Notes to Decisions

Security guard employed as special police officer by racing association pursuant to CLS Rac and Wag § 215 is police officer within meaning of CPL 1.20 and 2.10 for purposes of prosecution for resisting arrest, notwithstanding guard's failure to complete training program pursuant to CPL 2.30 where guard has been continuously employed since appointment prior to September 1, 1980, effective date of CLS CPL 2.30. People v Seaman, 132 Misc. 2d 336, 504 N.Y.S.2d 603, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2692 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1986).

Special police officer appointed pursuant to CLS Rac and Wag § 215 who meets or is exempt from training requirements of CLS CPL 2.30 need not be recertified each year merely because racing association employing officer reappoints officer on annual basis. People v Seaman, 132 Misc. 2d 336, 504 N.Y.S.2d 603, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2692 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1986).

New York City Marshal who worked with tow truck operator in enforcing parking laws and towing cars of scofflaws was not "peace officer" charged with duties under CLS CPL § 2.20, although New York City Marshals trained in firearms handling who have firearms permit from city's police department license division are designated as "peace officers" under CLS CPL § 2.10(33), as CLS CPL § 2.30 requires all peace officers to receive certification as such, and city had not sought state certification of city marshals as peace officers. Gonzalez v City of New York, 167 Misc. 2d 577, 638 N.Y.S.2d 286, 1996 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 28 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1996).

Trial court held that N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 2.30(1) required Orange County (New York) to provide weapons training to probation officers employed by the County even if the County did not require or permit its probation officers to carry or use a weapon during the course of their official duties, and the court dismissed the County's action against the New York State Division of Criminal Justice Services seeking an order overturning the Division's decision not to issue peace officer certificates to County probation officers until they had firearms training. County of Orange v N.Y. State Div. of Crim. Justice Servs., 194 Misc. 2d 438, 755 N.Y.S.2d 560, 2003 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 32 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2003).

Both the language of N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law 2.30 and the legislative history supported the Division of Criminal Justice Services' (DCJS)argument that the statutory weapons training requirement applied to all peace officers regardless of their employer's policies with respect to the use of weapons. Accordingly, DCJS's refusal to issue the peace officer certificates was not arbitrary and capricious. County of Orange v New York State Div. of Crim. Justice Servs., 3 A.D.3d 206, 770 N.Y.S.2d 180, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13908 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

Motion to suppress evidence was properly denied because the application for the search warrant was proper, as the applicant, who was appointed as a town constable, under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 2.10(1), and who had completed the training required by N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 2.30, was not required to repeat the training when he was appointed as an officer for the Finger Lakes Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals of Central New York, N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law §§ 2.10(7), 2.30(6)(a). People v Gilfus, 4 A.D.3d 788, 772 N.Y.S.2d 164, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1499 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 628, 777 N.Y.S.2d 26, 808 N.E.2d 1285, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 749 (N.Y. 2004).

Opn No. 80-328 is hereby amended. Town constables are required to attend training programs. 1980 Op St. Compt File #328-A.

Editor's Notes Laws 1984, ch 1008, §§ 1, 2, provide as follows:

Section 1. Short title. This act shall be known and may be cited as the "New York state export finance awareness program act".

§ 2. Legislative intent. The legislature hereby finds and declares that the promotion, attraction, stimulation, development and expansion of the export trade sector of the New York state economy is vital and necessary to the people of this state. It is further found and declared that export trade is a specialty with a high concentration of resources in the city of New York and that these resources are unique among the United States. However, the export of products and services manufactured and provided by smaller firms doing business in New York state has been impeded to a great extent by the unavailability of financing of small and medium-size export trade transactions. Therefore, it is hereby determined that a program authorizing the regional and local development of export finance awareness in the banking community of the state of New York is necessary and important to the commerce and well being of the citizenry of this state. To stimulate and increase the volume of such export trade, the departments of commerce, education and banking working together shall create a program whereby the expertise and knowledge necessary to make available monies for the financing of small and medium-size transactions is conveyed to the banking community on a regional basis throughout the state of New York.

Laws 2000, ch 180, §§ 1 and 14, eff July 1, 2001, provide as follows:

Section 1. Legislative findings and intent. The legislature finds and declares that the overwhelming majority of teachers and school personnel provide a skilled, safe and appropriate learning environment for New York's schoolchildren. Notwithstanding the commitment and dedication of these individuals, the abuse of children when they are in educational settings by persons in a position of trust is an ongoing and persistent problem. This problem is largely unaddressed in state statute or regulation. No standard statewide policy exists for the reporting, investigation or identification of this form of child abuse. Standardization and consistency are necessary and appropriate for the protection of the school children of New York state.

Laws 2000, ch 180, §§ 1, 14, eff July 1, 2001, provide as follows:

Section 1. Legislative findings and intent. The legislature finds and declares that the overwhelming majority of teachers and school personnel provide a skilled, safe and appropriate learning environment for New York's schoolchildren. Notwithstanding the commitment and dedication of these individuals, the abuse of children when they are in educational settings by persons in a position of trust is an ongoing and persistent problem. This problem is largely unaddressed in state statute or regulation. No standard statewide policy exists for the reporting, investigation or identification of this form of child abuse. Standardization and consistency are necessary and appropriate for the protection of the school children of New York state.

The legislature further finds that the reporting of allegations of child abuse in an educational setting must be formal, consistent and well documented. The investigation of such allegations of criminal conduct must not be undertaken by school personnel but must be the responsibility of law enforcement agencies who are trained and qualified to conduct such investigations. The "arms length" character of a law enforcement investigation of allegations of child abuse in an educational setting will promote the objectivity of such investigation and will protect the rights and interests of the alleged victim, the accused and the school community.

Other than in the city of New York, New York state is without legal authority to fingerprint and conduct state and federal criminal records checks of individuals seeking employment in a public school district, nor is there authority to conduct such criminal records checks of individuals seeking state certification as teachers in our public schools. This glaring weakness in our laws to protect the children of our state continues despite the existence of fingerprint and criminal record check requirements for many other professions and licenses in New York.

The legislature further finds that the practice of "quiet resignations" whereby an employee is allowed to resign his or her position in a school district in lieu of an investigation of child abuse allegations permits and perpetuates an abuser's ability to harm children in multiple school districts of subsequent employment. The acceptance of a "quiet resignation" impermissibly denies subsequent school district employers critical information necessary to protect their school children from exposure to a high risk of harm from an employee with a prior history of child abuse in an educational setting. It is the intention of the legislature that acceptance of a "quiet resignation" be unlawful and violative of the public policy of New York state.

Therefore, the legislature finds that enactment of this legislation is necessary and appropriate to make certain that school employment not be a point of access for the abuse of our state's school children.

1. In general

In an Article 78 proceeding brought by a school district to challenge the Commissioner of Education's award of permanent certification to a tenured teacher, the award was proper where the school district had unreasonably withheld recommendation to substitute one year of paid full-time teaching experience for student teaching experience. Bradford Cent. School Dist. v Ambach, 56 N.Y.2d 158, 451 N.Y.S.2d 654, 436 N.E.2d 1256, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3325 (N.Y. 1982).

In Article 78 proceeding commenced by school district against Commissioner of Education to challenge order which required school district to offer former tenured employee position as principal, commissioner and employee, who was not joined as party, were not united in interest and did not stand or fall together, as commissioner did not have authority over employee. Mt. Pleasant Cottage School Union Free School Dist. v Sobol, 163 A.D.2d 715, 558 N.Y.S.2d 713, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8437 (N.Y. The plaintiff has no cause of action against the state under this section (formerly § 94, subd. 3) where he was injured while attending a wartime class in food production conducted in a school owned by a union free school district and governed by a local board of education, which was financed by Federal funds sent to the state treasurer and transferred by him to the local Board of Education, since there was no duty or obligation on the part of the state to supervise the course of instruction or to assure to pupils reasonable safeguards. Buck v State, 96 N.Y.S.2d 667, 198 Misc. 575, 1950 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1588 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1950).

Where school transportation contracts, which provided that the contract price would be adjusted during each extention year by the percentage by which the "National consumer price index" increased over the index of the preceding year, were signed before the effective date of an amendment to Educ Law § 305(14)(a), which changed the definition of the term "consumer price index," but the contracts did not become effective until after the enactment of the amendment, the amendment did not apply to extention years subsequent to its effective date. Pioneer Transp. Corp. v Kalajian, 122 Misc. 2d 412, 471 N.Y.S.2d 518, 1984 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2856 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), aff'd, Pioneer Transp. Corp. v Kaladjian, 105 A.D.2d 698, 481 N.Y.S.2d 136, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 20806 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1984).

Issue as to whether petitioner could withdraw her resignation as probationary school teacher was not solely within special competence of Commissioner of Education, and thus motion to dismiss Article 78 petition to annul determination of board of education which accepted petitioner's resignation, on ground that commissioner had exclusive jurisdiction under doctrine of primary jurisdiction, was denied. Totevski v Board of Educ., 178 Misc. 2d 758, 680 N.Y.S.2d 824, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 543 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1998).

Provisions of CLS Educ Law § 305(14) do not apply to approval of contract to operate flea market on public school property. 1989 Op Comr Ed No. 12199.

Commissioner of Education has no authority to determine method of selection of teacher representatives for site-based management teams once shared decisionmaking plan is in place. 1995 Op Comm Ed No. 13442.

Commissioner had authority to review determination of union free school district which rejected petitioner's bid to provide food service to district for that school year and awarded contract to another bidder. 1998 Op Comm Ed No. 14087.

United States Secretary of Education, not Commissioner of Education, has jurisdiction over alleged violations of Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act, 20 USCS §§ 1232g et seq. 1999 Op Comm Ed No. 14124.

Commissioner of Education will not substitute his judgment for that of a board of education in determining responsibility where there is substantial evidence upon which board could base its determination. Re Dileo, 74 St Dept 83 (1953).

2. General supervisory powers; implementation of policy and statutory directives

Where the Board of Regents has declared racially imbalanced schools to be educationally inadequate, and the Commissioner has implemented this policy by directing local boards to take steps to eliminate racial imbalance, he may substitute his judgment for that of the local board and his decisions are final and not subject to judicial review absent a showing of pure arbitrariness. Vetere v Allen, 15 N.Y.2d 259, 258 N.Y.S.2d 77, 206 N.E.2d 174, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1494 (N.Y.), cert. denied, 382 U.S. 825, 86 S. Ct. 60, 15 L. Ed. 2d 71, 1965 U.S. LEXIS 655 (U.S. 1965).

Where the Board of Regents under the authority of § 207 had declared racially imbalanced schools to be educationally inadequate and the Commissioner of Education under § 301 and the above statute had implemented this policy by directing local boards to take steps to eliminate racial imbalance, his decision was final in the absence of a showing of pure arbitrariness. Since his decision rested squarely on his finding of the inadequacy of such schools from the viewpoint of educational soundness, and since it has been held that the Commissioner may substitute his judgment for that of the local board even where its action is not arbitrary, his decision in regard to racial balance was conclusive. Vetere v Allen, 15 N.Y.2d 259, 258 N.Y.S.2d 77, 206 N.E.2d 174, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1494 (N.Y.), cert. denied, 382 U.S. 825, 86 S. Ct. 60, 15 L. Ed. 2d 71, 1965 U.S. LEXIS 655 (U.S. 1965).

Purpose of provisions of general legislative and constitutional system for maintenance of public schools securing review by board of education and, on state level, by Commissioner of Education, is to make all matters pertaining to general school system of state within authority and control of department of education and to remove same so far as practicable and possible from controversies in courts. James v Board of Education, 42 N.Y.2d 357, 397 N.Y.S.2d 934, 366 N.E.2d 1291, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 2213 (N.Y. 1977).

The votes of one of 28 school districts which voted for centralization of their districts having done so on the representation that after the central district was formed their district would be taken away and attached to another educational division of the State, the Commissioner of Education was within his wide powers in calling for a vote of the qualified voters of the one district to ascertain their sentiment before deciding to exercise his power to alter the boundaries. Board of Education v Spaulding, 272 A.D. 677, 75 N.Y.S.2d 583, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3374 (N.Y. App. Div. 1947).

The Board of Education has standing to maintain action to declare unconstitutional statute requiring Board to purchase text books for parochial pupils. Board of Education v Allen, 27 A.D.2d 69, 276 N.Y.S.2d 234, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2693 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1966), aff'd, 20 N.Y.2d 109, 281 N.Y.S.2d 799, 228 N.E.2d 791, 1967 N.Y. LEXIS 1388 (N.Y. 1967).

The Commissioner and the Deputy Commissioner of Education of the State of New York had absolute immunity in actions to recover damages suffered as a result of a regulation promulgated by respondents which was allegedly in violation of a federal statute, and, as government officials performing discretionary functions, respondents acted as administrative officers in acting to enforce the regulation and were shielded from liability for civil damages to those affected thereby by a qualified immunity as long as their conduct did not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have been aware. Board of Education v Ambach, 90 A.D.2d 227, 458 N.Y.S.2d 680, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18831 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1982), aff'd, 60 N.Y.2d 758, 469 N.Y.S.2d 669, 457 N.E.2d 775, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 3444 (N.Y. 1983).

Commissioner of education had general supervision over all schools and institutions which were subject to the provisions of the chapter, or of any statute relating to education, and the commissioner was directed to cause the same to be examined and inspected; the state department of education was authorized to conduct an audit relating to Employment Preparation Education

(EPE) funds received, and, because a school district failed to maintain records in accordance with basic standards of record-keeping and reporting systems, which left the auditors unable to verify that aid received for EPE was expended on eligible programs or students, disallowance of funds pursuant to N.Y. Educ. Law § 3604(5)(a) was proper. Matter of Rochester City School Dist. v New York State Educ. Dept., 31 A.D.3d 993, 819 N.Y.S.2d 190, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9462 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006), app. denied, 8 N.Y.3d 805, 831 N.Y.S.2d 107, 863 N.E.2d 112, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 128 (N.Y. 2007).

Sections 301 and 305 of the Education Law give the Commissioner the authority to implement policy established by the Board of Regents, and therefore, he was authorized to direct local school boards to take steps to eliminate racial imbalance. Etter v Littwitz, 47 Misc. 2d 473, 262 N.Y.S.2d 924, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1534 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1965).

Under statutes, commissioner of education and board of regents are given wide latitude to implement statutory directives and assure their effective execution. Hodgkins v Central School Dist., 78 Misc. 2d 91, 355 N.Y.S.2d 932, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1337 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1974), aff'd, 48 A.D.2d 302, 368 N.Y.S.2d 891, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9885 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

In an employment discrimination action, a local board of education was not entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity as an arm of the state because (1) N.Y. Educ. Law §§ 1701 and 1709, N.Y. Gen. Constr. Law § 66(1) and (2), and N.Y. Const. art. X, § 5 could be construed to identify boards of education as municipal corporations; (2) board members were elected locally pursuant to N.Y. Educ. Law § 1804(2); (3) under N.Y. Educ. Law § 1709(20), school districts were funded by state appropriations and local property taxes; (4) education was a shared state and local responsibility even though N.Y. Const. art. XI, § 1 imposed upon the legislature the duty of providing a system of free common schools; (5) N.Y. Educ. Law §§ 305(2), 306(1) and (2), 308, 309, 310, and 1706 did not provide the New York State Commissioner of Education with veto power over the board's actions, and (6) N.Y. Educ. Law § 1709(8-c) and (26) required that any judgment against the board be paid from the board's funds rather than from the state treasury. Woods v Rondout Valley Cent. Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ., 466 F.3d 232, 2006 U.S. App. LEXIS 25333 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2006).

Education Law § 3020-a must be read with § 305(1) and § 310(7) to create a consistent and cohesive statutory pattern to permit commissioner to review full determination of hearing panel both as to questions of guilt and appropriate remedy and to prescribe different and more onerous penalty than that imposed by hearing panel. Re Community School Board No. 2 of the City of New York, 1979 Op Comr Ed #10099.

Respondent would be removed as impartial hearing officer from proceeding concerning student with disability where he admitted that he had become too familiar with underlying facts and dispute to act impartially, but he declined to recuse himself on motion by petitioner; respondent's statements concerning his lack of impartiality were sufficient to threaten integrity of hearing process, and fact that he was challenged at later date, rather than at commencement of hearing when conflicts of interest are typically disclosed, was of no consequence. 1996 Op Comm Ed No. 13536.

3. Commissioner's delegation of authority

Education Commissioner's appointment of overseer to advise local school board, without whose prior written approval no official action could be taken, was an egregious usurpation of power totally transcending the Commissioner's authority, and was not authorized either in law or in logic. Verbanic v Nyquist, 41 A.D.2d 466, 344 N.Y.S.2d 406, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4301 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1973).

Privately endowed colleges in this State are part and parcel of the State system of education. Board of Education v Pace College, 50 Misc. 2d 806, 271 N.Y.S.2d 773, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1777 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), rev'd, 27 A.D.2d 87, 276 N.Y.S.2d 162, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2716 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1966).

Appointment by state commissioner of education of an overseer in whom he vested power to advise school district was a proper exercise of authority under Education L § 305, subd 2, as commissioner was simply lending a hand to the members of the board in what he deemed was an extreme situation by putting on the scene a representative who could keep him in close contact with the problems at hand and the actions of the board, as an incident of his power to advise and guide or to remove. Verbanic v Nyquist, 73 Misc. 2d 458, 341 N.Y.S.2d 949, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1492 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1972), aff'd, 41 A.D.2d 466, 344 N.Y.S.2d 406, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4301 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1973).

State commissioner of education exceeded his statutory authority to advise and guide or remove members of local school board when he appointed an overseer and granted such overseer absolute power over scheduling and the agenda of every meeting and forbade action upon any transaction without the overseer's prior written approval, thereby completely and totally invading and usurping the area which by statute belonged exclusively to the board. Verbanic v Nyquist, 73 Misc. 2d 458, 341 N.Y.S.2d 949, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1492 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1972), aff'd, 41 A.D.2d 466, 344 N.Y.S.2d 406, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4301 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1973).

4. Private schools and colleges

As commissioner of education has the right and duty to concern himself with the quality of any faculty under his supervision together with its higher educational pursuits to the extent that those pursuits add to or detract from the quality of its performance and its resulting impact upon a student body, and considering the fact that a large portion of faculty and student body of Laurence University, a corporation for profit incorporated in the State of Florida, were from New York State and thesis advisors actually met with students on a teacher-student level within the state, commissioner had authority to make qualitative comments in regard to the institution, and thus was privileged from libel and slander action arising out of such comments. Laurence University v State, 41 A.D.2d 463, 344 N.Y.S.2d 183, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4300 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1973).

Appeal by petitioner following his dismissal from university doctoral program, alleging that university's grading decision led to his dismissal and requesting that he be permitted to withdraw voluntarily with unblemished record, was dismissed for lack of jurisdiction; CLS Educ § 310 limits commissioner's appellate jurisdiction to matters involving public school systems and does not provide for appeals from actions of postsecondary institutions. 2007 Op Comm Ed No. 15,665.

While CLS Educ § 310 generally limits jurisdiction of Commissioner of Education to appeals involving public schools, commissioner has jurisdiction to review any immunization decision that prohibits any child from attending school, whether public, private, parochial or otherwise. 2008 Op Comm Ed No. 15,758.

5. Quality and quantity of instruction

It is within the power of the board of regents and the commissioner of education to determine the appropriate hours of instruction in the schools. New York City School Boards Ass'n v Board of Education, 39 N.Y.2d 111, 383 N.Y.S.2d 208, 347 N.E.2d 568, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 2388 (N.Y. 1976).

Commissioner of Education acted properly in refusing to reregister English and history Ph.D. programs at State University of New York and Albany on grounds that such programs fell below acceptable Ph.D. standards. Moore v Board of Regents, 59 A.D.2d 44, 397 N.Y.S.2d 449, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12449 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977), aff'd, 44 N.Y.2d 593, 407 N.Y.S.2d 452, 378 N.E.2d 1022, 1978 N.Y. LEXIS 2051 (N.Y. 1978).

The adoption of regulations with respect to graduation requirements, including basic competency examinations, to establish a standard that would make a local high school diploma in New York a meaningful credential of the graduate was within the authority and power of the Commissioner of Education of the State of New York, the control and management of educational affairs were vested in the Board of Regents and the Commissioner of Education, and determinations of the Commissioner, unless patently violative of statutory or constitutional mandate, and were beyond the range of judicial oversight. Board of Education v Ambach, 90 A.D.2d 227, 458 N.Y.S.2d 680, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18831 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1982), aff'd, 60 N.Y.2d 758, 469 N.Y.S.2d 669, 457 N.E.2d 775, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 3444 (N.Y. 1983).

Grant of special use permit to college to renovate buildings and lease them to not-for-profit corporation for purposes of offering community instruction in art courses was proper under zoning ordinance authorizing use for bona fide educational purposes despite fact that school would not be approved by board of regents. Imbergamo v Barclay, 77 Misc. 2d 188, 352 N.Y.S.2d 337, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1215 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1973).

The Education Law gives Commissioner of Education authority and responsibility to assist local school districts and Family Court in locating educational placement for brain-damaged children diagnosed as moderately mentally retarded, especially since failing to provide educational opportunity for such children would constitute violation of both State and Federal Constitutions. In re Lofft, 86 Misc. 2d 431, 383 N.Y.S.2d 142, 1976 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2462 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. 1976).

Petitioner failed to establish that her daughter's daily 20-30 minute sessions with classroom teacher in minigroup of 2-3 students was part of regular reading program, and not academic intervention services (AIS), where (1) petition contained only conclusory allegations and another student's AIS report, (2) respondent submitted affidavits from classroom teacher and school principal stating that daily minigroup sessions were AIS, were remedial and were in addition to regular and special education services, and (3) placing petitioner's daughter in AIS in classroom, rather than in pull-out session, was consistent with her individualized education plan, which limited amount of time spent out of general education setting to no more than 20 percent. 2007 Op Comm Ed No. 15,548.

Petitioner failed to show that alternative instruction provided to her son while he was suspended was inadequate and constituted little more than delivery and retrieval of homework assignments where respondent provided student with one-on-one tutor who was scheduled to spend 2 hours per day with him, tutor routinely consulted with classroom teachers regarding student's progress, record revealed that student was often uncooperative and sometimes absented himself from scheduled instruction, and tutor arranged to make up missed instruction when student did not cooperate. 1994 Op Comm Ed No. 13210.

Board of education did not abuse its discretion with respect to its program for gifted students, which was operated by full-time teacher who served students in district's 3 elementary schools, provided projects and activities stressing higher level analytical skills, was integrated into classroom instruction, and was continued at middle school and high school level in which acceleration and enrichment opportunities were available in foreign languages, math, science and English; under CLS Educ § 3602-c, board was not obligated to offer gifted program. 1994 Op Comm Ed No. 13239.

Two-hour evening alternative education program provided for suspended student was substantially equivalent to 5 ½ -hours of classroom instruction where certified teachers conducted program, student-to-teacher ratio was no more than 4-to-one, lead teacher collected daily assignments from student's regular teachers and returned her completed assignments to those teachers for review and grading, and there was regular communication between teachers and student's guidance counselor. 2000 Op Comm Ed No. 14316.

6. Revocation of teacher's license

Commissioner of Education has sufficient authority under Education Law §§ 308, 305 [7] to direct Board of Education not to reinstate payment of teacher until hearing concerning fitness to possess teaching certificate had concluded; authority was not an abuse of discretion; since commissioner's conduct was proper, claimant had no cause of action in tort, and since there was no employment relationship with the State, claimant had no claim to backpay base on contract. Pordum v State, 67 N.Y.2d 770, 500 N.Y.S.2d 506, 491 N.E.2d 679, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 17410 (N.Y. 1986).

Commissioner of Education had authority to promulgate regulations requiring a board of education to base its decision in teacher disciplinary proceeding solely on record before hearing panel, to set forth the results and factual basis for the determination and to forward hearing transcript to Commissioner. Hodgkins v Central School Dist., 48 A.D.2d 302, 368 N.Y.S.2d 891, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9885 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975), app. denied, 42 N.Y.2d 807, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 3809 (N.Y. 1977).

Where teacher had been on leave of absence for five years when he sought reemployment with school district, whereupon commissioner of education enjoined school district from reemploying him pending outcome of hearing as to why teacher's teaching certificate should not be annulled because of criminal conviction, teacher was not suspended and was not entitled to back pay for period prior to hearing. Pordum v Nyquist, 53 A.D.2d 804, 385 N.Y.S.2d 163, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13603 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976), aff'd, 42 N.Y.2d 958, 398 N.Y.S.2d 140, 367 N.E.2d 647, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 2278 (N.Y. 1977).

Commissioner of education's new regulations concerning revocation of teaching certificates were applicable to proceedings pending when regulations became effective, but only to parts of those pending proceedings which had not yet taken place. Pordum v Nyquist, 53 A.D.2d 804, 385 N.Y.S.2d 163, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13603 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976), aff'd, 42 N.Y.2d 958, 398 N.Y.S.2d 140, 367 N.E.2d 647, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 2278 (N.Y. 1977).

Commissioner of Education has sufficient authority to direct city school board not to reinstate teacher until hearing concerning fitness to possess teaching certificate has been concluded; teacher has no tort claim since commissioner's action is proper, and teacher has no claim for back pay based on contract since there is no employment relationship with state. Pordum v State, 112 A.D.2d 717, 492 N.Y.S.2d 204, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 56224 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1985), aff'd, 67 N.Y.2d 770, 500 N.Y.S.2d 506, 491 N.E.2d 679, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 17410 (N.Y. 1986).

Probationary teacher discharged for excessive tardiness was not entitled to declaration of his rights under his teaching license where license itself had not been revoked, and teacher was not entitled to name-clearing hearing on his assertion that he had been stigmatized by charge of his excessive tardiness since he failed to submit any evidence of having been stigmatized. Blum v Quinones, 139 A.D.2d 509, 526 N.Y.S.2d 611, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3749 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. dismissed, 72 N.Y.2d 908, 532 N.Y.S.2d 756, 528 N.E.2d 1229, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 2794 (N.Y. 1988).

On plaintiff's motion to stay enforcement of administrative order which revoked his teaching certificate pursuant to CLS Educ § 305(7) after he was found to have sexually molested his 2 young nieces, plaintiff was unable to show that equities balanced in his favor in that his occupation involved contact with children and, based on his past conduct, he could be found to pose threat to health, safety or welfare of children. Welcher v Sobol, 222 A.D.2d 1001, 636 N.Y.S.2d 421, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13754 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1995).

Declaratory judgment action by plaintiff whose teaching certificate was revoked by Commissioner of Education, alleging that CLS Educ § 305(7) was unconstitutional delegation of legislative power, was properly stayed pending decision in Article 78 proceeding because plaintiff could obtain relief sought (return of his certification) via Article 78 proceeding and, in view of principle of judicial restraint, there was no compelling reason why his constitutional claim should proceed. Welcher v Sobol, 222 A.D.2d 1001, 636 N.Y.S.2d 421, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13754 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1995).

Defendant was not entitled to enter judicial diversion into drug treatment without entry of guilty plea because suspension or revocation of his teaching license was not presumptively mandatory or automatic, but was rather possible and uncertain with intervening circumstances and thus was not an exception circumstance under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 216.05(4)(b); under N.Y. Educ. Law § 3020-a(2)c, defendant was afforded the right to a hearing by the Department of Education. To permit a teacher, entrusted with the safety of children to enter Judicial Diversion without taking a plea of guilty, would have permitted defendant to circumvent the purpose of the Education Law, which was to review each case individually and entrust the Commissioner of the Department of Education with the duties and responsibilities under N.Y. Educ. Law §§ 305, 3020. People v Duffy, 902 N.Y.S.2d 805, 28 Misc. 3d 718, 2010 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1523 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2010).

A principal who falsely represented that he was instructed by his Board of Education not to employ as a teacher one who was of the Catholic faith was deprived of his teacher's license under this section. 39 St Dept 346 (1930).

The fact that a teacher inflicted corporal punishment upon a child is not cause for revocation of her license. The evidence must be conclusive that the corporal punishment inflicted was unreasonable and immoderate. 62 St Dept 172 (1940).

Any person interested in the welfare of the schools in the community in which a teacher is employed has the legal right under subd. 7 of this section to present charges before the Commissioner of Education seeking a determination as to the right of the teacher to continue to teach under her license. 67 St Dept 7 (1946).

7. —Constitutional questions

Permanently certified teacher is entitled to procedural protection of due process before a teaching certificate is revoked. Pordum v Nyquist, 53 A.D.2d 804, 385 N.Y.S.2d 163, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13603 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976), aff'd, 42 N.Y.2d 958, 398 N.Y.S.2d 140, 367 N.E.2d 647, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 2278 (N.Y. 1977).

CLS Educ § 305(7), vesting Commissioner of Education with power to revoke teaching certificates, was not shown to be unconstitutional delegation of legislative power due to its alleged failure to provide standards or guidance for exercising power granted, as limiting words, "upon cause shown to his satisfaction," provided adequate standard. Welcher v Sobol, 222 A.D.2d 1001, 636 N.Y.S.2d 421, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13754 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1995).

In declaratory judgment action by plaintiff whose teaching certificate was revoked by Commissioner of Education, constitutional challenge to CLS Educ § 305(7) was not waived by plaintiff's failure to raise issue at his administrative proceeding where plaintiff challenged statute itself, not merely its application to him; Article 78 proceeding is not proper method for testing constitutional validity of legislative enactment. Welcher v Sobol, 222 A.D.2d 1001, 636 N.Y.S.2d 421, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13754 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1995).

In challenge to constitutionality of Education Law § 305 brought by teacher who was convicted felon, statute did not violate due process by suspending teacher prior to hearing, was not void for vagueness on theory that he was surprised to learn that felony conviction might bar him from teaching in public schools of New York and did not deny equal protection on theory that it was vague in defining misconduct whereas Education Law § 6509 which provides for regulation of other professions establishes clear and detailed procedures. Pordum v Board of Regents, 491 F.2d 1281, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 9978 (2d Cir. N.Y.), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 843, 95 S. Ct. 74, 42 L. Ed. 2d 71, 1974 U.S. LEXIS 2463 (U.S. 1974).

Education Law § 305, subd 7 giving Commissioner of Education power to annul certificate of qualification of school teacher upon cause shown to his satisfaction is not unconstitutionally vague. Pordum v Board of Regents, 357 F. Supp. 222, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13872 (N.D.N.Y. 1973), aff'd, 491 F.2d 1281, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 9978 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1974).

Where commissioner after ordering petitioner to show cause why his teaching certificate should not be canceled set out procedures which would be valid at a hearing of the charges and notified plaintiff of availability of such hearing, petitioner was not denied due process by reason of fact that Education Law § 305, subdivision 7 does not specifically denote due process procedures concerning notice of charges, availability of a hearing, etc. Pordum v Board of Regents, 357 F. Supp. 222, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13872 (N.D.N.Y. 1973), aff'd, 491 F.2d 1281, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 9978 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1974).

8. Transportation contracts

Where, prior to commencement of performance under a public contract awarded by a board of education for transportation of handicapped children, the disqualification of two of the original seven successful bidders had caused a shortfall in the number of vehicles available to fill the original contract requirements, the board was required to make the award for additional vehicles to the next lowest responsible bidders or to reject all bids and consider new proposals or re-bid the contract. Tufaro Transit Co. v Board of Education, 79 A.D.2d 376, 436 N.Y.S.2d 886, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9717 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1981).

A Board of Education usurped the spirit of competitive bidding when it awarded a 100 percent increase to a school bus contractor for provision of transportation services for students, where the requirements contract with the school bus contractor merely contemplated a modest increase in the amount of service. Staten Island Bus, Inc. v Board of Education, 82 A.D.2d 891, 440 N.Y.S.2d 293, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14596 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), aff'd, 54 N.Y.2d 705, 442 N.Y.S.2d 989, 426 N.E.2d 483, 1981 N.Y. LEXIS 2634 (N.Y. 1981).

In an Article 78 proceeding to compel application of Educ Law § 305(14)(a), as amended, to contracts which were extended by agreement prior to the effective date of the amendment, the court correctly refused to modify the agreement under the subsequent statutory enactment where there was no clear expression in the contract that such was the parties' intention. Pioneer Transp. Corp. v Kaladjian, 105 A.D.2d 698, 481 N.Y.S.2d 136, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 20806 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1984).

In actions brought by public school transportation contractors to prohibit board of education from recouping overpayments under annually extended student transportation contracts, court properly denied board's motion to dismiss complaints predicated on failure to submit notice of claim and on one-year statute of limitations under CLS Educ § 3813(2-b) since board informed plaintiffs by letter that it intended to recoup any overpayments of funds, but went on to state that plaintiffs could still present documentation to substantiate any increase in their operating costs; under circumstances, there was no indication that board had made final determination as to amount of overpayments. A.C. Transp., Inc. v Board of Educ., 253 A.D.2d 330, 687 N.Y.S.2d 1, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 710 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1999), app. denied, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1225 (N.Y. May 13, 1999).

Prior contractual practice does not estop the Board of Education of the City of New York from changing requirements in its new proposed contract specifications for the transportation of handicapped children in an effort to reduce school transportation costs as mandated by the Legislature (Education Law, § 305, subd 14, par c) since the city is not required to remain constant in its contract work offering despite changing times and changing needs and it cannot be tied into old contracts simply because "that is the way it used to be done". Varsity Transit, Inc. v Saporita, 98 Misc. 2d 255, 413 N.Y.S.2d 868, 1979 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2071 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), aff'd, 71 A.D.2d 643, 418 N.Y.S.2d 667, 1979 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12868 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1979).

When two transportation contracts, each for a separate route, are let to the same individual and neither of such contracts so let is in excess of $1,000, though the total for both exceeds such sum, such contracts need not necessarily be let at public bid. 1946 Ops St Compt 308.

9. —Bidding process

New York City Board of Education could properly waive bidder's noncompliance with bidding process for school busing contract where instances of noncompliance were mere irregularities of either form or technical nature and almost all instances were "cured" shortly after bids were submitted, so that no bidder was placed at competitive or economic disadvantage at time award was made. Varsity Transit, Inc. v Board of Education, 130 A.D.2d 581, 515 N.Y.S.2d 520, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 46582 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 605, 519 N.Y.S.2d 1029, 513 N.E.2d 1309, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 18238 (N.Y. 1987).

Bid specifications requiring certification by an acceptable insurer of low bidder's ability to secure a performance bond was substantially met where low bidder had submitted a "bid bond" which as a practical matter of customary procedure was issued by the same insurer who would issue the performance bond, and on the same information. Harran Transp. Co. v Board of Education, 71 Misc. 2d 143, 335 N.Y.S.2d 971, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1579 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1972).

Statutes requiring that contract be awarded to lowest bidder provide no range within which close bids are to be considered identical; absent such provision, board of education lacks authority to deem that bids of $1,800 per bus per year and $1,799.99 per bus per year are identical. Re Brookset Bus Corp., Op Comr Ed No. 10328.

It is within discretionary power of board of education to waive what it considers minor formalities in bidding procedures; board may waive timely filing of bid security and accept certified check in lieu of bid bond when so authorized by bidding specifications. Re Acme Bus Corp., Op Comr Ed No. 10375.

Proposal by bidder on a transportation contract containing statement that transportation service would be contingent upon availability of equipment and that bidder reserved right to cancel operations if it deemed them extremely hazardous to passengers, are reservations giving bidder advantage over other bidders, such bid cannot be properly considered and rejection of bid was proper. In addition bid may not provide contract will be subject to renegotiation if change occurs in number of pupils permitted on busses, or increase in pupils causing revisions of transportation schedules. If additional services are required causing annual expenditure of more than $1,500. new bids must be sought through advertisement. Re Rubinstein, 74 St Dept 93 (1953).

A contract for the transportation of school children involving an annual expenditure in excess of $1500 must be awarded to lowest responsible bidder and an unsuccessful bidder cannot lower his bid after the bids are opened. The lowest responsible bidder is to be determined as of the time of the opening of the bids. Re Ecker, – St Dept —, Dec #5960 (1954).

10. — —Advertising for bids

Where a school district enters into a transportation contract in excess of $1,000 without advertising or taking bids as specified in subd. 15 [now subd. 14] of this section, the Comptroller may not audit and authorize the payment of State money based upon such expenditure notwithstanding that such claim and contract has received the approval of the Commissioner of Education. 1946 Ops St Compt 380.

Advertisement for bids is not an offer but constitutes an invitation to the public to make offers. Prior to acceptance of bid, Board of Education, for a sufficient reason, may correct errors or omissions in original advertisement and reject all bids. Original advertisement did not include transportation for kindergarten pupils from the school to the home nor for certain other transportation to school sponsored after-school activities and Board authorized by law to reject all bids and seek new proposals to correct omission. Board of Education, after voters appropriate funds for transportation, determines details of administration such as establishment of routes, bus schedules, making of contracts and these matters are not within province of voters to determine. Re Zeh, 74 St Dept 137 (1953).

11. — —Specifications

Bid specification in a department's solicitation for pupil transportation services which included employee protection provisions (EPPs) was improper because the department failed to refute the facially anticompetitive features of the EPPs, which invited cost-inflation and discouraged new bidders from trying to compete with long-term contract holders; the EPPs required contractors to give priority in hiring to employees who became unemployed because of reassignment of busing contracts. However, the department's decisions to include a per rider per day pricing scheme and certain payment discounts in the bid specifications were upheld. Matter of L&M Bus Corp. v New York City Dept. of Educ., 17 N.Y.3d 149, 927 N.Y.S.2d 311, 950 N.E.2d 915, 2011 N.Y. LEXIS 1453 (N.Y. 2011).

Unsuccessful bidder for food services contract failed to demonstrate that bid specifications contained in Request for Proposals (RFP) required staffing and/or hour requirements with which successful bid was noncompliant, even if it was common for new food service companies to continue existing staff and match existing hours and benefits, where there was no indication that list of then-current collective bargaining agreement and staffing schedule contained in attachment to RFP was intended to be "mandatory" or "required," and assistant superintendent asserted that he had informed all prospective bidders during mandatory walk-through of district facilities that no stipulations regarding benefits, salary or hours were being made, that staffing levels were to be determined by each bidder, and that district was not opposed to individual vendors lowering labor costs "as long as the School District received quality service." 2010 Op Comm Ed No. 16,100, 2010 NY Educ. Dept. LEXIS 94.

"Required Minimum Labor Schedule" contained in district's Request for Proposals, which listed staff positions and hours per day and hourly rates for each position, required bidders to use hourly rate or daily hours listed; commissioner rejected successful bidder's argument that labor schedule in question represented mere staffing schedule of food service workers by job classification, rather than bid specification, since information labeled as "minimum" and "required" did not appear to serve any purpose other than requirements for bids. 2009 Op Comm Ed No. 15,977.

Board is obligated to provide prospective bidders with sufficient information concerning alternatives under consideration and method of determining low bidder to permit intelligent bidding; failure to specify number of buses needed in particular time slots is insufficient since it is unreasonable to expect prospective bidder to calculate responsive bid given on certainty; board may properly solicit alternative bid for seatbelts and award regular transportation contract based on its selection of that alternative. Re Coram Bus Service, Inc., 1984 Op Comr of Education No 11292.

In writing specifications for bids for a contract for the transportation of school children a board of education may specify that it would like the contractor to have a new vehicle, might prefer to have the engine in back rather than front, might prefer certain type of brakes, might prefer certain type of transmission, but any breakdown beyond the general specifications of this type could well become unreasonable. Requirement that bus be new must be considered on an equivalency basis. Where bus has been approved by Public Service Commission, meets requirements of Vehicle and Traffic Law and rules and regulations of Motor Vehicle Bureau, and is in substantially new condition, the owner would not be estopped from bidding even though bus not new. Assuming that Board of Education could specify the gross vehicle rating in the specifications, if a vehicle presented approximated this figure it would have to be considered as equivalent. Re Setter, – St Dept —, Dec #5937 (1954).

12. — —Determining responsible bidder

The lowest bidder on a school transportation contract was disqualified for failing to meet the "responsible bidder" requirements of Gen Mun L § 103 (1) by not filing current financial data along with its bid as required by the school board's specifications where, although the bidder had data on file from previous bids, this information could not compensate for the lack of adequate current records. Harran Transp. Co. v Board of Education, 71 Misc. 2d 139, 335 N.Y.S.2d 465, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1612 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), reh'g denied, 71 Misc. 2d 143, 335 N.Y.S.2d 971, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1579 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1972).

Where bid specification stated neither a specific time nor a specific form in which to file certain required information, low bidder's submission at "eleventh hour" of balance sheet, statements of expenses, statements of income, projected sales and income and historical reports supplied sufficient detail in aggregate so as to "operating statement" as required by bid specifications, and to meet the "responsible bidder" requirements of General Municipal Law § 103, subd 1. NYS2d 971 (1972). Harran Transp. Co. v Board of Education, 71 Misc. 2d 143, 335 N.Y.S.2d 971, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1579 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1972).

Commissioner will not overturn finding of board of education that low bidder is responsible bidder unless it can be shown that there is no substantial basis for board's determination. Re Pic Management Services, Inc., 1984 Op Comr Ed No 11368.

In determining whether a bidder, a bus company for transportation of students, is a responsible bidder, the bidder's criminal record, a criminal investigation of, or an indictment against, the bidder, can be taken into account. When the determination of non-responsibility would adversely affect a bidder's ability to carry on his business, the bidder has a cognizable due process liberty interest and is entitled to notice of the reasons for the municipality's concern over his responsibility and an opportunity to rebut the charges. 1990 Op St Compt 90-48.

Fact that several officers of bidder, bus corporation, are also officers of other bus corporation which board of education has determined to be irresponsible does not justify actions of board of education in denying contract to such bidder in absence of investigation by board of bidder's responsibility and opportunity for bidder to address board's reservations and to demonstrate that it is responsible bidder. Re Brookset Bus Corp., Op Comr Ed No. 10328.

The term "responsibility" in subd. 15 [now subd. 14] is not limited in its meaning to mere financial responsibility but includes within its purview the general ability and capacity of the bidder to perform the work, his facilities and suitability for the task, and those qualities which he must necessarily have in order that he be able to perform the contract in accordance with its terms. 69 St Dept 18 (1948).

Where record shows a history of labor difficulties which caused transportation contractor to be unable to perform a prior contract together with current labor difficulties, the board of education was not arbitrary in determining low bidder not sufficiently responsible and rejecting his bid. Re Dileo, 74 St Dept 83 (1953).

Board of education must determine responsibility of lowest bidder and should not attempt to determine relative responsibility of the bidders. Re Sattig, 74 St Dept 91 (1953).

On basis of record, the age and physical condition of bidder, a past incident involving a driver employed by bidder "approximately a couple of years ago" and use of unsuitable language by bidder were held not sufficient grounds upon which to base a finding of lack of responsibility. District superintendent under Education Law § 3624 approves drivers of school busses and is empowered in a proper case to withhold his approval as to fitness of any driver. Re Sattig, 74 St Dept 91 (1953).

All contracts for the transportation of pupils involving annual expenditure in excess of $1,500, must be awarded to lowest responsible bidder. Responsibility is to be determined by trustee of the district and not by the voters of the district. Mere fact bidder at time of submitting bid does not have equipment to perform contract is immaterial. Determination of responsibility must be based on evidence sufficiently strong to be upheld upon an appeal. Re Scott, 74 St Dept 135 (1953).

13. — —Aggregate amount of bid

Board of education had rational basis to award transportation contracts to lowest responsible bidders on aggregate cost basis rather than individual route cost basis, and unsuccessful bidder's Article 78 petition to annul respondent's determination was therefore properly denied. Acme Bus Corp. v Board of Educ., 236 A.D.2d 535, 653 N.Y.S.2d 684, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1376 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), aff'd, 91 N.Y.2d 51, 666 N.Y.S.2d 996, 689 N.E.2d 890, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3705 (N.Y. 1997).

Appeal by unsuccessful bidder for transportation contracts, alleging that bid specifications required respondent to use aggregate base price to determine lowest bidder and that respondent exercised favoritism and manipulated public bidding process by awarding contracts on basis of individual or unit prices, was dismissed where bid specification was not unambiguous and petitioner (and all other bidders) had fair opportunity to submit bids containing their lowest per unit and aggregate prices. 1997 Op Comm Ed No. 13848.

14. — —Extension of existing contracts

Court cannot compel board of education to reject all bids for provision of transportation services and to continue with existing carrier which, having been underbid, unilaterally insists on extension of existing contract at below-bid figure. Baumann & Sons Buses, Inc. v Board of Education, 46 N.Y.2d 1061, 416 N.Y.S.2d 788, 390 N.E.2d 295, 1979 N.Y. LEXIS 1974 (N.Y. 1979).

Board of education's use of "base plus one" method to fix compensation during student transportation contract extension period (i.e., increase in consumer price index during first year of contract extension period) rather than "base minus one" method (i.e., rise in consumer price index in year preceding expiration of contract) was not improper under CLS Educ § 305(14)(a) and implementing regulation (8 NYCRR § 156.5). A.C. Transp., Inc. v Board of Educ., 253 A.D.2d 330, 687 N.Y.S.2d 1, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 710 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1999), app. denied, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1225 (N.Y. May 13, 1999).

Education Law § 305(14) authorizes a consumer price index increase on an extension of a transportation contract only if it has been established that there has been at least an equivalent increase in the cost of operation of the contractor providing the service; in a situation in which a contract is assigned during the course of a year, it is necessary to compare to the preceding year's cost with the combined cost of the original contractor and the assignee in providing the transportation pursuant to the assigned contract during the most recent year. Re Pupil Transp. Systems, Inc., 1986 Op Comm Ed No. 11586.

Board of education's decision to extend existing transportation contract rather than soliciting new bids was lawful notwithstanding a competing transportation company's notification that it could provide the service for $15,000 less than under the existing contract. In the Matter of Scarsdale Bus Corp., Ops Comr Ed No. 9395.

15. —Challenges by unsuccessful bidders

Court properly dismissed Article 78 petition in which unsuccessful bidder challenged school board's award of 2 pupil transportation contracts as violative of public bidding statutes, on ground that board solicited bids in 2 alternative categories but awarded contracts to lowest responsible bidders in second category and then sought to obtain further price concessions through postbid negotiations, absent showing of "actual" impropriety, unfair dealing, or some other violation of statutory requirements; laws requiring competitive bidding were designed to benefit taxpayers rather than corporate bidders, and thus should be construed with sole reference to public interest. Acme Bus Corp. v Board of Educ., 91 N.Y.2d 51, 666 N.Y.S.2d 996, 689 N.E.2d 890, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3705 (N.Y. 1997).

In actions brought by public school transportation contractors to prohibit Board of Education from recouping overpayments under annually extended student transportation contracts, court properly dismissed board's cross claims predicated on equitable grounds of waiver and estoppel seeking to prevent Education Department from recouping overpayments made to board; defense of estoppel cannot ordinarily be invoked against governmental agency to prevent it from discharging its statutory duties. A.C. Transp., Inc. v Board of Educ., 253 A.D.2d 330, 687 N.Y.S.2d 1, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 710 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1999), app. denied, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1225 (N.Y. May 13, 1999).

Commissioner dismissed appeal in which petitioner, as former provider of transportation and vehicular maintenance services for city school district, challenged respondent's award of contracts to another bus company as (1) respondent had no legal obligation to accept petitioner's contract renewal offer, (2) petitioner was not lowest responsible bidder, (3) respondent's bid specifications were not ambiguous, and (4) respondent complied with its own specifications in awarding contracts. 1999 Op Comm Ed No. 14,170.

Unsuccessful bidder's petition challenging award of competitively bid contract failed to state claim as against corporation that bore same name as limited liability company which was awarded contract, where there was no showing that respondent corporation was party to or in any way involved with contract at issue. 2009 Op Comm Ed No. 15,977.

16. Rules and regulations

A regulation prohibiting teachers from wearing a distinctly religious garb is a reasonable and valid exercise of the power conferred upon the Commissioner. O'Connor v Hendrick, 109 A.D. 361, 96 N.Y.S. 161, 1905 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3560 (N.Y. App. Div. 1905), aff'd, 184 N.Y. 421, 77 N.E. 612, 184 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 421, 1906 N.Y. LEXIS 1382 (N.Y. 1906).

Commissioner of Education had authority to promulgate regulations requiring a board of education to base its decision in teacher disciplinary proceeding solely on record before hearing panel, to set forth the results and factual basis for the determination and to forward hearing transcript to Commissioner. Hodgkins v Central School Dist., 48 A.D.2d 302, 368 N.Y.S.2d 891, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9885 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975), app. denied, 42 N.Y.2d 807, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 3809 (N.Y. 1977).

Commissioner of education's new regulations concerning revocation of teaching certificates were applicable to proceedings pending when regulations became effective, but only to parts of those pending proceedings which had not yet taken place. Pordum v Nyquist, 53 A.D.2d 804, 385 N.Y.S.2d 163, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13603 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976), aff'd, 42 N.Y.2d 958, 398 N.Y.S.2d 140, 367 N.E.2d 647, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 2278 (N.Y. 1977).

The Commissioner of Education has the implied power to make rules within the limits fixed by the Board of Regents. Jokinen v Allen, 15 Misc. 2d 124, 182 N.Y.S.2d 166, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2088 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1958).

Regulations of the Commissioner of Education are construed as quasi-legislative acts which are for the regulation of all future cases and for guidance of all administrative officers whose acts are subordinate to the regulatory authority. Van Allen v McCleary, 27 Misc. 2d 81, 211 N.Y.S.2d 501, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3539 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1961).

The Commissioner of Education not having issued anything which can be considered as a regulation concerning the right of parents of school children to examine all school records pertaining to their children, existence of such a right must be determined under the common law, pursuant to which the interest which a parent has in the school records of his child is sufficient to sustain his right to inspect the records. Van Allen v McCleary, 27 Misc. 2d 81, 211 N.Y.S.2d 501, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3539 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1961).

While the Commissioner of Education has the power to adopt regulations binding upon all school boards, quasi-judicial decisions are binding only on the parties to the appeal decided by him. Scott v Board of Education, 61 Misc. 2d 333, 305 N.Y.S.2d 601, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1063 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1969).

Professional development team formed by respondent board of education, which consisted of school counselor, one teacher designated by teachers' association, and 3 teachers designated by superintendent, failed to comply with 8 NYCRR § 100.2(dd)(3)(i)(a) where there was no parent representative on team, teachers designated by superintendent were not eligible for membership because they were not curriculum specialists, and board admittedly did not undertake reasonable search for qualified candidates from higher education institution. 2006 Op Comm Ed No. 15,381.

Respondent's policy of excluding courses taken at other schools in calculating cumulative GPAs, and only ranking students who attended its schools for 2 years before their senior year, was not arbitrary or capricious, where this policy was chosen to ensure that class ranking was based on students' performance in "a common academic experience"; respondent used weighted grading system and concluded that it could not accurately assess and compare academic rigor of programs at many schools previously attended by students who transferred to its high school. 2003 Op Comm Ed No. 14,892.

Liberal interpretation of regulations of Commissioner of Education is appropriate in appeals when petitioner is not represented by counsel. 1995 Op Comm Ed No. 13298.

8 NYCRR § 135.4(c)(7)(ii)(b)(1), establishing maximum age for participation in interscholastic sports, is absolute and contains no provision for waiver of age limitation by either school district or Commissioner of Education; thus, student whose 19th birthday was August 29, 1996 was ineligible for interscholastic sports during 1996-1997 school year. 1996 Op Comm Ed No. 13655.

Maximum age restriction for participation in interscholastic sports (8 NYCRR § 135.4(c)(7)(ii)(b)(1)) applies to all students, whether disabled or not. 1996 Op Comm Ed No. 13655.

Agency Opinions

1. In general

The date of filing with the Department of Education rather than of approval by the Commissioners determines the effectiveness of a contract as an "existing obligation" under § 3625 and former § 110-j; an extension after the date for "existing obligations" does not make the contract such an obligation for the extended period. 1946 NY Ops Atty Gen Oct 28.

ARTICLE 9 School Buildings and Sites

Section

408-b. Submitting plans and specifications of school buildings with local fire and law enforcement officials

409. School building regulations in relation to health and safety

414. Use of schoolhouse and grounds.

HISTORY:

Add, L 1947, ch 820, eff July 1, 1947, with substance transferred from Article 16.

§ 408-b. Submitting plans and specifications of school buildings with local fire and law enforcement officials

The appropriate authorities for each public and private school building in the state shall submit the most current plans and specifications for each school building under their responsibility to the fire and law enforcement officials in the city, towns or village where the school building is located. The commissioner may adopt such rules and regulations as are necessary and appropriate to implement the provisions of this section to facilitate its purpose of providing quick and easy access to and passage through school buildings should it be necessary for fire or law enforcement reasons. Such regulations shall authorize submittal of simplified plans showing access and passage ways for older schools where original plans or blueprints may not exist or where the school authorities can justify a claim of hardship in meeting the requirements of this section.

HISTORY:

Editor's Notes: Laws 2000, ch 478, § 2, eff March 19, 2001, provides as follows:

§ 2. This act shall take effect on the one hundred eightieth day after it shall have become a law; provided, however, that effective immediately, the addition, amendment and/or repeal of any rule or regulation necessary for the implementation of this act on its effective date are authorized and directed to be made and completed on or before such effective date.

§ 409. School building regulations in relation to health and safety

1. All school buildings of common, union free, central, central high school and city school districts other than city school districts of cities having one hundred twenty-five thousand inhabitants or more and boards of cooperative educational services shall comply with such regulations as the commissioner shall adopt from time to time for the purpose of insuring the health and safety of pupils and staff in relation to proper heating, lighting, ventilation, sanitation and health, fire and accident protection.

2. Notwithstanding the provisions of any other law, rule or regulation, tobacco use shall not be permitted and no person shall use tobacco on school grounds. "School grounds" means any building, structure and surrounding outdoor grounds, including entrances or exits, contained within a public or private pre-school, nursery school, elementary or secondary school's legally defined property boundaries as registered in a county clerk's office.

Prior Law: Former § 409, add, L 1947, ch 820, with substance transferred from former § 452; repealed, L 1951, ch 801, § 3, eff April 13, 1951.

Revision Notes: [1962, ch 124] The Joint Legislative Committee on Fire Laws recommended the amendment of Education Law, § 409, to conform with Education Law, § 807-a. Section 807-a requires annual fire safety inspections of public school buildings in all school districts except in cities having one hundred twenty-five thousand or more inhabitants. The Education Department recently adopted new regulations pursuant to section 409 which were filed with the Department of State on December 27, 1961.

Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller has said, "The new regulations, closing loopholes and strengthening the rules for protection of school children against the dangers of fire, will apply to all public schools in the State in communities of less than 70,000 population. In general the Education Department does not have jurisdiction in this respect in cities over 70,000."

It is important that the power and responsibility of the Commissioner of Education under section 409 be extended to all school districts to which section 807-a applies.

Notes to Decisions

In the absence of a specific grant of power, a village cannot, by a zoning regulation, prevent the location of a school within its borders and thereby prohibit the performance by the school district of the duties imposed upon it by law. County ordinance which prohibits smoking in public meeting place is constitutional as applied to public school used as meeting place after school hours, despite CLS Mun H R § 11 prohibition against local legislation affecting "maintenance, support or administration of educational system" and CLS Educ § 409 provision giving state Commissioner of Education authority to regulate safety and education of students, since local ordinance regulates only activities of general public in noneducational setting; furthermore, non-smoking provisions of CLS Pub Health § 1399-o do not preempt local ordinance since statute was intended by legislature to apply only to buildings available for public use throughout entirety of their business hours. § 414. Use of schoolhouse and grounds.

1. Schoolhouses and the grounds connected therewith and all property belonging to the district shall be in the custody and under the control and supervision of the trustees or board of education of the district. The trustees or board of education may adopt reasonable regulations for the use of such schoolhouses, grounds or other property, all portions thereof, when not in use for school purposes or when the school is in use for school purposes if in the opinion of the trustees or board of education use will not be disruptive of normal school operations, for such other public purposes as are herein provided; except, however, in the city of New York each community school board shall be authorized to prohibit any use of schoolhouses and school grounds within its district which would otherwise be permitted under the provisions of this section. Such regulations shall provide for the safety and security of the pupils and shall not conflict with the provisions of this chapter and shall conform to the purposes and intent of this section and shall be subject to review on appeal to the commissioner of education as provided by law. The trustees or board of education of each district may, subject to regulations adopted as above provided, permit the use of the schoolhouse and rooms therein, and the grounds and other property of the district, when not in use for school purposes or when the school is in use for school purposes if in the opinion of the trustees or board of education use will not be disruptive of normal school operations, for any of the following purposes:

(a) For the purpose of instruction in any branch of education, learning or the arts.

(b) For public library purposes, subject to the provisions of this chapter, or as stations of public libraries.

(c) For holding social, civic and recreational meetings and entertainments, and other uses pertaining to the welfare of the community; but such meetings, entertainment and uses shall be non-exclusive and shall be open to the general public. Civic meetings shall include, but not be limited to, meetings of parent associations and parent-teacher associations.

(d) For meetings, entertainments and occasions where admission fees are charged, when the proceeds thereof are to be expended for an educational or charitable purpose; but such use shall not be permitted if such meetings, entertainments and occasions are under the exclusive control, and the said proceeds are to be applied for the benefit of a society, association or organization of a religious sect or denomination, or of a fraternal, secret or exclusive society or organization other than organizations of veterans of the military, naval and marine service of the United States and organizations of volunteer firefighters or volunteer ambulance workers.

(e) For polling places for holding primaries and elections and for the registration of voters and for holding political meetings. But no meetings sponsored by political organizations shall be permitted unless authorized by a vote of a district meeting, held as provided by law, or, in cities by the board of education thereof. Except in cities, it shall be the duty of the trustees or board of education to call a special meeting for such purpose upon the petition of at least ten per centum of the qualified electors of the district. Authority so granted shall continue until revoked in like manner and by the same body as granted.

(f) For civic forums and community centers. Upon the petition of at least twenty-five citizens residing within the district or city, the trustees or board of education in each school district or city shall organize and conduct community centers for civic purposes, and civic forums in the several school districts and cities, to promote and advance principles of Americanism among the residents of the state. The trustees or board of education in each school district or city, when organizing such community centers or civic forums, shall provide funds for the maintenance and support of such community centers and civic forums, and shall prescribe regulations for their conduct and supervision, provided that nothing herein contained shall prohibit the trustees of such school district or the board of education to prescribe and adopt rules and regulations to make such community centers or civic forums self-supporting as far as practicable. Such community centers and civic forums shall be at all times under the control of the trustees or board of education in each school district or city, and shall be non-exclusive and open to the general public.

(g) For classes of instruction for mentally retarded minors operated by a private organization approved by the commissioner of education.

(h) For recreation, physical training and athletics, including competitive athletic contests of children attending a private, nonprofit school.

(i) To provide child care services during non-school hours, or to provide child care services during school hours for the children of pupils attending the schools of the district and, if there is additional space available, for children of employees of the district, and, if there is further additional space available, the Cobleskill-Richmondville school district shall provide child care services for children ages three and four who need child care assistance due to lack of sufficient child care spaces. Such determination shall be made by each district's board of education, provided that the cost of such care shall not be a school district charge but shall be paid by the person responsible for the support of such child; the local social services district as authorized by law; or by any other public or private voluntary source or any combination thereof.

(j) For licensed school-based health, dental or mental health clinics. (i) For the purposes of this subdivision, the term "licensed school-based health, dental or mental health clinic" means a clinic that is located in a school facility of a school district or board of cooperative educational services, is operated by an entity other than the school district or board of cooperative educational services and will provide health, dental or mental health services during school hours and/or non-school hours to school-age and preschool children, and that is: (1) a health clinic approved under the provisions of chapter one hundred ninety-eight of the laws of nineteen hundred seventy-eight; or (2) another school-based health or dental clinic licensed by the department of health pursuant to article twenty-eight of the public health law; or (3) a school-based mental health clinic licensed or approved by the office of mental health pursuant to article thirty-one of the mental hygiene law; or (4) a school-based mental health clinic licensed by the office for people with developmental disabilities pursuant to article sixteen of the mental hygiene law.

(ii) Health professionals who provide services in licensed school-based health, dental or mental health clinics shall be duly licensed pursuant to the provisions of title eight of this chapter unless otherwise exempted by law and shall be authorized to provide such services to the extent permitted by their respective practice acts.

(iii) Except where otherwise authorized by law, the cost of providing health, dental or mental health services shall not be a charge upon the school district or board of cooperative educational services, and shall be paid from federal, state or other local funds available for such purpose. Building space used for such a clinic shall be excluded from the rated capacity of the school building for the purpose of computing building aid pursuant to subdivision six of section thirty-six hundred two of this chapter or aid pursuant to subdivision five of section nineteen hundred fifty of this chapter.

(iv) Nothing in this paragraph shall be construed to justify a cause of action for damages against a school district or a board of cooperative educational services by reason of acts of negligence or misconduct by a school-based health, dental or mental health clinic or such clinic's officers or employees.

(k) For graduation exercises held by not-for-profit elementary and secondary schools, provided that no religious service is performed.

The board of education in the city of New York may delegate the authority to judge the appropriateness for uses other than school purposes to community school boards.

2. The trustees or board of education shall determine the terms and conditions for such use which may include rental at least in an amount sufficient to cover all resulting expenses for the purposes of paragraphs (a), (b), (c), (d), (e), (g), (i), (j) and (k) of subdivision one of this section. Any such use, pursuant to paragraphs (a), (c), (d), (h) and (j) of subdivision one of this section, shall not allow the exclusion of any district child solely because said child is not attending a district school or not attending the district school which is sponsoring such use or on which grounds the use is to occur.

1. In general

Since this section places title to school property under the custody and control of the Board of Education in the trustees, the trustees can satisfy the requirements of § 348 of the Village Law by signing a petition for annexation of part of the school property, lying in an adjoining town, to the village wherein the remaining part of the school property is already situated. Union Free School Dist. v Town Board of Greenburgh, 36 Misc. 2d 223, 232 N.Y.S.2d 456, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2760 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1962), aff'd, 19 A.D.2d 864, 245 N.Y.S.2d 314, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6370 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1963).

On appeal for alleged violations of CLS Educ § 414 and district policy, fact that individual respondents and board of education permitted nonschool organization to use school facilities for one day, without formal board approval, was de minimus and inconsequential. 2009 Op Comm Ed No. 15,898.

An appeal to the Commissioner of Education on the issue of whether the holding of an election of members to a Citizen's Nominating Committee, a community based organization, at the same place and time as the annual district meeting is a form of electioneering, is dismissed for the failure to name the board of education of the school district as a party in the appeal, as it is their function to determine how and when school district property should be used. Petitioner also was in error in naming the Commissioner of Education as a defendant in the action, as it is the function of the school board, not the Commissioner of Education, to adopt a policy for the school district's use of school buildings. Appeal of Fitzpatrick, 1990 Op Comr Educ No. 12408.

2. Discretion and authority of board

Inasmuch as a board of education has discretionary power to control the use of schoolrooms within its district, it has concomitant power to make reasonable classifications concerning the extent to which schools will be available for nonschool purposes; where petitioners wish to establish bible clubs in public high schools, it is their burden to show that the board of education, by its determination to exclude petitioners' religious activities from the schools, has exercised its discretion differently from the requests of other organizations of a similar character, and where petitioners have neither alleged nor shown that any other organization similar in character to their proposed bible clubs has been granted permission to use public school facilities for religious purposes, the determination of the board of education was neither arbitrary nor capricious. Trietley v Board of Education, 65 A.D.2d 1, 409 N.Y.S.2d 912, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12880 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1978).

A court cannot substitute its judgment or discretion for that of a Board of Education in permitting or denying use of school buildings for meetings at which admission is to be charged, if permitting a particular meeting seems to be within the power of the board under this section. Dohrenwend v Board of Education, 227 N.Y.S.2d 505, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4119 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1962).

CLS Educ § 414 does not vest unbridled discretion in school board or in Commissioner of Education to grant or deny permits for use of school facilities by religious organizations where organizations' activities are primarily for their own benefit; instead, statute grants no discretion since such permits may simply not be issued. Deeper Life Christian Fellowship, Inc. v Sobol, 948 F.2d 79, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 25390 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1991).

Decisions by the board of education concerning the use of the district's buildings and the assignment of pupils which are reasonable will not be reversed by the Commissioner of Education. Re Spinowitz, Op Comr Ed No. 9719.

Decisions to discontinue use of school building or to create new attendance zones are within discretion of board of education as long as decision has rational basis. Re Austerlitz, Op Comr Ed No. 10215.

Decisions concerning use of school facilities lie within discretion of board of education and will be sustained if they have rational basis. Re DiPeppi, Op Comr Ed No. 10222.

Where board of education makes determination of criteria to be applied in use of school buildings, it is duty and responsibility of board to formally adopt policy reflecting such criteria pursuant to legislative mandate contained in CLS Educ § 414(1); where board determines not to allow Sunday use of school buildings where requested use involves activity in school building, board should deny all such requests, and its failure to do so can only be viewed as arbitrary, as board of education should administer its policy in consistent manner. Re Appeal of Shakow, 1987 Op Comm Ed No. 11839.

An appeal to the Commissioner of Education on the issue of whether the holding of an election of members to a Citizen's Nominating Committee, a community based organization, at the same place and time as the annual district meeting is a form of electioneering, is dismissed for the failure to name the board of education of the school district as a party in the appeal, as it is their function to determine how and when school district property should be used. Petitioner also was in error in naming the Commissioner of Education as a defendant in the action, as it is the function of the school board, not the Commissioner of Education, to adopt a policy for the school district's use of school buildings. Appeal of Fitzpatrick, 1990 Op Comr Educ No. 12408.

Respondent board of education did not violate 8 NYCRR § 100.11 by voting to establish day care center at high school over opposition from school-based planning team; § 100.11, which requires board to consult certain individuals when developing plan for school-based planning and shared decisionmaking, does not require board to obtain approval of school-based planning team before implementing decisions, and mere fact that many students and faculty members opposed opening of center was not basis for Commissioner of Education to overturn respondent's decision. 1995 Op Comm Ed No. 13295.

The control and custody of public school buildings is vested by law in the board of education and applications for use of such buildings outside of school hours should be made to such board. 1 Op Counsel Educ Dept No. 58 (1952).

Even where the proposed use is sanctioned by this section a Board of Education is vested with discretionary powers to withhold its consent, and unless there is convincing proof of an abuse of discretion the decision of the Board will not be set aside. 43 St Dept 168 (1933).

Within the limits prescribed by this section, a Board of Education has discretion in granting the use of buildings for civic purposes. No organization is entitled to use the buildings merely because it requests it for it is always discretionary with the Board whether or not the use is to be granted. Re Teachers' Union, Local 555 (UPW), 73 St Dept 41 (1952).

3. Scope of statute

CLS Educ § 414 is applicable when school is either not in use for school purposes or when school is in use for school purposes but its use for any of categorized purposes will not be disruptive of normal school operations; statute does not govern use of school property for school uses. Jacobson by Jacobson v East Williston Union Free Sch. Dist., 170 Misc. 2d 93, 649 N.Y.S.2d 1002, 1996 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 405 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1996).

§ 414 does not confer authority to lease real property of a school district; real property of a school district may be leased only as permitted by § 402 subd 2. 1960 Ops St Compt File #927.

This section does not authorize a school district to lease some of its property to a town or anyone else except under stated circumstances and for specified purposes. 1961 Ops St Compt #607.

4. Constitutional questions

Plaintiff qualified under this section of the Education Law as an organization entitled to use school facilities out of school hours and it was unconstitutional and improper for the defendant to deny the use of the facilities to the plaintiff solely because of the controversial views that had previously been expressed by the scheduled performer. East Meadow Community Concerts Ass'n v Board of Education, 19 N.Y.2d 605, 278 N.Y.S.2d 393, 224 N.E.2d 888, 1967 N.Y. LEXIS 1785 (N.Y. 1967).

A school district cannot permit the use of school buildings by certain organizations and deny such use to other similar organizations and hence, a trial of factual issues was ordered in a proceeding to review a decision of the Commissioner of Education which upheld the right of the school district to deny use of school buildings to an organization which was of a communistic nature. Ellis v Allen, 4 A.D.2d 343, 165 N.Y.S.2d 624, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4707 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957), app. dismissed, 4 N.Y.2d 693, 171 N.Y.S.2d 86, 148 N.E.2d 302, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1291 (N.Y. 1958), app. denied, 4 N.Y.2d 674, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1374 (N.Y. 1958).

School board superintendent acting as a receiver for a high scholl and junior high school violated N.Y. Educ. Law §§ 414(1)(c) and 211-f(1)(b)(iv) by excluding reporters' cameras from a public meeting held at a school because she opened that non-public forum to the public to discuss a matter of public interest, and although the schools were the subject of the meeting, the property was not being used for school purposes. News 12 Co. v Hempstead Pub. Schs. Bd. of Educ., 52 Misc. 3d 479, 31 N.Y.S.3d 788, 2016 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1411 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2016).

Where a school board superintendent acting as a receiver for a high school and junior high school violated the law by excluding reporters' cameras from a public meeting held at a school, petitioner newspapers were not entitled to relief with respect to the board because the superintendent, as receiver, had the authority to call the meeting without the board's consent. News 12 Co. v Hempstead Pub. Schs. Bd. of Educ., 52 Misc. 3d 479, 31 N.Y.S.3d 788, 2016 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1411 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2016).

School board's rule that school premises should not be used by any group for religious purposes was unconstitutionally applied to deny church access to school premises, when not in use for school purposes, to exhibit film dealing with family and child-rearing issues where (1) school board permitted use of school property for social or civic purposes, (2) there was no suggestion that film would not constitute such use, and (3) stated reason for denial of permission was that film appeared to be church related; board's denial could not be justified on grounds that church use of school property would lead to threats of public unrest and violence, or that purpose of board's rules was to promote interest of public in general rather than sectarian or other private interests. Lamb's Chapel v Center Moriches Union Free Sch. Dist., 508 U.S. 384, 113 S. Ct. 2141, 124 L. Ed. 2d 352, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 4019 (U.S. 1993).

For purposes of free speech guarantee of First Amendment, school district may legally preserve property under its control for use to which property is dedicated, and district need not permit use of its property outside school hours for any after-hours uses that are permitted on such property by CLS Educ § 414. Lamb's Chapel v Center Moriches Union Free Sch. Dist., 508 U.S. 384, 113 S. Ct. 2141, 124 L. Ed. 2d 352, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 4019 (U.S. 1993).

For school board to permit its school property to be used by church to exhibit film dealing with family and child-rearing issues is not violation of establishment of religion clause of First Amendment—that is, such action has secular purpose, does not have principal or primary effect of advancing or inhibiting religion, and does not foster excessive entanglement with religion—where (1) showing of film would not be during school hours nor sponsored by school, and would be open to public, and (2) school board's school property had repeatedly been used by wide variety of private organizations. Lamb's Chapel v Center Moriches Union Free Sch. Dist., 508 U.S. 384, 113 S. Ct. 2141, 124 L. Ed. 2d 352, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 4019 (U.S. 1993).

School district could not rely on CLS Educ § 414, its own community use policy, and past practice to bar use of school auditorium for religious fund-raising event where district had, through past practice, permitted different, allegedly less "controversial," but openly religious fund- raising event; district's denial violated free speech clause and equal protection clause. Travis v Owego-Apalachin School Dist., 927 F.2d 688, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 3502 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1991).

In church's action against school board over board's refusal to allow church to use school facilities during nonschool hours for performance of magic show which was to include religious service, church's claim that CLS Educ Law § 414 is unconstitutionally void for vagueness is denied summarily, where church argued that statute vests school officials with subjective ad hoc authority to determine what constitutes "religious purpose" and "religious services and religious instruction," because those terms have common meaning such that people of ordinary intelligence can understand what conduct is prohibited Trinity United Methodist Parish v Board of Educ., 907 F. Supp. 707, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17245 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

CLS Educ § 414(1)(a)-(j) creates limited public forum in public school facilities for First Amendment purposes. Full Gospel Tabernacle v Community Sch. Dist. 27, 979 F. Supp. 214, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14522 (S.D.N.Y. 1997), aff'd, 164 F.3d 829, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 885 (2d Cir. 1999).

5. Sale or lease of property

This section, in authorizing the trustees of a board of education to allow school property to be used for certain specified purposes out of school hours, confers no authority to lease or rent out a school building or school property, and real property of a school district may be leased only as permitted by § 402 subd. 2. 1960 Ops St Compt File #927.

