N.Y.S.2d 986, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3125 (N.Y. County Ct. 1961).

Trial of traffic infraction is quasi-criminal, people must establish beyond reasonable doubt every act essential to conviction, and defendant is presumed innocent. People v Metz, 29 Misc. 2d 181, 212 N.Y.S.2d 986, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3125 (N.Y. County Ct. 1961).

To warrant a conviction for violating subd. 1 of this section, the prosecution has the burden of establishing beyond a reasonable doubt that (1) defendant was traveling at a speed greater than reasonable and prudent, (2) under conditions existing, and (3) with regard to actual and potential hazards then existing. People v Le Bous, 29 Misc. 2d 850, 215 N.Y.S.2d 829, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2984 (N.Y. City Ct. 1961).

Under the phrasing of subd. 3 of this section, prohibiting a motor vehicle from traveling at a speed in excess of 50 miles per hour "except where greater speed is permitted by the State Traffic Commission," the prosecution in a speeding case has the burden of both pleading and proving that speed in excess of 50 miles per hour was not permitted where the alleged violation occurred on a state highway outside of an incorporated city or village. People v Hilger, 32 Misc. 2d 975, 225 N.Y.S.2d 611, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3662 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

Defendant was found not guilty of speeding in violation of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1180(d), because even though it is not a crime, the fundamental rules of criminal procedure governed the trial of a traffic infraction, N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 155, and thus the People had to prove beyond a reasonable doubt not only every element of such offense but the defendant's commission thereof, N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 70.20, and a police officer's testimony was insufficient to establish that defendant was the perpetrator of the offense, as the officer was unable to unequivocally identify defendant as the driver of the vehicle. People v Nicol, 191 Misc. 2d 711, 744 N.Y.S.2d 657, 2002 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 708 (N.Y. J. Ct. 2002).

The effect of this former section, subd. 1, par. c and e was to shift the burden upon defendant who exceeds 25 miles per hour, of showing such facts that would constitute "careful and prudent" driving. People v Brown, 33 N.Y.S.2d 58, 1942 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1320 (N.Y. County Ct. 1942).

The burden was upon the people to not only allege in the information but to prove upon the trial that no greater speed than fifty miles an hour was permitted on the highway in question. People v Conte, 130 N.Y.S.2d 66, 1954 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3262 (N.Y. County Ct. 1954).

9. Degree of proof

Defendant's speeding conviction was reversed where the people failed to prove defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt or by a fair preponderance of the evidence. The people relied upon the trooper's testimony and a speedometer deviation record which was erroneously received in evidence. People v Martindale, 6 Misc. 2d 85, 162 N.Y.S.2d 806, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2944 (N.Y. County Ct. 1957).

To sustain a conviction of speeding in a truck on New York Thruway, in violation of the traffic law, the state must prove beyond a reasonable doubt, that the rate of speed was in excess of 50 miles per hour, the maximum speed allowed for trucks on the Thruway, that such speed was maintained for a distance of one quarter of a mile, and that no greater speed was permitted by the state traffic commission. People v Martindale, 6 Misc. 2d 85, 162 N.Y.S.2d 806, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2944 (N.Y. County Ct. 1957).

A violation of subdivision 3 of the former § 56 proscribing speeding even though deemed an infraction, rather than a crime, must be proved in all of its essential elements beyond a reasonable doubt. People v Marsellus, 9 Misc. 2d 1030, 168 N.Y.S.2d 1008, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1913 (N.Y. County Ct. 1957).

In prosecution for speeding, evidence failed to establish beyond reasonable doubt the required erection and maintenance of signs to inform public of existence and limits of speed zone. People v Ryan, 32 Misc. 2d 800, 220 N.Y.S.2d 428, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2220 (N.Y. County Ct. 1961).

The accuracy of a radar unit in order for such radar unit to be considered tested and for it alone to support a conviction for speeding beyond a reasonable doubt, must be established by clear, convincing and unequivocal proof and beyond a reasonable doubt. People v Lynch, 61 Misc. 2d 117, 304 N.Y.S.2d 985, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1099 (N.Y. County Ct. 1969).

The standards of proof applicable in criminal cases is applicable to prosecutions for speeding infractions. Rosenthal v Hartnett, 71 Misc. 2d 264, 335 N.Y.S.2d 758, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1581 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1972), rev'd, 36 N.Y.2d 269, 367 N.Y.S.2d 247, 326 N.E.2d 811, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 1750 (N.Y. 1975).

At a suppression hearing, a state trooper testified that defendant violated N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1180(a) by traveling at an imprudent speed, given the hazardous weather conditions. As the trial court was entitled to credit this testimony, the traffic stop was justified and defendant's motion to suppress physical evidence and statements obtained as a result of the stop was properly denied. People v Miller, 57 A.D.3d 568, 869 N.Y.S.2d 150, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9246 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2008), app. denied, 12 N.Y.3d 819, 881 N.Y.S.2d 26, 908 N.E.2d 934, 2009 N.Y. LEXIS 2145 (N.Y. 2009).

10. Sufficiency of information

An information, which fails to charge that the violation of this section occurred at a place where a greater speed is not permitted by the state traffic commission, is fatally defective. People v Smith, 299 N.Y. 707, 87 N.E.2d 123, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 707, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 1149 (N.Y. 1949).

Speeding summons not signed by complaining officer, although his name was printed on it, did not comply with regulations promulgated by commissioner of motor vehicles. Reynolds v New York State Dep't of Motor Vehicles, 52 A.D.2d 1048, 384 N.Y.S.2d 567, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12961 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1976).

An information which arose under this former section alleging no acts of careless and imprudent driving beyond the presumption of carelessness arising out of speed, did not support a conviction where the defendant offered any evidence of careful driving. People v De Gironimo, 15 N.Y.S.2d 1017, 172 Misc. 1100, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2481 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1939).

Information charging a violation of above statute must not only be written but it must be properly verified, that is, made under oath. People v Ragusa, 44 Misc. 2d 940, 255 N.Y.S.2d 269, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1145 (N.Y. County Ct. 1964).

Information which charged defendant with speeding in Northern State Parkway was sufficient, though sworn to before sergeant of Long Island State Parkway Commission instead of by state park patrolman of rank of captain, lieutenant, or acting lieutenant. People v Malone, 49 Misc. 2d 681, 268 N.Y.S.2d 424, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2078 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1966).

Rules concerning information in criminal matter also apply to traffic offense. People ex rel. Refinburg v Bremner, 51 Misc. 2d 632, 273 N.Y.S.2d 682, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1473 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1966).

Where uniform traffic complaint which accused motorist of speeding in violation of Vehicle and Traffic Law did not conform to section of Code of Criminal Procedure setting forth form of complaint and was not the alternate form prescribed by Commissioner of Motor Vehicles pursuant to Vehicle and Traffic Law, complaint was insufficient to confer jurisdiction on Court of Special Sessions. People ex rel. Refinburg v Bremner, 51 Misc. 2d 632, 273 N.Y.S.2d 682, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1473 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1966).

Defendant was improperly convicted for speeding in violation of subd (b) ¶ 2 of this section where the complaint, contrary to the rules and regulations of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, was not signed before a justice of the peace. People v Campbell, 52 Misc. 2d 63, 275 N.Y.S.2d 164, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1466 (N.Y. County Ct. 1966).

A uniform traffic complaint accusing the defendant of speeding was subject to dismissal when the court was not in session on the return date of the ticket. People ex rel. Moochler v D'Agostino, 52 Misc. 2d 448, 276 N.Y.S.2d 183, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1264 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1966).

Where a complaint charged defendant motorist with speeding on November 5, 1967 and the only testimony as to date was that the arresting officer was on duty on the 23rd day of October, the people's motion to amend the testimony to conform to the date set forth in the complaint was improperly granted. Although amendments of an indictment to conform to proof were permitted under certain conditions, there is no power to permit amendment of proof and testimony to conform to the indictment or information and where proof fails, the only cure is more or different evidence. People v Parmelee, 56 Misc. 2d 146, 288 N.Y.S.2d 659, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1667 (N.Y. County Ct. 1968).

The defendant could not be found guilty of speeding, even though he was clearly speeding in violation of Veh & Tr Law § 1180, where the issuing patrolman placed the wrong information in connection with the description of the vehicle the defendant was driving on the summons, the testifying officer positively identified the wrong vehicle, and there was no testimony about the speed limits. People v Goldsmith, 110 Misc. 2d 528, 442 N.Y.S.2d 760, 1981 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3118 (N.Y. Village Ct. 1981).

Supporting deposition given by laser gun operator failed to comply with CLS CPL § 100.25 where complainant officer who pulled defendant over and issued him ticket was not same officer who operated laser gun which recorded defendant's speed, and only supporting deposition given in response to defendant's demand for same was from laser gun operator; failure of complainant officer to give supporting deposition was jurisdictionally fatal. People v Noblett, 172 Misc. 2d 826, 660 N.Y.S.2d 517, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 237 (N.Y. County Ct. 1997).

Informations charging reckless driving and speeding stated facts sufficient to constitute the crimes charged. People v Bruno, 43 N.Y.S.2d 942, 1943 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2362 (N.Y. County Ct. 1943).

An information charging a violation of sub 1 of former § 56 was defective where it failed to set forth, in addition to the statutory language, the particular acts constituting the violation. People v Rockwell, 123 N.Y.S.2d 201, 1953 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1940 (N.Y. County Ct. 1953).

Where a deputy chief clerk lacked authority under N.Y. Uniform City Ct. Act § 105(a), 22 NYCRR[2]10.43 to accept defendant's not guilty plea to speeding (in violation of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1180(d)), defendant had not been arraigned on a simplified traffic information in accordance with N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 170.10(1)(a), (b) and jurisdiction was not acquired; as a result, defendant's N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 170.30(1)(a) motion to dismiss the information was denied. People v Furst, 765 N.Y.S.2d 753, 1 Misc. 3d 654, 2003 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1249 (N.Y. City Ct. 2003).

11. —Evidence supporting charge

Where information was based on information and belief and was unsupported by depositions of persons in possession of the facts, resulting conviction was a nullity. People v Drebitko, 4 Misc. 2d 753, 159 N.Y.S.2d 28, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3615 (N.Y. County Ct. 1957).

In prosecution against motorist for speeding, information was defective in that it was not made by a person witnessing the alleged crime, and in that it was not based upon depositions of persons who had first hand knowledge of the facts, and in that it did not set forth the specific acts constituting the crime or all the elements of the offense. People v Staples, 5 Misc. 2d 619, 162 N.Y.S.2d 131, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3222 (N.Y. County Ct. 1957).

An information charging defendant with driving 52 mph in a 30-mile speed zone is defective, and will not sustain conviction, where made by an officer who states that the speed was checked by radar, implying that he was operating the radar, but it is established by affidavit and concessions that he was in the police car on the highway and not operating the radar, the information is not stated to be on information and belief, and is not supported by deposition of anyone operating the radar. People v Allyn, 22 Misc. 2d 663, 201 N.Y.S.2d 464, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2860 (N.Y. County Ct. 1960).

An information charging defendant with traveling at a speed in excess of 50 miles per hour, "no greater speed being permitted at this place by the New York State Traffic Commission," sworn to as matter of direct knowledge, by complainant, a state trooper, was jurisdictionally sufficient under subd. 3 of former § 56. People v Grammer, 25 Misc. 2d 223, 206 N.Y.S.2d 588, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2280 (N.Y. County Ct. 1960).

An information charging violation of this section by driving at a speed greater than reasonable and prudent under the conditions can be based on admissions of the defendant, and, where it is stated that the information is so based, it is sufficient. People v Pupillo, 37 Misc. 2d 455, 235 N.Y.S.2d 522, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2109 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

Information in prosecution for speeding was based upon unsupported hearsay and, therefore, defective ab initio, where facts constituting alleged violation were not within personal knowledge of peace officer filing information, information did not state that it was based upon information and belief, and depositions were not attached thereto. People v Weeks, 39 Misc. 2d 765, 242 N.Y.S.2d 121, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1783 (N.Y. County Ct.), rev'd, 13 N.Y.2d 944, 244 N.Y.S.2d 316, 194 N.E.2d 132, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 921 (N.Y. 1963).

Court dismissed traffic complaint accusing defendant of violating subdivision (b), paragraph 3 of this section, where the complaint was signed by the officer issuing the summons and based on his information and belief obtained from the radar officer, but the signature and notation of the radar officer were omitted and his deposition was not attached. People ex rel. Williams v Crouch, 51 Misc. 2d 898, 274 N.Y.S.2d 642, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1448 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1966).

Where a uniform traffic complaint and ticket were issued by a trooper operating a pick-up vehicle, while the actual speed of the defendant was registered by a different trooper operating a radar unit, and there were no affidavits attached to the complaint which obviously was based upon information and belief, it was held the ticket was subject to a motion to dismiss unless depositions or bills of particulars in the form of affidavits were filed by the troopers prior to the motion to dismiss. People ex rel. Moochler v D'Agostino, 52 Misc. 2d 448, 276 N.Y.S.2d 183, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1264 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1966).

Defendant who requested a supporting deposition had an absolute right under statute to a supporting deposition before commencement of trial for speeding, and court's offer of an adjournment for purpose of furnishing deposition could not cure defect and thus information was insufficient on its face requiring that it be dismissed. People v De Feo, 77 Misc. 2d 523, 355 N.Y.S.2d 905, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1180 (N.Y. App. Term 1974).

Defendant will be granted dismissal pursuant to CLS CPL 170.30 on grounds that supporting deposition is defective in that allegation of violation as to CLS Veh & Tra § 1180(d) is unsustainable, since nowhere in supporting deposition does police officer state whether his determination of excessive speed is based on personal observation or by mechanical means or technical device, rendering simplified information insufficient on its face. People v Cohen, 131 Misc. 2d 898, 502 N.Y.S.2d 123, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2592 (N.Y. City Ct. 1986) (disagreed with by People v Jeck-Tisch, 133 Misc. 2d 1090, 509 N.Y.S.2d 463, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3035 (N.Y. City Ct. 1986), overruled, People v Aucello, 146 Misc. 2d 417, 558 N.Y.S.2d 436, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 292 (N.Y. App. Term 1990)) and (disagreed with by People v Chess, 149 Misc. 2d 430, 565 N.Y.S.2d 416, 1991 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 15 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1991).

Defendant's motion to dismiss simplified traffic information for insufficiency of supporting deposition would be denied where defendant was charged with speeding and supporting deposition alleged that police officer first observed defendant traveling at estimated 40 miles per hour in posted 30 mile per hour zone and then again observed him traveling at 50 to 55 miles per hour in same zone; means used by officer to estimate speed would be matter for proof at trial and did not need to be stated in supporting deposition. People v Jeck-Tisch, 133 Misc. 2d 1090, 509 N.Y.S.2d 463, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3035 (N.Y. City Ct. 1986), overruled, People v Aucello, 146 Misc. 2d 417, 558 N.Y.S.2d 436, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 292 (N.Y. App. Term 1990).

12. —Failure to specify speed

An information charging violation of subd. (a) of this section need not state the rate of operating speed if enough facts and circumstances are set forth in detail so that, in relation to existing conditions and hazards, the trier of facts could determine that the speed was not reasonable and prudent. People v Lewis, 13 N.Y.2d 180, 245 N.Y.S.2d 1, 194 N.E.2d 831, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 867 (N.Y. 1963).

An information which contained no allegation as to speed was insufficient to charge a crime under subdivision 1 of former § 56. People v Stoky, 5 Misc. 2d 624, 167 N.Y.S.2d 207, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3260 (N.Y. County Ct. 1957).

Even though Schenectady ordinance which made it unlawful to operate vehicle in excess of 25 miles per hour, except as otherwise provided by traffic commission rules, also made it unlawful to drive at speed greater than was reasonable and prudent under existing conditions, it was essential for information charging violation of ordinance to allege what specific speed limit was and that speed limit was exceeded at time and place of arrest. People v Hosier, 20 Misc. 2d 649, 194 N.Y.S.2d 395, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2334 (N.Y. County Ct. 1959).

An information charging violation of subd. 1 of this section, by operating a vehicle at a speed greater than reasonably prudent under existing conditions, need not specify the rate of speed, in miles per hour, at which defendant was proceeding at the time in question, but such a specification is merely surplusage, if included, and does not affect sufficiency of the information. People v Le Bous, 29 Misc. 2d 850, 215 N.Y.S.2d 829, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2984 (N.Y. City Ct. 1961).

Complaint alleging speed in excess of established limit of 35 m.p.h. adequately spelled out nature of speeding charge. People v Lupiani, 55 Misc. 2d 1, 284 N.Y.S.2d 275, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1200 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1967).

13. —Informing accused of charge

Complaining officer's failure to sign speeding summons did not offend notice requirements of due process because alleged violator would be apprised of nature and specifics of charge, date, place of appearance and accusing officer's name. Reynolds v New York State Dep't of Motor Vehicles, 52 A.D.2d 1048, 384 N.Y.S.2d 567, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12961 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1976).

An information based on violation of subd. 1 of this section was sufficient to advise defendant of the nature of the offense charged where it referred to this section, stated the place where the alleged violation occurred and when it took place and the rate of speed being traveled, and claimed that such speed was greater than was reasonable and prudent. People v Pupillo, 37 Misc. 2d 455, 235 N.Y.S.2d 522, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2109 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

An information which apparently charged the defendant with speeding in violation of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 1180(b)(3) was sufficient, although the section had been renumbered to omit subdivision (b) ¶¶ 1 and 2 and redesignate former ¶ (3) as subdivision (d), where there was no demonstrable evidence that defendant failed to understand the charge brought against him. People v Weale, 52 Misc. 2d 889, 277 N.Y.S.2d 363, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1814 (N.Y. County Ct. 1967).

Reference, in an accusatory instrument, to an erroneous section of the law may be disregarded as surplusage if the information fully advises the defendant of the acts relied upon to constitute the alleged violation. Thus, where the information contains a clear statement of the offense of speeding, a motion to dismiss a simplified traffic information as jurisdictionally defective on the ground it cites a city ordinance (Code of Ordinances of the City of Long Beach, § 14-106) as a basis for such violation and not subdivision (d) of section 1180 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law which creates the offense, should be denied. People v Levin, 93 Misc. 2d 106, 402 N.Y.S.2d 324, 1978 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2021 (N.Y. City Ct. 1978).

In prosecution for speeding, People's failure to disclose in either simplified traffic information or supporting deposition that radar had been used to establish defendant's speed was improper since defendant accused of speeding should be informed as to manner in which People intend to prove speed either in simplified information itself or in supporting deposition. People v Chess, 149 Misc. 2d 430, 565 N.Y.S.2d 416, 1991 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 15 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1991).

Where the Simplified Information charged a violation of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1180(B) and the supporting deposition specified § 1180(A) as the statute violated, the difference might materially affect the manner in which defendant would seek to defend himself, and even his decision to go to trial, as there were different potential penalties; thus, the case was dismissed. People v Kehoe, 922 N.Y.S.2d 749, 31 Misc. 3d 931, 2011 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1814 (N.Y. J. Ct. 2011).

14. —Violation of local law

Section 1180, subdivision (b) paragraph 3 of the Vehicle & Traffic Law applied in the City of New York only to the extent that it authorized the appropriate city authorities to adopt speeding regulations, and the proper pleading of a speeding violation in New York City should have referred to Article 6, § 60 of the Traffic Law regulations of the City. People v Harvin, 47 Misc. 2d 367, 262 N.Y.S.2d 750, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1900 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1965).

Where the defendant was served a Uniform Traffic Ticket charging him with a violation of Village Regulation No. 22, and the information alleged that defendant was speeding 38 miles per hour in a 25 mile per hour zone, the defendant was sufficiently apprised of the violation of which he was charged, although a prosecution for violation of the regulation should have been brought under this section. People v Blattman, 50 Misc. 2d 606, 270 N.Y.S.2d 903, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1829 (N.Y. County Ct. 1966).

The defendant's motion to dismiss a uniform traffic complaint accusing him of violating a village speeding ordinance, rather than charging him with a violation of the Vehicle and Traffic Law § 1180(d), was granted, and it was held that although pursuant to Vehicle and Traffic Law § 1643 cities and villages might establish speed limits applicable generally to all streets, the prosecution for the violation of such a law should be brought pursuant to § 1180(d). People v Kramer, 55 Misc. 2d 550, 285 N.Y.S.2d 763, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1014 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1967).

A complaint alleging a speeding violation which specified a violation of a local ordinance rather than § 1180 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law was held to be a valid pleading. People v Baratta, 56 Misc. 2d 447, 288 N.Y.S.2d 976, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1633 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1968).

If local ordinance is duplicative of and/or in conflict with Vehicle and Traffic Law or established without any authority from Vehicle and Traffic Law, citation to that local ordinance on accusatory instrument would be jurisdictional defect prohibiting prosecution under cited ordinance and court would be without authority to allow any amendment to correct defect, but where local ordinance is not in conflict with any vehicle and traffic law section, citing of only local ordinance is not jurisdictional defect. People v Morris, 131 Misc. 2d 55, 499 N.Y.S.2d 329, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2475 (N.Y. City Ct. 1986).

Court would dismiss uniform traffic ticket charging defendant with driving 43 miles per hour in 25 mile-per-hour zone since traffic sign posted by village stated "Area Speed Limit 25 MPH" and CLS Veh & Tr § 1643 prohibits establishment of area or village speed limit at less than 30 miles per hour; since posted sign was nullity, village speed limit was unenforceable under CLS Veh & Tr § 1683. People v Stone, 138 Misc. 2d 520, 524 N.Y.S.2d 1001, 1988 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 51 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1988).

15. Admissibility of evidence of speed traveled

Where the defendant's car approached police car from the rear, the testimony of policeman, as to the speed of the defendant's car, was not inadmissible as a matter of law. People v Dusing, 5 N.Y.2d 126, 181 N.Y.S.2d 493, 155 N.E.2d 393, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1625 (N.Y. 1959).

Defendant's conviction of speeding was proper where the sole evidence produced was that derived from the use of a device known as Vascar (visual average speed computer recorder), which measures the distance a vehicle travels and the time it takes the vehicle to cover that distance and computes the average speed of the vehicle and visually displays that speed to the operator. Holding that since the instrument was new, expert testimony as to the scientific accuracy of the device had to be proven beyond a reasonable doubt, the court reviewed proof consisting of the testimony of qualified experts in charge of the development, manufacture and marketing of the device and evidence of the competence of the arresting trooper who clocked defendant's speed and accordingly affirmed the conviction. People v Persons, 60 Misc. 2d 803, 303 N.Y.S.2d 728, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1251 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1969).

Opinion testimony of an arresting officer regarding a defendant's rate of speed is admissible in a speeding case providing the arresting officer first established his credentials sufficiently to accord his opinion a degree of accuracy. People v Stafford, 62 Misc. 2d 1027, 310 N.Y.S.2d 637, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1691 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1970).

The fact that the simplified traffic information contained the word "radar" in the charge block and that the attached bill of particulars cited only the radar reading relative to speed did not limit the state to presenting evidence based solely on the radar reading and the opinion testimony of deputies corroborating the untested radar reading was admissible. People v Smalley, 64 Misc. 2d 363, 314 N.Y.S.2d 924, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1239 (N.Y. County Ct. 1970).

In trial for speeding, photocopies of "Certification pursuant to CPLR 4518 of Records Maintained in the Regular Course of Business," prepared Bureau for Municipal Police, and bureau's reports concerning accuracy of radar unit used to measure defendant's speed, were admissible under CLS CPLR § 4518 since (1) copies of original documents in bureau's custody, sent to local police department as matter of bureau's business duty, were business records of local department, (2) such copies were also admissible as "other records" under § 4518(c) because they were police department "papers" under CLS CPLR § 2307, and (3) formalities of certification contained in CLS CPLR § 4540(b) are not required by § 4518(c), and thus officer's affidavit to which copies were annexed, stating that documents were true, complete copies of original records, constituted sufficient certification. People v Farrell, 137 Misc. 2d 926, 523 N.Y.S.2d 383, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2738 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1987).

16. —Speedometer readings

In a prosecution for speeding, a reading from an untested speedometer or radar device is admissible but is not, without, more sufficient for a speeding conviction. The deficiency in proof can be supplied by the testimony of qualified observers. People v Dusing, 5 N.Y.2d 126, 181 N.Y.S.2d 493, 155 N.E.2d 393, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1625 (N.Y. 1959).

In a speeding case, the reading of a pursuing officer's untested speedometer is admissible in evidence, but insufficient, without more, to sustain a conviction. People v Riordan, 29 Misc. 2d 174, 212 N.Y.S.2d 515, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3130 (N.Y. County Ct. 1961).

In a prosecution for speeding, based in part on clocking of defendant's speed by a pursuing police officer, it was error to admit a so-called "speed deviation record" to establish accuracy of the officer's speedometer where the only foundation for admission of such record was the officer's own testimony that he witnessed calibration of his speedometer, and there was no testimony by the person who conducted the test as to its results or how it was made. People v Skupien, 33 Misc. 2d 908, 227 N.Y.S.2d 165, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3475 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

Evidence of the reading of an untested speedometer is admissible, but not, without more, sufficient for a speeding conviction. People v Skupien, 33 Misc. 2d 908, 227 N.Y.S.2d 165, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3475 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

I police departments keep regular records in writing on speedometer calibration and testings, the records may be introduced in evidence to sustain accuracy of a speedometer reading without the necessity of taking an extra officer off duty to testify in that regard in speeding cases. People ex rel. Collins v Wachs, 37 Misc. 2d 1001, 235 N.Y.S.2d 176, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2119 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1962).

There being no showing by any witness that records concerning speedometer deviation tests made on pursuing police officer's car were made in regular course of police department business, a speeding conviction could not be sustained on a basis of his speedometer readings while following defendant's car and testimony of other members of the state police that the speedometer had been tested November 25, 1961 and again on April 3, 1962, not in the presence of the pursuing officer, where he made the check in question on March 22, 1962. People v Gentile, 38 Misc. 2d 162, 235 N.Y.S.2d 446, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2647 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

The statute fixes no stated intervals for calibration of speedometers on police vehicles, but the court decisions indicate that frequent calibrating is both necessary and advisable. 1961 Ops St Compt File #168.

17. —Radar

In a prosecution for speeding, a reading from an untested speedometer or radar device is admissible but is not, without, more sufficient for a speeding conviction. The deficiency in proof can be supplied by the testimony of qualified observers. People v Dusing, 5 N.Y.2d 126, 181 N.Y.S.2d 493, 155 N.E.2d 393, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1625 (N.Y. 1959).

Evidence derived from either stationary or moving radar devices is admissible without need for expert testimony, insofar as underlying scientific principles of moving and stationary radar are same; however, due to greater potential for error when moving radar is used, prosecution should bear greater burden of proof in demonstrating accuracy of particular radar unit involved, and should, in addition to those factors involved in establishing accuracy of stationary radar, show that officer independently verified speed of patrol vehicle on which device was located, and that radar was used in area posing minimal risk of misidentification or distortion. People v Knight, 72 N.Y.2d 481, 534 N.Y.S.2d 353, 530 N.E.2d 1273, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 2714 (N.Y. 1988).

In trial for speeding, photocopies of "Certification pursuant to CPLR 4518 of Records Maintained in the Regular Course of Business," prepared Bureau for Municipal Police, and bureau's reports concerning accuracy of radar unit used to measure defendant's speed, were admissible under CLS CPLR § 4518 since (1) copies of original documents in bureau's custody, sent to local police department as matter of bureau's business duty, were business records of local department, (2) such copies were also admissible as "other records" under § 4518(c) because they were police department "papers" under CLS CPLR § 2307, and (3) formalities of certification contained in CLS CPLR § 4540(b) are not required by § 4518(c), and thus officer's affidavit to which copies were annexed, stating that documents were true, complete copies of original records, constituted sufficient certification. People v Farrell, 137 Misc. 2d 926, 523 N.Y.S.2d 383, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2738 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1987).