6. Revocation of permission

School boards's revocation of teachers association's right to use office space in school buildings is subject to arbitration, since arbitration sought lies within permissible scope of Taylor Law (Civ. S., art. 14) and issue tendered falls within ambit of broad arbitration clause contained in collective bargaining agreement between parties. Board of Education v Connetquot Teachers Asso., 60 N.Y.2d 840, 470 N.Y.S.2d 132, 458 N.E.2d 373, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 3514 (N.Y. 1983).

While the Legislature did not confer upon the Board the power to revoke a permit once issued, save in the single instance of the use of schoolhouses for certain political purposes under sub. 5 [now sub (e)] nevertheless, the Board has the power to reserve to itself the right of revocation by its regulations and by an express reservation in the permit issued, subject only to a judicial review of the reasonableness of its exercise of such reservation. Cannon v Towner, 70 N.Y.S.2d 303, 188 Misc. 955, 1947 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2388 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1947).

The Board of Education has no power, express or implied, to revoke a license granted under sub. 4 [now sub (d)] of this section and, therefore, without express authority or at the very least a reservation of a right or power to cancel or revoke attached as a condition to the original permit, cannot revoke a license to use a public school auditorium for a musical concert to be given by an artist on the ground that the artist is a Communist. Cannon v Towner, 70 N.Y.S.2d 303, 188 Misc. 955, 1947 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2388 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1947).

Where teachers' union had sought and been granted permission for use of school building for various meetings for ensuing year and then Board of Education revoked such permit, teachers' union would not be prohibited from holding first meeting where meeting had been advertised and a monetary consideration contracted for. Re Teachers' Union, Local 555 (UPW), 73 St Dept 41 (1952).

7. Particular uses and organizations

City school board resolution barring employers who discriminate on basis of sexual orientation or other reasons from school site student recruitment was not overridden by CLS Educ § 2-a, even though statute specially protects military recruiters by granting them equal access to such recruitment, and resolution was directed largely at military's open, long-standing and uncontroverted discriminatory policies, since statute was not intended to divest local school boards of their traditional discretionary powers to adopt protocols barring stated discriminatory policies and practices; use of phrase "on the same basis" in statute is synonymous with "equal access," not unqualified access. Lloyd v Grella, 83 N.Y.2d 537, 611 N.Y.S.2d 799, 634 N.E.2d 171, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 705 (N.Y. 1994).

Plaintiffs, parents of infant who resided within school district but who attended private school, were not entitled to preliminary injunction directing school district to allow infant to attend district school's Halloween party; fact that party might fall within one or more of listed categories under CLS Educ § 414 for which school property may be used did not preclude gathering from being held exclusively as school function or program limited to students of district or to students of particular district school. Jacobson by Jacobson v East Williston Union Free Sch. Dist., 170 Misc. 2d 93, 649 N.Y.S.2d 1002, 1996 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 405 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1996).

Commissioner of Education dismissed allegation that public statements made by principal and superintendent, on behalf of village school district and police chief, violated district policy regarding use of school facilities and personnel for political activity, where petitioners did not submit reliable evidence to support their claims but relied solely on newspaper articles, which are not proof of facts stated therein, and it was not shown that alleged statements had any detrimental impact or were not protected speech. 2001 Op Comm Ed No. 14,739ec.

Board of education did not violate Establishment Clause by permitting school personnel to play song "Where Were You When the World Stopped Turning?" over school's public address system as part of September 11 commemorative events which included moments of silence coinciding with times that planes hit World Trade Center and towers collapsed; song in question was neither benediction nor religious exercise, objective observer would view it as expressing wide range of emotions experienced on September 11, 2001 and, while songwriter may have professed his own religious belief, his lyrics did not suggest that his belief was or should be universal. 2005 Op Comm Ed No. 15,159.

Incidental benefit to private interests does not invalidate contractual provisions that are otherwise public in nature, and use of school district property to store buses owned by private corporation did not violate State Constitution Article 8, § 1, where buses were used solely to transport schoolchildren within district, and where storage of buses elsewhere would have resulted in greater cost to district. Re Weiss, 1979 Op Comr Ed #10142.

Valid school purpose for taking of student photographs was not found where photographs taken on school premises were not limited to students in attendance at schools of the district but open to family, friends and relatives. Re Fusare, Op Comr Ed No. 10244.

Although teacher had permission of building principal to use school premises and equipment to produce film for commercial purposes, such use violates Art VIII, § 1 of Const. and Educ. § 414 and teacher may not estop school board for disclaiming principal's unauthorized and illegal approval for such use. Re Application of Board of Education, 1982 Op Comr Ed #10799.

Appeal which challenged respondent's decision to establish day care center at its high school pursuant to CLS Educ § 414(1) would be dismissed where, contrary to petitioners' contentions, housing day care center at school would not diminish space available for classes and day care was needed, and where center was being funded by 2 granted received by respondent. 1995 Op Comm Ed No. 13295.

Board of education's resolution allowing "peer" presentations about acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) outside regular school day with parental permission did not violate 8 NYCRR § 135.3 since there was no indication that such presentations replaced district's regular AIDS instruction or did anything more than augment district's AIDS curriculum. 1996 Op Comm Ed No. 13590.

The use of school buildings may be granted to the American Legion but upon such terms, including the presence of a janitor, which the Board of Education may impose. 1 Op Counsel Educ Dep't No 42 (1951).

School districts have power to assist in the effectuation of matters undertaken by the Defense Council by permitting use of facilities and school buildings may be used outside of school hours for activities of a local Civil Defense Council. It seems advisable that a contract be made between the school district and the defense council with reference to additional costs of maintenance and providing additional public liability insurance protection, where required. 1 Op Counsel Educ Dept No. 58 (1952).

8. —Concerts

This section charges the Board of Education with the duty of managing and caring for the property of the school district, and the Board may in its discretion allow the use of school buildings for concert purposes and may adopt reasonable rules and regulations in connection therewith. East Meadow Community Concerts Ass'n v Board of Education, 49 Misc. 2d 643, 268 N.Y.S.2d 221, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2153 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), app. dismissed, 25 A.D.2d 850, 269 N.Y.S.2d 542, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4365 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1966).

9. —Dances

The use of State school property for a school dance for the students at said school was proper. Trent v International R. Co., 249 A.D. 17, 290 N.Y.S. 915, 1936 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5022 (N.Y. App. Div. 1936), aff'd, 273 N.Y. 622, 7 N.E.2d 725, 273 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 622, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1348 (N.Y. 1937).

The Board of Education of Rochester, in permitting the use of public schools for private dancing lessons, is performing a state function and such action cannot be enjoined under § 51 of the General Municipal Law. Schnepel v Board of Education, 89 N.Y.S.2d 793, 195 Misc. 371, 1949 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2341 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1949), aff'd, 276 A.D. 943, 94 N.Y.S.2d 838, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5225 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

10. —Elections

Custodians of New York City's schools could not recover from the city for extra services performed by them when the schools were used as polling places on registration, primary, and general election days. No contract could be implied for the payment of such services where the custodians knew of the Board of Education resolutions making the schools available without any compensation therefor. Alves v New York, 306 N.Y. 813, 118 N.E.2d 822, 306 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 813, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 1145 (N.Y. 1954).

It is not compulsory that a board of education permit the use of a school as a polling place for election purposes. 1968 Ops St Compt File #1037.

Reasonable expenses incurred by a school district attributable to the use of school property for election purposes may (in the County of Nassau) be charged to and paid by the county, pursuant to a prior agreement with the board of elections. 1968 Ops St Compt File #1037.

An appeal to the Commissioner of Education on the issue of whether the holding of the election of members to a Citizen's Nominating Committee, a community based organization, at the same place and time as the annual district meeting is a form of electioneering, is dismissed, not only on the grounds that the petitioner failed to name the board of education as a party, but also on the merits. Petitioner does not raise any evidence to support the claim that the holding of the election by the Citizen's Nominating Committee for the annual meeting is a form of electioneering. There is no indication in the record that members of the committee conducting the election displayed placards, buttons, or flyers concerning candidates or propositions being voted upon at the district meeting or in any way attempting to influence votes with respect to the school district's annual meeting. Only this type of action by a member of the committee occurring within 100 feet of a polling place would constitute prohibitive electioneering. Neither the mere presence of members of a nominating committee on school property during the school election, nor the simultaneous conduct of an election of members of a nominating committee constitutes prohibited electioneering. Appeal of Fitzpatrick, 1990 Op Comr Educ No. 12408.

11. —Fraternal, secret or exclusive societies

There being no persuasive evidence that a County Committee for Freedom Riders was a "fraternal, secret, or exclusive society or organization," it could not properly be denied use of a school building for a fund raising meeting on that ground. Dohrenwend v Board of Education, 227 N.Y.S.2d 505, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4119 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1962).

12. —Funds disbursed for educational or charitable purpose

The test prescribed in subd. 4 [now sub (d)] of this section, with respect to permitting use of school buildings for meetings to which admission fees will be charged, is not whether the licensee itself is an educational or charitable organization, but whether the funds will be disbursed for an educational or charitable purpose. Dohrenwend v Board of Education, 227 N.Y.S.2d 505, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4119 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1962).

Admission fees charged those attending a meeting in a school building were to be used for a "charitable" purpose, so that the Board of Education could permit use of the school building for such meeting, where they were to be used for defense of persons facing criminal charges as the result of taking part in so-called "freedom rides." Dohrenwend v Board of Education, 227 N.Y.S.2d 505, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4119 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1962).

School district may properly permit operation of flea market on school grounds on Saturdays, where flea market is operated by professional management company which pays Parent-Teacher Association 25 percent of gross income received from fees paid by vendors of merchandise for stall space in school yard, and where non-profit organizations and local charities are permitted to participate in flea market without payment of fee, and as school in whose yard flea market takes place received substantial sum of money for use of yard. Re Appeal of Erdberg, 1987 Op. Comm. Ed. No. 11822.

Board of education policy allowing outside organization to charge admission fee during use of school facilities, with fees collected to be used for educational or charitable purposes, was not improper where there was no evidence of any specific incident wherein such policy was not followed. 1996 Op Comm Ed No. 13643.

13. —Private corporations

"Pouring rights" contract between respondent board of education and Coca-Cola Company violated CLS NY Const Art VIII § 1 to extent it required school district personnel to act as agents of Coca-Cola by distributing Coca-Cola products free of charge to students, or permitted redemption of receipts for pre-sold beverage products on school property or by school staff for fundraising groups; such contractual provisions promoted private benefit without proper school district purpose or legislative authorization. 2000 Op Comm Ed No. 14,489.

Where photographs are taken for school purpose such as yearbook or student record, they may be taken on school premises during school hours, and school personnel may assist in process, but though commercial photographer taking such photographs may advise students of availability of copies for purchase, school personnel may not participate during school hours or on school grounds in handling any orders or collecting any charges. In re Richard A. Puls, Sr., Op Comr Ed #9627.

Education Law § 414 is not applicable to contract between board of education and school bus company providing for storage of buses and fuel on unused school property. Re Weiss, 1979 Op Comr Ed #10142.

School district facilities may be used for uses pertaining to welfare of community, and under such provision facilities may be made available to private corporation which operates nuclear power facility for training sessions concerning safety at nuclear plant which pertained to welfare of community as whole and are held to disseminate information about plans for dealing with emergency at power plant where such sessions are non-exclusive and open to public. Re Alcorn, 1984 Op Comr Ed No 11365.

School district may properly permit operation of flea market on school grounds on Saturdays, where flea market is operated by professional management company which pays Parent-Teacher Association 25 percent of gross income received from fees paid by vendors of merchandise for stall space in school yard, and where non-profit organizations and local charities are permitted to participate in flea market without payment of fee, and as school

While a school district may purchase and install a coin-operated photocopy machine for use in the school library, it may not permit the installation of such machine by an outside commercial enterprise. 1964 Ops St Compt #202.

It would not be permissible to establish office facilities within a school building for a teachers' credit union. 1969 Ops St Compt File #58.

A school district may not lease or license unused real property to a private corporation for the purposes of a boys' club. 1969 Ops St Compt File #657.

The purposes for which a Board of Education is authorized to use the school building outside of school hours do not include the leasing of an unused school building and grounds to a private corporation. 64 St Dept 222 (1942).

14. Recreation programs

Commissioner dismissed an appeal alleging that individual respondents and board of education violated CLS Educ § 414 and district policy by permitting amateur athletic organization to use district facilities because organization engaged in discriminatory practices with respect to its selection practices, where petitioners claimed that organization selected players for its club based on prior year's participation rather than performance at tryouts but they did not state or establish that this practice resulted in discrimination based on age, color, creed, sex, religion or any other protected basis, while respondents submitted email from coach of organization, who stated that out of 45 prospective players who tried out for club, all were placed on team and some teams were not able to fill their rosters. 2009 Op Comm Ed No. 15,898.

A municipality which is operating a recreation project in a public school and receiving state aid therefor under the provisions of the so-called State Youth Commission Act may not require the payment of a fee as a condition to the enjoyment of or participation in the facilities or activities of the project. 1952 Ops St Compt 266.

A school district, jointly with a village, may equip, operate and maintain a joint playground or recreation center upon unneeded real property of the school district and apportion the cost as desired, provided that a lease of the school district real property is neither expressly nor impliedly involved. There is no requirement that such proposition be submitted to referendum. 1965 Ops St Compt File #216.

Such residents may not be excluded from a municipal recreation program which uses school facilities permissively. 1967 Ops St Compt File #233.

A school district board of education may not charge a rental for the use of school playground facilities by a town recreation commission during out of school hours. The granting of permission to so use school property is discretionary with the board. A fee may be charged to cover out-of-pocket expenses attributable to such use. 1974 Ops St Compt File #1104.

Residents of a school district living in a municipality other than the one with which the school district has an agreement to operate a recreational program for the benefit thereof may be excluded from participation in such program even though school district facilities are utilized. 1967 Ops St Compt File #233.

15. —Religious activities

In a taxpayer's action to restrain the Board of Education of New York City from permitting school buildings to be used as assembly places for racial and religious groups and to restrain the reading of passages from the Bible in public schools, a defense is not insufficient in law which states in substance that the assailed gatherings of denominational groups are not permitted for the inculcation of any of the tenets of any religious denomination but solely for the purpose of conducting ethical, educational, and cultural discourses and lectures for the moral uplift of the pupils in the public schools connected with such groups. Lewis v Board of Education, 285 N.Y.S. 164, 157 Misc. 520, 1935 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1698 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1935), modified, 247 A.D. 106, 286 N.Y.S. 174, 1936 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8193 (N.Y. App. Div. 1936).

Subd. 4 of this section [now sub (d)] is not applicable to an action by an individual and a corporation for an injunction restraining the State Commissioner of Education from permitting a private religious educational institution, conducted under the direction and control of a denominational religious organization in which denominational doctrines are taught, to use the auditorium of a State education building for an illustrated lecture to be delivered by a Jesuit missionary and to charge admission fees to be applied for the benefit of said institution. New York League for Separation, etc. v Graves, 10 N.Y.S.2d 142, 170 Misc. 196, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1556 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1939).

Where no direct individual injury peculiar to plaintiff is shown, no action against the Commissioner of Education can be maintained for permitting a lecture to be delivered by a Jesuit missionary in a state education building. New York League for Separation, etc. v Graves, 10 N.Y.S.2d 142, 170 Misc. 196, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1556 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1939).

School board's rule that school premises should not be used by any group for religious purposes was unconstitutionally applied to deny church access to school premises, when not in use for school purposes, to exhibit film dealing with family and child-rearing issues where (1) school board permitted use of school property for social or civic purposes, (2) there was no suggestion that film would not constitute such use, and (3) stated reason for denial of permission was that film appeared to be church related; board's denial could not be justified on grounds that church use of school property would lead to threats of public unrest and violence, or that purpose of board's rules was to promote interest of public in general rather than sectarian or other private interests. Lamb's Chapel v Center Moriches Union Free Sch. Dist., 508 U.S. 384, 113 S. Ct. 2141, 124 L. Ed. 2d 352, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 4019 (U.S. 1993).

For school board to permit its school property to be used by church to exhibit film dealing with family and child-rearing issues is not violation of establishment of religion clause of First Amendment—that is, such action has secular purpose, does not have principal or primary effect of advancing or inhibiting religion, and does not foster excessive entanglement with religion—where (1) showing of film would not be during school hours nor sponsored by school, and would be open to public, and (2) school board's school property had repeatedly been used by wide variety of private organizations. Lamb's Chapel v Center Moriches Union Free Sch. Dist., 508 U.S. 384, 113 S. Ct. 2141, 124 L. Ed. 2d 352, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 4019 (U.S. 1993).

School district discriminated against private Christian organization that operated club for children ages 6 to 12, in violation of Free Speech Clause, where its policy of opening its school building to public use for various purposes excluded club from meeting after hours at school because club was religious in nature; court rejected district's argument that elementary school children might perceive that school was endorsing club and feel coerced to participate because club's activities took place on school grounds. Good News Club v Milford Cent. Sch., 533 U.S. 98, 121 S. Ct. 2093, 150 L. Ed. 2d 151, 2001 U.S. LEXIS 4312 (U.S. 2001).

Church's free speech rights were not violated by school district's denial of their application for permit to hold religious worship services in public school auditorium, even though CLS Educ Law § 414 allows auditorium to be used for "instruction in any branch of education, learning, or arts" or for "social, civic, and recreational meetings . . . and other uses pertaining to welfare of community," where district policy implementing § 414 allows discussion and distribution of material which contains religious viewpoint but prohibits religious worship services, because exclusion of religious worship services does not amount to unconstitutional viewpoint discrimination. Full Gospel Tabernacle v Community Sch. Dist. 27, 979 F. Supp. 214, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14522 (S.D.N.Y. 1997), aff'd, 164 F.3d 829, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 885 (2d Cir. 1999).

Refusal of board of education to allow distribution of religious literature on school grounds was not improper. Re Rathjen, Op Comr Ed No. 11085.

It is improper for school district to ban use of its facilities for permitted topics merely because presentation would be from religious perspective. 1996 Op Comm Ed No. 13643.

The use of a school building by church societies and denominational organizations for entertainment and occasions where admission fees are charged and used for the benefit of such churches or organizations is clearly a violation of this section. 41 St Dept 423 (1931).

A public school may not be used for a baccalaureate exercise service which has a program following a general pattern of a religious service. The fact that more than one religious denomination was represented on the program would not change its religious character. Re Dargin, 72 St Dept 27 (1952).

16. — —Prayer meetings and Bible study

Inasmuch as section 414 of the Education Law provides that schoolhouses, the grounds connected therewith, and all property belonging to a school district shall be in the custody and under the control and supervision of the board of education of the district, and the board may adopt reasonable regulations and permit the use of schoolhouses and schoolrooms for enumerated purposes if, in the opinion of the board, such use will not be disruptive of normal school operations, a board of education has no authority to grant a request by high school students and a member of the clergy to form bible clubs in public high schools since the express purpose of the clubs is the accommodation of the religious interests of its members and the provision of moral and spiritual assistance to them and religious purposes are not included in the enumerated purposes for which a school may be used under section 414. Trietley v Board of Education, 65 A.D.2d 1, 409 N.Y.S.2d 912, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12880 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1978).

There is no violation of constitutional rights of free exercise of religion, freedom of speech, freedom of association, or equal protection where board of education denied request of student group to conduct voluntary communal prayer meetings in classroom immediately before school-day commenced. Brandon v Board of Educ., 635 F.2d 971, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 12201 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1980), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1123, 102 S. Ct. 970, 71 L. Ed. 2d 109, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 2953 (U.S. 1981).

17. — —Holiday displays and celebrations

Commissioner dismissed claim that display of candles in high school windows promoted Christianity in violation of First and Fourteenth Amendments, where petitioners merely conjectured that candle placed in window at Christmas constitutes religious symbol, and evidence established that candles displayed in high school windows were part of nonreligious fundraising event in which monetary donors to scholarship fund sponsored candles in memory of family members, students, teachers or other loved ones. 2005 Op Comm Ed No. 15,164.

The presentation of Handel's Messiah and two religious plays or pageants at Christmas time does not necessarily constitute such religious instruction as would bar the use of public school buildings. Re Cromwell, 72 St Dept 166 (1952).

18. —Political meetings

Political committee was entitled to an order permitting its use of a municipal center for its regular meetings and for attorney's fees and costs after the town supervisor instituted a town policy prohibiting "political parties from having meetings on town-owned property" as prohibited by the Education Law because the supervisor's content-based reasons for restricting the committee's speech, to wit, his disagreement with the committee's decision to expel disloyal members, rendered it an unconstitutional limitation on the latter's exercise of its First Amendment rights, and the supervisor's restriction was patently unreasonable as it sought to suppress expression merely because he opposed the committee's view. Marbletown Democratic Comm. v Parete, 69 Misc. 3d 836, 132 N.Y.S.3d 269, 2020 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 6392 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2020).

Analysis

1. In general
2. Property subject to control
3. Sale or lease of property
4. Particular uses and organizations
5. Recreation programs

1. In general

Meetings of ad hoc citizens' advisory committee, held on school property for purpose of addressing concerns regarding proposed zoning variance, were meetings for "civic" purpose or purpose pertaining to "welfare" of community, and thus were required to be open to public under CLS Educ § 414 even though they did not involve public body or Open Meetings Law. Comm on Open Gov't OML-AO-2180.

2. Property subject to control

A building rented by the public school authorities for use as a public school auditorium in which educational and other motion pictures are shown pupils at a charge of 10 cents is not a place of public assembly and is under the control and supervision of the trustees or Board of Education of the school district rather than of the Industrial Commissioner. 1936 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 133.

3. Sale or lease of property

A school district may enter into a contract for the sale of reproductions of a painting owned by the district, provided the contract serves a school purpose and is supported by adequate consideration. 1983 NY Ops Atty Gen April 14 (informal).

4. Particular uses and organizations

If entity meets on school property for social or civic purpose, or for purpose pertaining to welfare of community, its meetings would be open to public under CLS Educ § 414(1)(c), even if Open Meetings Law does not apply. Comm on Open Gov't OML-AO-4025.

Soccer association meeting in high school auditorium must be held open to public under CLS Educ § 414(1)(c) as social or civic purpose, even though such association clearly falls beyond coverage of Open Meetings Law. Comm on Open Gov't OML-AO-4025.

5. Recreation programs

Several towns and a village may agree to provide landfill for school district land which is to be developed into athletic fields, in exchange for reasonable use of such fields and conveyance of other athletic fields if unneeded for school purposes. 1978 Op St Compt File #420.

It would appear that a school district may charge a town or village recreation commission a reasonable rental in excess of the district's tangible out-of-pocket expenses for use of a school district swimming pool. 1981 Op St Compt File #81-46.

Editor's Notes Laws 2002, ch 176, §§ 1 and 8, eff July 23, 2002, deemed eff April 1, 2001, provides as follows:

Section 1. Legislative intent. The legislature hereby finds that the heinous acts of terrorism of September 11, 2001, perpetrated on the citizens of New York state, the United States of America and eighty other Nations, shall not stand as an obstacle to the health, welfare and future success of the families of these innocent victims, and those victims who survived the attack. In honor of these heroic individuals, especially the firefighters, police officers, peace officers, and emergency medical service workers, the legislature hereby creates the world trade center memorial scholarships. The legislature further finds that these scholarships will not only serve as a fitting tribute to those who have made the supreme sacrifice, or have become severely disabled, but will also serve to extend the hand of opportunity to spouses, children, financial dependents and surviving victims. This act shall provide recipients with undergraduate awards covering the cost of attending institutions of the state university and the city university as defined in this act, or a commensurate amount to attend a private college or university in New York state.

§ 8. This act shall take effect immediately and shall be deemed to have been in full force and effect on and after April 1, 2001, and shall be applicable for awards made for the 2001-2002 academic year.

Laws 2003, ch 106, §§ 1 and 1-a, eff July 1, 2003, provide as follows:

Section 1. Legislative findings and intent. The legislature recognizes that the individuals who are members of the military make a tremendous sacrifice, especially in times like these when our military personnel are in many locations throughout the world and here in New York fighting against terrorism. This sacrifice is just as real for the men and women who comprise our reserve armed forces and state organized militia. For those who are not full-time active duty in the military, but instead are called to active duty as a member of the reserve armed forces or state organized militia, the rest of their lives must be put on hold to accommodate that service. However, such military personnel continue to be responsible for their own well-being and the well-being of their families and they must still face the obligations that exist in their everyday lives. Steps have been taken to ease some of the burdens that these brave men and women encounter, to allow them to focus their full energy on defending our country; however, the legislature recognizes that more must be done to ensure that military personnel engaged in active duty are not troubled by their obligations at home. In addition, the legislature recognizes that members of the military should not be discriminated against based upon their military status in areas such as housing, employment and education.

§ 1-a. Short title. This act shall be known as the "Patriot Plan".

Analysis

1. In general
2. Under former § 604

1. In general

It was neither arbitrary nor capricious for Department of Audit and Control to disallow certain tuition assistance program awards and demand recoupment thereof on ground that students at private business school were taught by unlicensed and unlicensable faculty members since school had been advised of relevant licensing regulations, agency's interpretation of regulations was reasonable, and, despite receiving opportunity to obtain after-the-fact licensure of its instructors, school failed to show that faculty members in question were licensed or licensable. Royal Business School, Inc. v New York State Dep't of Education, 141 A.D.2d 170, 534 N.Y.S.2d 489, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10106 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

It was neither arbitrary nor capricious for Department of Audit and Control to disallow certain tuition assistance program awards and demand recoupment thereof on ground that students who had taken leave of absence for full term of school year were not pursuing programs in which they had enrolled as provided by 8 NYCRR § 145-2.2(b)(3), which requires students to receive passing or failing grade in at least ½ of minimum amount of full-time study "during each term of study"; despite school's assertion, regulation could not be satisfied when student missed entire term but completed all course work in another term of same school year, with net rate of completion being required 50 percent. Royal Business School, Inc. v New York State Dep't of Education, 141 A.D.2d 170, 534 N.Y.S.2d 489, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10106 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

Where students enrolled in institutions for higher education are receiving both public assistance and state funded educational grants, portion of state educational grant allocated to maintenance and living expenses rather than to actual educational expenses may be considered as income thereby reducing eligibility for public assistance funds; federally funded educational grants may not be used to reduce public assistance eligibility but students receiving both state and federal educational assistance may have public assistance eligibility reduced by amount by which state educational funds added to federal funds exceed actual educational expenses. Hayes v City University of New York, 454 F. Supp. 1118, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16800 (S.D.N.Y. 1978).

2. Under former § 604

This section prescribes the manner in which the Commissioner shall exercise the powers conferred on him and perform the duties imposed, and in the exercise of these functions the action of the Commissioner is properly reviewable by certiorari. c. Regardless of the method or methods used to accomplish the inspection required by this section, the authority making the inspection shall file the report thereof with the school authorities no later than the first day of December.

4. The state fire administrator shall prescribe the form of the fire inspection report and the commissioner shall furnish a supply of such form to school authorities annually, either by mail or electronically. The commissioner shall review the reports of inspection filed pursuant to this section and may make recommendations to the school authorities with respect to any problems relating to school fire safety noted in such reports. (b) any non-profit incorporated organization serving senior citizens;

(c) any non-profit incorporated organization serving the physically or mentally handicapped;

2. In the event a school district is wholly or partially located in a county which has appointed a services coordinator as defined in section seventy-three-c of the transportation law, the board of education of such school district is authorized and empowered to contract, for such consideration as it shall determine, to store, maintain and repair any motor vehicle of and provide driver training for the operator of any motor vehicle used to provide a portion of a coordinated public transportation service as authorized by article two-F of the transportation law and owned by any municipal corporation as defined by the general construction law or any not-for-profit incorporated organization providing a portion of a coordinated public transportation services plan as authorized by article two-F of the transportation law. The board of education of such school district shall not enter into such contract until it is determined that it presently has the capability and facilities necessary for provision of such services and that provision of such services will not adversely affect the ability of the district to provide educational services to the children of such school district.

3. The board of education of any school district is also authorized and empowered to contract with an operator of a coordinated public transportation service for the purpose of providing any other portion of a coordinated public transportation services plan as authorized by article two-F of the transportation law, provided that such board of education of such school district has determined that it presently has the capability and facilities necessary for provision of such services and that provision of such services will not adversely affect the ability of the district to provide educational services to the school children of such district.

4. In any case where such motor vehicle is leased pursuant to subdivision one of this section or where any services are contracted for pursuant to subdivision two or three of this section, the consideration to be received for such lease or contract shall not be less than the full amount of the costs and expenses resulting from such lease or contract.

(a) For the purposes of this section, the full amount of the costs and expenses resulting from any lease of any vehicle pursuant to subdivision one of this section shall include but not be limited to the costs of operation, maintenance and repair of such vehicle, the current fair market value of the purchase price of the vehicle annualized for the vehicle's remaining useful life, the cost of public liability and property damage insurance, fire insurance and compensation insurance of drivers and the cost of collision insurance in the amount of the value of the vehicle to protect the lessor.

(b) For the purposes of this section, the full amount of the costs and expenses resulting from any contract for services pursuant to subdivision two or three of this section shall include but not be limited to that portion of the costs of any employees, equipment or facilities which can be attributed to the provision of such services.

2. Constitutionality

1. In general

Board of education and church provided justiciable controversy in action for declaratory judgment where board of education ended practice of leasing its buses to church for provision of transportation between released-time religious education site and school on basis of board's interpretation of CLS Educ § 1501-b(1)(h). St. James Church v Board of Educ., 163 Misc. 2d 471, 621 N.Y.S.2d 486, 1994 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 587 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1994).

CLS Educ § 1501-b(1)(h) permits board of education to lease its buses to church for transportation between released-time religious education site and school since religious instruction constitutes "education" within meaning of statute. St. James Church v Board of Educ., 163 Misc. 2d 471, 621 N.Y.S.2d 486, 1994 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 587 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1994).

Permissive use of district-owned bus driven by district employee to transport senior citizens to polls was improper, in absence of any statutory provisions which would allow use of school bus in this manner; at minimum, such use presented appearance of impropriety, where senior citizens resided in housing facility managed by incumbent member of board of education. 2000 Op Comm Ed No. 14,308, 2000 NY Educ. Dept. LEXIS 106.

2. Constitutionality

Leasing of buses by board of education to church for transportation between released-time religious education site and school does not violate First Amendment since leasing of buses is straight financial transaction and does not advance any religious purpose. § 3621. Definitions

As used in this part and subdivision seven of section thirty-six hundred two of this article:

1. "School district" means common school districts, to the extent that they provide transportation of students in grades seven through twelve to a school outside the district, consolidated school districts, central school districts, central high school districts, union free school districts, except special act school districts as defined in section four thousand one of this chapter, and city school districts. Notwithstanding any provision contained in this chapter to the contrary, the transportation aid provided, pursuant to subdivision seven of section thirty-six hundred two of this article and this part

2. a. "Pupil" means a child for whom transportation aid is paid and who lives more than one and one-half miles from the school which he or she attends, measured by the nearest available road to such school, or a child who lives more than one mile from an approved route, measured by the nearest available road to such route, and also lives more than one and one-half miles from the school which he or she attends. Nothing contained in this subdivision shall be deemed to require a school district to furnish transportation to a child who, if a student in an elementary grade, lives less than two miles or, if a student in an academic grade, lives less than three miles from the school which he or she attends, measured by the nearest available road. "Pupil" also means a child living more than one and one-half miles from the school which he or she attends who is transported between home and school by a regional or joint transportation system. b. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph a of this subdivision, any school district which provides transportation pursuant to an order of the commissioner, dated the fourth day of August, nineteen hundred seventy-eight, for pupils attending grades kindergarten through four who live more than eight-tenths of a mile but less than one and one-half miles from the school they legally attend shall be entitled to an apportionment on the cost of such transportation pursuant to subdivision seven of section thirty-six hundred two of this article.

c. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph a of this subdivision, any school district which provides transportation pursuant to an order of the commissioner, dated the nineteenth day of August, nineteen hundred seventy-seven, for elementary pupils who live more than eight-tenths of a mile but less than one and one-half miles from the school they legally attend, or such other distance as the board of education may establish with the prior approval of the commissioner, shall be entitled to an apportionment on the cost of such transportation pursuant to subdivision seven of section thirty-six hundred two of this article.

5. "Total annual allowable mileage" means the actual mileage for transporting pupils to and from school once daily over scheduled routes attributable to district-owned or leased school buses for the school year period of July first through June thirtieth, based [on]* odometer readings, including mileage for school buses disposed of during the July first through June thirtieth period.

6. "School bus" means any vehicle or other means of conveyance used for the purpose of transporting pupils.

7. "Storage" means any school bus garage facilities or sites which may be approved by the commissioner.

8. "Regional or joint transportation system" means a transportation system in which a school district participates pursuant to a contract executed in accordance with paragraph h of subdivision twenty-five of section seventeen hundred nine of this chapter.

9. "District share of the cost of regional or joint transportation systems" shall mean the share of the cost of such transportation prorated among all the school district or districts and board or boards of cooperative educational services participating in the regional or joint transportation, as determined in accordance with regulations promulgated by the commissioner, provided that in no case shall there be any deduction made in determining transportation aid on the basis of bus mileage travelled in transporting children pursuant to a contract executed in accordance with paragraph h of subdivision twenty-five of section seventeen hundred nine of this chapter and provided that transportation aid for [a]* jointly operated transportation system shall be determined in the same manner as for individual school districts.

10. School bus stop-arm. The term "school bus stop-arm" means an auxiliary device conforming to the standards established by the commissioner pursuant to subdivision twenty-one-c of section three hundred seventy-five of the vehicle and traffic law.

11. School bus back up beeper. The term "school bus back up beeper" means an auxiliary device conforming to the standards established by the commissioner pursuant to subdivision twenty-one-d of section three hundred seventy-five of the vehicle and traffic law.

*The bracketed word was inadvertently omitted.

12. School bus front crossing arm. The term "school bus front crossing arm" means an auxiliary device conforming to the standards established by the commissioner pursuant to subdivision twenty-one-e of section three hundred seventy-five of the vehicle and traffic law.

Notes to Decisions

Trial court's summary judgment rulings were proper because an automatic renewal provision in the parties' contract did not violate the term limits rule in N.Y. Educ. Law § 2554(19), and a charter school's location outside a school district did not provide a basis for a cause of action against the school board under N.Y. Educ. Law §§ 3621(2)(a) and 3635(1)(c). Charter Sch. for Applied Tech. v Board of Educ. for City Sch. Dist. of City of Buffalo, 105 A.D.3d 1460, 964 N.Y.S.2d 366, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2940 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2013).

The legislature intended to give a school district the right to deny public transportation to a parochial school pupil who had a choice of more than one such school and who desired to attend the more distant school. Wenner v Board of Education, 71 Misc. 2d 978, 337 N.Y.S.2d 733, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1421 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1972).

Definition of "route" in CLS Educ § 3621(3) is meant to identify regularly scheduled bus route with student pickup points, mileage of which is used in calculating state aid. Arlyn Oaks Civic Ass'n v Brucia, 171 Misc. 2d 634, 654 N.Y.S.2d 1016, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 33 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

Legislature intended definition of "route" in CLS Educ § 3621(3) to apply only to part II of article 73, and such definition cannot be relied on in applying CLS Educ § 3635. Arlyn Oaks Civic Ass'n v Brucia, 171 Misc. 2d 634, 654 N.Y.S.2d 1016, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 33 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

Father may not keep children from school one and eight-tenths miles away, notwithstanding school board refuses transportation and unguarded railroad crossing must be traversed. Parent held to be neglecting children. In re Conlin, 130 N.Y.S.2d 811, 1954 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2093 (N.Y. Child. Ct. 1954).

Pupil's request for transportation to parochial school is denied because it is beyond approved transportation distance of 15 miles, notwithstanding pupil's contention that measurements were inaccurate because school vehicle's odometer was not calibrated at end of 15 mile interval; there is no requirement in statute, regulation or prior decision of commissioner of board of education that board of education employ particular method of calibration. Re Taylor, 1987 Op Comm Ed No. 11912.

Parent's request to establish new transportation pick-up point for child is denied because icy conditions of area between parent's home and current pick-up point has been corrected by highway department and because parent is responsible for safety of child while traveling to and from school when child is not actually receiving transportation from school district. Re Stroub, 1988 Op Comm Ed No 11944.

Although there may be bus stop in close proximity to student's home, school board lacks authority to pick children up at that stop who live too close to school to be eligible for transportation, even though there may be room on bus for children; eligibility for transportation between home and school must be determined on basis of distance between home and school. Re Pavony, et al., 1988 Op Comm Ed No 11951.

School district is not required to provide transportation to nonpublic school children who are too young to attend public schools of district, even if provision of such transportation would result in no additional cost to district. Re Meyers, 1988 Op Comm Ed No 11961.

Boards of education are not required to provide transportation to nonpublic schools under any and all circumstances; once students arrive at nonpublic school, responsibility for safety and supervision of students is that of nonpublic school authorities; therefore, boards of education should contact private school administrators and obtain co-operation necessary to assure that children are not required to remain on idling school bus for protracted periods. Re Stickley, 1988 Op Comm Ed No 11963.

Rejected was petitioners' position that their children were entitled to transportation between home and school because they resided more than one mile from the entrance of the school they attend, and that the school district's practice of determining eligibility for transportation by measuring from the student's driveway to a side entrance of the elementary school rather than the front entrance of the elementary school was improper and against district policy. A board of education may exercise reasonable discretion in determining the points in which to measure for purposes of determining eligibility for transportation. Such measurements will not be set aside unless the board has been arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. The record indicates that the school district's practice of measuring from the side rather than the front entrance of the school is consistent with its general practice and with its written policy. Appeal of Mermelstein, 1990 Op Comr Educ No. 12406.

Rejected was petitioners' contention that the manner in which the school district measured the distance to school was improper because it required their children to traverse a walkway across district property. It was their position that the distance from a student's home must be measured by the shortest route along public streets or thoroughfares. It was not unreasonable for the board of education to measure a distance between home and school by including a short cut across the property of a school maintained by the district. The board of education has submitted affidavits that the walkway in question was maintained by the district and cleared debris, ice and snow. Petitioners have, therefore, failed to establish that the Board of Education abused its discretion in delineating the route in question. Appeal of Mermelstein, 1990 Op Comr Educ No 12406.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Analysis

1. In general
2. Under former § 7203

1. In general

Property owners were not entitled to declaration that their construction contract with building contractor (a corporation) was against public policy and therefore invalid on ground that it violated CLS Educ §§ 7202 and 7209 by permitting contractor to engage in unauthorized practice of engineering without license where contract expressly required contractor to engage specified licensed engineer to perform those tasks for which license was required, and engineer fulfilled contract by exercising his judgment in capacity of licensed professional rather than in his capacity as president of contractor corporation. Charlebois v J.M. Weller Associates, Inc., 72 N.Y.2d 587, 535 N.Y.S.2d 356, 531 N.E.2d 1288, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 3361 (N.Y. 1988).

Article 78 petition to compel village board of trustees and building inspector to issue building permit in accordance with Supreme Court order was properly granted, despite contention of village that petitioner failed to comply with requirement of CLS Educ § 7209(1)(a) and (2) that plans contain seal of architect or engineer licensed in state, since plans were stamped with seal of individual who was duly registered architect at time they were drawn up but had since retired to distant location, and in view of inordinate lapse of time which ensued prior to petitioner's submission of plans to village board of trustees, which was attributable to village's dilatory tactics, village was barred by laches from contesting validity of architect's seal. Briedis v Tuxedo Park, 156 A.D.2d 744, 549 N.Y.S.2d 500, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16561 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989), app. denied, 78 N.Y.2d 852, 573 N.Y.S.2d 466, 577 N.E.2d 1058, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 886 (N.Y. 1991).

In action arising out of construction contract wherein defendant had knowledge that plaintiff was not New York State licensed engineer, defendant was not entitled to summary judgment on ground that contract was illegal where fact issues existed as to whether that part of plaintiff's work which required licensed engineer was merely incidental to larger work he provided, or whether plaintiff primarily provided defendant with engineering services and merely hired licensed engineers to seal designs, which is violation of Education Law. Lombardo v Sagistano, 184

Misc. 2d 301, 708 N.Y.S.2d 241, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 174 (N.Y. App. Term 2000).

2. Under former § 7203

In view of this section and §§ 1709(6), 1804, and 1805, Education Law, and §§ 101 and 103, General Municipal Law, the legislature pre-empted not only the area of plans and specifications in the building of schools, but also the field of actual construction, and vested such power in the commissioner of education, so that a school board was not subject to local municipal building or plumbing codes in building schools. Poughkeepsie v Hopper Plumbing & Heating Corp., 46 Misc. 2d 761, 260 N.Y.S.2d 901, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1741 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1965), aff'd, 26 A.D.2d 772, 272 N.Y.S.2d 974, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6124 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1966).

In a taxpayer's action to have a contract for a public improvement declared illegal and void, the fact that specifications were not drawn by a professional engineer did not necessarily require that the work be halted, the penalties for unlawful practice of a profession being aimed at the persons who performed such unlawful acts. Shaw v Topping, 142 N.Y.S.2d 490, 1955 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2820 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1955).

In a taxpayer's action alleging the illegality of a contract for a public improvement because the specifications were not prepared by a professional engineer and because of certain changes, where the issues of fact could not be resolved without a trial, and the work had been half completed, the contractor was not temporarily restrained but could proceed at his peril, and upon plaintiff's posting a bond, the town was temporarily enjoined from making any payments until the determination of the issues. Shaw v Topping, 142 N.Y.S.2d 490, 1955 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2820 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1955).

There is no requirement that an architect be employed to prepare plans for a fire house but it is required that a professional engineer be employed in certain cases. 1952 Ops St Compt #137.

Services of a professional engineer must be employed where public work involves professional engineering and cost of public work is over $5,000.00. 1953 Ops St Compt #87.

It is not necessary to employ an architect to prepare plans for a town garage. However, if the cost is estimated to exceed $5,000 and if the work involves professional engineering, the services of either a professional engineer or an architect must be employed. 1956 Ops St Compt File #8045.

The seal of a licensed architect or a licensed professional engineer is not required on plans for (1) construction of buildings or structures when such construction will cost ten thousand dollars or less and where such building or structure will not exceed thirty thousand cubic feet, and (2) alterations to any building or structure where such alteration will cost ten thousand dollars or less and will not involve changes affecting the structural safety of such building or structure. 1958 Ops St Compt File #301.

The awarding of a contract by a town board is an improper act where the services of a professional engineer or land surveyor are not employed in the preparation of plans and specifications for the public work which involves professional engineering and the cost of the work exceeds $5,000.00. 1968 Ops St Compt File #45.

A person who is not a licensed professional engineer may render engineering services (as defined in § 7201(4)) only under the supervision and direction of an individual so licensed, unless otherwise provided by statute. 1968 Ops St Compt File #294.

A licensed professional engineer need not be retained by a town to provide services relative to the installation of a new heating system in a town building, where the estimated cost of the project does not exceed $5,000. 1968 Ops St Compt File #416.

The construction of a village fire house estimated to cost more than $5000 is a public work involving the services of a professional engineer. 1968 Ops St Compt File #447.

Agency Opinions

1. In general

Section 7209 of the Education Law requires certain public and private construction plans and specifications to be under the seal of an engineer or surveyor licensed or authorized to practice in the State. A municipality may require the same seal on plans and specifications for its own public works notwithstanding the exceptions in section 7209. 1981 NY Ops Atty Gen April 27 (Informal).

A joint fire district, in constructing a firehouse, is exempt from the application of site plan approval requirements contained in Town Law, § 274-a. 1978 Op St Compt File #886.

Town of Manlius does not require the services of an architect to prepare, approve and stamp plans for a pre-cut town garage since those services may be performed by a professional engineer. The Town Engineer, if he is a professional engineer, may perform those services for the Town required of a professional engineer in connection with the construction of the garage. He may not be paid additional compensation in addition to his salary for such extra services unless a local law is adopted superseding Town Law, § 27(1). 1980 Op St Compt File #217.

(1) Off-Track Betting Corporations are to let contracts, procedurally, in the same manner as counties and, therefore, they are subject to the competitive bidding requirements of General Municipal Law, §§ 101 and 103, but not the requirements of Education Law, § 7209(3); (2) Both purchase and public works contracts of Off-Track Betting Corporations are subject to bidding where the estimated expense exceeds $10,000; (3) Off-Track Betting Corporations are governed by the principles relating to aggregate purchases; (4) A firm which aids in preparing bid specifications for a project is not precluded from submitting a bid on the project. 1980 Op St Compt File #503.

Any plans or plats submitted by a homeowner to a town in connection with an application for a variance or building permit must be stamped with the seal of a professional engineer or a licensed surveyor; a homeowner cannot utilize surveys prepared at a former time and altered by them for purposes of the application. 1982 Op St Compt File #88.

Regarding access to plans, drawings and surveys that are marked with seal of architect, land surveyor or engineer, seal does not serve as copyright, nor does it restrict right to inspect and copy under Freedom of Information Law; it merely indicates that person is qualified as licensee. 6. The board of elections, upon the request of the board of commissioners of an improvement district which elects commissioners or a fire district shall, not later than the twenty-first day before each election in such district, deliver to the secretary of such district a list of persons registered to vote as of the twenty-third day before such election in the election districts contained in such district, indicating on such list the names of the voters in inactive status, or shall place the registration poll records for such election districts in properly locked ledgers in the temporary custody of such district secretary for the purpose of permitting him to copy such records. Petitioners failed to meet burden of proof in establishing valid basis for setting aside results of vote at annual district meeting because ballots in question complied with CLS Educ § 2019-a and were not opened until board decided to accept them. Re Shortell, et al., 1987 Op Comm Ed No. 11915.

Fact that individuals registered in general election, whose names did not appeal on registration list of board of education, were probably allowed to vote in election of school board members in city of Mount Vernon did not provide basis for overturning election, because CLS Elec § 5-612(2) requires that such individuals be allowed to vote. 1993 Op Comm Ed No. 13055.

Fact that district resident was improperly denied opportunity to vote because her name could not be found on registration list and she was not offered opportunity to vote by affidavit in accordance with CLS Educ § 2019-a was insufficient to overturn election, as record failed to establish whether outcome of election was affected in that her affidavit did not identify candidate for whom she would have voted; moreover, one vote would not have been enough to overcome 2-vote margin. 1994 Op Comm Ed No. 13232.

Where voters were registered with county board of elections and thus were otherwise eligible to vote in school district election pursuant to CLS Elec § 5-612(2), their failure to register with school district was of no consequence. 1995 Op Comm Ed No. 13282.

Any school district resident who is registered to vote with county board of elections is entitled to vote at all school district meetings and elections, even if individual's name is not otherwise listed on school district register. 1995 Op Comm Ed No. 13486.

Where voter is registered only with county board of elections and not with school district, voter would be allowed to vote in district elections. 1993 Op Com Ed No. 13042.

The words "open lands", when read in connection and conjunction with the words "forests, woodlands", must be limited to that type of land which is, first, mainly rural in character, and, second, which is unoccupied in the sense of having no permanent habitation, and, third, to land of such character that entry thereon, either through its proximity to forests or woodlands or through the nature of its growth, would be likely to endanger forests or woodlands of the state. § 9-1103. Additional powers of the department

In addition to the powers provided in section 9-0105 and in connection with the control of fire, the department shall have the power to:

1. Maintain a system of forest fire protection in such areas of the state as the department determines necessary.

2. Purchase necessary equipment, tools or supplies, employ men or incur other expenses as may be necessary to furnish adequate forest fire protection.

3. Establish, maintain, equip and operate forest fire observation stations, telephone lines or other structures therefor as the public interest requires.

4. Make contracts, agreements or purchases either for construction, operation or maintenance of telephone lines for fire protection purposes. Any telephone company may grant the state a preferred rate.

5. With consent of owner build or improve fire roads, ditches, trails or fire lines. No action for trespass shall lie on account of injury to private property on such account, if the act is performed in the protection of the forests from fire.

6. Appoint necessary employees to perform such duties as are required by this title 11.

7. Order removed from service, on forty-eight hours' notice, any railroad locomotive, operating in the fire towns, not properly equipped with fire protection devices.

8. Grant an extension of time in which owners may comply with section 9-1113 when the department is satisfied that such an extension of time will not endanger the forests to fire, but in no case shall an extension be granted for a period of more than six weeks from the time of cutting, except in connection with operations for the clearing of a reservoir site under the authority of section 15-1507.

9. Relieve railroads from maintaining railroad fire patrol, or clearing right of way when in the judgment of the department the absence of such patrol or clearing will not subject the forests to fire menace.

10. Request the Public Service Commission to hear and determine whether any railroad, person or company operating railroad locomotives through forest land is using such devices and precautions against the setting of forest fires, as the public interest requires.

11. Designate persons who shall have authority to issue permits as required by subdivision 5 of section 9-1105.

12. Enter into working agreements with land owners for the purpose of securing better forest fire protection in the fire towns.

13. Make rules and regulations to secure better fire protection within all or any portion of those areas designated as fire districts under subdivision 2 of section 9-1109 or defined as fire towns by section 9-1107.

The board of supervisors of a county may appropriate and contribute money to aid in construction of forest fire protective system in fire district where such county comprises or is included within said fire district. 1930 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 183.

The Shinnecock Indians reside upon a reservation owned by them in fee in common, and save for the federal government's implied sovereign protectorate which has never been actively asserted, their relations with said government are simply historical, and in the absence of federal regulation the state, through its conservation department, has authority to enforce its police regulations with regard to fire control. 1934 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 285.

The Commissioner has authority to construct dirt roads or truck trails in a forest preserve for the purpose of aiding and protecting it from fire hazards. Such roads are not public highways; public use thereof is not allowable, and, where necessary, barriers may be erected to prevent it. 1935 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 300.

The conservation department may permit an old logging road through forest preserve lands to be improved for use by trucks if such improvement is considered necessary for fire protection purposes. While such improvement does not make the road a public highway, a revocable permit for its temporary use by a private corporation may be granted, provided such use will not damage the road or interfere with its use by the conservation department, or destroy the wild forest character of the preserve. 1949 NY Ops Atty Gen Apr. 29.

In connection with the mutual aid program of fire protection, and under proper restrictions and safeguards, the Conservation Department may grant revocable permits to county authorities for the construction, maintenance, and operation of radio towers on state lands acquired for reforestation purposes within the forest preserve, provided, however, that if such construction is to be on forest preserve lands within the Adirondack and Catskill parks there may be no interference with the wild forest character of the land. 1950 NY Ops Atty Gen May 2.

§ 9-1105. General prohibitions

1. The following are prohibited:

(a) setting of fires on or near forest land and leaving such fires unattended and unquenched;

(b) setting of a fire which will endanger the property of another;

(c) setting of forest land on fire except where necessary to implement any provision of this chapter, including, but not limited to, paragraph v of subdivision two of section 3-0301 of this chapter; provided, however, that nothing contained in this paragraph shall permit the setting on fire of any land constituting the forest preserve or of any state land within the Adirondack Park or the Catskill Park for any purpose other than fire suppression. The department shall promulgate regulations governing the use of fire which shall include provisions for notification of, or waiver of notification by, local fire officials;

(d) setting of a permitted fire in or near forest land without all inflammable material having first been removed for a distance of 3 feet around the fire;

(e) the dropping, throwing or otherwise scattering of lighted matches, burning cigars, cigarettes or tobacco on forest land;

(f) the defacing, destruction or removal of any posted notice containing forest fire warnings, laws or rules and regulations.

2. It shall be unlawful to deposit, and leave in any of the fire towns, or in any town included in a fire district as defined in subdivision 2 of section 9-1109 of this title, brush or inflammable material upon the right of way of highways.

3. No device for generating power which burns wood, coke, lignite or coal shall be operated in, through or near forest land, unless the escape of sparks, cinders or coals shall be prevented in such manner as may be required by the department.

4. In any of the fire towns, or in any town included in a fire district as defined in subdivision 2 of section 9-1109, brush, logs, slash or other inflammable material shall not be left or allowed to remain on land within 25 feet of the right of way of a railroad or within 20 feet of the right of way of a public highway.

5. It shall be unlawful to set or cause to be set or sustain any open fire for purpose of burning logs, leaves, sawdust, slabs, brush, stumps, dry grass or other debris, in any of the fire towns, without first having obtained from the department a written permit so to do.

6. Prescribed burns. (a) For the purposes of this subdivision, the term "prescribed burn" shall mean the intentional setting of forest land on fire, under carefully controlled conditions, in order to manage, enhance, or restore populations of plants or animal species or natural communities on such land.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of this section or any other provision of law, the department may authorize a landowner to conduct prescribed burn activities pursuant to a written prescribed burn management plan prepared by or for such landowner. The prescribed burn management plan shall include, but not be limited to, the following elements:

(i) a discussion of the landowner's training and expertise in conducting prescribed burn activities;

(ii) a map and narrative description identifying the area or areas on which prescribed burn activities will be undertaken;

(iii) a description of the ecological purposes and objectives of the prescribed burn, including an identification of the specific species or natural communities that are intended to be impacted by the burn;

(iv) a description of the vegetative cover and fuel loads on each area to be subjected to prescribed burning;

(v) a description of physical parameters, such as time of year, wind speed and direction, and air temperature and humidity, which must be met before a prescribed burn is initiated;

(vi) a description of the anticipated intensity and duration of the prescribed burn given the fuel loads and physical prescriptions established in subparagraphs (iv) and (v) of this paragraph;

(vii) a description of the logistics of the prescribed burn operation, number of personnel, and fire management equipment that will be deployed to assure that the burn is restricted to the area or areas identified for prescribed burn management;

(viii) a description of fire suppression activities to be immediately implemented should the prescribed burn threaten to escape, or actually escape, beyond the boundaries identified for such burn;

(ix) a procedure for notifying appropriate local fire officials and law enforcement personnel of the actual date, time, and estimated duration of any prescribed burn;

(x) a procedure for notifying adjacent landowners prior to the undertaking of a prescribed burn;

(xi) a description of the procedures that will be undertaken to assure that the prescribed burn is fully extinguished at the conclusion of the burn.

(c) The department shall promulgate regulations implementing this subdivision prior to authorizing any landowner to undertake prescribed burn activities. Such regulations shall include, but not be limited to, a listing of the necessary elements of the prescribed burn management plan, and standards for determining whether a request for authorization to conduct prescribed burn activities should be granted.

(d) The department shall reject any application for authorization to conduct a prescribed burn pursuant to this subdivision if the department determines that the landowner has not demonstrated the necessary expertise to properly implement the prescribed burn plan.

(e) Before granting a landowner authorization to conduct prescribed burn activities, the department shall give the chief or other official in charge of the fire department or company within whose territorial jurisdiction the proposed prescribed burn is located an opportunity to review and comment on the written prescribed burn management plan.

(f) No burning shall be prescribed under this subdivision within seventy-five feet of the boundary of a landowner's property without the written approval of the adjacent landowner. In addition, the department may prohibit burning in a buffer zone in excess of seventy-five feet from the boundary of an adjacent property owner if specific conditions at the site warrant such buffer.

2. Impressing fire fighting assistance. § 9-1121. Fire moneys and accounts

In order to carry into effect the provisions of this title the following is prescribed:

1. Temporary loan. The State Comptroller shall have, subject to the approval of the Governor, the authority to make, on behalf of the state a temporary loan not exceeding one hundred thousand dollars in any fiscal year, for the use of the department in protecting the forests and extinguishing fires as provided by title 11 of this article upon the certification of the department that any emergency exists whereby through insufficiency of appropriations it is found to be impossible to protect the forests from fire. The Comptroller shall thereupon borrow such sums as may be directed by the Governor for such purposes and shall report such transactions to the legislature which shall thereupon appropriate the moneys borrowed. Section 41 of the State Finance Law shall not apply to any indebtedness so incurred.

2. Payment of fire bills. All salaries and other expenses incurred by the department and its employees in protecting the forests from fire shall be paid by the state.

3. Rebate by counties. The full expense incurred by a town supervisor acting as superintendent of fires as provided in subdivision twelve of section twenty-nine of the town law and paid by the town in extinguishing fires actually burning except salaries and expenses of regular employees shall be a charge upon the county in which the fire burned provided that the county has within its borders any fire town or fire district as provided in subdivision 1 or 2 of section 9-1109 of this title and provided that no part of the expenses incurred in extinguishing fires on Indian reservations located in Cattaraugus or Suffolk county shall be a charge upon or payable by such counties. The supervisors acting as superintendents of fires shall on or before September first, of each year, transmit to the clerk of the board of supervisors or county legislative body of each county in which such expense of extinguishing fires was incurred, a summary statement of expenses incurred together with the amount charged against the county, except that a detailed statement of expenses shall be furnished for any designated fire or fires when so requested by a county. The clerk shall thereupon cause the amount due to the town to be included in the budget and levied upon the taxable property of such county at the same time and in the same manner as other county charges, and the amount due the town so levied shall be paid by the County Treasurer, on or before May first following the levy thereof to the town supervisor according to such claim.

4. May pay accounts. If any person incurs expenses fighting forest fires in a fire town, or in a town included in a fire district as defined in subdivision 2 of section 9-1109, the department may upon the receipt of satisfactory proof and accounts filed in its offices within sixty days from the time the expense was incurred audit and pay all or such portion thereof as in its judgment the public interest requires.

5. Recovery of expenses. Any moneys necessarily expended by the state, a municipality, or any person in fighting forest fires may be sued for by the state, municipality or person expending the same and recovered from the person causing the fire. Such actions may be maintained in addition to other actions for damages or penalties and may be demanded in the same or separate actions.

6. Certain towns raise fire fund. Towns other than fire towns may raise necessary funds for prevention and extinguishment of forest fires in their towns either by levy or pursuant to the Local Finance Law.

7. Advance by Comptroller. Upon request of the department, the Comptroller may advance a sum, not to exceed five thousand dollars at any time, to the department for the purpose of facilitating payment of fire accounts.

PART 1 Rules Governing Charitable Trusts

HISTORY:
Add, L 1966, ch 952, eff Sept 1, 1967.

§ 8-1.4. Supervision of trustees for charitable purposes

(a) For the purposes of this section, "trustee" means (1) any individual, group of individuals, executor, trustee, corporation or other legal entity holding and administering property for charitable purposes, whether pursuant to any will, trust, other instrument or agreement, court appointment, or otherwise pursuant to law, over which the attorney general has enforcement or supervisory powers, (2) any non-profit corporation organized under the laws of this state for charitable purposes and (3) any non-profit foreign corporation organized for charitable purposes, doing business or holding property in this state. Neither a foreign corporation nor a trustee acting under the will of, or an agreement executed by, a non-resident of this state shall become subject to the provisions of this section merely by reason of maintaining a bank, custody, investment or similar account in this state.

(b) The registration and reporting provisions of this section do not apply to (1) the United States, any state, territory or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico or to any of their agencies or governmental subdivisions, (2) any trustee which is required by any other provision of law to render a full, complete and itemized annual financial report to the congress of the United States or to the legislature of this state, provided that such report contains the information required of trustees pursuant to this article, (3) corporations organized under the religious corporations law and other religious agencies and organizations, and charities, agencies and organizations operated, supervised or controlled by or in connection with a religious organization, (4) educational institutions incorporated under the education law or by special act, (5) any hospital, (6) fraternal, patriotic, veterans, volunteer firefighters, volunteer ambulance workers, social, student or alumni organizations and historical societies chartered by the New York state board of regents, (7) a trust for which there is a corporate trustee acting as sole trustee or co-trustee under the terms of a will of a decedent who died domiciled in a state other than New York or a trust instrument executed by a non-resident of the state of New York, (8) any trust in which and so long as the charitable interest is deferred or contingent, (9) any person who, in his or her capacity as an officer, director or trustee of any corporation or organization mentioned in this paragraph, holds property for the religious, educational or charitable purposes of such corporation or organization so long as such corporation or organization is registered with the attorney general pursuant to this section, (10) any cemetery corporation subject to the provisions of article fifteen of the not-for-profit corporation law, (11) the state parent teachers association and any parent teachers association affiliated with an educational institution that is subject to the jurisdiction of the state education department, (12) any corporation organized under article forty-three of the insurance law. The provisions of this subdivision shall apply only to the registration and reporting requirements of this section and shall not limit, impair, change or alter any other provision of this article, the not-for-profit corporation law or any other provision of law.

(c) The attorney general shall establish and maintain a register of all trustees containing such information as the attorney general deems appropriate, and to that end may conduct such investigations as he or she deems necessary and shall obtain from public records, court officers, taxing authorities, trustees and other sources without the payment of any fee or charge, whatever information, copies of instruments, reports and records are needed for the establishment and maintenance of the register.

(d) Every trustee shall file with the attorney general, within six months after any property held by him or her or any income therefrom is required to be applied to charitable purposes, a copy of the instrument providing for his or her title, powers and duties; provided, however, that any trustee currently registered with the department of law pursuant to article 7-A of the executive law shall be deemed to have complied with this paragraph. If any property held by a trustee or any income therefrom is required to be applied to charitable purposes at the time this section becomes effective, the filing shall be made within six months thereafter.

(e) (1) Whenever any trustee or other person, holding property or any income therefrom, which may be required at any time to be devoted to charitable purposes, shall file in any court in this state (A) any petition for instructions relating to the administration or use of such property or income, (B) any petition for the construction of the instrument under which such property or income is held, (C) any petition respecting the disposition or distribution of such property or income or (D) any accounting, due notice of the action or proceeding shall be served by the petitioner upon the attorney general together with a copy of any petition, accounting, will or trust instrument.

(2) Whenever any instrument of a testamentary nature which provides for a disposition for charitable purposes is the subject of (A) an application for denial of probate, (B) objections to probate or (C) an application for approval of a compromise agreement in respect of probate, due notice of the action or proceeding shall be served by the petitioner upon the attorney general together with a copy of the instrument and of any such application, objections or agreement.

(f) (1) Every trustee shall, in addition to filing copies of any instrument required under paragraph (d) of this section, file with the attorney general and all identified current charitable beneficiaries written annual financial reports, under penalties for perjury, on forms prescribed by the attorney general, setting forth information as to the nature of the assets held for charitable purposes and the administration thereof by the trustee, and shall, file with the attorney general and all identified current charitable beneficiaries a notice of the termination of the interest of any party in a trust that would cause all or part of the trust assets to be applied to charitable purposes or to have the income therefrom so applied, in accordance with rules and regulations of the attorney general.

(2) Trustees required to report to the attorney general under article 7-A of the executive law shall comply with this paragraph by filing with the attorney general in addition to any other reports required herein, copies of the financial reports required by section 172-b of the executive law unless such reports have been filed previously.

(g) Unless the filing of reports is suspended as herein provided, the first report of any trustee shall be filed no later than six months after the end of the fiscal year of the trustee during which he or she becomes subject to this section.

(h) The attorney general shall make rules and regulations necessary for the administration of this section, including rules and regulations as to the time for filing reports, the contents thereof, and any manner of executing and filing them, including but not limited to allowing or requiring any submission to the attorney general to be effected by electronic means and electronic signatures. He or she may classify trusts, estates, corporations and other trustees as to purpose, nature of assets, duration, amount of assets, amounts to be devoted to charitable purposes, or otherwise, and may establish different rules for different classes as to time and nature of the reports required, to the ends that he or she shall receive current financial reports as to all such trusts, estates, corporations or other trustees which will enable him or her to ascertain whether they are being properly administered. The attorney general may suspend the filing of financial reports as to a particular trustee for a reasonable, specifically designated time upon written application of the trustee, signed under penalties for perjury, and filed with the attorney general and after the attorney general has filed in the register of trustees a written statement that the interests of the beneficiaries will not be prejudiced thereby and that periodic reports during the term of such suspension are not required for proper supervision by his or her office. The filing of the financial reports required by this section, or the exemption from such filing or the suspension therefrom, shall not have the effect of absolving trustees from any responsibility for accounting for property or income held by them for charitable purposes. A copy of an account or other financial report filed by a trustee in any court in this state, if the account or other financial report substantially complies with the rules and regulations of the attorney general, may be filed as a financial report under this section.

(i) The attorney general may investigate transactions and relationships of trustees for the purpose of determining whether or not property held for charitable purposes has been and is being properly administered. The attorney general, his or her assistants, deputies or such other officers as may be designated by him or her, are empowered to subpoena any trustee, agent, fiduciary, beneficiary, institution, association or corporation or other witness, examine any such witness under oath and, for this purpose, administer the necessary oaths, and require the production of any books or papers which they deem relevant to the inquiry.

(j) No person shall be excused from attending such inquiry pursuant to the mandate of a subpoena, or from producing a paper or book, or from being examined or required to answer a question on the ground of failure of tender or payment of a witness fee or mileage, unless at the time of such appearance or production, as the case may be, such witness makes a demand for such payment as a condition precedent to the offering of the testimony or production required by the subpoena and such payment is not thereupon made. The provisions for payment of a witness fee or mileage do not apply to any trustee or other person holding funds for charitable purposes, or to any person in the employ of any such person, whose conduct or practices are being investigated.

(k) If a person subpoenaed to attend such inquiry fails to obey the mandate of a subpoena without reasonable cause, or if a person in attendance upon such inquiry shall without reasonable cause refuse to be sworn or to be examined or to answer a question or to produce a paper or book when ordered so to do by the officer conducting such inquiry, he or she shall be subject to proceedings under subdivision (b) of section 2308 of the civil practice law and rules.

(l) The register, copies of the instruments and the reports filed with the attorney general shall be open to public inspection, subject to reasonable rules and regulations adopted by the attorney general, which may include such limitations as to type of information subject to inspection or purpose of inspection as the attorney general shall deem to be in the public interest. The attorney general shall withhold from public inspection copies of any report filed with any other governmental agency of this state or of the United States and required by law to be kept confidential by such agency, and shall, upon request of the trustee, withhold from public inspection that portion of any instrument filed which does not relate to charitable purposes and which is not otherwise of public record.

(m) The attorney general may institute appropriate proceedings to secure compliance with this section and to secure the proper administration of any trust, corporation or other relationship to which this section applies. The powers and duties of the attorney general provided in this section are in addition to all other powers and duties he or she may have. No court shall modify or terminate the powers and responsibilities of any trust, corporation or other trustee unless the attorney general is a party to the proceeding, but nothing in this section shall otherwise impair or restrict the jurisdiction of any court with respect to the matters covered by it. The failure of any trustee to register or to file reports as required by this section may be ground for judicial removal of any person responsible for such failure.

(n) This section shall apply regardless of any contrary provisions of any instrument and shall be liberally construed so as to effectuate its general purpose of protecting the public interest in charitable uses, purposes and dispositions.

(o) Every officer, agency, board or commission of this state or political subdivisions of this state or agencies thereof receiving applications for exemption from taxation of any trustee subject to this section shall annually file with the attorney general a list of all applications received during the year and shall notify the attorney general of any suspension or revocation of a tax exempt status previously granted.

(p) The attorney general shall collect from each trustee at the time of filing of the periodic reports required by this section a fee for the filing of such reports as follows:

(1) Twenty-five dollars, if the net worth of the property held by such trustee for charitable purposes is less than fifty thousand dollars,

(2) Fifty dollars if such net worth is fifty thousand dollars or more but less than two hundred and fifty thousand dollars,

(3) One hundred dollars if such net worth is two hundred and fifty thousand dollars or more but less than one million dollars,

(4) Two hundred fifty dollars if such net worth is one million dollars or more but less than ten million dollars,

(5) Seven hundred and fifty dollars if such net worth is ten million dollars or more but less than fifty million dollars, and

(6) One thousand five hundred dollars if such net worth is fifty million dollars or more.

(q) Any trustee shall be exempt from the annual reporting requirements of this section by filing each year with the attorney general a verified statement executed by such trustee attesting that during the annual reporting period (1) the gross receipts received by said trustee during such annual reporting period were less than twenty-five thousand dollars and that (2) the total assets held by such trustee at no time during such annual reporting period exceeded twenty-five thousand dollars. For the purposes of this paragraph, gross receipts mean the total received during the financial reporting period of (A) gifts, grants, and contributions; (B) gross income and revenue from all sources; and (C) gross amounts from sales of assets, other than inventory; and total assets mean the total principal and the accumulated income, if any, held by such trustee for purposes of charitable distribution on any day during such annual reporting period.

(r) A trustee who fails to comply with paragraph (d), (f) or (g) of this section shall, after notice of said failure served upon him or her by the attorney general by certified mail, return receipt requested, be liable to the state of New York for a fine of ten dollars a day not to exceed one thousand dollars for each failure to comply after the expiration of the thirty day period following the receipt of the notice from the attorney general, except that the time to comply may be extended by the attorney general. Where the attorney general, after such thirty day period has expired, finds that the failure to comply with paragraph (d), (f) or (g) of this section is due to excusable ignorance or inadvertence or other reasonable cause, the attorney general shall waive the fine imposed by this paragraph.

(s) A trustee shall not be qualified to make application for funds or grants or to receive such funds from any department or agency of the state without certifying compliance with paragraphs (d), (f) and (g) of this section and all applicable registration and reporting requirements of article seven-A of the executive law.

1. Generally

Westchester County Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children, which was incorporated under not-for-profit corporation law for purpose of operating to prevent cruelty to children, was subject to registration with and reporting to Attorney General pursuant to CLS EPTL § 8-1.4(a)(1), which requires any "trustee" to so register and report, and defines term trustee to include any non-profit corporation organized under New York laws for charitable purposes. *People by Abrams v Westchester County S.P.C.C., 198 A.D.2d 484, 604 N.Y.S.2d 579, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11056 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1993).

The word "trustee" as defined in the statute includes executors. In re Estate of Stanley, 59 Misc. 2d 232, 299 N.Y.S.2d 47, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1703 (N.Y. Sur. Ct. 1969).

That a charitable beneficiary, where individual or corporate, is represented in the accounting by its own attorney does not affect the provisions of the statute requiring notice to the Attorney General, nor affect the right and status of the Attorney General to appear or file objections under his first duty to protect dispositions for charitable purposes. In re Lown, 59 Misc. 2d 987, 301 N.Y.S.2d 746, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1382 (N.Y. Sur. Ct. 1969).

In action under CLS N-PCL § 112(a) and CLS EPTL Art 8 to obtain injunctive relief against Long Island Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children (LISPCC), Attorney-General established that LISPCC misrepresented that it was state or police agency where (1) LISPCC offices and vehicles displayed state shield and used word "Police," (2) LISPCC vehicles used red bar and flashing lights in plain violation of provisions of Vehicle and Traffic Law which limit such items to emergency vehicles, and (3) LISPCC agents used official license plates that were not authorized for use by private not-for-profit corporation vehicles. Koppell ex rel. People v Long Island Soc'y for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, 163 Misc. 2d 654, 621 N.Y.S.2d 762, 1994 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 600 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1994).

Judge, who witnessed execution of will in which judge was named co-trustee of charitable trust, should notify Attorney General on death of testator, once judge received information suggesting that attorney who drafted will was denying that will had been executed by decedent. Ops Adv Comm Jud Ethics No. 98-28.

2. Constitutional issues

Mere fact that charitable group claims First Amendment privileges cannot shield it from scrutiny of Attorney General, who is empowered by CLS EPTL § 8-1.4 to supervise charitable corporations and to enjoin them from soliciting funds improperly. Abrams v New York Foundation for Homeless, Inc., 148 Misc. 2d 791, 562 N.Y.S.2d 325, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 558 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1990).

Soc Serv Law § 461-b, subd 5(a) does not deny equal protection because it requires reports only from private proprietary homes and not from not-for-profit homes; profit motive of owners of private homes provides rational basis for such discrimination, and § 461-b, subd 5(a) simply requires that private proprietary homes submit information similar to that already required from not-for-profit homes under EPTL § 8-1.4 and Exec Law §§ 171–176. Katz v Blum, 460 F. Supp. 1222, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14099 (S.D.N.Y. 1978), aff'd, 603 F.2d 213, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16524 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1979).

3. Procedural matters

Proceeding commenced in 1995, to compel intermediate accounting and direct respondent community foundation to distribute designated fund income to petitioner, was barred by applicable 6-year statute of limitations where respondent notified petitioner in 1971 that designated automatic payments would be terminated, and petitioner engaged in subsequent grant application process for more than 20 years, indicating that it clearly was aware of its change of status. Community Serv. Soc'y v New York Community Trust (In re Preiskel), 275 A.D.2d 171, 713 N.Y.S.2d 712, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9291 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

The purpose of any examination under provisions of SCPA § 2211 is to enable the examining party to ascertain facts in order to determine whether he is going to file objections to the account, and where the executors have received gifts during decedent's lifetime the court will not limit the examination of the Attorney General, charged with representation of charitable interests, only to such matters relating to the administration of the estate as shown in the account. In re Estate of Stanley, 59 Misc. 2d 232, 299 N.Y.S.2d 47, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1703 (N.Y. Sur. Ct. 1969).

In a proceeding involving the accounting of an executrix involving charitable beneficiaries, the Attorney General is a necessary and proper party. In re Lown, 59 Misc. 2d 987, 301 N.Y.S.2d 746, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1382 (N.Y. Sur. Ct. 1969).

Where corporation was organized and operated exclusively for charitable, educational and scientific purposes, but held and administered property for charitable purposes, it was required to register with and report to the Attorney General pursuant to the provisions of Estates, Powers and Trust Law § 8-1.4. Lefkowitz v United States Institute for Theatre Technology, Inc., 64 Misc. 2d 973, 316 N.Y.S.2d 549, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1097 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1970).

A complaint by the Attorney General seeking dissolution of the Richmond County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children on the grounds that it had not engaged in any activity since 1977 and was no longer able to carry out the purpose for which it was formed (N-PCL § 1102(a)(2)(E)) stated a cause of action, since public policy dictates that such a society, vested with extraordinary powers, (see N-PCL § 1403), be effective and active, and the Attorney-General had standing to maintain this action (N-PCL § 112(a)(7)); in addition, the allegation that defendant had failed to file the financial reports required of a charitable organization (EPTL § 8-1.4) stated a cause of action, since defendant obtained a Federal income tax exemption as a charitable organization and it could not now refute its status as such, nor did the fact that defendant became statutorily exempt from filing requirements in 1982 release defendant from its culpability for failing to file the requisite reports from 1976 to 1982. Abrams v Richmond County S.P.C.C., 125 Misc. 2d 530, 479 N.Y.S.2d 624, 1984 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3442 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1984).

Witnesses subpoenaed in connection with investigation into charitable corporation's possible misuse of funds were not entitled to transcript of their testimony prior to termination of investigation since Attorney General's investigation (under CLS EPTL § 8-1.4) was not adjudicatory in nature, and witnesses could not condition their compliance with subpoena on receiving transcript of testimony in view of Attorney General's concern that witnesses' testimony might then be tailored. Abrams v Alliance for Progress, Inc., 136 Misc. 2d 1022, 519 N.Y.S.2d 533, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2541 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1987).

Witnesses subpoenaed in connection with Attorney General's investigation into charitable corporation's possible misuse of funds were not entitled to receive copies of their testimony prior to termination of hearing, pursuant to CLS Civ R § 73, since requested testimony was not to be given at public hearing and thus statute did not apply. Abrams v Alliance for Progress, Inc., 136 Misc. 2d 1022, 519 N.Y.S.2d 533, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2541 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1987).

In action by Attorney-General under CLS N-PCL § 112(a)(1) and CLS EPTL Art 8 to obtain injunctive relief against Long Island Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children (LISPCC), venue was properly in New York County where Charities Bureau of Attorney-General was located, and where LISPCC was required to annually file its financial reports or exemptions from filing. Koppell ex rel. People v Long Island Soc'y for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, 163 Misc. 2d 654, 621 N.Y.S.2d 762, 1994 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 600 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1994).

4. Cy pres

Attorney general should have been party to litigation on question of whether doctrine of cy pres operated to continue charitable trust following cessation of educational use of property. De Pew v Union Free School Dist., 41 A.D.2d 308, 342 N.Y.S.2d 560, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4705 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1973).

Where private money was donated to a village fire department for the purpose of sending the fire department band to the 1984 Winter Olympics, the moneys may be required to be used for the purposes for which it was given unless a court, applying the doctrine of cy pres, permits the gift to be used for a different purpose. However, since Article 8 of EPTL confers upon the Attorney General the duty and responsibility to represent beneficiaries of charitable dispositions, that office should be consulted. 1985 Op St Compt No. 85-26, 1985 N.Y. Comp. LEXIS 115.

Court awarded attorney general damages on the breach of fiduciary duty/waste claim against the foundation's officer/director in the amount of $2,000,000 because although the $2,823,000 raised at a fundraiser was used for the officer's political campaign and disbursed by his campaign staff, rather than by the foundation, in violation of N.Y. Not-for-Profit Corp. Law §§ 717 and 720 and N.Y. Est. Powers & Trusts Law §§ 8-1.4 and 8-1.8, the funds ultimately reached their intended destinations. People v Trump, 66 Misc. 3d 200, 112 N.Y.S.3d 467, 2019 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 5936 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2019).

Agency Opinions

1. Procedural matters

If internal review, by Charities Bureau of Office of Attorney General (OAG), of Attorney General's family charitable trust's IRS Form 990 identifies question or issue, Attorney General's recusal policy must be invoked: (1) Attorney General must not participate in matter or be advised, directly or indirectly, that trust is under review, (2) if further action is required, OAG must refer matter to IRS and, if criminal violation is involved, to Governor for appointment of special prosecutor, and (3) similarly, if OAG receives credible, bona fide complaint alleging violation of law involving trust, OAG must refer complaint to IRS and, if situation raises possible criminal violation, to Governor for appointment of special prosecutor. Editor's Notes Laws 1978, ch 640, § 1, eff April 1, 1979, provides as follows:

Section 1. The legislature hereby finds and declares that a wide variety of disasters, often caused or compounded by mankind's own acts, cause loss of life, property and income, disrupt the normal function of government, communities and families, and cause great human suffering. The legislature further finds that it must provide for preparations to prevent, meet, defend against and recover from, dangers and problems arising from these emergencies with the least possible interference with the existing division of the powers of the government.

The legislature finds that a joint effort, public and private, is needed to mobilize the resources of individuals, business, labor, agriculture, and government at every level—federal, state and local–for effective organization to prepare for and meet natural and man-made disasters of all kinds.

The legislature finds that the state must give leadership and direction to this important task of establishing an emergency disaster preparedness program for the protection of each person in the state.

The legislature finds that a mutual benefit can be derived by the state and its political subdivisions by the integration of their natural disaster and peacetime emergency response functions with the civil defense program, thus utilizing local government and emergency services organizations for response to both natural and man-made disaster and to attack.

The legislature finds that local disaster preparedness plans are essential in order to minimize potential disasters and their effects, provide for effective local responses when disasters occur and facilitate local recovery. The legislature further finds that local plans constitute an essential part of the statewide disaster preparedness program and that without local disaster planning, no state disaster program can be fully effective.

Laws 1988, ch 781, § 11, eff June 1, 1989, provides as follows:

§ 11. This act shall take effect on the first day of June next succeeding the date on which it shall have become a law, provided however, that section seven of this act shall take effect upon the enactment into law by the state of New Jersey of legislation having an identical effect with section seven of this act, but, if the state of New Jersey shall have already enacted such legislation, section seven of this act shall take effect immediately, provided however, that effective immediately, the addition, amendment or repeal of any rule or regulation necessary for the implementation of the foregoing sections of this act on their effective date are authorized to be made on or before such effective date. Notes to Decisions

Suffolk County Executive Order 1-1985, which seeks to require county agents to develop emergency preparedness plan for local nuclear power plant, and which was issued in response to county legislature's refusal to develop or approve any plan, represents first step toward implementation of plan, rather than mere vehicle for gathering information to enable county executive to perform statutory functions, and is therefore usurpation of legislative function. Prospect v Cohalan, 65 N.Y.2d 867, 493 N.Y.S.2d 293, 482 N.E.2d 1209, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 15826 (N.Y. 1985).

The Suffolk County Executive did not have the authority to issue an executive order directing a Commissioner of the County Police and Planning Department to test a local radiological emergency response plan (RERP) presently before the United States Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the Federal Emergency Management Agency in connection with the operation of a nuclear power facility. While the general policy considerations contained in Exec Law § 20 (1)(b) encourage the chief executives of local governments within the state to take an active role in developing disaster preparedness, the specific powers conferred on local chief executives under Executive Law article 2-B are limited to instances in which a disaster has occurred or there exists an immediate threat thereof and the power to plan and prepare for a disaster is exclusively the province of local legislative bodies (Exec L § 23(1)). Agency Opinions

Section 201(1) of the Public Health Law gives neither the State Health Commissioner nor the County Health Commissioner sole legal responsibility to initiate action at the county level during a nuclear disaster. 1980 NY Ops Atty Gen Dec 30 (Formal).

Under Article 2-B of the Executive Law, local chief executives and officers are immune from liability for the acts or omissions of disaster preparedness and civil defense forces. Local chief executives, officers and employees are immune from liability when performing disaster assistance pursuant to a civil defense plan, drill or test. Employees may be entitled to indemnification under the General Municipal Law if they are not granted immunity by Article 2-B. Where the immunity provisions of Article 2-B do not apply, local executives, officers and employees may raise the defense of governmental immunity. 1980 NY Ops Atty Gen Dec 31 (Formal).

The county's role in dealing with local disasters is defined by State law and includes authority to provide assistance to political subdivisions within the county. There is no authority, however, for a county to require that a municipality prepare a disaster preparedness plan. Except in the case of a transfer of functions under the Constitution or under an alternative form of county government, a local government may not adopt local laws which impair the powers of any other public corporation. 1990 N.Y. § 21. Disaster preparedness commission established; meetings; powers and duties

1. There is hereby created in the executive department a disaster preparedness commission consisting of the commissioners of transportation, health, division of criminal justice services, education, economic development, agriculture and markets, housing and community renewal, general services, labor, environmental conservation, mental health, addiction services and supports, parks, recreation and historic preservation, corrections and community supervision, children and family services, homeland security and emergency services, and people with developmental disabilities, the president of the New York state energy research and development authority, the superintendents of state police and financial services, the secretary of state, the state fire administrator, the chair of the public service commission, the adjutant general, the office of information technology services, and the office of victim services, the chairs of the thruway authority, the office for the aging, the metropolitan transportation authority, the port authority of New York and New Jersey, the chief professional officer of the state coordinating chapter of the American Red Cross and three additional members, to be appointed by the governor, two of whom shall be chief executives. Each member agency may designate an executive level officer of that agency, with responsibility for disaster preparedness matters, who may represent that agency on the commission. The commissioner of the division of homeland security and emergency services shall serve as chair of the commission, and the governor shall designate the vice chair of the commission. The members of the commission, except those who serve ex officio, shall be allowed their actual and necessary expenses incurred in the performance of their duties under this article but shall receive no additional compensation for services rendered pursuant to this article.

2. The commission, on call of the chairperson, shall meet at least twice each year and at such other times as may be necessary. The agenda and meeting place of all regular meetings shall be made available to the public in advance of such meetings and all such meetings shall be open to the public. The commission shall establish quorum requirements and other rules and procedures regarding conduct of its meetings and other affairs.

3. The commission shall have the following powers and responsibilities:

a. study all aspects of man-made or natural disaster prevention, response and recovery;

b. request and obtain from any state or local officer or agency any information necessary to the commission for the exercise of its responsibilities;

c. prepare and, as appropriate, revise a state comprehensive emergency management plan. The commission shall report all revisions to such plan by March thirty-first of each year to the governor, the legislature and the chief judge of the state, unless a current version of the plan is available to the public on the website of the division of homeland security and emergency services. In preparing such plans, the commission shall consult with federal and local officials, emergency service organizations including both volunteer and commercial emergency response organizations, and the public as it deems appropriate. To the extent such plans impact upon administration of the civil and criminal justice systems of the state, including their operational and fiscal needs in times of disaster emergency, the commission, its staff and any working group, task force, agency or other instrumentality to which it may delegate responsibility to assist it in its duties shall consult with the chief administrator of the courts and coordinate their preparation with him or her or with his or her representatives;

d. prepare, keep current and distribute to chief executives and others an inventory of programs directly relevant to prevention, minimization of damage, readiness, operations during disasters, and recovery following disasters;

e. direct state disaster operations and coordinate state disaster operations with local disaster operations following the declaration of a state disaster emergency;

f. (1) unless it deems it unnecessary, create, following the declaration of a state disaster emergency, a temporary organization in the disaster area to provide for integration and coordination of efforts among the various federal, state, municipal and private agencies involved. The commission, upon a request from a municipality and with the approval of the governor, shall direct the temporary organization to assume direction of the local disaster operations of such municipality, for a specified period of time not to exceed thirty days, and in such cases such temporary organization shall assume direction of such local disaster operations, subject to the supervision of the commission. Upon the expiration of the thirty day period the commission, at the request of the municipality, may extend the temporary organization's direction of such local disaster operations for additional periods not to exceed thirty days. The commission, upon a finding that a municipality is unable to manage local disaster operations, may, with the approval of the governor, direct the temporary organization to assume direction of the local disaster operations of such municipality, for a specified period of time not to exceed thirty days, and in such cases such temporary organization shall assume direction of such local disaster operations, subject to the supervision of the commission. Upon expiration of the thirty day period the commission, after consultation with the municipality, and with the approval of the governor, may extend the temporary organization's direction of such local disaster operations for additional periods not to exceed thirty days. In such event, such temporary organization may utilize such municipality's local resources, provided, however, that the state shall not be liable for any expenses incurred in using such municipality's resources. The state shall not be liable for the expenses incurred in using third party, non-state resources deployed to the affected area by the temporary organization, which are necessary to protect life and safety;

(2) The state incident management team shall have the authority to act as the operational arm of the temporary organization. When called to duty and deployed by the state, members of any state or local incident management team shall be deemed temporary employees of the state and shall have the same privileges and immunities afforded to regular state employees, subject to the rules and regulations promulgated by the president of the state civil service commission pursuant to section one hundred sixty-three of the civil service law;

g. assist in the coordination of federal recovery efforts and coordinate recovery assistance by state and private agencies;

h. provide for periodic briefings, drills, exercises or other means to assure that all state personnel with direct responsibilities in the event of a disaster are fully familiar with response and recovery plans and the manner in which they shall carry out their responsibilities, and coordinate with federal, local or other state personnel. Such activities may take place on a regional or county basis, and local and federal participation shall be invited and encouraged;

i. submit to the governor, the legislature and the chief judge of the state by March thirty-first of each year an annual report which shall include but need not be limited to:

(1) a summary of commission and state agency activities for the year and plans for the ensuing year with respect to the duties and responsibilities of the commission;

(2) recommendations on ways to improve state and local capability to prevent, prepare for, respond to and recover from disasters;

(3) the status of the state and local plans for disaster preparedness and response, including the name of any locality which has failed or refused to develop and implement its own disaster preparedness plan and program; and the extent to which all forms of local emergency response assets have been included, and accounted for in planning and preparation for disaster preparedness and response; and

j. develop public service announcements to be distributed to television and radio stations and other media throughout the state informing the public how to prepare and respond to disasters. Such public service announcements shall be distributed in English and such other languages as such commission deems appropriate.

k. [Redesignated]

4. All powers of the state civil defense commission are assigned to the commission.

5. The state office of emergency management within the division of homeland security and emergency services shall serve as the operational arm of the commission and shall be responsible for implementing provisions of this article and the rules and policies adopted by the commission. The director of the state office of emergency management within the division of homeland security and emergency services shall exercise the authority given to the disaster preparedness commission in section twenty-nine of this article, to coordinate and direct state agencies and assets in response to a state disaster emergency, through their respective agency heads, on behalf of the governor and the chair of the disaster preparedness commission, when the governor, the lieutenant governor, and the chair of the disaster preparedness commission are incapacitated or without an available means of reliable communication with the state office of emergency management. If the director of the state office of emergency management is unable to exercise this authority, then the executive deputy commissioner of the division of homeland security and emergency services shall act in this capacity. In the event that the executive deputy commissioner is unable to exercise this authority, then such authority shall be exercised by the official willing and able to do so in the following order: the superintendent of the division of state police; the state fire administrator; or the director of the office of counterterrorism within the division of homeland security and emergency services. Nothing in this subdivision shall be construed to limit the authority of the governor, lieutenant governor, or the chair of the disaster preparedness commission to oversee the director of the state office of emergency management within the division of homeland security and emergency services or any official exercising authority given to the disaster preparedness commission in section twenty-nine of this article.

Editor's Notes: Laws 2006, ch 171, § 1, eff July 26, 2006, provides as follows:

Section 1. Statement of legislative intent. The legislature hereby finds and declares that it is important to provide information to the public to minimize the impact of disasters. Whether a disaster occurs as a result of extreme weather conditions or other natural forces, or through an act of terrorism or other man-made cause, the provision of information on measures that people should take to protect themselves and their families improves preparedness, alleviates panic and confusion and prevents causalities. The legislature finds and declares that the development and distribution of public service announcements are appropriate and effective uses of public resources, and further declares that there are many New York residents whose primary language is not English and that failing to provide disaster-related communications in the languages understood by the intended audiences complicates the process of evacuation and disaster response. Therefore, it is appropriate that disaster-related public service announcements be produced in multiple languages to reach the greatest number of New Yorkers.

2004 Legislative Agenda of the New York State Judiciary: With the tragedy of September 11th never far from our minds, we recognize that, in today's world, the possibility of disaster and dislocation cannot be ignored. The court system was able to surmount the loss of its facilities in the Court of Claims in lower Manhattan, and other operational obstacles resulting from the catastrophe, only through the extraordinary ingenuity and dedication of judges and other public officials, nonjudicial personnel and members of the Bar. The experience shook us all, however, and we have resolved to insure that, in the future, we must be prepared as possible to insure the uninterrupted operation of the courts. To this end, in the coming session we will ask the Legislature to approve several changes in law, first, we are proposing that provisions be made to assure Judiciary participation in the ongoing deliberations of the State's Disaster Preparedness Commission, established under section 21 of the Executive Law. This participation on this Commission is vital to insure that the needs of the courts are considered in the State's comprehensive efforts to plan for future disasters, and that there can be a fully coordinated response to such disasters by all agencies, executive and judicial, that comprise our system of justice.

Notes to Decisions

Suffolk County Executive Order 1-1985, which seeks to require county agents to develop emergency preparedness plan for local nuclear power plant, and which was issued in response to county legislature's refusal to develop or approve any plan, represents first step toward implementation of plan, rather than mere vehicle for gathering information to enable county executive to perform statutory functions, and is therefore usurpation of legislative function. Prospect v Cohalan, 65 N.Y.2d 867, 493 N.Y.S.2d 293, 482 N.E.2d 1209, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 15826 (N.Y. 1985).

The Suffolk County Executive did not have the authority to issue an executive order directing a Commissioner of the County Police and Planning Department to test a local radiological emergency response plan (RERP) presently before the United States Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the Federal Emergency Management Agency in connection with the operation of a nuclear power facility. While the general policy considerations contained in Exec Law § 20 (1)(b) encourage the chief executives of local governments within the state to take an active role in developing disaster preparedness, the specific powers conferred on local chief executives under Executive Law article 2-B are limited to instances in which a disaster has occurred or there exists an immediate threat thereof and the power to plan and prepare for a disaster is exclusively the province of local legislative bodies (Exec L § 23(1)). Prospect v Cohalan, 109 A.D.2d 210, 490 N.Y.S.2d 795, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49740 (N.Y. App.

County was entitled to dismissal of complaints brought on behalf of students injured when their cafeteria wall collapsed when struck by tornado or high wind, even though emergency preparedness plan which provided for direct notification of schools failed to inform school of issuance of tornado watch, since plan provided that schools would be notified "as conditions warrant," and thus notification was discretionary act for which county was immune. Litchhult v Reiss, 183 A.D.2d 1067, 583 N.Y.S.2d 671, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7172 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. dismissed, app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 737, 594 N.Y.S.2d 708, 610 N.E.2d 381, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 4393 (N.Y. 1992).

Special relationship was not established between students, injured when cafeteria wall collapsed when struck by tornado or high wind, and county, whose emergency preparedness plan provided for direct notification of schools in emergencies "as conditions warrant," but which failed to notify schools of tornado watch, since there was no suggestion in plan's statement of purpose that special protection of students individually, or even of schools generally, was intended. Litchhult v Reiss, 183 A.D.2d 1067, 583 N.Y.S.2d 671, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7172 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. dismissed, app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 737, 594 N.Y.S.2d 708, 610 N.E.2d 381, 1992 N.Y. Agency Opinions

The county's role in dealing with local disasters is defined by State law and includes authority to provide assistance to political subdivisions within the county. There is no authority, however, for a county to require that a municipality prepare a disaster preparedness plan. Except in the case of a transfer of functions under the Constitution or under an alternative form of county government, a local government may not adopt local laws which impair the powers of any other public corporation. 1990 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. I90-58.

Chief executive of municipality may develop plan dealing with declaration of local state of emergency. 1993 NY Ops Atty Gen I 93-46.

The positions of assistant fire chief of a joint fire district and county director of emergency services are compatible. 2017 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 2017-2, 2017 N.Y. AG LEXIS 2.

§ 23-a. County registry of disabled persons; notice

1. In each county having a local disaster preparedness plan pursuant to section twenty-three of this article, in order to meet the special needs of persons who would need assistance during evacuations and sheltering because of physical or mental handicaps, it is recommended that each chief executive maintain a registry of disabled persons located within the county. The registration shall identify those persons in need of assistance and plan for resource allocation to meet those identified needs. To assist the chief executive in identifying such persons, the county department of health, or such other county department or agency as designated by the chief executive, shall provide voluntary registration information to all of its special needs clients and to all incoming clients as part of the intake process. The registry shall be updated annually. The registration program shall give disabled persons the option of pre-authorizing emergency response personnel to enter their homes during search and rescue operations if necessary to assure their safety and welfare during disasters.

2. Upon the establishment of a voluntary registry of disabled persons as provided in subdivision one of this section, the chief executive shall make such registry available to the appropriate county, state and federal agencies for their use in delivering services in the event of a local or state disaster. The chief executive shall, upon the request of the state emergency management office, provide such registry information to such office. The chief executive may, at his discretion, use the registry information for local disaster preparedness only in coordination with other political subdivisions of the state.

3. Upon the establishment of a voluntary registry of disabled persons as provided in subdivision one of this section, at least semi-annually, each chief executive shall cause to be published in a newspaper of general circulation within the county a notice of the availability of the voluntary registration program.

4. All records, data, information, correspondence and communications relating to the registration of disabled persons as provided in subdivision one of this section are confidential, except that such information shall be available to other county chief executives for local disaster preparedness only as the chief executive of the county maintaining such registry deems necessary. Provided, however, the individual file of a person having registered with the registry of disabled persons shall be made available to that person upon request.

5. All community-based services providers, including home health care providers, shall assist the chief executive by collecting registration information for people with special needs as part of program intake processes, establishing programs to increase the awareness of the registration process, and educating clients about the procedures that may be necessary for their safety during disasters.

6. A county shall not be liable for any claim based upon the good faith exercise or performance or the good faith failure to exercise or perform a function or duty on the part of any officer or employee in carrying out a local disaster preparedness plan.

2. Each such facility shall be assisted in the establishment of a disaster preparedness plan. The plan shall include, but not be limited to, the following:

(a) Maintaining a supply of food, water and to the extent deemed necessary and feasible in the reasonable judgment of the operator of the facility, medication in reserve in the event that obtaining such items should become difficult or impossible.

(b) In the reasonable judgment of the facility, having access to a generator or generators sufficient to supply electrical power to the facility.

(c) Establishing an evacuation plan for residents including an alternative site suitable for temporary use.

(d) Establishing staffing plans during a disaster.

§ 23-c. Consistency among local disaster preparedness plans

1. The local disaster preparedness plans for each county, city, town, or village shall be so developed that no part of the local disaster preparedness plan of any county or any city, town, or village within such county conflicts with any part of the local disaster preparedness plan of any of the other said entities within such county or such county itself. In the event of any such conflict, such conflict shall be resolved by such county. The provisions of this subdivision shall not apply to a city wholly containing more than one county or to any county wholly contained within any such city.

2. In the event that any part of the local disaster preparedness plan of any county or any city, town, or village within such county conflicts with any part of the local disaster preparedness plan of any other county or any city, town, or village within any such other county, such conflict shall be resolved by the state emergency management office, as defined in paragraph (e) of subdivision one of section twenty-nine-e of this article. The provisions of this subdivision shall not apply to any county wholly contained within a city wholly containing more than one county. Editor's Notes: Laws 2009, ch 415, § 2, eff Feb 22, 2010, provides as follows:

§ 2. This act shall take effect on the one hundred eightieth day after it shall have become a law. Effective immediately the state emergency management office, as defined in paragraph (e) of subdivision 1 of section 29-e of the executive law, is authorized to promulgate any and all rules and regulations and take any other measures necessary for the timely implementation of this act on its effective date on or before such date.

§ 24. Local state of emergency; local emergency orders by chief executive

1. Notwithstanding any inconsistent provision of law, general or special, in the event of a disaster, rioting, catastrophe, or similar public emergency within the territorial limits of any county, city, town or village, or in the event of reasonable apprehension of immediate danger thereof, and upon a finding by the chief executive thereof that the public safety is imperiled thereby, such chief executive may proclaim a local state of emergency within any part or all of the territorial limits of such local government; provided, however, that in the event of a radiological accident as defined in section twenty-nine-c of this article, such chief executive may request of the governor a declaration of disaster emergency. Such proclamation shall remain in effect for a period not to exceed thirty days or until rescinded by the chief executive, whichever occurs first. The chief executive may issue additional proclamations to extend the state of emergency for additional periods not to exceed thirty days. Following such proclamation and during the continuance of such local state of emergency, the chief executive may promulgate local emergency orders to protect life and property or to bring the emergency situation under control. As illustration, such orders may, within any part or all of the territorial limits of such local government, provide for:

a. the establishment of a curfew and the prohibition and control of pedestrian and vehicular traffic, except essential emergency vehicles and personnel;

b. the designation of specific zones within which the occupancy and use of buildings and the ingress and egress of vehicles and persons may be prohibited or regulated;

c. the regulation and closing of places of amusement and assembly;

d. the suspension or limitation of the sale, dispensing, use or transportation of alcoholic beverages, firearms, explosives, and flammable materials and liquids;

e. the prohibition and control of the presence of persons on public streets and places;

f. the establishment or designation of emergency shelters, emergency medical shelters, and in consultation with the state commissioner of health, community based care centers;

g. the suspension within any part or all of its territorial limits of any of its local laws, ordinances or regulations, or parts thereof subject to federal and state constitutional, statutory and regulatory limitations, which may prevent, hinder, or delay necessary action in coping with a disaster or recovery therefrom whenever (1) a request has been made pursuant to subdivision seven of this section, or (2) whenever the governor has declared a state disaster emergency pursuant to section twenty-eight of this article. Suspension of any local law, ordinance or regulation pursuant to this paragraph shall be subject to the following standards and limits:

(i) no suspension shall be made for a period in excess of five days, provided, however, that upon reconsideration of all the relevant facts and circumstances, a suspension may be extended for additional periods not to exceed five days each during the pendency of the state of emergency;

(ii) no suspension shall be made which does not safeguard the health and welfare of the public and which is not reasonably necessary to the disaster effort;

(iii) any such suspension order shall specify the local law, ordinance or regulation, or part thereof suspended and the terms and conditions of the suspension;

(iv) the order may provide for such suspension only under particular circumstances, and may provide for the alteration or modification of the requirements of such local law, ordinance or regulation suspended, and may include other terms and conditions;

(v) any such suspension order shall provide for the minimum deviation from the requirements of the local law, ordinance or regulation suspended consistent with the disaster action deemed necessary; and

(vi) when practicable, specialists shall be assigned to assist with the related emergency actions to avoid adverse effects resulting from such suspension.

2. A local emergency order shall be effective from the time and in the manner prescribed in the order and shall be published as soon as practicable in a newspaper of general circulation in the area affected by such order and transmitted to the radio and television media for publication and broadcast. Such orders may be amended, modified and rescinded by the chief executive during the pendency or existence of the state of emergency. Such orders shall cease to be in effect five days after promulgation or upon declaration by the chief executive that the state of emergency no longer exists, whichever occurs sooner. The chief executive nevertheless, may extend such orders for additional periods not to exceed five days each during the pendency of the local state of emergency.

3. The proclamation of a local state of emergency and local emergency orders of a chief executive of a county shall be executed in quadruplicate and shall be filed within seventy-two hours or as soon thereafter as practicable in the office of the clerk of the governing board of the county, the office of the county clerk, the office of the secretary of state and the state office of emergency management within the division of homeland security and emergency services. The proclamation of a local state of emergency and local emergency orders of a chief executive of a city, town or village shall be executed in quadruplicate and shall be filed within seventy-two hours or as soon thereafter as practicable in the office of the clerk of such municipal corporation, the office of the county clerk, the office of the secretary of state and the state office of emergency management within the division of homeland security and emergency services.

4. Nothing in this section shall be deemed to limit the power of any local government to confer upon its chief executive any additional duties or responsibilities deemed appropriate.

5. Any person who knowingly violates any local emergency order of a chief executive promulgated pursuant to this section is guilty of a class B misdemeanor.

6. Whenever a local state of emergency is declared by the chief executive of a local government pursuant to this section, the chief executive of the county in which such local state of emergency is declared, or where a county is wholly contained within a city, the mayor of such city, may request the governor to remove all or any number of sentenced inmates from institutions maintained by such county in accordance with section ninety-three of the correction law.

7. Whenever a local state of emergency has been declared pursuant to this section, the chief executive of the county in which the local state of emergency has been declared, or where a county is wholly contained within a city, the chief executive of the city, may request the governor to provide assistance under this chapter, provided that such chief executive determines that the disaster is beyond the capacity of local government to meet adequately and state assistance is necessary to supplement local efforts to save lives and to protect property, public health and safety, or to avert or lessen the threat of a disaster.

8. The legislature may terminate by concurrent resolution, such emergency orders at any time.

Notes to Decisions

Suffolk County Executive Order 1-1985, which seeks to require county agents to develop emergency preparedness plan for local nuclear power plant, and which was issued in response to county legislature's refusal to develop or approve any plan, represents first step toward implementation of plan, rather than mere vehicle for gathering information to enable county executive to perform statutory functions, and is therefore usurpation of legislative function. Prospect v Cohalan, 65 N.Y.2d 867, 493 N.Y.S.2d 293, 482 N.E.2d 1209, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 15826 (N.Y. 1985).

The Suffolk County Executive did not have the authority to issue an executive order directing a Commissioner of the County Police and Planning Department to test a local radiological emergency response plan (RERP) presently before the United States Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the Federal Emergency Management Agency in connection with the operation of a nuclear power facility. While the general policy considerations contained in Exec Law § 20 (1)(b) encourage the chief executives of local governments within the state to take an active role in developing disaster preparedness, the specific powers conferred on local chief executives under Executive Law article 2-B are limited to instances in which a disaster has occurred or there exists an immediate threat thereof and the power to plan and prepare for a disaster is exclusively the province of local legislative bodies (Exec L § 23(1)). Orders by a town's supervisor and board for certain work to be performed to stabilize a slope behind a condominium during a period when there had been declared a local state of emergency under N.Y. Exec. Law §§ 24, 25, was a proper exercise of discretion under New York Executive Law and was not an unconstitutional exercise of authority in violation of N.Y. Const. art. 8, § 1. Sluys v Holbrook, 292 A.D.2d 371, 739 N.Y.S.2d 173, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2240 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2002).

N.Y. Exec. Law § 25 was not subject to the temporal limitations set forth in N.Y. Exec. Law § 24. Thus, a municipality's powers under N.Y. Exec. Law § 25 could not only be exercised during a declared state of emergency or in conjunction with a local emergency order. Pierce v Hickey, 129 A.D.3d 1287, 11 N.Y.S.3d 321, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. Agency Opinions

The chief executive of a county may unilaterally declare a local state of emergency in a city, town or village within the territorial limits of the county without the prior concurrence of the chief executive of such city, town or village. 1979 NY Ops Atty Gen Aug 24 (formal).

A town has no authority to enact a juvenile curfew that holds parents responsible for their children's violation of the curfew. A town does have authority to enact a juvenile curfew under its police power if the curfew is necessary for the protection or preservation of the public health, safety and welfare. However, such curfew must be reasonable in relation to the ends sought to be achieved and should be narrowly drawn to avoid infringing on the fundamental rights of juveniles. 1980 NY Ops Atty Gen Dec. 15 (informal).

The chief executive of a local government may declare a state of emergency with respect to state-owned property in his locality. He is also authorized to use school buses to cope with a disaster as long as the school district agrees. 1980 NY Ops Atty Gen Dec 30 (Formal).

Under Article 2-B of the Executive Law, local chief executives and officers are immune from liability for the acts or omissions of disaster preparedness and civil defense forces. Local chief executives, officers and employees are immune from liability when performing disaster assistance pursuant to a civil defense plan, drill or test. Employees may be entitled to indemnification under the General Municipal Law if they are not granted immunity by Article 2-B. Where the immunity provisions of Article 2-B do not apply, local executives, officers and employees may raise the defense of governmental immunity. 1980 NY Ops Atty Gen Dec 31 (Formal).

The county's role in dealing with local disasters is defined by State law and includes authority to provide assistance to political subdivisions within the county. There is no authority, however, for a county to require that a municipality prepare a disaster preparedness plan. Except in the case of a transfer of functions under the Constitution or under an alternative form of county government, a local government may not adopt local laws which impair the powers of any other public corporation. 1990 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. I90-58.

Auxiliary police officers may direct and control traffic during official drills and in connection with such drills may be given the authority to issue simplified traffic informations. 1990 NY Ops Atty Gen I 90-75.

Chief executive of municipality may develop plan dealing with declaration of local state of emergency. 1993 NY Ops Atty Gen I 93-46.

Town supervisor may declare state of emergency over and promulgate orders with respect to property owned by another municipality that lies within town's boundaries. 2005 NY Ops Atty Gen I 05-5.

Town Supervisor may not direct use of resources of another municipality in emergency without that municipality's consent. 2005 NY Ops Atty Gen I 05-5.

§ 25. Use of local government resources in a disaster

1. Upon the threat or occurrence of a disaster, the chief executive of any political subdivision is hereby authorized and empowered to and shall use any and all facilities, equipment, supplies, personnel and other resources of his political subdivision in such manner as may be necessary or appropriate to cope with the disaster or any emergency resulting therefrom.

2. Upon the threat or occurrence of a disaster, a chief executive may request and accept assistance which is coordinated and directed by the county chief executive as provided in section twenty-six of this article.

3. A chief executive may also request and accept assistance from any other political subdivision and may receive therefrom and utilize any real or personal property or the service of any personnel thereof on such terms and conditions as may be mutually agreed to by the chief executives of the requesting and assisting political subdivisions.

4. Upon the receipt of a request for assistance made pursuant to subdivision two or three of this section, the chief executive of any political subdivision may give, lend or lease, on such terms and conditions as he may deem necessary to promote the public welfare and protect the interests of such political subdivision, any services, equipment, facilities, supplies or other resources of his political subdivision. Any lease or loan of real or personal property pursuant to this subdivision, or any transfer of personnel pursuant hereto, shall be only for the purpose of assisting a political subdivision in emergency relief, reconstruction, or rehabilitation made necessary by the disaster.

5. A political subdivision shall not be liable for any claim based upon the exercise or performance or the failure to exercise or perform a discretionary function or duty on the part of any officer or employee in carrying out the provisions of this section.

6. The chief executive, when requesting assistance pursuant to this section may request assistance from the civil defense and disaster preparedness forces of any other political subdivision, but only if the civil defense and disaster preparedness forces of the type being requested have already been activated within the political subdivisions requesting assistance. The chief executive of any political subdivision receiving such a request is hereby authorized and empowered, subject to the provisions of section twenty-six of this article, to respond thereto.

7. Any power or authority conferred upon any political subdivision by this section shall be in addition to and not in substitution for or limitation of any powers or authority otherwise vested in such subdivision or any officer thereof.

Add, L 1978, ch 640, § 3, eff April 1, 1979.

Notes to Decisions

County was entitled to dismissal of complaints brought on behalf of students injured when their cafeteria wall collapsed when struck by tornado or high wind, even though emergency preparedness plan which provided for direct notification of schools failed to inform school of issuance of tornado watch, since plan provided that schools would be notified "as conditions warrant," and thus notification was discretionary act for which county was immune. Litchhult v Reiss, 183 A.D.2d 1067, 583 N.Y.S.2d 671, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7172 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. dismissed, app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 737, 594 N.Y.S.2d 708, 610 N.E.2d 381, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 4393 (N.Y. 1992).

Special relationship was not established between students, injured when cafeteria wall collapsed when struck by tornado or high wind, and county, whose emergency preparedness plan provided for direct notification of schools in emergencies "as conditions warrant," but which failed to notify schools of tornado watch, since there was no suggestion in plan's statement of purpose that special protection of students individually, or even of schools generally, was intended. Litchhult v Reiss, 183 A.D.2d 1067, 583 N.Y.S.2d 671, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7172 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. dismissed, app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 737, 594 N.Y.S.2d 708, 610 N.E.2d 381, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 4393 (N.Y. 1992).

Orders by a town's supervisor and board for certain work to be performed to stabilize a slope behind a condominium during a period when there had been declared a local state of emergency under N.Y. Exec. Law §§ 24, 25, was a proper exercise of discretion under New York Executive Law and was not an unconstitutional exercise of authority in violation of N.Y. Const. art. 8, § 1. Sluys v Holbrook, 292 A.D.2d 371, 739 N.Y.S.2d 173, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2240 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2002).

While a city, unlike a port authority and a transit authority, clearly was a political subdivision within the meaning of N.Y. Exec. Law § 25(5), the city did not demonstrate that § 25(5) automatically conferred immunity upon it for demolition workers' claims of injuries that occurred at the World Trade Center, following the terrorist attack of September 11, 2002, after the search for survivors at the site ended. Daly v Port Auth. of N.Y. & N.J., 793 N.Y.S.2d 712, 7 Misc. 3d 299, 233 N.Y.L.J. 8, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 13 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2005).

Neither the New York City Transit Authority nor the Port Authority is a political subdivision within the meaning of N.Y. Exec. Law § 25; therefore neither is immune under § 25(5). Daly v Port Auth. of N.Y. & N.J., 793 N.Y.S.2d 712, 7 Misc. 3d 299, 233 N.Y.L.J. 8, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 13 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2005).

In an action in which workers alleged that they suffered respiratory injuries due to exposure to hazardous conditions during the cleanup of the World Trade Center after terrorist attacks, the district court's denial of state immunity defenses asserted by a city and a port authority was not subject to interlocutory appeal under the collateral order doctrine because the plain language of the New York State Defense Emergency Act and the New York State and Local Natural Disaster and Man-Made Disaster Preparedness Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 25(5), demonstrated that immunity under those statutes was limited to immunity from liability. Because the language of the statutes was clear, N.Y. C.P.L.R. § 5701's liberal policy of appealability was entitled to little, if any, weight in determining whether the district court's order was appealable under 28 U.S.C.S. § 1291. McCue v City of New York (In re World Trade Ctr. Disaster Site, Litig.), 521 F.3d 169, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 6222 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2008).

Immunity conferred by N.Y. Exec. Law § 25 was not applicable when a motorist contended that the motorist was struck by building debris from the back of a truck when a county and its employee, who was driving the truck in the aftermath of storms, failed to secure the top of an open container on the back of the truck with some type of cover as required by statute. Pierce v Hickey, 129 A.D.3d 1287, 11 N.Y.S.3d 321, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4816 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2015).

Federal district court court rejected pesticide manufacturers' claim that the government emergency doctrine, pursuant to N.Y. Exec. Law § 25, did not shield the manufacturers from liability for the use oftheir products to combat the West Nile Virus in the New York City area, which resulted in a die-off of lobsters in Long Island Sound. Fox v Cheminova, Inc., 387 F. Supp. 2d 160, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19915 (E.D.N.Y. 2005).

N.Y. Exec. Law § 25 was not subject to the temporal limitations set forth in N.Y. Exec. Law § 24. Thus, a municipality's powers under N.Y. Exec. Law § 25 could not only be exercised during a declared state of emergency or in conjunction with a local emergency order. Pierce v Hickey, 129 A.D.3d 1287, 11 N.Y.S.3d 321, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4816 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2015).

The chief executive of a local government may declare a state of emergency with respect to state-owned property in his locality. He is also authorized to use school buses to cope with a disaster as long as the school district agrees. 1980 NY Ops Atty Gen Dec 30 (Formal).

Under Article 2-B of the Executive Law, local chief executives and officers are immune from liability for the acts or omissions of disaster preparedness and civil defense forces. Counties may form auxiliary police units on behalf of towns; the powers of auxiliary police officers are defined under the provisions of the Defense Emergency Act and the Criminal Procedure Law; auxiliary police officers designated as peace officers may possess a firearm only if licensed under Penal Law § 400.00. 1991 NY Ops Atty Gen I 91-36.

Town Supervisor may not direct use of resources of another municipality in emergency without that municipality's consent. 2005 NY Ops Atty Gen I 05-5.

Suffolk County Executive Order 1-1985, which seeks to require county agents to develop emergency preparedness plan for local nuclear power plant, and which was issued in response to county legislature's refusal to develop or approve any plan, represents first step toward implementation of plan, rather than mere vehicle for gathering information to enable county executive to perform statutory functions, and is therefore usurpation of legislative function. An order finding that a county sheriff was guilty of an unlawful discriminatory practice based on national origin with respect to his discharge of one of his deputies would be modified by annulling that portion that directed the complainant be offered a position as a deputy with the current sheriff, where the current sheriff had not committed any discriminatory acts and thus an order forcing him to hire a deputy not of his own choosing, but for whose acts he would nevertheless be personally liable, would deprive him of the power to select his own duties and was thus beyond the division's power to fashion remedies. § 27. Continuity of local governments

1. Every county, except those wholly contained within a city, every city, every town and every village shall have power to provide by local law, and every other public corporation, district corporation or public benefit corporation shall have power to provide by resolution, for its continuity and that of its elective and appointive officers, including members of its legislative or governing body when, in the event of a disaster and the emergency conditions caused thereby, any of such officers is unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office or is absent from the political subdivision. In any such local law or resolution, provision may be made that the removal of a disability or the termination of an absence from the political subdivision of an officer higher on a list or order of succession provided therein to an office shall not terminate the service in such office of an individual lower on such list or order of succession who is temporarily filling such office. Notwithstanding the provisions of any general or special law or city or village charter, a local law or resolution adopted pursuant to this section may be made effective without approval at a mandatory or permissive referendum but in no case shall such local law or resolution become effective until one certified copy thereof has been filed with the clerk of the political subdivision or other appropriate official designated for such purpose by the respective legislative or governing body, one certified copy thereof has been filed in the office of the state comptroller and three certified copies thereof have been filed in the office of the secretary of state.

No provision of this subdivision shall be construed or interpreted as affecting the validity of any ordinance, local law or resolution enacted prior to April first, nineteen hundred seventy-nine or actions taken thereunder by the government of any county, city, town or village.

2. The provisions of this section shall not be applicable in any case where the continuity of the government of a political subdivision or that of any of its elective or appointive officers is otherwise provided for by or pursuant to law.

3. This section shall be construed liberally. The powers herein granted shall be in addition to and not in substitution of any power granted, procedure provided or provision made in any other law.

§ 28. State declaration of disaster emergency

1. Whenever the governor, on his own initiative or pursuant to a request from one or more chief executives, finds that a disaster has occurred or may be imminent for which local governments are unable to respond adequately, he shall declare a disaster emergency by executive order.

2. Upon declaration of a disaster arising from a radiological accident, the governor or his designee, shall direct one or more chief executives and emergency services organizations to:

(a) notify the public that an emergency exists; and

(b) take appropriate protective actions pursuant to the radiological emergency preparedness plan approved pursuant to sections twenty-two and twenty-three of this article. Governor's distribution of form letters to individuals who volunteered in relief efforts, thanking them for their assistance in emergency situation, did not violate right to free election under CLS US Const Amend 1 and CLS NY Const Art I § 9. Free food, T-shirts and entertainment furnished at picnics held in honor of individuals who came forward and rendered assistance during emergency situation did not constitute unconstitutional gifts in violation of CLS NY Const Art VII § 8(1) where there was no proof that such items were purchased with public funds. Complimentary ski lift tickets, included with letters from Governor to individuals who came forward and rendered assistance during emergency situation, did not constitute unconstitutional gifts in violation of CLS NY Const Art VII § 8(1) since lift tickets were furnished by Olympic Regional Development Authority (ORDA), public benefit corporation and independent entity which obtains its funding from Legislature and not from state treasury or state property, ORDA had occasionally provided complementary tickets to public to promote tourism, and redemption of such tickets is without expense to state. Complimentary tickets for admission to State Fair, included with letters from Governor to individuals who came forward and rendered assistance during emergency situation, did not constitute unconstitutional gifts in violation of CLS NY Const Art VII § 8(1) since State Fair, during year at issue, was completely self-funded and no tax monies were appropriated for operating costs, and entity which operates State Fair, part of Department of Agriculture and Markets, has broad authority to regulate admission and had in past provided free admission to certain patrons for purpose of promoting attendance at fair. Furnishing of complimentary tickets to State Fair, included with letters from Governor to individuals who came forward and rendered assistance during emergency situation, and printing and mailing expenses associated therewith did not violate CLS NY Const Art VII § 7, which requires there to be specific legislative appropriation each time that monies in state treasury are spent, since tickets did not entail any expenditure of monies derived from state treasury, and majority of printing and mailing expenses were financed by Department of Economic Development from appropriations by Legislature for business development and promotion of tourism; although Executive Chamber picked up small portion of postage expenses, such was reasonable expenditure consistent with goal of disaster preparedness. § 28-a. Post disaster recovery planning

1. Whenever a state disaster emergency has been declared any county, city, town or village included in such disaster area shall prepare a local recovery and redevelopment plan, unless the legislative body of the municipality shall determine such plan to be unnecessary or impractical. Prior to making such determination, the municipality shall notify the commission of its intent to forego preparation and provide an opportunity to comment to the commission. Within fifteen days after the declaration of a state disaster, any county, city, town or village included in such disaster area shall report to the commission whether the preparation of a recovery and redevelopment plan has been commenced, and if not, the reasons for not preparing such plan. Within sixty days after the declaration of a state disaster, the commission shall report to the governor and the legislature the status of local recovery and redevelopment plans, including the name of any municipality which has failed or refused to commence the development of a recovery and redevelopment plan.

2. The commission shall provide technical assistance in the development of such plans upon the request of such county, city, town or village.

3. A local recovery and redevelopment plan shall include, but need not be limited to: plans for replacement, reconstruction, removal or relocation of damaged or destroyed facilities; proposed new or amended regulations such as zoning, subdivision, building or sanitary ordinances and codes; and plans for economic recovery and community development. Such plans shall take into account and to the extent practicable incorporate relevant existing plans and policies and such plans shall take into account the need to minimize the potential impact of any future disasters on the community.

4. Proposed plans shall be presented at a public hearing upon five days notice published in a newspaper of general circulation in the area affected and transmitted to the radio and television media for publication and broadcast. Such notice shall state the time and place of the hearing and indicate where copies of the proposed plan may be inspected or obtained. Any county, city, town, or village preparing a recovery and redevelopment plan pursuant to this subdivision may, upon mutual agreement with any other such county, city, town or village, hold a joint hearing to consider such recovery and redevelopment plan.

5. Such plans shall be prepared within forty-five days after the declaration of a state disaster and shall be transmitted to the commission. The commission shall provide its comments on the plan within ten days after receiving such plan.

6. A plan shall be adopted by such county, city, town or village within ten days after receiving the comments of the commission. The adopted plan may be amended at any time in the same manner as originally prepared, revised and adopted.

7. The adopted plan shall be the official policy for recovery and redevelopment within the municipality.

8. Nothing in this section shall preclude any municipality from applying for or accepting and receiving any federal funds.

§ 29. Direction of state agency assistance in a disaster emergency

Upon the declaration of a state disaster emergency the governor may direct any and all agencies of the state government to provide assistance under the coordination of the disaster preparedness commission. Such state assistance may include: (1) utilizing, lending, or giving to political subdivisions, with or without compensation therefor, equipment, supplies, facilities, services of state personnel, and other resources, other than the extension of credit; (2) distributing medicine, medical supplies, food and other consumable supplies through any public or private agency authorized to distribute the same; (3) performing on public or private lands temporary emergency work essential for the protection of public health and safety, clearing debris and wreckage, making emergency repairs to and temporary replacements of public facilities of political subdivisions damaged or destroyed as a result of such disaster; and (4) making such other use of their facilities, equipment, supplies and personnel as may be necessary to assist in coping with the disaster or any emergency resulting therefrom.

Notes to Decisions

1. Generally

Suffolk County Executive Order 1-1985, which seeks to require county agents to develop emergency preparedness plan for local nuclear power plant, and which was issued in response to county legislature's refusal to develop or approve any plan, represents first step toward implementation of plan, rather than mere vehicle for gathering information to enable county executive to perform statutory functions, and is therefore usurpation of legislative function. Analysis

1. Generally
2. Under former § 10

1. Generally

Under Article 2-B of the Executive Law, local chief executives and officers are immune from liability for the acts or omissions of disaster preparedness and civil defense forces. Local chief executives, officers and employees are immune from liability when performing disaster assistance pursuant to a civil defense plan, drill or test. Employees may be entitled to indemnification under the General Municipal Law if they are not granted immunity by Article 2-B. Where the immunity provisions of Article 2-B do not apply, local executives, officers and employees may raise the defense of governmental immunity. 1980 NY Ops Atty Gen Dec 31 (Formal).

When a local disaster emergency is declared, a municipality is responsible for its own costs incurred within its own jurisdiction. Where supplies, manpower or other aid is provided to a municipality by another municipality, it is done so pursuant to whatever arrangements are made and agreed upon by the requesting and providing municipalities. Assistance may be in the form of a gift, a loan or a lease. Where supplies, manpower or other aid is provided by the State, it does so at its own expense, since such aid is provided only when a State disaster emergency is declared and a State disaster is declared only when local governments may be unable to respond adequately. Where a State disaster emergency is declared, the local governments are to bear the costs incurred to the extent possible, pending any funds which may become available under State and Federal disaster relief programs. 1982 Op St Compt File #82-203.

2. Under former § 10

The authority to cope with a natural disaster in a county not having a county executive or manager rests in the chairman of the board of supervisors, or, in his absence or incapacity, in the governing board of the county. 1965 NY Ops Atty Gen June 9.

The term "political subdivision" as used in the Public Officers Law means the area from which an officer is selected and in the case of an elective officer, the area in which the people who elect him reside. 1977 NY Ops Atty Gen Aug 18 (Informal), 1977 N.Y. AG LEXIS 64.

An elected commissioner of Sanitary District No. 2 in the Town of Hempstead in the County of Nassau is a public officer of a political subdivision and not of a municipality; such a commissioner must be a resident of the sanitary district at the time of election; and if the sanitary district commissioner moves from that district to a new residence outside of the district, even though in the same town, the office becomes vacant under Public Officers Law § 30 (1)(d); provision of Public Officers Law § 30 (4-a), by its own terms, is confined in its operation to members of the department of sanitation of a municipality so it is not applicable to an officer of this political subdivision. 1977 NY Ops Atty Gen Aug 18 (Informal).

New York State Urban Development Corporation and its subsidiary have the power to acquire, for their corporate purposes, properties contaminated by chemical wastes and, while it is not entirely free from doubt, such properties may be acquired and paid for at their market value unaffected by the contamination. 1978 NY Ops Atty Gen Sept 19.

§ 29-a. Suspension of other laws [Effective until April 30, 2021]

1. Subject to the state constitution, the federal constitution and federal statutes and regulations, the governor may by executive order temporarily suspend any statute, local law, ordinance, or orders, rules or regulations, or parts thereof, of any agency during a state disaster emergency, if compliance with such provisions would prevent, hinder, or delay action necessary to cope with the disaster or if necessary to assist or aid in coping with such disaster. The governor, by executive order, may issue any directive during a state disaster emergency declared in the following instances: fire, flood, earthquake, hurricane, tornado, high water, landslide, mudslide, wind, storm, wave action, volcanic activity, epidemic, disease outbreak, air contamination, terrorism, cyber event, blight, drought, infestation, explosion, radiological accident, nuclear, chemical, biological, or bacteriological release, water contamination, bridge failure or bridge collapse. Any such directive must be necessary to cope with the disaster and may provide for procedures reasonably necessary to enforce such directive.

2. Suspensions pursuant to subdivision one of this section shall be subject to the following standards and limits, which shall apply to any directive where specifically indicated:

a. no suspension or directive shall be made for a period in excess of thirty days, provided, however, that upon reconsideration of all of the relevant facts and circumstances, the governor may extend the suspension for additional periods not to exceed thirty days each;

b. no suspension or directive shall be made which is not in the interest of the health or welfare of the public and which is not reasonably necessary to aid the disaster effort;

c. any such suspension order shall specify the statute, local law, ordinance, order, rule or regulation or part thereof to be suspended and the terms and conditions of the suspension;

d. the order may provide for such suspension only under particular circumstances, and may provide for the alteration or modification of the requirements of such statute, local law, ordinance, order, rule or regulation suspended, and may include other terms and conditions;

e. any such suspension order or directive shall provide for the minimum deviation from the requirements of the statute, local law, ordinance, order, rule or regulation suspended consistent with the goals of the disaster action deemed necessary; and

f. when practicable, specialists shall be assigned to assist with the related emergency actions to avoid needless adverse effects resulting from such suspension.

3. Such suspensions or directives shall be effective from the time and in the manner prescribed in such orders and shall be published as soon as practicable in the state bulletin.

4. The legislature may terminate by concurrent resolution executive orders issued under this section at any time.

Notes to Decisions

Under 29 U.S.C.S. § 623(j), N.Y. Retire. & Soc. Sec. Law § 381-b(e), which subjects state police members to mandatory retirement, is exempt from the Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA), 29 U.S.C.S. §§ 621- 34, because (1) 29 U.S.C.S. § 623(j)'s exemption has legal force even if the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) fails to issue regulations identifying job performance tests that are to be used for purposes of 29 U.S.C.S. § 623(j); (2) state officials are not required to provide state police members an opportunity to demonstrate physical and mental fitness until after the HHS issues regulations under 29 U.S.C.S. § 623(j); and (3) N.Y. Retire. & Soc. Sec. Law § 381-b(e) became a bona fide retirement plan under 29 U.S.C.S. § 623(j) when the executive order suspending N.Y. Retire. & Soc. Sec. Law § 381-b(e) was not renewed under N.Y. Exec. Law § 29-a(2)(a). Accordingly, state police members' claim that N.Y. Retire. & Soc. Sec. Law § 381-b(e) violated the ADEA was dismissed. Police Benevolent Ass'n of the N.Y. State Troopers v Bennett, 477 F. Supp. 2d 534, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21911 (N.D.N.Y. 2007).

Executive Order No. 52 (EO52), N.Y. Comp. Codes R. & Regs. tit. 9, § 8.52, was effective on October 26, 2012, and a town's claim that the effective date of EO52 was October 31, 2012 was rejected as it would undermine EO52's purpose as those individuals who were unable to initiate actions on the day Hurricane Sandy struck in New York would be unable to benefit from the suspension; further, in Executive Order No. 81, the New York State Governor recognized the 30-day limit in this section and commented that EO52 would expire on November 25, 2012, which was exactly 30 days after the October 26, 2012, effective date. Matter of Parietti v Sampson, 117 A.D.3d 830, 986 N.Y.S.2d 160, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3456 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2014).

Trial court properly denied a candidate's motion for summary judgment on his claim that so much of Executive Order No. 202.23 that canceled a special election was invalid because the Governor and the State Board of Elections demonstrated, prima facie, that the canceling of the special election was the minimum deviation necessary to assist or aid in coping with the COVID-19 pandemic, and was authorized pursuant to the emergency powers granted to the Governor by the Executive Law, in addition, the doctrine of laches applied due to the candidate's 14-day delay between the issuance of the Executive Order and the filing of the petition. Matter of Quinn v Cuomo, 183 A.D.3d 928, 125 N.Y.S.3d 120, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3146 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2020).

Fact that the order did not specifically name CPL 180.80 was of no significance because the order specified the statute, local law, ordinance, order, rule, or regulation or part thereof to be suspended and the terms and conditions of the suspension by specifying the types of provisions that were the subject of the order; the order was specific enough since anyone involved in the practice of law would understand which statutory provisions had been tolled by the order. People of State of N.Y. ex rel. Nevins v Brann, 67 Misc. 3d 638, 122 N.Y.S.3d 874, 2020 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1431 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2020).

There is no particular formula that the Governor must follow when he or she suspends laws under the statute; he or she he simply must indicate with specificity which laws are being suspended. People of State of N.Y. ex rel. Nevins v Brann, 67 Misc. 3d 638, 122 N.Y.S.3d 874, 2020 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1431 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2020).

Respondent's motion to dismiss the filing of a juvenile delinquency petition against him was denied because Family Ct Act § 302.2 was clearly within the scope of the Executive Order signed by the Governor, which tolled the statute of limitations for initiating legal proceedings during the COVID-19 pandemic. Matter of M.R., 69 Misc. 3d 368, 130 N.Y.S.3d 252, 2020 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4225 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. Aug. 10, 2020).

Although respondent turned 18 years of age in June 2020, under the Executive Orders issued, the period by which the Presentment Agency had to file the juvenile delinquency petition against him was extended due to the COVID-19 pandemic and, thus, the petition, filed on July 17, 2020, before the expiration date of September 4, 2020 under the Executive Order, made the petition timely filed. Matter of M.R., 69 Misc. 3d 368, 130 N.Y.S.3d 252, 2020 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4225 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. Aug. 10, 2020).

To the extent that petitioner challenged the Governor's authority to issue the Executive Orders suspending or modifying the election law regarding absentee ballots and permitting electronic application for an absentee ballot where a state disaster had been declared, that claim was rejected because not only were the Governor's actions reasonable and necessary in response to the COVID-19 pandemic, they were well founded in the law. Matter of Forman v Haight, 69 Misc. 3d 803, 132 N.Y.S.3d 531, 2020 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 5618 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2020).

Governor's executive orders, starting with EO 202.8, issued March 20, 2020, were reasonable under the circumstances during the onset of the pandemic. The executive orders since July 6, 2020 (the date of EO 202.48) do not pertain to ACOD's (adjournments in contemplation of dismissal. People v Zeolli, 69 Misc. 3d 927, 133 N.Y.S.3d 772, 2020 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 7039 (N.Y. City Ct. 2020).

Order to Show Cause filed by restaurant owners, seeking to prevent enforcement of COVID dining restrictions limiting New York City restaurants to 25% indoor capacity, while restaurants elsewhere in the State could open at 50% capacity, was denied because the owners' allegations of economic loss did not constitute irreparable harm, the restriction had a substantial relation to public health and safety in the City, and less densely populated areas did not present the same risk of harm. Bocelli Ristorante Inc. v Cuomo, 2020 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 10213 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2020).

Plaintiff's motion for a preliminary injunction seeking to be permitted to seat more than 50 people for wedding gatherings was denied because the Court could not conclude that the restrictions that defendants implemented in Executive Order 202.45 and the rules and regulations that implemented that Executive Order were arbitrary or oppressive or bore no substantial relationship to the public safety concerns, namely the spread of COVID-19, that they were intended to address. § 29-b. Use of disaster emergency response personnel in disasters

1. The governor may, in his or her discretion, direct the state disaster preparedness commission to conduct an emergency exercise or drill, under its direction, in which all or any of the personnel and resources of the agencies of the commission of the state may be utilized to perform the duties assigned to them in a disaster, for the purpose of protecting and preserving human life or property in a disaster. During a disaster or such drill or exercise, disaster emergency response personnel in the state shall operate under the direction and command of the chair of such commission, and shall possess the same powers, duties, rights, privileges and immunities as are applicable in a civil defense drill held at the direction of the state civil defense commission under the provisions of the New York state defense emergency act.

2. Local use of disaster emergency response personnel. a. Upon the threat or occurrence of a disaster, and during and immediately following the same, and except as otherwise provided in paragraph d of this subdivision, the county chief executive may direct the emergency management director of a county to assist in the protection and preservation of human life or property by calling upon disaster emergency response personnel employed by or supporting that county, as specified in the county comprehensive emergency management plan, to perform the emergency response duties assigned to them.

b. The disaster emergency response personnel of the county shall be regarded as a reserve disaster force to be activated, in whole or in part, by the county emergency management director upon the direction of the county chief executive when the county chief executive, in his or her discretion, is convinced that the personnel and resources of local municipal and private agencies normally available for disaster assistance are insufficient adequately to cope with the disaster.

c. Except as provided in paragraph d of this subdivision, the county chief executive may exercise the power conferred upon him in paragraph a of this subdivision, or may deactivate the disaster emergency response personnel of the county in whole or in part, on his own motion or upon the request of the chief executive officer of a village, town or city located within the county of which he is an officer.

d. Where the local office of public safety or emergency management in a city is independent of the county office of public safety or emergency management and is not consolidated therewith, the county chief executive may direct the emergency management director of the county to render assistance within such city only when the chief executive officer of such city has certified to him that the disaster emergency response personnel of the city have been activated pursuant to the provisions of subdivision three of this section and that all resources available locally are insufficient adequately to cope with the disaster.

e. When performing disaster assistance pursuant to this section, county disaster emergency response personnel shall operate under the direction and command of the county emergency management director and his or her duly authorized deputies, and shall possess the same powers, duties, rights, privileges and immunities they would possess when performing their duties in a locally sponsored civil defense drill or training exercise in the civil or political subdivision in which they are enrolled, employed or assigned emergency response responsibilities.

f. The chief executive officer of a city shall be responsible for the conduct of disaster operations within the city, including the operations directed by the county emergency management director when rendering disaster assistance within a city pursuant to this section.

g. Outside of a city, the sheriff of the county, and in Nassau county the commissioner of police of the county of Nassau, shall supervise the operations of the emergency management director when rendering peace officer duties incident to disaster assistance. The sheriff and such commissioner may delegate such supervisory power to an elected or appointed town or village official in the area affected.

h. Neither the chief executive officer of a city, nor the county chief executive, nor any elected or appointed town or village official to whom the county chief executive has delegated supervisory power as aforesaid shall be held responsible for acts or omissions of disaster emergency response personnel when performing disaster assistance.

3. City use of disaster emergency response personnel. a. Upon the threat or occurrence of a disaster, and during and immediately following the same, and except as otherwise provided in paragraph d of this subdivision, the chief executive of a city may direct the emergency management director of the city to assist in the protection and preservation of human life or property by calling upon city disaster emergency response personnel to perform the emergency response duties assigned to them.

b. The disaster emergency response personnel of the city shall be regarded as a reserve disaster force to be activated, in whole or in part, by the city emergency management director upon the direction of the chief executive officer of the city when the latter, in his or her discretion, is convinced that the personnel and resources of local municipal and private agencies normally available for disaster assistance are insufficient adequately to cope with the disaster.

c. Except as provided in paragraph d of this subdivision, the chief executive officer of a city may exercise the power conferred upon him in paragraph a of this subdivision, or may deactivate the disaster emergency response personnel of the city in whole or in part, on his own motion or upon the request of the head of the city police force.

d. Where the local office of emergency management in a city is under the jurisdiction of a consolidated county office of civil defense as provided in the New York state defense emergency act, the chief executive officer of such city seeking the assistance of disaster emergency response personnel in the protection and preservation of human life or property within such city because of such disaster, must request the same from the county chief executive in which such city is located, in the same manner as provided for assistance to towns and villages in subdivision two of this section.

e. When performing disaster assistance pursuant to this subdivision, disaster emergency response personnel shall operate under the direction and command of the city emergency management director and his or her duly authorized deputies, and shall possess the same powers, duties, rights, privileges, and immunities they would possess when performing their duties in a locally sponsored civil defense drill or training exercise in the city in which they are enrolled, employed or assigned emergency response responsibilities.

f. Where the city disaster emergency response personnel have been directed to assist in local disaster operations pursuant to paragraph a of this subdivision, and the chief executive officer of the city is convinced that the personnel and resources of local municipal and private agencies normally available for disaster assistance, including local disaster emergency response personnel, are insufficient adequately to cope with the disaster, he or she may certify the fact to the county chief executive and request the county chief executive to direct the county emergency management director to render assistance in the city, as provided in subdivision two of this section.

g. The chief executive officer of a city shall be responsible for the conduct of disaster operations within the city, including the operations directed by the county emergency management director, when rendering disaster assistance within a city pursuant to this subdivision.

h. Neither the chief executive officer of a city, nor the county chief executive, shall be held responsible for acts or omissions of disaster emergency response personnel when performing disaster assistance.

Notes to Decisions

Suffolk County Executive Order 1-1985, which seeks to require county agents to develop emergency preparedness plan for local nuclear power plant, and which was issued in response to county legislature's refusal to develop or approve any plan, represents first step toward implementation of plan, rather than mere vehicle for gathering information to enable county executive to perform statutory functions, and is therefore usurpation of legislative function. Prospect v Cohalan, 65 N.Y.2d 867, 493 N.Y.S.2d 293, 482 N.E.2d 1209, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 15826 (N.Y. 1985).

Agency Opinions

Special police officers appointed under the White Plains City Charter are neither police officers nor peace officers. Auxiliary police appointed under the State Defense Emergency Act are peace officers during official drills but may not exercise the powers of peace officers. 1981 NY Ops Atty Gen April 7 (informal).

Auxiliary police may be authorized to direct and control traffic as a component of official drills in preparation for an attack or in preparation for combating natural or man-made disasters. In undertaking this rule, auxiliary police possess those powers of peace officers under section 2.20 of the Criminal Procedure Law that are necessary for such purposes. N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. 96 NY Jur 2d State of New York § 15.

§ 29-g. Emergency management assistance compact

1. The emergency management assistance compact is made and entered into by and between the participating member states which enact this compact, hereinafter called party states. For the purposes of this agreement, the term "states" is taken to mean the several states, the commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the District of Columbia, and all United States territorial possessions.

The purpose of this compact is to provide for mutual assistance between the states entering into this compact in managing any emergency or disaster that is duly declared by the governor of the affected state or states, whether arising from natural disaster, technological hazard, man-made disaster, civil emergency aspects of resource shortages, community disorders, insurgency or enemy attack.

This compact shall also provide for mutual cooperation in emergency related exercises, testing or other training activities using equipment and personnel simulating performance of any aspect of the giving and receiving of aid by party states or subdivisions of party states during emergencies, such actions occurring outside actual declared emergency periods. Mutual assistance in this compact may include the use of the states' national guard forces, either in accordance with the national guard mutual assistance compact or by mutual agreement between states.

2. Each party state entering into this compact recognizes that many emergencies transcend political jurisdictional boundaries and that intergovernmental coordination is essential in managing these and other emergencies under this compact. Each state further recognizes that there will be emergencies which require immediate access and present procedures to apply outside resources to make a prompt and effective response to such an emergency. This is because few, if any, individual states have all the resources they may need in all types of emergencies or the capability of delivering resources to areas where emergencies exist.

The prompt, full and effective utilization of resources of the participating states, including any resources on hand or available from the federal government or any other source, that are essential to the safety, care and welfare of the people in the event of any emergency or disaster declared by a party state, shall be the underlying principle on which all provisions of this compact shall be understood.

On behalf of the governor of each state participating in the compact, the legally designated state official who is assigned responsibility for emergency management will be responsible for formulation of the appropriate interstate mutual aid plans and procedures necessary to implement this compact.

3. (a) It shall be the responsibility of each party state to formulate procedural plans and programs for interstate cooperation in the performance of the responsibilities listed in this section. In formulating such plans, and in carrying them out, the party states, insofar as practical, shall:

(1) Review individual state hazard analysis and, to the extent reasonably possible, determine all those potential emergencies the party states might jointly suffer, whether due to natural disaster, technological hazard, man-made disaster, emergency aspects or resource shortages, civil disorders, insurgency or enemy attack.

(2) Review party states' individual emergency plans and develop a plan which will determine the mechanism for the interstate management and provision of assistance concerning any potential emergency.

(3) Develop interstate procedures to fill any identified gaps and to resolve any identified inconsistencies or overlaps in existing or developed plans.

(4) Assist in warning communities adjacent to or crossing the state boundaries.

(5) Protect and assure uninterrupted delivery of services, medicines, water, food, energy and fuel, search and rescue and critical lifeline equipment, services and resources, both human and material.

(6) Inventory and set procedures for the interstate loan and delivery of human material resources, together with procedures for reimbursement or forgiveness.

(7) Provide, to the extent authorized by law, for temporary suspension of any statutes or ordinances that restrict the implementation of the above responsibilities.

(b) The authorized representative of a party state may request assistance of another party state by contacting the authorized representative of that state. The provisions of this agreement shall only apply to requests for assistance made by and to authorized representatives. Requests may be verbal or in writing. If verbal, the request shall be confirmed in writing within thirty days of the verbal request. Requests shall provide the following information:

(1) A description of the emergency service function for which assistance is needed, such as, but not limited to, fire services, law enforcement, emergency medical, transportation, communications, public works and engineering, building inspection, planning and information assistance, mass care, resource support, health and medical services, and search and rescue.

(2) The amount and type of personnel, equipment, materials and supplies needed, and a reasonable estimate of the length of time that they will be needed.

(3) The specific place and time for staging of the assisting party's response and a point of contact at that location.

(c) There shall be frequent consultation between state officials who have assigned emergency management responsibilities and other appropriate representatives of the party states with affected jurisdictions and the United States government, with free exchange of information, plans and resource records relating to emergency capabilities.

4. Any party state requested to render mutual aid or conduct exercises and training for mutual aid shall take such action as is necessary to provide and make available the resources covered by this compact in accordance with the terms hereof provided, that it is understood that the state rendering aid may withhold resources to the extent necessary to provide reasonable protection for such state.

Each party state shall afford to the emergency forces of any party state, while operating within its state limits under the terms and conditions of this compact, the same powers (except that of arrest unless specifically authorized by the receiving state), duties, rights and privileges as are afforded forces of the state in which they are performing emergency services. Emergency forces will continue under the command and control of their regular leaders, but the organizational units will come under the operational control of the emergency services authorities of the state receiving assistance. These conditions may be activated, as needed, only subsequent to a declaration of a state of emergency or disaster by the governor of the party state that is to receive assistance or commencement of exercises or training for mutual aid and shall continue so long as the exercises or training for mutual aid are in progress, the state, or states, of emergency or disaster remains in effect or loaned resources remain in the receiving states, whichever is longer.

5. Whenever any person holds a license, certificate or other permit issued by any state party to the compact evidencing the meeting of qualifications for professional, mechanical or other skills, and when such assistance is requested by the receiving party state, such person shall be deemed licensed, certified, or permitted by the state requesting assistance to render aid involving such skill to meet a declared emergency or disaster, subject to such limitations and conditions as the governor of the requesting state may prescribe by executive order or otherwise.

6. Officers or employees of a party state rendering aid in another state pursuant to this compact shall be considered agents of the requesting state for tort liability and immunity purposes and no party state or its officers or employees rendering aid in another state pursuant to this compact shall be liable on account or any act or omission in good faith on the part of such forces while so engaged or on account of the maintenance or use of any equipment or supplies in connection therewith. Good faith shall not include willful misconduct, gross negligence or recklessness.

7. Inasmuch as it is probable that the pattern and detail of the machinery for mutual aid among two or more states may differ from that among the states that are parties hereto, this instrument contains elements of a broad base common to all states, and nothing contained herein shall preclude any state from entering into supplementary agreements with another state or affect any other agreements already in force between states. Supplementary agreements may comprehend, but shall not be limited to, provisions for evacuation and reception of injured and other persons and the exchange of medical, fire, police, public utility, reconnaissance, welfare, transportation and communications personnel, and equipment and supplies.

8. Each party state shall provide for the payment of compensation and death benefits to injured members of the emergency forces of that state and representatives of deceased members of such forces in case such members sustain injuries or are killed while rendering aid pursuant to this compact, in the same manner and on the same terms as if the injury or death were sustained within their own state.

9. Any party state rendering aid in another state pursuant to this compact shall be reimbursed by the party state receiving such aid for any loss or damage to or expense incurred in the operation of any equipment and the provision of any service in answering a request for aid and for the costs incurred in connection with such requests provided, that any aiding party state may assume, in whole or in part, such loss, damage, expense or other cost, or may loan such equipment or donate such services to the receiving party state without charge or cost provided, however, that any two or more party states may enter into supplementary agreements establishing a different allocation of costs among those states. Expenses under subdivision eight of this section shall not be reimbursable under this provision.