In trial for speeding, photocopies of radar activity log and operation certificates were admissible under CLS CPLR § 4518 since (1) they were certified as exact copies of original documents contained in police department files, and (2) reliability of unit in question was established by light test, internal calibration test, and 2 tuning fork tests, and by comparison with calibrated speedometer of arresting officer's car; fact that radar activity log was usable in litigation did not render it inadmissible since it provided permanent record of officer's daily activity and had general use for purposes of traffic control and record-keeping, and thus was admissible as police department business record. People v Farrell, 137 Misc. 2d 926, 523 N.Y.S.2d 383, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2738 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1987).

People proved case of speeding beyond reasonable doubt based on police officer's visual estimate of speed of defendant's vehicle (school van), together with his testimony that he used laser gun "LTI 20-20" device to obtain reading of defendant's speed; use of such device is based on well-accepted scientific principles and can be accepted as accurate method of measuring speed of moving vehicle. People v Depass, 165 Misc. 2d 217 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1995).

In prosecution for speeding, People proved through expert testimony that "LT1 20-20 Laser Gun" was extremely reliable device to measure velocity and was accepted within scientific community. People v Clemens, 168 Misc. 2d 56, 642 N.Y.S.2d 760, 1995 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 694 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1995).

18. Admissibility of administrative certificates

In a prosecution of defendant for speeding in excess of 50 m.p.h. along Route 17 in the Town of Wallkill, Orange County, a certificate of the State Traffic Commission was introduced into evidence that it had not fixed a maximum speed limit greater than 50 m.p.h. on or along any highway within the State of New York, except on portions of Route 17 in Sullivan and Orange Counties. Held: a conviction could not be obtained on the basis of this certificate, because exclusion therein contained could apply, by its terms, to this particular stretch of highway, which runs between a portion of Orange County and a portion of Sullivan County. People v Skeados, 20 Misc. 2d 893, 193 N.Y.S.2d 787, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2483 (N.Y. County Ct. 1959).

In a prosecution for exceeding the speed limit in a restricted speed zone, legal designation of the area as a restricted speed zone can be established by introducing in evidence a certified copy of the order of the commission establishing it. People v Radzinski, 24 Misc. 2d 109, 205 N.Y.S.2d 440, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2417 (N.Y. County Ct. 1960).

The provision in subd. 3 of former § 56, that the absence of speed signs along a state highway outside of an incorporated village or city should be presumptive evidence that no speed greater than 50 miles per hour is allowable, permitted proof of the 50-mile limit either by proof of absence of signs or by introduction of a proper certificate of the State Traffic Commission. People v Grammer, 25 Misc. 2d 223, 206 N.Y.S.2d 588, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2280 (N.Y. County Ct. 1960).

Where the charge is speeding on a public highway by driving in excess of 50 miles per hour, the prosecution can meet its burden of proving that no speed in excess of 50 miles an hour was permitted by the State Traffic Commission either by offering in evidence a certificate of the Commission or by offering testimony to absence of signs indicating that a greater speed was permitted. People v Riordan, 29 Misc. 2d 174, 212 N.Y.S.2d 515, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3130 (N.Y. County Ct. 1961).

In a prosecution for speeding in violation of subd. 3 of this section, the prosecution can establish that a speed in excess of 50 miles per hour was not permitted at the place in question either by certificate of the State Traffic Commission to that effect, or, if the violation occurred outside of an incorporated village or city, by proof of absence of speed signs, and a conviction cannot be sustained if the prosecution fails, in these or any other way, to establish that a speed in excess of 50 miles per hour was unlawful. People v Hilger, 32 Misc. 2d 975, 225 N.Y.S.2d 611, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3662 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

In a prosecution for exceeding the general 50-mile-an-hour-speed limit, while the prosecution is entitled to the benefit of the presumption contained in § 1620 that a higher rate of speed was not authorized because no signs had been erected by the State Traffic Commission at the place in question so indicating, at least some proof is necessary in order to make out the necessary element that the Traffic Commission had not raised the speed limit, either by testimony to lack of signs or by presenting a certificate of the Commission to that effect. People v Aubin, 231 N.Y.S.2d 466 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

19. Sufficiency of evidence of speed traveled

Where defendant was traveling at about 20 to 25 miles per hour and as he applied his brakes to halt for a traffic signal his car skidded and collided with a stopped police car with an impact so slight as to cause no damage or injury, his conviction pursuant to Veh & Tr L § 1180(a) was reversed. The Court of Appeals held that as a matter of law the evidence was insufficient to establish that defendant was driving at an unsafe or imprudent speed, and that subdivision (a) of § 1180 was not intended to cover all possible acts of careless driving, but specifically directed against excessive speed. People v Davis, 24 N.Y.2d 796, 300 N.Y.S.2d 580, 248 N.E.2d 437, 1969 N.Y. LEXIS 1422 (N.Y. 1969).

Motorist driving on wet, hilly, winding road at speed which required him to brake with such force as to blow out hose in brake line system in order to avoid hitting school bus was traveling at speed excessive for driving conditions in which he found himself and regardless of whether he was exceeding speed limit was negligent in striking child crossing road in front of school bus. Gleich v Volpe, 32 N.Y.2d 517, 346 N.Y.S.2d 806, 300 N.E.2d 148, 1973 N.Y. LEXIS 1179 (N.Y. 1973).

Suspension of petitioner's operator's license for driving at an "imprudent rate of speed" was annulled where, at the hearing, petitioner denied knowledge of slippery condition of the highway, the only other witness said that he didn't believe he was going too fast, and the only additional evidence with respect to the road surface was a state trooper's report stating generally that roads in that area were "very slippery." Wilber v Hults, 22 A.D.2d 844, 254 N.Y.S.2d 71, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2742 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

The mere leaving of the pavement to the right, the swerving to the left and the running into a ditch does not warrant the conclusion that the statute in question has been violated. Beadle v Tofany, 36 A.D.2d 985, 320 N.Y.S.2d 873, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4096 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1971).

There was substantial evidence before the Referee to sustain his finding that petitioner violated subdivision (e) of § 1180 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, and that her license should be suspended where it appeared that petitioner was traveling at or in excess of the lawful statewide speed limit in an inhabited country area on a narrow hilly road when there existed a special hazard produced by the blinding headlights of an approaching vehicle and a slow moving vehicle ahead in her lane of travel, and she made no effort to slow down or minimize the danger inherent in the situation. Cardinal v Tofany, 36 A.D.2d 1000, 321 N.Y.S.2d 54, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4053 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1971).

Substantial evidence supported administrative determination that petitioner violated CLS Veh & Tr § 1180(d) where ticketing police officer testified that, based on his training and expertise, he estimated petitioner's speed at 50 miles per hour in posted 30-mile-per-hour zone, and that his visual estimate was verified by radar. Pernick v New York State Dep't of Motor Vehicles, 217 A.D.2d 630, 629 N.Y.S.2d 783, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7799 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1995).

In action by plaintiff who was injured in one-car collision that occurred while she was riding in car driven by defendant's decedent, summary judgment was not appropriate where opinions offered by parties' experts conflicted as to how fast decedent was driving and whether that speed was reasonable. Eaton v Di Perno, 259 A.D.2d 1034, 688 N.Y.S.2d 320, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3445 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1999).

Given that the driver had a sufficient amount of time and distance between the onset of sun-impaired vision and the slow moving school bus ahead to reduce her speed to adjust to such condition, there was a sufficient basis for the determination that she violated N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1180(e). Black v N.Y. State DMV, 290 A.D.2d 635, 736 N.Y.S.2d 149, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 41 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2002).

The testimony failed to sustain a charge of speeding where it failed to set forth the rate of speed at or near the place of arrest, the distance covered by the trooper in following defendant, his qualifications to judge speed, or his observation as to the speed shown on his speedometer. People v Greer, 20 Misc. 2d 629, 193 N.Y.S.2d 929, 194 N.Y.S.2d 80, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2342 (N.Y. County Ct. 1959).

Where, in prosecution for speeding, defendant was originally charged with traveling at 60 miles per hour, and state trooper testified at trial that defendant was traveling at 70 miles per hour, and that it was customary to allow 10 miles an hour leeway, conviction would be sustained, in view of evidence that there were no signs at point of arrest allowing a speed greater than 50 miles an hour. People v Knowles, 20 Misc. 2d 859, 193 N.Y.S.2d 263, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2564 (N.Y. County Ct. 1959).

A violation of this statutory provision with respect to speed greater than is reasonable and prudent under the conditions cannot be based upon the mere happening of an accident. People v Bliss, 53 Misc. 2d 472, 278 N.Y.S.2d 732, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1640 (N.Y. County Ct. 1967).

Defendant's conviction of speeding was proper where the sole evidence produced was that derived from the use of a device known as Vascar (visual average speed computer recorder), which measures the distance a vehicle travels and the time it takes the vehicle to cover that distance and computes the average speed of the vehicle and visually displays that speed to the operator. Holding that since the instrument was new, expert testimony as to the scientific accuracy of the device had to be proven beyond a reasonable doubt, the court reviewed proof consisting of the testimony of qualified experts in charge of the development, manufacture and marketing of the device and evidence of the competence of the arresting trooper who clocked defendant's speed and accordingly affirmed the conviction. People v Persons, 60 Misc. 2d 803, 303 N.Y.S.2d 728, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1251 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1969).

Opinion evidence coupled with a reading from an untested speedometer is sufficient to convict. People v Hariton, 61 Misc. 2d 209, 305 N.Y.S.2d 247, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1401 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1969).

In absence of evidence that speed measuring device used to measure defendant's speed was accurate, reading from the device was not sufficient to sustain defendant's conviction of operating a motor vehicle at a speed of 94 miles per hour in a 55-mile per hour zone. People v Leatherbarrow, 69 Misc. 2d 563, 330 N.Y.S.2d 676, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2011 (N.Y. County Ct. 1972).

There was no evidence in the record raising a genuine factual issue as to a violation by plaintiff driver of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1180(e) because the unrebutted testimony of plaintiff was that she was driving below the speed limit and defendant driver failed to present evidence of any condition which required plaintiff to further reduce her speed. Furthermore, plaintiff applied her brakes when she saw defendant ignore the stop sign. Carmody v Sass, 787 N.Y.S.2d 676, 3 Misc. 3d 1110(A), 2004 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 723 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2004).

Where conflicting inferences could have been drawn as to the speed at which defendant's truck was traveling, the jury should decide what inference was to be drawn. Blaszyk v Eastern Auto Forwarding Co., 134 F.2d 600, 1943 U.S. App. LEXIS 3625 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1943).

20. —Testimony of police officer

The opinion evidence of police officers, properly qualified to testify as experts, is sufficient to sustain a conviction for speeding, even though the vehicle's speed is not checked or corroborated by some electrical or mechanical device. People v Olsen, 22 N.Y.2d 230, 292 N.Y.S.2d 420, 239 N.E.2d 354, 1968 N.Y. LEXIS 1317 (N.Y. 1968).

Department of Motor Vehicles sustained its burden of proving violation of speed limit since (1) arresting officer sufficiently established accuracy of radar device by using 2 tuning forks and internal calibration test before and after stopping driver, and (2) officer's estimate of vehicle's speed would have been sufficient to confirm even untested radar reading in view of officer's testimony that his visual estimates had been proven to be within 3 to 5 miles per hour of actual vehicle speeds. Henig v State Dep't of Motor Vehicles, 122 A.D.2d 250, 505 N.Y.S.2d 174, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 59594 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Evidence supported finding that petitioner was guilty of speeding in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 1180(d) where accuracy of radar device was shown by use of tuning fork and internal calibration test before and after petitioner was stopped, and radar reading was confirmed by observation of police officer, who testified that his visual estimates had been proven to be accurate within 2 to 4 miles per hour of actual vehicle speeds. Winer v Adduci, 141 A.D.2d 827, 530 N.Y.S.2d 32, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7131 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Determination by Department of Motor Vehicles finding petitioner guilty of violating CLS Veh & Tr § 1180(d) was supported by substantial evidence where police officer who issued summons testified that petitioner was traveling 90 miles per hour in 50-mile-per-hour zone. Hirsch v New York State Dep't of Motor Vehicles, 182 A.D.2d 761, 582 N.Y.S.2d 755, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6239 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1992).

Finding of violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 1180(d) was supported by testimony of ticketing officer, properly referring to his notes, that he estimated petitioner's speed at 76 in 50-mph zone, and that this visual estimate was verified by radar. Neiman v State DMV Appeals Bd., 265 A.D.2d 558, 697 N.Y.S.2d 310, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10803 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

Conviction of speeding was supported by state trooper's testimony that he followed defendant's car and obtained "pace" indicating that defendant was traveling at about 75 miles per hour, and defense expert's attempt to refute that testimony left evidence proving, at minimum, that defendant was traveling in excess of posted speed limit. People v Burdick, 266 A.D.2d 711, 699 N.Y.S.2d 173, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12115 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Petitioner's guilt of violating CLS Veh & Tr § 1180(d) was supported by testimony of police officer who issued summons as to his visual estimation of petitioner's speed as well as his extensive training in making such estimations. DeOliveira v New York State DMV, 271 A.D.2d 607, 706 N.Y.S.2d 173, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4307 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2000).

Substantial evidence supported violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 1180 by speeding where patrol officer's visual estimate of speed confirmed untested radar reading, and officer's estimate alone would have been sufficient. Gentile v Jackson, 273 A.D.2d 235, 709 N.Y.S.2d 444, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6285 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2000).

Testimony of a police officer was sufficient to sustain conviction of defendant for violating subd. 1 of this section, by driving at an imprudent rate of speed under existing conditions, where the officer observed defendant for some distance before his car started to skid and wound up by colliding with another car, the pavement was then wet and slippery, and, after qualifying as an expert on estimating speed of vehicles from observation, further testified that defendant, before attempting to stop, was traveling at 40 mph in a 30-mile speed zone, as he admitted to the officer twice after the collision, and should have been able to stop in far less distance than was required after his car started to skid. People v Le Bous, 29 Misc. 2d 850, 215 N.Y.S.2d 829, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2984 (N.Y. City Ct. 1961).