10. Plans for the orderly evacuation and interstate reception of portions of the civilian population as the result of any emergency or disaster of sufficient proportions to so warrant, shall be worked out and maintained between the party states and the emergency management/services directors of the various jurisdictions where any type of incident requiring evacuations might occur. Such plans shall be put into effect by request of the state from which evacuees come and shall include the manner of transporting such evacuees, the number of evacuees to be received in different areas, the manner in which food, clothing, housing and medical care will be provided, the registration of the evacuees, the providing of facilities for the notification of relatives or friends, and the forwarding of such evacuees to other areas or the bringing in of additional materials, supplies and all other relevant factors. Such plans shall provide that the party state receiving evacuees and the party state from which the evacuees come shall mutually agree as to reimbursement of out-of-pocket expenses incurred in receiving and caring for such evacuees, for expenditures for transportation, food, clothing, medicines and medical care, and like items. Such expenditures shall be reimbursed as agreed by the party state from which the evacuees come. After the termination of the emergency or disaster, the party state from which the evacuees come shall assume the responsibility for the ultimate support of repatriation of such evacuees.

11. (a) This compact shall become operative immediately upon its enactment into law by any two states; thereafter, this compact shall become effective as to any other state upon its enactment by such state.

(b) Any party state may withdraw from this compact by enacting a statute repealing the same, but no such withdrawal shall take effect until thirty days after the governor of the withdrawing state has given notice in writing of such withdrawal to the governors of all other party states. Such action shall not relieve the withdrawing state from obligations assumed hereunder prior to the effective date of withdrawal.

(c) Duly authenticated copies of this compact and of such supplementary agreements as may be entered into shall, at the time of their approval be deposited with each of the party states and with the federal emergency management agency and other appropriate agencies of the United States government.

12. This compact shall be construed to effectuate the purposes stated in subdivision one of this section. If any provision of this compact is declared unconstitutional, or the applicability thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid, the constitutionality of the remainder of this compact and the applicability thereof to other persons and circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

13. Nothing in this compact shall authorize or permit the use of military forces by the National Guard of a state at any place outside the state in any emergency for which the president is authorized by law to call into federal service the militia, or for any purposes for which the use of the army or the air force would in the absence of express statutory authorization be prohibited under section 1385 of title 18, United States code.

14. The legally designated state official who is assigned responsibility for emergency management shall not offer resources to, or request resources from, another compact member state, without prior discussion with and concurrence from the state agency, department, office, division, board, bureau, commission or authority that may be asked to provide resources or that may utilize resources from another compact member state.

15. The director of the state emergency management office shall, on or before the first day of January, two thousand two, provide to the legislature and the governor copies of all mutual aid plans and procedures promulgated, developed or entered into after the effective date of this section. The director of the state emergency management office shall annually hereafter provide the legislature and governor with copies of all new or amended mutual aid plans and procedures on or before the first day of January of each year.

Notes to Decisions

State was immune from suit under CLS Vol Fire Ben § 19(3), and thus entitled to summary judgment in negligence action premised on respondeat superior and seeking damages for injuries to member of village volunteer fire department who fell while participating in fire training program sponsored by Department of State and supervised by instructor retained by state; state qualified for immunity because it was carrying out its statutory duty under CLS Exec § 156 to plan, coordinate and provide training for volunteer firefighters. Lima v State, 74 N.Y.2d 694, 543 N.Y.S.2d 378, 541 N.E.2d 407, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 656 (N.Y. 1989).

Division of Homeland Security and Emergency Services properly denied a request by an employee of the Office of Fire Prevention and Control (OFPC) for approval of activities outside his employment, as the Division had a rational basis to conclude that a potential conflict of interest existed because the Commissioner of Education could request the OFPC to inspect the same school buildings. Matter of Mallick v New York State Div. of Homeland Sec. & Emergency Servs., 145 A.D.3d 1172, 43 N.Y.S.3d 183, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7990 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2016).

Section 1. Legislative intent. The tragic events of the September 11, 2001 attack, together with the more recent arrests of members of alleged terrorist cells in Erie county and elsewhere throughout the world, underscore the compelling need for further anti-terror measures to enhance public safety. It is our nation's profound commitment to the principles of democracy and the rule of law that enables us to respond efficiently and effectively to the outrageous criminal acts of terrorists. Creating new criminal offenses and increasing penalties to enhance the powers of law enforcement are necessary to combat their cowardly and inhumane acts of terror.

A chemical or biological attack against a civilian population or the threat of such an attack, however unimaginable before September 11, 2001, has become a stark and disturbing reality. The subsequent outbreaks of anthrax, a deadly disease that caused death and illness across our nation, awakened us to a new type of crime, a crime so indecent that it threatens our values as well as our lives. Terrorists committed to causing death and destruction with deadly or incapacitating chemicals or biological weapons must be brought to justice and punished severely. Although federal law explicitly proscribes such monstrous conduct, state law does not. This act, modeled on federal law, punishes those who criminally use or possess chemical or biological weapons and imposes the penalty of life imprisonment without parole in appropriate cases.

The images of the savage attack on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon on September 11, 2001 will be forever emblazoned on the psyches of all Americans. The slaughter of innocent civilians, and the sacrifice of selfless police officers, brave firefighters, and other heroic emergency services personnel, will never be forgotten. A crime of unimaginable horror, terrorism tears at the very fabric of our society, threatening to rob us of our commitment to freedom, justice, and democracy. This act protects that commitment by providing law enforcement officials with appropriate and effective tools to investigate, prosecute, and punish terrorists.

§ 156-c. Fire safety standards for cigarettes

1. a. When used in this section, the word "cigarette" shall mean any roll for smoking made wholly or in part of tobacco or of any other substance, irrespective of size or shape and whether or not such tobacco or substance is flavored, adulterated or mixed with any other ingredient, the wrapper or cover of which is made of paper or any other substance or material except tobacco.

b. When used in this section, the word "sell" shall mean to sell, or to offer or agree to do the same.

2. a. Within two years after this section takes effect, the office of fire prevention and control shall promulgate fire safety standards for cigarettes sold or offered for sale in this state. Such standards shall take effect as provided in subdivision four of this section and shall insure either:

(1) That such cigarettes, if ignited, will stop burning within a time period specified by the standards if the cigarettes are not smoked during that period; or

(2) That such cigarettes meet performance standards prescribed by the office of fire prevention and control to limit the risk that such cigarettes will ignite upholstered furniture, mattresses or other household furnishings.

b. In promulgating fire safety standards for cigarettes pursuant to this section, the office of fire prevention and control, in consultation with the department of health, shall consider whether cigarettes manufactured in accordance with such standards may reasonably result in increased health risks to consumers.

c. The office of fire prevention and control shall be responsible for administering the provisions of this section.

d. The office of fire prevention and control shall report to the governor and the legislature no later than eighteen months after this section takes effect on the status of its work in promulgating the fire safety standards required by this subdivision.

e. When a cigarette is suspected of having ignited a fire, and the office of fire prevention and control receives information regarding the brand and style of such cigarette pursuant to section two hundred four-d or ninety-one-a of the general municipal law, and where such brand and style had been previously certified pursuant to subdivision three of this section and the package has been marked as required by subdivision six of this section, the office of fire prevention and control shall conduct random testing on cigarettes of the same brand and style in order to determine whether such cigarettes meet the fire safety standards mandated by this section; provided however that such testing shall not be required if the office of fire prevention and control has tested such brand and style within the preceding three months.

3. On and after the date the fire safety standards take effect in accordance with subdivision four of this section, no cigarettes shall be sold or offered for sale in this state unless the manufacturer thereof has certified in writing to the office of fire prevention and control that such cigarettes meet the performance standards prescribed by the office of fire prevention and control pursuant to subdivision two of this section.

(a) Such certifications must be based upon testing conducted by a laboratory that has been accredited pursuant to Standard ISO/IEC 17025 of the international organization for standardization, or such other comparable accreditation standard as the office of fire prevention and control shall require by regulation.

(b) Such certification shall be signed by an officer of the manufacturer and shall contain for each cigarette brand style such information as shall be deemed necessary by the office of fire prevention and control, including but not limited to: (i) the brand and style; (ii) length in millimeters; (iii) circumference in millimeters; (iv) flavor, if applicable; (v) filter or non-filter; (vi) package description; (vii) the name, address and telephone number of the laboratory, if different than the manufacturer that conducted the test; (viii) the date that the testing occurred; and (ix) a notarized statement from an officer or director of the laboratory certifying that the cigarette meets the performance standards prescribed by the office of fire prevention and control.

(c) If a manufacturer has certified a cigarette pursuant to this subdivision, and thereafter makes any change to such cigarette that is likely to alter its compliance with the fire safety standards mandated by this section, then before such cigarette may be sold or offered for sale in this state such manufacturer shall retest such cigarette in accordance with the testing standards prescribed by the office of fire prevention and control and maintain records of such retesting as required by subdivision seven of this section. Any such altered cigarette which does not meet the performance standard prescribed by the office of fire prevention and control may not be sold in the state. Copies of such written certifications shall be provided by the certifying manufacturer to all wholesale dealers, as defined in subdivision eight of section four hundred seventy of the tax law, and all agents, as defined in subdivision eleven of section four hundred seventy of the tax law. The office of fire prevention and control shall prescribe procedures by which stamping agents, wholesale dealers or retail dealers are notified of which cigarettes have been certified by manufacturers as meeting the performance standards prescribed by the office of fire prevention and control, which may include the maintenance of a website listing certified cigarette brands and styles.

4. The fire safety standards required pursuant to subdivision two of this section shall take effect on such date as the office of fire prevention and control shall specify in promulgating such standards and such date shall be the earliest practicable date by which manufacturers of cigarettes can comply with such standards; provided, however, that such date shall not be later than one hundred eighty days after such standards are promulgated. On and after such date, no person or entity shall sell in this state cigarettes that have not been certified by the manufacturer in accordance with subdivision three of this section or that have not been marked in the manner required by subdivision six of this section; provided, however, that nothing in this subdivision shall be construed to prohibit any person or entity from sellingor offering for sale cigarettes that have not been certified by the manufacturer in accordance with subdivision three of this section and have not been marked in the manner required by subdivision six of this section if such cigarettes are or will be stamped for sale in another state or are packaged for sale outside the United States.

5. a. Any wholesale dealer, as defined in subdivision eight of section four hundred seventy of the tax law, or any agent, as defined in subdivision eleven of section four hundred seventy of the tax law, or any other person or entity who knowingly sells or offers to sell cigarettes in violation of subdivision four of this section shall be subject to a civil penalty not to exceed one hundred dollars for each pack of such cigarettes sold or offered for sale provided that in no case shall the penalty against any wholesale dealer exceed one hundred thousand dollars for sales or offers to sell during any thirty day period. Any retail dealer, as defined in subdivision nine of section four hundred seventy of the tax law, who knowingly sells or offers to sell cigarettes in violation of subdivision four of this section shall be subject to a civil penalty not to exceed one hundred dollars for each pack of such cigarettes sold or offered for sale, provided that in no case shall the penalty against any retail dealer exceed twenty-five thousand dollars for sales or offers to sell during any thirty day period. Any person engaged in the business of selling cigarettes in or for shipment into New York who possesses cigarettes that have not been certified or marked in accordance with the requirements of this section shall be deemed to be offering such cigarettes for sale in New York. An agent licensed in more than one state may rebut such presumption by establishing: (i) that such cigarettes have been physically segregated from cigarettes offered for sale in New York; and (ii) no New York tax stamps have been placed on any cigarettes that have not been certified or marked in accordance with this section. In addition to any penalties imposed by this section the commissioner of taxation and finance, after an opportunity for a hearing has been afforded pursuant to subdivision five of section four hundred eighty of the tax law, shall suspend for six months the license of any agent issued pursuant to section four hundred seventy-two of the tax law, the license of any wholesale dealer issued pursuant to section four hundred eighty of the tax law, or the registration of any retail dealer issued pursuant to section four hundred eighty-a of the tax law, when such agent, wholesale dealer or retail dealer violates this section three or more times within a three year period, provided such violations occurred on at least three separate calendar days.

b. In addition to any penalty prescribed by law, any corporation, partnership, sole proprietor, limited partnership, association or any other business entity engaged in the manufacture of cigarettes that knowingly makes a false certification pursuant to subdivision three of this section shall be subject to a civil penalty of at least seventy-five thousand dollars and not to exceed two hundred fifty thousand dollars for each such false certification, and any entity that fails to pay a civil penalty imposed pursuant to this paragraph within thirty days after such penalty is imposed, shall be subject to a bar from selling cigarettes covered by that false certification in this state until the state receives full payment of such penalty.

c. There is hereby established in the custody of the state comptroller a special fund to be known as the "Cigarette Fire Safety Act Fund". Such fund shall consist of all moneys recovered from the assessment of civil penalties authorized by this subdivision. Such monies shall be deposited to the credit of the fund and shall, in addition to any other moneys made available for such purpose, be available to the office of fire prevention and control for the purpose of fire safety and prevention programs. All payments from the cigarette fire safety act fund shall be made on the audit and warrant of the state comptroller on vouchers certified and submitted by the state fire administrator.

6. No cigarettes shall be distributed, sold or offered for sale in this state unless the manufacturer has placed on each individual package the letters "FSC" which signifies Fire Standards Compliant. Such letters shall appear in eight point type and be permanently printed, stamped, engraved or embossed on the package at or near the UPC Code, if present. Any package containing such symbol is deemed to be in compliance with the office of fire prevention and control regulations set forth in 19 NYCRR 429.8.

7. a. Each manufacturer shall maintain copies of the reports of all tests conducted on all cigarettes for a period of three years, and shall make copies of such reports available to the office of fire prevention and control and the attorney general upon written request; provided, however, that any manufacturer that fails to make copies of such reports available within sixty days of receiving such a written request shall be subject to a civil penalty not to exceed ten thousand dollars for each day after the sixtieth day that such manufacturer does not make such copies available and shall be subject to a bar from selling or offering to sell cigarettes in New York until such copies are made available.

b. Testing performed or sponsored by the office of fire prevention and control in order to determine a cigarette's compliance with the fire safety standards mandated by this section shall be conducted (i) in accordance with the requirements applicable to manufacturers pursuant to the regulations of the office of fire prevention and control, and (ii) by a laboratory that has been accredited pursuant to Standard ISO/IEC 17025 of the international organization for standardization or such other comparable accreditation standard as the office of fire prevention and control shall require by regulation.

8. a. To enforce the provisions of this section, the commissioner of taxation and finance and the state fire administrator may take administrative action imposing the civil penalties and suspensions authorized by subdivision five of this section. In addition, the attorney general may bring an action on behalf of the people of the state of New York to enjoin acts in violation of this section and to recover any civil penalties unless civil penalties have been previously recovered in such administrative proceedings.

b. Any enforcement officer as defined in section thirteen hundred ninety-nine-t of the public health law shall have the power to impose upon any retail dealer the civil penalties authorized by subdivision five of this section, following a hearing conducted in the same manner as hearings conducted under article thirteen-E of the public health law.

c. To enforce the provisions of this section, the commissioner of taxation and finance and the state fire administrator, or their duly authorized representatives, are hereby authorized to examine the books, papers, invoices and other records of any person in possession, control or occupancy of any premises where cigarettes are placed, stored, sold or offered for sale, as well as the stock of cigarettes in any such premises. Every person in the possession, control or occupancy of any premises where cigarettes are placed, sold or offered for sale, is hereby directed and required to give the commissioner of taxation and finance and the state fire administrator, and their duly authorized representatives, the means, facilities and opportunity for such examinations as are herein provided for and required.

d. Whenever any police officer designated in section 1.20 of the criminal procedure law or a peace officer designated in subdivision four and subdivision seventy-nine pertaining to the Office of Fire Prevention and Control, of section 2.10 of such law, acting pursuant to his or her special duties, shall discover any cigarettes which have not been marked in the manner required by subdivision six of this section, such officer is hereby authorized and empowered to seize and take possession of such cigarettes. Such seized cigarettes shall be turned over to the commissioner of taxation and finance, and shall be forfeited to the state. Cigarettes seized pursuant to this section shall be destroyed.

e. The commissioner of the division of homeland security and emergency services, in consultation with the state fire administrator, and the commissioner of taxation and finance are hereby authorized to promulgate such regulations as are deemed necessary to implement the provisions of this section.

Notes to Decisions

By failure to pass legislation explicitly abolishing the Bingo Control Commission or to specifically provide therefor in budget, though not specifically appropriating any funds for the Commission, the legislature could be deemed to have expressed an intent not to eliminate the Commission or the office of chairman, and chairman was entitled to his salary. Ball v State, 41 N.Y.2d 617, 394 N.Y.S.2d 597, 363 N.E.2d 323, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 1971 (N.Y. 1977).

Where legislature which enacted budget in which no funds were specially appropriated for the Bingo Control Commission or the salary of its chairman also amended section of the Executive Law without deleting therefrom express provision for chairman's salary, budget did not operate as a repeal by implication of the salary provisions. Ball v State, 41 N.Y.2d 617, 394 N.Y.S.2d 597, 363 N.E.2d 323, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 1971 (N.Y. 1977).

Budget bill which was a general statute establishing a lump-sum appropriation for regulation of wagering, but contained no specific appropriation for the Bingo Control Commission, did not supersede the specific, detailed statutory provisions creating the Commission and its operations. Ball v State, 41 N.Y.2d 617, 394 N.Y.S.2d 597, 363 N.E.2d 323, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 1971 (N.Y. 1977).

Where position of chairman of State Bingo Control Commission was statutorily created and its term of office, salary and duties statutorily prescribed, passage of state budget which provided no funds for such Commission did not demonstrate required legislative intent to abolish chairman's position, and State could not deprive chairman of salary for his fixed term position by refusing to appropriate funds therefor. Ball v State, 52 A.D.2d 47, 382 N.Y.S.2d 835, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11527 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976), aff'd, 41 N.Y.2d 617, 394 N.Y.S.2d 597, 363 N.E.2d 323, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 1971 (N.Y. 1977).

By virtue of administrative practice, salary of chairman of state Bingo Control Commission is fixed by statute rather than by governor. Ball v State, 83 Misc. 2d 903, 373 N.Y.S.2d 761, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3013 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1975), aff'd, 52 A.D.2d 47, 382 N.Y.S.2d 835, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11527 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976).

Position of chairman of state Bingo Control Commission was not eliminated by virtue of fact that budget was adopted which did not contain provision for chairman's salary; chairman was therefore entitled to recover such salary plus appropriate interest. Ball v State, 83 Misc. 2d 903, 373 N.Y.S.2d 761, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3013 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1975), aff'd, 52 A.D.2d 47, 382 N.Y.S.2d 835, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11527 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976).

Notes to Decisions

It was not unheard of for 501(c)(3)s and 501(c)(4)s to work in tandem and even to have nearly identical names; if the latter were able to avoid supervision, such organizations could serve as shells to keep donors anonymous to the former, and the Attorney General's regulations were thus well within his powers. Citizens United v Schneiderman, 882 F.3d 374, 2018 U.S. App. LEXIS 3516 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2018).

Soc Serv Law § 461-b (5(a)) does not deny equal protection because it requires reports only from private proprietary homes and not from not-for-profit homes; profit motive of owners of private homes provides rational basis for such discrimination, and § 461-b (5(a)) simply requires that private proprietary homes submit information similar to that already required from not-for-profit homes under EPTL § 8-1.4 and Exec Law §§ 171–176. Katz v Blum, 460 F. Supp. 1222, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14099 (S.D.N.Y. 1978), aff'd, 603 F.2d 213, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16524 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1979).

Agency Opinions

Registration with the Department of State is required of police organizations that can be classified as "benevolent, philanthropic, patriotic or eleemosynary" based on the organization's stated purposes or activities and its use of professional fund raisers. 1980 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74, 1980 N.Y. AG LEXIS 12.

Registration and reporting requirements of CLS Exec Law Art. VII-A apply to organizations that receive State grants in excess of $25,000 for training and education of both members and nonmembers of organization, however, registration with Department of State is not required of organization that receives State grants in excess of $25,000 for training and education of only its members. N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 89-F3.

An organization that provides all the services necessary to conduct a fund-raising drive is a professional fund raiser. N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-F7.

4. Any charitable organization required to register with the attorney general pursuant to this article and properly registered pursuant to article eight of the estates, powers and trusts law that has not previously registered pursuant to this article shall not be required to register separately, but shall file with the attorney general a statement that it is registered pursuant to article eight of the estates, powers and trusts law. Such statement shall be accompanied by all additional documents required to complete registration pursuant to this article, including any additional financial filings required by this article.

Notes to Decisions

Not-for-profit charitable foundation serving homeless would be preliminarily enjoined from soliciting charitable contributions until it complied with registration and reporting requirements of CLS Exec § 172 since foundation never sought exempt status from Office of Charities Registration pursuant to 19 NYCRR part 800. Not-for-profit charitable foundation serving homeless would be preliminarily enjoined from soliciting charitable contributions until it complied with registration and reporting requirements of CLS Exec § 172, despite its affiliation with religious organization, since by engaging in secular activities such as fund raising and sheltering homeless it was not itself operating as religious organization entitled to exemption from initial filing requirements under CLS Exec § 172-a. Abrams v New York Foundation for Homeless, Inc., 148 Misc. 2d 791, 562 N.Y.S.2d 325, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 558 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1990).

§ 172-a. Certain persons exempted

1. This article shall not apply to corporations organized under the religious corporations law, and other religious agencies and organizations, and charities, agencies, and organizations operated, supervised, or controlled by or in connection with a religious organization.

2. The following persons shall not be required to register with the attorney general:

(a) An educational institution confining its solicitation of contributions to its student body, alumni, faculty and trustees, and their families.

(b) Fraternal, patriotic, social, alumni, law enforcement support organizations and historical societies chartered by the New York state board of regents when solicitation of contributions is confined to their membership.

(c) Persons requesting any contributions for the relief of any individual, specified by name at the time of the solicitation, if all of the contributions collected, without any deductions whatsoever, are paid to or for the benefit of the named beneficiary. Prior to the commencement of any such solicitation, the principal person requesting contributions may file with the attorney general a form, provided by the attorney general, which shall read as follows:

CHARITABLE SOLICITATION FOR THE RELIEF OF AN INDIVIDUAL

The principal person requesting contributions may, on such form designate up to three secondary individuals or charitable organizations as charitable beneficiaries who shall be entitled to such contributions in the event circumstances change rendering it impossible or impracticable to use any or all of the money collected for the primary beneficiary. The designation of one or more secondary beneficiaries shall be ineffective unless such form has been filed with the attorney general and all persons requesting contributions shall have informed any person solicited at the time of any solicitation of such filing. In the event that it is or may be impossible or impracticable to use any or all of the money collected for the benefit of the primary beneficiary, and (i) no secondary beneficiary has been properly designated pursuant to this paragraph, or (ii) no secondary beneficiary exists, then the attorney general, the primary beneficiary, or any person who requested contributions may petition the supreme court, on notice to the attorney general, the primary beneficiary if living, any secondary beneficiaries, and the principal person who requested the contributions for an order directing that any moneys remaining shall be transferred to a charitable organization with purposes similar to those for which such contributions were collected. In the event that money collected for the relief of any individual, without any deductions whatsoever, is paid to or for the benefit of the primary beneficiary within sixty days of its receipt, then all requirements of this paragraph shall be deemed to have been complied with. For the purposes of this section, the term "principal person requesting the contributions" shall mean any person who is primarily responsible for soliciting funds for the relief of an individual, but shall not include any person who solicits funds when all such funds are subsequently transferred over to a principal person requesting contributions.

(d) Any charitable organization which solicits or receives gross contributions of less than twenty-five thousand dollars during a fiscal year of such organization, provided none of its fund raising is carried on by professional fund raisers or fund raising counsel. However, if the gross contributions received by such charitable organization during any fiscal year of such organization shall be in excess of twenty-five thousand dollars, it shall within thirty days after the date it shall have received gross contributions in excess of twenty-five thousand dollars register with the attorney general as required by section one hundred seventy-two of this article.

(e) Any charitable organization receiving an allocation from a federated fund, incorporated community appeal or a united way, provided such fund, appeal or united way is complying with the provisions of this article relating to registration and filing of financial reports with the attorney general, and provided such organization does not receive, in addition to such allocation, gross contributions in excess of twenty-five thousand dollars during the fiscal year, and provided further that all the fund-raising functions of such organizations are carried on by persons who are unpaid for such services. However, if the gross contributions other than such allocation received by such charitable organization during any fiscal year of such organization shall be in excess of twenty-five thousand dollars, it shall within thirty days after the date it shall have received such contributions in excess of twenty-five thousand dollars register with the attorney general as required by section one hundred seventy-two of this article.

(f) A local post, camp, chapter or similarly designated element, or a county unit of such elements, of a bona fide veterans' organization which issues charters to such local elements throughout this state, a bona fide organization of volunteer firefighters, an organization providing volunteer ambulance service (as defined in section three thousand one of the public health law) or a bona fide auxiliary or affiliate of such organizations, provided all its fund-raising activities are carried on by members of such an organization or an affiliate thereof and such members receive no compensation, directly or indirectly, therefor.

(g) An educational institution which files annual financial reports with the regents of the university of the state of New York as required by the education law or with an agency having similar jurisdiction in another state or a library which files annual financial reports as required by the state education department.

(h) A charitable organization which receives all or substantially all of its funds from a single governmental agency and reports annually to that agency provided such reports contain financial information substantially similar in content to that required by subdivision one of section one hundred seventy-two-b of this article; provided, however, that such organization may receive no more than twenty-five thousand dollars from sources other than the government agency to which it reports.

Notice of such cancellation shall be mailed to the registrant at least twenty days before the effective date thereof.

6. Every charitable organization registered or required to register pursuant to section one hundred seventy-two of this article shall keep and maintain records, books and reports for at least three years after the end of the period of registration to which they relate which shall at all times be available for inspection, by the attorney general, or any duly authorized representatives at the principal office of such organization.

7. NOTES TO DECISIONS

1. Generally

Where the Attorney General sued a professional fundraiser and its president to permanently enjoin them from soliciting and collecting charitable contributions from the public, he was properly granted summary judgment on the issue of liability, as he established that the fundraiser's solicitation of charitable funds on behalf of a cancer prevention organization was fraudulent and deceptive because the fundraiser misrepresented the extent of the organization's actions in helping women survive breast cancer. People v Coalition Against Breast Cancer, Inc., 134 A.D.3d 1081, 22 N.Y.S.3d 562, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9661 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2015), app. denied, 28 N.Y.3d 901, 63 N.E.3d 69, 40 N.Y.S.3d 349, 2016 N.Y. LEXIS 2717 (N.Y. 2016).

Where the Attorney General established that a professional fundraiser's solicitation of charitable funds on behalf of a cancer prevention organization was fraudulent and deceptive, the trial court properly pierced the corporate veil to hold the fundraiser's president personally liable, as an officer of a corporation could be held liable for fraud if he participated in it or had actual knowledge of it. People v Coalition Against Breast Cancer, Inc., 134 A.D.3d 1081, 22 N.Y.S.3d 562, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9661 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2015), app. denied, 28 N.Y.3d 901, 63 N.E.3d 69, 40 N.Y.S.3d 349, 2016 N.Y. LEXIS 2717 (N.Y. 2016).

It was not unheard of for 501(c)(3)s and 501(c)(4)s to work in tandem and even to have nearly identical names; if the latter were able to avoid supervision, such organizations could serve as shells to keep donors anonymous to the former, and the Attorney General's regulations were thus well within his powers. Citizens United v Schneiderman, 882 F.3d 374, 2018 U.S. App. LEXIS 3516 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2018).

A professional fund raiser shall at the time of filing each application for registration or re-registration, file with, and have approved by, the attorney general a bond. In said bond, the filer shall be the principal obligor, in the sum of ten thousand dollars, with one or more sureties whose liability in the aggregate as such sureties will at least equal the said sum.The bond which may be in the form of a rider to a larger blanket liability bond shall run to the attorney general for the use of the state and to any person who may have a cause of action against the obligor of said bond for any malfeasance or misfeasance in the conduct of such solicitation. Registration or re-registration when effected shall be for a period of one year, expiring one year from the date of registration or re-registration and may be renewed upon written application, under penalties for perjury, in the form prescribed by the attorney general and the filing of the bond and the fee prescribed herein for each additional one year period. Applications for registration and re-registration and bonds, when filed with the attorney general, shall become public records of the attorney general. Provided, however, that any such books and records obtained by the attorney general shall not be available to the public for inspection. A professional fund raiser, commercial co-venturer and fund raising counsel shall, within seven days of a request of any charitable organization with which it has contracted, provide copies of such records to the charitable organization.

3. Violations. Any person who wilfully violates the provisions of this section is guilty of a misdemeanor.

Notes to Decisions

The statutory requirement that a professional fund raiser fully complete a registration statement by disclosing the names and addresses of clients that were charitable, religious, or other nonprofit organizations (other than political parties, political organizations, candidates, or committees and their support) was neither unreasonable, arbitrary nor capricious, and was founded upon a rational basis. § 173-a. Contracts of professional fund raisers, fund raising counsel and commercial co-venturers; closing statements; final accountings

1. No person shall act as a professional fund raiser, fund raising counsel or commercial co-venturer before he has a written contract with the charitable organization or other person benefitting from his services. A professional fund raiser or fund raising counsel shall within ten days after its execution by the parties thereto file with the attorney general a copy of each contract entered into between such professional fund raiser or fund raising counsel and a charitable organization required to be registered pursuant to this article, certified under penalties for perjury by said professional fund raiser or fund raising counsel to be a true and correct copy of such contract. When the services to be performed under such contracts include the oral solicitation of funds from the public, such oral presentations shall be deemed to be part of the contract and shall be reduced to a writing which in the case of a professional fund raiser shall be filed with the attorney general by the registrant at the time such contracts are filed. If there is any change in the presentation filed with the attorney general, the registrant shall notify the attorney general in writing within five days of such change. No services shall be performed under such a contract until the professional fundraiser shall have received an acknowledgement from the attorney general of the receipt of a copy of such contract or such contract shall have been on file with the attorney general for at least fifteen days, whichever is shorter. True and correct copies of such contracts shall be kept on file in the offices of the charitable organization and the professional fund raiser, fund raising counsel or commercial co-venturer during the term thereof and until the expiration of a period of three years subsequent to the date the solicitation of contributions provided for therein actually terminates. Within ninety days after the termination of any such contract, the professional fund raiser shall file with the attorney general a closing statement, signed under penalties for perjury by all parties to the contract on forms prescribed by the attorney general. Such statement shall disclose gross revenue, all expenditures incurred in the performance of the contract, and all funds paid to the professional fund raiser and charitable organization. In the event that a contract term is longer than a one year period, the professional fund raiser shall file an interim statement, at least annually. No person shall act as a sub-contractor on behalf of another professional fund raiser prior to obtaining a written contract with such professional fund raiser and written consent from the charity on whose behalf fundraising activities are to be conducted pursuant to such contract, and such written consent shall have been attached to such contract and filed with the attorney general pursuant to subdivision one of this section. Willful violation of this section shall be a misdemeanor.

2. Every contract between a professional fund raiser and a charitable organization shall contain or shall be deemed to contain a provision that within five days of receipt by the professional fund raiser or any other person the gross revenue received from any solicitation shall be deposited in a bank account under the exclusive control of the charity.

3. Within ninety days after the termination of a sales promotion advertised to benefit a charitable organization, a commercial co-venturer shall provide such organization with an accounting stating the number of items sold, the dollar amount of each sale and the amount paid or to be paid to the charitable organization.In the event that any such sales promotion is longer than a one year period, the commercial co-venturer shall provide the charitable organization with an interim report, at least annually.

4. Analysis

1. Generally
2. Under former Social Service Law § 482-g

1. Generally

The state made a prima facie showing sufficient to justify entry of an order enjoining defendant, a nonresident co-venturer with various charitable organizations for fund raising purposes, from conducting any solicitations in the state, where it showed that defendant had violated prior consent decrees by using unauthorized sales pitches, and by failing to file contracts with the charitable organizations with the Secretary of State. People v United Funding, Inc., 106 A.D.2d 846, 484 N.Y.S.2d 245, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 21748 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1984), app. denied, 64 N.Y.2d 609, 489 N.Y.S.2d 1026, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 18846 (N.Y. 1985).

2. Under former Social Service Law § 482-g

While the purpose of statute requiring the filing of contracts entered into between professional fund raisers and charitable or religious organizations, and barring the performance of services under such a contract until the fund raiser has received an acknowledgment from the State Board of Social Welfare of the receipt of a copy of such contract, is to meet the problem posed by unprincipled and unscrupulous charity promoters, the statute confers no power upon the Board to approve or disapprove a fund raising contract. Sport Celebrities, Inc. v Maull, 56 A.D.2d 849, 392 N.Y.S.2d 315, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11190 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 42 N.Y.2d 803, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 3695 (N.Y. 1977).

§ 173-b. Professional solicitor

1. Registration required. No person shall act as a professional solicitor in the employ of a professional fund raiser required to register pursuant to section one hundred seventy-three of this article before he or she has registered with the attorney general or after the expiration or cancellation of such registration or any renewal thereof. Application for registration or re-registration shall be in writing and signed under penalties for perjury in the form prescribed by the attorney general and shall be accompanied by a fee in the sum of eighty dollars. Such registration or re-registration when effected shall be for a period of one year, expiring one year from the date of such registration or re-registration, and may be renewed upon written application, signed under penalties for perjury, in the form prescribed by the attorney general and the payment of the fee prescribed herein, for additional one year periods. Applications for registration and re-registration, when filed with the attorney general, shall become public records in the office of the attorney general.

2. Limitations upon professional solicitors for law enforcement support organizations. Notes to Decisions

CLS Exec § 173-b did not impermissibly discriminate against professional solicitors employed by professional fundraisers, who were required to register and pay $80 fee, on basis that volunteers and employees of charitable organizations were excluded from definition of "professional fundraiser" and thus were not subject to fee, since all charitable organizations soliciting in New York were required to register and pay registration fees, all professional solicitors not working in-house for any charitable organization were charged fee without regard to their viewpoints, and § 173-b was merely designed to regulate independent professional solicitors who were not otherwise regulated. National Awareness Found. v Abrams, 50 F.3d 1159, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 6272 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1995).

Statute requiring professional fundraisers to register and pay $80 fee (CLS Exec § 173-b) did not violate First Amendment, since it served legitimate governmental purpose of defraying expenses incident to regulating charitable solicitations by professional solicitors, fee was not imposed on basis of speech content, and all professional solicitors were charged fee without regard to nature of cause espoused. National Awareness Found. v Abrams, 50 F.3d 1159, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 6272 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1995).

§ 174-b. Solicitation

1. Any solicitation, by any means, including but not limited to oral solicitation, by or on behalf of a registered charitable organization which is required to file financial reports pursuant to this article and has filed all such reports, shall include therein a statement that upon request, a person may obtain from the organization or from the charities registry on the attorney general's website, a copy of the last financial report filed by the organization with the attorney general. Such statement shall specify the address of the organization and the address of the attorney general, to which such request should be addressed and in the case of a written solicitation, must be placed conspicuously in the material with print no smaller than ten point bold face type or, alternatively, no smaller than the size print used for the most number of words in the statements. Provided, however, such statement need not be made where the space for a printed advertisement or promotional time in any media has been donated or made available to the charitable organization at no cost and such space or time does not reasonably permit inclusion of such statement.

2. Any solicitation used by or on behalf of any charitable organization shall include:

(a) a clear description of the programs and activities for which it has requested and has expended or will expend contributions or shall include therein a statement that, upon request, a person may obtain from the organization such a description; and

(b) a statement identifying the website and telephone number of the New York state office of the attorney general where an individual can receive information on charitable organizations.

(c) If the solicitation is by an institution subject to article five-A of the not-for-profit corporation law, and is for an endowment fund, the solicitation must include a statement that, unless otherwise restricted by the gift instrument pursuant to paragraph (b) of section five hundred fifty-three of the not-for-profit corporation law, the institution may expend so much of an endowment fund as it deems prudent after considering the factors set forth in paragraph (a) of section five hundred fifty-three of the not-for-profit corporation law.

(a) the name of the professional fund raiser as on file with the attorney general and that the solicitation is being conducted by a professional fund raiser;

(b) the name of the individual professional solicitor as on file with the attorney general and that the individual is receiving compensation for conducting the solicitation; and

(c) a statement identifying the website and telephone number of the office of the attorney general where an individual can receive information on charitable organizations.

4. If any charitable organization makes contributions to another organization which is not its affiliate as defined by paragraph (b) of subdivision four of section one hundred seventy-two-b of this article, such solicitation shall include a statement that such contributions have been made and that a list of all organizations which have received contributions during the past twelve months from the soliciting organization may be obtained from that organization provided, however, a united way, federated fund or incorporated community appeal, by or through which a donation is merely transferred to a charity selected by the donor, need not include such donor selected organizations in the list.

5. A charitable organization shall comply with all requests made pursuant to subdivisions two and four of this section within fifteen days of their receipt. In the event that a charitable organization required to register pursuant to this article has not previously been required to file an annual report with the attorney general, the solicitation shall state the date when such report will be filed. Notes to Decisions

The state made a prima facie showing sufficient to justify entry of an order enjoining defendant, a nonresident co-venturer with various charitable organizations for fund raising purposes, from conducting any solicitations in the state, where it showed that defendant had violated prior consent decrees by using unauthorized sales pitches, and by failing to file contracts with the charitable organizations with the Secretary of State. § 175. Enforcement by attorney general

1. An action for violation of this article may be prosecuted by the attorney general, or his deputy, in the name of the people of the state, and in any such action, the attorney general or his deputy, shall exercise all the powers and perform all duties which the district attorney would otherwise be authorized to exercise or to perform therein.

2. In addition to any other action or proceeding authorized by law and any action or proceeding by the attorney general, the attorney general may bring an action or special proceeding in the supreme court, in the name and in behalf of the people of the state of New York, against a charitable organization and any other persons acting for it or in its behalf to enjoin such organization and/or persons from continuing the solicitation or collection of funds or property or engaging therein or doing any acts in furtherance thereof, and to cancel any registration statement previously filed with the attorney general pursuant to this article and for an order awarding restitution and damages, penalties and costs; and removing any director or other person responsible for the violation of this article; dissolving a corporation and other relief which the court may deem proper, whenever the attorney general shall have reason to believe that the charitable organization or other person:

(a) is violating or has violated any of the provisions of this article;

(b) has refused or failed, or any of its principal officers has refused or failed, after notice, to produce any records of such organizations;

(c) is employing or about to employ, or there is employed or about to be employed, in any solicitation or collection of funds or other property for such organization, any device, scheme or artifice to defraud or for obtaining money or property by means of a false pretense, representation or promise;

(d) has made a material false statement in an application, registration or statement required to be filed pursuant to this article;

(e) (i) has failed or is failing to apply the funds solicited from the public in a manner substantially consistent with its charitable purposes or solicitation or has engaged in repeated fraudulent or illegal activities, acts or conduct in connection with the solicitation for charitable purposes; (ii) or, in the case of a law enforcement support organization, has failed or is failing to apply the funds solicited from the public in a manner substantially consistent with the purposes of the solicitation or has engaged in repeated fraudulent or illegal activities, acts or conduct in connection with the solicitation for purposes of the law enforcement support organization;

(f) violates any order or determination made by the attorney general pursuant to the provisions of this article;

(g) has used or intends to use false or materially misleading advertising or promotional material in connection with any solicitation or with any commercial co-venture or fails to disclose the information required to be disclosed pursuant to section one hundred seventy-four-b of this article; or

(h) is a law enforcement support organization and is employing or about to employ, or there is employed or about to be employed, in any solicitation or collection of funds or other property for such organization, any device, scheme or artifice to defraud or for obtaining money or property by means of a false pretense, representation or promise which shall include, without limitation, making any of the following representations: (i) that professional fund raisers or solicitors are police officers or employees of any law enforcement agency, (ii) that funds collected will be used to aid widows and children of police officers slain in the line of duty or for any other charitable program unless the organization is actually engaged in such a program, (iii) that contributors will receive special benefits from police officers, and (iv) that contributions are tax deductible as a charitable contribution or as a business expense unless they so qualify under the applicable provisions of the internal revenue code.

In connection with such proposed action or proceeding the attorney general is authorized to take proof, issue subpoenas and administer oaths in the manner provided in the civil practice law and rules.

3. Upon a showing by the attorney general in an application for an injunction that any person engaged in solicitation has been convicted in this state or elsewhere of a felony or of a misdemeanor involving the misappropriation, misapplication or misuse of the money or property of another, and who has not, subsequent to such conviction, received executive pardon therefor or a certificate of relief from disabilities or a certificate of good conduct pursuant to article twenty-three of the correction law, the supreme court, after a hearing, may enjoin such person from engaging in any solicitation.

4. The attorney general may exercise the authority granted in this section against any charitable organization which operates under the guise or pretense of being an organization exempted by the provisions of section one hundred seventy-two-a of this article and is not in fact an organization entitled to such an exemption.

5. Whenever the attorney general shall have reason to believe that any professional fund-raiser, fund raising counsel, professional solicitor or commercial co-venturer is operating in violation of the provisions of this article, or has made any false statement in any application, registration or statement required to be filed pursuant to this article, or if any professional fund-raiser, fund raising counsel, or commercial co-venturer has refused or failed, after notice, to produce any records demanded of him, or there is employed or is about to be employed in any solicitation or collection of contributions for a charitable or religious organization any device, scheme or artifice to defraud or for obtaining money or property by means of any false pretense, representation or promise, in addition to any other action or proceeding authorized by law, he may bring in the supreme court an action or proceeding in the name, and on behalf, of the people of the state of New York against such professional fund-raiser, fund raising counsel, commercial co-venturer, professional solicitor, and any other person who has participated or is about to participate in such solicitation or collection by employing such device, scheme, artifice, false representation or promise, to enjoin such professional fund-raiser, fund raising counsel, commercial co-venturer, professional solicitor, or other person from continuing such solicitation or collection or engaging therein or doing any acts in furtherance thereof, or to cancel any registration statement previously filed with the attorney general.

6. Whenever the attorney general has determined to commence an action under this article, he may present to any justice of the supreme court, before beginning such action, an application in writing for an order directing the person or persons mentioned in the application to appear before the justice of the supreme court or referee designated in such order and answer such questions as may be put to them or to any of them, or to produce such papers, documents and books concerning the practices to which the action which he has determined to bring relates, and it shall be the duty of the justice of the supreme court to whom such application for the order is made to grant such application. The application for such order made by the attorney general may simply show upon his information and belief that the testimony of such person or persons is material and necessary. The provisions of the civil practice law and rules relating to an application for an order for the examination of witnesses before the commencement of an action and the method of proceeding on such examination, shall not apply except as herein prescribed. The order shall be granted by the justice of the supreme court to whom the application has been made with such preliminary injunction or stay as may appear to such justice to be proper and expedient and shall specify the time when and place where the witnesses are required to appear. The justice or referee may adjourn such examination from time to time and witnesses must attend accordingly. The testimony of each witness must be subscribed by him and all must be filed in the office of the clerk of the county in which such order for examination is filed. The order for such examination must be signed by the justice making it and service of a copy thereof with an endorsement by the attorney general signed by him or his deputy, to the effect that the person named therein is required to appear and be examined at the time and place and before the justice or referee specified in such endorsement, shall be sufficient notice for the attendance of witnesses. Such endorsement may contain a clause requiring such person to produce at such examination all books, papers and documents in his possession or under his control relating to the subject of such examination. The order shall be served upon the person named in the endorsement aforesaid by showing him the original order and delivering to and leaving with him at the same time a copy thereof, endorsed as above provided, and by paying or tendering to him the fee allowed by law to witnesses subpoenaed to attend trials of civil actions in any court of record in this state.

7. In addition to any other action authorized by law, the attorney general may bring an action or special proceeding in the supreme court to recover any civil penalties assessed by the attorney general.

8. Nothing contained in section one hundred seventy-seven of this article shall prevent, limit, restrict, impede or delay the attorney general from instituting, at any time, any action or proceeding authorized by the provisions of this article or any other appropriate law, as he may deem necessary.

Analysis

1. Under former Social Service Law §§ 482-c, 482-i
2. Illustrative cases

1. Under former Social Service Law §§ 482-c, 482-i

Responsibility to enjoin frauds upon the public in the solicitation of funds, and in other ways to prevent unscrupulous fund raising schemes, lies with the Attorney General. Sport Celebrities, Inc. v Maull, 56 A.D.2d 849, 392 N.Y.S.2d 315, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11190 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 42 N.Y.2d 803, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 3695 (N.Y. 1977).

2. Illustrative cases

Where the Attorney General sued a professional fundraiser and its president to permanently enjoin them from soliciting and collecting charitable contributions from the public, he was properly granted summary judgment on the issue of liability, as he established that the fundraiser's solicitation of charitable funds on behalf of a cancer prevention organization was fraudulent and deceptive because the fundraiser misrepresented the extent of the organization's actions in helping women survive breast cancer. People v Coalition Against Breast Cancer, Inc., 134 A.D.3d 1081, 22 N.Y.S.3d 562, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9661 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2015), app. denied, 28 N.Y.3d 901, 63 N.E.3d 69, 40 N.Y.S.3d 349, 2016 N.Y. LEXIS 2717 (N.Y. 2016).

Where the Attorney General established that a professional fundraiser's solicitation of charitable funds on behalf of a cancer prevention organization was fraudulent and deceptive, the trial court properly pierced the corporate veil to hold the fundraiser's president personally liable, as an officer of a corporation could be held liable for fraud if he participated in it or had actual knowledge of it. People v Coalition Against Breast Cancer, Inc., 134 A.D.3d 1081, 22 N.Y.S.3d 562, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9661 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2015), app. denied, 28 N.Y.3d 901, 63 N.E.3d 69, 40 N.Y.S.3d 349, 2016 N.Y. LEXIS 2717 (N.Y. 2016).

Agency Opinions

1. In General

Attorney General's office, through written service agreement, could partner with 2 non-profit corporations to modernize its registry of not-for-profit corporations, charitable trusts, and fundraising professionals where such arrangement was part of agreement for consideration and did not constitute gifts to individual employees or to office. Editor's Notes See 1968 note under § 290.

Laws 1996, ch 204, § 1, eff Sept 23, 1996, provides as follows:

Section 1. Legislative findings and intent. The legislature hereby finds and declares that advances in the science of human genetics are rapidly expanding the ability to directly test DNA to determine genetic predispositions to an ever-increasing number of genetically influenced health conditions, and to determine whether an individual who has no predisposition to such disease may nevertheless be a carrier of a genetic anomaly, able to pass a genetic predisposition to offspring.

The legislature further finds and declares, that while advances in the ability to develop tests are proceeding at a fast pace, the knowledge of how genes produce diseases is limited, and, as a result, there is a limited possibility of predicting whether a particular genetic predisposition will result in disease or disability, when the onset of such disease or disability may occur, or how severely the individual may be affected by the disease or disability.

The legislature further finds and declares, that advances in genetic testing for disease, predisposition to disease or carrier status raises the possibility that even otherwise healthy individuals will be labeled genetically "defective" and will form a growing "genetic underclass" of society. The fact that not all such testing is currently regulated, and thus not subject to quality control or proficiency testing, invites the danger of error or misinterpretation of genetic tests.

The legislature further finds and declares, that employers attempting to control health insurance costs may seek to have their prospective employees tested for a range of genetically influenced health conditions including genetic predisposition to disease or disability and carrier status for such. The knowledge gained from DNA-based genetic tests could be used to discriminate against individuals in various employment contexts.

It is therefore declared to be the policy of this state that, in order to preclude unfair discrimination, employers have no legitimate interest in requiring or requesting a genetic test or test results from an employee or applicant and should be prohibited from requiring or requesting such test except where such a test is shown to be directly related to the occupational environment, such that the employee or applicant with a particular genetic anomaly might be at an increased risk of disease as a result of working in said environment.

Laws 2002, ch 2, § 1, eff Jan 16, 2003, provides as follows:

Section 1. Legislative findings and intent. The legislature reaffirms that the state has the responsibility to act to assure that every individual within this state is afforded an equal opportunity to enjoy a full and productive life, and that the failure to provide such equal opportunity, whether because of discrimination, prejudice, intolerance or inadequate education, training, housing or health care not only threatens the rights and proper privileges of its inhabitants, but menaces the institutions and foundation of a free democratic state and threatens the peace, order, health, safety and general welfare of the state and its inhabitants.

The legislature further finds that many residents of this state have encountered prejudice on account of their sexual orientation, and that this prejudice has severely limited or actually prevented access to employment, housing and other basic necessities of life, leading to deprivation and suffering. The legislature further recognizes that this prejudice has fostered a general climate of hostility and distrust, leading in some instances to physical violence against those perceived to be homosexual or bisexual.

In so doing, the legislature makes clear its action is not intended to promote any particular attitude, course of conduct or way of life. Rather its purpose is to ensure that individuals who live in our free society have the capacity to make their own choices, follow their own beliefs and conduct their own lives as they see fit, consistent with existing law.

Nothing in this legislation should be construed to create, add, alter or abolish any right to marry that may exist under the constitution of the United States, or this state and/or the laws of this state.

Laws 2003, ch 106, §§ 1 and 1-a, eff July 1, 2003, provide as follows:

Section 1. Legislative findings and intent. The legislature recognizes that the individuals who are members of the military make a tremendous sacrifice, especially in times like these when our military personnel are in many locations throughout the world and here in New York fighting against terrorism. This sacrifice is just as real for the men and women who comprise our reserve armed forces and state organized militia. For those who are not full-time active duty in the military, but instead are called to active duty as a member of the reserve armed forces or state organized militia, the rest of their lives must be put on hold to accommodate that service. However, such military personnel continue to be responsible for their own well-being and the well-being of their families and they must still face the obligations that exist in their everyday lives. Steps have been taken to ease some of the burdens that these brave men and women encounter, to allow them to focus their full energy on defending our country; however, the legislature recognizes that more must be done to ensure that military personnel engaged in active duty are not troubled by their obligations at home. In addition, the legislature recognizes that members of the military should not be discriminated against based upon their military status in areas such as housing, employment and education.

§ 1-a. Short title. This act shall be known as the "Patriot Plan".

Laws 2010, ch 481, § 1, eff Nov 29, 2010, provides as follows:

Section 1. Legislative findings and intent. Many thousands of domestic workers are employed in New York state as housekeepers, nannies, and companions to the elderly. The labor of domestic workers is central to the ongoing prosperity that the state enjoys, and yet, despite the value of their work, domestic workers do not receive the same protection of many state laws as do workers in other industries. Domestic workers often labor under harsh conditions, work long hours for low wages without benefits or job security, are isolated in their workplaces, and are endangered by sexual harassment and assault, as well as verbal, emotional and psychological abuse. Moreover, many domestic workers in the state of New York are women of color who, because of race and sex discrimination, are particularly vulnerable to unfair labor practices. Additionally, domestic workers are not afforded by law the right to organize labor unions for the purpose of collective bargaining.

The legislature finds that because domestic workers care for the most important elements of their employers' lives, their families and homes, it is in the interest of employees, employers, and the people of the state of New York to ensure that the rights of domestic workers are respected, protected, and enforced.

Laws 2015, ch 141, § 5, eff August 13, 2015, provides:

§ 5. This act shall take effect immediately and shall be deemed to have been in full force and effect on the same date chapter 536 of the laws of 2014 took effect.

Laws 2019, ch 8, §§ 1, 25, provide:

Section 1. The legislature reaffirms that the state has the responsibility to act to assure that every individual within this state is afforded an equal opportunity to enjoy a full and productive life, and that the failure to provide such equal opportunity, whether because of discrimination, prejudice, intolerance or inadequate education, training, housing or health care not only threatens the rights and proper privileges of its inhabitants, but menaces the institutions and foundation of a free democratic state and threatens the peace, order, health, safety and general welfare of the state and its inhabitants.

The legislature further finds that many residents of this state have encountered prejudice on account of their gender identity or expression, and that this prejudice has severely limited or actually prevented access to employment, housing and other basic necessities of life, leading to deprivation and suffering. The legislature further recognizes that this prejudice has fostered a general climate of hostility and distrust, leading in some instances to physical violence against those perceived to live in a gender identity or expression which is different from that traditionally associated with the sex assigned to that person at birth.

In so doing, the legislature makes clear its action is not intended to promote any particular attitude, course of conduct or way of life. Rather its purpose is to ensure that individuals who live in our free society have the capacity to make their own choices, follow their own beliefs and conduct their own lives as they see fit, consistent with existing law.

The legislature further finds that, as court decisions have properly held, New York's sex discrimination laws prohibit discrimination based on gender stereotypes or because an individual has transitioned or intends to transition from one gender to another. This legislation is intended to codify this principle and to ensure that the public understands that discrimination on the basis of gender identity and expression is prohibited.

1. In general

Denial of sick leave benefits for pregnancy-related disabilities, when they are provided for other forms of disability, constitutes impermissible discrimination under the Human Rights Law. Brooklyn Union Gas Co. v New York State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 41 N.Y.2d 84, 390 N.Y.S.2d 884, 359 N.E.2d 393, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 3253 (N.Y. 1976), reh'g denied, 42 N.Y.2d 824, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 3961 (N.Y. 1977).

Neither the wide statement of the purposes of the Human Rights Law, nor the definition of terms used, nor the provisions of the Constitution which the Human Rights Law fulfills, indicates an intent to exclude public employers from the sanctions directed toward discriminatory practices under the Act, and thus public school teacher who felt that school's maternity leave policy was discriminatory was entitled to carry her grievance to the State Division of Human Rights. Board of Education v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 42 A.D.2d 49, 345 N.Y.S.2d 93, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4062 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1973), aff'd, 35 N.Y.2d 673, 360 N.Y.S.2d 887, 319 N.E.2d 202, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1326 (N.Y. 1974).

In action for retaliation under CLS Exec § 296(7) brought against Board of Trustees of divinity school (defendant), court should have granted defendant's motion to dismiss complaint where there were no allegations that defendant fell within ambit of CLS Exec § 292(1), nor was it alleged that activity or activities in which defendant engaged were allegedly prohibited under Human Rights Law; although plaintiff alleged that defendant violated general duty to accommodate her disability under CLS Exec § 296(3)(a), that section applied to employers, licensing agencies, employment agencies, and labor organizations and did not apply here. Edwards v Board of Trustees of Colgate Rochester Divinity Sch., 254 A.D.2d 709, 677 N.Y.S.2d 868, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10379 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

Defendants were entitled to summary judgment dismissing employee's action alleging that they unlawfully discriminated against her by discharging her because of her disability in violation of CLS Exec § 296(1)(a) where (1) within a few days after employee was fired for poor work performance, she applied for workers' compensation benefits, claiming that she was totally disabled and unable to work as result of back injury sustained during course of her employment, (2) CLS Exec § 292(21) limits Human Rights Law recovery to disabilities that "do not prevent the complainant from performing in a reasonable manner the activities involved in the job or occupation sought or held," and (3) employee could not claim that she was entitled to workers' compensation benefits on ground that she was totally disabled and, at same time, claim that her "disability" was within protection of § 292(21). Sherman v Kang, 275 A.D.2d 1016, 713 N.Y.S.2d 597, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9602 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000).

Summary judgment dismissing an employee's discrimination claim against a county was proper; the employee failed to make a prima facie showing of either disability or age discrimination in the county's failure to promote him to police sergeant because the employee failed to establish that he could perform the essential functions of the position of police sergeant. The employee also failed to make a prima facie showing of retaliation because he failed to establish a causal connection between the protected activity and the adverse action. Simeone v County of Suffolk, 36 A.D.3d 890, 828 N.Y.S.2d 560, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 966 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2007).

Sua sponte dismissal of a former employee's claim of disability discrimination in violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 was error because, although the former employee failed to comply with the grievance procedure set forth in the parties' collective bargaining agreement (CBA), the CBA contained no provisions for resolution of employment discrimination disputes, let alone any clear and unmistakable language waiving the right to judicial forum for such claims; although the former employer and the superintendent asserted a failure to exhaust administrative remedies in support of their motion to dismiss the former employee's separate cause of action alleging breach of contract, the former employer and the superintendent never set forth the failure to exhaust administrative remedies in support of their motion to dismiss the employment discrimination claim, and thus the former employee was deprived of an opportunity to submit additional proof in opposition. Ambrosino v Village of Bronxville, 58 A.D.3d 649, 873 N.Y.S.2d 312, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 372 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2009).

Terminated employee's New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a), and the New York City Human Rights Law, New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(1)(a), claim failed as the employer engaged in an interactive process for purposes of N.Y. Exec. Law § 292 and New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(15) by: (1) seeking clarification from the employee's doctor, keeping the employee's job open during two separate medical leaves, and communicating with the employee and his doctor; and (2) it was only after it was confirmed that the employee could not work at construction sites that he was terminated. Jacobsen v New York City Health & Hosps. Corp., 97 A.D.3d 428, 948 N.Y.S.2d 586, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5386 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2012), aff'd in part, modified, 22 N.Y.3d 824, 988 N.Y.S.2d 86, 11 N.E.3d 159, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 570 (N.Y. 2014).

Attorney general was entitled to a permanent injunction prohibiting the landlord from violating West Seneca Fair Housing Code § 71-3 (A) because the landlord had engaged in discrimination based on a person's source of income by refusing to accept housing vouchers under § 8 of the United States Housing Act of 1937. Section 8 vouchers constituted a "source of income" because they were a recurrent benefit, measured in terms of money, that constituted financial gain to the recipient. People v Ivybrooke Equity Enters., LLC, 175 A.D.3d 1000, 107 N.Y.S.3d 248, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6345 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2019).

Plaintiff's discharge from his employment with a town highway department solely because he was the son of the former town supervisor, a political adversary of the successor supervisor, did not state a cause of action for unlawful discriminatory practice under Exec Law § 296(1) as a discharge based on national origin; although Exec Law § 292(8) provides that the term national origin includes ancestry, the legislative intent of the statute was to prohibit discrimination based upon the country in which an individual was born, as well as the country in which an individual's ancestors were born; the discharge of an employee based on political differences with the employee's father is not prohibited. Ingalls v Lyndon, 127 Misc. 2d 442, 486 N.Y.S.2d 659, 1985 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2614 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1985).

Co-op resident could bring discrimination and retaliation claims against a co-op director; N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 and New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107 provided for individual liability without an exemption for corporate directors, and discriminatory conduct was not protected by the business judgment rule. Fletcher v Dakota, Inc., 99 A.D.3d 43, 948 N.Y.S.2d 263, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5245 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2012).

Not-for-profit religious corporation may maintain action under Human Rights Law. Jews for Jesus, Inc. v Jewish Community Relations Council, Inc., 968 F.2d 286, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 15614 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1992).

Black shoppers could not maintain action against town for violation of CLS Exec § 296(2)(a) based on town police officers' conduct in removing them from department store at request of store manager, who suspected them of shoplifting, since town defendants did not fall within definition of persons liable under § 296(2)(a), and plaintiffs failed to set forth any facts that would support finding that agency relationship existed between town defendants and store. Robinson v Town of Colonie, 878 F. Supp. 387, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2849 (N.D.N.Y. 1995).

2. Employment agency

Newspaper which contained separate help wanted columns for female and male help was not an "employer" nor an "employment agency" within meaning of law which prohibits discrimination on basis of sex. NOW v State Div. of Human Rights, 34 N.Y.2d 416, 358 N.Y.S.2d 124, 314 N.E.2d 867, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1480 (N.Y. 1974).

A complaint which stated that the defendant newspaper published employment opportunities under separate headings for help wanted—male, help wanted—female and help wanted—male or female, without regard as to whether or not sex constituted a bona fide qualification for the employment opportunities so listed, and charging discrimination because of sex, failed to state a cause of action, the legislature not intending to include newspapers within the definition of the term "employment agency" as contained in Executive Law § 292, subd 2. National Organization for Women v Buffalo Courier-Express, Inc., 71 Misc. 2d 917, 337 N.Y.S.2d 608, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1706 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1972).

When the attorney general sought to subpoena records of a domestic worker placement agency, to determine if the agency was violating N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., N.Y. Civ. Rights Law § 40-c, and New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(a), by asking job applicants about their national origin, age, and marital status and accommodating employer preferences as to a worker's national origin and age, the attorney general could subpoena agency documents used to record information about job applicants, fees the agency earned for placing applicants, and applicants' hiring rates, but, as to information about agency clients, the attorney general was only entitled to agency intake forms used to register clients, and documents showing job characteristics, requirements, and/or employer preferences, but could not know who the prospective employers were, as this would interfere with the personal employment relationships between the employers and the workers they hired, which would be contrary to the intention of the legislature when it enacted N.Y. Exec. Law § 292(6). Matter of Pavillion Agency Inc v Spitzer, 802 N.Y.S.2d 879, 9 Misc. 3d 626, 234 N.Y.L.J. 28, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1613 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2005).

3. Employer

The definitions set up by subd 5 of this section do not effectively take the New York City Board of Higher Education away from the general jurisdiction of the Commission or leave the Commission without power to control instances of discrimination in the employment policies of educational institutions the same as in other areas of public employment. Board of Higher Education v Carter, 14 N.Y.2d 138, 250 N.Y.S.2d 33, 199 N.E.2d 141, 1964 N.Y. LEXIS 1228 (N.Y. 1964).

Provision of the Disability Benefits Law which excepts disabilities caused by or arising in connection with pregnancy from the minimum benefits mandated by that law does not excuse private employers with more than three employees from the necessity of complying with provision of the Human Rights Law which prohibits discrimination in employment based on sex and which has been held to prohibit employment personnel policies which single out pregnancy and child birth for treatment different from that accorded other instances of physical or medical impairment or disability. Brooklyn Union Gas Co. v New York State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 41 N.Y.2d 84, 390 N.Y.S.2d 884, 359 N.E.2d 393, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 3253 (N.Y. 1976), reh'g denied, 42 N.Y.2d 824, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 3961 (N.Y. 1977).

The Disability Benefits Law, which excepts disabilities caused by or arising in connection with pregnancy from the minimum benefits mandated by that law, and the Human Rights Law, which prohibits discrimination in employment based on sex, impose two concurrent independent minimum standards; for employers with three or fewer employees, the operative minimum is only that of the Disability Benefits Law; but for all others, within the reach of both statutes, the operative standard which imposes the greater obligation is controlling. Brooklyn Union Gas Co. v New York State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 41 N.Y.2d 84, 390 N.Y.S.2d 884, 359 N.E.2d 393, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 3253 (N.Y. 1976), reh'g denied, 42 N.Y.2d 824, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 3961 (N.Y. 1977).

Corporate employee, even though officer and manager of division, is not individually subject to action under § 6(d) of Fair Labor Standards Act (29 USCS § 206(d)) or New York's Human Rights Law (Executive Law, Article 15) if he is not shown to have ownership interest or power to do more than carry out personnel decisions made by others. Patrowich v Chemical Bank, 63 N.Y.2d 541, 483 N.Y.S.2d 659, 473 N.E.2d 11, 1984 N.Y. LEXIS 4717 (N.Y. 1984).

In an employment discrimination action, the complaint was properly dismissed as to an individual defendant who was one of approximately 800 vice-presidents of the corporate defendant and was not shown to have any ownership interest or power to do more than carry out personnel decisions made by others, since a corporate employee, even if he has a title as an officer and is the manager or supervisor of a corporate division, is not individually subject to suit with respect to discrimination based on age or sex under New York's Human Rights Law (Exec Law Art 15), Labor Law § 194, or the Federal Age Discrimination In Employment Act (29 USCS § 623) or Equal Pay Act (29 USCS § 206(d)), if he is not shown to have any ownership interest or any power to do more than carry out personnel decisions made by others. Patrowich v Chemical Bank, 63 N.Y.2d 541, 483 N.Y.S.2d 659, 473 N.E.2d 11, 1984 N.Y. LEXIS 4717 (N.Y. 1984).

In a case wherein the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit certified three questions to the Court of Appeals of New York, the Court held that N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(6) extends liability to an out-of-state non-employer who aids or abets employment discrimination against individuals with a prior criminal conviction. Griffin v Sirva, Inc., 29 N.Y.3d 174, 76 N.E.3d 1063, 54 N.Y.S.3d 360, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 1244 (N.Y. 2017).

In a case wherein the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit certified three questions to the Court of Appeals of New York, the Court held that N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(6) extends liability to an out-of-state non-employer who aids or abets employment discrimination against individuals with a prior criminal conviction. Griffin v Sirva, Inc., 29 N.Y.3d 174, 76 N.E.3d 1063, 54 N.Y.S.3d 360, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 1244 (N.Y. 2017).

Defendant's motion for summary judgment should have been granted in action for unlawful discrimination based on disability–defendant is close corporation in which husband and wife are principals; they employ one full-time person and one part-time person; plaintiff, defendant's full-time employee, was terminated following surgery for breast cancer; Executive Law § 296, which prohibits discriminatory practices based on disability, is inapplicable because of number of persons employed by defendant; Executive Law § 292 (5) provides that "employer" does not include any employer with fewer than four persons in his employ, and while plaintiff contends that defendant employed at least four persons, this figure is reached only by including principals husband and wife as employees; statute envisions situation where employer engages four persons other than himself or herself. Germakian v Kenny International Corp., 151 A.D.2d 342, 543 N.Y.S.2d 66, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7998 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 615, 549 N.Y.S.2d 960, 549 N.E.2d 151, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 3205 (N.Y. 1989).

In employment discrimination action against condominium which employed plaintiff as concierge and whose superintendent allegedly harassed her, condominium's managing agent was not entitled to summary judgment on ground that it was neither plaintiff's nor superintendent's employer where plaintiff, although paid by condominium, was hired, supervised and fired by managing agent, and managing agent's day-to-day control over plaintiff and superintendent was substantial; furthermore, issue of fact existed as to whether managing agent, even if not plaintiff's employer, aided and abetted superintendent's harassment of her, which would render it liable under CLS Exec § 296(6). Sanchez v Brown, Harris, Stevens, Inc., 234 A.D.2d 170, 651 N.Y.S.2d 477, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12551 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

Cause of action for employment discrimination based on age was properly dismissed as against one of 2 corporate defendants where unrefuted documentary evidence, including W-2 forms, showed that plaintiff was employed by, and received salary only from, other corporate defendant. Brady v Helmsley, 246 A.D.2d 486, 668 N.Y.S.2d 198, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 705 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Cause of action for employment discrimination based on age was properly sustained as against individual defendant who directed plaintiff's hours of employment, ordered his termination and later reinstatement, and otherwise controlled his employment in business organization that defendant controlled where that organization had more than 4 employees, as required by CLS Exec § 292(5), as did defendant's household staff. Brady v Helmsley, 246 A.D.2d 486, 668 N.Y.S.2d 198, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 705 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

New York State Division of Human Rights properly dismissed, for lack of jurisdiction, claim of racial discrimination brought by certified home health care aide, who was employed by 93-year-old quadriplegic to provide 24-hour care to attend to his health and personal hygiene needs, to cook for him, to transport him, and otherwise to care for him. Thomas v Dosberg, 249 A.D.2d 999, 672 N.Y.S.2d 164, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5177 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

Employer who did not employ 4 or more persons during period in which alleged discrimination based on sexual harassment took place was entitled to summary judgment dismissing plaintiff's claim under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a). DeStefano v Kopelman, 265 A.D.2d 446, 697 N.Y.S.2d 111, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10609 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

In action seeking money damages for employment discrimination, assault and battery and intentional infliction of emotional distress, corporate defendants were not entitled to dismissal of claims predicated on their failure to remedy plaintiff's work environment and acquiescence in acts of assault and harassment committed by coworkers and managerial employees over 12-year period, in view of lengthy history of alleged abuse, record made when incidents were reported by plaintiff, and alleged complicity of managerial personnel. Acosta v Loews Corp., 276 A.D.2d 214, 717 N.Y.S.2d 47, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12405 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

Since, under subd. 5 of this section, the term "employer" does not apply to a nonprofit educational corporation, the investigative powers of the State Commission Against Discrimination do not extend to practices of the New York City Board of Higher Education. Board of Higher Education v Carter, 26 Misc. 2d 989, 213 N.Y.S.2d 132, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3313 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1961), modified, 16 A.D.2d 443, 228 N.Y.S.2d 704, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9402 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1962).

Due to the common management, ownership, and financial control of an employer and its interrelated entities, their employees were properly aggregated to satisfy N.Y. Exec. Law § 292(5); in addition, since the employer violated N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1) by discriminating against an employee based on her pregnancy, it was not entitled to N.Y. Exec. Law § 298 relief. Matter of Argyle Realty Assocs. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 65 A.D.3d 273, 882 N.Y.S.2d 458, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5399 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2009).

Former legislative aides adequately pled that the State of New York was their employer because the State paid their salary and benefits and represented that it was their employer on tax forms, and the employee manual advised that they must abide by State personnel policies. Burhans v State, 2015 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 9641 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. Jan. 7, 2015).

Chauffeur/driver's (CD) claim against a law firm, alleging that it terminated him after he was hospitalized in violation of, inter alia, the New York State and New York City Human Rights Laws, lacked merit because the evidence clearly indicated that he was employed by a member of the firm personally and that the CD performed the type of domestic service that was excluded from the definition of employee. Jackson v Abrams, Fensterman, Fensterman, Flowers, Greenberg & Eisman, LLP, 52 Misc. 3d 183, 29 N.Y.S.3d 91, 2016 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 172 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 2016).

Former bus driver did not have a claim for disability discrimination under the Americans with Disabilities Act, 42 U.S.C.S. § 12101 et seq., or under the corresponding state and city laws set forth in N.Y. Exec. Law §§ 292, 296, and N.Y. City Admin. Code § 8-107, because the employee could not show that he was qualified for the job when the employee was not able to meet a reasonable job requirement of obtaining a medical certificate of fitness when the employee could not pass a test for colorblindness. Shannon v N.Y. City Transit Auth., 332 F.3d 95, 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 11717 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2003).

Individual employees could not be held liable for age discrimination in violation of Human Rights Law where they were not shown to have any ownership interest or power to do more than carry out personnel decisions made by others, and plaintiffs failed to identify specific discriminatory employment decisions made by any particular defendant with respect to particular plaintiffs other than conclusory allegations of generalized "conspiracy" involving all defendants; "person" under CLS Exec § 292(1) should be interpreted to exclude individuals in common employment relationship. Falbaum v Pomerantz, 891 F. Supp. 986, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10370 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

Medical school that provided medical services at city hospital was not entitled to dismissal of discrimination claim asserted by hospital employee on ground that it was not plaintiff's "employer"; although medical school did not have ultimate authority to hire or fire plaintiff and it did not pay her wages, its employees exercised significant influence and control over conditions of plaintiff's employment and her "fate" at hospital. Dortz v City of New York, 904 F. Supp. 127, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14438 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

Foreign parent corporation was not "employer" for purposes of New York Human Rights Law or New York City Human Rights Law where there was no claim that it had power to select, hire or dismiss subsidiary's employees, and plaintiff employee failed to show that it paid any salary or wages to him. Robins v Max Mara, U.S.A., 923 F. Supp. 460, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1295 (S.D.N.Y. 1996).

Plaintiff's supervisors were not liable for damages under CLS Exec § 296 where they did not learn of alleged discriminatory acts until just prior to and when plaintiff first resigned, significant steps were taken at that time to remedy those acts, and there was no evidence that they knew or should have known of discriminatory acts alleged by plaintiff that occurred after he returned to work on new shift assignment. Amin v Quad/Graphics, 929 F. Supp. 73, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12262 (N.D.N.Y. 1996).

For purposes of action under Human Rights Law by clerical employee of Kings County public administrator, New York City was plaintiff's employer as matter of law even though it was not involved in public administrator's hiring decisions, where it paid plaintiff's wages and benefits, it controlled her conduct as far as setting permissible holidays and docking her pay when she was late for work, and it had authority to fire her. Gryga v Ganzman, 991 F. Supp. 105, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 262 (E.D.N.Y. 1998).

Employee's New York State Human Rights Law (CLS Exec Law §§ 290 et seq.) cause of action may proceed against both public administrator and city, even though city is not involved in administrator's hiring decisions, where city can exercise its authority to fire employee, pays her wages and benefits, and controls her conduct as far as setting forth permissible holidays and docking her pay when she is late, because city can be deemed her "employer" under § 292(5) for purposes of liability. Gryga v Ganzman, 991 F. Supp. 105, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 262 (E.D.N.Y. 1998).