The proof was sufficient to sustain a conviction of speeding by defendant where an officer testified to long experience in estimating speed of vehicles, that he followed defendant for two miles at a distance of 200 feet, that his own speedometer read 70 miles per hour and that he likewise so estimated the speed at which defendant was traveling. People v Phippen, 32 Misc. 2d 877, 224 N.Y.S.2d 756, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3812 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

Reversal of a speeding conviction was deemed to be required by error of the magistrate in overruling an objection of defendant's counsel to the qualifications of one officer who testified as an "alleged" expert on speed, notwithstanding another officer in the following police car sufficiently qualified as an expert and both testified as to the speedometer reading on their car. People v Bokman, 36 Misc. 2d 132, 232 N.Y.S.2d 180, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2616 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

Conviction for speeding under CLS Veh & Tr § 1180 can, but need not, result from police officer's independent estimate of speed, regardless of whether that estimate was made after officer's observance of faulty or unreliable radar clocking and regardless of whether officer made estimate while in stationary position as opposed to pacing mode; sufficiency of such evidence must be determined on case-by-case basis in light of and considering particular facts and circumstances, including nature and extent of officer's opportunity to view moving vehicle. People v Correia, 140 Misc. 2d 813, 531 N.Y.S.2d 998, 1988 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 488 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1988).

Defendant's guilt of speeding in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 1180 was not established by police officer's spur-of-the-moment estimate of speed from stationary position, after being alerted by unreliable radar readout, since it was impossible to determine whether officer was influenced by readout. People v Correia, 140 Misc. 2d 813, 531 N.Y.S.2d 998, 1988 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 488 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1988).

Evidence was legally sufficient to sustain defendant's speeding conviction because there was no reason to discredit a state trooper's testimony that defendant traveled 60 miles per hour in a 45 miles per hour speed zone. People v Cervera, 971 N.Y.S.2d 789, 40 Misc. 3d 89, 2013 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2989 (N.Y. App. Term 2013).

21. — —Opinion evidence

Though arresting officer reached an opinion as to defendant's speed as seen by officer through his rearview mirror at 400 feet, where testimony of officer was presented to bolster evidence of a speed reading from a radar device, a device which had not been properly tested, and court, faced with defendant's testimony that his speed had not exceeded 55 m. p. h. was without the benefit of another expert opinion, i. e., a second police officer, defendant could not be found guilty of speeding beyond a reasonable doubt. People v Perlman, 89 Misc. 2d 973, 392 N.Y.S.2d 985, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2703 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1977), overruled, Graf v Foschio, 102 A.D.2d 891, 477 N.Y.S.2d 190, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19120 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1984).

Where police officers were qualified to testify as experts, opinion evidence as to speed of vehicle was sufficient to sustain a conviction for speeding where witnesses estimated speed at between 50 and 55 miles per hour in 30 mile per hour zone. People v Olsen, 22 N.Y.2d 230, 292 N.Y.S.2d 420, 239 N.E.2d 354, 1968 N.Y. LEXIS 1317 (N.Y. 1968).

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles properly sustained finding by administrative law judge that petitioner violated CLS Veh & Tr § 1180(b) based on testimony of police officer who issued summons that petitioner was driving at 95 miles per hour; officer's opinion that petitioner was driving at speed nearly twice legal limit did not require corroboration by mechanical devices. Martin v Adduci, 138 A.D.2d 599, 526 N.Y.S.2d 181, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3150 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Opinion testimony of police officer without more is not sufficient proof to support a conviction for violating a speed ordinance. People v Wilson, 17 Misc. 2d 731, 188 N.Y.S.2d 344, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3745 (N.Y. County Ct. 1959).

Mere "expert" opinion of arresting officer as to speed of defendant's automobile, not supported by other or further corroborative testimony as to any speedometer reading, is insufficient to sustain a conviction for speeding. People v Whitney, 53 Misc. 2d 977, 280 N.Y.S.2d 729, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1653 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1967).

22. — —Officer's qualifications

There was substantial evidence to support findings that petitioner was driving at excessive speed, failed to stay right, and operated motor vehicle with gross negligence or in manner showing reckless disregard for life and property of others where (1) investigating officer, based on his 17 years' experience investigating over 3,000 vehicle accidents and on his attendance at seminars and additional in-service training in traffic science investigation, testified that petitioner's vehicle was traveling between 40 and 45 miles per hour on wet roadway surface in 25-mile-per-hour zone at time of accident, (2) vehicle was found at accident scene in lane of oncoming traffic, and (3) officer testified that there was strong smell of alcohol on petitioner's breath, and petitioner admitted drinking beer just prior to accident; thus, commissioner of motor vehicles had authority to revoke petitioner's driver's license. Farrell v Adduci, 138 A.D.2d 944, 526 N.Y.S.2d 686, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2748 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1988).

An officer, who had no experience or occasion to estimate the speed of moving cars, or training or qualification in taking measurements, readings and timings, was not qualified to testify as to the speed of the defendant's car. People v Harndon, 15 Misc. 2d 100, 180 N.Y.S.2d 799, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4569 (N.Y. County Ct. 1959).

Arresting officer, who for a period of five years in connection with his patrol duties had calculated the speed of cars by checking their speed against the speedometer of his car, was qualified to testify as to speed of defendant's car. People v Wimmer, 15 Misc. 2d 568, 182 N.Y.S.2d 148, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4527 (N.Y. County Ct. 1959).

A state policeman, was qualified to testify as to defendant's speed, where he stated that for six month period as a policeman and for 10 year period as a driver, he had formed opinions as to speed of automobiles and had checked his opinions with speedometers and various measuring devices from 5 to 10 times daily as a policeman, and that his speed estimates did not vary a great deal from the devices against which same was checked. People v La Bare, 16 Misc. 2d 890, 184 N.Y.S.2d 107, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4029 (N.Y. County Ct. 1959).

In a prosecution for speeding, it cannot be assumed that every State Trooper is an expert on judging speed, and a State Trooper's statement that his position as State Trooper qualifies him to give an adequate opinion as to speed will not qualify him as an expert, without particularization of his experience and knowledge. People v Barone, 24 Misc. 2d 1020, 205 N.Y.S.2d 914, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2365 (N.Y. County Ct. 1960).

In order that a witness may be qualified to estimate and express an opinion as to rate of speed in miles per hour, in a prosecution for speeding, the prosecution must establish specific experience of the witness and familiarity with motor vehicles and their speed, and it is not sufficient to show mere general experience by casual observation. People v Riordan, 29 Misc. 2d 174, 212 N.Y.S.2d 515, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3130 (N.Y. County Ct. 1961).

To sustain a conviction for speeding on the basis, alone, of testimony of a pursuing police officer and his reading of his untested speedometer, on opinion evidence of the officer as to defendant's rate of speed, from his personal observation, the prosecution has the burden of proving qualification of the witness to make a speed estimate and express an opinion, as a police officer is not presumed to be qualified to testify as an expert on speed and must, like any other witness, qualify as to his experience. People v Riordan, 29 Misc. 2d 174, 212 N.Y.S.2d 515, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3130 (N.Y. County Ct. 1961).

In a prosecution for speeding, the arresting officer sufficiently testifies as to his experience in estimating speeds of vehicles to qualify as an expert where he testifies that he has been estimating and checking such speeds over a period of years with a calibrated speedometer, and the evidence is then sufficient to sustain a conviction notwithstanding it is alleged that the speedometer on his car has not been calibrated for accuracy within a reasonable time. People ex rel. Haley v Fletcher, 30 Misc. 2d 468, 216 N.Y.S.2d 34, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2800 (N.Y. County Ct. 1961), cert. denied, 369 U.S. 807, 82 S. Ct. 650, 7 L. Ed. 2d 554, 1962 U.S. LEXIS 1759 (U.S. 1962).

A state trooper's experience in operating automobiles for a period of 20 years and being a member of the State Police for 15, with frequent checking of his opinions as to speed of vehicles against measuring devices, qualified him to testify as an expert on defendant's speed after following defendant's truck for two miles. People v Phippen, 32 Misc. 2d 877, 224 N.Y.S.2d 756, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3812 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

Although a member of the State Police, seeking to testify to speed of an automobile from his observation, testifies to several years of experience on the force, he fails properly to qualify himself as an expert where he does not particularize his experience in judging and estimating speed and the accuracy of his estimates. People v Skupien, 33 Misc. 2d 908, 227 N.Y.S.2d 165, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3475 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

Evidence held sufficient to sustain conviction of driving on a public highway in excess of 50 miles per hour where pursuing police officers testified they followed his car for about two miles, their speedometer readings showed that he was traveling 70 miles an hour, and one officer qualified as an expert on estimating speed of vehicles and gave his opinion that defendant was going between 65 and 70 miles an hour. People v Scordo, 36 Misc. 2d 49, 231 N.Y.S.2d 456, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2756 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

The law is clear that two elements of proof necessary to sustain a speeding conviction are the reading from an untested speedometer or radar device, and the opinion of an officer properly qualified as an expert to estimate speed; and testimony in regard to the arresting officer's qualifications that he had spent 19 months assigned to road patrol, that he had estimated the speed of moving vehicles approximately 200 times, that he had compared these estimates against calibrated speedometers and was accurate within 5 miles per hour was sufficient to qualify the officer as an expert, notwithstanding his admission that he knew only through hearsay that such speedometers were calibrated. People v Higley, 55 Misc. 2d 460, 285 N.Y.S.2d 467, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1045 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1967).

Police officer's testimony that defendant was driving 40 miles per hour in 25 mile-per-hour zone sustained speeding conviction where officer had been on force for 11 years, was taught to estimate speeds visually as part of his training as certified radar operator, and could estimate speeds with less than 5 mile-per-hour error. People v Farrell, 137 Misc. 2d 926, 523 N.Y.S.2d 383, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2738 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1987).

23. —Speedometer readings

In a prosecution for speeding, a reading from an untested speedometer or radar device is admissible but is not, without, more sufficient for a speeding conviction. The deficiency in proof can be supplied by the testimony of qualified observers. People v Dusing, 5 N.Y.2d 126, 181 N.Y.S.2d 493, 155 N.E.2d 393, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1625 (N.Y. 1959).

Proof consisting merely of reading of untested speedometer in vehicle operated by arresting officer is not sufficient to justify conviction for speeding. People v Harndon, 15 Misc. 2d 100, 180 N.Y.S.2d 799, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4569 (N.Y. County Ct. 1959).

In a prosecution for speeding, although testimony of witnesses for the prosecution was based upon readings from an untested speedometer, the evidence was sufficient to sustain a conviction where the witnesses were also testifying from observation and personal estimates of speed based upon their specific experience and familiarity with motor vehicles and their speed and not on mere casual observation. People v Zambito, 21 Misc. 2d 815, 194 N.Y.S.2d 724, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2343 (N.Y. County Ct. 1959).

Testimony of an arresting officer to accuracy of his speedometer upon checking it, following a speeding arrest, with another car whose speedometer had been calibrated, is not sufficient to establish an accurate test of the officer's speedometer on the basis of which a conviction for speeding can be sustained on testimony of the officer as to speed of defendant while being clocked by such officer. People v Canham, 23 Misc. 2d 441, 201 N.Y.S.2d 386, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2974 (N.Y. County Ct. 1960).

It is not sufficient to establish that a defendant was traveling at a speed in excess of 50 miles per hour for the arresting officer to testify that he "clocked" defendant at a speed of 65–70 miles per hour, in the absence of testimony or evidence as to accuracy of the officer's speedometer. People v Barone, 24 Misc. 2d 1020, 205 N.Y.S.2d 914, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2365 (N.Y. County Ct. 1960).

In a speeding case, the reading of a pursuing officer's untested speedometer is admissible in evidence, but insufficient, without more, to sustain a conviction. People v Riordan, 29 Misc. 2d 174, 212 N.Y.S.2d 515, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3130 (N.Y. County Ct. 1961).

The proof was sufficient to sustain a conviction of speeding by defendant where an officer testified to long experience in estimating speed of vehicles, that he followed defendant for two miles at a distance of 200 feet, that his own speedometer read 70 miles per hour and that he likewise so estimated the speed at which defendant was traveling. People v Phippen, 32 Misc. 2d 877, 224 N.Y.S.2d 756, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3812 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

Evidence of the reading of an untested speedometer is admissible, but not, without more, sufficient for a speeding conviction. People v Skupien, 33 Misc. 2d 908, 227 N.Y.S.2d 165, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3475 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

Evidence held sufficient to sustain conviction of driving on a public highway in excess of 50 miles per hour where pursuing police officers testified they followed his car for about two miles, their speedometer readings showed that he was traveling 70 miles an hour, and one officer qualified as an expert on estimating speed of vehicles and gave his opinion that defendant was going between 65 and 70 miles an hour. People v Scordo, 36 Misc. 2d 49, 231 N.Y.S.2d 456, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2756 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

Evidence of the reading of an untested speedometer on a pursuing police vehicle is insufficient to sustain a speeding conviction, and it is not sufficient to bring out in testimony that the speedometer had been calibrated without details as to the calibration test and its results. People v Bokman, 36 Misc. 2d 132, 232 N.Y.S.2d 180, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2616 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

In a prosecution for violating a 40-mile-per-hour speed limit by driving for more than half a mile at a speed above 50 miles per hour, evidence as to speed as checked by the use of a calibrated clocking device on the arresting officer's car over a distance of about one-half mile was sufficient to sustain conviction. People v Kilpatrick, 36 Misc. 2d 259, 232 N.Y.S.2d 54, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2602 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

The evidence was sufficient to sustain a conviction of defendant for speeding by traveling 60 miles an hour in a 35 mile per hour zone, on the basis of a pursuing officer's testimony to following defendant's car for three-tenths of a mile and checking his speed with a calibrated speedometer, supported by testimony as to testing of the speedometer both before and after the occurrence. People ex rel. Collins v Wachs, 37 Misc. 2d 1001, 235 N.Y.S.2d 176, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2119 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1962).

In a prosecution under subd b(2) of this section a police officer was qualified to give an opinion regarding the speed of the defendant's vehicle where he followed such vehicle for 2 ½ miles while observing his speedometer, and his testimony that the speedometer never read below 60 miles an hour was sufficient to sustain a conviction. People v Misch, 48 Misc. 2d 204, 264 N.Y.S.2d 419, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1334 (N.Y. County Ct. 1965).