Electrical worker's age discrimination claim against trade association must fail, even though association negotiated collective bargaining agreement with worker's union under which he obtains employment with electrical contractors, where trade association that represents its employer members in negotiations with labor unions is neither employer of unions' workers nor agent of its employer members, because association cannot be sued as "employer" under New York Human Rights Law (Exec §§ 290 et seq.). Gallagher v IBEW, 130 F. Supp. 2d 359, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1677 (N.D.N.Y. 2001).

4. Places of public accommodation

In proceedings based upon an order of the State Commission against discrimination the evidence established that the premises occupied by a beach club which were leased from the former operator, a commercial corporation, and which had extensive facilities, was a place of public accommodation, resort, or amusement; that the beach club was never a bona fide membership corporation; and that the real parties in interest employed the device of such corporation to facilitate the exclusion of Negroes so as to continue a discriminatory practice in a place of public accommodation. Castle Hill Beach Club, Inc. v Arbury, 2 N.Y.2d 596, 162 N.Y.S.2d 1, 142 N.E.2d 186, 1957 N.Y. LEXIS 1091 (N.Y. 1957).

A non-profit, tax-exempt foreign corporation and three of its local charter organizations located in New York, which systematically offered a service or accommodation to the public through their boating courses and promotional activities, were owners of places of public accommodation, resort or amusement, notwithstanding that the place of such public accommodation was not of fixed location, and the corporation and its charter organizations failed to establish that they were distinctively private clubs within the statutory exclusion. United States Power Squadrons v State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 59 N.Y.2d 401, 465 N.Y.S.2d 871, 452 N.E.2d 1199, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 3181 (N.Y. 1983).

Police power delegated to municipalities under State Constitution's home rule provision permits City of New York to define for itself when club loses its "distinctly private" nature so as to subject it to antidiscrimination provision of City Human Rights Law, despite use of term "distinctly private" without further definition in CLS Exec § 292(9), since no evidence exists of legislature's preemption of antidiscrimination legislation and city's more specific definition merely established criteria of selectivity and privateness based on size and amount of business-related income from nonmembers. N.Y. State Club Ass'n v City of New York, 69 N.Y.2d 211, 513 N.Y.S.2d 349, 505 N.E.2d 915, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 15359 (N.Y. 1987), aff'd, 487 U.S. 1, 108 S. Ct. 2225, 101 L. Ed. 2d 1, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 2861 (U.S. 1988).

CLS Exec § 292(9), in reciting list of places that fall within term "place of public accommodation, resort or amusement," provides list that is illustrative, not specific. Cahill v Rosa, 89 N.Y.2d 14, 651 N.Y.S.2d 344, 674 N.E.2d 274, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3056 (N.Y. 1996).

Dentists' offices come within term "place of public accommodation, resort or amusement" because they provide services to public, even though such services may be conducted on private premises and by appointment. Cahill v Rosa, 89 N.Y.2d 14, 651 N.Y.S.2d 344, 674 N.E.2d 274, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3056 (N.Y. 1996).

Hallmark of "private" place within meaning of Human Rights Law is its selectivity or exclusivity, and persons seeking benefit of exemption have burden of establishing that their place of accommodation is "distinctly" private. Cahill v Rosa, 89 N.Y.2d 14, 651 N.Y.S.2d 344, 674 N.E.2d 274, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3056 (N.Y. 1996).

Dentists failed to sustain their burden of proving that their offices were "distinctly private" and therefore exempt from Human Rights Law under provisions of CLS Exec § 292(9) where one dentist established only that premises in which his office was located were privately owned and that patients were generally required to make appointments to be seen, other dentist offered no relevant evidence, and neither dentist offered evidence that his patient roster was selective or exclusive, or that his practice was not generally held open to public. Cahill v Rosa, 89 N.Y.2d 14, 651 N.Y.S.2d 344, 674 N.E.2d 274, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3056 (N.Y. 1996).

Evidence that private club had permitted its premises to be used for a fashion show, that tickets to such event were sold to general public without restriction and without limitation thereon as to facilities of club which would be open during show, and that there was a free flow of guests from banquet room to bar room with no attempt to restrict any except blacks, was ample to support determination that club was a place of public accommodation during show and that blacks had been refused service because of race or color. Batavia Lodge No. 196, L. O. M. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 43 A.D.2d 807, 350 N.Y.S.2d 273, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2914 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1973), rev'd, 35 N.Y.2d 143, 359 N.Y.S.2d 25, 316 N.E.2d 318, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1377 (N.Y. 1974).

Airline travel club open only to professional travel counselors and travel agents was not place of public accommodation within meaning of CLS Exec §§ 296(2)(a) and 292(9) since travel club was not available to general public but was merely incentive program for travel agents. Ness v Pan American World Airways, 142 A.D.2d 233, 535 N.Y.S.2d 371, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12457 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Petitioner, orthopedic surgeon in private practice, upon being informed that patient contracted AIDS, advised patient he would no longer treat him and that he should seek treatment at AIDS clinic; patient filed complaint with respondent, State Division of Human Rights (SDHR), alleging petitioner had discriminated against him on basis of his disability and SDHR made preliminary finding it had jurisdiction and found probable cause to believe petitioner had engaged in unlawful discriminatory practice; petitioner's proceeding seeking to prohibit SDHR from holding hearing on ground that private physician's office is not "place of public accommodation" within meaning of Human Rights Law (Executive Law § 292 [9]) is dismissed; inasmuch as no administrative hearing has yet been held to allow SDHR to determine whether petitioner's medical office is "place of public accommodation" and because agency's final determination is subject to judicial review (Executive Law § 298), relief by way of writ of prohibition is not appropriate remedy. Elstein v State Div. of Human Rights, 161 A.D.2d 1157, 555 N.Y.S.2d 516, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9153 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 710, 563 N.Y.S.2d 61, 564 N.E.2d 671, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 3354 (N.Y. 1990).

Judgment which granted petition to annul determination of State Division of Human Rights (SDHR) dismissing petitioner's claim that respondents were guilty of unlawful discriminatory practice based on creed affirmed–petitioner contracted with respondents to lease space in respondents' shopping center for purpose of displaying nativity scene and fireplace promotion; respondents decided to discontinue leasing space to petitioner as part of efforts "too keep the commercial aspects of Christmas out of religion"–Supreme Court correctly concluded that rental space at issue within respondents' mall was commercial space according to Human Rights Law (see, Executive Law § 292 [13]); fireplace display is not merely incidental but clearly brings intended use within statutory definition of commercial space; accordingly, given SDHR's irrational and unreasonable interpretation of term "commercial space", as envisioned by Human Rights Law, Supreme Court properly vacated and remitted matter of SDHR for consideration of merits. Bruno v Pembrooke Management, 167 A.D.2d 754, 563 N.Y.S.2d 317, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13977 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1990).

Trading floor of Commodities Exchange, Inc. (COMEX) was place of public accommodation under CLS Exec § 296(2)(a) since COMEX's trading floor supplied public service by enabling commodities to be traded, routinely accepted qualified applicants, and placed no subjective limits on number of persons eligible for membership. D'Amico v Commodities Exch., 235 A.D.2d 313, 652 N.Y.S.2d 294, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 506 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1997).

Elks Lodge was not place of public accommodation, but rather was distinctly private for purposes of CLS Exec § 292(9). Cummings v Watertown Lodge No. 496 Benevolent & Protective Order of Elks, Inc., 262 A.D.2d 1007, 693 N.Y.S.2d 786, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7207 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1999).

"Elks Club" lodge was entitled to summary judgment dismissing claim that it discharged plaintiff in retaliation for filing lawsuit after her application for membership in lodge was denied by reason of gender, allegedly in violation of CLS Exec § 296(2), as there was no reasonable basis for plaintiff to have believed that defendant engaged in any discriminatory practice when it denied her membership application, given that CLS Exec § 292(9) explicitly excludes benevolent organization such as Elks Club from mandate of § 296(2) and, since plaintiff was not even "colorably aggrieved" under § 296(2), there was no basis for claim of retaliatory discharge under § 296(1). Dodd v Middletown Lodge (Elks Club) No. 1097, 264 A.D.2d 706, 695 N.Y.S.2d 115, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9066 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 707, 725 N.Y.S.2d 637, 749 N.E.2d 206, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1517 (N.Y. 2001).

Commissioner of the New York State Division of Human Rights, properly found that a country club's membership admissions policy discriminated against applicants on the basis of creed, in violation of N.Y. Executive Law § 296(2)(a), as the club was properly determined to be a place of public accommodation, and did not fall within the distinctly private exception under N.Y. Executive Law § 292(9) since it had over 100 members and provided regular meals and services to non-members, thus, the club's religious quota system to admit new members was violative of N.Y. Executive Law § 296(2)(a). Further, a current member of the club had standing to file the discrimination complaint as his hearing testimony demonstrated that he was deprived of the associational benefits of interacting with at least two potential members who were placed on a waiting list because there were no available openings for members of their religion. Matter of Mill Riv. Club, Inc. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 59 A.D.3d 549, 873 N.Y.S.2d 167, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1108 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. dismissed, 12 N.Y.3d 871, 882 N.Y.S.2d 679, 910 N.E.2d 428, 2009 N.Y. LEXIS 1779 (N.Y. 2009).

State Division of Human Rights properly determined that the owners of a farm were subject to the Human Rights Law because the farm's wedding facilities fell within the broad definition of "place of public accommodation"; the owners opened the farm to the public as a venue for wedding ceremonies and receptions and offered several wedding-related event services. Matter of Gifford v Mccarthy, 137 A.D.3d 30, 23 N.Y.S.3d 422, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 238 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2016).

Respondent State Division of Human Rights does not have concurrent jurisdiction with the Insurance Department over petitioners' alleged discriminatory practice of refusing to issue complainant, a married woman, a Blue Cross and Blue Shield health insurance policy for single persons because of her marital status since insurance carriers are not places of "public accommodation" (Executive Law, § 296, subd 2, par [a]) over which respondent has jurisdiction. Places of "public accommodation" include "wholesale and retail stores and establishments dealing with goods or services of any kind" (Executive Law, § 292, subd 9). While an insurance carrier may be an establishment providing services, it is not a "wholesale and retail" establishment within the meaning of the statute. The Insurance Department has exclusive jurisdiction over questions concerning "unfairly discriminatory" rates (Insurance Law, § 255, subd 2). In any event, under subdivision 40 of the Insurance Law, rates which take into account an applicant's marital status are not "unfairly discriminatory". Rochester Hospital Service Corp. v Division of Human Rights of Executive Dep't, 92 Misc. 2d 705, 401 N.Y.S.2d 413, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2608 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1977).

A complaint which alleges that defendants have illegally used public funds in the purchase of buses and in the construction of transportation facilities which are inaccessible to wheelchair bound and semiambular persons in violation of statutes making it an unlawful discriminatory practice to deny to disabled persons the facilities of "any place of public accommodation" (Executive Law, § 292, subd 9; § 296, subd 2, par [a]), states a cause of action since the disabled require more than equal treatment to insure them the same rights in the utilization of mass transportation as other persons and defendants have not demonstrated on the motion for summary judgment that any of the required "special efforts" have been made; Federal law requires local transportation authorities receiving Federal funds to make special efforts in making facilities accessible to the disabled (US Code, tit 49, § 1612, subd [a]; tit 23, § 142) and affirmative action is imposed on the Secretary of Transportation not merely to refrain from discrimination against handicapped persons but to provide directly for them. Eastern Paralyzed Veteran's Ass'n v Metropolitan Transp. Authority, 103 Misc. 2d 933, 426 N.Y.S.2d 406, 1980 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2225 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), modified, 79 A.D.2d 516, 433 N.Y.S.2d 461, 1980 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13832 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1980).

New York City Commission on Human Rights erred in finding that office of petitioner dentist, who took patients only by referral and did not advertise through telephone directory or otherwise, was "place of public accommodation" within meaning of City's Human Rights Law, NYC Admin Code § 8-102(9); thus, finding that petitioner engaged in discriminatory practice under law by refusing to provide dental services to AIDS patient would be vacated. Sattler v New York Com. on Human Rights, 147 Misc. 2d 189, 554 N.Y.S.2d 763, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 149 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1990), aff'd, 180 A.D.2d 644, 580 N.Y.S.2d 35, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1262 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1992).

Local Elks lodge was not place of public accommodation under CLS Exec § 292(9), warranting dismissal of claims against lodge and lodge officials for alleged violations of CLS Exec § 296(2)(a) relative to denial of plaintiff's application for membership. Gifford v Guilderland Lodge, No. 2480, 178 Misc. 2d 707, 681 N.Y.S.2d 194, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 530 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1998), aff'd, 272 A.D.2d 721, 707 N.Y.S.2d 722, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5710 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Since a lodge of a benevolent order was not a place of public accommodation, New York's Division of Human Rights could dismiss a woman's challenge to the denial of her application to join the lodge for lack of jurisdiction; however, it was arbitrary and capricious for the Division to have indicated in its dismissal that it was dismissing her action on the merits, because this deprived her of the opportunity to annul her election of remedies and pursue relief through a court action. Orendorff v B.P.O.E. Lodge No. 96, 195 Misc. 2d 53, 753 N.Y.S.2d 703, 2003 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 40 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2003).

Trial court properly dismissed a claim by a law client against a law firm, alleging a violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, as, even if it were assumed that a law firm or an attorney's office was considered a "place of public accommodation" as defined by N.Y. Exec. Law § 292(9), the client failed to state a cause of action because she was not denied any "accommodations, advantages, facilities, or privileges" by the law firm under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(2)(a). Ferdinand v Crecca & Blair, 5 A.D.3d 538, 774 N.Y.S.2d 714, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2740 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 3 N.Y.3d 609, 786 N.Y.S.2d 812, 820 N.E.2d 291, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 2495 (N.Y. 2004).

Plaintiff's allegations against a hotel under § 1981 were sufficient to state a claim of discriminatory treatment under New York's unlawful discriminatory practices statute where she alleged, inter alia, an employee's use of a racial epithet in connection with her exclusion from a hotel room that she had reserved and paid for. She also satisfied the additional requirement of the New York law by alleging facts that supported an inference that the hotel's calculated inaction in response to discriminatory conduct by its employee indicated that it condoned his conduct. Clark v City of New York, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 136363 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 19, 2014).

5. Disabilities

Alcohol dependency qualifies as disability within meaning of Human Rights Law. McEniry v Landi, 84 N.Y.2d 554, 620 N.Y.S.2d 328, 644 N.E.2d 1019, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 4122 (N.Y. 1994).

It is an unlawful discriminatory practice for an employer, because of a disability of any individual, to refuse to employ or to discharge such individual or to discriminate against him in compensation or in the terms, conditions or privileges of employment, disability being limited to physical, mental or medical conditions which are unrelated to the ability to engage in the activities involved in the job or occupation. Arnot Ogden Memorial Hospital v State Div. of Human Rights, 67 A.D.2d 543, 416 N.Y.S.2d 372, 1979 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10500 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1979).

The mandate of Exec Law § 292(21), as it existed in 1975, excluded as a basis for a finding of discrimination in employment any disability related to the ability to engage in a particular job. Although this section was later amended to broaden the class sought to be protected, the amended section is not of retroactive application. Therefore, the trial court improperly denied employer's motion for summary judgment where former employee conceded her inability, due to her disability, to undertake the new duties required of a receptionist after an office reorganization. Pugach v Liggett Group, Inc., 81 A.D.2d 552, 438 N.Y.S.2d 307, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11020 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1981), aff'd, 55 N.Y.2d 922, 449 N.Y.S.2d 172, 434 N.E.2d 241, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3116 (N.Y. 1982).

Prior to statute's amendment in 1979, to be disabled within meaning and, therefore, protection of Executive Law, one's disability had to be entirely unrelated to ability to engage in particular job or profession; legislative desire to bring state law into conformity with stricter federal provisions proscribing improper discrimination against handicapped prompted amendment bringing within law's protection anyone whose disability did not prevent reasonable performance of his or her job or profession. Carrero v New York City Housing Authority, 116 A.D.2d 141, 500 N.Y.S.2d 246, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50373 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1986).

Nonjob-related auto accident injury which precludes injured worker from working is not disability within §§ 292, 296. McAuliffe v Taft Furniture Warehouse & Showroom, Ltd., 116 A.D.2d 774, 497 N.Y.S.2d 170, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 51621 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 67 N.Y.2d 609, 503 N.Y.S.2d 1025, 494 N.E.2d 458, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 18621 (N.Y. 1986).

Employer was entitled to summary judgment dismissing employee's action alleging discrimination due to disability under CLS Exec § 296 where it was undisputed that employee's excessive absences were caused by various illnesses requiring hospitalization and employer's absence control plan required good employee attendance to effectively provide its communication services 24 hours per day, 365 days per year; since employee's condition was preventing her from reasonably performing her tasks, employee's decision to dismiss her was not unlawful discrimination. Giaquinto v New York Tel. Co., 135 A.D.2d 928, 522 N.Y.S.2d 329, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52841 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 701, 535 N.Y.S.2d 595, 532 N.E.2d 101, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 3347 (N.Y. 1988).

Medical student failed to state cause of action for discrimination by medical college where he alleged that college discriminated against him on basis of illness when it dismissed him purportedly because of poor academic performance since student's illness was not disability within meaning of CLS Exec § 292(21) as he did not dispute that illness was cause of his poor performance. Lowinger v State University of New York Health Science Center, 180 A.D.2d 606, 580 N.Y.S.2d 316, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2860 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 80 N.Y.2d 753, 587 N.Y.S.2d 904, 600 N.E.2d 631, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 1733 (N.Y. 1992).

Employee's absence from work due to injury did not necessarily mean that injury was not "disability" as defined in CLS Exec § 292(21). Harbas v Gilmore, 193 A.D.2d 553, 597 N.Y.S.2d 704, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5260 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1993).

New York Transit Authority employee did not qualify as disabled person within purview of Human Rights Law, CLS Exec § 292(21)(c), since he was capable of performing certain tasks required of other employees assigned overtime work, but his medical condition prevented him from performing important function of patrol duty; under circumstances, failure to assign overtime work to employee did not violate antidiscrimination provisions of Human Rights Law. Yasinosky v New York City Transit Auth., 193 A.D.2d 731, 598 N.Y.S.2d 52, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4951 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1993).

Physical condition that prevents employee from reporting to work and requires employee to miss unacceptably high number of days of work is not "disability" within meaning of CLS Exec § 292(21). Clark v Cargill, Inc., Flour Milling Div., 206 A.D.2d 870, 615 N.Y.S.2d 210, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7782 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1994).

Even if plaintiff was disabled by her cancers and attendant surgeries, her chronic absenteeism, tardiness and unsatisfactory performance evaluations established that she was unable to perform essential functions of her job as special education teacher, and thus she was not "otherwise qualified" for her job as required by discrimination statutes. Sirota v N.Y. City Bd. of Educ., 283 A.D.2d 369, 725 N.Y.S.2d 332, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6583 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2001).

Determination that an employer violated N.Y. Exec. Law § 292(21-e) by failing to provide reasonable accommodations for the complainant's disability, which was a sensitivity to an ingredient in a cleaning solution used in her work, was supported by substantial evidence because, although the employer had protective equipment at the work site that may have alleviated the complainant's adverse reaction to the ingredient at issue, at no time before her termination from employment did the employer advise the complainant that the protective equipment was available for her use. Neither of the complainant's supervisors addressed the medical issues raised by the complainant and her physician before terminating her. Matter of New Venture Gear, Inc. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 41 A.D.3d 1265, 839 N.Y.S.2d 375, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7165 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2007).

Trial court properly concluded that an employee failed to state a cause of action for employment discrimination on the basis of disability as the employee failed to set forth factual allegations sufficient to show that, upon the provision of reasonable accommodations, she could perform the essential functions of her job. Staskowski v Nassau Community Coll., 53 A.D.3d 611, 862 N.Y.S.2d 544, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6202 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2008).

While Human Rights Law is generally construed in accordance with federal employment discrimination law, employer is not required to affirmatively provide reasonable accommodation for employee's disability. Hendler v Intelecom USA, 963 F. Supp. 200, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7057 (E.D.N.Y. 1997).

Employee's status as breast-feeding mother does not render her "disabled" under Human Rights Law; to extent that plaintiff argues that her child must breast-feed as matter of medical necessity, any disability is that of child alone. Bond v Sterling, Inc., 997 F. Supp. 306, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3103 (N.D.N.Y. 1998).

Prima facie case of failure to provide an accommodation pursuant to New York's Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 292(21), requires the same showing as under the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), 42 U.S.C.S. § 12101 et seq., a plaintiff was disabled within the terms of the statute, his employer had notice of his disability, he could perform the essential functions of the job, with reasonable accommodation, and the employer failed to make such accommodations. Shannon v Verizon N.Y., Inc., 519 F. Supp. 2d 304, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 81888 (N.D.N.Y. 2007).

New York Human Rights Law (NYHRL), N.Y. Exec. Law § 292(21), does not protect an employee who, even upon the provision of a reasonable accommodation, is physically unable to perform her duties; therefore, a former teachers' aides discrimination claim under the NYHRL against a school district and others failed because she admitted that she was totally disabled and unable to work. Casale v Reo, 522 F. Supp. 2d 420, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83611 (N.D.N.Y. 2007).

New York's definition of disability under N.Y. Exec. Law § 292 is more expansive than the Americans with Disabilities Act definition, and includes no requirement that the alleged disability restrict performance of a major life activity. Falso v Ablest Staffing Servs., 533 F. Supp. 2d 332, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9956 (W.D.N.Y. 2008), aff'd, 328 Fed. Appx. 54, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 13378 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2009).

Where an employee moved for summary judgment on her disability employment discrimination claims, she had not established, as a matter of law, that she was disabled. She had not presented any medical evidence, such as physician's diagnosis, showing the nature and extent of her alleged disability, and her lack of independent medical evidence rendered summary judgment in her favor inappropriate. Montesano v Westgate Nursing Home, Inc., 956 F. Supp. 2d 417, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 105688 (W.D.N.Y. 2013).

Where an employee moved for summary judgment on her disability employment discrimination claims, the record was insufficient to show that the employer regarded her as having an impairment. Montesano v Westgate Nursing Home, Inc., 956 F. Supp. 2d 417, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 105688 (W.D.N.Y. 2013).

6. —Physical disabilities, generally

Under the former provisions of the Human Rights Law, which limited the term "disability" to physical, mental or medical conditions which were unrelated to the ability to engage in the activities involved in the job or occupation which a person claiming protection was seeking (Executive Law, former § 292, subd 21), it was not an unlawful discriminatory practice to deny an applicant employment because of a physical disability which was related to the ability to engage in the activities of the job or occupation, even though it was not demonstrated that the degree or extent of the disability of the particular applicant was such as would interfere with his ability to engage in such activities; accordingly, where it was shown that the complainant suffered from dermatitis which in an exacerbated state would interfere with the performance of duties in the employment sought by him, it was not an unlawful discriminatory practice to deny the complainant employment, even though it was not shown that the condition had progressed to the point where there was such interference. Westinghouse Electric Corp. v State Div. of Human Rights, 49 N.Y.2d 234, 425 N.Y.S.2d 74, 401 N.E.2d 196, 1980 N.Y. LEXIS 2036 (N.Y. 1980).

Test as to whether "disability" within meaning of CLS Exec § 292 permits discharge of employee or refusal to hire prospective employee is "individualized" one pursuant to which it must appear that employee's physical condition precludes being reasonably able to perform duties and activities that position requires; otherwise, disability is irrelevant tojob and can form no basis for denying employee position. Antonsen v Ward, 77 N.Y.2d 506, 569 N.Y.S.2d 328, 571 N.E.2d 636, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 364 (N.Y. 1991).

Petitioner was not the subject of unlawful discriminatory practices based on physical disability by his employer due to his dismissal from his job as a custodian where petitioner's physician stated that petitioner could do no ladder climbing and no repetitive lifting, and the record contained evidence that the duties of a custodian included numerous tasks requiring either ladder climbing or repetitive lifting. Lamarre v Granville Cent. School, 106 A.D.2d 838, 484 N.Y.S.2d 236, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 21743 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1984), app. denied, 64 N.Y.2d 608, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 16640 (N.Y. 1985).

CLS Executive § 296, making it unlawful discriminatory practice for employer to discharge employee because of disability, is limited under CLS Executive § 292 for disabilities which do not prevent employee from performing activities involved in job or occupation in reasonable manner; where record discloses that employee's physical disability prevented her from doing job in reasonable manner since it caused her to miss unacceptably high number of days of work in job that required consistently good attendance, complaint of unlawful discriminatory practice based on physical disability is dismissed. Silk v Huck Installation & Equipment Div., 109 A.D.2d 930, 486 N.Y.S.2d 406, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 47452 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1985).

Transit authority's denial of promotion to employee in favor of applicant who scored below him on civil service test, based on employee's significantly poorer attendance record resulting from physical illness, was not discrimination on basis of disability in violation of CLS Exec § 296, since employee's illness prevented him from coming to work and thus was not disability as defined in CLS Exec § 292. Schmitt v Kiley, 124 A.D.2d 661, 507 N.Y.S.2d 907, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 61962 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986), app. denied, 69 N.Y.2d 612, 517 N.Y.S.2d 1027, 511 N.E.2d 86, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 16891 (N.Y. 1987).

Judgment which dismissed Article 78 proceeding affirmed–petitioner, probationary police officer, was injured in off-duty automobile accident; his injury consisted of compound fracture of left femur, which necessitated two surgeries and implantation of steel rod and pins into his leg; two police doctors expressed opinion that petitioner's leg will never heal completely and petitioner will never be able to fully perform his duties as police officer; petitioner's employment as probationary police officer was thereafter terminated–petitioner asserts he was terminated in violation of Executive Law § 296 (1) (a), which states that it is unlawful to discharge individual from employment on basis of disability; definition of "disability" (Executive Law § 292 [21]) states that term shall be limited to disabilities which do not prevent complainant from performing in reasonable manner activities involved in job or occupation sought or held–record clearly demonstrates that petitioner's disability does not fall within definition of term "disability" as contemplated by Executive Law and, accordingly, termination of petitioner did not constitute unlawful discrimination on part of respondent–additionally, where there is dispute among several doctors regarding petitioner's prognosis, it is not for courts to choose between diverse professional opinions–moreover, as probationary employee, petitioner could have been terminated at any time without hearing or statement of reasons for discharge; absent proof that discharge was in bad faith or for improper reason, probationary employees may be dismissed without hearing; there is no evidence in record which supports conclusory allegations of bad faith contained in petition. O'Hare v New York City Police Dep't, 161 A.D.2d 487, 555 N.Y.S.2d 753, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6223 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1990).

Employer was entitled to summary judgment in action alleging that it violated CLS Exec § 296 by discharging plaintiff from his position as store manager, where plaintiff sustained foot injury that prevented him from performing his duties, which required much standing, bending, lifting, and walking around store to supervise other employees and where, upon his return to work after second surgical procedure, plaintiff admittedly only walked around store for about "an hour a day" and spent rest of his time sitting. Lawson v High Bar Wholesale Food Distribs., 217 A.D.2d 646, 629 N.Y.S.2d 807, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8104 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1995).

In action alleging that plaintiff was discharged from her job as receptionist and clerical worker, in violation of state and city Human Rights Laws, after it was discovered that she had condition similar to carpal tunnel syndrome ("bilateral ulnar nerve entrapment"), defendants were not entitled to summary judgment on ground that plaintiff's employment was terminated solely because of her poor job performance, as triable issues existed as to whether her disability prevented her from performing her job in reasonable manner and/or whether her termination was motivated by legitimate non-discriminatory reason. Umansky v Masterpiece Int'l Ltd., 276 A.D.2d 691, 714 N.Y.S.2d 735, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10772 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2000).

Plaintiff's cancers and attendant surgeries did not constitute disability under discrimination statutes where they did not substantially limit her in "a major life activity," as evidenced by her physician's letters affirming her ability to work on regular full-time basis. Sirota v N.Y. City Bd. of Educ., 283 A.D.2d 369, 725 N.Y.S.2d 332, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6583 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2001).

Employee's showing of a disability under N.Y. Exec. Law § 292(21)(a) failed to defeat summary judgment as: (1) neither a doctor's note nor the complaint identified any medically diagnosed condition, (2) the employee submitted two unsworn medical reports of her treating physicians that were inadmissible hearsay, and (3) the employee neither proffered an excuse for her failure to tender proof in admissible form, nor other objective factual evidence to support her claim. Tibbits v Verizon N.Y., Inc., 40 A.D.3d 1300, 836 N.Y.S.2d 727, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6061 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

Terminated employee's New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a), and the New York City Human Rights Law, New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(1)(a), claim failed where: (1) employee was unable to perform the duties of his job as a construction inspector because of his lung condition, and no reasonable accommodation was available under N.Y. Exec. Law § 292(21) and New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(15) as the only way the employee was able to report on construction progress was to be at the site; (2) the employee could not complete his duties from the central office; and (3) the employee's doctor and the employee stated that the employee could not visit construction sites. Jacobsen v New York City Health & Hosps. Corp., 97 A.D.3d 428, 948 N.Y.S.2d 586, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5386 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2012), aff'd in part, modified, 22 N.Y.3d 824, 988 N.Y.S.2d 86, 11 N.E.3d 159, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 570 (N.Y. 2014).

Where the drafters of the N.Y. Comp. Codes R. & Regs. tit. 9, § 2204.6(d)(3)(iii) definition of disabled person adopted a restrictive threshold that eschews the broader definition of disability under N.Y. Exec. Law § 292(21), this supports an inference that the drafters intend the rent control disability definition under N.Y. Comp. Codes R. & Regs. tit. 9, § 2204.6(d)(3)(iii) to be narrower in scope than the definition in its antidiscrimination counterpart. Belnord Realty Assoc., L.P. v Joseph, 809 N.Y.S.2d 383, 10 Misc. 3d 43, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2512 (N.Y. App. Term 2005).

Plaintiff's disability discrimination claim under the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 290 et seq., failed to state a claim as plaintiff failed to allege that her pregnancy impaired her in exercising a normal bodily function, or that she had any complications in connection with her pregnancy, which prevented her from normal life activity under N.Y. Exec. Law 292(21). Krause v Lancer & Loader Group, LLC, 965 N.Y.S.2d 312, 40 Misc. 3d 385, 2013 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1815 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2013).

Prior to 1998, N.Y. Exec. Law § 292(21) defined "disability" in relation to employment discrimination as a disability which did not prevent the complainant from performing in a reasonable manner the activities involved in the job or occupation sought or held; since an employee's claimed disability prevented him from reasonably performing his duties, any inference of discrimination occurring before 1998 was refuted Kwarren v Am. Airlines, 303 A.D.2d 722, 757 N.Y.S.2d 105, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3487 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003).

Department of Correctional Services (Department) did not illegally discriminate against an applicant for a job as a correctional officer by disqualifying him because he could not lift one arm above his chest as his disability prevented him from performing the activities involved in the job in a reasonable manner, so the Department could refuse to hire him, under N.Y. Exec. Law § 292(21). Pageau v Tolbert, 304 A.D.2d 1067, 758 N.Y.S.2d 712, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4224 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

When determining that the Department of Correctional Services did not illegally discriminate, under N.Y. Exec. Law § 292(21), against an applicant for the job of correctional officer by disqualifying him because he could not raise one arm above his chest, the Commissioner of Human Rights could accept medical opinions that the applicant could not perform the job's duties, despite a conflicting medical opinion that the applicant could do the job, where the conflicting opinion showed no familiarity with the job's duties. Pageau v Tolbert, 304 A.D.2d 1067, 758 N.Y.S.2d 712, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4224 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

When disqualifying an applicant for the job of correctional officer because he could not raise one arm above his chest, the Department of Correctional Services, under N.Y. Exec. Law 292(21), did not have to allow the applicant to enter the correction officer academy or fashion tests simulating actual job duties before determining he could not perform those duties, nor did it have to provide reasonable accommodations where the applicant did not request them, and the statute, at the time, did not require such accommodations. Pageau v Tolbert, 304 A.D.2d 1067, 758 N.Y.S.2d 712, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4224 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

Exec. Law § 292(21). Pageau v Tolbert, 304 A.D.2d 1067, 758 N.Y.S.2d 712, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4224 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. 3212 to an agency in an employee's disability discrimination action; under the version of N.Y. Exec. Law § 292 (effective 1995) in effect at the time of the alleged discrimination, the term "disability" was limited to physical, medical, or mental impairments that did not prevent the complainant from performing in a reasonable manner the activities involved in the job, and a state agency proved that the employee was unable to perform his duties in a reasonable manner. Pembroke v N.Y. State Office of Court Admin., 306 A.D.2d 185, 761 N.Y.S.2d 214, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7301 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2003).

Trial court erred by dismissing a worker's complaint alleging employment discrimination based on a disability, in violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 and the New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107, since the employer (the City of New York), failed to engage in the required individualized process when considering the worker's request for extended medical leave, namely whether it was a reasonable accommodation, and the City's denial of such a request on the basis that extended medical leave was only for permanent civil service employees was a violation of both statutes. Separate and apart from the City's failure to engage in an individualized interactive process in evaluating the worker's request for accommodation, the worker had sufficiently pled causes of actions for disability discrimination under both statutes by establishing that her employment was terminated, that she requested leave to be able to have and recover from cancer surgery, and the accommodation she sought (extended medical leave) was not excluded by the definition of reasonable accommodation under the New York City Human Rights Law. Phillips v City of New York, 66 A.D.3d 170, 884 N.Y.S.2d 369, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5834 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2009), overruled in part, Jacobsen v New York City Health & Hosps. Railroad employee who lost his hand and lower arm in railroad accident established prima facie case of unlawful discrimination based on physical disability where he showed that railroad refused to allow him to "bump" into bargaining unit position of trainman/freight conductor after his management position was eliminated, that railroad did not evaluate his ability to do tasks necessary for position or give him opportunity to show that he was qualified, that examining physician found him to be medically qualified for position, that his management position had periodically required him to perform duties of trainman/freight conductor, and that he was capable of performing those duties. Jefferlone v Canadian Pac. (U.S.), 887 F. Supp. 487, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7802 (W.D.N.Y. 1995).

Diabetic firefighter's disability discrimination claim may proceed, where he contends fire department violated Human Rights Law (Exec §§ 291 et seq.) by precluding him from engaging in active firefighting duties, because he has shown that he was clearly disabled within definition of § 292(21), and that he suffered adverse employment action, and now must prove at trial that he is qualified to engage in active duty firefighting. Simms v City of New York, 160 F. Supp. 2d 398, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17921 (E.D.N.Y. 2001).

Although insurance salesman's diabetic condition, even as treated, constituted a medical disability under N.Y. Exec. Law § 292(21), the disability discrimination claims failed where the salesman did not produce any evidence that the insurance company knew of the disability or that the salesman was discharged because of the diabetic condition and the insurance company presented substantial uncontested evidence that the salesman repeatedly failed to meet production standards. Anyan v N.Y. Life Ins. Co., 192 F. Supp. 2d 228, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5724 (S.D.N.Y. 2002), aff'd, 68 Fed. Appx. 260, 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 13786 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2003).

While there was a triable issue of fact as to whether an employee's diabetes was a cognizable disability under the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, an offer of accommodation by defendants, an employer and a manager, was reasonable as a matter of law because, while the employee produced a note saying that she needed to be able to eat at 6 p.m., defendants offered the employee accommodation by allowing her to eat while on the food line, and the employee did not produce anything to dispute the reasonableness of the accommodation. Krikelis v Vassar College, 581 F. Supp. 2d 476, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 61543 (S.D.N.Y. 2008).

Discharged employee presented sufficient evidence to defeat defendant employer's summary judgment motion on his claim of disability discrimination under the New York State Human Rights Law (NYSHRL), N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., because, due to the broader definition of "disability" in NY. Exec. Law § 292(21), a triable issue of fact was raised regarding whether the employee's diabetes constituted a disability under the NYSHRL. Penberg v HealthBridge Mgmt., 823 F. Supp. 2d 166, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 119564 (E.D.N.Y. 2011).

7. — —Alcoholism

Firefighter's alcoholism, although it might have impaired his judgment, did not render improper penalty of termination where there was no direct causal connection between his status as alcoholic and his deliberate and calculated act of calling in false fire alarm in order to commit theft at his own firehouse. Murolo v Safir, 246 A.D.2d 653, 668 N.Y.S.2d 229, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 583 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 813, 674 N.Y.S.2d 278, 697 N.E.2d 179, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 1304 (N.Y. 1998).

Police officer was properly dismissed from force because of his refusal to acknowledge and accept treatment for alcoholism, even though Human Rights Law and Federal Rehabilitation Act prohibit employment discrimination on basis of disability which does not impede employee's performance of job-related activities in reasonable manner, since exclusion from employment is legally permissible where there exists rationally-based expectation that physical or psychological condition will result in future disability and it was reasonable to conclude that long-term effects of officer's alcoholism would result in diminished capacity to perform police functions and exercise judgment required of police officer. Smith v Ortiz, 136 Misc. 2d 110, 517 N.Y.S.2d 352, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2391 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1987).

Employee was not required to prove, in establishing prima facie case of disability discrimination, that his alcoholism adversely manifested itself in some significant way in his work, such that his performance at work would be "impaired" thereby. Grullon v South Bronx Overall Economic Dev. Corp., 185 Misc. 2d 645, 712 N.Y.S.2d 911, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 350 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 2000).

Court would dismiss recovering alcoholic's claim under CLS Exec § 296 for not being reinstated to his former position as hospital medical director after he completed alcohol treatment program; although alcoholism is "disability" under statute, plaintiff could not establish that, if he had been reinstated, he could have performed his duties in manner that involved "reasonably" limited risk of harm to third parties. Altman v New York City Health & Hosps. Corp., 903 F. Supp. 503, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14114 (S.D.N.Y. 1995), aff'd, 100 F.3d 1054, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 30112 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1996).

8. — —Confinement to wheelchair

Although the Commissioner of the State Division of Human Rights properly found that the 1978 New York City Marathon course was a "place of public accommodation" within the meaning of Exec Law § 292(9), the commissioner erred in determining that the running club which organized the marathon had engaged in an unlawful discriminatory practice by not permitting disabled individuals in wheelchairs to participate in the marathon since a marathon had historically been a foot race and since the running club had not excluded other disabled individuals who could compete on foot. New York Roadrunners Club v State Div. of Human Rights, 81 A.D.2d 519, 437 N.Y.S.2d 681, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10976 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1981), aff'd, 55 N.Y.2d 122, 447 N.Y.S.2d 908, 432 N.E.2d 780, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3076 (N.Y. 1982).

9. — —Dermatitis

A determination of the State Human Rights Appeal Board affirming an order of the State Division of Human Rights finding that petitioner employer and its personnel director had discriminated against the complainant by refusing to employ him because of his disability is annulled; the record establishes by clear, convincing and uncontradicted medical evidence that the complainant suffered from dermatitis which would be exacerbated by direct or indirect exposure to the chemicals present in the employer's plant and, therefore, the disability was related to complainant's ability to engage in the activities involved in the job and to hold that the fact that he could physically perform the job duties at the time of his physical examination means that the disability is "unrelated" to his ability to engage in the activities involved is contrary to the clear intent of the statute and the law of reason. Westinghouse Electric Corp. v State Div. of Human Rights, 63 A.D.2d 170, 406 N.Y.S.2d 912, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11327 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1978), aff'd, 49 N.Y.2d 234, 425 N.Y.S.2d 74, 401 N.E.2d 196, 1980 N.Y. LEXIS 2036 (N.Y. 1980).

10. — —Drug use

Order which denied defendant's motion to dismiss complaint for failure to state cause of action affirmed–allegations in complaint are sufficient to state cause of action for unlawful discrimination under Human Rights Law; plaintiff contends that metabolites found in his urine specimen resulted from his consumption of health food bread containing poppy seeds and not from unlawful opiate abuse; although urine sample was subjected to two different testing methods, both of which revealed positive results, it is alleged that there is third testing method which would definitely distinguish metabolites resulting from opiate use; while defendant may be legitimately entitled to discriminate against users of controlled narcotic substances, when challenged it must come forward with evidence establishing that its testing method accurately distinguishes between opiate users and consumers of lawful foodstuffs or medications–definition of disability in Human Rights Law (Executive Law § 292 [21] [c]) is broad enough to embrace persons who, like plaintiff, contend they are not disabled but whom potential employer perceives (wrongfully) to be disabled; Human Rights Law forbids discrimination against disabled persons, including drug abusers, who are able to perform their jobs; it also protects persons who are erroneously believed to be drug abusers, as may happen when someone is labeled drug abuser based upon false test result. Doe v Roe, Inc., 160 A.D.2d 255, 553 N.Y.S.2d 364, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3749 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1990).

Employer was properly granted summary judgment in action by plaintiff who alleged that his termination as at-will employee was pretext for discrimination based on disability; even if legitimate connection existed between plaintiff's history of excessive absenteeism and his narcotic dependency and depression disorder, Human Rights Law did not bar his dismissal because his purported disability actually prevented him from reporting to work and performing his job in reasonable manner. Tracy v City of New York, 211 A.D.2d 529, 630 N.Y.S.2d 4, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 386 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1995).

11. — —Epilepsy

New York City Transit Authority did not illegally discriminate on basis of disability (CLS Exec § 296) in firing probationary police officer who suffered from epileptic seizures where (1) department's policy stated that presence of seizure disorder was sufficient cause for disqualification of candidate, and that candidate must be seizure-free for 2 years to qualify for permanent appointment, and (2) medical evidence showed that officer suffered from seizure disorder which would interfere with her duties until long after her probationary status expired; since petitioner was legally excluded from permanent appointment, she was not protected by Human Rights Law. LaMotta v New York City Transit Authority, 165 A.D.2d 875, 560 N.Y.S.2d 346, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11511 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1990).

12. — —Hearing disorder

Human Rights Appeal Board had no authority to determine whether school bus driver's hearing was sufficient inasmuch as that was a defect related to driver's ability to perform his job and thus did not qualify as a "disability" which was unrelated to ability to engage in occupation and for which refusal to hire constitutes unlawful discriminatory practice. State Div. of Human Rights v Averill Park Cent. School Dist., 59 A.D.2d 449, 399 N.Y.S.2d 926, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13946 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977), aff'd, 46 N.Y.2d 950, 415 N.Y.S.2d 405, 388 N.E.2d 729, 1979 N.Y. LEXIS 1868 (N.Y. 1979).

It was error to grant a hospital summary judgment on claims for monetary damages under the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, Pub. L. No. 93-112, 87 Stat. 355, codified in part at 29 U.S.C.S. §§ 794-794a, and the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 292, because there was a genuine issue of material fact as to whether the hospital acted with deliberate indifference in failing to secure an interpreter for plaintiffs, a patient, his wife, children, and relatives, because a reasonable jury could have concluded that persons at the hospital had actual knowledge of discrimination against plaintiffs, had authority to correct the discrimination, and failed to respond adequately because (1) plaintiffs alleged that the hospital failed to provide interpreting services to the patient and his wife (both deaf), so that their two children (of normal hearing) had to act as interpreters for their parents; (2) according to plaintiffs, they made at least four separate attempts to secure an interpreter in the days and weeks leading up to the patient's surgery, all unheeded, and they made continual requests after the day of the surgery and the patient's stroke; and (3) plaintiffs made several requests for a TTY device, also unheeded. Loeffler v Staten Island Univ. Hosp., 582 F.3d 268, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 22015 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2009).

13. — —Heart condition

Employee's demotion from probationary assistant station supervisor to railroad clerk did not violate antidiscrimination proscriptions of Human Rights Law where his heart condition prevented him from engaging in excessive stair climbing or other types of physical exertion required by his probationary position, so that he could not perform his duties in reasonable manner; thus, employee was not disabled within meaning of statute and was not protected by its provisions. Miller v Ravitch, 130 A.D.2d 579, 515 N.Y.S.2d 518, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 46579 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 610, 522 N.Y.S.2d 110, 516 N.E.2d 1223, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19330 (N.Y. 1987).

Trial court erred by dismissing an employee's discrimination claim that the employer failed to accommodate his disability by refusing to transfer him to another position after his immediate supervisor assaulted him on the job as he sufficiently alleged a life-threatening heart condition that was beyond mere workplace stress. However, the trial court properly dismissed the employee's retaliation claim as the complaint included no allegation that the employee was assaulted because of any qualifying impairment or disability. Horgan v Whitaker, 57 A.D.3d 1345, 871 N.Y.S.2d 443, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9981 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

Discharged sales representative has disability discrimination claim under New York State Human Rights Law (CLS Exec Law §§ 290 et seq.) denied summarily, where court has already determined that her heart condition was not severe enough to render her "disabled" within meaning of Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) (42 USCS §§ 12101 et seq.) at time of her discharge, because, if anything, CLS Exec Law § 292(21) definition of "disability" is even more restrictive than that of ADA, since it requires complete rather than substantial impairment. Thomas v Flaghouse Inc., 980 F. Supp. 731, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16264 (S.D.N.Y. 1997), vacated without op., 159 F.3d 1348, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 32106 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1998).

Employee did not show that she was "disabled" within meaning of Human Rights Law where (1) physician stated that her heart condition ("mitral valve prolapse"), which caused irregular heartbeat, was benign and did not limit her daily or work-related activities, and (2) even assuming she could show that her supervisors were aware that she had heart condition, she provided no evidence that they considered her unable to work or perform any other life function. Thomas v Flaghouse Inc., 980 F. Supp. 731, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16264 (S.D.N.Y. 1997), vacated without op., 159 F.3d 1348, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 32106 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1998).

Former employee's federal disability discrimination claim is denied summarily, but his state claim may proceed, where he asserts disability based on type 2 diabetes and heart disease, because impairments do not amount to finding of "disability" under ADA (42 USCS §§ 12101 et seq.), but do qualify as disabilities under broader definition of Exec § 292(21). Epstein v Kalvin-Miller Int'l, Inc., 100 F. Supp. 2d 222, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8677 (S.D.N.Y. 2000).

Where a city bus driver was terminated after having a mechanical heart valve implanted and starting a life-long anticoagulant regimen, the driver's disability discrimination claims failed to survive summary judgment because the employers did not perceive the driver as disabled and the driver was not qualified to perform the essential functions of the position. Burton v Metro. Transp. Auth., 244 F. Supp. 2d 252, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2314 (S.D.N.Y. 2003).

14. — —High blood pressure

Department of civil service did not violate CLS Exec § 296 in denying appointment as police officer to petitioner on basis of disability because of his high blood pressure where it was demonstrated that condition would prevent petitioner from performing duties of police officer in reasonable manner. Connolly v Suffolk County Dep't of Civil Service, 150 A.D.2d 373, 540 N.Y.S.2d 821, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5632 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 611, 546 N.Y.S.2d 555, 545 N.E.2d 869, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 2843 (N.Y. 1989).

15. — —Multiple sclerosis

Teacher was properly denied extension of his provisional license on ground that he had multiple sclerosis, even though disease might not have rendered him unable to perform teaching duties, where denial occurred prior to 1979 amendment to CLS Exec § 292(12) and medical evidence indicated that disease was related to teacher's ability to perform duties of position he sought. In determining that teacher had suffered discrimination by denial of extension of his provisional license for having multiple sclerosis, Commissioner of Human Rights erroneously applied standard under CLS Exec § 292(21), as enacted by L 1979, ch 594, when he acknowledged that disability was related to teacher's occupation but nonetheless found insufficient evidence that disability would interfere with teaching duties; instead, application of pre-1979 standard (which permitted claim of employment discrimination only for disabilities which were unrelated to claimant's occupational performance) would be correct since termination occurred prior to effective date of 1979 standard and amendment was not retroactive. Board of Education v State Div. of Human Rights, 130 A.D.2d 614, 515 N.Y.S.2d 543, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 46627 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

16. — —Obesity

If a person suffers an impairment, employment may not be denied based on the actual or perceived undesirable effect the person's employment may have on disability or life insurance programs; thus, since under (former Exec Law § 292 (20) employment could only have been refused to plaintiff if her condition of obesity was related to the performance of the duties of the position, and the Commissioner of Human Rights found that there was no relationship between complainant's condition and her ability to perform the job she sought, the company could not refuse to hire her because of the collateral effect her purported impairment might have on existing disability and life insurance programs. A complaint that a company had unlawfully discriminated against plaintiff due to a disability by refusing to hire her due to her obesity was properly sustained. Disabilities, particularly those resulting from disease, often develop gradually, and under the statutory definition of disability (Exec Law § 292[21]), an employer cannot deny employment simply because the condition was detected before it has actually begun to produce deleterious effects; thus, the Commissioner could find that the complainant's condition itself, which was clinically diagnosed and found to render her medically unsuitable by her own physician, constituted an impairment and, therefore, a disability within the statute's contemplation. Further, the court found neither the statute nor its legislative history indicate a legislative intent to permit employers to refuse to hire persons who are able to do the job simply because they have a possibly treatable condition of excessive weight; the statute protects all persons with disabilities and not just those with hopeless conditions. State Div. of Human Rights ex rel. McDermott v Xerox Corp., 65 N.Y.2d 213, 491 N.Y.S.2d 106, 480 N.E.2d 695, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 14676 (N.Y. 1985), limited, In re State Di v of Human Rights ex rel. Granelle, 118 A.D.2d 3, 504 N.Y.S.2d 92, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 53584 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1986).

Former flight attendants who were not hired because of successor airline's use of weight standards in its hiring decisions failed to establish that they were medically impaired members of protected class defined under Human Rights Law, where they did not proffer evidence establishing that they were medically incapable of meeting airline's weight standards due to some cognizable medical condition; weight, in and of itself, does not constitute disability for discrimination qualification purposes. Delta Air Lines v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 91 N.Y.2d 65, 666 N.Y.S.2d 1004, 689 N.E.2d 898, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3710 (N.Y. 1997).

Dismissal of hazardous waste investigator who is unable to perform during training period as result of obesity does not constitute unlawful discrimination against person with physical impairment. Velger v Williams, 118 A.D.2d 1037, 500 N.Y.S.2d 411, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 54823 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

Disability discrimination claims filed against airline, based on airline's use of weight standards in hiring flight attendants, were properly dismissed where, inter alia, petitioners failed to show that they fell within class of persons protected by Human Rights Law and that airline intended to discriminate against older women, they did not claim that their weight limited their actions or abilities nor did they allege conditions which amounted to obesity, and they submitted no proof that they had been clinically observed as having "abnormal medical condition" or that they were medically incapable of meeting airline's weight requirements due to underlying medical problem. Delta Air Lines v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 229 A.D.2d 132, 652 N.Y.S.2d 253, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12963 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't

Employee's clinically diagnosed morbid obesity rendered her disabled under Human Rights Law. Hazeldine v Beverage Media, 954 F. Supp. 697, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 736 (S.D.N.Y. 1997).

17. — —Spinal condition

Spinal condition known as spondylolisthesis constitutes disability within purview of Human Rights Law. In re State Di v of Human Rights, 70 N.Y.2d 100, 517 N.Y.S.2d 715, 510 N.E.2d 799, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 16800 (N.Y. 1987).

18. — —Urinary tract infection

In action by probationary police officer terminated for failure to meet medical standards for permanent employment, wherein employer's position was that officer suffers from untreatable disease of urinary tract, termination of officer may not rest legally on unsupported hypothesis that officer suffers from mysterious renal disease which may or may not become symptomatic at some unspecified future time; respondent's interpretation of phrase "untreatable disease of the urinary tract" to encompass any condition of unknown etiology, however quiescent, forces otherwise unobjectionable regulation in which language is found to run afoul of Executive Law §§ 296 and 292(21); when petitioner has made prima facie showing of improper discrimination based on physical disability, or as in present case, the history therefore, respondent must come forward with competent evidence showing that its decision to terminate the petitioner's services was rationally based, which means that respondent must demonstrate that there are rational grounds for determining that petitioner's disability renders him unfit to reasonably discharge tasks of his employment. Carrero v New York City Housing Authority, 116 A.D.2d 141, 500 N.Y.S.2d 246, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50373 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1986).

19. — —Vision impairment

In an action by an employee with severe vision impairment who was discharged as part of a job reorganization, there could be no finding of discrimination where former subd. 21 of Exec Law § 292, in effect at the time plaintiff was discharged, excluded as a basis for a finding of discrimination in employment any disability related to the ability to engage in a particular job and employee conceded her inability to perform her new duties. Pugach v Liggett Group, Inc., 81 A.D.2d 552, 438 N.Y.S.2d 307, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11020 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1981), aff'd, 55 N.Y.2d 922, 449 N.Y.S.2d 172, 434 N.E.2d 241, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3116 (N.Y. 1982).

20. —Mental disabilities

Though, under the Executive Law provision prohibiting the managing agent of a publicly assisted housing accommodation from denying public housing to an applicant because such person suffers a disability, a determination of ineligibility for public housing accommodations grounded solely on mental disability would constitute an unlawful discriminatory practice, statute did not mean that a mentally disabled person could under no circumstances be denied eligibility; statute could not be used to insulate such an applicant from disqualification for public housing based on a valid reason. New York City Housing Authority Tenant Selection Div. v State Human Rights Appeal Board, 59 A.D.2d 742, 398 N.Y.S.2d 562, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13750 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1977).

Discharged bank employee failed to state cause of action for employment discrimination since contention that she was discharged because she suffered from nervous condition was entirely unfounded and conflicted with her acknowledgement that her dismissal resulted from inability to pass 2 polygraph tests administered to all employees following discovery of sizable cash shortage at branch; additionally, contention that her nervous condition constituted "disability" within meaning of CLS Exec § 292 was unsupported. Buffolino v Long Island Sav. Bank, FSB, 126 A.D.2d 508, 510 N.Y.S.2d 628, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 41650 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Finding of employment discrimination was error because there was no evidence that the employer knew, before it fired the employee, that the employee was disabled or how that disorder limited his work performance; until the employer requested that the employee account for his credit card expenses, there was no indication that the employee was suffering from a mental illness, and, once the employee alluded to an "emotional illness," the employer requested the details of the condition, and the employee refused to provide any information. There was no communication to the employer showing an impairment under N.Y. Exec. Law § 292(21)(a). Hazen v Hill Betts & Nash, LLP, 92 A.D.3d 162, 936 N.Y.S.2d 164, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 30 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 812, 951 N.Y.S.2d 723, 976 N.E.2d 252, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 2172 (N.Y. 2012).

Court erred in granting the landlords' motion for summary judgment dismissing the tenant's claim for housing discrimination based on disability; collateral estoppel did not apply because the prior summary proceeding did not decide whether the tenant was subjected to harassment based on his mental illness or whether such harassment affected a term, condition, or privilege of his housing. Curley v Bon Aire Props., Inc., 124 A.D.3d 820, 2 N.Y.S.3d 571, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 730 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2015).

Commissioner of the New York State Division of Human Rights properly determined that a co-op unlawfully discriminated against a tenant on the basis of disability when it would not allow her to keep an emotional support dog in her apartment because there was substantial evidence to conclude that the tenant suffered from generalized anxiety disorder, an impairment demonstrable by medically accepted clinical or laboratory diagnostic techniques, and that she required the use of a companion dog to use and enjoy her apartment; there was sufficient evidence that having a dog would affirmatively enhance her quality of life by ameliorating the effects of her disability, thus demonstrating necessity within the meaning of the state human rights law. Matter of 1 Toms Point Lane Corp. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 176 A.D.3d 930, 112 N.Y.S.3d 250, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7404 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2019).

Gender identity disorder is a disability under the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 291 et seq. Doe v Bell, 194 Misc. 2d 774, 754 N.Y.S.2d 846, 2003 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 95 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2003).

In petitioner's racial discrimination suit against the operator of a shelter serving mentally ill residents, the agency's decision that petitioner, whose Caucasian race was the minority race among both residents and staff in the shelter, did not establish that the shelter responded to her complaints differently than complaints by other residents was unsupported and arbitrary. The shelter's failure to address any of her complaints about harassment and racial slurs created the inference that it did not treat grievances by whites and African Americans equally. Matter of Prodan v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 52 Misc. 3d 446, 31 N.Y.S.3d 741, 2015 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4963 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2015).

Medically diagnosed panic disorder with agoraphobia constitutes "disability" for purposes of Human Rights Law. Reeves v Johnson Controls World Servs., 140 F.3d 144, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 5368 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1998).

Employee with bipolar affective disorder, who admitted striking coworker, did not establish that employer's reasons for discharging her were pretext for discrimination in violation of CLS Exec § 296(1)(a). Glowacki v Buffalo Gen. Hosp., 2 F. Supp. 2d 346, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6241 (W.D.N.Y. 1998).

In an employee's suit against her former employer alleging employment discrimination in violation of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), 42 U.S.C.S. § 12101 et seq., and the New York State Human Rights Law (NYSHRL), N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., wherein the employee asserted that the employer discriminated against her by terminating her from her employment due to her depression, that the employer retaliated against her by terminating her for expressing her intention to file a formal complaint against her supervisor, and that she was subjected to a hostile work environment based upon her disability, the employee set forth sufficient facts to defeat the employer's motion for summary judgment on her claims for actual disability under the NYSHRL, record of disability under the ADA and NYSHRL, perceived disability under the ADA and NYSHRL, her claim of a hostile work environment under the NYSHRL, and her claim for retaliation, since there were disputed issues of material fact as to those claims. However, the court found that there was insufficient evidence to raise genuine issues of fact regarding the employee's discrimination claim upon actual disability under the ADA since the evidence showed that, at the time she was denied a pay increase/bonus and was terminated (the adverse employment actions she alleged), she was not suffering from a disability that substantially limited a major life activity since she admittedly was not experiencing any symptoms of depression at that time. McCowan v HSBC Bank USA, 689 F. Supp. 2d 390, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12289 (E.D.N.Y. 2010).

21. Reasonable accommodation

Division of Human Rights properly concluded that a hearing-impaired court interpreter established a prima facie case of disability discrimination because permitting the interpreter to wear a hearing aid was a reasonable accommodation and would not pose a significant risk of substantial harm where the employer failed to provide any legitimate non-discriminatory reason for its decision, no sufficiently individualized assessment occurred, and, given the employer's blanket policy barring hearing-impaired persons from employment as court officers and its failure to accommodate the employee who had an asymmetric hearing loss, the civil penalty of $ 30,000 was correctly assessed. Matter of New York State Unified Ct. Sys. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 180 A.D.3d 555, 120 N.Y.S.3d 292, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1244 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 35 N.Y.3d 916, 157 N.E.3d 141, 2020 N.Y. LEXIS 2545 (N.Y. 2020).

Denial of summary judgment to employer on claims for disability discrimination under the State and City Human Rights Laws was affirmed because there were issues of fact as to whether the employer engaged the employee in a good faith interactive process to ascertain the viability of an appropriate accommodation. Hosking v Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Ctr., 186 A.D.3d 58, 126 N.Y.S.3d 98, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3557 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2020).

In an employment discrimination case, the federal district court properly granted summary judgment because plaintiff was collaterally estopped from asserting claims under ADA and the New York State Human Rights Law that he raised in a N.Y. C.P.L.R. art. 78 proceeding before the New York Supreme Court; plaintiff's state petition specifically asserted that his disqualification violated N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 and could be actionable pursuant to the ADA. The state supreme court reasonably concluded it would have been impossible to provide any reasonable accommodations for the essential functions of a police officer, because plaintiff could become mentally or physically incapacitated during bursts of severe exertion. Roth v Cty. of Nassau, 747 Fed. Appx. 891, 2019 U.S. App. LEXIS 1526 (2d Cir. N.Y.), cert. denied, 139 S. Ct. 2674, 204 L. Ed. 2d 1070, 2019 U.S. LEXIS 3756 (U.S. 2019).

Notes to Unpublished Decisions

1. In general

Unpublished decision: Former employee's Title VII of Civil Rights Act of 1964 hostile work environment claim based on his perceived sexual orientation was properly dismissed because such claims were not cognizable under Title VII; district court did not address viability of any such claim under New York State Human Rights Law and New York City Human Rights Law, both of which expressly protected against discrimination based on both perceived sexual orientation, or of any retaliation claim based on complaints about such hostile work environment, so action was remanded. Dingle v Bimbo Bakeries USA/Entenmann's, 624 Fed. Appx. 57, 2015 U.S. App. LEXIS 21787 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2015).

3-b. It shall be an unlawful discriminatory practice for any real estate broker, real estate salesperson or employee or agent thereof or any other individual, corporation, partnership or organization for the purpose of inducing a real estate transaction from which any such person or any of its stockholders or members may benefit financially, to represent that a change has occurred or will or may occur in the composition with respect to race, creed, color, national origin, sexual orientation, gender identity or expression, military status, sex, disability, marital status, or familial status of the owners or occupants in the block, neighborhood or area in which the real property is located, and to represent, directly or indirectly, that this change will or may result in undesirable consequences in the block, neighborhood or area in which the real property is located, including but not limited to the lowering of property values, an increase in criminal or antisocial behavior, or a decline in the quality of schools or other facilities.

(a) It shall be an unlawful discriminatory practice for the owner, lessee, sub-lessee, assignee, or managing agent of, or other person having the right to sell, rent or lease a housing accommodation, constructed or to be constructed, or any agent or employee thereof:

(1) To refuse to sell, rent, lease or otherwise to deny to or withhold from any person or group of persons such a housing accommodation because of the race, creed, color, national origin, sexual orientation, gender identity or expression, military status, sex, age, disability, marital status, lawful source of income or familial status of such person or persons, or to represent that any housing accommodation or land is not available for inspection, sale, rental or lease when in fact it is so available.

(2) To discriminate against any person because of race, creed, color, national origin, sexual orientation, gender identity or expression, military status, sex, age, disability, marital status, lawful source of income or familial status in the terms, conditions or privileges of the sale, rental or lease of any such housing accommodation or in the furnishing of facilities or services in connection therewith.

In determining whether housing is intended and operated for occupancy by persons fifty-five years of age or older, Sec. 807(b) (2) (c) (42 U.S.C. 3607 (b) (2) (c)) of the federal Fair Housing Act of 1988, as amended, shall apply.

(b) It shall be an unlawful discriminatory practice for the owner, lessee, sub-lessee, or managing agent of, or other person having the right of ownership or possession of or the right to sell, rent or lease, land or commercial space:

(1) To refuse to sell, rent, lease or otherwise deny to or withhold from any person or group of persons land or commercial space because of the race, creed, color, national origin, sexual orientation, gender identity or expression, military status, sex, age, disability, marital status, or familial status of such person or persons, or to represent that any housing accommodation or land is not available for inspection, sale, rental or lease when in fact it is so available;

(3) To print or circulate or cause to be printed or circulated any statement, advertisement or publication, or to use any form of application for the purchase, rental or lease of such land or commercial space or to make any record or inquiry in connection with the prospective purchase, rental or lease of such land or commercial space which expresses, directly or indirectly, any limitation, specification or discrimination as to race, creed, color, national origin, sexual orientation, gender identity or expression, military status, sex, age, disability, marital status, or familial status; or any intent to make any such limitation, specification or discrimination.

(4) With respect to age and familial status, the provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to the restriction of the sale, rental or lease of land or commercial space exclusively to persons fifty-five years of age or older and the spouse of any such person, or to the restriction of the sale, rental or lease of land to be used for the construction, or location of housing accommodations exclusively for persons sixty-two years of age or older, or intended and operated for occupancy by at least one person fifty-five years of age or older per unit. In determining whether housing is intended and operated for occupancy by persons fifty-five years of age or older, Sec. 807(b) (2) (c) (42 U.S.C. 3607(b) (2) (c)) of the federal Fair Housing Act of 1988, as amended, shall apply.

(c) It shall be an unlawful discriminatory practice for any real estate broker, real estate salesperson or employee or agent thereof:

(1) To refuse to sell, rent or lease any housing accommodation, land or commercial space to any person or group of persons or to refuse to negotiate for the sale, rental or lease, of any housing accommodation, land or commercial space to any person or group of persons because of the race, creed, color, national origin, sexual orientation, gender identity or expression, military status, sex, age, disability, marital status, lawful source of income or familial status of such person or persons, or to represent that any housing accommodation, land or commercial space is not available for inspection, sale, rental or lease when in fact it is so available, or otherwise to deny or withhold any housing accommodation, land or commercial space or any facilities of any housing accommodation, land or commercial space from any person or group of persons because of the race, creed, color, national origin, sexual orientation, gender identity or expression, military status, sex, age, disability, marital status, lawful source of income or familial status of such person or persons.

(2) To print or circulate or cause to be printed or circulated any statement, advertisement or publication, or to use any form of application for the purchase, rental or lease of any housing accommodation, land or commercial space or to make any record or inquiry in connection with the prospective purchase, rental or lease of any housing accommodation, land or commercial space which expresses, directly or indirectly, any limitation, specification, or discrimination as to race, creed, color, national origin, sexual orientation, gender identity or expression, military status, sex, age, disability, marital status, lawful source of income or familial status; or any intent to make any such limitation, specification or discrimination.

(3) With respect to age and familial status, the provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to the restriction of the sale, rental or lease of any housing accommodation, land or commercial space exclusively to persons fifty-five years of age or older and the spouse of any such person, or to the restriction of the sale, rental or lease of any housing accommodation or land to be used for the construction or location of housing accommodations for persons sixty-two years of age or older, or intended and operated for occupancy by at least one person fifty-five years of age or older per unit. In determining whether housing is intended and operated for occupancy by persons fifty-five years of age or older, Sec. 807 (b) (2) (c) (42 U.S.C. 3607 (b) (2) (c)) of the federal Fair Housing Act of 1988, as amended, shall apply.

(d) It shall be an unlawful discriminatory practice for any real estate board, because of the race, creed, color, national origin, sexual orientation, gender identity or expression, military status, age, sex, disability, marital status, lawful source of income or familial status of any individual who is otherwise qualified for membership, to exclude or expel such individual from membership, or to discriminate against such individual in the terms, conditions and privileges of membership in such board.

(e) It shall be an unlawful discriminatory practice for the owner, proprietor or managing agent of, or other person having the right to provide care and services in, a private proprietary nursing home, convalescent home, or home for adults, or an intermediate care facility, as defined in section two of the social services law, heretofore constructed, or to be constructed, or any agent or employee thereof, to refuse to provide services and care in such home or facility to any individual or to discriminate against any individual in the terms, conditions, and privileges of such services and care solely because such individual is a blind person. For purposes of this paragraph, a "blind person" shall mean a person who is registered as a blind person with the commission for the visually handicapped and who meets the definition of a "blind person" pursuant to section three of chapter four hundred fifteen of the laws of nineteen hundred thirteen entitled "An act to establish a state commission for improving the condition of the blind of the state of New York, and making an appropriation therefor".

(f) The provisions of this subdivision, as they relate to age, shall not apply to persons under the age of eighteen years.

(g) It shall be an unlawful discriminatory practice for any person offering or providing housing accommodations, land or commercial space as described in paragraphs (a), (b), and (c) of this subdivision to make or cause to be made any written or oral inquiry or record concerning membership of any person in the state organized militia in relation to the purchase, rental or lease of such housing accommodation, land, or commercial space, provided, however, that nothing in this subdivision shall prohibit a member of the state organized militia from voluntarily disclosing such membership.

(a) It shall be an unlawful discriminatory practice for any fire department or fire company therein, through any member or members thereof, officers, board of fire commissioners or other body or office having power of appointment of volunteer firefighters, directly or indirectly, by ritualistic practice, constitutional or by-law prescription, by tacit agreement among its members, or otherwise, to deny to any individual membership in any volunteer fire department or fire company therein, or to expel or discriminate against any volunteer member of a fire department or fire company therein, because of the race, creed, color, national origin, sexual orientation, gender identity or expression, military status, sex, marital status, or familial status, of such individual.

(b) Upon a complaint to the division, as provided for under subdivision one of section two hundred ninety-seven of this article, and in the event the commissioner finds that an unlawful discriminatory practice has been engaged in, the board of fire commissioners or other body or office having power of appointment of volunteer firefighters shall be served with any order required, under subdivision four of section two hundred ninety-seven of this article, to be served on any or all respondents requiring such respondent or respondents to cease and desist from such unlawful discriminatory practice and to take affirmative action. Such board shall have the duty and power to appoint as a volunteer firefighter, notwithstanding any other statute or provision of law or by-law of any volunteer fire company, any individual whom the commissioner has determined to be the subject of an unlawful discriminatory practice under this subdivision. Unless such board has been found to have engaged in an unlawful discriminatory practice, service upon such board of such order shall not constitute such board or its members as a respondent nor constitute a finding of an unlawful discriminatory practice against such board or its members.

10. (a) It shall be an unlawful discriminatory practice for any employer, or an employee or agent thereof, to impose upon a person as a condition of obtaining or retaining employment, including opportunities for promotion, advancement or transfers, any terms or conditions that would require such person to violate or forego a sincerely held practice of his or her religion, including but not limited to the observance of any particular day or days or any portion thereof as a sabbath or other holy day in accordance with the requirements of his or her religion or the wearing of any attire, clothing, or facial hair in accordance with the requirements of his or her religion, unless, after engaging in a bona fide effort, the employer demonstrates that it is unable to reasonably accommodate the employee's or prospective employee's sincerely held religious observance or practice without undue hardship on the conduct of the employer's business. Notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary, an employee shall not be entitled to premium wages or premium benefits for work performed during hours to which such premium wages or premium benefits would ordinarily be applicable, if the employee is working during such hours only as an accommodation to his or her sincerely held religious requirements. Nothing in this paragraph or paragraph (b) of this subdivision shall alter or abridge the rights granted to an employee concerning the payment of wages or privileges of seniority accruing to that employee.

(b) Except where it would cause an employer to incur an undue hardship, no person shall be required to remain at his or her place of employment during any day or days or portion thereof that, as a requirement of his or her religion, he or she observes as his or her sabbath or other holy day, including a reasonable time prior and subsequent thereto for travel between his or her place of employment and his or her home, provided however, that any such absence from work shall, wherever practicable in the reasonable judgment of the employer, be made up by an equivalent amount of time and work at some other mutually convenient time, or shall be charged against any leave with pay ordinarily granted, other than sick leave, provided further, however, that any such absence not so made up or charged, may be treated by the employer of such person as leave taken without pay.

(c) It shall be an unlawful discriminatory practice for an employer to refuse to permit an employee to utilize leave, as provided in paragraph (b) of this subdivision, solely because the leave will be used for absence from work to accommodate the employee's sincerely held religious observance or practice.

(d) As used in this subdivision:

(1) "undue hardship" shall mean an accommodation requiring significant expense or difficulty (including a significant interference with the safe or efficient operation of the workplace or a violation of a bona fide seniority system). Factors to be considered in determining whether the accommodation constitutes an undue economic hardship shall include, but not be limited to:

(i) the identifiable cost of the accommodation, including the costs of loss of productivity and of retaining or hiring employees or transferring employees from one facility to another, in relation to the size and operating cost of the employer;

(ii) the number of individuals who will need the particular accommodation to a sincerely held religious observance or practice; and

(iii) for an employer with multiple facilities, the degree to which the geographic separateness or administrative or fiscal relationship of the facilities will make the accommodation more difficult or expensive.

Provided, however, an accommodation shall be considered to constitute an undue hardship if it will result in the inability of an employee to perform the essential functions of the position in which he or she is employed.

(2) "premium wages" shall include overtime pay and compensatory time off, and additional remuneration for night, weekend or holiday work, or for standby or irregular duty.

(3) "premium benefit" shall mean an employment benefit, such as seniority, group life insurance, health insurance, disability insurance, sick leave, annual leave, or an educational or pension benefit that is greater than the employment benefit due the employee for an equivalent period of work performed during the regular work schedule of the employee.

* * * * *

13. It shall be an unlawful discriminatory practice (i) for any person to boycott or blacklist, or to refuse to buy from, sell to or trade with, or otherwise discriminate against any person, because of the race, creed, color, national origin, sexual orientation, gender identity or expression, military status, sex, disability, or familial status, of such person, or of such person's partners, members, stockholders, directors, officers, managers, superintendents, agents, employees, business associates, suppliers or customers, or (ii) for any person wilfully to do any act or refrain from doing any act which enables any such person to take such action. This subdivision shall not apply to:

(a) Boycotts connected with labor disputes; or

(b) Boycotts to protest unlawful discriminatory practices.

Laws 1967, ch 667, § 1, eff Sept 1, 1967, provides as follows:

Section 1. Statement of legislative purpose. It has long been the policy of this state that every individual is guaranteed the right to obtain employment free from discrimination because of his religion. It is the finding of the legislature that, in accordance with this policy, no individual should be prohibited, prevented or disqualified from, or discriminated against in obtaining or holding public employment because of his observance of any particular day or days or portion thereof as his sabbath or other holy day as a requirement of his religion. Questions have recently been raised, however, as to whether the provisions of the law against discrimination and other laws are sufficiently clear to protect the interests of individuals holding or seeking public employment who observe any particular day or days or portion thereof as a sabbath or other holy day as a requirement of their religion. This act is therefore enacted to clarify the existence of this right and to provide specific assurance of it, and should in no way be construed to limit the rights assured by the provisions of the law against discrimination or any other law, rule or regulation. It is the intention of the legislature that this act shall be construed liberally to effectuate the purposes for which it is enacted.

Laws 1969, ch 1070, § 2-a, eff June 25, 1969, provides as follows:

§ 2-a. None of the amendments made by this act shall apply to the city of New York. (Amended by L 1970, ch 493, § 2, eff Sept 1, 1970, by adding § 2-a to Laws 1969, ch 1070.).

Laws 1984, ch 98, § 1, eff April 24, 1984, provides as follows:

It is the intent of the legislature to clarify and codify the law of this state with regard to the employment practices applicable to employees who are pregnant. Because such employees in increasing numbers hold jobs of considerable responsibility and their income is essential to the well-being of their families, no one should be compelled to take a leave of absence for reasons of pregnancy unless it is clear that she can no longer perform the job in a reasonable manner. In addition, when such an employee does take a leave of absence for reasons of pregnancy, payments of wages or benefits to such employee must be made on the same basis as payments to other employees who are off the job due to a temporary non-occupational injury or illness not arising out of and in the course of employment. It is the intent of the legislature to eliminate by statute all unreasonable and unlawful discrimination with regard to employees who are pregnant.

Laws 1984, ch 296, § 12, eff Jan 1, 1986, provides as follows:

This act shall take effect January first, nineteen hundred eighty-six, except that it shall take effect January first, nineteen hundred eighty-five with respect to (i) the state of New York, (ii) a county, city, town, village or any other political subdivision or civil division of the state, (iii) a school district or any other governmental entity operating a public school, college or university, (iv) a public improvement or special district, (v) a public authority, commission or public benefit corporation, or (vi) any other public corporation, agency, instrumentality or unit of government which exercises governmental power under the laws of the state.

Laws 1984, ch 405, § 1, eff July 19, 1984, amended Laws 1984, ch 414, § 3, so as to change the effective date of the amendments to sub 1-a, pars (b), (c) and (d) from Sept 17, 1984 to Jan 1, 1985.

Laws 1996, ch 204, § 1, eff Sept 23, 1996, provides as follows:

Section 1. Legislative findings and intent. The legislature hereby finds and declares that advances in the science of human genetics are rapidly expanding the ability to directly test DNA to determine genetic predispositions to an ever-increasing number of genetically influenced health conditions, and to determine whether an individual who has no predisposition to such disease may nevertheless be a carrier of a genetic anomaly, able to pass a genetic predisposition to offspring.

The legislature further finds and declares, that while advances in the ability to develop tests are proceeding at a fast pace, the knowledge of how genes produce diseases is limited, and, as a result, there is a limited possibility of predicting whether a particular genetic predisposition will result in disease or disability, when the onset of such disease or disability may occur, or how severely the individual may be affected by the disease or disability.

The legislature further finds and declares, that advances in genetic testing for disease, predisposition to disease or carrier status raises the possibility that even otherwise healthy individuals will be labeled genetically "defective" and will form a growing "genetic underclass" of society. The fact that not all such testing is currently regulated, and thus not subject to quality control or proficiency testing, invites the danger of error or misinterpretation of genetic tests.

The legislature further finds and declares, that employers attempting to control health insurance costs may seek to have their prospective employees tested for a range of genetically influenced health conditions including genetic predisposition to disease or disability and carrier status for such. The knowledge gained from DNA-based genetic tests could be used to discriminate against individuals in various employment contexts.

It is therefore declared to be the policy of this state that, in order to preclude unfair discrimination, employers have no legitimate interest in requiring or requesting a genetic test or test results from an employee or applicant and should be prohibited from requiring or requesting such test except where such a test is shown to be directly related to the occupational environment, such that the employee or applicant with a particular genetic anomaly might be at an increased risk of disease as a result of working in said environment.

Laws 2002, ch 2, § 1, eff Jan 16, 2003, provides as follows:

Section 1. Legislative findings and intent. The legislature reaffirms that the state has the responsibility to act to assure that every individual within this state is afforded an equal opportunity to enjoy a full and productive life, and that the failure to provide such equal opportunity, whether because of discrimination, prejudice, intolerance or inadequate education, training, housing or health care not only threatens the rights and proper privileges of its inhabitants, but menaces the institutions and foundation of a free democratic state and threatens the peace, order, health, safety and general welfare of the state and its inhabitants.

The legislature further finds that many residents of this state have encountered prejudice on account of their sexual orientation, and that this prejudice has severely limited or actually prevented access to employment, housing and other basic necessities of life, leading to deprivation and suffering. The legislature further recognizes that this prejudice has fostered a general climate of hostility and distrust, leading in some instances to physical violence against those perceived to be homosexual or bisexual.

In so doing, the legislature makes clear its action is not intended to promote any particular attitude, course of conduct or way of life. Rather its purpose is to ensure that individuals who live in our free society have the capacity to make their own choices, follow their own beliefs and conduct their own lives as they see fit, consistent with existing law.

Nothing in this legislation should be construed to create, add, alter or abolish any right to marry that may exist under the constitution of the United States, or this state and/or the laws of this state.

Laws 2003, ch 106, §§ 1 and 1-a, eff July 1, 2003, provide as follows:

Section 1. Legislative findings and intent. The legislature recognizes that the individuals who are members of the military make a tremendous sacrifice, especially in times like these when our military personnel are in many locations throughout the world and here in New York fighting against terrorism. This sacrifice is just as real for the men and women who comprise our reserve armed forces and state organized militia. For those who are not full-time active duty in the military, but instead are called to active duty as a member of the reserve armed forces or state organized militia, the rest of their lives must be put on hold to accommodate that service. However, such military personnel continue to be responsible for their own well-being and the well-being of their families and they must still face the obligations that exist in their everyday lives. Steps have been taken to ease some of the burdens that these brave men and women encounter, to allow them to focus their full energy on defending our country; however, the legislature recognizes that more must be done to ensure that military personnel engaged in active duty are not troubled by their obligations at home. In addition, the legislature recognizes that members of the military should not be discriminated against based upon their military status in areas such as housing, employment and education.

§ 1-a. Short title. This act shall be known as the "Patriot Plan".

Laws 2007, ch 394, § 2, eff Jan 1, 2008, provides as follows:

§ 2. This act shall take effect on the first of January next succeeding the date on which it shall have become a law and shall apply to acts or refusals to act alleged to have occurred on and after such effective date.

Laws 2009, ch 476, § 14, eff Dec 15, 2009, provides as follows:

§ 14. Consistent with available resources, the division of human rights, in conjunction with the office for the prevention of domestic violence, shall develop training programs where necessary to implement subdivision 20 of section 296 of the executive law, as added by a chapter of the laws of 2009.

Laws 2010, ch 536, § 1, eff Oct 31, 2010, provides as follows:

Section 1. Legislative findings. The cost-sharing, deductibles and co-insurance obligations for certain drugs are becoming cost prohibitive for persons trying to overcome serious and often life-threatening diseases and conditions such as cancer, multiple sclerosis, rheumatoid arthritis, hepatitis C, hemophilia and psoriasis. These drugs are typically new, produced in lesser quantities than other drugs, and not available as less expensive brand name or generic prescription drugs. Some health insurance plans and policies in other states as well as some self-insured plans in New York have established unique categories or specialty tiers for these drugs, sometimes referred to as Tier IV or Tier V. Patients under these plans are required to pay a percentage of the cost of these high-priced drugs, rather than the traditional co-payment amounts for generic, preferred brand, and non-preferred brand prescription drugs, often covered by Tier I, Tier II, and Tier III plans and policies, respectively. As a result, patients covered under plans with specialty tiers must pay thousands of dollars in out-of-pocket costs for drugs critical for their treatment.

It is in the public interest to help patients to afford necessary prescription drugs by prohibiting cost-sharing, deductibles and co-insurance obligations by patients that exceed payments for non-preferred brand prescription drugs or the equivalent thereof. It is not the intent of this legislation to preclude plans or policies from categorizing drugs used in the treatment of these common diseases as brand name prescription drugs or generic prescription drug equivalents.

The extraordinary disparity in cost-sharing, deductible and co-insurance burdens imposed on patients whose life and health depend on these drugs places serious and unjustified hardships on individuals based on their disease or disability.

This legislation is intended to provide patients more affordable access to prescription drugs essential for their treatment of cancer, multiple sclerosis, rheumatoid arthritis, hepatitis C, hemophilia, psoriasis, and other diseases (Amd, L 2010, ch 565, § 1, eff Oct 31, 2010.).

Laws 2015, ch 141, § 5, eff August 13, 2015, provides:

§ 5. This act shall take effect immediately and shall be deemed to have been in full force and effect on the same date chapter 536 of the laws of 2014 took effect.

Laws 2019, ch 8, §§ 1, 25, provide:

Section 1. The legislature reaffirms that the state has the responsibility to act to assure that every individual within this state is afforded an equal opportunity to enjoy a full and productive life, and that the failure to provide such equal opportunity, whether because of discrimination, prejudice, intolerance or inadequate education, training, housing or health care not only threatens the rights and proper privileges of its inhabitants, but menaces the institutions and foundation of a free democratic state and threatens the peace, order, health, safety and general welfare of the state and its inhabitants.

The legislature further finds that many residents of this state have encountered prejudice on account of their gender identity or expression, and that this prejudice has severely limited or actually prevented access to employment, housing and other basic necessities of life, leading to deprivation and suffering. The legislature further recognizes that this prejudice has fostered a general climate of hostility and distrust, leading in some instances to physical violence against those perceived to live in a gender identity or expression which is different from that traditionally associated with the sex assigned to that person at birth.

In so doing, the legislature makes clear its action is not intended to promote any particular attitude, course of conduct or way of life. Rather its purpose is to ensure that individuals who live in our free society have the capacity to make their own choices, follow their own beliefs and conduct their own lives as they see fit, consistent with existing law.

The legislature further finds that, as court decisions have properly held, New York's sex discrimination laws prohibit discrimination based on gender stereotypes or because an individual has transitioned or intends to transition from one gender to another. This legislation is intended to codify this principle and to ensure that the public understands that discrimination on the basis of gender identity and expression is prohibited.

§ 25. This act shall take effect on the thirtieth day after it shall have become a law; provided, however, that sections nineteen through twenty-four of this act shall take effect on the first of November next succeeding the date on which it shall have become a law.

§ 3. This act shall take effect on the ninetieth day after it shall have become a law.

Laws 2019, ch 154, § 2, eff October 8, 2019, provides:

§ 2. This act shall take effect on the sixtieth day after it shall have become a law.

Laws 2019, ch 160, § 16, eff August 12, 2019, provides:

§ 16. This act shall take effect immediately, provided, however:

(a) Sections one of this act shall take effect on the one hundred eightieth day after it shall have become a law.

(b) Sections one-a, two, three, four, five, seven, eight and nine of this act shall take effect on the sixtieth day after it shall have become a law.

(c) Section thirteen of this act shall take effect one year after it shall have become a law.

(d) Sections one, one-a, two, three, four, five, six and thirteen shall only apply to claims filed under such sections on or after the effective date of such sections.

(e) Effective immediately, the addition, amendment and/or repeal of any rule or regulation necessary for the implementation of this act on its effective date are authorized and directed to be made and completed on or before such effective date.

Laws 2019, ch 161, § 5, eff August 12, 2019, provides:

§ 5. This act shall take effect on the same date and in the same manner as a chapter of the laws of 2019 amending the executive law and other laws relating to increased protections for protected classes and special protections for employees who have been sexually harassed, as proposed in legislative bills numbers S. 6577 and A. 8421, takes effect.

Laws 2019, ch 176, § 4, eff November 18, 2019, provides:

§ 4. This act shall take effect on the ninetieth day after it shall have become a law.

Nonjob-related auto accident injury which precludes injured worker from working is not disability within §§ 292, 296. McAuliffe v Taft Furniture Warehouse & Showroom, Ltd., 116 A.D.2d 774, 497 N.Y.S.2d 170, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 51621 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 67 N.Y.2d 609, 503 N.Y.S.2d 1025, 494 N.E.2d 458, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 18621 (N.Y. 1986).

Where plaintiffs alleged sufficient facts to sustain cause of action under Human Rights Law (CLS Exec § 296(1)(a)), cause of action alleging discrimination under CLS Civ R §§ 40-c and 40-d was also sustained and court erred in dismissing latter cause of action. Samper v Univ. of Rochester, 144 A.D.2d 940, 535 N.Y.S.2d 281, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14409 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1988), app. dismissed, 74 N.Y.2d 642, 541 N.Y.S.2d 983, 539 N.E.2d 1111, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 614 (N.Y. 1989).

Sex, age, and disability discrimination claims filed against airline under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a) were not preempted by Federal Airlines Deregulation Act of 1978. Delta Air Lines v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 229 A.D.2d 132, 652 N.Y.S.2d 253, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12963 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996), app. dismissed, 90 N.Y.2d 882, 661 N.Y.S.2d 825, 684 N.E.2d 274, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 2331 (N.Y. 1997), aff'd, 91 N.Y.2d 65, 666 N.Y.S.2d 1004, 689 N.E.2d 898, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3710 (N.Y. 1997).

Recovery under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a) requires affirmative proof of mental anguish or humiliation or other personal or monetary damage; any doubt that monetary award is essential element is dispelled by CLS Exec § 297(9), which provides that aggrieved party may maintain action "for damages and such other remedies as may be appropriate." Mizrahi v Taic, 266 A.D.2d 59, 698 N.Y.S.2d 635, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11631 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1999).

Plaintiff was not entitled to judgment in her favor in action for gender discrimination under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a), despite jury's finding that plaintiff's human rights were violated, where she received no award of monetary damages or other remedy. Mizrahi v Taic, 266 A.D.2d 59, 698 N.Y.S.2d 635, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11631 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1999).

Scope of CLS Exec § 296 did not extend to threats and vandalism such as plaintiff's allegations that defendant dumped pile of cement on sidewalk in front of plaintiff's house, tossed lighted cigarettes into his backyard, threw eggs on his front steps, and threatened once to paint swastika on his house. Seltzer v Bayer, 272 A.D.2d 263, 709 N.Y.S.2d 21, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6107 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

New York State Teachers' Retirement System is exempt from provision of Human Rights Law setting forth discriminatory practices by employers, employment agencies, and labor organizations unless it can be shown that the System is a mere subterfuge to defeat the Law. New York State Teachers' Retirement System v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 83 Misc. 2d 993, 373 N.Y.S.2d 964, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3027 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1975).

Corporations which determined eligibility for nomination for annual "Tony" awards concerning excellence in theatre could not be held liable in discrimination claim for refusing to categorize comedian's one-man theatrical comedy show as "play" eligible for award since "one-man show" does not fall within any protected category enumerated in Human Rights Law, it was not alleged that any particular corporation had employed, lodged, or financed comedian, and corporations showed that they did not discriminate against one-person shows so long as they qualified as plays.

Mason v American Theatre Wing, 165 Misc. 2d 432, 627 N.Y.S.2d 539, 1995 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 241 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1995).

Claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress based on plaintiff's allegations of sex discrimination by defendant employer and its president was barred by CLS Work Comp § 29(6). Gerson v Giorgio Sant'Angelo Collectibles, 176 Misc. 2d 388, 671 N.Y.S.2d 958, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 114 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1998).

State has compelling interest in combatting invidious discrimination. N.Y. State Club Ass'n v City of New York, 487 U.S. 1, 108 S. Ct. 2225, 101 L. Ed. 2d 1, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 2861 (U.S. 1988).

Statutes making "direct" discrimination unlawful (CLS Civ R § 40 and CLS Exec § 296) are constitutional, even though they can be violated by speech or other expressive conduct, since governmental interest is aimed at conduct (i.e., discrimination) and not suppression of free speech, and statutes are no broader than necessary to further legitimate goal of eradicating discrimination. Jews for Jesus, Inc. v Jewish Community Relations Council, Inc., 968 F.2d 286, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 15614 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1992).

Federal employee could not bring action against his supervisors individually alleging violations of state Human Rights Laws (NYC Admin Code § 8-107 and CLS Exec § 296) since allowing such claims would easily circumvent holding in Brown v General Services Administration, 425 US 820, 96 S Ct 1961, that federal Title VII remedies were exclusive judicial remedy for claims of discrimination in federal employment. Rivera v Heyman, 157 F.3d 101, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 22598 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1998).

New York Human Rights Law (NYHRL), N.Y. Exec. Law § 290 et seq., by its terms, applied to the case, and no New York authority suggested that the impact of a discriminatory act had to be felt within New York for the NYHRL to apply. Absent a contrary interpretation by the New York Court of Appeals or the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, the court concluded that in addition to satisfying 29 U.S.C.S. § 633(b)'s deferral state filing requirement via the District of Columbia worksharing agreement, plaintiff adequately sought a state administrative remedy in New York by having his charge cross-filed with the New York State Division of Human Rights. Schuler v Pricewaterhousecoopers, LLP, 514 F.3d 1365, 379 U.S. App. D.C. 456, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 3150 (D.C. Cir. 2008).

Exec § 296 could be enforced against a multi-state hockey league. Neeld v American Hockey League, 439 F. Supp. 459, 1977 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13309 (W.D.N.Y. 1977).

New York Human Rights Law claim is dismissed with leave to amend, where woman-run company alleges IBM terminated its business relationship with company because it is owned, managed, and operated by women, because complaint must be expanded to specify nature of conduct allegedly in violation of CLS Exec Law § 296(13), since statute itself is ambiguous as to what constitutes violation. IBM Corp. v Jennifer-Ashley Co., 872 F. Supp. 1256, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 439 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

CLS Exec § 298-a did not provide Ohio resident with remedy for alleged sexual harassment by foreign defendants in Ohio; it was not harsh to dismiss plaintiff's claims since plaintiff could have brought her claims in proper forum (Ohio) but chose not to do so. Beckett v Prudential Ins. Co. of Am., 893 F. Supp. 234, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6513 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

Once an employer has been found not to have discriminated, there is no predicate for imposing liability on supervisors based on Exec § 296 under an aiding and abetting theory. Yerry v Pizza Hut, 186 F. Supp. 2d 178, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1976 (N.D.N.Y. 2002).

Former host of telemarketing television network, claiming the network's violations of Exec § 296 and New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107, did not actually work New York; but even if a reasonable jury found that she auditioned and was hired in New York, the discriminatory acts she complained of occurred in Pennsylvania and had no effect on New York. Velez v QVC, Inc., 227 F. Supp. 2d 384, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18776 (E.D. Pa. 2002).

Employee was denied leave to serve a late notice of claim under N.Y. Educ. Law § 3813(1) on his N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 gender discrimination claim against a school district, its superintendent, and a high school principal because the employee failed to show a sufficient basis to support his request to serve a late notice of claim based on the factors set forth in N.Y. Educ. Law. § 3813(2-a) where he had previously presented a charge of age discrimination to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission but had not alleged gender discrimination before commencing this action. Kushner v Valenti, 285 F. Supp. 2d 314, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17637 (E.D.N.Y. 2003), abrogated, Brtalik v S. Huntington Union Free Sch. Dist., 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 107373 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 6, 2010).

Discrimination claims brought under the New York Human Rights Law (NYHRL), N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 are analytically identical to claims brought under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., and are therefore reviewed under the same standard. Since the employee's federal claims of retaliation failed under the McDonnell Douglas framework, her state law claims were also dismissed. Ghirardelli v McAvey Sales & Serv., 287 F. Supp. 2d 379, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17952 (S.D.N.Y. 2003), aff'd, 98 Fed. Appx. 909, 2004 U.S. App. LEXIS 11100 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2004).

Claims under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., and the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, are analyzed under the same legal standards. Pfeiffer v Lewis County, 308 F. Supp. 2d 88, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4126 (N.D.N.Y. 2004).

In deciding a motion to dismiss, the district court considers claims under the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, in tandem with claims under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq. Gad-Tadros v Bessemer Venture Partners, 326 F. Supp. 2d 417, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14165 (E.D.N.Y. 2004).

Because it is binding precedent, the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York deems it prudent to follow the ruling of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit that under the "aiding and abetting" language of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(6), a defendant who actually participates in the conduct giving rise to a discrimination claim may be held personally liable under the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296. Patane v Clark, 435 F. Supp. 2d 306, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 42581 (S.D.N.Y. 2006), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 508 F.3d 106, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 27391 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2007).

Although a former employee could not maintain a sexual harassment and hostile work environment lawsuit against individuals under federal law, she could proceed on these claims against individuals under the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296. Pasqualini v MortgageIT, Inc., 498 F. Supp. 2d 659, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 54519 (S.D.N.Y. 2007).

Division of Human Rights is not barred from undertaking any of its procedures or enforcing any of its policies against respondent who is actively under jurisdiction of Bankruptcy Court, or one who filed for bankruptcy protection after cause of action arose. 1999 Order Comm HR No. 4-E-A-91-1400339A.

2. Election of remedies

A plaintiff, who is suing for damages arising out of the allegedly wrongful termination of his employment, may not combine in the same cause of action an allegation that he was dismissed solely because of his age, in violation of section 296 (subd 1, par [a]) of the Executive Law, along with the inconsistent claim that his discharge was intended to deprive him of salary and commissions inasmuch as these additional allegations, while properly included in other causes of action, have no place in the age discrimination cause of action which is otherwise legally sufficient; accordingly, the age discrimination should be dismissed with leave to replead. Manley v Pandick Press, Inc., 72 A.D.2d 452, 424 N.Y.S.2d 902, 1980 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9702 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. dismissed, 49 N.Y.2d 1046, 1980 N.Y. LEXIS 5780 (N.Y. 1980).

New York City had authority to create private cause of action for unlawful discrimination with punitive damages as remedy, and ordinance enacted by city (NYC Admin Code § 8-502) was not inconsistent with CLS Exec Art 15; authority specifically conferred on municipalities under CLS NY Const Art IX § 2(c)(ii)(10) to enact laws whether or not related to "property, affairs, or government" of local government is to be liberally construed and is broad enough to include creation of private cause of action. Bracker v Cohen, 204 A.D.2d 115, 612 N.Y.S.2d 113, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5216 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1994).

Administrative convenience dismissal of complaint with State Division of Human Rights alleging discriminatory discharge from employment on bases of race and physical disability was arbitrary where there was nothing in record to suggest that complainant intended to pursue his federal remedy before filing his administrative complaint or that he filed such complaint as prerequisite to commencing federal action, fact that over one year elapsed between filing of administrative complaint and commencement of federal action indicated that complainant initially intended to elect administrative remedy, and thus dismissal violated CLS Exec § 297(9) and CLS Div Hum Rts R § 465.5(e)(2) (9 NYCRR § 465.5(e)(2)). Wegmans Food Mkts. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 245 A.D.2d 685, 664 N.Y.S.2d 685, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12602 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Employee was not barred by Workers' Compensation Law from receiving lost wages under State Division of Human Rights' decision that employer was liable for age and sex discrimination where employee's monetary recovery for intentional acts of discrimination in human rights proceeding was offset by amount of workers' compensation benefits paid to her, and thus CLS Work Comp § 29, which was designed to prevent double recovery, was not frustrated. Grand Union Co. v Mercado, 263 A.D.2d 923, 694 N.Y.S.2d 524, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8451 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

In civil action alleging employment discrimination based on sexual orientation, defendants were not entitled to dismissal of claims grounded in New York City Human Rights Law on basis that plaintiff elected his remedies under NYC Admin Code § 8-502(d) by filing complaint with New York City Human Rights Commission, as prior complaint was properly dismissed for "administrative convenience" under NYC Admin Code § 8-113(a)(5) to conserve city resources and allow joinder with state law claims in state court in that city commission has limited jurisdiction extending only to claims arising under administrative code, whereas Supreme Court has exclusive jurisdiction over pendent civil claims arising under state law. Acosta v Loews Corp., 276 A.D.2d 214, 717 N.Y.S.2d 47, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12405 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

Trial court should have dismissed a physician's claim that an employer and supervisors violated N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 and the New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107 by terminating him in retaliation for his complaints about the favoritism shown towards other employees because, by commencing an action under N.Y. Lab. Law § 740(4), the physcian's elected remedies, waiving other causes of action relating to the alleged retaliatory discharge, irrespective of the disposition of such claims. Deshpande v TJH Med. Servs., P.C., 52 A.D.3d 648, 861 N.Y.S.2d 697, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5563 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2008), app. denied, 12 N.Y.3d 704, 879 N.Y.S.2d 50, 906 N.E.2d 1084, 2009 N.Y. LEXIS 293 (N.Y. 2009), overruled in part, Webb-Weber v Community Action for Human Servs., Inc., 23 N.Y.3d 448, 992 N.Y.S.2d 163, 15 N.E.3d 1172, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 1049 (N.Y. 2014).

State cause of action under Human Rights Law are not barred by filing of complaint with Division of Human Rights on grounds of election of remedies doctrine, as plaintiffs' Title VII (42 USCS § 2000e et seq.) and Age Discrimination in Employment Act (29 USCS § 621 et seq.) discrimination charges were filed initially with EEOC as prerequisite to commencement of court action and subsequent decision by EEOC to refer such charges to Division of Human Rights cannot serve to bar plaintiffs' assertion of their rights under state law; further, even had plaintiffs initially invoked administrative proceedings before Division of Human Rights, such actions would only preclude filing of complaint in District Court while resolution of matters remained undecided by agency. People by Abrams v Holiday Inns, 656 F. Supp. 675, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24071 (W.D.N.Y. 1984).

Former assistant vice-president and loan officer of bank is barred by doctrine of election of remedies from bringing action under CLS Exec L § 296(1)(a) for age discrimination, where claim was also filed with appropriate state agency, which rejected it. Moylan v National Westminster Bank, 687 F. Supp. 54, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5130 (E.D.N.Y. 1988).

Claim by disabled person that hospital discriminated against him on basis of his disability in violation of CLS Exec L § 296 must be dismissed under doctrine of election of remedies, where claim was addressed and decided by Division of Human Rights and matter was not dismissed for administrative convenience so as to provide exception under § 297(9). Leake v Long Island Jewish Medical Center, 695 F. Supp. 1414, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8361 (E.D.N.Y. 1988), aff'd, 869 F.2d 130, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 2447 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1989).

Former employee's state claims against union under Human Rights Law, alleging discriminatory refusal to follow up on grievance arising from her termination, were preempted by section of Labor Management Relations Act governing suits by and against labor organizations, and thus were properly removed to federal court under 28 USCS § 1441. Hess v B & B Plastics Div. of Metal Cladding, 862 F. Supp. 31, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12743 (W.D.N.Y. 1994).

Former employee's age discrimination claim against former employer under CLS Exec Law §§ 296 et seq. is not dismissed, where employee alleges he served state and local human rights agencies with copies of complaint solely to meet jurisdicitonal requirement for filing action in court and did not file charges of discrimination with either agency, because complaint is unclear as to whether charges were filed with agencies or not, but viewing allegations in light most favorable to employee, nonmoving party, employer's motion to dismiss under election-of-remedies doctrine must be denied Gerzog v London Fog Corp., 907 F. Supp. 590, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17432 (E.D.N.Y. 1995).

Employee's administrative complaint, asserted before City Commission of Human Rights that lacked subject matter jurisdiction, was not binding election not to sue. Pierre v Chemical Bank, 960 F. Supp. 21, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3032 (E.D.N.Y. 1997).

Successful sexual harassment plaintiff is entitled to award totaling $91,230.15, even though, where employer has 20 employees as hers does, aggregate total of compensatory and punitive damages, under Title VII (42 USCS §§ 2000e et seq.) and 42 USCS § 1981a(b)(3)(A), may not exceed $50,000, because plaintiff is not precluded from also seeking additional compensatory damages under Exec § 296. Walia v Vivek Purmasir & Assocs., 160 F. Supp. 2d 380, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19076 (E.D.N.Y. 2000).

Detective's claim that a village's sick leave policy was enforced in a discriminatory manner on the basis of gender, race, and disability in violation of the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, was barred by the election of remedies provision of N.Y. Exec. Law § 297(9) because the detective had filed a discrimination complaint with the New York State Division of Human Rights and the detective's present claims of gender, race, and disability discrimination arose out of the same incident forming the basis of her claim before the Division even though the administrative complaint alleged only discrimination on the basis of creed. Borum v Village of Hempstead, 590 F. Supp. 2d 376, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 103891 (E.D.N.Y. 2008).

3. Immunity from suit

Court properly dismissed cause of action for breach of employment contract, whileallowing cause of action for statutory retaliatory discharge under CLS Exec § 296, since statutory restriction on right to discharge may provide statutory right torelief for discharged employees as alternative to unviable contract and tort claims. Fisher v Maxwell Communications Corp., 205 A.D.2d 356, 613 N.Y.S.2d 369, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6242 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1994).

Plaintiffs, licensed practical nurses, lacked standing to assert claim that medical center's per se policy contravened CLS Civ R § 79-i and CLS Exec § 296 by punishing employees who had asserted their intention to refrain from participating in abortive procedures by requiring them to participate in emergency situations involving abortions since no emergency was implicated in instant circumstances nor did plaintiffs allege that they were forced to perform abortive procedure. Larson v Albany Med. Ctr.,

252 A.D.2d 936, 676 N.Y.S.2d 293, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8687 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Immunity from suit granted to physicians or review committees for evaluations of other physicians done without malicious intent, as provided by CLS Educ § 6527 and Pub Health §§ 2805-j and 2805-m(3), was no defense in sex discrimination action brought against physicians under CLS Exec § 296; relevant sections of Education Law and Public Health Law are not blanket authorizations to discriminate against other physicians but were enacted to encourage frank discussion of physician's performance and credentials. Samper v Univ. of Rochester Strong Mem'l Hosp., 139 Misc. 2d 580, 528 N.Y.S.2d 958, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2830 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1987), modified, 144 A.D.2d 940, 535 N.Y.S.2d 281, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14409 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1988).

Plaintiff real estate salesperson was independent contractor, not employee, and thus could not bring action against brokerage firm under CLS Exec § 296 although she was given office space, was scheduled for floor time by firm's manager, and was required to attend sales meetings and spend 2 to 4 hours per week in office, where (1) she scheduled her own hours, marketed her own listings, and was expected to develop her own business leads, (2) she was paid on commission basis and received no commission until property was sold, (3) no taxes were deducted from her gross commission payment, and she was not covered by workers' compensation or state unemployment insurance, and (4) she paid self-employment social security tax, as well as her own state licensing fees and fee to obtain multiple listing services. Stetka v Hunt Real Estate Corp., 859 F. Supp. 661, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12292 (W.D.N.Y. 1994).

Discrimination plaintiff's allegations that, after she complained of sexual harassment, her former employer took no action to correct situation, and instead initiated course of retribution and retaliation, were sufficient to invoke intentional tort exception to exclusive remedy under CLS Work Comp § 11. Walker v Weight Watchers Int'l, 961 F. Supp. 32, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4542 (E.D.N.Y. 1997).

CLS Work Comp § 11 barred discrimination plaintiff's claim that, after she had complained of sexual harassment, her former employer negligently retained harassing employee. Walker v Weight Watchers Int'l, 961 F. Supp. 32, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4542 (E.D.N.Y. 1997).

Jurisdiction cannot be exercised with respect to employees' Human Rights Law (CLS Exec Law §§ 290 et seq.) claim against state asserting age discrimination, because defendants did not consent to suit in federal District Court, and their Eleventh Amendment immunity has not been waived by any language in Law. Mete v New York State Office of Mental Retardation & Developmental Disabilities, 984 F. Supp. 125, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17762 (N.D.N.Y. 1997), aff'd sub. nom., Cooper v New York State Office of Mental Health, 162 F.3d 770, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 31725 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1998).

Summary judgment is appropriate dismissing CLS Exec Law § 296 discriminatory termination claim of discharged laborer, where there is no suggestion in record that New York has waived its immunity or otherwise consented to be sued in federal court, because defendant State University of New York at Buffalo is arm of state, and Eleventh Amendment bars this suit against it. Stephens v State Univ. of N.Y., 11 F. Supp. 2d 242, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10125 (W.D.N.Y. 1998).

African-American employee's Exec § 296 racial discrimination and common-law claims are barred by Eleventh Amendment, where employer is state department of labor, and nothing in Human Rights Law (Exec §§ 290 et seq.) provides any basis for finding that New York has waived its Eleventh Amendment immunity, because Eleventh Amendment bars suits against states—and state agencies—by their own citizens in federal court in absence of waiver by state or abrogation by Congress. Phipps v New York State DOL, 53 F. Supp. 2d 551, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9584 (N.D.N.Y. 1999).

Employee's sexual harassment claim brought under Human Rights Law (Exec § 296) is denied summarily, where employer qualifies as state entity based on its enabling statute and extensive nexus between itself and state illustrated therein, because nothing in Human Rights Law indicates New York has waived Eleventh Amendment immunity thereunder. Turner v Olympic Regional Dev. Auth., 89 F. Supp. 2d 241, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1401 (N.D.N.Y. 2000).

Racial discrimination claims under federal law and Exec § 296 against Developmental Disabilities Services Office and supervisors in their official capacities are dismissed, even though claims against individual defendants in their personal capacities remain, where Office is subdivision of New York Office of Mental Retardation and Developmental Disabilities, which is state agency, because Eleventh Amendment immunity extends to state and its agencies. Hill v Taconic Developmental Disabilities Servs. Office, 181 F. Supp. 2d 303, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 779 (S.D.N.Y. 2002), vacated, in part, 57 Fed. Appx. 9, 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 11 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2003).

Former employee's claims for money damages against the State of New York and its Department of Transportation (her former employer) and individual defendants in their official capacities was dismissed where the State of New York had not consented to suit in federal court. Briggs v New York State DOT, 233 F. Supp. 2d 367, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22436 (N.D.N.Y. 2002).

Former university employee's race discrimination claims against state university officials in their official capacities under the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, were dismissed on Eleventh Amendment grounds since the district court was precluded from granting prospective relief against the officials based on violations of state law. Ghent v Moore, 519 F. Supp. 2d 328, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 78357 (W.D.N.Y. 2007), aff'd, 324 Fed. Appx. 55, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 8949 (2d Cir. 2009).

Employee's discrimination claim against a state agency employer was barred by Eleventh Amendment immunity, which was not waived by the New York State Human Rights Law. Hamzik v Office for People with Developmental Disabilities, 859 F. Supp. 2d 265, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 68400 (N.D.N.Y. 2012).

4. Arbitration

Claims of race and gender-based discrimination brought under Human Rights Law by employees of investment firms should be submitted to arbitration under terms of Uniform Application for Securities Industry Registration or Transfer (U-4 form), which apply Federal Arbitration Act (9 USCS § 1 et seq.) to such disputes, where employees executed form as part of their application for registration with various securities exchanges; to extent that Wertheim & Co. v Halpert, 48 N.Y.2d 681, 421 N.Y.S.2d 876, 397 N.E.2d 386, 1979 N.Y. LEXIS 2337 (N.Y. 1979).

Television network was entitled to summary judgment dismissing age discrimination action where employee admitted that network had planned to rehire him prior to his well-publicized comments about black athletes, and it was undisputed that network had been planning his continued employment until he made offending comments. Snyder v CBS, 204 A.D.2d 252, 612 N.Y.S.2d 147, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5797 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1994).

County department of corrections was entitled to dismissal of petitioner's age discrimination claim where (1) during his period as probationary correction officer, petitioner failed to qualify in firearm training/unsafe procedures course, was failing course in defensive tactics, and had missed other required courses due to several absences, (2) petitioner was notified that he was discharged for unsatisfactory performance, and (3) petitioner thereafter wrote letters to Commissioner of Corrections in which he made no claim of age discrimination and admitted that he failed required courses. Pantaleone v Jackson, 204 A.D.2d 458, 611 N.Y.S.2d 631, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4768 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 84 N.Y.2d 806, 618 N.Y.S.2d 7, 642 N.E.2d 326, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 3363 (N.Y. 1994).

Employee was not entitled to permanent stay of arbitration of claims predicated on Human Rights Law, on ground that arbitration would violate her constitutional right to jury trial, as she waived her right to jury trial by her conscious and deliberate decision to accept employee manual which provided for arbitration of employment-related claims. Ball v SFX Broadcasting, 236 A.D.2d 158, 665 N.Y.S.2d 444, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12613

Age discrimination lawsuit, arising from plaintiff's termination as superintendent of defendants' apartment complex, was not barred by mandatory arbitration clause of collective bargaining agreement between defendants and plaintiff's union, where agreement contained no clear and unequivocal agreement to arbitrate statutory age discrimination claims; nor was lawsuit precluded because arbitrator in plaintiff's grievance proceeding had determined that plaintiff was terminated for just cause, where age discrimination claim was not considered by arbitrator. Crespo v 160 West End Ave. Owners Corp., 253 A.D.2d 28, 687 N.Y.S.2d 79, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 870 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1999).

Employee could maintain action against her employer under Human Rights Law despite her failure to utilize grievance and arbitration process of collective bargaining agreement where agreement excluded several types of disputes from arbitration, and specifically acknowledged that working environment "should be characterized by mutual respect for the dignity of every employee (and that n)othing contained in this paragraph shall be subject to Step 3 of the grievance procedure." Grovesteen v New York State Pub. Emples. Fed'n, 265 A.D.2d 784, 697 N.Y.S.2d 392, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10943 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

There are no public policy reasons for not enforcing anticipatory agreements to arbitrate statutory employment discrimination claims arising under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a). S. Huntington Jewish Ctr. v Heyman, 282 A.D.2d 684, 723 N.Y.S.2d 511, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5166 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2001).

Plaintiff's claim of age discrimination under CLS Exec § 296, arising from his termination as superintendent of defendants' cooperative apartment building, was not subject to arbitration under parties' collective bargaining agreement since there was clear state policy against resolution of discrimination claims through arbitration, and operation of single apartment building could not be said to affect or involve interstate commerce. Crespo v Kreisel Co., 172 Misc. 2d 182, 657 N.Y.S.2d 321, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 127 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

Plaintiff, initially hired under employment contract that contained arbitration clause, was entitled to stay of arbitration of dispute arising from defendant employer's alleged violation of Human Rights Law where defendant, after terminating plaintiff at conclusion of initial contract term, subsequently rehired him as at-will employee under new contract without arbitration clause, and lawsuit pertained to period of time when plaintiff worked under employment contract that did not have arbitration clause. Hamilton v Cantor Fitzgerald Sec., 177 Misc. 2d 1010, 677 N.Y.S.2d 688, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 395 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1998).

C.P.L.R. 7501 and 7503(a) and covered the employee's claims of discrimination, harassment, and retaliation under the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(6) and the New York City Human Rights Law, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(6), breach of contract, promissory estoppel, fraudulent inducement, defamation, and intentional torts arising out of the same alleged conduct as: (1) the employee was recruited while the employee was an out-of-state resident, and hired to work in New York trading stock indexes, currencies, and interest rates, (2) a punitive damages claim was arbitrable as the job that was the subject of the agreement plainly concerned a "transaction involving commerce" under the Federal Arbitration Agreement, 9 U.S.C.S. § 2, (3) the employee did not allege specific conduct that substantiated the employee's characterizations of fraud, duress, coercion, or adhesion in the execution of the agreement, and (4) the employee failed to show why the agreement was not binding on the employee's mentor, who was also an employee of the employer, and on an affiliated entity of the employer. Tong v S.A.C. Capital Mgt., LLC, 835 N.Y.S.2d 881, 16 Misc. 3d 401, 237 N.Y.L.J. 116, 2007 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3663 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2007), aff'd in part, modified, 52 A.D.3d 386, 860 N.Y.S.2d 84, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5490 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2008).

New York City Human Rights Law, New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(1)(a), while omitting reference to genetic or carrier-based discrimination, otherwise generally tracks the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, with the notable exception that only the City statute makes it unlawful to discriminate, in the area of employment, based upon an individual's "sexual orientation," as the catalog of prohibited acts in § 296, does not include this element; the New York City Council has created a private civil right of action for persons in the City who are aggrieved by unlawful discriminatory practices, New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-502, but such an ordinance cannot, of course, be inconsistent with State law, under N.Y. Mun. Home Rule Law § 10(1)(i). Priore v N.Y. Yankees, 307 A.D.2d 67, 761 N.Y.S.2d 608, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6119 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 504, 775 N.Y.S.2d 781, 807 N.E.2d 894, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 4134 (N.Y. 2003).

Where the radio station owner and manager entered into an employment contract that contained an arbitration clause, the enforceability of the arbitration clause was not affected by the statutory nature of the former employee's discrimination claims against the owner and manager under the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 290 et seq. DiBello v Salkowitz, 4 A.D.3d 230, 772 N.Y.S.2d 663, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1847 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2004).

Employer and employee embroiled in termination/sexual harassment dispute shall submit all claims to arbitration in accordance with terms of employment agreement, except for employee's claims for punitive damages under CLS Exec Law § 296, because arbitrator has no power to award punitive damages on claims brought under New York law, but prohibition concerning one claim does not bar arbitration of other claims, as court may simply sever and stay further proceedings on nonarbitrable claim. DiCrisci v Lyndon Guaranty Bank, 807 F. Supp. 947, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18937 (W.D.N.Y. 1992).

Arbitration is compelled under 9 USCS § 3, where young African-American male employees assert sexual harassment claims under CLS Exec Law § 296(1), but employees' signatures appear on "Principles of Employment" which expressly and unambiguously obligate them to arbitrate employment disputes, even though they both allege they signed documents at orientation meetings which were "intimidating, hurried, and tense" and did not even know meaning of word "arbitration" until they consulted with their attorneys, because argument that they did not have time to read agreement before signing must fail in light of strong federal policy favoring arbitration. Maye v Smith Barney Inc., 897 F. Supp. 100, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11881 (S.D.N.Y.), app. denied, 903 F. Supp. 570, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16774 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

In granting an employer's motion to dismiss an employee's discrimination claims without prejudice subject to resolution through arbitration, the court concluded that although the contracts at issue were exempt under § 1 of the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA), 9 U.S.C.S. § 1 et seq., i.e. transportation workers' employment contracts, they were not unenforceable where state law provided otherwise; New York law required enforcement of the provisions to arbitrate the employee's claims under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., and the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq. Valdes v Swift Transp. Co., 292 F. Supp. 2d 524, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21348 (S.D.N.Y. 2003).

Employee's state law claims for overtime pay and alleged retaliatory conduct were dismissed and arbitration was compelled because nothing in N.Y. Labor Law § 663 or N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 indicates that the state legislature intended to preclude compulsory arbitration of claims under those provisions. Ciago v Ameriquest Mortg. Co., 295 F. Supp. 2d 324, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22852 (S.D.N.Y. 2003).

Police officer did not establish a prima facie case of gender discrimination with regards to the assignment of overtime because the police officer did not cite instances where she sought overtime work and that work was denied and the police officer was not entitled to secondary work permits while she was on medical leave. Lee v City of Syracuse, 603 F. Supp. 2d 417, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24966 (N.D.N.Y. 2009), overruled in part, Widomski v State Univ. of N.Y., 748 F.3d 471, 2014 U.S. App. LEXIS 6466 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2014).

II. Employment Discrimination

A. Generally

5. In general

Amendment of the Human Rights Law in 1965 to prohibit discrimination in employment based on sex was intended as a blanket proscription, and it was not necessary that each discriminatory practice in use in 1965, whether existing by legislative grace or in consequence of employment custom or usage, should have been marked for explicit demise in order to be prohibited. Brooklyn Union Gas Co. v New York State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 41 N.Y.2d 84, 390 N.Y.S.2d 884, 359 N.E.2d 393, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 3253 (N.Y. 1976), reh'g denied, 42 N.Y.2d 824, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 3961 (N.Y. 1977).

Evidence showing, inter alia, city employee's chronic lateness, absenteeism, insubordination and poor work performance supported finding of division of human rights of no probable cause to believe that employee was victim of discrimination so that Human Rights Appeal Board exceeded its limited scope of review in determining that division's order dismissing employee's complaint was arbitrary, capricious and an abuse of discretion. New York City Housing Authority v State Div. on Human Rights, 53 A.D.2d 844, 385 N.Y.S.2d 785, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13674 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1976).

That a job is too dangerous for women, without more, is an insufficient basis for the "bona fide occupational qualification" exception, in view of the statutory rationale that the individual woman be allowed to choose whether to accept the risk. Sexual identity is not a "bona fide occupational qualification" for the position of cook in a minimum security correctional facility for males. State Div. of Human Rights v New York State Dep't of Correctional Services, 61 A.D.2d 25, 401 N.Y.S.2d 619, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9698 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1978).

It is an unlawful discriminatory practice for an employer, because of a disability of any individual, to refuse to employ or to discharge such individual or to discriminate against him in compensation or in the terms, conditions or privileges of employment. Westinghouse Electric Corp. v State Div. of Human Rights, 63 A.D.2d 170, 406 N.Y.S.2d 912, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11327 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1978), aff'd, 49 N.Y.2d 234, 425 N.Y.S.2d 74, 401 N.E.2d 196, 1980 N.Y. LEXIS 2036 (N.Y. 1980).

It is an unlawful discriminatory practice for an employer, because of a disability of any individual, to refuse to employ or to discharge such individual or to discriminate against him in compensation or in the terms, conditions or privileges of employment, disability being limited to physical, mental or medical conditions which are unrelated to the ability to engage in the activities involved in the job or occupation. Arnot Ogden Memorial Hospital v State Div. of Human Rights, 67 A.D.2d 543, 416 N.Y.S.2d 372, 1979 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10500 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1979).

The decision of the Human Rights Appeals Board finding the employer guilty of an unlawful discriminatory practice by discriminating against a female employee because she had opposed practices which were forbidden by the Human Rights Law could not stand where the employer did not discriminate against the complaining employee and other female office workers on the basis of sex and thus the employer could not be found to have retaliated against the complaining employee for having opposed an unlawful practice; however, employees who feel victimized by unlawful discrimination do not act at their peril in trying to expose such practices, since absolute protection is afforded those who seek redress by the commencement of an administrative proceeding. Mohawk Finishing Products, Inc. v State Div. of Human Rights, 83 A.D.2d 970, 442 N.Y.S.2d 816, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15431 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981), aff'd, 57 N.Y.2d 892, 456 N.Y.S.2d 749, 442 N.E.2d 1260, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3772 (N.Y. 1982).

Retaliation complaint alleging that the employer failed to promote complainant during the pendency of an earlier-filed sex discrimination complaint was properly dismissed where complainant had not taken the required competitive examination needed to qualify for one position in question and where the person promoted to the other position in question had three months actual work experience in that specific position, which experience complainant lacked. Engel v New York State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 84 A.D.2d 640, 444 N.Y.S.2d 288, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15761 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981).

In an action arising out of alleged discrimination against an employee by defendant bank and an individual defendant, her supervisor, the employee's claim against said individual defendant would be dismissed where he was not shown to be either an employer or high-ranking executive, in that the Human Rights Law (Executive Law, § 290 et seq.) and the Federal Equal Pay Act (29 USCS § 206) are designed to prohibit an employer or high-ranking senior executive from committing unlawful discriminatory practices. Patrowich v Chemical Bank, 98 A.D.2d 318, 470 N.Y.S.2d 599, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16482 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. dismissed, 62 N.Y.2d 801 (N.Y. 1984), aff'd, 63 N.Y.2d 541, 483 N.Y.S.2d 659, 473 N.E.2d 11, 1984 N.Y. LEXIS 4717 (N.Y. 1984).

Protection of Executive Law § 296 does not extend to unpaid voluntary relationship in which resident of group home for those with history of psychiatric disability performed volunteer work at school; although Executive Law § 296 expressly covers volunteer firemen, legislature's failure to include other voluntary unpaid positions evidences its intent not to extend protection of statute to all voluntary positions. Sweeney v Board of Education, 112 A.D.2d 240, 491 N.Y.S.2d 455, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 55984 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1985).

CLS Exec § 296 does not exclude public officers from its coverage. Scopelliti v Town of New Castle, 210 A.D.2d 339, 620 N.Y.S.2d 407, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12522 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994).

Real estate broker suing for employment discrimination under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a) failed to raise triable issue of fact as to liability of her coemployees of realty company, absent showing that coemployees had any ownership interest in company or had power to do more than carry out personnel decisions made by others. Murphy v ERA United Realty, 251 A.D.2d 469, 674 N.Y.S.2d 415, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6829 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

Real estate broker suing for employment discrimination had cause of action against both her employer and her coemployees under NYC Admin Code § 8-107(1)(a), which, unlike CLS Exec § 296(1)(a), expressly provides that it is unlawful for "an employer or an employee or an agent thereof" to engage in discriminatory employment practices. Murphy v ERA United Realty, 251 A.D.2d 469, 674 N.Y.S.2d 415, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6829 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

Real estate broker suing for employment discrimination had cause of action against employer under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a) and against her coemployees for aiding and abetting under CLS Exec § 296(6) where she alleged that 3 individuals—owner/employer and 2 coemployees—engaged in pervasive and repugnant pattern of discriminatory employment practices, based on both sex and national origin, including unwanted physical advances and denigrating comments about her Irish ancestry, that created hostile working environment. Murphy v ERA United Realty, 251 A.D.2d 469, 674 N.Y.S.2d 415, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6829 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

It is employer's participation in discriminatory practice that serves as predicate for imposition of liability on others for aiding and abetting under CLS Exec § 296(6). Murphy v ERA United Realty, 251 A.D.2d 469, 674 N.Y.S.2d 415, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6829 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998)).

Under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, there is no controlling or persuasive authority holding that an employer may be held liable based solely on its failure to engage in an interactive process with an employee, absent a showing that the breakdown of the interactive process led to the employer's failure to provide a reasonable accommodation, and thus, when the employee failed to prove that the employer failed to provide reasonable accommodations for the employee's disability, and the trial court properly charged the jury on the essential elements of a claim of discrimination based on disability, the employer was entitled to judgment on the issue of liability. Hayes v Estee Lauder Cos., Inc., 34 A.D.3d 735, 825 N.Y.S.2d 237, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14363 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

Downsizing of a company's employment rolls, due to business failings and economic setbacks, constituted a sustainable rebuttal of a prima facie case of discrimination and explanation for the decision to terminate a particular employee, when demonstrated virtually without contradiction. Bailey v New York Westchester Sq. Med. Ctr., 38 A.D.3d 119, 829 N.Y.S.2d 30, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 72 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2007).

Aiders and abettors provision of CLS Exec § 296(6) applies only to parties outside employment relationship who may assist in employment discrimination. Foley v Mobil Chem. Co., 170 Misc. 2d 1, 647 N.Y.S.2d 374, 1996 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 302 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1996).

Because a Governor's Directive, requiring all state agencies to recognize same-sex marriages, was consistent with New York's common law, N.Y. State Fin. Law § 123-b, N.Y. Dom. Rel. Law §§ 12, 15(1)(a), N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, and the separation of powers in N.Y. Const. arts. III, IV, VI regarding recognition of marriages legally solemnized outside New York, the Governor did nothing to declare unlawful or to enjoin. Golden v Paterson, 877 N.Y.S.2d 822, 23 Misc. 3d 641, 2008 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 7457 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2008).

Employee stated a claim against her employer's owner for pregnancy discrimination under the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 290 et seq., where she alleged that: (1) he was her employer's owner, and that he hired her; (2) after she announced her pregnancy to her supervisor, who regularly apprised the owner of all company matters, the owner fired her. (3) the owner could be held individually liable as an employer under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1) as there were sufficient allegations that he actually participated in the alleged discriminatory conduct; and (4) since the owner's alleged actions gave rise to the discrimination claim, he could not be held liable for aiding and abetting under § 296(6). Krause v Lancer & Loader Group, LLC, 965 N.Y.S.2d 312, 40 Misc. 3d 385, 2013 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1815 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2013).

Employee's claim of discrimination due to his sexual orientation in violation of the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 against other employees failed because the New York City Human Rights Law, N.Y., N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107, and the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, were addressed to unlawfully discriminatory practices in the hiring, retention, or firing of employees, and were not intended to target fellow employees acting without the knowledge or consent of the employer. Priore v N.Y. Yankees, 307 A.D.2d 67, 761 N.Y.S.2d 608, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6119 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 504, 775 N.Y.S.2d 781, 807 N.E.2d 894, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 4134 (N.Y. 2003).

Employee's claim of a violation of the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 against another employee failed as the allegations ran afoul of the one-year statute of limitations under N.Y. C.P.L.R. art. 215(3). Priore v N.Y. Yankees, 307 A.D.2d 67, 761 N.Y.S.2d 608, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6119 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 504, 775 N.Y.S.2d 781, 807 N.E.2d 894, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 4134 (N.Y. 2003).

Neither Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA; 29 USCS §§ 621 et seq.) nor New York Human Rights Law (CLS Exec §§ 290 et seq.) affords direct cause of action to non-employee due to discrimination against spouse; moreover, neither statute provides for claim for loss of consortium. Moss v Stinnes Corp., 169 F.3d 784, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 3586 (2d Cir. N.Y.), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 879, 120 S. Ct. 189, 145 L. Ed. 2d 159, 1999 U.S. LEXIS 5913 (U.S. 1999).

Although the prior opinion did not directly address the state-law claims against the individual defendants, the opinion discussed the facts relevant to those claims at length, making defendants' argument that the prior court overlooked critical matters unpersuasive; implicit in the prior court's refusal to dismiss the claims against the individuals was a finding that the employee produced sufficient evidence of their actual participation in discriminatory or retaliatory acts. Defendants offered no controlling precedent or other overlooked matter that would require the instant court to disturb that finding. Henry v Wyeth Pharms., Inc., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 93694 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 19, 2007).

Former employee's claims under the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., and the New York City Human Rights Law, New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107, failed because defendants, a city and others, could not have violated state or local discrimination laws by implementing federal regulations that determined whether the employee was eligible to serve as a captain. Kinneary v City of New York, 601 F.3d 151, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 5688 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2010).

Executive Law § 296(16) does not prevent employer from acting adversely with respect to employee if such action is motivated by bona fide business reasons not otherwise proscribed by § 296(16). Salanger v U.S. Air, 560 F. Supp. 202, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20195 (N.D.N.Y. 1983).

New York's human rights law (CLS Exec § 296) extends protection to rehabilitated and rehabilitating drug abusers, but does not protect alcohol or illegal narcotics abusers who have not sought or are not seeking treatment for their condition, as such persons are not "handicapped". Burka v New York City Transit Authority, 680 F. Supp. 590, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 747 (S.D.N.Y. 1988).

Plaintiff could assert claim of post-employment retaliation against her former employer under CLS Exec § 296. Beckett v Prudential Ins. Co. of Am., 893 F. Supp. 234, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6513 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

Motion to dismiss was denied because the complaint stated a claim of hostile work environment sexual harassment against the supervisor under the and New York State Human Rights Law (NYHRL), N.Y. Exec. Law § 290 et seq., because the employee alleged that the supervisor actually created the hostile work environment. Horvath v Am. Tissue Corp., 210 F. Supp. 2d 189, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12963 (E.D.N.Y. 2002).

With regard to imposing liability on employers for sexual harassment, the United States Supreme Court's Burlington/Farager framework was applied to an employee's claim pursuant to the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., as well as his claim pursuant to Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Perks v Town of Huntington, 251 F. Supp. 2d 1143, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9918 (E.D.N.Y. 2003).

Summary judgment on the grounds that liability for any sexual harassment under New York Human Rights Act, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., could not be imputed to defendant employer was denied where factual questions existed as to whether the two named individual male employees of defendant were plaintiff's supervisors such that they could be deemed to have acted on defendant's behalf and if so, whether both would be deemed as knowing of and approving or condoning, the harassment alleged. EEOC v Rotary Corp., 297 F. Supp. 2d 643, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23225 (N.D.N.Y. 2003).

Because the sexual harassment was claimed to have been perpetrated by plaintiff sheriff's office employee's supervisor and there was evidence supporting a finding that the supervisor was, in fact, the employee's supervisor, defendant employer county was presumed to be liable therefor; thus, the court declined to grant summary judgment to the county on that ground. Pfeiffer v Lewis County, 308 F. Supp. 2d 88, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4126 (N.D.N.Y. 2004).

Where plaintiff sheriff's office employee sought seeks to hold the sheriff liable under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1) on the theory that the sheriff and the county were her "joint employers," the undisputed evidence in the record is that the employee was an employee of the county because she was part of the civil service system and, in fact, the employee specifically admitted to being employed at all times by the county, and not by the sheriff; although the sheriff necessarily had some authority over the employee as her supervisor, he was not her employer, so the employee was not entitled to argue in her memorandum of law against those facts that she admitted in her statement of material facts. The employee also failed to demonstrate that the sheriff participated in the creation of a hostile work environment; having failed to demonstrate any basis for imposing liability against the sheriff under the New York Human Rights Law, that claim was dismissed. Pfeiffer v Lewis County, 308 F. Supp. 2d 88, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4126 (N.D.N.Y. 2004).

In an action in which a former employee former employee filed suit against his former employer et al. alleging violations of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and New York Human Rights Law (NYHRL), the court found that the employee had established as a matter of law that at all relevant times he was a disabled individual with a disability within the meaning of the ADA and NYHRL where (1) it was indisputable, based on the evidence submitted to the court, that the employee had a condition which affected his musculoskeletal system during the relevant period; (2) a doctor indicated that from January 2000 until at least May 2001, the employee was limited in the following areas: walking, standing, lifting, sitting, reaching and working; and (3) according to the doctor, at all relevant times the employee was unable to stand, sit, or walk for, at most, 30 minutes at a time. Picinich v UPS, 321 F. Supp. 2d 485, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11323 (N.D.N.Y. 2004).

N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(6) imposes individual liability on a defendant who actually participates in the conduct giving rise to a discrimination claim, even though the employee is not alleged to have any power to do more than carry out personnel decisions made by others; where a former employee claimed in an action under § 296(6) that she reported discriminatory conduct to defendant supervisors and they failed to remedy or prevent the alleged discrimination, and that she was constructively discharged because she continued to complain about the alleged discriminatory conduct, the allegations were sufficient to survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action. Gad-Tadros v Bessemer Venture Partners, 326 F. Supp. 2d 417, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14165 (E.D.N.Y. 2004).

In an action for, inter alia, violations of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., and New York State Human Rights Law (NYSHRL), N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., slander per se, and intentional infliction of emotional distress, although the plaintiff in Wilcox did not work at a home office as the instant plaintiff did, there was no language in that case to suggest that its reasoning would not apply to the instant case where the plaintiff similarly alleged that defendants' harassing and discriminatory conduct made her job in New York more difficult to perform; moreover, defendants cited no precedent for their proposition that just because plaintiff worked out of her home in New York, her work conditions were not affected within the ambit of the NYSHRL. Curto v Med. World Communs., Inc., 388 F. Supp. 2d 101, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27088 (E.D.N.Y. 2005).

In an action against defendants, a parent company, a subsidiary, and corporate officers for, inter alia, violations of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., and New York State Human Rights Law (NYSHRL), N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., slander per se, and intentional infliction of emotional distress, the conduct giving rise to the plaintiff's claims stemmed from a purported systematic effort by defendants during the course of almost one and a half years to criticize the plaintiff and make her working conditions increasingly difficult in retaliation against the plaintiff's report of the sexual harassment of a co-worker by a supervisor as well as in discrimination against her because of her gender; the complaint alleged numerous examples of this conduct, committed by various defendants, all of which were allegedly perpetrated under the direction of the chief executive officer (CEO). This allegation, together with a memorandum written by the CEO, sufficiently alleged that the CEO actually participated in the conduct giving rise to the plaintiff's claims; from these allegations, a trier of fact could infer that the CEO was part of the systematic discriminatory effort by defendants to terminate the plaintiff's employment. Curto v Med. World Communs., Inc., 388 F. Supp. 2d 101, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27088 (E.D.N.Y. 2005).

In an action for, inter alia, violations of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., and New York State Human Rights Law (NYSHRL), N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., slander per se, and intentional infliction of emotional distress, although the plaintiff in Wilcox did not work at a home office as the instant plaintiff did, there was no language in that case to suggest that its reasoning would not apply to the instant case where the plaintiff similarly alleged that defendants' harassing and discriminatory conduct made her job in New York more difficult to perform; moreover, defendants cited no precedent for their proposition that just because plaintiff worked out of her home in New York, her work conditions were not affected within the ambit of the NYSHRL. Curto v Med. World Communs., Inc., 388 F. Supp. 2d 101, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27088 (E.D.N.Y. 2005).

Independent contractor failed to allege valid claims for individual liability under New York State Human Rights Law; the subsidiary's president was the owner of the subsidiary and therefore had the authority to hire and fire the contractor, nevertheless, the contractor was terminated by the subsidiary after the president sold his interest in the company. Further, the contractor did not allege any facts which would support the allegation that the president aided or abetted the subsidiary in terminating the contractor's employment—in fact, the contractor did not allege that the president actually participated in any of the allegedly discriminatory conduct. Banks v Corr. Servs. Corp., 475 F. Supp. 2d 189, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13092 (E.D.N.Y. 2007).

Police chief did not violate N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(6) by aiding and abetting a village, which was an employee's employer, in discriminatory practices where the employee's complaint failed to allege any conduct by the police chief that amounted to aiding and abetting. The actions were those of the village as an employer, acting through its elected trustees, who were entitled to seek advice from their chief if they wished. Blanco v Brogan, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 86890 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 20, 2007).

There were two problems with the employees' argument that the consent decree was not viable in 2004 and 2005: first, the consent decree was never dissolved by the parties, the court, or any other entity with the authority to do so—nor did the consent decree dissolve by operation of its own terms—second, even assuming the consent decree automatically dissolved or otherwise was rendered unviable upon the satisfaction of its goals, its goals were not been met. Therefore the employees' race-based employment discrimination claims failed. Vivenzio v City of Syracuse, 545 F. Supp. 2d 241, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 31874 (N.D.N.Y. 2008), vacated, in part, 611 F.3d 98, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 13464 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2010).

Individual may be liable under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(6) for aiding and abetting an unlawful discriminatory practice of an employer even if the individual's conduct serves as the sole predicate for the employer's liability. Maher v Alliance Mortg. Banking Corp., 650 F. Supp. 2d 249, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 79486 (E.D.N.Y. 2009).

In a case where a teacher sued a school district and her superior alleging that she was sexually harassed by the superior at her school, the teacher's state law claim against the superior under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(6) failed because there was no liability on the employer district's part. Thus, the superior could not be liable for aiding and abetting. Alexander v Westbury Union Free Sch. Dist., 829 F. Supp. 2d 89, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 127738 (E.D.N.Y. 2011).

6. "Employer" defined

Recovering alcoholic was terminated from his employment in violation of Human Rights Law, despite history of alcohol-related chronic absenteeism, where he had entered rehabilitation program and was performing his job satisfactorily, without relapse, at time of termination; legislative purpose of preventing discrimination against employees with disabilities is best served by pinpointing time of actual termination as relevant time for assessing employee's ability to perform. McEniry v Landi, 84 N.Y.2d 554, 620 N.Y.S.2d 328, 644 N.E.2d 1019, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 4122 (N.Y. 1994).

Insurance company was properly granted summary judgment in discrimination action brought by insurance agent under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a) where company's submissions showed that agent was responsible for financing her own operating expenses and support staff, she was paid by performance rather than salary, she did not have federal, state or local taxes withheld from her pay, she could sell competitors' products, and she had agreed by contract to operate as independent contractor; facts that agent was compelled to attend regular company meetings and was asked to draw up job description for her position were not inconsistent with her status as independent contractor. Scott v Massachusetts Mut. Life Ins. Co., 86 N.Y.2d 429, 633 N.Y.S.2d 754, 657 N.E.2d 769, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 3548 (N.Y. 1995).

Labor union, as employee's collective bargaining agent, was not "employer" within meaning of CLS Exec § 296(10)(a), and thus was not proper party to discrimination complaint filed with State Human Rights Division. New York City Transit Auth. v Executive Dep't, Div. of Human Rights, 89 N.Y.2d 79, 651 N.Y.S.2d 375, 674 N.E.2d 305, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3162 (N.Y. 1996).

Sections 296 and 297 of this law do not render the New York City Board of Higher Education subject to the powers and duties of the Commission therein enumerated, since that Board is not "an employer" within the definition of that term in subd 5 of § 292. Board of Higher Education v Carter, 16 A.D.2d 443, 228 N.Y.S.2d 704, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9402 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1962), rev'd, 14 N.Y.2d 138, 250 N.Y.S.2d 33, 199 N.E.2d 141, 1964 N.Y. LEXIS 1228 (N.Y. 1964).

Complainant, a licensed practical nurse who was accepted for employment subject to passing a physical examination and was found to have high blood pressure at the examination, consulted her personal physician and was put on medication resulting in her blood pressure returning to acceptable limits, following which she was again rejected for employment, although two months later she was found qualified for employment and subsequently began working; a determination of the Division of Human Rights that the employer had engaged in an unlawful discriminatory act related to employment is confirmed since there was no evidence that complainant could not properly perform all of the activities of the job she was seeking and all of the medical evidence was to the effect that high blood pressure, by itself, would not interfere with her performance or likely result in harm to one under her care. Arnot Ogden Memorial Hospital v State Div. of Human Rights, 67 A.D.2d 543, 416 N.Y.S.2d 372, 1979 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10500 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1979).

A complaint charging the state Department of Labor with discriminatory practices in violation of Exec Law § 296, based upon the agency's dismissal of a claim for unemployment insurance benefits, was properly dismissed since § 296 was inapplicable in that the Department of Labor was not the claimant's employer, nor was it an employment agency or a labor organization. State Div. of Human Rights v N.Y. State Dep't of Labor, Unemployment Ins. Div., 84 A.D.2d 961, 447 N.Y.S.2d 73, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16238 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1981).

Physical condition that prevents employee from reporting to work and requires employee to miss unacceptably high number of days of work is not "disability" within meaning of CLS Exec § 292(21). Clark v Cargill, Inc., Flour Milling Div., 206 A.D.2d 870, 615 N.Y.S.2d 210, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7782 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1994).

Court erred in denying county's motion for summary judgment in action seeking declaration that county illegally discriminated against plaintiff when it rejected his application for employment as county police officer where medical evidence established that upon repeated testing plaintiff's ability to hear in his right ear fell below acceptable limits set by New York State Municipal Police Training Council, and it was also established that his hearing loss would impair his ability to perform particular police duties in reasonable manner; fact that plaintiff had in interim obtained employment as New York City Police Officer and, according to his own self-serving statement, was performing police duties adequately, was insufficient to raise fact issue. McCarthy v Nassau County, 208 A.D.2d 810, 617 N.Y.S.2d 860, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10065 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994).

In employment discrimination action against condominium which employed plaintiff as concierge and whose superintendent allegedly harassed her, condominium's managing agent was not entitled to summary judgment on ground that it was neither plaintiff's nor superintendent's employer where plaintiff, although paid by condominium, was hired, supervised and fired by managing agent, and managing agent's day-to-day control over plaintiff and superintendent was substantial; furthermore, issue of fact existed as to whether managing agent, even if not plaintiff's employer, aided and abetted superintendent's harassment of her, which would render it liable under CLS Exec § 296(6). Sanchez v Brown, Harris, Stevens, Inc., 234 A.D.2d 170, 651 N.Y.S.2d 477, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12551 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

Evidence supported determination that petitioner was employee, despite commission-based nature of her pay, where employer, through its president, hired her, controlled her hours, established days that she worked, and provided her with office, supplies, and support staff; moreover, she worked exclusively for employer, which had right to dismiss her and make sole determination as to which products she was to sell and at what prices. Bartle v Mercado, 235 A.D.2d 651, 652 N.Y.S.2d 139, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 95 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 815, 659 N.Y.S.2d 855, 681 N.E.2d 1302, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 1219 (N.Y. 1997), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 815, 659 N.Y.S.2d 855, 681 N.E.2d 1302 (N.Y. 1997).

Cause of action against plaintiff's coworkers as individuals for sex discrimination in violation of CLS Exec § 296 was properly dismissed, absent evidence that those coworkers had any ownership interest in corporate defendant or any authority to make personnel decisions. Trovato v Air Express Int'l, 238 A.D.2d 333, 655 N.Y.S.2d 656, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3422 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

Student and part-time employee of college had no cause of action against college for sex discrimination under CLS Exec § 296 where college placed its basketball coach on leave immediately after plaintiff informed it of coach's discriminatory conduct, and thus it did not acquiesce in or condone that conduct. Sormani v Orange County Community College, 240 A.D.2d 724, 659 N.Y.S.2d 507, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7119 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

Cause of action for employment discrimination based on age was properly dismissed as against one of 2 corporate defendants where unrefuted documentary evidence, including W-2 forms, showed that plaintiff was employed by, and received salary only from, other corporate defendant. Brady v Helmsley, 246 A.D.2d 486, 668 N.Y.S.2d 198, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 705 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Cause of action for employment discrimination based on age was properly sustained as against individual defendant who directed plaintiff's hours of employment, ordered his termination and later reinstatement, and otherwise controlled his employment in business organization that defendant controlled where that organization had more than 4 employees, as required by CLS Exec § 292(5), as did defendant's household staff. Brady v Helmsley, 246 A.D.2d 486, 668 N.Y.S.2d 198, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 705 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Real estate broker suing for employment discrimination under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a) raised triable issue of fact as to whether she was employee of realty company, even though she signed agreement stating that she was independent contractor, and company did not withhold taxes from her commissions or provide employment benefits, where (1) agreement required her to work at least 40 hours per week, answer company telephones, wear company uniform, follow company procedures, use company forms, attend sales and training meetings, sign in and out of office, and coordinate vacation time with supervising broker, (2) company reserved right to set sales quotas, distribute listings, reassign clients, and split commissions, and (3) broker was not allowed to work for any other real estate company and was required to share all of her leads, listings, and commissions with company. Murphy v ERA United Realty, 251 A.D.2d 469, 674 N.Y.S.2d 415, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6829 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

Employer who did not employ 4 or more persons during period in which alleged discrimination based on sexual harassment took place was entitled to summary judgment dismissing plaintiff's claim under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a). DeStefano v Kopelman, 265 A.D.2d 446, 697 N.Y.S.2d 111, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10609 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

Conclusive finding by police department doctors that a police candidate, who was born with a congenital deformity of his lower right leg which necessitated surgery and the use of a prosthetic limb, was incapable of performing the essential duties of a police officer meant that he was not disabled within the meaning of N.Y. Exec. Law § 292(21). O'Sullivan v City of New York, 38 A.D.3d 467, 834 N.Y.S.2d 30, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3903 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 9 N.Y.3d 804, 840 N.Y.S.2d 764, 872 N.E.2d 877, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 1756 (N.Y. 2007).

Since New York State Teachers' Retirement System, in awarding pension benefits to male retiree with a female beneficiary in an amount less than would have been granted to a female retiree of the same age whose beneficiary was either male or female was merely following statutory direction and since the system was neither an "employer," an "employment agency" nor a "labor organization," the retirement system was not subject to investigation by the Human Rights Division with respect to its award of retirement benefits. New York State Teachers' Retirement System v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 83 Misc. 2d 993, 373 N.Y.S.2d 964, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3027 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1975).

Hospital, its anesthesiology department, and certain of its physicians (defendants) were "employers" of plaintiff, resident physician in anesthesiology department, for purposes of coverage under CLS Exec § 296 since defendants (1) selected plaintiff based on her prior qualifications, (2) paid her wages, (2) controlled her hours and length of residency, and (4) had power to dismiss her. Samper v Univ. of Rochester Strong Mem'l Hosp., 139 Misc. 2d 580, 528 N.Y.S.2d 958, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2830 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1987), modified, 144 A.D.2d 940, 535 N.Y.S.2d 281, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14409 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1988).

Individual supervisor of corporate employer may not be held personally liable for sexual harassment in workplace as "employer" under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a) unless "economic reality" of relationship between supervisor and entity employer is such that it might fairly be said that supervisor was for all intents and purposes actual employer. Foley v Mobil Chem. Co., 170 Misc. 2d 1, 647 N.Y.S.2d 374, 1996 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 302 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1996).