Opinion evidence coupled with a reading from an untested speedometer is sufficient to convict. People v Hariton, 61 Misc. 2d 209, 305 N.Y.S.2d 247, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1401 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1969).

The statute fixes no stated intervals for calibration of speedometers on police vehicles, but the court decisions indicate that frequent calibrating is both necessary and advisable. 1961 Ops St Compt File #168.

24. —Radar

In a prosecution for speeding, a reading from an untested speedometer or radar device is admissible but is not, without, more sufficient for a speeding conviction. The deficiency in proof can be supplied by the testimony of qualified observers. People v Dusing, 5 N.Y.2d 126, 181 N.Y.S.2d 493, 155 N.E.2d 393, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1625 (N.Y. 1959).

Substantial evidence supported violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 1180 by speeding where patrol officer's visual estimate of speed confirmed untested radar reading, and officer's estimate alone would have been sufficient. Gentile v Jackson, 273 A.D.2d 235, 709 N.Y.S.2d 444, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6285 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2000).

Testimony of a police officer was sufficient to sustain conviction of defendant for violating subd. 1 of this section, by driving at an imprudent rate of speed under existing conditions, where the officer observed defendant for some distance before his car started to skid and wound up by colliding with another car, the pavement was then wet and slippery, and, after qualifying as an expert on estimating speed of vehicles from observation, further testified that defendant, before attempting to stop, was traveling at 40 mph in a 30-mile speed zone, as he admitted to the officer twice after the collision, and should have been able to stop in far less distance than was required after his car started to skid. People v Le Bous, 29 Misc. 2d 850, 215 N.Y.S.2d 829, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2984 (N.Y. City Ct. 1961).

The defendant's contention that his speeding conviction must be set aside because the radar graph evidence upon which he was convicted was no longer available for consideration upon appeal was rejected and the conviction affirmed; the court held that, in the absence of the expert testimony of the state police officer who used the instrument, the markings on the graph tape would be unintelligible, pointing out that testimony was in the record although the actual tape had disappeared. People v Shalman, 50 Misc. 2d 405, 270 N.Y.S.2d 337, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1832 (N.Y. County Ct. 1966).

It is possible to convict on the basis of the reading of an untested radar device if some other form of corroboration has been provided. People v Perlman, 89 Misc. 2d 973, 392 N.Y.S.2d 985, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2703 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1977), overruled, Graf v Foschio, 102 A.D.2d 891, 477 N.Y.S.2d 190, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19120 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1984).

In determining validity of test performed on a digital radar device used to apprehend a motorist for speeding, it is not the quantity of tests which must be considered by the court, but the quality of the test performed, and more important, whether the testing has provided ample opportunity for simple comparative analyses of the tests in question. People v Perlman, 89 Misc. 2d 973, 392 N.Y.S.2d 985, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2703 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1977), overruled, Graf v Foschio, 102 A.D.2d 891, 477 N.Y.S.2d 190, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19120 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1984).

While the reliability of radar as a competent speed detection device, while in a stationary position, has long been recognized, the reliability of this particular type of unit to accurately measure the speed of an oncoming vehicle while the unit is located in a police car traveling in the opposite direction has not been established. Before such readings can be considered reliable there must be testimony detailing the operative principles underlying the capability of this type of radar unit to accurately compensate for the relative speeds and directions of the respective vehicles. People v Bellizzi, 108 Misc. 2d 209, 441 N.Y.S.2d 147, 1980 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2927 (N.Y. App. Term 1980).

Evidence was legally insufficient to support defendant's conviction for speeding (N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1180(d)). It appeared that the trial court improperly shifted the burden of proof from the prosecution to defendant in regard to demonstrating the accuracy of the particular radar unit involved, and the return did not show the existence of any testimony from the officer or other proof that the police officer independently verified the speed of the patrol vehicle (e.g., by comparing the speed registered by the radar unit with the speed indicated by the patrol vehicle speedometer), and that the radar was used in an area posing a minimal risk of misidentification or distortion (i.e., from heavy traffic, large trucks or large roadside objects such as billboards). People v Kahan, 842 N.Y.S.2d 155, 16 Misc. 3d 37, 2007 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3290 (N.Y. App. Term 2007).

25. — —Instrument calibration

Admission of calibration records of a lidar speed detecting device in defendant's trial for speeding in a school zone in violation of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1180(c)(1) did not violate her rights under the confrontation clause of U.S. Const. amend. VI; the calibration records were admissible as business records under N.Y. C.P.L.R. 4518(c), and not as testimonial documents, since the device was calibrated as part of a routine examination nearly a month before defendant was charged and was not calibrated solely in order to gather evidence for her prosecution. People v Deep, 821 N.Y.S.2d 381, 12 Misc. 3d 1137, 2006 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1600 (N.Y. City Ct. 2006).

Defendant's motion to set aside a verdict of guilty to a speeding violation (Vehicle and Traffic Law, § 1180, subd [b]), upon the grounds that it had not been established that the radar equipment used was correctly tested, is properly denied where the trooper, a trained radar operator, made various calibration tests, both before and after its use, which included internal calibration tests as well as tests with two tuning forks, and found the radar to be functioning correctly, with the court noting the history of general reliability regarding the type of radar employed and the tests used to check it. People v Maniscalco, 94 Misc. 2d 915, 405 N.Y.S.2d 888, 1978 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2318 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1978).

Digital radar device, which was used to apprehend motorist for speeding, could not be said to have been operating accurately or to have been adequately tested on day in question and, hence, conviction could not be obtained on basis of information provided, notwithstanding that an internal calibration device contained in equipment itself, and operating from same electrical source, confirmed that equipment was functioning properly, where no external test had been performed before or after particular setup, no graphic record was kept of radar test, no proof was offered of testing of equipment by expert technicians within a reasonable proximity to date in question, and no scientific testimony was offered as to reliability or fallibility of internal calibration device. People v Perlman, 89 Misc. 2d 973, 392 N.Y.S.2d 985, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2703 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1977), overruled, Graf v Foschio, 102 A.D.2d 891, 477 N.Y.S.2d 190, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19120 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1984).

Where an individual has been charged with speeding by means of radar detection, there should be a showing of a testing of the instrument before and after each setup, including at least one test by an outside source to insure that a simple comparative analysis can be made, and there should be a proof of expert technical testing of the machine periodically, within a reasonable proximity of the violation. People v Perlman, 89 Misc. 2d 973, 392 N.Y.S.2d 985, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2703 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1977), overruled, Graf v Foschio, 102 A.D.2d 891, 477 N.Y.S.2d 190, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19120 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1984).

If expediency, practicality and economy dictate the need for utilization of a one-man radar setup, and a law enforcement agency finds it impractical to conduct comparative analyses before and after each setup, then at the very least, expert testimony should be presented so that a body of precedents can be formulated from which the courts might conclude that an internal calibration test is sufficient in and of itself, due to its recognized reliability, to test the accuracy of the radar device. People v Perlman, 89 Misc. 2d 973, 392 N.Y.S.2d 985, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2703 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1977), overruled, Graf v Foschio, 102 A.D.2d 891, 477 N.Y.S.2d 190, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19120 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1984).

The accuracy of a radar unit in order for such radar unit to be considered tested and for it alone to support a conviction for speeding beyond a reasonable doubt, must be established by clear, convincing and unequivocal proof and beyond a reasonable doubt. People v Lynch, 61 Misc. 2d 117, 304 N.Y.S.2d 985, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1099 (N.Y. County Ct. 1969).

Where a speeding conviction was based upon a radar unit, the accuracy of the unit was established by clear, convincing and unequivocal proof and beyond a reasonable doubt by internal checks made of the radar unit within the machine itself, consisting of a check as to accuracy by testing the tuning fork calibrated at 50 miles per hour and a check made by testing the tuning fork calibrated at 30 miles per hour. People v Lynch, 61 Misc. 2d 117, 304 N.Y.S.2d 985, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1099 (N.Y. County Ct. 1969).

Testimony that a radar device was calibrated by use of a tuning fork and by an officer driving through the speed zone at 9:50 p.m. and 11:15 p.m., and by tuning fork at 11:45 p.m. constituted reasonable proof of accuracy sufficient to sustain the defendant's conviction of speeding at 11:35 p.m. based upon radar determination of his speed. People v Stuck, 54 Misc. 2d 811, 283 N.Y.S.2d 564, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1206 (N.Y. County Ct. 1967).

Evidence was legally sufficient to sustain speeding conviction where moving radar unit which registered defendant's excessive speed was correctly calibrated, officer was qualified Doppler Traffic Radar Operator, he had independently verified speed of his patrol vehicle by comparing speed registered by radar unit with vehicle speedometer, and road and traffic conditions were such that any distortion or misidentification by unit was highly unlikely; moreover, even if radar evidence standing alone were deemed insufficient, corroborative evidence was provided by trained officer's visual estimation of defendant's speed. People v Knight, 72 N.Y.2d 481, 534 N.Y.S.2d 353, 530 N.E.2d 1273, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 2714 (N.Y. 1988).

A determination revoking petitioner's driver's license for violating Veh & Tr Law § 1180(b) in operating a vehicle at 64 miles per hour in an area posted with a 50 mile per hour limit would be confirmed, where the arresting officer sufficiently established the accuracy of a radar device used at the scene by employing a tuning fork and internal calibration tests at the beginning and end of his tour of duty, and where the officer estimated that the vehicle in question was traveling at 65 miles per hour at the time. Graf v Foschio, 102 A.D.2d 891, 477 N.Y.S.2d 190, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19120 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1984).

Department of Motor Vehicles sustained its burden of proving violation of speed limit since (1) arresting officer sufficiently established accuracy of radar device by using 2 tuning forks and internal calibration test before and after stopping driver, and (2) officer's estimate of vehicle's speed would have been sufficient to confirm even untested radar reading in view of officer's testimony that his visual estimates had been proven to be within 3 to 5 miles per hour of actual vehicle speeds. Henig v State Dep't of Motor Vehicles, 122 A.D.2d 250, 505 N.Y.S.2d 174, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 59594 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Evidence supported finding that petitioner was guilty of speeding in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 1180(d) where accuracy of radar device was shown by use of tuning fork and internal calibration test before and after petitioner was stopped, and radar reading was confirmed by observation of police officer, who testified that his visual estimates had been proven to be accurate within 2 to 4 miles per hour of actual vehicle speeds. Winer v Adduci, 141 A.D.2d 827, 530 N.Y.S.2d 32, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7131 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Where the state police set up and tested a radar device by causing a tuning fork, calibrated at 50 miles an hour, to be struck in front of and within the zone of influence of the radar device and by driving a police test car through the radar zone of influence at 50 miles an hour, and these two "tests" were repeated at the end of the tour of duty at the same location with the same results, the defendant's conviction of speeding could rest upon evidence of the radar device, as a "tested" radar instrument. People v Stephens, 52 Misc. 2d 1070, 277 N.Y.S.2d 567, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1746 (N.Y. County Ct. 1967).

Though arresting officer reached an opinion as to defendant's speed as seen by officer through his rearview mirror at 400 feet, where testimony of officer was presented to bolster evidence of a speed reading from a radar device, a device which had not been properly tested, and court, faced with defendant's testimony that his speed had not exceeded 55 m. p. h. was without the benefit of another expert opinion, i. e., a second police officer, defendant could not be found guilty of speeding beyond a reasonable doubt. People v Perlman, 89 Misc. 2d 973, 392 N.Y.S.2d 985, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2703 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1977), overruled, Graf v Foschio, 102 A.D.2d 891, 477 N.Y.S.2d 190, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19120 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1984).

26. —Admissions by driver

Where defendant voluntarily testified on his own behalf and admitted that he had been speeding on Lake Ontario State Parkway prior to his arrest, court properly instructed jury that it could consider this admission in connection with speeding charge in indictment, even though bill of particulars alleged that defendant was speeding in vicinity of route 390. People v McDonough, 132 A.D.2d 997, 518 N.Y.S.2d 524, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49471 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 801, 522 N.Y.S.2d 119, 516 N.E.2d 1232, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19497 (N.Y. 1987).

Evidence justified conviction of driving a bus in excess of 50 mph in a 50-mile zone, where defendant admitted driving over that speed for at least some part of the nine-tenths of a mile in which he was "clocked" by the police. People v Williams, 23 Misc. 2d 581, 196 N.Y.S.2d 790, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3547 (N.Y. County Ct. 1960).

Where a police officer testified in a prosecution for violation of subd. 1 of this section that defendant admitted to him, twice, in a conversation following the accident, that he had been traveling at 40 mph and accordingly in excess of a 30 mph speed limit just prior to the emergency, the court is not required to credit defendant's testimony on the stand repudiating such admissions and asserting that he was driving within the speed limit, as against the officer's testimony, not only as to the admissions but also as to defendant's speed on the basis of his personal observations, after qualifying as an expert on speeds of vehicles from observation. People v Le Bous, 29 Misc. 2d 850, 215 N.Y.S.2d 829, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2984 (N.Y. City Ct. 1961).

27. —Excuses for speeding

Evidence that a driver in attempting to pass a second car at a speed not in excess of forty miles an hour lost control of his automobile, drove off the road and then struck the second car in attempting to regain the highway, is insufficient to sustain a conviction for reckless driving under this section where there is evidence that the second car swung over the center line of the highway and forced the first car off the road. People v Parker, 84 N.Y.S.2d 187, 192 Misc. 551, 1948 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3541 (N.Y. County Ct. 1948).

Defendant was convicted of speeding as against his contention that in order to avoid being struck in the rear by a suddenly approaching vehicle it was necessary for him to increase his speed to permit the vehicle to pass when he could not move safely into the right-hand lane. People v Hariton, 61 Misc. 2d 209, 305 N.Y.S.2d 247, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1401 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1969).

Where defendant accelerated to 67 miles an hour in a 50 mile an hour zone in order to pass around a rapidly slowing vehicle, the speed of the defendant was justifiable under the circumstances and he could not be convicted of a violation of the statute. People v Cataldo, 65 Misc. 2d 286, 316 N.Y.S.2d 873, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1135 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1970).