Because a managing member of an employer had the power to hire and fire, he was amenable to liability as "an employer" under Executive Law § 296(1)(a) upon proof that the member became a party to the another member's discriminatory termination of a disabled employee by encouraging, condoning, or approving it. Pepler v Coyne, 33 A.D.3d 434, 822 N.Y.S.2d 516, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12385 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2006).

Where a former employee asserted disability discrimination and hostile working environment claims against defendants, a county park superintendent, an assistant park superintendent, and a supervisor, the employee sufficiently stated a claim against all three defendants because the employee alleged that all three defendants had the authority to hire and fire employees of the county's parks department. Furthermore, even if the assistant park superintendent and the supervisor were not employers under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a), they were subject to liability under § 296(6) because the employee alleged that all three defendants were personally involved in the alleged harassment and the employee's discharge; therefore, the park superintendent's alleged wrongful acts served as the predicate for claims of aiding and abetting against the assistant park superintendent and the supervisor. Costabile v County of Westchester, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 29787 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 20, 2007), amended, 485 F. Supp. 2d 424, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 33484 (S.D.N.Y. 2007).

In an appeal of a grant of summary judgment to a medical group, which was a professional corporation, on a physician's claim of employment discrimination under the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), specifically 42 U.S.C.S. § 12112(a), and New York's Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, it was unclear whether the physician, who was a shareholder of the group, was an employee under 42 U.S.C.S. § 12111(4). Thus, a determination had to be made of whether the physician was an employee of the group entitled to the protections of the ADA. Rodal v Anesthesia Group of Onondaga, P.C., 369 F.3d 113, 2004 U.S. App. LEXIS 10170 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2004).

Claimant was entitled to an opportunity to demonstrate that corporation's president was an employer within the meaning of NY Exec Law § 296(1), where employee brought a sex discrimination action against corporation but president argued that he individually was not an employer, because under the New York test of economic reality, employee might be able to show that president had some ownership interest in corporation or had the power to do more than simply carry out personnel decisions. Giuntoli v Garvin Guybutler Corp., 726 F. Supp. 494, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14710 (S.D.N.Y. 1989).

Female employees' sexual harassment claims will not be dismissed, where they allege that defendant was regional sales manager of New York office and direct supervisor of themselves and other account representatives, because allegations are sufficient at this state of litigation to demonstrate that defendant had power to make personnel decisions regarding employees and was subject to suit as "employer" under NYCLS Exec Law § 296(1)(a). Bridges v Eastman Kodak Co., 822 F. Supp. 1020, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6642 (S.D.N.Y. 1993).

Complaint alleging that discharge of plaintiff violated federal Rehabilitation Act and New York State Human Rights Law was not precluded by fact that plaintiff's employment application and application for promotion had omitted reference to 2 prior employers by whom he had been employed, since there was no evidence that plaintiff would have been discharged had those omissions been discovered while he was employed. Jones v Associated Univs., 870 F. Supp. 1180, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17920 (E.D.N.Y. 1994), aff'd, 71 F.3d 406, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 33395 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1995).

President of defendant corporation could be considered plaintiffs' "employer" under CLS Exec § 296, and thus he could be held individually liable to plaintiffs for alleged sexual harassment, where he apparently had sufficient ownership interest in corporation, or power to do more than carry out personnel decisions made by others; however, final determination of issue should be based on evidence submitted at trial. Bridges v Eastman Kodak Co., 885 F. Supp. 495, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 534 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

Individual employees could not be held liable for age discrimination in violation of Human Rights Law where they were not shown to have any ownership interest or power to do more than carry out personnel decisions made by others, and plaintiffs failed to identify specific discriminatory employment decisions made by any particular defendant with respect to particular plaintiffs other than conclusory allegations of generalized "conspiracy" involving all defendants; "person" under CLS Exec § 292(1) should be interpreted to exclude individuals in common employment relationship. Falbaum v Pomerantz, 891 F. Supp. 986, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10370 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

State age-discrimination claims brought by former employees against current employees of women's clothing manufacturer in bankruptcy must fail, where it is clear that agents are not "employers" under CLS Exec Law § 296, even though § 296(6), (7) prohibits "aiding and abetting" and "retaliation", because term

"person" in those subsections should be interpreted to exclude individuals in situations in which parties stand within scope of common employment relationship. Falbaum v Pomerantz, 891 F. Supp. 986, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10370 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

Medical school that provided medical services at city hospital was not entitled to dismissal of discrimination claim asserted by hospital employee on ground that it was not plaintiff's "employer"; although medical school did not have ultimate authority to hire or fire plaintiff and it did not pay her wages, its employees exercised significant influence and control over conditions of plaintiff's employment and her "fate" at hospital. Dortz v City of New York, 904 F. Supp. 127, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14438 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

Foreign parent corporation was not "employer" for purposes of New York Human Rights Law or New York City Human Rights Law where there was no claim that it had power to select, hire or dismiss subsidiary's employees, and plaintiff employee failed to show that it paid any salary or wages to him. Robins v Max Mara, U.S.A., 923 F. Supp. 460, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1295 (S.D.N.Y. 1996).

Plaintiff's supervisors were not liable for damages under CLS Exec § 296 where they did not learn of alleged discriminatory acts until just prior to and when plaintiff first resigned, significant steps were taken at that time to remedy those acts, and there was no evidence that they knew or should have known of discriminatory acts alleged by plaintiff that occurred after he returned to work on new shift assignment. Amin v Quad/Graphics, 929 F. Supp. 73, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12262 (N.D.N.Y. 1996).

Some state-law employment discrimination claims asserted against individual defendants are retained, although court has dismissed many for failure to exhaust administrative remedies or for untimeliness, because, although individual defendants may not be held liable under Title VII (42 USCS §§ 2000e et seq.), they may be held liable under CLS Exec Law § 296(6). McNight v Dormitory Auth., 995 F. Supp. 70, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1902 (N.D.N.Y. 1998).

Terminated hospital worker may proceed with New York Human Rights Law (CLS Exec Law §§ 290 et seq.) claim against individual who is CEO and president of hospital, even though CEO claims he played no role in discriminatory conduct and has no independent personal knowledge of worker's termination, where CEO had power to do more than carry out personnel decisions made by others and was complained to directly by worker, because he is "employer" subject to liability within meaning of § 296(1). Graaf v North Shore Univ. Hosp., 1 F. Supp. 2d 318, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4600 (S.D.N.Y. 1998).

Terminated hospital worker may proceed with New York Human Rights Law (CLS Exec Law §§ 290 et seq.) claim against individual who is CEO and president of hospital, even though CEO claims he played no role in discriminatory conduct and has no independent personal knowledge of worker's termination, where CEO had power to do more than carry out personnel decisions made by others and was complained to directly by worker, because he is "employer" subject to liability within meaning of § 296(1). Graaf v North Shore Univ. Hosp., 1 F. Supp. 2d 318, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4600 (S.D.N.Y. 1998).

Disability discrimination claim against supervisor under CLS Exec Law § 296 may proceed, where supervisor, as senior officer at bank, had power to do more than carry out personnel decisions made by others, because he can be held individually liable under Human Rights Law as employer. Harrison v Banque Indosuez, 6 F. Supp. 2d 224, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7498 (S.D.N.Y. 1998).

Disability discrimination claim may be added but only against medical center that employed plaintiff, even though he alleges insurers are "employers" within meaning of CLS Exec Law § 298, where he fails to allege that they are his employers, because it is clear that plaintiff is insured and not employee of insurers. Muller v First Unum Life Ins. Co., 23 F. Supp. 2d 231, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17380 (N.D.N.Y. 1998).

Terminated administrative assistant may amend her complaint to plead disability discrimination claims against director and assistant dean under state but not federal law, where she must do more, upon repleading, than merely identify every medical condition she has ever experienced, because individuals cannot be "employer" for purposes of ADA (42 USCS §§ 12101 et seq.) liability but can be held accountable for discriminatory acts under Exec § 296(6). Sacay v Research Found., 44 F. Supp. 2d 496, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6314 (E.D.N.Y. 1999).

Lab technician's Exec § 296 claim against lab engineer, lab manager, and 2 vice-presidents may proceed, even though defendants argue that § 296 does not give rise to claim against individual as opposed to contracting party, because defendants are either technician's supervisors or principal agents of employer who have authority to terminate her and they may be held liable under statute. Hicks v IBM, 44 F. Supp. 2d 593, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5608 (S.D.N.Y. 1999).

Under Exec § 296, employer cannot be held liable for employee's discriminatory act unless employer became party to it by encouraging, condoning, or approving it. DeWitt v Lieberman, 48 F. Supp. 2d 280, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 159 (S.D.N.Y. 1999).

Supervisor could be held individually liable under Exec § 296(6) for his alleged participation in harassment of former employee, despite fact that there was no evidence that supervisor had authority to fire employee or had ownership interest in company. Hasbrouck v BankAmerica Hous. Servs., 105 F. Supp. 2d 31, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10941 (N.D.N.Y. 2000).

Since claim for aiding and abetting under Exec § 296(6) may be made against defendant who has no control or authority over plaintiff, even defendant that is independent contractor for employer may be held liable, as long as there is direct participation in discriminatory acts that violate Human Rights Law. Dunson v Tri-Maintenance & Contrs., Inc., 171 F. Supp. 2d 103, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17833 (E.D.N.Y. 2001).

Individuals on the committee, which they admitted made all personnel decisions, acted in effect, as the employer, committed the discriminatory acts which gave rise to the employee's claim and, accordingly the employee's discrimination claim survived summary judgment. Heinemann v Howe & Rusling, 260 F. Supp. 2d 592, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7599 (W.D.N.Y. 2003).

Law firm employee failed to state a cause of action against individual attorneys under the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a), because the employee did not allege that the attorneys had an ownership interest in the firm, had the authority to terminate her employment, participated in racially discriminatory conduct, or displayed any racial animus toward her. Evans-Gadsden v Bernstein Litowitz Berger & Grossman, LLP, 332 F. Supp. 2d 592, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17710 (S.D.N.Y. 2004).

Where a law firm employee alleged that individual attorneys retaliated against her by sabotaging her computer and documents in order to make her look incompetent, the employee failed to state a cause of action against the attorneys under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(6) because the employee did not allege that the attorneys' conduct was racially motivated. Evans-Gadsden v Bernstein Litowitz Berger & Grossman, LLP, 332 F. Supp. 2d 592, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17710 (S.D.N.Y. 2004).

Evans-Gadsden v Bernstein Litowitz Berger & Grossman, LLP, 332 F. Supp. 2d 592, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17710 (S.D.N.Y. 2004).

Where a law firm employee alleged that individual attorneys retaliated against her by sabotaging her computer and documents in order to make her look incompetent, the employee failed to state a cause of action against the attorneys under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(6) because the employee did not allege that the attorneys' conduct was racially motivated. Evans-Gadsden v Bernstein Litowitz Berger & Grossman, LLP, 332 F. Supp. 2d 592, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17710 (S.D.N.Y. 2004).

Professional skater's amended complaint in her action based on sexual harassment and retaliation was sufficient to withstand a Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) motion on her claim that her supervisor was liable as an employer under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1). In addition to alleging, upon information and belief, that the supervisor had the power to hire and fire her, the amended complaint also specifically alleged that he participated in discharging her. Prince v Madison Square Garden, 427 F. Supp. 2d 372, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17562 (S.D.N.Y. 2006).

Under N.Y. Educ. Law § 2254(2), only a board of education has the power to hire and fire teachers, and a school district superintendent and a principal within a school district, while they could advise a board of education in its personnel decisions, did not have power to hire and fire teachers such that they were not directly liable for such decisions in a former student's sexual harassment discrimination claim under the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1), although liability could be asserted against these persons under the aiding and abetting provisions of § 296(6) Miotto v Yonkers Pub. Schs., 534 F. Supp. 2d 422, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4614 (S.D.N.Y. 2008).

Former employee's race discrimination suit against a metropolitan transit authority and two of its employees failed because the authority was not the employer under the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, and it was not related to a city transportation authority, which was the employer, in any way that imposed liability on it as the employer. Hargett v Metro. Transit Auth., 552 F. Supp. 2d 393, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 30599 (S.D.N.Y. 2008).

Claims raised by a former employee, who was an office manager for a state university, alleging race discrimination, a racially hostile work environment, and retaliation, failed to allege sufficient personal involvement by a university chancellor to establish liability against the chancellor under the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq. Westbrook v City Univ. of N.Y., 591 F. Supp. 2d 207, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 102765 (E.D.N.Y. 2008).

School principal's N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a) claim did not survive the motion to dismiss because there was no allegation that the union was the principal's employer, and because New York state law made an unincorporated association liable for the torts of its members only where the unlawful acts were authorized or ratified by each member of the association. McIntyre v Longwood Cent. Sch. Dist., 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 59590 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 27, 2008), aff'd, 380 Fed. Appx. 44, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 11393 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2010).

Sales manager of a mortgage banking company who was accused of sexually harassing an employee who worked in the accounting department could not be held liable under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(6)(1) as the employee's employer because the manager was not the employee's supervisor, the manager did not have an ownership interest in the mortgage banking company, and the manager did not have power to make personnel decisions concerning the employee. The fact that the manager might have had supervisory control over the employee's father and other workers at the company was insufficient to subject the manager to liability under § 296(6). Maher v Alliance Mortg. Banking Corp., 650 F. Supp. 2d 249, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 79486 (E.D.N.Y. 2009).

Under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 and New York City code, individual defendants who worked for an employer could be held liable, unlike under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e-2, but a plaintiff was required to show that the individual actually participated in the conduct from which the claim arose. Drew v Plaza Constr. Corp., 688 F. Supp. 2d 270, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8699 (S.D.N.Y. 2010).

It was unclear from the evidence adduced by the parties whether corporation one had power over the hiring and firing of corporation two's employees, had any role in the payment of salary or wages to corporation two's employees or had the power to control the conduct of corporation two's employees; accordingly, there remained a genuine issue of material fact concerning whether the corporation were joint employers, and the corporations' motion to dismiss corporation one failed. Voltaire v Home Servs. Sys., 823 F. Supp. 2d 77, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 115081 (E.D.N.Y. 2011).

7. Constitutional matters

Human Rights Law as applied to employer whose subjective intent to discriminate was not established was not violative of due process. State Div. of Human Rights v Kilian Mfg. Corp., 35 N.Y.2d 201, 360 N.Y.S.2d 603, 318 N.E.2d 770, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1309 (N.Y. 1974), app. dismissed, 420 U.S. 915, 95 S. Ct. 1108, 43 L. Ed. 2d 387, 1975 U.S. LEXIS 506 (U.S. 1975).

Section 296 of the Executive Law substantially extends to the employment relation the equal protection clause of the New York State Constitution. American Airlines, Inc. v State Com. for Human Rights, 29 A.D.2d 178, 286 N.Y.S.2d 493, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4784 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1968).

There is a distinction between Fourteenth Amendment, which permits rational basis for discrimination between classes of individuals, and statutory standard of Human Rights Law, which reflects a more positive and direct focus through the use of sanctions of a practice of employers which because of the sex of any individual discriminates against such individuals in compensation or in terms, conditions or privileges of employment. Div. of Human Rights ex rel. Schwabenbauer v Bd. of Educ., 46 A.D.2d 483, 363 N.Y.S.2d 370, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8524 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1975).

Determination by Commissioner of Division of Human Rights that employer did not unlawfully discriminate against employee on basis of her pregnancy was supported by evidence that employee misrepresented her hours on time card, that she refused to assist her coworkers in answering telephones, and that she kept irregular work hours. Resnik v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 204 A.D.2d 330, 611 N.Y.S.2d 270, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4511 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994).

Electrician employed by city met his burden of presenting legally admissible proof that he was treated detrimentally for constitutionally impermissible reason of his off-duty political activities where, shortly after he was directed to refrain from wearing campaign sticker supporting political opponent of city public works commissioner, and while city and commissioner knew that he continued to express his opposing political views on his own time, his job duties were adjusted—including reduction in responsibility—in way that was calculated to, and did, lead to his being denied promotion and concomitant salary increase. Richardson v City of Saratoga Springs, 246 A.D.2d 900, 667 N.Y.S.2d 995, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 524 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

In Article 78 proceeding by city electrician, in which he presented prima facie proof that he was unconstitutionally denied promotion and concomitant salary increase because of his expression of political views opposing city public works commissioner, fact that job reclassification that led to his nonpromotion was recommended by independent consultant and approved by city council was of little significance in rebutting prima facie case where those actions were direct result of changes in electrician's work duties effected by commissioner. Richardson v City of Saratoga Springs, 246 A.D.2d 900, 667 N.Y.S.2d 995, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 524 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Selection of number of members of minority groups for position of state trooper for purpose of obtaining more minority representation in state police, without regard to their standing on eligibility list based on competitive examination for such position, would violate state constitutional provision that "Appointments . . . in the civil service . . . shall be made according to merit and fitness to be ascertained, as far as practicable, by examination which, as far as practicable, shall be competitive." Ruddy v Connelie, 89 Misc. 2d 413, 391 N.Y.S.2d 819, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1880 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1977), aff'd, 61 A.D.2d 372, 402 N.Y.S.2d 245, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9748 (N.Y. Executive Order requiring contractors to undertake programs of affirmative action to insure equal employment opportunity was unconstitutional as unwarranted exercise of legislative power. Fullilove v Carey, 91 Misc. 2d 531, 398 N.Y.S.2d 226, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2350 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1977), aff'd, 62 A.D.2d 798, 406 N.Y.S.2d 888, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10909 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1978).

8. Physical fitness standards

Federal Airline Deregulation Act of 1978 (49 USCS § 41713) does not preempt employees' state discrimination claims against airline under Human Rights Law, because Congress intended only to restrict state regulation of airline fares, routes and services, not state regulation of employment practices. Delta Air Lines v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 91 N.Y.2d 65, 666 N.Y.S.2d 1004, 689 N.E.2d 898, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3710 (N.Y. 1997).

Valid job-related physical fitness standards promulgated by Municipal Police Training Council under CLS Civ S § 58 are enforceable legislative exceptions to application of Human Rights Law, since such legislation, passed to insure that those employed to perform demanding duties needed to protect public safety are physically capable, would otherwise be rendered ineffective. Rice v Schuyler County Civil Service Com., 137 A.D.2d 359, 528 N.Y.S.2d 944, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6071 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. dismissed, 72 N.Y.2d 1003, 534 N.Y.S.2d 665, 531 N.E.2d 297, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 2756 (N.Y. 1988).

9. Job training

While discrimination against Negroes in formulating apprentice lists and admission to membership in certain labor unions, so that they were practically excluded from work on public works projects, would not be immune from attack in a proper proceeding, it could not be made the basis of attack and ground for seeking an injunction against such discrimination in a class action seeking declaratory judgment in a taxpayer's suit which failed to join necessary parties defendants. Gaynor v Rockefeller, 21 A.D.2d 92, 248 N.Y.S.2d 792, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3971 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1964), aff'd, 15 N.Y.2d 120, 256 N.Y.S.2d 584, 204 N.E.2d 627, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1651 (N.Y. 1965).

In a civil rights proceeding brought by an epileptic nurse trainee who had been barred from a nurses' training program based on the dissatisfaction of the Board of Cooperative Education Services by which she was being trained with her physicians' attestations that her grand mal epilepsy was controlled by medication and that she was able to properly function as a licensed practical nurse, the Commissioner of Human Rights properly determined that the subject board was not an "employer" as defined in Exec Law § 296, since such board existed "for the purpose of carrying out a program of shared educational services in the schools of the supervisory district and for providing instruction in such special subjects as the [education] commissioner may approve" pursuant to Educ Law § 1950(1), so that the trainee's relationship to the board was educational in nature and lacked the mutually beneficial economic substance that is the touchstone of an employer-employee relationship; however, the commissioner erred in ruling that, due to the fact that the board was a public educational institution, it was not an "education corporation or association" within the meaning of Exec Law § 296(4) so as to be subject to the jurisdiction of the Division of Human Rights, since the board was an education corporation organized and existing under Educ Law § 1950, was nonsectarian, and was exempt from real property taxes under Real P Tax Law § 408, and so fell within the definition of the statute, and since the fact that the board was also subject to Educ Law § 313 did not affect the jurisdiction of the Human Rights Division, in that the division exercises concurrent jurisdiction over discrimination claims. State Div. of Human Rights v Board of Coop. Educ. Services, 98 A.D.2d 958, 470 N.Y.S.2d 209, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 21283 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1983), app. dismissed, 62 N.Y.2d 645 (N.Y. 1984).

App. Div. 4th Dep't 1983), app. dismissed, 62 N.Y.2d 645 (N.Y. 1984).

A union unlawfully discriminated against its minority trainees through various means which resulted in blocking their attainment of class "A" journeyman status with the union on the basis of statistics, since a statistical showing of discrimination constitutes substantial evidence of a violation of the Human Rights Law, and the relative absence of any minority trainees in a program truly comparable to the apprenticeship training program and the absence of any procedure to permit qualified minority trainees to cross over to the faster apprenticeship training program constituted substantial evidence of a pattern of discrimination. Schuck v State Div. of Human Rights, 102 A.D.2d 673, 478 N.Y.S.2d 279, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18838 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1984).

Dismissal of hazardous waste investigator who is unable to perform during training period as result of obesity does not constitute unlawful discrimination against person with physical impairment. Velger v Williams, 118 A.D.2d 1037, 500 N.Y.S.2d 411, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 54823 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

A court will not countenance discrimination in job training programs which exclude the victimized minority from employment in industry, equal opportunity in job training and apprenticeship opportunities being essential for achievement of full equality as required in our democracy. State Comm'n for Human Rights v Farrell, 43 Misc. 2d 958, 252 N.Y.S.2d 649, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1486 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1964).

Denial of the right to be trained is, in many industries, tantamount to denial of employment, and discrimination based upon race which effectively excludes a minority from right to be employed in a particular industry is subject to condemnation. State Comm'n for Human Rights v Farrell, 43 Misc. 2d 958, 252 N.Y.S.2d 649, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1486 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1964).

10. Labor unions

Provisions of subdivisions 1 and 1-a of above statute give full and adequate remedy for discrimination by either a labor organization, an employer, or any joint labor-management committee. There is therefore no warrant for invocation of aid of equity or for granting of declaratory relief in the case of any such discrimination. Gaynor v Rockefeller, 15 N.Y.2d 120, 256 N.Y.S.2d 584, 204 N.E.2d 627, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1651 (N.Y. 1965).

Above provision is not enforceable in class action by Negro plaintiffs on behalf of themselves and all other Negro citizens of New York similarly situated for injunctive and declaratory relief against certain labor unions and various officials of State and city therein, challenging expenditure of public funds on public works projects in such city on ground that qualified Negroes are unlawfully denied employment and opportunity therefor because contractors on such projects obtain virtually all their labor from defendant unions who exclude Negroes from membership and apprenticeship programs solely on basis of race and color. Gaynor v Rockefeller, 15 N.Y.2d 120, 256 N.Y.S.2d 584, 204 N.E.2d 627, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1651 (N.Y. 1965).

A person has the right not to be excluded from a labor union because of race, creed, color or religious persuasion under the above statute but there is no right thereunder to have such a union take affirmative steps looking toward integration. And an order of the Commission which does not exceed the above limitation will be enforced by the courts. State Com. for Human Rights v Farrell, 24 A.D.2d 128, 264 N.Y.S.2d 489, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2993 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1965), app. denied, 17 N.Y.2d 418, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 1711 (N.Y. 1966).

Although there was substantial evidence to support the determination of the New York City Commission on Human Rights that a union had discriminated against an employee on the basis of sex in denying severance pay, the commission and Special Term both miscalculated the amount of severance pay due, and the judgment of Special Term would be modified to the extent of reducing such amount in light of the fact that the employee had not been a union official during her 31 years of employment. Silverman v New York Com. on Human Rights, 84 A.D.2d 504, 443 N.Y.S.2d 155, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15520 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1981), rev'd, 56 N.Y.2d 608, 450 N.Y.S.2d 480, 435 N.E.2d 1095, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3280 (N.Y. 1982).

A claim by a person suffering from amyatonia conginita that she had been passed over for promotion would be remitted for further investigation, where after a conference with the petitioner and her employer, a field representative of the state Division of Human Rights instructed her employer to submit further documentation with respect to every person employed in the position to which the petitioner was denied promotion, where that documentation was forwarded to the petitioner, who had appeared pro se, but without the information that the petitioner had the right to respond to the information contained in the documents, and where it thus was an abuse of discretion for the division to make its determination of no probable cause of a discriminatory action without insuring that the petitioner had a right to respond to all the information on which the determination was based. Soellner v State Div. of Human Rights, 100 A.D.2d 876, 474 N.Y.S.2d 135, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17992 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1984).

Provision of collective bargaining agreement barring arbitration in discrimination cases if grievant filed or prosecuted a claim in any court or governmental agency was valid and enforceable. Board of Higher Education v Professional Staff Congress/CUNY, 80 Misc. 2d 297, 362 N.Y.S.2d 985, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2180 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1975).

Employer's third-party claim for contribution under Exec § 296 is preempted by federal law, where employees sued employer for age discrimination, which employer blames partly on union for its actions leading to performance appraisal system and its agreement to 3-tiered, weighted seniority system, because union's federal duty of fair representation forbids it from discriminating against its members in its representative capacity, and contribution claim is subsumed by duty of fair representation. Rodolico v Unisys Corp., 96 F. Supp. 2d 184, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6048 (E.D.N.Y. 2000).

Homosexual correctional officer established indirect causal connection between his sexual orientation and adverse employment actions he allegedly suffered, as required for making prima facie case of retaliation against union under Exec § 296(1)(e) and Title VII, where officer sought union's assistance with harassment by co-workers, but union told him to stop complaining, did not draft grievances for officer as it did for other members, and neglected officer's grievances, which led to dismissal of grievances. Martin v New York State Dep't of Correctional Servs., 115 F. Supp. 2d 307, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18956 (N.D.N.Y. 2000).

There was no evidence that anything the local union did or did not do was even remotely arbitrary, discriminatory, or tinged with bad faith. The employee's bare, conclusory assertion that the local's representation was perfunctory was unsupported by any evidence and even assuming the local breached its duty of fair representation, the employee presented no evidence that would give rise to an inference of discriminatory motivations. Bryant v Verizon Communs., Inc., 550 F. Supp. 2d 513, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35916 (S.D.N.Y. 2008).

Even if the employee presented a prima facie case of discrimination, she did nothing to show that the national union's proffered reason for its decision—that her case was weak—was a pretext for discrimination. Bryant v Verizon Communs., Inc., 550 F. Supp. 2d 513, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35916 (S.D.N.Y. 2008).

11. Employment agencies

Absent any indication that employment agency restricted its employment to females only or that males were denied opportunity for employment because of their sex, use of word "girls" in name of employment agency was not in violation of Human Rights Law. Phillips v State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 41 A.D.2d 710, 341 N.Y.S.2d 454, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4949 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1973).

When the attorney general sought to subpoena records of a domestic worker placement agency, to determine if the agency was violating N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., N.Y. Civ. Rights Law § 40-c, and New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(a), by asking job applicants about their national origin, age, and marital status and accommodating employer preferences as to a worker's national origin and age, the attorney general could subpoena agency documents used to record information about job applicants, fees the agency earned for placing applicants, and applicants' hiring rates, but, as to information about agency clients, the attorney general was only entitled to agency intake forms used to register clients, and documents showing job characteristics, requirements, and/or employer preferences, but could not know who the prospective employers were, as this would interfere with the personal employment relationships between the employers and the workers they hired, which would be contrary to the intention of the legislature when it enacted N.Y. Exec. Law § 292(6). Matter of Pavillion Agency Inc v Spitzer, 802 N.Y.S.2d 879, 9 Misc. 3d 626, 234 N.Y.L.J. 28, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1613 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2005).

Where an application used by an employment agency contained the question from which an applicant's racial origin or religious belief or his original or prior religious belief might be readily established by any person reasonably familiar with the names common to those racial and religious groups, the solicitation of such data was in clear conflict with sub c of this section. Holland v Edwards, 116 N.Y.S.2d 264, 1952 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1859 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1952), aff'd, 282 A.D. 353, 122 N.Y.S.2d 721, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4474 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

B. Hiring/Failure to Hire

12. In general

In absence of conduct from which employer's willful intent might be presumed, question of discrimination in hiring, under Human Rights Law, is whether employer knows or should know the ultimate result or effect of its hiring practice. Statistical predicate is not necessarily alone sufficient to establish discrimination in hiring; in addition there should be proof of recruitment or employment practices in individual case which in actual operation warrant conclusion, based on direct evidence or rational inference, or both, that there is constructive, even if unintended, discriminatory practice. Under evidence, including statistics as to members of minority groups resident in area which was largest source of employer's employees and as to percentage of minority workers employed by employer, State Division of Human Rights was warranted in concluding that there was constructive discrimination in hiring practices of employer, notwithstanding an absence of any proof of subjective motive on part of employer to produce such result. State Div. of Human Rights v Kilian Mfg. Corp., 35 N.Y.2d 201, 360 N.Y.S.2d 603, 318 N.E.2d 770, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1309 (N.Y. 1974), app. dismissed, 420 U.S. 915, 95 S. Ct. 1108, 43 L. Ed. 2d 387, 1975 U.S. LEXIS 506 (U.S. 1975).

When a hiring standard adversely affects equal employment opportunity for protected class of persons, judicial scrutiny is warranted and it is incumbent upon the employer to show that the standard bears a rational relationship to, and is a valid predictor of, employee job performance and does not create an arbitrary, artificial and unnecessary barrier to employment operating invidiously to discriminate on the basis of an impermissible classification. Schenectady v State Div. of Human Rights, 37 N.Y.2d 421, 373 N.Y.S.2d 59, 335 N.E.2d 290, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 2042 (N.Y. 1975).

Employer's pre-employment inquiries regarding age, disabilities and physical impairments, family relations, marital status, roommates and prior treatment for drug or alcohol abuse did not constitute discrimination under Human Rights Law, in absence of any evidence or inference that such inquiries reflected "limitation, specification or discrimination" within meaning of CLS Exec § 296(1)(d). Delta Air Lines v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 91 N.Y.2d 65, 666 N.Y.S.2d 1004, 689 N.E.2d 898, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3710 (N.Y. 1997).

Where there is no evidence of discrimination and the employment application contains misstatements of fact which form the basis of rejection of the application for employment, there can be no finding of discrimination. New York Stock Exchange, Inc. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 37 A.D.2d 941, 325 N.Y.S.2d 778, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3026 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1971).

A hospital's decision not to hire a certain employee was a business decision unrelated to her human rights complaint against another hospital, and did not therefore constitute unlawful retaliation for having filed an earlier complaint alleging discrimination. State Div. of Human Rights v Genesee Hospital, 85 A.D.2d 899, 446 N.Y.S.2d 735, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16741 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1981).

Commissioner of Human Rights may not substitute her judgment as to qualifications for hiring and promotion for that of employer. City of New York v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 225 A.D.2d 421, 638 N.Y.S.2d 957, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2800 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

Contention by clerk employed by correctional facility that facility's Deputy Superintendent of Administration had unlawfully prevented clerk from obtaining certain promotions was refuted by proof that Deputy lacked authority to influence those decisions. New York State Dep't of Correctional Servs. v State Div. of Human Rights, 238 A.D.2d 704, 656 N.Y.S.2d 78, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3750 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Applicant for public employment who alleged that town did not hire her due to her political affiliation did not thereby state claim under CLS Exec §§ 290 et seq. and CLS Civ R § 40-c(2), since statutes do not cover political association. Eisert v Town of Hempstead, 918 F. Supp. 601, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2657 (E.D.N.Y. 1996).

County police cadet program, which excluded non-minorities in favor of black and Hispanic applicants, violated CLS Exec § 296 because it constituted de jure discrimination and was not narrowly tailored to achieve asserted compelling governmental interest of remedying past discrimination. Hiller v County of Suffolk, 977 F. Supp. 202, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17534 (E.D.N.Y. 1997).

Even though there is no specific provision of Insurance Law regarding unlawful discrimination in employment of insurance agents, Superintendent of Insurance can and will take appropriate disciplinary action against licensee that engages in unlawful discrimination in hiring. Insurance Department, Opinions of General Counsel, Opinion Number 07-03-15.

13. Coercion of employer hiring practices

Although the executive clearly has the power and obligation to implement programs designed to prohibit discriminatory hiring practices, and, indeed, the State Legislature has stated that voluntary use of a State-approved affirmative action plan by private employers shall not be an unlawful discriminatory practice (Executive Law, § 296, subd 2), there is a vast difference between permitting employers to voluntarily adopt an affirmative action program and mandating by executive order that this be done involuntarily under threat of legal sanctions, and there is also a distinction between executive affirmative action which would merely enlarge the pool of persons eligible for employment based on discrimination-free selection and affirmative action in hiring practices; under our governmental system, the central feature of which is distribution of powers, the executive does not have the authority to initiate such affirmative action without legislative authorization. Fullilove v Beame, 48 N.Y.2d 376, 423 N.Y.S.2d 144, 398 N.E.2d 765, 1979 N.Y. LEXIS 2407 (N.Y. 1979).

An attempt to control the employment practices of an employer solely on the basis of race or color is unlawful racial discrimination. Under the provisions of this section making it unlawful for an employer to refuse to employ or to discharge anyone because of race, creed, color, or national origin, or to try to compel or coerce any discrimination in employment, it is illegal for a racial group to try to coerce an employer into hiring and retaining a specific percentage of members of that race, without regard to their individual qualifications, and by displacing existing employees of different racial background if necessary to that end. In re Young, 29 Misc. 2d 817, 211 N.Y.S.2d 621, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3495 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1961).

14. Age discrimination

Former airline flight attendants who were not hired by successor airline because of its use of weight standards in hiring decisions failed to establish that they were victims of age discrimination on ground that weight charts did not make appropriate adjustments for age, where there was no evidence establishing disparate treatment of relatively older flight attendants, airline submitted substantial evidence that it relied heavily on seniority in employing former flight attendants, and its flight attendants averaged over 40 years of age. Delta Air Lines v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 91 N.Y.2d 65, 666 N.Y.S.2d 1004, 689 N.E.2d 898, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3710 (N.Y. 1997).

There was no substantial evidence supporting a finding that prospective employer had rejected a work applicant solely on the basis of age where, from the evidence available, it appeared that said employer never saw either the applicant nor his application. State Div. of Human Rights v Service Systems Corp., Vending Div., 40 A.D.2d 1075, 339 N.Y.S.2d 232, 1972 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3124 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1972).

Record supported finding of Commissioner of State Division of Human Rights that New York City Department of Personnel committed unlawful age discrimination by establishing maximum age of 40 years for position of parking enforcement agent and by rejecting applicant on basis that she was 54 years old; Department failed to establish its affirmative defense that age restriction was bona fide occupational qualification. New York City Dep't of Personnel v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 56 A.D.2d 795, 392 N.Y.S.2d 641, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11090 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1977).

In age discrimination proceeding, order requiring New York City Department of Personnel to offer complainant next available position of parking enforcement agent could not stand where list of eligibles established from results of examination which complainant passed had expired; direction that Department pay complainant compensatory damages for period from date she would have been appointed likewise could not stand for same reason, but Commissioner of State Division of Human Rights would be required to fashion award of compensatory damages with due regard to unusual circumstances of case. New York City Dep't of Personnel v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 58 A.D.2d 787, 396 N.Y.S.2d 845, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12946 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1977), aff'd, 44 N.Y.2d 904, 407 N.Y.S.2d 637, 379 N.E.2d 165, 1978 N.Y. LEXIS 2094 (N.Y. 1978).

A provision of the Civil Service Law prohibiting the original appointment of police officers over 29 years of age did not violate the equal protection requirements of the United States and New York State constitutions, did not contravene the prohibition against age discrimination contained in a provision of the Human Rights Law, and was not superseded by that provision which operated on a separate and unrelated category of employers. Knapp v Monroe County Civil Service Com., 77 A.D.2d 817, 437 N.Y.S.2d 136, 1980 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12602 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 51 N.Y.2d 708, 1980 N.Y. LEXIS 3830 (N.Y. 1980).

A provision of the Civil Service Law prohibiting the original appointment of police officers over 29 years of age did not violate the equal protection requirements of the United States and New York State constitutions, did not contravene the prohibition against age discrimination contained in a provision of the Human Rights Law, and was not superseded by that provision which operated on a separate and unrelated category of employers. Mullen v Harris, 80 A.D.2d 981, 437 N.Y.S.2d 135, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10892 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981).

In an age discrimination case, the complaint was properly dismissed where the employer hired a different job applicant, who was better qualified than petitioner, and who was 50 years of age, rather than the 60-year-old petitioner who had applied for positions with the employer for seven years. Auchenpaugh v General Electric Co., 92 A.D.2d 680, 460 N.Y.S.2d 200, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16955 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1983).

There was substantial evidence to support a finding that the Lottery Division had not discriminated against a job applicant based on age or disability where two previous holders of the position had been over 50, the ultimate appointee was over 50 and the interviewer did not recall any disclosure of disability. Reiniger v New York State Div. of Lottery, 105 A.D.2d 902, 482 N.Y.S.2d 60, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 21021 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1984), app. denied, 64 N.Y.2d 609, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 18863 (N.Y. 1985).

In regard to claim that employer committed unlawful age discrimination in decision not to hire complainants and that reasons articulated for employer's decisions were pretext, it was not necessary for complainants to show that age was the only factor in decision not to hire them or that employer's proffered reason was false; complainants were only required to show that employer's stated reason was not the only reason and that age made difference. Substantial evidence supported determination that age-neutral reasons offered by employer for not hiring complainants were pretext for age discrimination where (1) general manager of employer testified that his hiring criteria was to select aggressive merchandisers who had demonstrated their ability to merchandise in 12 to 14 months before closing of predeces sor corporation, (2) all but one of former corporation's employees selected by him were under 50, and all but one had performed few or no merchandising duties, (3) complainants had all been sales persons with extensive merchandising duties during period in question, and (4) sales manager for employer stated that employer was youth-oriented company, and described good merchandisers as "young guys" with strong legs who could "pack out a lot of stuff." Miller Brewing Co. v State Div. of Human Rights, 166 A.D.2d 705, 561 N.Y.S.2d 288, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13204 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1990), app. denied, 77 N.Y.2d 805, 568 N.Y.S.2d 912, 571 N.E.2d 82, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 328 (N.Y. 1991).

Justiciable controversy appropriate for declaratory relief existed in action by Superintendent of State Police for declaration as to whether hiring practices of Division of State Police were governed by CLS Exec § 215(3), which provided that applicants must be between 21 and 29 years of age, or by CLS Exec § 296(3-a)(a), which prohibited age discrimination, since (1) superintendent asserted that former statute applied and State Commissioner of Human Rights asserted that he could order superintendent to comply with latter statute, (2) commissioner had, on at least 4 occasions, sought injunctive relief directed at examinations scheduled by superintendent, and (3) controversy presented question of law with no disputed facts, and adjudication would likely render later litigation unnecessary. Declaratory judgment action by Superintendent of State Police for declaration as to whether hiring practices of Division of State Police were governed by CLS Exec § 215(3), which provided that applicants must be between 21 and 29 years of age, or by CLS Exec § 296(3-a)(a), which prohibited age discrimination, was not subject to exhaustion of administrative remedies doctrine since it would have been futile to await final determinations by Commissioner of Human Rights in various age discrimination complaints filed against superintendent where (1) protracted delays in proceedings on complaints lent air of uncertainty to superintendent's hiring practices, and (2) superintendent could not obtain adequate relief in administrative process as final determinations in favor of superintendent would not prevent further disruption of hiring practices. Hiring practices of Division of State Police were governed by CLS Exec § 215(3), which provides that applicants must be between 21 and 29 years of age, rather than by CLS Exec § 296(3-a)(a), which prohibits age discrimination, since general provisions must generally yield to specific provisions and there was no indication that latter statute, which was enacted after former statute, was intended to repeal age limitations in former statute. Constantine v White, 166 A.D.2d 59, 569 N.Y.S.2d 765, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5328 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1991).

Age discrimination claims filed against airline based on airline's use of weight standards in hiring flight attendants, which allegedly discriminated against women with "large framed bodies," as well as older women, was properly dismissed where petitioners failed to show that age was major factor in weight gain, that airline's weight restrictions had had disparate impact on older employees, or that airline had used its restrictions to avoid hiring older individuals. Delta Air Lines v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 229 A.D.2d 132, 652 N.Y.S.2d 253, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12963 (N.Y. Maximum age limitation for appointment of New York City police officers (NYC Admin Code § 14-109) has not been impliedly repealed by general city and state Human Rights Laws (NYC Admin Code § 8-107(a), CLS Exec § 296(1)(a)). Walter v City of New York Police Dep't, 244 A.D.2d 205, 664 N.Y.S.2d 21, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11387 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1997).

There was sufficient unrebutted evidence in record to warrant public hearing on complaint that Delta Airlines discriminated on basis of age against 57-year-old automotive mechanic with 19 years of service with Pan American Airways when it did not hire him as part of its 1991 purchase of Pan Am's assets, where complaint alleged that specifically identified younger Pan Am mechanics with less seniority were hired in his stead. Sauer v N.Y. State Div. of Human Rights, 285 A.D.2d 372, 727 N.Y.S.2d 113, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7370 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2001).

Because an employee failed to dispute an employer's non-age-discriminatory related reasons for the employee's termination and because the employer established that the employee was an administrative employee exempt from overtime, the employer was entitled to summary judgment in the employee's actions under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, 29 U.S.C.S. § 621, et seq., and the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, 29 U.S.C.S. § 201, et seq. Lichtman v Martin's News Shops Mgt., Inc., 81 A.D.3d 696, 917 N.Y.S.2d 222, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 963 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2011).

The age limitation restricting appointment for the position of police officer in New York City to those under age of 29 at the time of filing an application for the civil service examination does not constitute unlawful age discrimination, since the age limitation is a bona fide occupational qualification rationally related to the ability to perform the job. Feimer v Ward, 127 Misc. 2d 853, 487 N.Y.S.2d 458, 1984 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3765 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1984).

County was granted summary judgment dismissing age discrimination complaint by 75-year-old plaintiff who unsuccessfully applied for 3 civil service positions where it submitted affidavits and depositions from interviewers in all 3 jobs, presenting facially valid and convincing nondiscriminatory reasons for hiring other candidates, and plaintiff failed to provide evidentiary showing that county's explanations were false. Dunadee v County of Monroe, 188 Misc. 2d 605, 729 N.Y.S.2d 605, 2001 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 258 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2001).

Motion by an employer, a city transit authority, for summary judgment dismissing an employee's age discrimination complaint was properly denied where (1) the employee adequately pleaded a cognizable claim of age discrimination by alleging that the employee, under the employer's policy, had been denied a starting salary increase above the employee's former civil service salary with another city agency, but that younger, comparable, employees had received such salary increases, and (2) the employer failed to demonstrate its prima facie entitlement to summary judgment because it (a) failed to offer any proof as to why one such comparable employee had received a starting salary increase in contravention of the employer's alleged no-raise policy, and (b) failed to offer any proof regarding alleged disparate treatment between the employee and younger persons who allegedly received starting salary increases which were denied to the employee. Peskin v N.Y. City Transit Auth., 304 A.D.2d 634, 757 N.Y.S.2d 594, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3941 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003).

No portion of New York State Human Rights Law—as it relates to age discrimination claims—will be preempted by Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA; 29 USCS § 1144), since age discrimination claims brought under Human Rights Law are governed by same standards as those brought under Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA; 29 USCS §§ 621 et seq.) and both federal statutes rely on "joint state/federal enforcement" scheme. Devlin v Transportation Communs. Int'l Union, 173 F.3d 94, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 6969 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1999).

Age discrimination claim of applicant for teaching position survives summary judgment, where plaintiff, 51, was one of top 2 candidates but was shunned in favor of 23-year-old student teacher, and there were several discrepancies in interpretation of interview scores, because triable issue of fact exists as to whether school district has refuted prima facie case of discrimination. Eastmer v Williamsville Cent. Sch. Dist., 977 F. Supp. 207, 977 F. Supp. 209, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13921 (W.D.N.Y. 1997).

Age discrimination claim of rejected applicant for full-time social studies teaching position must fail, where he relies heavily on facts that (1) out of field of 6 candidates, 3 youngest were hired, and (2) he was oldest in field, because this is insufficient to overcome school district's nondiscriminatory explanation for hiring decision, and this is simply case of person who, after interviewing along with many other teachers in competitive school district, disagrees with reasons articulated for his rejection. Richane v Fairport Cent. Sch. Dist., 179 F. Supp. 2d 81, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21133 (W.D.N.Y. 2001).

No reasonable trier of fact could find that age played role in employer's decision to repudiate employment contract with prospective employee, so as to support employee's action under Exec § 296, where employer repudiated employment agreement 16 days after entering into it, so that employee was almost same age on both days. Posner v Marcus & Millichap Corp. Real Estate Servs., 180 F. Supp. 2d 529, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 626 (S.D.N.Y. 2002).

Employee failed to establish a prima facie claim of age discrimination under the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1) (2005), against his employer and two of its officers because a single disputed comment about the employee's age, even if taken as true, was insufficient to establish such a claim. Russo v Sysco Food Servs. of Albany, L.L.C., 488 F. Supp. 2d 228, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36939 (N.D.N.Y. 2007).

Coach's age discrimination claim under the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 290 et seq., failed because the claim was based only on the fact that the replacement coach was under age 40 and on inadmissible hearsay comments related to the coach's age, and the evidence showed that the coach had in fact been allowed to work as a coach for three years after her retirement from the school's physical education department, thus belying an inference of age discrimination regarding the school's failure to reappoint the coach to a fourth term. Stouter v Smithtown Cent. Sch. Dist., 687 F. Supp. 2d 224, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12279 (E.D.N.Y. 2010).

15. Discrimination based on disability

Former flight attendants who were not hired because of successor airline's use of weight standards in its hiring decisions failed to establish that they were medically impaired members of protected class defined under Human Rights Law, where they did not proffer evidence establishing that they were medically incapable of meeting airline's weight standards due to some cognizable medical condition; weight, in and of itself, does not constitute disability for discrimination qualification purposes. Delta Air Lines v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 91 N.Y.2d 65, 666 N.Y.S.2d 1004, 689 N.E.2d 898, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3710 (N.Y. 1997).

Human Rights Appeal Board had no authority to determine whether school bus driver's hearing was sufficient inasmuch as that was a defect related to driver's ability to perform his job and thus did not qualify as a "disability" which was unrelated to ability to engage in occupation and for which refusal to hire constitutes unlawful discriminatory practice. State Div. of Human Rights v Averill Park Cent. School Dist., 59 A.D.2d 449, 399 N.Y.S.2d 926, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13946 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977), aff'd, 46 N.Y.2d 950, 415 N.Y.S.2d 405, 388 N.E.2d 729, 1979 N.Y. LEXIS 1868 (N.Y. 1979).

Respondent was properly found to have violated Exec Law § 296(1)(a) by unlawfully refusing to hire complainant on the basis of a disability described as "active gross obesity," where complainant's obesity, without more, constituted a physical or medical impairment within the meaning of Exec Law § 292(21). State Div. of Human Rights ex rel. McDermott v Xerox Corp., 102 A.D.2d 543, 478 N.Y.S.2d 982, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18819 (N.Y. A public employee would be found to have been unlawfully discriminated against in her employment by reason of a medical disability where the employee was to be given a permanent position subject to her passing of physical examination, as a result of which the examining physician reported that she suffered from certain ailments which he concluded would adversely affect her ability to perform her duties, and where defendants failed to meet their burden to justify the non-hiring of plaintiff by failing to produce record proof as to whether plaintiff's diabetes increased her urination and drinking needs and therefore her absenteeism. Kelly v North Hempstead, 103 A.D.2d 767, 477 N.Y.S.2d 396, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19382 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1984).

There was substantial evidence to support a finding that the Lottery Division had not discriminated against a job applicant based on age or disability where two previous holders of the position had been over 50, the ultimate appointee was over 50 and the interviewer did not recall any disclosure of disability. Reiniger v New York State Div. of Lottery, 105 A.D.2d 902, 482 N.Y.S.2d 60, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 21021 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1984), app. denied, 64 N.Y.2d 609, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 18863 (N.Y. 1985).

A regulation promulgated by the Commissioner of Education, which precludes the employment as a school bus driver of anyone who has any physical or mental condition which "might impede" the ability to operate a bus safely, was invalid to the extent that it conflicted with portions of the Human Rights Law (Exec Law §§ 292, 296) barring discrimination against the disabled, and the Commissioner of the State Division of Human Rights properly determined that a school district had improperly discriminated by refusing to hire as a substitute school bus driver a woman whose need to take medication due to the removal of her adrenal glands did not prevent her from performing the job in a reasonable manner. State Div. of Human Rights ex rel. Giannavola v Le Roy Cent. School Dist., 107 A.D.2d 153, 485 N.Y.S.2d 907, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 48407 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 65 N.Y.2d 610 (N.Y. 1985).

There was substantial evidence to support the determination of the Division of Human Rights that there was no probable cause to believe that respondent hospital engaged in an unlawful discriminatory practice in rejecting petitioner's employment application, where the nursing duties of the position sought by petitioner required heavy lifting, and petitioner admitted that her disability made her unable to lift more than 15 pounds. Schor v St. Francis Hospital, 111 A.D.2d 852, 490 N.Y.S.2d 785, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50106 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1985).

To extent that rejection of request by disabled professional basketball referee is based upon determination that referee's style and manner of officiating does not conform to current standards, in absence of affirmative proof of discrimination, it is improper for commissioner of state division of human rights to substitute commissioner's judgment for that of employer as to qualifications for particular position. National Basketball Asso. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 115 A.D.2d 365, 495 N.Y.S.2d 904, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 54768 (N.Y. Finding that school district had not discriminated (on basis of disability) against applicant for position as school bus driver lacked support in record where district had rejected applicant on strength of medical report in which doctor stated only that applicant should not operate bus until checked by cardiologist, and did not make final determination that applicant was unfit; accordingly, on applicant's Article 78 petition, decision of State Division of Human Rights, which had found no probable cause to believe that district had engaged in unlawful discriminatory practice, should be annulled. Sitler v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 133 A.D.2d 938, 520 N.Y.S.2d 653, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 51983 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987).

Determination that employer unlawfully discriminated against complainant by failing to hire him because of disability was supported by fact that he was denied employment as kitchen helper simply because he had high blood pressure, with no evaluation done as to whether such condition would prevent him from reasonably performing his job activities. Trans World Airlines, Inc. v New York Executive Dept., State Div. of Human Rights, 147 A.D.2d 575, 537 N.Y.S.2d 868, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1605 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Employment applicant stated cause of action against prospective employer for unlawful discrimination under New York State Human Rights Law by alleging that metabolites found in his urine specimen resulted from his consumption of health food bread containing poppy seeds and not from unlawful opiate abuse, although his urine sample was subjected to 2 different testing methods which revealed positive results, where employer refused to use third testing method which would definitely distinguish metabolites resulting from opiate use; employer may be legitimately entitled to discriminate against users of controlled narcotic substances, but it must, when challenged, come forward with evidence establishing that its testing method accurately distinguishes between opiate users and consumers of lawful foodstuffs or medications. Doe v Roe, Inc., 160 A.D.2d 255, 553 N.Y.S.2d 364, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3749 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1990).

Court should have dismissed action brought by Orthodox Jewish tenants alleging that apartment building owners violated CLS Exec § 296(5)(a)(2) by installing electric locks in doors of front entrances to buildings, thereby requiring individual tenants either to turn key or press button to break electric circuit, causing electromagnet to be released, procedure which was prohibited by Jewish religious law ("Halacha") on their Sabbath and on certain religious holidays, since (1) mere act of installing electric locks, while burdensome to Jewish tenants, did not constitute discriminatory act, (2) it was reasonable to assume that installation of electronic locks was for sole purpose of deterring crime, (3) there was no allegation from which it could be reasonably inferred that installation was done with discriminatory intent, and (4) inconvenience placed on Jewish tenants was not of such nature as to be deemed discriminatory. Employer could not be held to have discriminated against prospective employee by failing to offer him immediate employment because of his disability where, at time he applied for employment, he was on disability leave from his then-current employer; employee could not claim both that he was unable to perform his duties for his then-current employer because of serious back problems and that he was discriminated against by prospective employer. Disability discrimination claims filed against airline, based on airline's use of weight standards in hiring flight attendants, were properly dismissed where, inter alia, petitioners failed to show that they fell within class of persons protected by Human Rights Law and that airline intended to discriminate against older women, they did not claim that their weight limited their actions or abilities nor did they allege conditions which amounted to obesity, and they submitted no proof that they had been clinically observed as having "abnormal medical condition" or that they were medically incapable of meeting airline's weight requirements due to underlying medical problem. Because the individuals responsible for hiring teachers at a school district were unaware that a teacher was disabled, the human rights commission properly found no discriminatory practice under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(a)(1) and dismissed the teacher's administrative complaint against the district; consequently, the teacher was not entitled to N.Y. C.P.L.R. art. 78 relief. Matter of Isaksson-Wilder v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 43 A.D.3d 921, 841 N.Y.S.2d 658, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9635 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2007).

Trial court erred by dismissing an employee's discrimination claim that the employer failed to accommodate his disability by refusing to transfer him to another position after his immediate supervisor assaulted him on the job as he sufficiently alleged a life-threatening heart condition that was beyond mere workplace stress. However, the trial court properly dismissed the employee's retaliation claim as the complaint included no allegation that the employee was assaulted because of any qualifying impairment or disability. Horgan v Whitaker, 57 A.D.3d 1345, 871 N.Y.S.2d 443, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9981 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

In Article 78 proceeding to set aside and annul determination of fire district which denied application of petitioner to become volunteer fireman but failed to determine extent of his hearing impairment, court would remand matter for hearing specifically on issue of extent of hearing impairment, and would direct fire district to grant application if it found that petitioner's hearing impairment did not rise to level described in CLS Exec § 296(14). Job applicant stated cause of action for employment discrimination based on disability in violation of CLS Exec § 296(1)(a) by alleging that employer subjected him to urinalysis test as condition of employment without demonstrating that such test was job related and that employer refused to hire applicant on basis of such test result (which revealed presence of opiates) without evaluating his capacity to reasonably perform in position sought. Doe v Roe, Inc., 143 Misc. 2d 156, 539 N.Y.S.2d 876, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 187 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1989), aff'd, 160 A.D.2d 255, 553 N.Y.S.2d 364, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3749 (N.Y. When an employee sued her former employer for employment discrimination based on a disability, because she was terminated for not returning to work when her recovery from a back injury took longer than expected, her testimony that her resulting disability prevented her from performing her job in a reasonable manner was fatal to her discrimination claim under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, and summary judgment dismissing that claim was properly granted. Fama v Am. Int'l Group, Inc., 306 A.D.2d 310, 760 N.Y.S.2d 534, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6591 (N.Y. Former bus driver did not have a claim for disability discrimination under the Americans with Disabilities Act, 42 U.S.C.S. § 12101 et seq., or under the corresponding state and city laws set forth in N.Y. Exec. Law §§ 292, 296, and N.Y. City Admin. A hockey league bylaw, which provided that a person with sight in only one eye could not play for a member club, was invalid, as the hockey league did not justify the rule as being a bona fide occupational qualification, plaintiff represented that his handicap did not substantially detract from his ability to play hockey, and a partially blind person has a constitutional right not to be discriminated against by an employer or prevented from participating in sports. Employee was unable to proceed on a claim of disability discrimination in violation of the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Former employee's claim that a university violated N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 in failing to rehire the employee after she was discharged for underperformance, using profane language, and excessive tardiness failed because although the employee underwent treatment for the drug addiction that allegedly caused her performance problems, there was no evidence that the university's failure to rehire the employee was due to her alleged disability of drug addiction, and instead, the evidence showed that the university had a policy of rehiring employees who were discharged for cause only when they demonstrated an intervening positive work history, which the employee had not done. Gilmore v Univ. of Rochester Strong Mem'l Div., 654 F. Supp. 2d 141, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 79219 (W.D.N.Y. 2009).

16. —Disability for police work

City's disqualification of individual from employment as police officer based on asymptomatic back condition (spondylolisthesis) constituted unlawful discrimination because of disability in violation of CLS Exec § 296 since (1) individual established his present ability to perform police duties by satisfactory performance of agility test and prior employment as laborer without significant back problems, and (2) city failed to establish reasonable expectation that individual would be unable to perform his duties in future, in absence of reliable statistics or other medical evidence concerning incidence of disability resulting from asymptomatic spondylolisthesis; employment may not be denied based on mere possibilities, especially when disqualification is premised solely on fact of applicant's inclusion in class of persons with particular disability rather than on individualized assessment. In re State Di v of Human Rights, 70 N.Y.2d 100, 517 N.Y.S.2d 715, 510 N.E.2d 799, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 16800 (N.Y. 1987).

Provision requiring 20 years of accredited service in order to be eligible for additional retirement benefits from variable supplements funds did not improperly exclude officers who had retired as result of disabilities in violation of Human Rights Law (CLS Exec § 296(1)(a)), given different needs of service and disability retirees and unique benefits offered to each retirement classification. Gagliardo v Dinkins, 89 N.Y.2d 62, 651 N.Y.S.2d 368, 674 N.E.2d 298, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3161 (N.Y.), reh'g denied, 89 N.Y.2d 917, 653 N.Y.S.2d 921, 676 N.E.2d 503, 1996 N.Y. Wounded veteran who sought appointment as a police officer upon application therefor filed prior to his army induction, although found qualified for limited duties by the Civil Service Commission as to return from military service, had no vested rights under Military Law, Civil Service Law or Executive Law. Messina v Codd, 52 A.D.2d 784, 383 N.Y.S.2d 321, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12566 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1976).

Fact that veteran with physical limitation comparable to that of petitioner held position of patrolman did not support charge of discrimination in denial of petitioner's application inasmuch as the patrolman was a member of the department prior to his induction into the armed services, and petitioner sought appointment upon application filed prior to his army induction. Messina v Codd, 52 A.D.2d 784, 383 N.Y.S.2d 321, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12566 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1976).

Rejection of applicant for position with state police on basis of conclusion that applicant is physically unfit to become member of state police is not unlawful discriminatory practice based on disability where applicant is on accidental disability retirement status from employment with state parkway police. Kash v New York State Executive Dept., Div. of Human Rights, 115 A.D.2d 928, 496 N.Y.S.2d 823, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 55287 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1985).

Statistical probability of future disability is properly considered in determining qualification for employment as police officer; accordingly, applicant for employment as police officer may be denied employment on basis of conclusion that there is statistically higher than normal probability that sudden movement involved in police service will aggravate applicant's presently asymptomatic disability of spondylolisthesis. In re State Div. In re State Di v of Human Rights ex rel. Granelle, 118 A.D.2d 3, 504 N.Y.S.2d 92, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 53584 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1986), rev'd, 70 N.Y.2d 100, 517 N.Y.S.2d 715, 510 N.E.2d 799, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 16800 (N.Y. 1987).

Petitioner who was denied appointment as police officer on basis of his elevated blood pressure was not entitled to protection under CLS Exec § 296 since Department of Civil Service sufficiently demonstrated that petitioner's elevated blood pressure could prevent him from performing activities involved in being police officer. Seitz v Suffolk County Dep't of Civil Service, 146 A.D.2d 631, 536 N.Y.S.2d 536, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 429 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Determination which found petitioner ineligible for appointment as county police officer should have been confirmed–petitioner suffers from elevated blood pressure so that he does not satisfy standard for physical fitness established by Municipal Police Training Council (MPTC) (9 NYCRR 6000.3); petitioner's blood pressure was taken approximately 15 times, and almost every time readings were over acceptable level; regulations promulgated by MPTC also provide that candidate who otherwise is not qualified because of high blood pressure can be found qualified if he presents evidence from cardiologist that hypertension and medication used to control it will not interfere with performance of physical duties of police officer (9 NYCRR 6000.3 [j] [4]); although petitioner did submit letter from cardiologist, it nowhere indicated that petitioner's high blood pressure would not interfere with his duties as police officer–contention that County Department of Civil Service violated Executive Law § 296 in denying petitioner appointment by reason of "disability" is without merit; it was sufficiently demonstrated that petitioner's elevated blood pressure condition may prevent him from performing in reasonable manner activities involved in job. Connolly v Suffolk County Dep't of Civil Service, 150 A.D.2d 373, 540 N.Y.S.2d 821, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5632 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 611, 546 N.Y.S.2d 555, 545 N.E.2d 869, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 2843 (N.Y. 1989).

Department of civil service did not violate CLS Exec § 296 in denying appointment as police officer to petitioner on basis of disability because of his high blood pressure where it was demonstrated that condition would prevent petitioner from performing duties of police officer in reasonable manner. Connolly v Suffolk County Dep't of Civil Service, 150 A.D.2d 373, 540 N.Y.S.2d 821, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5632 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 611, 546 N.Y.S.2d 555, 545 N.E.2d 869, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 2843 (N.Y. 1989).

New York State Department of Civil Service did not violate CLS Exec § 296, which makes it unlawful discriminatory practice to reject job applicant due to disability not affecting ability to perform duties of position sought, when it removed applicant's name from eligible list for position of correction officer after it was discovered that he suffered from high blood pressure and lesion on right lung, where uncontradicted testimony of one of applicant's witnesses established that his medical conditions would prevent him from performing duties of correction officer. Tyson v New York State Dep't of Correctional Serv., 198 A.D.2d 408, 604 N.Y.S.2d 130, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10917 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1993).

Conclusive finding by police department doctors that a police candidate, who was born with a congenital deformity of his lower right leg which necessitated surgery and the use of a prosthetic limb, was incapable of performing the essential duties of a police officer meant that there was no violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a) inasmuch as he was not disabled within the meaning of N.Y. Exec. Law § 292(21). O'Sullivan v City of New York, 38 A.D.3d 467, 834 N.Y.S.2d 30, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3903 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 9 N.Y.3d 804, 840 N.Y.S.2d 764, 872 N.E.2d 877, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 1756 (N.Y. 2007).

Retaliation claim pursuant to Exec § 296 is denied summarily, even though town police officer maintains he was treated differently and unfairly upon his return to work after suffering 2 seizures, where police department continues to employ officer and offers reasonable explanations for its treatment of him, because alleged continuing retaliatory actions appear to be nothing more than decisions concerning work assignments, administrative matters, and departmental procedures. Treglia v Town of Manlius, 181 F. Supp. 2d 83, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18398 (N.D.N.Y. 2001), vacated, 313 F.3d 713, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 26120 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2002).

17. Discrimination based on marital status

In a proceeding by a married female job applicant who alleged that she had been discriminated against because of her marital status, the trial court erred in affirming a determination ordering an employer to hire the applicant where it was obvious that the applicant was denied employment not because of her marital status but, rather, because of the additional fact that her husband already worked for the employer; such a refusal to hire is lawful and does not constitute discrimination based upon marital status. Campbell Plastics, Inc. v New York State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 81 A.D.2d 991, 440 N.Y.S.2d 73, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11735 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981).

18. Discrimination based on arrest and/or conviction of crime

Denial by the department of education (DOE) of an application for a security clearance was improper because the "closer review" purportedly applied by the DOE amounted to nothing more than a pro forma denial of the application on the basis of the applicant's prior criminal conviction and such a denial, without consideration of the N.Y. Correct. Law § 753 factors, was precisely what the statute prohibited and was arbitrary and capricious; among the considerations listed in an affidavit of the DOE's director for employee relations was that the applicant did not provide references from prior employers, but the interview notice did not state that the applicant should provide such references, and her interviewer did not ask her for those references. Further, other than her personal statement, the DOE did not consider the documentation that the applicant submitted. Matter of Acosta v New York City Dept. of Educ., 16 N.Y.3d 309, 921 N.Y.S.2d 633, 946 N.E.2d 731, 2011 N.Y. LEXIS 437 (N.Y. 2011).

A petition to annul a decision denying an application for a civil service position as a traffic enforcement agent, which decision was based solely on the ground that the applicant intentionally made a false statement of a material fact on the application by denying that he had ever been convicted of a crime, was properly dismissed where there was no evidence to indicate that the applicant was penalized because of his prior criminal record in contravention of either Exec Law § 296 or Correc Law § 752. Stewart v Civil Service Com., 84 A.D.2d 491, 446 N.Y.S.2d 948, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14946 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1982).

Where, during the course of an interview for a civil service position, complainant admitted to the personnel committee of the state agency involved that he had been arrested for petty larceny and had received an adjournment in contemplation of dismissal, Exec Law § 296(16), making it an unlawful discriminatory practice to inquire about an arrest of an individual not then pending which was terminated in favor of the individual, did not preclude the interviewer from requesting that the complainant verify the disposition of the charges against him, since the inquiry was in good faith and for the complainant's protection and since the legislature never intended employers to be foreclosed from requiring verification of the disposition of criminal charges that had been legally and properly discovered. New York State Dep't of Mental Hygiene v State Div. of Human Rights, 103 A.D.2d 546, 481 N.Y.S.2d 371, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19972 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1984), aff'd, 66 N.Y.2d 752, 497 N.Y.S.2d 361, 488 N.E.2d 107, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 17645 (N.Y. 1985).

Questioning of an applicant for a civil service position during an interview by a state agency's personnel committee about his arrest for petty larceny, for which complainant reportedly received an adjournment in contemplation of dismissal, did not constitute a violation of Exec Law § 296(16), making it an unlawful discriminatory practice to inquire about or to act upon adversely to the individual involved any arrest not then pending which was terminated in favor of the individual, where the initial interview of the complainant took place prior to the effective date of the statute, and the provisions of the Human Rights Law may not be applied retroactively. New York State Dep't of Mental Hygiene v State Div. of Human Rights, 103 A.D.2d 546, 481 N.Y.S.2d 371, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19972 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1984), aff'd, 66 N.Y.2d 752, 497 N.Y.S.2d 361, 488 N.E.2d 107, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 17645 (N.Y. 1985).

Although State Division of Human Rights correctly determined that sheriff's department discriminated against applicant by inquiring about prior arrests on application for employment in 1981, court would reverse those portions of division's order directing sheriff to hire applicant as mounted patrolmen and awarding back pay; inasmuch as applicant was never sworn in, or paid, as mounted patrolman, division lacked power to direct sheriff, public employer, to hire applicant since such direction would in effect deprive appointing authority of power of selection. Sheriff's Dep't v State Div. of Human Rights, 129 A.D.2d 789, 514 N.Y.S.2d 779, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 45479 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Office of Court Administration was entitled to reject employment application of prospective court officer who had once been arrested for criminal impersonation of public servant, notwithstanding provisions of CLS Exec § 296(16) prohibiting inquiry or adverse action based on arrest or criminal accusation which is terminated favorably to accused; rejection was authorized under language of § 296(16) even before 1985 amendment excluded peace officers from its terms. Bellacosa v White, 145 A.D.2d 342, 535 N.Y.S.2d 706, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13281 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1988).

Inmate or former inmate is entitled to have institutional record free from improperly obtained findings of disciplinary rule violations since his prison disciplinary record might be considered by future employer in reaching employment decision. Grant v Senkowski, 146 A.D.2d 948, 537 N.Y.S.2d 323, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 514 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Although it has since been amended to permit inquiry regarding any arrest or criminal accusation not then pending, which was terminated in favor of applicant for employment as police officer or peace officer, Executive Law § 296 (16), in effect at time, prohibited such inquiry and there is substantial evidence in record that complainant's arrest record and petitioner's misconception that he had been convicted were primary reasons for petitioner's nonselection of complainant for position of correction officer; however, civil service eligibility list in question expired almost one year prior to respondent's determination–civil service applicant cannot be hired from expired list unless applicant commences judicial or administrative proceeding prior to expiration of list and also challenges list itself; complainant here has made no such challenge; there is also insufficient basis for respondent's award of compensatory damages for hurt, humiliation and mental anguish, since there was no evidence supporting complainant's claims of mental anguish other than his statement he was upset; cease and desist order should be annulled in light of 1985 amendment to section 296 (16), which permits such inquiry of applicants for employment as peace officers, which includes correction officers. New York City Dep't of Correction v White, 163 A.D.2d 250, 558 N.Y.S.2d 71, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8581 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1990).

Court reversed human rights commission's finding of lack of probable cause to believe that corrections department refused to employ petitioner because of his Maryland arrest record, in violation of NYC Admin Code § 107(11), where (1) Maryland court documents indicated that criminal proceeding against petitioner was disposed of in manner analogous to New York's adjournment in contemplation of dismissal, which was consistent with questionnaire on which petitioner forthrightly disclosed that he had been arrested in Maryland but charge did not result in "conviction," and (2) fact that department failed to appreciate essential truth of petitioner's representations because it incorrectly interpreted Maryland court documents did not excuse its resulting unlawful discrimination. Johnson v New York City Comm'n of Human Rights, 270 A.D.2d 186, 706 N.Y.S.2d 18, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3297 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

CLS Executive Law § 296(16) prohibits corporate entity from denying employment to applicant on basis of arrest which is followed by termination of criminal action or proceeding in favor of such individual; section does not prevent employer from acting adversely with respect to employee of such actions are motivated by bona fide business reasons and otherwise proscribed by statute; employer does not violate section by decision not to reinstate employee which is motivated not by employee's arrest but rather by employer's own investigation which produced evidence that employee had misappropriated company funds. Salanger v U.S. Air, 611 F. Supp. 427, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21119 (N.D.N.Y. 1985).

Employment applicant's Exec § 296(15) and (16) claims against employer that withdrew conditional offer must fail, even though withdrawal was based upon discovery of applicant's past conviction for welfare fraud, because employer proffers nondiscriminatory reason that applicant lied on security data sheet, and vacated and dismissed conviction nevertheless could not be deemed criminal accusation terminated in applicant's favor. Obabueki v IBM, 137 F. Supp. 2d 320, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4092 (S.D.N.Y.), amended, 145 F. Supp. 2d 371, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8166 (S.D.N.Y. 2001).

Disgruntled applicant's Exec § 296(16) claim against potential employer must be dismissed, even though applicant argues offer of employment was withdrawn on basis of his prior conviction of welfare fraud that was vacated and dismissed pursuant to California statute, where dismissal under that statute applies to guilty plea convictions after specified period of probation has been served, because criminal proceedings against applicant were not "terminated in his favor" within meaning of CPL § 160.50. Obabueki v IBM, 145 F. Supp. 2d 371, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8166 (S.D.N.Y. 2001), aff'd, 319 F.3d 87, 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 1781 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2003).

Where a securities dealer denied a prospective employee broker supposed promised employment, allegedly because the broker had been (mistakenly) arrested for petit larceny, there could be no violation of Exec § 296, subd. 16 because 17 C.F.R. § 240.17a-3(a) required businesses such as the dealer to maintain arrest records among employee records, and thus the dealer's obtaining such records was excepted from coverage under the statute. Shapira v Charles Schwab & Co., 225 F. Supp. 2d 414, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18665 (S.D.N.Y. 2002).

19. National origin discrimination

The Division of Human Rights and the Human Rights Appeal Board properly exercised subject matter jurisdiction, pursuant to Exec Law §§ 296, 297-a, over a complaint by an applicant for a State Trooper position who had been disqualified by the State Police Division from its Hispanic-American/Spanish-surnamed minority hiring program, where the complaint effectively alleged that the State Police had discriminated against the applicant by refusing to treat him in the same manner that it treated others of Hispanic national origin or ancestry in considering him for employment, and where, though the Appeal Board specifically referred in its decision to an order by the United States District Court that had established guidelines for the State Police Division to follow in order to achieve a long-term goal of acquiring personnel comprised of women, blacks, and Spanish-surnamed Americans, there was uncontradicted documentary proof in the record, apart from the reference to the court order, to support the appeal board's conclusion that the applicant was of Hispanic origin, so that the appeal board did not base its decision solely on an interpretation of the Federal court order, and, therefore, did not exceed its jurisdiction. New York State Div. of State Police v McCall, 98 A.D.2d 921, 470 N.Y.S.2d 916, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 21243 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1983).

The State Division of Human Rights did not act arbitrarily or capriciously in dismissing a college faculty member's complaint alleging unlawful discriminatory practice based on national origin, where the investigation report confirmed that each allegation in the complaint had been thoroughly reviewed, that the faculty member had been given a full opportunity to present his case, and that there had been no discrimination against the faculty member, who had received regular promotions, had been granted a sabbatical leave during a past academic year, had been elected to a three-year term as chair person of the engineering department, and had apparently been promoted to the rank of full professor. Gajjar v Union College, 107 A.D.2d 917, 483 N.Y.S.2d 857, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49840 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1985).