28. Sufficiency of evidence of speed limit

The failure of the People to prove that the stretch of road involved did not fall within the areas expressly excepted from the operation of subdivision 3 of former § 56 was not fatal, since the court would take judicial notice that the place where the speeding occurred was neither a city nor an incorporated village. People v Shapiro, 7 N.Y.2d 370, 197 N.Y.S.2d 715, 165 N.E.2d 564, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1426 (N.Y. 1960).

Where defendant was charged with driving in excess of 50 miles per hour in violation of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 1180, subdivision [b] which statute provided such limit except "when maximum speed limits have been established as hereinafter authorized", the court could take judicial notice of the Official Compilation of Codes, Rules and Regulations of the State of New York, which did not contain any change in the 50-mile-per-hour speed limit for the village in question, and, thus, the people met the burden of proof placed upon them by law. People v Foster, 27 N.Y.2d 47, 313 N.Y.S.2d 384, 261 N.E.2d 389, 1970 N.Y. LEXIS 1156 (N.Y. 1970).

The failure of the People to prove that a speed limit had been set by the traffic Commission did not bar conviction of defendant for speeding, where the evidence showed that the trooper was required to speed as high as 100 m.p.h. to apprehend the defendant, and that defendant during this time was driving not less than 85 m.p.h., which speed was in excess of any reasonable or accepted speed limits known in the State of New York. People v Loucks, 20 Misc. 2d 606, 194 N.Y.S.2d 399, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2356 (N.Y. County Ct. 1959).

The law does not require the doing of a useless act, whether in proof of lawsuit or otherwise; and where evidence clearly indicates that defendant was proceeding at rate greater than any reasonable or acceptable rate of speed known in state, speeding violation is so obvious and patent that proof of speed limit is academic and unnecessary. People v Hosier, 20 Misc. 2d 649, 194 N.Y.S.2d 395, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2334 (N.Y. County Ct. 1959).

Where a defendant is charged with speeding, failure of the prosecution to prove that a rate of speed greater than 50 mph was not permitted by the State Traffic Commission at the time and place set forth in the information is fatal to making out a case. People v Barone, 24 Misc. 2d 1020, 205 N.Y.S.2d 914, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2365 (N.Y. County Ct. 1960).

In a prosecution for speeding in violation of an order, rule, or regulation of the State Traffic Commission limiting speed of vehicles on a state highway outside of a city or incorporated village, the prosecution has the burden of proving, not only that the area in question was designated as a restricted zone by the Traffic Commission, but also that the order, rule, or regulation of the Commission was filed in the office of the Department of State as required by art. IV § 8 of the Constitution, and it is insufficient merely to introduce a certificate of the Department of Taxation and Finance that such an order was issued. People v Cull, 26 Misc. 2d 668, 210 N.Y.S.2d 10, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3567 (N.Y. County Ct.), aff'd, 10 N.Y.2d 123, 218 N.Y.S.2d 38, 176 N.E.2d 495, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1080 (N.Y. 1961).

People's failure to prove that no greater speed than 50 miles per hour was permitted by State Traffic Commission was fatal to prosecution for speeding. People v Metz, 29 Misc. 2d 181, 212 N.Y.S.2d 986, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3125 (N.Y. County Ct. 1961).

Where the prosecution presented substantial evidence the defendant was driving at 65 miles per hour and the court took judicial notice that the maximum speed limit on which the defendant was proceeding was 50 miles per hour, the evidence was sufficient to sustain a conviction for speeding, notwithstanding the prosecution had not proven there were no higher speed limits established on that particular section of highway. People v Kasprzyk, 59 Misc. 2d 236, 298 N.Y.S.2d 334, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1788 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1969).

In a prosecution for driving at a speed of 45 miles per hour within a village which had a speed limit of 30 miles per hour in violation of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 1180(d), proof by the People that there was a single speed sign posting the village speed at a specified point, was insufficient to establish the element of reasonable notice of speed limit to the defendant where there was no evidence that defendant entered the village by way of the street on which the speed limit was posted nor was there any evidence that other entrances to the village were similarly posted. People v Stafford, 62 Misc. 2d 1027, 310 N.Y.S.2d 637, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1691 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1970).

The defendant could not be found guilty of speeding, even though he was clearly speeding in violation of Veh & Tr Law § 1180, where the issuing patrolman placed the wrong information in connection with the description of the vehicle the defendant was driving on the summons, the testifying officer positively identified the wrong vehicle, and there was no testimony about the speed limits. People v Goldsmith, 110 Misc. 2d 528, 442 N.Y.S.2d 760, 1981 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3118 (N.Y. Village Ct. 1981).

Under presumption established by CLS Veh & Tr § 1110(d), testimony was sufficient to establish that speed limit sign complied with requirements of law where police officer testified that sign was 30-mile-per-hour sign that was approximately one foot by 2 feet in size. People v Praete, 144 Misc. 2d 801, 545 N.Y.S.2d 499, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 549 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1989), aff'd, 150 Misc. 2d 389, 575 N.Y.S.2d 623, 1991 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 608 (N.Y. App. Term 1991).

Village-wide 30-mile-per-hour speed limit was valid and enforceable in regard to defendant, even though speed limit signs were not posted at each and every entrance to village, where speed limit signs were posted at principal entrances to village and on road on which defendant was stopped for speeding, in close proximity to location of stop. People v Praete, 144 Misc. 2d 801, 545 N.Y.S.2d 499, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 549 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1989), aff'd, 150 Misc. 2d 389, 575 N.Y.S.2d 623, 1991 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 608 (N.Y. App. Term 1991).

In prosecution for speeding within village, it was unnecessary for People to establish that area speed limit signs were posted at entrances to village where (1) evidence showed that defendant actually passed speed limit sign, and (2) testimony of police officer as to size of sign sufficiently established its conformity to legal requirements, even if defendant was travelling on 4-lane conventional highway. People v Praete, 150 Misc. 2d 389, 575 N.Y.S.2d 623, 1991 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 608 (N.Y. App. Term 1991).

The statutory proviso, granting state traffic commission right to create exceptional speed zones, must be negatived both by pleading and by proof in a prosecution for violation of speed limits. People v Gross, 130 N.Y.S.2d 282, 1954 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2027 (N.Y. County Ct. 1954).

In a prosecution for exceeding the general 50-mile-an-hour-speed limit, while the prosecution is entitled to the benefit of the presumption contained in § 1620 that a higher rate of speed was not authorized because no signs had been erected by the State Traffic Commission at the place in question so indicating, at least some proof is necessary in order to make out the necessary element that the Traffic Commission had not raised the speed limit, either by testimony to lack of signs or by presenting a certificate of the Commission to that effect. People v Aubin, 231 N.Y.S.2d 466 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

29. —Absence of signs

The People, in a speeding case, were privileged to prove their case against the defendant by resorting to the presumption in subdivision 3 of former § 56, based on absence of signs; since the presumption is still valid. They did not need to rely on a certificate from the State Traffic Commission stating that the maximum speed limit at the location in question was 50 m.p.h. People v Shapiro, 7 N.Y.2d 370, 197 N.Y.S.2d 715, 165 N.E.2d 564, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1426 (N.Y. 1960).

Since the repeal of § 95-c of the Vehicle and Traffic Law (L 1957 ch 698) and the failure of the Legislature to re-enact similar powers in § 1620 and the other sections dealing with the powers of the State Traffic Commission, there is serious question whether the method of proving the speed limit by showing the absence of signs is now available in traffic prosecutions. People v Skeados, 20 Misc. 2d 893, 193 N.Y.S.2d 787, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2483 (N.Y. County Ct. 1959).

The defendant could not be convicted of speeding on the evidence of a state trooper where he testified that, for $^{3}/_{10}$ ths of a mile in which he observed the speed of the defendant, there were no signs along the road indicating the speed limit. People v Skeados, 20 Misc. 2d 893, 193 N.Y.S.2d 787, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2483 (N.Y. County Ct. 1959).

The provision in subd. 3 of former § 56, that the absence of speed signs along a state highway outside of an incorporated village or city should be presumptive evidence that no speed greater than 50 miles per hour is allowable, permitted proof of the 50-mile limit either by proof of absence of signs or by introduction of a proper certificate of the State Traffic Commission. People v Grammer, 25 Misc. 2d 223, 206 N.Y.S.2d 588, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2280 (N.Y. County Ct. 1960).

Where the charge is speeding on a public highway by driving in excess of 50 miles per hour, the prosecution can meet its burden of proving that no speed in excess of 50 miles an hour was permitted by the State Traffic Commission either by offering in evidence a certificate of the Commission or by offering testimony to absence of signs indicating that a greater speed was permitted. People v Riordan, 29 Misc. 2d 174, 212 N.Y.S.2d 515, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3130 (N.Y. County Ct. 1961).

In a prosecution for speeding in violation of subd. 3 of this section, the prosecution can establish that a speed in excess of 50 miles per hour was not permitted at the place in question either by certificate of the State Traffic Commission to that effect, or, if the violation occurred outside of an incorporated village or city, by proof of absence of speed signs, and a conviction cannot be sustained if the prosecution fails, in these or any other way, to establish that a speed in excess of 50 miles per hour was unlawful. People v Hilger, 32 Misc. 2d 975, 225 N.Y.S.2d 611, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3662 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

Defendant's motion to dismiss a charge of operating his motor vehicle 60 miles per hour in a 40-mile-an-hour zone was granted, where the prosecution proved that speed signs were properly posted, but failed to prove that defendant had passed a speed limit sign prior to the alleged violation. People v Mayoue, 50 Misc. 2d 150, 269 N.Y.S.2d 922, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1968 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1966).

Defendant's motion to dismiss an information charging him with driving at a speed of 48 m.p.h. in a 30 m.p.h. zone would be granted where there had been no signs properly notifying him that he was in either an area or a town in which there was a maximum speed limit of 30 m.p.h. Moreover, the presumption of innocence of the defendant could not be overcome by a showing of "substantial compliance" with notice requirements on the part of the town amounting to anything less than "actual notice" to the defendant. People v Hall, 108 Misc. 2d 507, 437 N.Y.S.2d 606, 1981 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2230 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1981).

The posting of speed limit signs is not required in order for the prosecution to convict a driver of operating a motor vehicle in excess of 55 miles per hour, since Vehicle and Traffic Law §§ 1180, 1180-a, prohibits such speeds anywhere on any public highway in the State. People v Heyman, 121 Misc. 2d 1071, 469 N.Y.S.2d 874, 1983 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4034 (N.Y. City Ct. 1983).

Defendant was entitled to dismissal of speeding charge where village speed sign was obliterated by foliage since (1) pursuant to CLS Veh & Tr § 1110(b), signs not properly positioned and sufficiently legible cannot be enforced against alleged violator, (2) in enacting CLS Veh & Tr §§ 1683-1685, legislature intended that motorists could not be presumed to know various speed limits enacted by cities and villages, and therefore required municipalities to erect signs warning motorists of such speed limits, and (3) any presumption of validity of signs arising from CLS Veh & Tr § 1110(b) was overcome by village prosecutor's previous dismissal of several other cases for alleged speeding violations in same geographic area because of obliteration of speed sign, and by photographic exhibits. People v Fox, 157 Misc. 2d 238, 596 N.Y.S.2d 984, 1993 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 104 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1993).

30. Suspension of driver's license

A determination suspending petitioner's license for a violation of former § 58 had to be annulled and the license restored, where proof showed that, although the accident was the result of bad judgment on petitioner's part, it could not be said to have constituted "reckless driving" within the meaning of former § 58. Seid v Harnett, 256 A.D. 200, 9 N.Y.S.2d 426, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4682 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

Suspension of operator's license on evidence that he was driving 25–30 mph on a wet cobblestone road when his vehicle skidded and struck a stanchion which separated the road was improper. The mere happening of the accident was not sufficient to support the suspension. Weisinger v MacDuff, 285 A.D. 607, 139 N.Y.S.2d 531, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5550 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

Suspension of petitioner's license was confirmed for violation of subdivision 1 of former § 56 where the only testimony concerning speed was that he was going between 25 and 30 miles per hour 3 car lengths behind the vehicle with which he collided. Pardo v Kelly, 2 A.D.2d 993, 158 N.Y.S.2d 773, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3389 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1956).

Suspension of petitioner's operator's license for driving at an "imprudent rate of speed" was annulled where, at the hearing, petitioner denied knowledge of slippery condition of the highway, the only other witness said that he didn't believe he was going too fast, and the only additional evidence with respect to the road surface was a state trooper's report stating generally that roads in that area were "very slippery." Wilber v Hults, 22 A.D.2d 844, 254 N.Y.S.2d 71, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2742 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

Where petitioner was proceeding at an unsafe speed for the conditions of the highway, suspension of driver's license for 45 days was not excessive. Alexander v Tofany, 29 A.D.2d 1015, 289 N.Y.S.2d 438, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4138 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1968).

Suspension of motor vehicle operator's license for 60 days for violation of speed restrictions, was, under the circumstances, an abuse of discretion and suspension would be reduced for 10 days. Szabo v Comm'r of Motor Vehicles, 38 A.D.2d 835, 329 N.Y.S.2d 765, 1972 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5453 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1972).

Suspension of a driver's license was unwarranted where it was pure speculation as to any condition created by a rain rendered proceeding at the legal rate of 60 miles per hour imprudent within the meaning of subdivision (e) of § 1180 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law. Blakeney v Tofany, 40 A.D.2d 740, 336 N.Y.S.2d 733, 1972 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3621 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1972).

Substantial evidence existed supporting the determination that defendant violated Veh & Tr Law § 1180(d) by driving 68 miles per hour in a 35-mile-per-hour zone, and upon the finding that said section was violated imposing a 30-day suspension of his driver's license and a penalty of $150, where the violation was defendant's second speeding conviction in 18 months. La Bue v Melton, 87 A.D.2d 975, 450 N.Y.S.2d 101, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16509 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1982).

Suspension of truck drivers' operator's licence for 30 days by Commissioner of Motor Vehicles was appropriate penalty where driver's rig struck passenger car which had partially left road and was skidding sideways out of control at highway construction site at which traffic was restricted to one lane of travel, and evidence supported finding by administrative law judge that truck driver violated CLS Veh & Tr § 1180 by failing to reduce his speed once he knew or should have known that passenger car was experiencing trouble. Draper v Passidomo, 122 A.D.2d 564, 505 N.Y.S.2d 21, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 59841 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1986).

An automobile operator's license may be suspended upon a determination of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles after a hearing that the operator was unable to stop his motor vehicle at an intersection in time to avoid a collision with another motor vehicle. McNellis v Fletcher, 96 N.Y.S.2d 599, 197 Misc. 80, 1950 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1576 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1950).

Where driver was arrested, charged with speeding, and arraigned, and driver, who deposited bail, failed to appear upon date set for trial, but there was no trial, no plea of guilty and no hearing, driver's license to operate motor vehicle should not have been temporarily suspended. Zimmerman v Kelly, 9 Misc. 2d 989, 170 N.Y.S.2d 847, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3794 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1958).

The stamping on driver's license of legend that license had been temporarily suspended was prejudicial and should not have been put down by Commissioner of Motor Vehicles and hence conviction of motorist for speeding upon arrest by officer who was shown driver's license was unwarranted since the examination of license by officer was just as incriminating to defendant as if officer had examined a stub containing a record of convictions. People v Dawley, 51 Misc. 2d 367, 273 N.Y.S.2d 162, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1609 (N.Y. County Ct. 1966), rev'd, 19 N.Y.2d 663, 278 N.Y.S.2d 855, 225 N.E.2d 548, 1967 N.Y. LEXIS 1751 (N.Y. 1967).

City court judge, in proper exercise of his discretion, had the power to suspend petitioner's driver's licenses pending trial of petitioners on speeding charges. Hague v Sedita, 56 Misc. 2d 203, 288 N.Y.S.2d 212, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1723 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1968).

Motorist was not entitled to have hearing on proposed suspension of his license to operate transferred from Watertown to a place in the capital district, preferably in Schenectady, on ground of convenience of licensee, of passenger in his automobile at time of issuance of ticket and of his attorney or because of possibility of inclement weather and dangerous driving conditions if licensee was required to travel to Watertown. Department of Motor Vehicles v Slowek, 66 Misc. 2d 987, 322 N.Y.S.2d 900, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1616 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1971).

31. Revocation of driver's license

An operator's license was properly revoked and his registration suspended pending compliance with the financial responsibility provisions of the statute, following conviction for a traffic infraction where, following an accident, the licensee pleaded guilty to a violation of former § 56, subd 1, and there was proof before the commissioner, of such violation. Jones v Fletcher, 279 A.D. 1118, 112 N.Y.S.2d 577, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6021 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

A determination revoking an operator's license for failure to operate an automobile at a speed permitting the operator to stop the car was annulled where the evidence showed the automobile was operated at 40 miles per hour in a 50 mile an hour zone and the car left the road as the operator attempted to turn the wheel. The mere happening of an accident does not justify revocation. Dietrichsen v MacDuff, 280 A.D. 1016, 116 N.Y.S.2d 887, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4573 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

A license was improperly revoked for violation of this section where the uncontradicted proof showed that the operator, a tree trimmer with high top boots on, was driving a pick-up truck when he approached an intersection. He slowed down by taking his foot off the accelerator but when he attempted to apply the brakes, his shoestrings were undone and the workman on his right had his foot on the strings. By the time he disengaged his foot, the truck went through a stop-sign at the intersection and hit another car. Maines v MacDuff, 284 A.D. 66, 130 N.Y.S.2d 91, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3342 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Although a violation of this section is a traffic infraction, a violation thereof cannot be inferred merely because of an accident. Hence, it was error to revoke a license upon proof that the operator was driving well under the statutory speed limit, came upon ice, lost control of his car and car travelled up to 200 feet before overturning. Hessney v MacDuff, 284 A.D. 70, 130 N.Y.S.2d 405, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3344 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Validity of prior conviction for traffic violation could not be collaterally attacked in proceeding to review action of Commissioner of Motor Vehicles in revoking motorist's operator's license. Gross v MacDuff, 284 A.D. 786, 135 N.Y.S.2d 435, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3498 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Evidence that truck driver entered unguarded one-track railroad spur crossing at speed of twenty-five to thirty miles an hour as locomotive backed into crossing, resulting in collision and fatal injuries to locomotive conductor, and that driver was familiar with crossing and knew that spur was used intermittently for freight purposes, sustained Motor Vehicles Commissioner's determination that driver violated Vehicle and Traffic Law by driving at such speed that he could not stop without causing property damage or personal injuries, so as to authorize revocation of his chauffeur's license. Hume v Kelly, 1 A.D.2d 742, 147 N.Y.S.2d 146, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3774 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1955).

Under statute requiring revocation of operator's license if he is convicted of a third or subsequent traffic violation within a period of eighteen months, plea of guilty by operator to a charge of reckless driving constituted a "conviction" even though record disclosed that fine was suspended, and license was properly revoked when operator had also twice pleaded quilty to speeding within eighteen months. Jones v Kelly, 9 A.D.2d 395, 194 N.Y.S.2d 585, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5406 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1959).

Revocation of an operator's license for violating either subd. 1 or 4 of this section could not be sustained where it merely appeared that he was driving without chains on an S turn at 45 miles per hour where the center of the pavement was clear but the edges were icy, got over onto the icy portion, ran over an embankment, and one passenger was killed and others injured, as the accident was obviously not caused by speed but by negligence in getting over onto the icy part. Application of Disney, 16 A.D.2d 494, 229 N.Y.S.2d 587, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9007 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Where justice before whom speeder was arraigned made two conflicting affidavits as to whether speeder was instructed that plea of guilty was equal to conviction and that upon conviction he was subject to possible revocation of his license, and there was no record of any proceedings before the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, revocation was annulled pending determination by the Commissioner. Schayes v MacDuff, 133 N.Y.S.2d 478, 1954 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2238 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1954), rev'd, 285 A.D. 1220, 140 N.Y.S.2d 764 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

32. Warning required by Code of Criminal Procedure § 335-a

As a result of the 1953 amendment to Code of Criminal Procedure § 335-a, a defendant must be warned in compliance with that section in every case involving a violation of the Vehicle and Traffic Law. The commissioner could not suspend the license of a person three times convicted of speeding within eighteen months relying on the presumptive evidence of facts recited in the certificates of conviction where petitioner alleged that he was not properly afforded the warning when arraigned on the second offense. Hubbell v Macduff, 2 N.Y.2d 563, 161 N.Y.S.2d 857, 141 N.E.2d 897, 1957 N.Y. LEXIS 1086 (N.Y. 1957).

Where statute requiring magistrate to warn one arraigned on charge of violating law or ordinance respecting operation of motor vehicles that, if convicted, his driver's license is subject to suspension or revocation, before accepting his plea of guilty, is not complied with, defendant, at his option, may attack validity of such conviction in criminal proceeding or allow conviction to stand, and challenge its use as basis for revocation or suspension of his license. Application of Arcuri (1955) 286 AD 17, 141 NYS2d 1, vacated on other grounds 1 AD2d 733, 147 NYS2d 115.

On arraignment of licensed chauffeur, charged with violation of village speed ordinance after effective date of statutory amendment, requiring magistrate to warn person arraigned on charge of violating law or ordinance respecting operation of motor vehicles, before accepting plea of guilty, that, if convicted, his driver's license is subject to suspension or revocation, magistrate owed duty to give defendant such warning, though his ensuing conviction was only second of three speeding convictions because of which Motor Vehicles Commissioner subsequently revoked his license. Application of Arcuri, 286 A.D. 17, 141 N.Y.S.2d 1, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3975 (N.Y. App. Div.), vacated, 1 A.D.2d 733, 147 N.Y.S.2d 115, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3760 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1955).

In proceeding against Commissioner of Motor Vehicles upon application for order restoring petitioner's operator's license which had been revoked following petitioner's third conviction of speeding violations committed within 18 months, pleadings and documentary proof accompanying pleadings were sufficient to raise, in regard to question of compliance with Code of Criminal Procedure provision requiring petitioner to be informed that, upon conviction, his license and certificate of registration could be suspended or revoked, substantial issue which would preclude determining of question of compliance solely on the pleadings and documentary proof. Johnson v Kelly, 2 A.D.2d 213, 153 N.Y.S.2d 792, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4663 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Where justice before whom speeder was arraigned made two conflicting affidavits as to whether speeder was instructed that plea of guilty was equal to conviction and that upon conviction he was subject to possible revocation of his license, and there was no record of any proceedings before the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, revocation was annulled pending determination by the Commissioner. Schayes v MacDuff, 133 N.Y.S.2d 478, 1954 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2238 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1954), rev'd, 285 A.D. 1220, 140 N.Y.S.2d 764 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

On review of a determination of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles revoking motorist's license and suspending his registration, an affidavit of the justice of the peace that he gave the motorist the necessary warning before accepting his plea to a third charge of speeding was accepted as against the assertion of the motorist that no such warning was given. Collins v Veness, 141 N.Y.S.2d 334, 1955 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2526 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1955).

In proceeding to review determination of Deputy Commissioner of Motor Vehicles revoking motorist's license and suspending his certificate of registration, evidence sustained finding that justice of peace gave motorist necessary statutory warning before accepting his plea to charge of speeding against motorist, who had been convicted twice for speeding within the previous 18 months. Collins v Veness, 141 N.Y.S.2d 334, 1955 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2526 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1955).

Justice of peace must advise motorist, who has two previous convictions for speeding within 18 months, of consequences of conviction on a present charge of speeding before accepting a plea to the charge. Collins v Veness, 141 N.Y.S.2d 334, 1955 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2526 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1955).

33. Restricted speed zone

This section, in dealing with driving at a speed unreasonable under existing conditions, renders a motorist guilty, if in view of existing conditions or actual and potential hazards reasonably to be anticipated, he is guilty of ordinary negligence with respect to speed. People v Lewis, 13 N.Y.2d 180, 245 N.Y.S.2d 1, 194 N.E.2d 831, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 867 (N.Y. 1963).

In a prosecution for exceeding the speed limit in a restricted speed zone, legal designation of the area as a restricted speed zone can be established by introducing in evidence a certified copy of the order of the commission establishing it. People v Radzinski, 24 Misc. 2d 109, 205 N.Y.S.2d 440, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2417 (N.Y. County Ct. 1960).

Where an information charges defendant with operating a motor vehicle at excessive speed in a zone restricted to a speed of 35 mph, conviction cannot be sustained on mere testimony of the arresting officer that the speed zone was set up by the State Traffic Commission and legally posted as required for such a zone, as an officer's testimony does not establish that a speed zone was legally set up, and, in addition, the prosecution must prove that whatever signs have been erected are in accordance with requirements of the commission. People v Radzinski, 24 Misc. 2d 109, 205 N.Y.S.2d 440, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2417 (N.Y. County Ct. 1960).

The evidence was insufficient to sustain a conviction for operating an automobile at 55 miles per hour in a 35-mile-per-hour speed zone established by the State Traffic Commission where there was no competent evidence to describe in detail the speed signs erected and where they were located, but only the testimony of the arresting officer that defendant traveling at 50 miles per hour, "ran into a 35 mile per hour zone legally posted and maintained by the State Traffic Commission." People v Higby, 27 Misc. 2d 362, 207 N.Y.S.2d 3, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2210 (N.Y. County Ct. 1960).

In a prosecution for speeding in a restricted speed zone, it is an essential part of the People's case to prove legal establishment of the restricted zone, and conviction cannot be sustained where the only proof consisted of a certified copy of an order by the State Traffic Commission which the record on appeal fails to show was either marked as an exhibit or admitted in evidence. People v Smith, 32 Misc. 2d 513, 221 N.Y.S.2d 538, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1941 (N.Y. County Ct. 1961).

The contention of a defendant charged with speeding in violation of a 30 mile an hour speed zone that the prosecution must prove that no greater speed was allowed would be applicable to a prosecution under subd (b)(2), of this section, but is not applicable to a prosecution under subd (b)(3). People v Drachenberg, 49 Misc. 2d 791, 268 N.Y.S.2d 462, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2293 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1966).

34. School speed zone

Evidence was insufficient to support a conviction under subdivision 2 of former § 56 where there was an absence of evidence that the alleged violation occurred during school noon hour, school recess, or opening or closing hours. People v Mendelow, 6 Misc. 2d 660, 167 N.Y.S.2d 298, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3070 (N.Y. County Ct. 1957).

Subdivision 2 (a) was designed for the protection of school children and it should be liberally interpreted. People v Underwood, 36 Misc. 2d 498, 233 N.Y.S.2d 377, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2393 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

Where the city had established a school zone embracing areas within 200 feet of school property, and signs had been posted, this was sufficient to put in effect the 15-mile-per-hour speed limit "when passing a school building" under subd. 2 (a) of this section with respect to a street to which a side exit from the school building gave access, regardless of the fact that the school building did not front on such street. People v Underwood, 36 Misc. 2d 498, 233 N.Y.S.2d 377, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2393 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

With reference to the speed limit in a school zone, the opening of school commences at the time that the school crossing guard takes his position in directing traffic, and the closing of school is that time at which the school crossing guard leaves for his station. People v Worosz, 69 Misc. 2d 426, 330 N.Y.S.2d 196, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2058 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1972).

After a non-jury hearing, defendant was found guilty on a charge of speeding in a school zone in violation of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1180(c)(1), although she claimed that she was outside the school zone when her speed was measured, because two police officers were credible in testifying that, while part of a speed detail that was measuring the speed of vehicles traveling in the school zone, they observed defendant driving in the school zone at a speed that exceeded the posted limit, and their testimony was consistent with the log generated by the speed detecting device that they were using. People v Deep, 821 N.Y.S.2d 381, 12 Misc. 3d 1137, 2006 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1600 (N.Y. City Ct. 2006).

35. Park and parkway speed limits

In negligence action arising from 3-car chain collision on controlled-access parkway, jury could reasonably conclude that 2 following cars were not following too closely, even though they were near entrance ramp, where second car was about 24 to 25 feet behind first and was traveling at about 30 miles per hour, and third car was about same distance behind second and was proceeding at speed of traffic. Barath v Marron, 255 A.D.2d 280, 684 N.Y.S.2d 553, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11617 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

In view of the provisions of §§ 1180 and 1183 of this law, a parkway authority need not post special signs on highways within its jurisdiction giving notice of its speed regulations where they are not in variance or conflicting with the general 50 mph limit under this section on highways generally. People v Kane, 40 Misc. 2d 826, 243 N.Y.S.2d 809, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1538 (N.Y. County Ct. 1963).

A motion for dismissal of a speeding charge based on violation of a state park ordinance because of failure to prove that the ordinance was filed with the Department of State pursuant to Art. IV § 8 of the Constitution cannot succeed because Rule 4511 of the CPLR permits the court to take judicial notice of such ordinances. People v Goldstein, 43 Misc. 2d 945, 252 N.Y.S.2d 534, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1465 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1964).

36. Thruway speed limits

Defendant motorist, who skidded off thruway in severe snow storm and collided with police car parked on shoulder, was not entitled to summary judgment dismissing police officer's cause of action under CLS Gen Mun § 205-e(1), regardless of persuasiveness of motorist's explanation, where mere happening of collision outside of motorist's authorized lanes of travel created triable issue of fact as to whether she was negligent, and there were similar issues as to whether she was traveling too fast for weather conditions in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 1180 and negligent in sliding off side of road in violation of CLS Veh & Tr § 1131. Dubois v Vanderwalker, 245 A.D.2d 758, 665 N.Y.S.2d 460, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12940 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Officer was not required to follow defendant for a quarter of a mile in order to establish violation of Thruway Regulation barring speed in excess of 60 miles per hour. People v Wilson, 17 Misc. 2d 731, 188 N.Y.S.2d 344, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3745 (N.Y. County Ct. 1959).

The provision of subdivision 3 of former § 56 permitting a driver to exceed the speed limit for a distance of one quarter of a mile, is intended to protect a motorist in passing another on an undivided highway and does not apply to the violation of the speed limit on the Thruway, since on the Thruway there is two lane traffic going in opposite directions. People ex rel. O'Toole v Roth, 17 Misc. 2d 1072, 192 N.Y.S.2d 592, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4008 (N.Y. County Ct. 1959).

37. Local speeding ordinances

Defendant village should have been granted summary judgment, even though it was responsible for regulating traffic speed and posting speed limit signs on roadway, where there was no evidence that speed limit was inappropriate, and village showed that county owned and maintained road where accident occurred. Rosenfeld v County of Nassau, 272 A.D.2d 388, 707 N.Y.S.2d 665, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5108 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2000).

The Legislature intended in the enactment of the Vehicle and Traffic Law that the motorist, although presumed to know provisions of law regulating operation of vehicle on highways outside of municipalities, could not be presumed to know various speed limitations enacted by cities and villages, and therefore required municipalities to erect signs warning motorists of speed limitations. People v Schrader, 16 N.Y.S.2d 424, 172 Misc. 246, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2559 (N.Y. County Ct. 1939).

A motorist may be presumed to know that the general speed limit through the state as fixed in this law outside of cities and villages is 50 miles an hour, but it would not be possible nor reasonable to expect that the millions of motorists should be aware, without specific notice, of the various and special speeds in the 60 cities and 566 villages in this state. People v Wadsworth, 108 N.Y.S.2d 224, 200 Misc. 1049, 1950 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2572 (N.Y. County Ct. 1950).

A village speed ordinance which establishes a maximum speed less than that set by this section cannot be effective until signs or markings giving notice of such maximum speed limits are posted, and, in a prosecution for violating such an ordinance, the prosecution must prove as part of its case that the required signs were posted at the time of the alleged violation. People v Silcox, 34 Misc. 2d 335, 228 N.Y.S.2d 634, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3252 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

A city ordinance which fixes a maximum speed limit within the city "unless otherwise posted" or in the absence of posted signs indicating a lesser or greater speed clearly expresses and sufficiently defines what constitutes speeding. People ex rel. Wildey v Freidus, 40 Misc. 2d 636, 243 N.Y.S.2d 721, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1563 (N.Y. County Ct. 1963).

Subd (b)(3) of this section and §§ 1600 and 1643 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law, when read together, mean that a village may, by local law, ordinance, order, rule, or regulation, establish maximum speed limits for a designated area or street within the village, provided § 1684 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law is not violated. People v Blattman, 50 Misc. 2d 606, 270 N.Y.S.2d 903, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1829 (N.Y. County Ct. 1966).

Where a town became subject to the Suburban Town Law on January 1, 1966, the town board had power on December 21, 1965 to enact a local law setting a speed limit effective December 31, 1965 pursuant to the authority of Town Law § 50-a, subd 4. People v Baratta, 56 Misc. 2d 447, 288 N.Y.S.2d 976, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1633 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1968).

Either subdivision (d) of section 1180 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law or an applicable section of a local law or ordinance may serve as a basis for a prosecution for speeding within a city, since subdivision (d) of section 1180 does not state that it is the exclusive basis for such a charge and subdivisions (a) and (c) of section 1800 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law expressly provide conviction for this offense may rest upon violation of local law or ordinance. People v Levin, 93 Misc. 2d 106, 402 N.Y.S.2d 324, 1978 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2021 (N.Y. City Ct. 1978).

A town of the first class may not enact an ordinance limiting the speed of motor vehicles on town highways pursuant to former § 90 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law. 1955 Ops St Compt 198.

Violation of a village highway speed limit ordinance is a violation of subd. 3 of this section, and while the fine or money collected is property of the village it must be remitted to the State Comptroller with the justice's monthly report. 1962 Ops St Compt #937.

A suburban town may enact a local law regulating speed on town highways, but other towns have no power to adopt such a local law. 1964 Ops St Compt #104.

38. Speeding as negligence

This section, in dealing with driving at a speed unreasonable under existing conditions, renders a motorist guilty, if in view of existing conditions or actual and potential hazards reasonably to be anticipated, he is guilty of ordinary negligence with respect to speed. People v Lewis, 13 N.Y.2d 180, 245 N.Y.S.2d 1, 194 N.E.2d 831, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 867 (N.Y. 1963).

A violation of this former section and former § 67, sub 1, in not slowing down on a curve or where visibility ahead is impaired, did not constitute negligence as a matter of law if the operator was doing everything in his power to stop the car. McCormick v Merritt, 232 A.D. 619, 250 N.Y.S. 443, 1931 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13903 (N.Y. App. Div. 1931).

Evidence merely disclosing that in early morning hours an automobile driven by defendant struck concrete abutment of small highway culvert on left side of road, causing automobile to be deflected from highway and to overturn and kill an occupant of automobile and that automobile was being driven at a speed variously estimated at from 50 to 65 miles an hour, was insufficient to sustain conviction for criminal negligence in operation of motor vehicle resulting in death. People v Gardner, 255 A.D. 683, 8 N.Y.S.2d 917, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6336 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

Evidence that defendant's automobile was operated at a speed of at least 45 miles an hour and had been so operated for more than one-quarter of a mile, taken in connection with blowout and the number of times which automobile turned over after the blowout, supported finding of jury that plaintiff's injuries were proximately caused by defendant's negligence. Mantione v Picone, 273 A.D. 1049, 80 N.Y.S.2d 163, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5905 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

It was reversible error for the trial court, in its charge to the jury, to invoke former § 56 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law (now § 1180) as a basis for finding negligence on the part of the defendant, since that section had been declared to be unconstitutional prior to the date of the accident upon which plaintiff instituted suit. Karnbach v Bould, 24 A.D.2d 600, 262 N.Y.S.2d 265, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3588 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1965).

In action by automobile driver, who was driving at 25 miles per hour on street as he proceeded past gas service station on his right and observed jeep through window of station but could not see whether it was occupied by driver, against jeep driver for back injuries sustained when jeep hit his automobile when he was just about by station, trial court's charge to jury of section of Vehicle and Traffic Law which requires driver to operate vehicle at reasonable and prudent speed was prejudicially erroneous in that record was devoid of any proof that automobile driver's speed was imprudent. Putnam v Lamoreaux, 59 A.D.2d 974, 399 N.Y.S.2d 333, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14240 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

State troopers were not entitled to summary judgment dismissing action for wrongful death of occupants of vehicle struck by pickup truck pursued by troopers where troopers' testimony that they slowed down and broke off chase on entering village was contradicted by 4 independent witnesses, who stated that troopers pursued truck through village at 90 to 100 miles per hour, and one witness averred that, because of its speed and closeness of pursuit, troopers' vehicle narrowly missed crashing into other vehicles at scene of accident. Sisson v Baritot, 245 A.D.2d 1084, 666 N.Y.S.2d 85, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13863 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1997).

First and ninth motorists in chain-reaction pile-up were entitled to summary judgment in action by 10th motorist where 10th motorist, after spinning out on ice, stopped without hitting anyone else and was not injured until her vehicle was struck repeatedly by vehicles that followed, and thus any negligence of first and ninth motorists was not proximate cause of her injuries. Lester v Chmaj, 251 A.D.2d 1069, 674 N.Y.S.2d 222, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7172 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

Court should have granted plaintiffs' summary judgment motion where defendants failed to controvert plaintiffs' evidence, including statement by injured plaintiff, who was passenger in defendant's vehicle, that defendant's vehicle was exceeding speed limit at time of accident, eyewitness' statement that vehicle was traveling "at a high rate of speed," and investigating officer's testimony that damage sustained by vehicle "indicated to me there had to be an excessive amount of speed." Pinkow v Herfield, 264 A.D.2d 356, 695 N.Y.S.2d 20, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8785 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1999).

Plaintiff was entitled to summary judgment on issue of liability for injuries sustained when he was struck by vehicle owned and operated by defendants, where he established that sole proximate cause of accident was driver's loss of control of vehicle due to intoxication and excessive speed, and defendants failed to raise issue of fact concerning proximate cause. Arumugam v Smith, 277 A.D.2d 979, 716 N.Y.S.2d 518, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11412 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000).

Driver and a waste removal company were not entitled to summary judgment in personal injury actions, as their own submissions raised an issue of fact as to whether the driver failed to use reasonable care when proceeding into an intersection as required by N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1180, because testimony submitted by defendants stated that the driver was speeding and was looking down when he entered the intersection. Halbina v Brege, 41 A.D.3d 1218, 838 N.Y.S.2d 288, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7042 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2007).

Jury verdict should have been set aside under N.Y. C.P.L.R. § 4404(a) in personal injury action as it was inconsistent in finding that defendant driver was negligent in violating N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 1129, 1180 by striking plaintiff driver's vehicle in the rear but was not the substantially contributing factor in causing the accident; the verdict was also ambiguous as it did not address the issue of whether defendant driver's negligence proximately caused plaintiff driver's injuries. Rodriguez v Budget Rent-A-Car Sys., Inc., 44 A.D.3d 216, 841 N.Y.S.2d 486, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9303 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2007).

Jury's finding that a driver was negligent but not the proximate cause of a motorcyclist's injures was not against the weight of the evidence because the driver backed out of his driveway before he was aware of the oncoming motorcyclist, who could have avoided the collision if he had not been speeding as he approached the hill or if he had applied his front brake as well as his rear brake. Berner v Little, 137 A.D.3d 1675, 28 N.Y.S.3d 519, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2235 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2016).

There was a rational process by which the jury could find that driver 1 was negligent because the jury could conclude that, although driver 1 had the right-of-way, she failed to exercise reasonable care to avoid the collision and failed to drive at a speed that was reasonable and prudent under the conditions; the jury was permitted to reject driver 1's testimony, particularly in considering the evidence that the force of the impact from the collision "propelled" driver 2's vehicle into a tree. Guo v Efkarpidis, 185 A.D.3d 949, 127 N.Y.S.3d 545, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4282 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2020).

The plaintiff's car was stopped at a traffic light with a directional left hand signal on. The plaintiff started a turn to the left when the light changed. The defendant driving a car directly behind the plaintiff at a speed of 25 m.p.h. collided with the plaintiff's car. Held: the defendant was negligent as a matter of law in driving 25 m.p.h. under the circumstances. Kiel v Diamond, 191 N.Y.S.2d 567, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4638 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1959).

Administrative determination that a driver had not operated at a reasonable and prudent speed did not have collateral estoppel effect in a personal injury action arising from the underlying motor vehicle accident because the administrative law judge lacked authority to decide whether the violation was a proximate cause of the accident and because the hearing, which did not include testimony from witnesses other than the driver, did not afford a full and fair opportunity to contest negligence. Deliz v Davis, 66 Misc. 3d 299, 114 N.Y.S.3d 610, 2019 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 6100 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2019).

39. —Hazardous conditions

Where a driver was issued a ticket for speed not reasonable and prudent, in violation of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1180(e), due to his vehicle having skidded on the road after passing a sanding truck while it was snowing out, and the driver pleaded guilty to a reduced charge, the university that owned the car should not have been granted summary judgment dismissal of the personal injury complaint of the injured passenger, as the circumstances did not establish as a matter of law that the driver was not negligent; the fact that he had passed a sanding machine could have allowed an inference that the roads were in a dangerous state, and his having pleaded guilty to a traffic infraction, while explainable, did not establish a complete lack of negligence. Feeley v St. Lawrence Univ., 13 A.D.3d 782, 788 N.Y.S.2d 179, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14997 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2004).

Speed of 30 miles per hour on a wet, slippery day by motorist approaching an intersection constituted negligence, although visibility was good. Hotine v Monett, 137 N.Y.S.2d 727, 1955 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2573 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1955), aff'd, 3 A.D.2d 836, 161 N.Y.S.2d 838, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5997 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1957).

Smoke from a brush fire 600 feet from a highway obstructing the vision of motorists was not the "proximate cause" of injuries to passengers in a vehicle which was carelessly and recklessly driven due to the limited light range as compared with the speed of the vehicle. Pfohl v State, 42 N.Y.S.2d 372, 1943 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2012 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1943).