Airline did not engage in unlawful discrimination based on its preemployment questions as to petitioners' national origin and gender where there was nothing to support conclusion that those questions, either expressly or intentionally, led to petitioners not being hired; rather, petitioners received good reviews from airline's interviewers and were not hired due to their failure to meet airline's weight guidelines or hiring eligibility deadline. Delta Air Lines v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 229 A.D.2d 132, 652 N.Y.S.2d 253, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12963 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996), app. dismissed, 90 N.Y.2d 882, 661 N.Y.S.2d 825, 684 N.E.2d 274, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 2331 (N.Y. 1997), aff'd, 91 N.Y.2d 65, 666 N.Y.S.2d 1004, 689 N.E.2d 898, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3710 (N.Y. 1997).

20. Racial discrimination

A determination that probable cause did not exist to credit the allegation of petitioner's complaint that he was not engaged as an airline flight steward because of his race and color was not arbitrary or capricious. Jeanpierre v Arbury, 4 N.Y.2d 238, 173 N.Y.S.2d 597, 149 N.E.2d 882, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1072 (N.Y. 1958).

City's decision not to hire the black complainant as an administrative aide at its convention center was not motivated by racial prejudice, where the record disclosed that the reason complainant was not hired was because, while his application was pending, he made unfounded remarks before the city council that no black had been appointed to a supervisory position at the convention center and that no black entertainer had been scheduled to appear at the facility; under the facts, there was no prima facie case of retaliatory discrimination in violation of the Executive Law. State Div. of Human Rights ex rel. Bradberry v Niagara Falls, 52 A.D.2d 1065, 384 N.Y.S.2d 326, 397 N.Y.S.2d 791, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12988 (N.Y. Inquiry as to race made by screening interviewer to employment applicant is not indirect expression of racial limitation where interviewer is black, interviewer finds complainant's job experience qualifying, and where out of 10 applicants interviewed, interviewer approves and passes along only applicant and one other for further interview by superior, screening manager, who finds applicant well qualified and who sends applicant's application and resume to other departments for consideration. Alexander's, Inc. v White, 115 A.D.2d 424, 496 N.Y.S.2d 227, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 54817 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1985).

Substantial evidence supported Division of Human Rights' determination that hospital refused to hire petitioner as surgeon based on legitimate nondiscriminatory criteria in that petitioner's many affiliations with other hospitals and demands of his research projects would conflict with his duties at hospital; moreover, statistical evidence, which showed that hospital hired many surgeons from minority groups, belied petitioner's claim that denial of his employment application was racially motivated. Davidson v Medical Associates of Woodhull, P. C., 132 A.D.2d 609, 517 N.Y.S.2d 769, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49145 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Supreme Court properly granted summary judgment to defendant company in action alleging racial discrimination in hiring where plaintiff's allegations merely showed that he submitted unspecified number of unsolicited applications to defendant seeking unspecified permanent position, and record supported defendant's contention that plaintiff had checkered job history and lacked verbal and technical skills, as well as professional demeanor, required even for entry level position. Stewart v International Business Machines Corp., 156 A.D.2d 128, 548 N.Y.S.2d 174, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15211 (N.Y. African-American woman did not prove that Niagara Frontier Transportation Authority unlawfully discriminated against her in denying her application for employment as Secretary to Transportation Superintendents where person who made hiring decision for that position also was African-American, and person hired had almost 20 years more experience than complainant and greater knowledge of computers. Niagara Frontier Transp. Auth. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 275 A.D.2d 922, 713 N.Y.S.2d 631, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9577 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000).

Niagara Frontier Transportation Authority unlawfully discriminated against African-American woman in denying her application for employment as Secretary to General Manager where she raised inference of discrimination by proving that she was better qualified candidate than person hired and that persons responsible for hiring were informed of race of applicants before hiring decision was made, and authority did not rebut presumption of discrimination by proving, through admissible evidence, legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for its decision. Niagara Frontier Transp. Auth. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 275 A.D.2d 922, 713 N.Y.S.2d 631, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9577 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000).

Assuming that actions by a doctor's former colleague could have been attributed to either the clinic or its principal, both former employers of the doctor, the doctor failed to allege that the colleague's actions and the principal hospital's practices, other than those concerning his pay, were related to his race; accordingly, the doctor did not demonstrate that any adverse employment actions occurred under circumstances raising the inference of unlawful discrimination. Pacheco v United Med. Assocs., P.C., 305 A.D.2d 711, 759 N.Y.S.2d 556, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4586 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

Trial court erred in dismissing two minority employees' discrimination causes of action under the State and City Human Rights Law because they were both members of a protected class, were well qualified for their respective positions, were adversely or differently treated, and sufficiently alleged discriminatory animus by the employer Matter of Local 621 v New York City Dept. of Transp., 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7981 (November 7, 2019).

Grant of summary judgment to defendants in an employment discrimination case was upheld because defendants were legally entitled to condition plaintiff's continued employment on his execution of the promissory note and its timely payment, the promissory note for reimbursement of the tuition expense was not unconscionable, and it was not procured by duress. Ellison v Chartis Claims, Inc., 178 A.D.3d 665, 115 N.Y.S.3d 53, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8747 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2019).

Termination of 8 temporary social welfare eligibility examiners —one Hispanic and 7 African-American—as result of their failing scores on competitive examinations was unlawful under CLS Exec Law § 296, where disparate impact of testing was readily apparent from results, and examinations tested only 13 of 49 skills identified by job analysis, because officials failed to offer credible evidence that examinations served legitimate business goal of fair competition in civil service employment Fickling v New York State Dep't of Civil Serv., 909 F. Supp. 185, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19235 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

County police department's cadet program is struck down as discriminatory hiring practice in violation of CLS Exec Law § 296, even though consent decree settling federal employment discrimination case was in place and program was designed to combat continuing underrepresentation of blacks and Hispanics in department, because program indisputably rejected white applicants based solely on color of their skin and was not narrowly tailored remedy. Hiller v County of Suffolk, 977 F. Supp. 202, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17534 (E.D.N.Y. 1997).

Employer articulated legitimate, nondiscriminatory reasons for applicant's rejection, sufficient to rebut applicant's prima facie case of racial discrimination under CLS Exec Law § 296 and federal law, where employer asserted that applicant was not hired initially because he could not work required hours, he did not want to be trained, he did not show legitimate commitment to working with severely disabled individuals, and he exhibited poor attitude and poor communication skills; employer asserted that applicant was not hired in response to second advertisement because he already had been rejected and it was hiring only female counselors at that time. Haywood v Heritage Christian Home, 977 F. Supp. 611, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14347 (W.D.N.Y. 1997).

Former host of a telemarketing television network claimed that the network violated Exec § 296 and New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107 by its of discrimination in hiring, i.e., token hiring, in New York; however, the act of being hired as a token in New York did not alone constitute an adverse employment action and could not be the basis of a claim of discrimination occurring in New York. Velez v QVC, Inc., 227 F. Supp. 2d 384, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18776 (E.D. Pa. 2002).

Defendant employer's and union's motions for summary judgment were denied because material issues of fact existed as to whether the employer's reason, that plaintiff employee violated a last chance agreement, was a pretext for discrimination and because issues of material fact existed as to whether the union was motivated by discriminatory animus when it failed to arbitrate the employee's grievance. Estate of Lee v ITT Std., 268 F. Supp. 2d 356, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7421 (W.D.N.Y. 2003).

City's use of written examinations to screen and rank applicants for entry-level firefighter positions constituted a pattern or practice of discriminating against black applicants in violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a) because the pass rates for white candidates were 89.9% and 97.2% while the pass rates for black applicants were 60.3% and 85.4%, black applicants were ranked an average of 630 or 974 places lower than white candidates, the calculated standard deviations ranged from 6.5 to 33.9 units, and the city failed to present evidence demonstrating that the applicants' proof was inaccurate or insignificant. United States v City of New York, 683 F. Supp. 2d 225, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2506 (E.D.N.Y. 2010), vacated, 717 F.3d 72, 2013 U.S. App. LEXIS 9671 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2013).

Although a city's use of written examinations to screen and rank applicants for entry-level firefighter positions constituted a pattern or practice of discriminating against black applicants in violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a), city officials were entitled to official immunity because their actions in setting and approving firefighter hiring policies were exercises of their discretionary functions and the exercise of their discretion was not conditioned on compliance with municipal procedures that were allegedly ignored. United States v City of New York, 683 F. Supp. 2d 225, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2506 (E.D.N.Y. 2010), vacated, 717 F.3d 72, 2013 U.S. App. LEXIS 9671 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2013).

City engaged in a prohibited employment practice that had a disparate impact on racial minorities by using non-validated written examinations to screen and rank black applicants for the job of entry-level firefighter. United States v City of New York, 683 F. Supp. 2d 225, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2506 (E.D.N.Y. 2010), vacated, 717 F.3d 72, 2013 U.S. App. LEXIS 9671 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2013).

No reasonable jury could have concluded that an employee met her burden of proving employment discrimination because (1) the employee made, at best, a weak prima facie case of discrimination because the employee's evidentiary showing rested almost entirely on the regional superintendent's comment that it was time for a minority to run a school; and (2) defendants, the New York City Department of Education and the superintendent, provided ample evidence that the successful candidate was chosen over the employee for the legitimate reason that defendants believed that she was better suited to help turn around a school in need of improvement. Wolf v N.Y. City Dep't of Educ., 708 F. Supp. 2d 327, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 37358 (S.D.N.Y. 2010), aff'd, 421 Fed. Appx. 8, 2011 U.S. App. LEXIS 8688 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2011).

Type of crediting and discrediting of evidence that defendants sought was not appropriate in the context of a motion under Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b); viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to plaintiff, plaintiff submitted evidence acceptable to a reasonable jury that defendants—directly or by aiding and abetting—terminated plaintiff and disciplined him more harshly than they would have otherwise because of animosity toward his interracial relationship. Matusick v Erie County Water Auth., 774 F. Supp. 2d 514, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20049 (W.D.N.Y. 2011), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 757 F.3d 31, 2014 U.S. App. LEXIS 3683 (2d Cir. 21. Religious discrimination

An employer failed to sustain its burden of proof in a proceeding before the State Division of Human Rights where it was shown that the employer's determination not to employ the complainant, a Seventh Day Adventist, was made solely on the basis of the judgment of its own officers and employees that accommodation of his sabbath problem was not feasible and that the employer did not make a good faith effort, through inquiry addressed to other employees or negotiation with the union, to seek accommodation, since section 296 (subd 10, par [c]) of the Executive Law proscribes discrimination in employment because of sabbath observance, but excepts from its proscription a private employer if the uniform application of terms and conditions of attendance to employees is essential to prevent undue economic hardship to the employer, and the employer has the burden of proof in any proceeding in which applicability of the proscription is in issue. Schweizer Aircraft Corp. v State Div. of Human Rights, 48 N.Y.2d 294, 422 N.Y.S.2d 656, 397 N.E.2d 1323, 1979 N.Y. LEXIS 2383 (N.Y. 1979).

A determination by the State Commission for Discrimination permitting a corporation to inquire into the religion of job applicants as a "bona fide occupational qualification" and, further authorizing the corporation to have applicants for employment fill out a visa application for travel in Saudi Arabia containing an inquiry into the applicant's religion, was annulled, since the determination, in effect, violated the 5th Amendment of the Constitution of the U. S. and ran counter to sound public policy of New York State and the U. S. American Jewish Congress v Carter, 23 Misc. 2d 446, 190 N.Y.S.2d 218, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3297 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1959), modified, 10 A.D.2d 833, 199 N.Y.S.2d 157 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1960).

22. Sex discrimination

In Article 78 proceeding to annul that portion of civil service exam for audio-visual technician which required candidate to lift a 25 pound dumbbell with one hand, and then lift a 20 pound dumbbell with the other, it was reversible error not to hold hearing on whether such test bore a reasonable relationship to job requirements, and whether such test adversely affected equal employment opportunity for women as a class. Sontag v Bronstein, 33 N.Y.2d 197, 351 N.Y.S.2d 389, 306 N.E.2d 405, 1973 N.Y. LEXIS 950 (N.Y. 1973).

Former airline flight attendants who were not hired by successor airline due to its use of weight standards in hiring decisions failed to establish that they were victims of sex discrimination because weight charts permitted male applicants of given height and age to weigh more than female applicants of same height and age, given real physiological differences between males and females; airline's standards recognized statistically established norms that males tend to weigh more than females of same height, and there was no disparate impact therefrom in that approximately 90 percent of its flight attendants were female. Delta Air Lines v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 91 N.Y.2d 65, 666 N.Y.S.2d 1004, 689 N.E.2d 898, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3710 (N.Y. 1997).

City department which had established height and weight requirements for lifeguards which excluded virtually all female applicants ordered to take steps to insure that any such standards bear proper and real relation to the job functions, although there was no evidence of intent to discriminate against females. State Div. of Human Rights ex rel. Callery v New York City Dep't of Parks & Recreation, 38 A.D.2d 25, 326 N.Y.S.2d 640, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2743 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1971).

In a proceeding against a county alleging unlawful discrimination on the basis of sex, the county was properly directed to place complainant's name on the list of eligibles for employment as a police officer where, when the administrative complaint was filed, the complainant's name appeared on the outstanding eligibility list and the complainant was within the age group eligible for appointment as an officer, where the county failed to prosecute an appeal from the administrative review board's affirmance of the original order directing reinstatement to the eligibility list, and where, due to the county's discriminatory practices and the necessity for administrative enforcement of the reinstatement order, the eligibility list expired before complainant's name could be placed thereon; where it is demonstrated that errors have rendered an eligibility list in derogation of the merit and fitness standards and candidates have demonstrated that they were aggrieved by those errors, the statutory durational period does not begin to run until the list is corrected, and Civ S Law § 58 does not provide an absolute bar to eligibility of persons over 29 in such circumstances. State Div. of Human Rights ex rel. Farella v County of Onondaga, 84 A.D.2d 931, 447 N.Y.S.2d 61, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16194 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1981).

A finding that a resort had unlawfully discriminated against a female applicant for employment as a cabana attendant and then denied a second application by her in retaliation for her filing a complaint with the State Division of Human Rights was supported by evidence, where the applicant's first complaint was settled when the resort agreed to consider her on an equal basis with other applicants, the resort then hired a private investigator to investigate the applicant and used the results of that investigation to deny her employment, and the resort had never before used a private investigator to investigate an applicant. Catalina Beach Club v State Div. of Human Rights, 95 A.D.2d 766, 463 N.Y.S.2d 244, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18674 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1983).

Complaint was sufficient to hold employer liable for sexual harassment under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a) where plaintiff alleged that (1) supervisor, over period of many months, repeatedly made offensive sexual remarks, inquired about her sexual preferences and touched her without permission, (2) supervisor used his authority over her to direct her attendance at out-of-town training program where he allegedly raped her, and (3) president of company impliedly tolerated such misbehavior by warning her that her job was at stake if she refused to be "more understanding" of supervisor. Espaillat v Breli Originals, 227 A.D.2d 266, 642 N.Y.S.2d 875, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5395 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

Airline did not engage in sex discrimination based on its use of weight standards in hiring flight attendants where there was no evidence that it intended to deprive one sex of equal opportunity or treatment, or that weight requirements were applied in discriminatory manner, and airline showed that approximately 90 percent of its flight attendants were female, thereby negating claim that weight charts were somehow utilized to discriminate against women. Delta Air Lines v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 229 A.D.2d 132, 652 N.Y.S.2d 253, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12963 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996), app. dismissed, 90 N.Y.2d 882, 661 N.Y.S.2d 825, 684 N.E.2d 274, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 2331 (N.Y. 1997), aff'd, 91 N.Y.2d 65, 666 N.Y.S.2d 1004, 689 N.E.2d 898, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3710 (N.Y. 1997).

Sex discrimination in selection of female over male applicant for position of Principal Clerk in Head's Clerk's office at women's correctional facility was not proved where (1) facility's Head Clerk and Deputy Superintendent, both of whom had interviewed applicants, testified convincingly that they were familiar with female applicant's work and found her to be the most desirable candidate because of her demonstrated ability, attitude, and initiative, (2) Deputy Superintendent further testified that he had been concerned about male applicant's attendance record, which left much to be desired, and (3) there was no evidence that interviewers' reasons did not represent true basis for their decision to choose female applicant. New York State Dep't of Correctional Servs. v State Div. of Human Rights, 238 A.D.2d 704, 656 N.Y.S.2d 78, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3750 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Clerk employed by correctional facility failed to prove that facility's Deputy Superintendent of Administration (Taylor) harassed or threatened him in retaliation for his having lodged discrimination complaint where (1) although Taylor apparently did not hesitate to make his unfavorable opinion of clerk known to others at facility, there was no evidence that this behavior was prompted by retaliatory motive, (2) Taylor, who was familiar with clerk's abysmal time and attendance record, stated that he simply did not like clerk, because of his belief that clerk had abused his sick time and manipulated system to his advantage, and because clerk had made remark that Taylor considered to be ethnic slur, and (3) Taylor's abrasive and contentious personality indicated that he did not single out clerk for hostile treatment and that altercations complained of were not related to clerk's filing of complaint. New York State Dep't of Correctional Servs. v State Div. of Human Rights, 238 A.D.2d 704, 656 N.Y.S.2d 78, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3750 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

A demand of a petitioner that the Municipal Police Training Council promulgate a rule, pursuant to subdivision 2 of section 840 of the Executive Law, reinstating a minimum height requirement for eligibility as a police officer is denied since it would violate the State Human Rights Law (Exec § 296) and the supremacy clause of the United States Constitution, as such a rule would conflict with title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Police Conference of New York, Inc. v Municipal Police Training Council, 96 Misc. 2d 315, 409 N.Y.S.2d 100, 1978 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2599 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1978), rev'd, 73 A.D.2d 712, 422 N.Y.S.2d 776, 1979 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14591 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1979).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. 3212 to defendants in a former employee's discrimination action pursuant to N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, because the employee failed to either plead or prove that she was a member of a particular protected class and she did not prove that she was terminated from her employment under circumstances giving rise to an inference of discrimination, and moreover, defendants sustained their burden of establishing their entitlement to judgment as a matter of law by demonstrating the absence of a prima facie case of discrimination under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, and that they had a facially valid, independent, and nondiscriminatory reason for the termination of employment. King v Brooklyn Sports Club, 305 A.D.2d 465, 759 N.Y.S.2d 339, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5413 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003).

For purposes of a sex discrimination claim by former legislative aides, an adverse employment action was not adequately pled because being moved laterally did not cause a change in wages or any less distinguished title. Burhans v State, 2015 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 9641 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. Jan. 7, 2015).

Correctional officer who filed suit challenging the correctional facility's same-gender special and suicide watch policy could not prevail because the same-gender special and suicide watch requirement qualified as a bona fide occupational qualification defense since gender discrimination in assignments to special and suicide watches was reasonably necessary to the normal operation of the correctional facilities. The New York State Division of Human Rights' application of the bona fide occupational qualification defense was not arbitrary and capricious or irrational. Malinowski v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 58 Misc. 3d 926, 67 N.Y.S.3d 382, 2016 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 5204 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2016), aff'd, 157 A.D.3d 1093, 66 N.Y.S.3d 650, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 192 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2018).

Employer's repeated threats to fire employee and her coworkers and replace them with "young and sexy" hires was sufficient to show "an environment that is hostile to a person because of her sex." Leopold v Baccarat, Inc., 174 F.3d 261, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 7672 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1999).

However benign mere use of word "sexy" might seem, its incorporation into threat of employment termination could reasonably be viewed as form of discriminatory intimidation. Leopold v Baccarat, Inc., 174 F.3d 261, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 7672 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1999).

Employee's contention that her supervisor threatened to give her poor performance review if she would not engage in sexual relationship with him was insufficient to state claim that she was subjected to quid pro quo sexual harassment under CLS Exec Law § 296, where employee neither submitted to alleged sexual advance nor was she denied tangible benefit because of her rejection. Ponticelli v Zurich Am. Ins. Group, 16 F. Supp. 2d 414, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13767 (S.D.N.Y. 1998).

New trial is denied on emotional damages provided that gender-discrimination plaintiff accepts remitted award of $20,000, where frustrated female basketball referee presented evidence of continuous policy barring women from employment as NBA referees but little evidence of her emotional suffering other than self-serving testimony that she felt ignored and that her "dreams and goals" were crushed, because jury's $750,000 award is unreasonable given dearth of evidence regarding extent of her emotional damages. Ortiz-Del Valle v NBA, 42 F. Supp. 2d 334, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4615 (S.D.N.Y.), app. dismissed, 190 F.3d 598, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 21019 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1999).

Gender discrimination claim of overweight female police officer applicant must fail, even though her suspicions were reasonably aroused when overweight men—one exceeding weight requirements by almost 90 pounds—were certified and appointed, because evidence revealed options for getting around weight requirement—passing stress test or getting designation of "lean body mass" from physician—were not purposely concealed from applicant because she was female. Jones v City of Mt. Vernon, 114 F. Supp. 2d 274, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14812 (S.D.N.Y. 2000).

Pursuant to Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., and New York Human Rights Law, in order to state a case for gender discrimination, among other things, a plaintiff must show that the circumstances support an inference of discrimination; a professor denied tenure failed to show how her employer college based its decision to deny tenure was based on gender when the decision was based largely on gender neutral comments from students. Byerly v Ithaca College, 290 F. Supp. 2d 301, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20090 (N.D.N.Y. 2003), aff'd, 113 Fed. Appx. 418, 2004 U.S. App. LEXIS 21484 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2004).

Because there was sufficient evidence upon which a fair-minded trier of fact could reasonably conclude that defendant sheriff's deputy actually participated in the conduct giving rise to a hostile work environment, under New York law, he was subject to personal liability. Pfeiffer v Lewis County, 308 F. Supp. 2d 88, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4126 (N.D.N.Y. 2004).

Where plaintiff sheriff's office employee contended that she and the other dispatcher/corrections officers were subjected to malicious comments about their appearance and condescending remarks about the employee and her office on a daily basis, although defendants' actions were not physically threatening, they could be considered offensive and humiliating, so there was sufficient evidence to satisfy the objective test, it also was clear that the subjective test was satisfied because, although the employee was not offended initially, there became a point in time when her feelings changed and she began to feel that the comments were malicious. Thus, there was sufficient evidence upon which a fair-minded trier of fact could reasonably conclude that the employee was subjected to a hostile work environment and defendants' motion for summary judgment on that count was denied. Pfeiffer v Lewis County, 308 F. Supp. 2d 88, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4126 (N.D.N.Y. 2004).

Coach's disparate impact gender discrimination claim under the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 290 et seq., failed because a school district's refusal to reappoint the coach as the varsity girls volleyball coach did not occur under circumstances giving rise to an inference of gender discrimination where the replacement coach was also female, and the same manager who declined to reappoint the coach was the person who hired her three years earlier. Stouter v Smithtown Cent. Sch. Dist., 687 F. Supp. 2d 224, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12279 (E.D.N.Y. 2010).

Employee alleged that the supervisor and the general manager both changed the qualifications for the position of kids klub supervisor, and that she complained of the supervisor's post-employment harassment and that the general manager and the services manager refused to take remedial measures. Accordingly, the employee pled facts sufficient to support a plausible hostile work environment claim for individual liability under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 against the supervisor and the services manager. Atkinson v New York State Olympic Reg'l Dev. Auth., 822 F. Supp. 2d 182, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 112796 (N.D.N.Y. 2011).

Because the employee's hostile work environment claim under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 persisted as against the general manager and the services manager, the employee pled facts sufficient to support a plausible claim that her supervisor's alleged unwelcome and offensive sexual behavior constituted aiding and abetting pursuant to N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(6), and thus, the supervisor's motion to dismiss the employee's discrimination and hostile work environment claim under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 was denied. Atkinson v New York State Olympic Reg'l Dev. Auth., 822 F. Supp. 2d 182, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 112796 (N.D.N.Y. 2011).

In this Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and New York State Human Rights Law action, the employer was granted summary judgment because the employee could not show that alleged hostile environment she experienced was related to her gender; the employee did not identify any sex-based comments or conduct by the managing director over the entire course of her employment. Bundschuh v Inn on the Lake Hudson Hotels, LLC, 914 F. Supp. 2d 395, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 158443 (W.D.N.Y. 2012).

C. Termination/Discharge from Employment

23. In general

Provisions of Human Rights Law barring employment discrimination would apply to one who was employed as at will, Flaherty employee by county sheriff, since such employee can lawfully be discharged for any reason or for no reason, but not for statutorily impermissible reason, even though such employee is not protected by Civil Service Law. State Div. of Human Rights ex rel. Cottongim v County of Onondaga Sheriff's Dep't, 71 N.Y.2d 623, 528 N.Y.S.2d 802, 524 N.E.2d 123, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 603 (N.Y. 1988).

CLS Exec § 296(13) does not apply to cancellation of employment contract or discharge of employee where alleged act of discrimination does not occur in course of organized boycott or blacklisting. Mehtani v New York Life Ins. Co., 145 A.D.2d 90, 537 N.Y.S.2d 800, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1552 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, app. dismissed, 74 N.Y.2d 835, 546 N.Y.S.2d 341, 545 N.E.2d 631, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 2897 (N.Y. 1989), app. denied, 85 N.Y.2d 806, 627 N.Y.S.2d 323, 650 N.E.2d 1325, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 1227 (N.Y. 1995).

In action for discriminatory termination of employment, spouse's action for loss of consortium was derivative and fell with dismissal of employee's causes of action. Mehtani v New York Life Ins. Co., 145 A.D.2d 90, 537 N.Y.S.2d 800, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1552 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, app. dismissed, 74 N.Y.2d 835, 546 N.Y.S.2d 341, 545 N.E.2d 631, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 2897 (N.Y. 1989), app. denied, 85 N.Y.2d 806, 627 N.Y.S.2d 323, 650 N.E.2d 1325, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 1227 (N.Y. 1995).

Cause of action concerning employer's alleged retaliatory conduct in response to employee's retention of legal counsel was not rendered unavailable by fact that employee had already been discharged at time when he retained counsel; there is no requirement that retaliatory conduct occur against current employee. Landwehr v Grey Advertising, 211 A.D.2d 583, 622 N.Y.S.2d 17, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 850 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1995).

Terminated employees' complaint alleging discrimination under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a) was properly dismissed where employees failed to allege that they were qualified for positions from which they were terminated. Stephenson v Hotel Emples. & Restaurant Emples. Union Local 100, 246 A.D.2d 457, 668 N.Y.S.2d 193, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 626 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Plaintiff could not meet her burden on employer's summary judgment motion in age discrimination case by simply refuting employer's articulated nondiscriminatory reasons for terminating her, and thus employer was entitled to summary judgment where plaintiff's professed evidence of discrimination lacked probative value. Hirschfeld v Institutional Investor, Inc., 260 A.D.2d 171, 688 N.Y.S.2d 31, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3610 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 814, 697 N.Y.S.2d 561, 719 N.E.2d 922, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 2166 (N.Y. 1999).

Summary judgment was properly granted to certain defendants in age discrimination case where plaintiff failed to demonstrate that they had control over her as an employee or were involved in decision to terminate her. Hirschfeld v Institutional Investor, Inc., 260 A.D.2d 171, 688 N.Y.S.2d 31, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3610 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 814, 697 N.Y.S.2d 561, 719 N.E.2d 922, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 2166 (N.Y. 1999).

Actions of plaintiff, chief operating officer and president of defendant corporation, in encouraging employee to bring her sexual harassment claim to company, and his subsequent statements relaying what he knew of claim, constituted "opposition" to practices forbidden by state and city human rights laws, and were therefore protected against retaliatory employment practices. Sorrentino v Bohbot Entertainment & Media, Inc., 265 A.D.2d 245, 697 N.Y.S.2d 263, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10875 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1999).

Employer was entitled to summary judgment dismissing allegation that plaintiffs were discharged because, as local residents hired in America rather than Pakistan-based employees, they were American rather than Pakistani citizens, because there is no legally cognizable discrimination cause of action based on citizenship. Sheikh v Habib Bank Ltd., 270 A.D.2d 107, 704 N.Y.S.2d 75, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2851 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

College history professor did not prove retaliatory discharge, even though her comments regarding "glass ceiling" for tenured female professors in history department could be protected activity under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a) and (e), where (1) there was no showing that comment caused discharge from her employment, which terminated at end of academic year by express terms of one-year, nonrenewable appointment, (2) she rejected offer of part-time adjunct position for ensuing academic year, and (3) even if she proved prima facie case of retaliatory discharge, college articulated legitimate, nondiscriminatory reasons for nonrenewal of her contract, and she did not show that those reasons were pretexts for discrimination. Grafe v Iona College, 281 A.D.2d 347, 722 N.Y.S.2d 162, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3138 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2001).

Substantial evidence supported decision by State Public Employment Relations Board that probationary teacher was not unlawfully terminated by school district because of her protected union activity where (1) sufficient reasons for termination were teacher's failure to follow instructions and proper school procedures and to adequately protect safety of student who fell down flight of stairs, and (2) no nexus was proved between teacher's union activity and decision to terminate her employment. Rockville Centre Teachers Ass'n v N.Y. State Pub. Empl. Rels. Bd., 281 A.D.2d 425, 721 N.Y.S.2d 112, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2130 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2001).

Plaintiff, who allegedly was discharged from defendant's employ for having extramarital affair with coworker, failed to state cause of action for any form of discrimination where (1) his claim of religious discrimination was irrelevantly based on his supervisor's religious beliefs rather than his own, (2) his claim of sexual orientation discrimination was based on pure speculation that he would not have been terminated had affair been homosexual rather than heterosexual, and (3) his female paramour, who was single, was also terminated, undermining any claim of discrimination based on sex or marital status. Hudson v Goldman Sachs & Co., 283 A.D.2d 246, 725 N.Y.S.2d 318, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5075 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2001).

Employee did not meet her burden of showing the termination of her employment was due to age, race, or gender discrimination because (1) her job was eliminated and she was not replaced, so she could not claim age discrimination, (2) her termination was part of a company-wide layoff of male and female employees of mixed races and ages, (3) the reduction in the employer's work force was due to a need to reduce expenses, (4) she did not show her job was like a retained position, so her termination raised no inference of discrimination, as she was not qualified for the retained position, (5) her questioning of the business judgment of the layoffs created no inference that her discharge was due to discrimination, (6) her employer had valid rather than pretextual reasons to retain another employee, and (7) the employee did not show the legitimate reasons the employer offered for her termination were a pretext for discrimination. Bailey v New York Westchester Sq. Med. Ctr., 38 A.D.3d 119, 829 N.Y.S.2d 30, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 72 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2007).

Because the employers proffered sufficient evidence that an employee was terminated for legitimate, nonretaliatory reasons, the employers were entitled to summary judgment in the employee's action for retaliation and discrimination under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code §§ 8-107(7), 8-130. Johnson v NYU Hosps. Ctr., 39 A.D.3d 817, 835 N.Y.S.2d 340, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5218 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 9 N.Y.3d 805, 842 N.Y.S.2d 781, 874 N.E.2d 748, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 2350 (N.Y. 2007).

Order denying petitioner reinstatement to her former position was affirmed because she was terminated for failing to maintain a minimum qualification of her employment, namely, continued eligibility for the Medicaid program and not the disposition of her pending criminal action, therefore, the disciplinary procedures mandated by the Civil Service Law and the collective bargaining agreement were not applicable. Matter of Crittenden v New York State Off. for People With Dev. Disabilities, 167 A.D.3d 1394, 92 N.Y.S.3d 159, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8906 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2018).

Employer's discharge of plaintiff, for cooperating in purely internal investigation conducted by employer, was not protected by anti-retaliation provision of CLS Exec § 296(1)(e), warranting dismissal of complaint under CLS CPLR § 3211(a)(7). Unotti v ABC, 180 Misc. 2d 543, 689 N.Y.S.2d 870, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 174 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1999), aff'd, 273 A.D.2d 68, 710 N.Y.S.2d 822, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6339 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

Employee who alleged she was discriminated against based on her gender and age, when the company that acquired her employer did not retain her, did not show a prima facie case under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a) or New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(1)(a) when she only proved she was a member of a protected class, by virtue of her gender and age, and that she was the subject of an adverse employment action, when she was not retained, so summary judgment dismissing her claims against her employer and against the company which acquired her employer should have been granted. Kent v Papert Cos., 309 A.D.2d 234, 764 N.Y.S.2d 675, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9571 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2003).

Fact that employee's supervisors told him that they could not guarantee his future at company did not establish threat sufficient to constitute duress for purposes of his claim that he accepted early retirement plan under duress such that he was constructively discharged for purposes of establishing prima facie case of race discrimination. Parker v Chrysler Corp., 929 F. Supp. 162, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8758 (S.D.N.Y. 1996), aff'd, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 6021 (2d Cir. N.Y. Mar. 27, 1997).

Employee who alleged that human resources manager terminated her and thereby discriminated against her stated claim under CLS Exec § 296 against manager in her individual capacity. Johnson v A.P. Prods., 934 F. Supp. 625, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11593 (S.D.N.Y. 1996).

Failure of employees to tender back severance payments made to them at time they signed termination agreements did not provide support for releases contained in termination agreements, where they allegedly were terminated as result of defendant employer's age discrimination. Clark v Buffalo Wire Works, Co., 3 F. Supp. 2d 366, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6240 (W.D.N.Y.), aff'd, 3 F. Supp. 2d 366, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6081 (W.D.N.Y. 1998).

Black female employee was not constructively discharged under Exec § 296, where employee believed that positions offered her were step down from previous position after she was not selected for new position, but her working conditions were not so intolerable that she was forced to resign. Gumbs v Hall, 51 F. Supp. 2d 275, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8409 (W.D.N.Y. 1999), aff'd, 205 F.3d 1323, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 8324 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2000).

Billing clerk cannot establish prima facie case for discriminatory discharge, where her department was completely disbanded following merger but company clearly sought to retain her as employee and specifically directed that new position be created for her offering same compensation and benefits, even though she did not like her new job description, because her disappointment did not make her continued employment so intolerable that reasonable person would have felt compelled to resign. Viera v Olsten/Kimberly Quality Care, 63 F. Supp. 2d 413, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13740 (S.D.N.Y. 1999).

Retaliation claim of laid off maintenance assistant is denied summarily, even though he alleges his layoff, ostensibly due to reduction in force, was really in retaliation for previous lawsuit filed against employer, where he was terminated more than 9 months after termination of his prior lawsuit, because that long time between suit and layoff does not raise inference of retaliation, and he has presented no other evidence linking 2 events. Fields v New York State Office of Mental Retardation & Developmental Disabilities, 88 F. Supp. 2d 4, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4025 (N.D.N.Y. 2000).

Trial court granted an employer's motion for summary judgment on an employee's claims alleging that it violated Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967, 29 U.S.C.S. § 621 et. seq., 42 U.S.C.S. §§ 1981, 1983, 1985, and 1986, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, and New York City, N.Y. Admin. Code §§ 8-107 through 8-131 when it decided not to promote him and subsequently terminated his employment because the employee did not refute non-discriminatory reasons which the employer offered for terminating his employment, namely, that his performance was not at the level expected of an experienced senior manager and that the company was losing money in his division. Monte v Ernst & Young LLP, 330 F. Supp. 2d 350, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15594 (S.D.N.Y. 2004), aff'd, 148 Fed. Appx. 43, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 19528 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2005).

Court rejected the employee's discrimination claims that the employer violated the New York State Human Rights Law (NYSHRL), N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., by terminating her employment in June 2003 as the employee offered no evidence that she could have performed the essential duties of her position as of that date or by denying her request for an indefinite period of leave at that time; however, there was a genuine issue of material fact as to whether the employer's failure to reinstate her in April 2003 was discriminatory and in violation of the statute. Roberts v Ground Handling, Inc., 499 F. Supp. 2d 340, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23441 (S.D.N.Y. 2007).

There is no legally cognizable cause of action under the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(a)(1) based on citizenship; accordingly, a former employee was unable to pursue a claim under the NYSHRL against his former employer for discrimination due to his citizenship, although such a claim might have been actionable under the New York City Human Rights Law, New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(1)(a). Gallo v Alitalia - Linee Aeree Italiane - Societa Per Azioni, 585 F. Supp. 2d 520, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 94195 (S.D.N.Y. 2008)).

Even assuming the former employee established a prima facie case of age, national origin, or disability discrimination, the employer established, through admissible evidence, that it terminated the employee because of her violation of the employer's policy against structuring banking transactions, in violation of the Bank Secrecy Act of 1970; contrary to the employee's contention, there was no evidence to indicate that the employer's stated reason for its action was false, nor was there any evidence to indicate that unlawful discrimination was the real reason for the employee's termination. Vinokur v Sovereign Bank, 701 F. Supp. 2d 276, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26854 (E.D.N.Y. 2010).

24. Age discrimination, generally

Prima facie case of age discrimination was sufficiently rebutted with nondiscriminatory, nonpretextual reasons for employee's termination where employer showed that termination was caused by downsizing of its operations throughout state based on severe economic downturns in its business, both employee's job and his entire job category were eliminated in all branch offices, and employee was not replaced by younger person or by anyone at all; employer was under no legal obligation to create new or additional job or to bump or displace lower classified employees as way to forestall or obviate unlawful age discrimination complaint. Laverack & Haines v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 88 N.Y.2d 734, 650 N.Y.S.2d 76, 673 N.E.2d 586, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3057 (N.Y. 1996).

Appellate division properly granted two employers' motions to set aside a jury verdict pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. 4404 because the employers claimed that the employees were fired for illicit union activities, and the employees did not meet their burden under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 that the employers' reasons for firing them were pretextual. Stephenson v Hotel Emples. & Rest. Emples. Union Local 100 of AFL-CIO, 6 N.Y.3d 265, 811 N.Y.S.2d 633, 844 N.E.2d 1155, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 157 (N.Y. 2006).

Age is not a "suspect" criterion but rather old age or senior citizenship merely marks stage that each of us will reach if we live out our normal span, and thus differences in treatment on basis of age will be sustained so long as classification rationally furthers a legitimate state objective. Campbell v Barraud, 58 A.D.2d 570, 394 N.Y.S.2d 909, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12589 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1977).

A plaintiff, who is suing for damages arising out of the allegedly wrongful termination of his employment, may not combine in the same cause of action an allegation that he was dismissed solely because of his age, in violation of section 296 (subd 1, par [a]) of the Executive Law, along with the inconsistent claim that his discharge was intended to deprive him of salary and commissions inasmuch as these additional allegations, while properly included in other causes of action, have no place in the age discrimination cause of action which is otherwise legally sufficient; accordingly, the age discrimination should be dismissed with leave to replead. Manley v Pandick Press, Inc., 72 A.D.2d 452, 424 N.Y.S.2d 902, 1980 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9702 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. dismissed, 49 N.Y.2d 1046, 1980 N.Y. LEXIS 5780 (N.Y. 1980).

Employees' pending class action alleging that they were unlawfully discharged based upon an employer's wilful program of age discrimination in violation of Exec L § 296, would not be superseded or pre-empted by an action subsequently commenced by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) in Federal District Court under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA) (US Code, Title 29, § 621 et seq.); the ADEA provision that "such action shall supersede any State action" pre-empts a duplicative State action by a State agency, but was not designed to supplant the rights of private individuals in continuing either State or Federal actions commenced prior to EEOC intervention. However, inasmuch as the Federal action commenced by the EEOC constituted the superior method of fairly and efficiently adjudicating the controversy, the State class action would be decertified, which determination in no way would affect the rights of individuals named in the State action to continue the same as individually named plaintiffs. Cannon v Equitable Life Assurance Soc., 87 A.D.2d 403, 451 N.Y.S.2d 817, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16566 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. dismissed, 57 N.Y.2d 956, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 4570 (N.Y. 1982).

Where plaintiff merely alleges that he was "born on December 28, 1930" and that his dismissal from employment was based on age discrimination in violation of CLS Exec Law § 296, and where defendants make factual assertions as to cause for plaintiff's dismissal and assert that 6 of 22 employees were plaintiff's age or older, unsubstantiated allegation of discrimination is insufficient to defeat motion for summary judgment. Hill v Westchester Aeronautical Corp., 112 A.D.2d 977, 492 N.Y.S.2d 789, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52191 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1985).

Former employee may maintain action under CLS Exec Law § 296 where complaint alleges that employer wrongfully denied access to grievance procedures for assertion of claim that age was the motivating factor for discharge. Oakley v St. Joseph's Hospital, 116 A.D.2d 911, 498 N.Y.S.2d 218, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 51705 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

Corporate officer who is personally charged with hiring and firing and who thus does more than carry out personnel decisions made by others may be sued individually for unlawful age discrimination. Lapidus v New York City Chapter of New York State Asso. for Retarded Children, Inc., 118 A.D.2d 122, 504 N.Y.S.2d 629, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 53980 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1986).

In age discrimination action, affidavit by officer of corporate employer claiming that employee was discharged because of economic slowdown and uncooperative behavior did not entitle employer to summary judgment but merely created factual issue as to existence of valid nondiscriminatory reason for discharging employee, especially in view of facts that employee had been employed for 13 years and had previously received high praise from affiant. Mayer v Manton Cork Corp., 126 A.D.2d 526, 510 N.Y.S.2d 649, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 41663 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Court should have granted employer's motion for summary judgment to dismiss age discrimination suit alleging that employee was forced to resign by employer's actions where (1) there was no direct or statistical evidence supporting inference of age discrimination, (2) employee had not lost any commissions from employer's actions, (3) employee's transfer did not involve change in title or reduce either his salary or benefits and, in fact, increased his earnings, and (4) employee was asked to stay after he gave notice of resignation; employee did not raise fact issue merely by showing that employer's decision to transfer him was arbitrary, since it must be demonstrated that employer would not have made that decision but for discriminatory motive, and employer sustained burden of articulating business rationale for transfer. Ioele v Alden Press, Inc., 145 A.D.2d 29, 536 N.Y.S.2d 1000, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 339 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1989).

Employer was entitled to summary judgment dismissing action alleging age discrimination and wrongful discharge since employer's "bumping rules" did not constitute limitation on right to discharge plaintiff, and plaintiff failed to refute affidavit of director of plant engineering and maintenance that plaintiff was not offered position for which he was presumptively eligible due to legitimate business reasons, including negative work attitude, reluctance to work on holidays, and reluctance to work in response to emergency call-ins. Tennant v Bristol Laboratories, Div. of Bristol-Myers Co., 155 A.D.2d 936, 547 N.Y.S.2d 757, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14795 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1989).

Court erred in invoking CLS CPLR § 3211(a)(4) to dismiss complaint alleging wrongful employment termination in violation of CLS Exec § 296 because of pendency of plaintiff's federal court action against defendant alleging violation of Age Discrimination in Employment Act, since causes of action were not same although they involved common issue of age discrimination. Walsh v Goldman Sachs & Co., 185 A.D.2d 748, 586 N.Y.S.2d 608, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9865 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1992).

Defendant was entitled to summary judgment in action alleging that plaintiff's termination was based on age discrimination since defendant established legitimate, independent and nondiscriminatory reasons to support decision to terminate plaintiff's employment where (1) plaintiff was employed in processing of customer complaints, (2) defendant showed that plaintiff's position was eliminated as result of decentralization of complaint handling process, which in turn was part of defendant's company-wide reduction in work force, (3) plaintiff claimed that it was common knowledge that older employees were being pressured to retire, although he had no first hand knowledge of any such pressure, and (4) defendant showed that average age of employees laid off was younger than average age of employees at facility prior to work force reductions. Manning v Norton Co., 189 A.D.2d 971, 592 N.Y.S.2d 154, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 92 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1993).

Employer was entitled to summary judgment in action alleging age discrimination where documentation and deposition testimony submitted by way of affirmation showed that 20 months after his hiring, and after receiving numerous consistently negative performance memos and corrective measures demanded by his superiors as to his accounts, plaintiff's employment as sales representative was ended based on his unsatisfactory job performance. Naturman v Crain Communications, 216 A.D.2d 150, 628 N.Y.S.2d 281, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6576 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1995).

Court properly dismissed age discrimination claims under CLS Exec § 296 alleging that employer's severance pay plan (following closure of its plant in 1982 due to economic hardship) discriminated against employees who qualified for retirement by requiring them to choose between severance pay and enhanced retirement benefits, as employer's severance plan constituted employee welfare benefit plan covered by Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) and thus it was governed by federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA), not state antidiscrimination laws; moreover, petitioners did not state grounds for relief under ADEA, as severance plan that denies severance pay to laid-off employees who are eligible for retirement does not violate ADEA. Brayley v Doehler-Jarvis Castings Div., 218 A.D.2d 393, 637 N.Y.S.2d 909, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1565 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1996).

To make out prima facie case of age discrimination in employment, plaintiff must show that he or she was member of protected class, prove that he or she was discharged, prove that he or she was qualified for position, and either show that he or she was replaced by younger person, produce direct evidence of discriminatory intent, or produce statistical evidence of discriminatory conduct. Bockino v Metropolitan Transp. Auth., 224 A.D.2d 471, 638 N.Y.S.2d 137, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1204 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 87 N.Y.2d 1017, 644 N.Y.S.2d 150, 666 N.E.2d 1064, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 1204 (N.Y. 1996), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 805, 646 N.Y.S.2d 985, 670 N.E.2d 226, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 1688 (N.Y. 1996).

To defeat employer's motion for summary judgment on employee's age discrimination claim, which was based on proffer of nondiscriminatory reason for terminating employee's employment, employee who had established prima facie case of age discrimination under CLS Exec § 296 was only required to identify disputed material issue of fact with respect to whether or not employer's articulated basis for dismissal was merely pretext for discriminatory action. People v Cooks, 230 A.D.2d 683, 646 N.Y.S.2d 803, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8718 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

Employee raised triable material issue of fact as to whether reason proffered by employer for his discharge was pretext for age discrimination where evidence showed that another employee disparaged him and other persons in his department over age of 50 by referring to them as "old men" and to his secretary as "old Marge," all 3 employees over age of 50 were fired for "poor job performance" during period employer allegedly started campaign to eliminate elderly employees, employer did not follow its own internal procedures in evaluating employee's performance, and employee had previously received high performance ratings. People v Cooks, 230 A.D.2d 683, 646 N.Y.S.2d 803, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8718 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

Employer's submission of affidavit alleging legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for terminating employee's employment did not entitle employer to summary judgment dismissing employee's age discrimination claim, since employer's affidavit merely dispelled inference created by employee's prima facie case of age discrimination under CLS Exec § 296, and shifted burden of proof back to employee to show that legitimate nondiscriminatory reasons offered by employer were not its true reasons, but were merely pretext for illegal age discrimination. Ferrante v American Lung Ass'n, 230 A.D.2d 685, 646 N.Y.S.2d 808, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8719 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996), aff'd, 90 N.Y.2d 623, 665 N.Y.S.2d 25, 687 N.E.2d 1308, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3218 (N.Y. 1997).

State Division of Human Rights' finding that there was no probable cause to believe that physician's employment with hospital was terminated because of age discrimination was supported by substantial evidence where reconsideration of physician's continued retention was justified by hospital's decision to switch emphasis of its radiology department's technology from research uses to clinical uses, as well as its need to adjust to budget constraints in manner that was consistent with its emerging clinical focus. Albert v Beth Israel Medical Ctr., 230 A.D.2d 695, 646 N.Y.S.2d 688, 646 N.Y.S.2d 695, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8726 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

Human Rights Specialist's investigation regarding physician's complaint alleging that his employment with hospital was terminated because of age discrimination afforded physician full and fair opportunity to rebut evidence submitted by hospital where Specialist made field trip to hospital and interviewed 2 other physicians, reviewed these interviews with physician in telephone conference, subsequently met with physician for approximately 2 ½ hours to discuss all documents in investigative file and allow physician to detail all factors he believed were relevant to his claim, made another field trip to hospital to review physician's personnel file, visited EEOC to review its files, and notified physician when her investigation was nearing completion and told him he should submit anything else he thought should be considered. Albert v Beth Israel Medical Ctr., 230 A.D.2d 695, 646 N.Y.S.2d 688, 646 N.Y.S.2d 695, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8726 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

Court would annul determination finding discrimination on basis of age where, at relevant times, there was controlling statutory authority to establish reasonable minimum and maximum age limits for firefighters (CLS Civ S former § 54). Buffalo Mun. Civil Serv. Comm'n v Mercado, 233 A.D.2d 877, 649 N.Y.S.2d 860, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13359 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1996).

Employer's motion, under CLS CPLR § 4404(a), to set aside jury verdict for plaintiff in action for retaliatory discharge was properly granted where (1) evidence supported jury's finding that employee's transfer was not in retaliation for her complaint of age and racial discrimination in denial of promotion, (2) employee's discrimination complaint preceded her termination by 2 years, during which she received salary increases, and (3) there was ample evidence of employee's insubordination after her transfer. Budzanoski v Pfizer, Inc., 245 A.D.2d 72, 664 N.Y.S.2d 796, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12836 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1997).

Terminated employee, whose complaint alleging discrimination under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a) had been dismissed, would be allowed to replead where he submitted affidavit alleging that he was 64 years old when discharged and that he was replaced by 25-year-old woman. Stephenson v Hotel Emples. & Restaurant Emples. Union Local 100, 246 A.D.2d 457, 668 N.Y.S.2d 193, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 626 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Cause of action for employment discrimination based on age was properly dismissed as against one of 2 corporate defendants where unrefuted documentary evidence, including W-2 forms, showed that plaintiff was employed by, and received salary only from, other corporate defendant. Brady v Helmsley, 246 A.D.2d 486, 668 N.Y.S.2d 198, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 705 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Cause of action for employment discrimination based on age was properly sustained as against individual defendant who directed plaintiff's hours of employment, ordered his termination and later reinstatement, and otherwise controlled his employment in business organization that defendant controlled where that organization had more than 4 employees, as required by CLS Exec § 292(5), as did defendant's household staff. Brady v Helmsley, 246 A.D.2d 486, 668 N.Y.S.2d 198, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 705 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Defendants were not entitled to summary judgment in employee's action for age discrimination where there were triable issues of fact as to whether employee was replaced by younger person and whether reason advanced by defendants was pretext. Dolgon v Standard Motor Prods., Inc., 251 A.D.2d 281, 671 N.Y.S.2d 1023, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6360 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

Employer was entitled to summary judgment dismissing action for age discrimination where deposition testimony of plaintiff's friend and coworker that their supervisor told him, one week after plaintiff was terminated, that supervisor was "going to try to get somebody younger to work that job" was merely isolated and ambiguous statement that did not directly state or imply that plaintiff was terminated for discriminatory reason, and coworker acknowledged that supervisor did not disclose to him reasons for plaintiff's termination. Almanzar v Collegiate Church Corp., 255 A.D.2d 230, 681 N.Y.S.2d 240, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12445 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Employer was entitled to directed verdict dismissing former employee's age discrimination action where (1) there was conflicting evidence as to whether employee, who was tailor in men's clothing store, was laid off or resigned to open his own business, (2) tailoring business was cyclical, (3) before union was voted out, layoffs were made during slow periods on basis of seniority, (4) after union was voted out, employees were given opportunity to avoid layoffs by taking one day off per week, (5) although employees voted for that plan, which affected all employees equally, plaintiff expressed his dissatisfaction with it, and (5) fact that newly hired tailor earned much less than plaintiff earned did not prove discrimination in light of evidence that new tailor was hired to fill in while plaintiff was on vacation and to replace another tailor who had health problems. Orlando v Rubersi Sales, Inc., 255 A.D.2d 802, 680 N.Y.S.2d 310, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12499 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Employer was entitled to summary judgment dismissing age discrimination claim by plaintiff who was discharged at age 56 for falsifying his time sheets, and was replaced by younger less-experienced person, where plaintiff merely denied falsifying his time sheets and challenged correctness of employer's decision to discharge him for cause. Kelderhouse v St. Cabrini Home, 259 A.D.2d 938, 686 N.Y.S.2d 914, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2534 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Substantial, if not overwhelming, evidence supported employer's failure to take proper measures to halt male employees' increasingly aggressive verbal and physical harassment of sole female employee in frozen food warehouse, constituting condonation of gender and age discrimination and hostile work environment, where (1) taunts included remarks that she was too old and slow, was taking man's job away, and was "biggest whore" in town, (2) physical abuse culminated in her being picked up by legs, turned upside down, carried in attempt to place her head-first in garbage receptacle, and slammed into door of men's room, which caused disabling injuries, and (3) although principal perpetrator was warned that he would be fired if he did not refrain from such conduct, he was merely suspended for 3 days and continued to taunt complainant after suspension. Grand Union Co. v Mercado, 263 A.D.2d 923, 694 N.Y.S.2d 524, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8451 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

At-will employee failed to demonstrate prima facie case of age discrimination where she failed to show that she had been replaced by younger person, produce direct evidence of discriminatory intent, or produce statistical evidence of discriminatory conduct. Kelly v Poughkeepsie Area Chamber of Commerce, 265 A.D.2d 307, 696 N.Y.S.2d 215, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9674 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

Plaintiff was not barred from alleging age discrimination because he was less than 30 years old. Shaffer v Victory Van Lines, Inc., 265 A.D.2d 543, 697 N.Y.S.2d 166, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10780 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

In action for age discrimination in violation of CLS Exec § 296, validity of release signed by plaintiff on termination of his employment was governed by principles of contract law rather than federal antidiscrimination law. Goode v Drew Bldg. Supply, Inc., 266 A.D.2d 925, 697 N.Y.S.2d 417, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11890 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1999).

Release signed by plaintiff on termination of his employment barred his action for age discrimination in violation of CLS Exec § 296 where (1) language employed released defendants from all causes of action arising out of or related to plaintiff's employment, including any arising from Executive Law, (2) plaintiff could not avoid unambiguous release on ground that he did not understand its terms or that he did not consult attorney before signing it, and (3) alleged breach of defendants' duty to provide outplacement services under terms of release did not invalidate release. Goode v Drew Bldg. Supply, Inc., 266 A.D.2d 925, 697 N.Y.S.2d 417, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11890 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1999).

Evidence supported employer's assertion that 54-year-old plaintiff was terminated for failure to meet employer's reasonable expectations, not due to age discrimination, where she was hired at age 53 to replace 40-year-old man who was discharged for unsatisfactory performance, she performed significantly worse than her predecessor, and she admittedly failed to meet sales quotas, lost or failed to regain key accounts, failed to comply with supervisor's reasonable recommendations for improving her sales performance, and created problems by informing coworker of supervisor's negative comments about him. Times Mirror Magazines, Inc. v Houghton, 268 A.D.2d 355, 702 N.Y.S.2d 265, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 715 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

Employer was entitled to summary judgment dismissing 58-year-old plaintiff's age discrimination claim where (1) it submitted evidence that its workforce reduction was justified for economic reasons, and that plaintiff's termination in particular was based on his relative worth in recent annual rating, which constituted legitimate and nondiscriminatory reasons for his termination, and (2) plaintiff failed to establish that employer's reasons were pretextual based on remarks made 4 years before his termination and subsequent to his termination by department manager who purportedly had "a problem with age," or by his assertion that he was replaced by 56-year-old employee. Hardy v GE, 270 A.D.2d 700, 705 N.Y.S.2d 97, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2921 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 765, 716 N.Y.S.2d 39, 739 N.E.2d 295, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 2886 (N.Y. 2000).

Judgment entered on jury verdict finding that employee was unlawfully discharged because of his age would not be disturbed, despite employer's claim that employee did not prove that employer's stated reasons for discharge were pretextual, where case was not tried on pretext theory but on mixed-motives theory, and thus when employee presented sufficient evidence to support inference of impermissible discrimination, burden shifted to employer to show that employment decision would have been reached in absence of impermissible motive. Allen v Domus Dev. Corp., 273 A.D.2d 891, 709 N.Y.S.2d 776, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6963 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000).

In Article 78 proceeding challenging county sheriff's termination of petitioner's employment as probationary correction officer in sheriff's department, petitioner's conclusory assertions were insufficient to prove prima facie case of age discrimination where he was hired at age 41 and terminated at age 42. Higgins v La Paglia, 281 A.D.2d 679, 722 N.Y.S.2d 592, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2009 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. dismissed, 96 N.Y.2d 854, 729 N.Y.S.2d 669, 754 N.E.2d 772, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1460 (N.Y. 2001).

Plaintiff's cause of action for age discrimination arose from injury he suffered when defendant employer discharged him, and thus his Age Discrimination in Employment Act claim was not barred on ground that his underlying Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) charge was not timely filed, where he filed EEOC charge within 300 days after he was discharged; although events asserted in connection with EEOC charge, that defendant repeatedly reassigned or terminated plaintiff's staff, occurred before 300-day limitation period, this prior conduct was mentioned in EEOC filing only for its relevance with respect to motive for discharge. Chefalas v Taylor Clark Architects, Inc., 283 A.D.2d 174, 724 N.Y.S.2d 153, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4334 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2001).

Park maintenance mechanic employed by county failed to establish prim facie case of age discrimination where termination of his employment was in response to budgetary constraints, his position was not filled by younger person but was left vacant for 2 years after his termination, and older person was hired when position was restored to county budget. Genesky v Local 1000, AFSCME, AFL-CIO, CSEA, 287 A.D.2d 594, 731 N.Y.S.2d 758, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9864 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2001).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment dismissal to an agency in a class action by former employees of the agency, alleging age discrimination based on disparate impact and disparate treatment, as the elimination of the employees' management positions due to a reduction in force was based on a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason pursuant to budget constraints; although the former employees established a prima facie case of discrimination, they were unable to prove that the legitimate reason proffered by the defendant was merely a pretext for discrimination. Mete v N.Y. State Office of Mental Retardation & Developmental Disabilities, 21 A.D.3d 288, 800 N.Y.S.2d 161, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8647 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2005).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to a medical company as to a workers' claim of age discrimination under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 and 29 U.S.C.S. § 621 et seq., as the company presented evidence that the worker's performance of his job as an anesthesiologist was not adequate and presented potential danger to patients, and the worker failed to show that this was a pretext for discrimination. Ospina v Susquehanna Anesthesia Affiliates, P.C., 23 A.D.3d 797, 803 N.Y.S.2d 751, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12427 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2005), app. denied, 6 N.Y.3d 705, 812 N.Y.S.2d 34, 845 N.E.2d 466, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 121 (N.Y. 2006).

Trial court erred in denying an employer's motion to dismiss as an employee's age discrimination claim was barred under the doctrine of collateral estoppel where a federal court had found that the employee's inadequate job performance provided the employer with a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for the adverse employment actions it took against the employee. Peterkin v Episcopal Social Servs. of N. Y., Inc., 24 A.D.3d 306, 808 N.Y.S.2d 31, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14673 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2005).

Plaintiff could only meet her initial burden of establishing a prima facie case of age discrimination if she could demonstrate that (1) she was in a protected age group, (2) she was terminated, and (3) she was sufficiently qualified to hold her position, and, if she did not produce direct or statistical evidence that would logically support an inference of discrimination, she had to show her position was subsequently filled by a younger person or held open for a younger person. Bailey v New York Westchester Sq. Med. Ctr., 38 A.D.3d 119, 829 N.Y.S.2d 30, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 72 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2007).

Employees' complaint stated a claim under the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, and the New York City Human Rights Law, Administrative Code of City of NY § 8-107 et seq., because the claims alleged related to nonacademic matters, and while administrative decisions of educational institutions involved the exercise of highly specialized professional judgment and these institutions were, for the most part, better suited to make relatively final decisions concerning wholly internal matters, the fact that an employer was an educational institution did not permit it to discriminate against its employees on the basis of age, or otherwise insulate it from liability for violations of the New York State Human Rights Law or the New York City Human Rights Law. Wander v St. John's Univ., 99 A.D.3d 891, 953 N.Y.S.2d 68, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6892 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2012).

Because all of the employer's employees were over the age of 18, the former employees could not show disparate impact; their complaint impermissibly attempted to create a subgroup within the protected class. Bohlke v GE, 293 A.D.2d 198, 742 N.Y.S.2d 131, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3598 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 98 N.Y.2d 693, 747 N.Y.S.2d 410, 775 N.E.2d 1289, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 1962 (N.Y. 2002).

Where the employee alleged that the manager unlawfully discriminated against the employee by terminating the employee's employment based on age, the trial court properly granted summary judgment dismissing the complaint against the manager, as a claim of discrimination did not lie against a corporate employee where the corporate employee was not shown to have any ownership interest or any power to do more than carry out personnel decisions made by others. Layaou v Xerox Corp., 298 A.D.2d 921, 748 N.Y.S.2d 85, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9087 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2002).

Trial court properly denied defendants' summary judgment motion pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. 3212 in an age discrimination action under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296; a former employee rebutted a valid nondiscriminatory reason for his termination presented by defendants and created a factual issue for trial. Listemann v Philips Components, 13 A.D.3d 494, 787 N.Y.S.2d 354, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15584 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2004).

Trial court erred in dismissing a teacher's claims of age discrimination and breach of a duty of fair representation against a school district and a union, as the discrimination claim, even if met the standards of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, was abandoned, and the claim for breach of a duty of fair representation by the union was time barred pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. 217(2)(a), as the teacher failed to bring the action within four months of the district's action of refusing to rescind the teacher's retirement after a new collective bargaining agreement was implemented, and after the union failed to file a grievance. Blumberg v Patchogue-Medford Union Free School Dist., 18 A.D.3d 486, 795 N.Y.S.2d 81, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5049 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2005).

In this NYCHRL and NYSHRL action, because the employee failed to provide even one statement indicative of age discrimination, the employee's attempt to correlate age discrimination and her termination were not supported by the facts as alleged. Palmer v Cook, 65 Misc. 3d 374, 108 N.Y.S.3d 297, 2019 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4283 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), dismissed, in part, 64 Misc. 3d 1222(A), 117 N.Y.S.3d 469, 2019 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4286 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2019), dismissed, in part, 64 Misc. 3d 1222(A), 117 N.Y.S.3d 469, 2019 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4301 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2019).

Evidence supported jury's conclusion that age was motivating factor in employer's decision to fire 48-year-old salesman and not transfer him where employer's own witness testified that its sales force was getting too old, salesman's layoff helped decrease average age of sales force, internal memorandum recommending layoff listed salesman's age and years of service, position which salesman filled on part-time basis was left unfilled until 26-year-old salesman could fill it, and employer's performance evaluations had category of employees known as "young tigers" from which older employees were necessarily excluded. Tyler v Bethlehem Steel Corp., 958 F.2d 1176, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 4161 (2d Cir. N.Y.), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 826, 113 S. Ct. 82, 121 L. Ed. 2d 46, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 5704 (U.S. 1992).

Terminated sales representative's age discrimination claim under CLS Exec Law § 296 must be denied summarily, where she was hired at age 39, fired at age 43, and replaced by younger person, because prima facie case here is extremely weak and support consisting of one alleged statement by district manager to pharmacist that company was looking for "young and energetic" sales representative to take control of territory is insufficient to defeat summary judgment motion of former employer. Melnyk v Adria Labs., Div. of Erbamont, Inc., 799 F. Supp. 301, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10584 (W.D.N.Y. 1992).

Summary judgment for employer in employee's age discrimination action is denied, where former officer stated that employer wanted to focus more on youth in structure of company, other management testified that age was considered in determining which employees were to be laid off, and majority of laid-off employees were over 40, because employee has presented evidence to show that employer's reasons for discharging him, i.e., reduction in force brought about by company restructuring and his lack of qualifications for job, were pretextual. Babcock v CAE-Link Corp., 878 F. Supp. 377, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7860 (N.D.N.Y. 1995).

Terminated vice-president's CLS Exec Law § 296 age discrimination claim survives summary judgment, where record creates material issue of fact as to credibility of restaurant corporation's firing of plaintiff for conflict of interest more than year after he extricated himself from interest in sandwich shop, because he also presents several statements allegedly made by corporation executives indicating "age bias" and examples of other employees being replaced by younger workers. Eymer v Ground Round, 913 F. Supp. 693, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1752 (N.D.N.Y. 1996).

Jury award in employment discrimination will be reviewed for excessiveness under CLS Exec Law §§ 296-298, where plaintiff won verdict under both that law and federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADA), and where although jury found that plaintiff had been demoted for discriminatory reasons, his damages were attributable not to any loss in compensation but rather to fact that he suffered physically and emotionally, because plaintiff is not entitled to damages for pain and suffering under ADA and jury award was therefore necessarily rendered pursuant to state law. Shea v Icelandair, 925 F. Supp. 1014, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5530 (S.D.N.Y. 1996).

Airline Deregulation Act (49 USCS § 41713(b)(1)) preempted pilots' age discrimination claims under CLS Exec § 296 and NYC Admin Code §§ 8-107(1)(a) and (c) and 8-107(17). Abdu-Brisson v Delta Air Lines, Inc., 927 F. Supp. 109, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6844 (S.D.N.Y. 1996), rev'd, 128 F.3d 77, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 28555 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1997).

Plaintiff failed to prove that employer's legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for discharging him (payroll reduction) was pretext for age discrimination where ageist statements that created inference of discrimination were mostly made by supervisors not involved in discharge decision, plaintiff was not replaced by younger employee, and statistics indicated increase in number of employees over age 40. Boyle v McCann-Erickson, Inc., 949 F. Supp. 1095, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 43 (S.D.N.Y. 1997).

Defendant employer that terminated age discrimination plaintiff as part of reduction in force, allegedly due to his performance and lack of experience in his area, failed to offer legitimate nondiscriminatory reason under Human Rights Law where branch in which plaintiff worked was not closed, plaintiff's position was not eliminated, he was only branch manager of 19 to be fired, he was given good performance reviews prior to termination, and he had 6 years of experience in his area. Tanzini v Marine Midland Bank, N.A., 952 F. Supp. 937, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 933 (N.D.N.Y. 1997).

Plaintiff's allegation that he was performing his job satisfactorily, and that defendants never mentioned any deficiencies until after his termination, was not in itself probative of age discrimination, although it might tend to put at issue what real reason for termination actually was. Thomson v Saatchi & Saatchi Holdings, 958 F. Supp. 808, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4300 (W.D.N.Y. 1997), aff'd, 159 F.3d 1348, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 32113 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1998).

Plaintiff, who was hired at age 52 and terminated 4 years later, failed to come forward with any evidence that defendant employer's legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for termination (his poor performance during financially troubled times) was pretext for age discrimination, where he relied solely on facts that he was replaced by younger person, that 4 other employees who were all more than 40 years old and earning more than $70,000 were terminated and may have been replaced by younger persons, and that he was never notified of his performance deficiencies. Strohmeyer v International Bhd. of Painters & Allied Trades, 989 F. Supp. 455, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21172 (W.D.N.Y. 1997), aff'd, 164 F.3d 619, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 35691 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1998).

Painter's age discrimination claim must fail, even though he makes much of fact that 5 older employees terminated in December 1994 were making in excess of $70,000 and may have been replaced by younger, lower-paid individuals, because mere fact that age may have some correlation with salary does not mean that employer's termination of high-salaried, nonproductive employees is indicative of age discrimination. Strohmeyer v International Bhd. of Painters & Allied Trades, 989 F. Supp. 455, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21172 (W.D.N.Y. 1997), aff'd, 164 F.3d 619, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 35691 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1998).

Town comptroller stated age discrimination claim on basis that he was 51 years old at expiration of his term and his replacement was 20 years his junior. Stanley v Cooper, 996 F. Supp. 316, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3037 (S.D.N.Y. 1998).

Age discrimination claims of newspaper employees laid off in reduction-in-force are denied summarily, where recession necessitating reductions is well-documented, and various statistics quantify decrease in percentage of workers over 40 at only 4 to 6 percent, because testimony by employees as to their personal beliefs—that their qualifications were superior and that layoffs were age-based since certain replacement workers were younger—is insufficient to raise issue of fact as to pretext. O'Sullivan v New York Times, 37 F. Supp. 2d 307, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3011 (S.D.N.Y. 1999).

Former employer's proffered reason for terminating older employee rather than younger employee, namely that employer was making extensive down-sizing and younger employee was ranked higher than older employee, was legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason and not pretext for age discrimination claim under Exec § 296(3-a)(a), even though younger employee was later transferred, director commented that younger employee may have been ranked too high, and manager of older employee commented that his termination was unfair. Brink v Union Carbide Corp., 41 F. Supp. 2d 406, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1732 (S.D.N.Y. 1999), aff'd, 210 F.3d 354, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 13480 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2000).

Under Exec § 296, company's termination of 43-year-old supervisor for harassment of employee who reported environmental concern was not pretext for age discrimination, even if state unemployment commission held that supervisor's conduct did not "rise to level of misconduct under law," where all persons involved in incident were terminated under company's "no retaliation policy," which was instituted after company had been subject of criminal proceedings for environmental crimes. Connell v Consolidated Edison Co. of N.Y., Inc., 109 F. Supp. 2d 202, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11727 (S.D.N.Y. 2000).

Under Exec § 296(1)(a), waiver of state and city age discrimination claims by executive was knowing and voluntary, where waiver was set forth in clear language, executive was competent to understand and enter into waiver, and executive consulted counsel before executing waiver. Sheridan v McGraw-Hill Cos., 129 F. Supp. 2d 633, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 752 (S.D.N.Y.), aff'd, 24 Fed. Appx. 64, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 25197 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2001).

Employer did not discriminate against 52-year-old employee due to age in violation of Exec § 296 and federal law when he was replaced by employee 2 years older, who had been hired several months before, after complaining employee allegedly was wrongfully terminated. Carr v WestLB Admin., Inc., 171 F. Supp. 2d 302, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17491 (S.D.N.Y. 2001).

In an action in which television writers filed suit against various employers and agencies, alleging an industry-wide pattern or practice of age discrimination in violation of the Age Discrimination Employment Act, California's Fair Employment and Housing Act, and New York State's Human Rights Law, as well as the Labor Management Relations Act, the writers' claims of aiding and abetting must be dismissed for two reasons: (1) the writers had not adequately pled a claim of discrimination against any one particular defendant; and (2) the writers failed adequately to allege that any specific defendant "substantially assisted" any other specific defendant in discriminatory hiring. Wynn v NBC, 234 F. Supp. 2d 1067, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25893 (C.D. Cal. 2002), dismissed, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28774 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 6, 2002).

In a former employee's action against her former employer alleging age discrimination in violation of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967, 29 U.S.C.S. § 621 et seq., and N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 following her termination, the employer was granted summary judgment where, regarding the employee's job search assignments claim, the employee's supervisor's assignment decisions did not constitute an adverse employment action because the employee failed to offer evidence that the change in her job search assignments affected her income or income potential, the employer's explanation that it did not promote the employee because she lacked management skills and leadership ability was legitimate and non-discriminatory, and the employee failed to show that she was qualified for the promotion and failed to produce evidence to show that the employer's asserted reasons were pretextual, and the employer's explanation that it terminated the employee due to her unprofessional behavior was legitimate and non-discriminatory, and the employee failed to offer any evidence that her termination was retaliatory or that she was terminated because of her age. Newsom-Lang v Warren Int'l, Inc., 249 F. Supp. 2d 292, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2993 (S.D.N.Y.), aff'd, 80 Fed. Appx. 124, 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 22732 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2003).

Where an employee who was discharged following a merger failed to offer evidence that the persons who made the decision to discharge the employee were aware that the employee was 61 years old, the employee was unable to establish a prima facie case of age discrimination; allegations that the employee's age was well known in the market and industry and appeared in the personnel file did not establish that the decision-makers knew the employee's age. Woodman v WWOR-TV, Inc., 293 F. Supp. 2d 381, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21057 (S.D.N.Y. 2003), aff'd, 411 F.3d 69, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 11060 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2005).

In an action in which a former employee filed suit against his former employer alleging discrimination based on age and national origin in violation of the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 (2003), and the New York City Human Rights Law, New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code §§ 8-107 and 8-502 et seq., the employer was granted summary judgment where the employee had not identified any facts that gave rise to an inference of discrimination; because there was no evidence in the record to suggest that coworkers engaged in conduct that was of comparable seriousness to the employee's, the employee had not shown that the coworkers were similarly situated. Milani v IBM, 322 F. Supp. 2d 434, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11025 (S.D.N.Y. 2004), aff'd, 137 Fed. Appx. 430, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 13251 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2005).

In an action in which a former employee filed suit against his former employer alleging violations of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, 29 U.S.C.S. § 621 et seq., Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., and the New York City Human Rights Law, New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-101 et seq., the employer was granted summary judgment on the age discrimination claim where (1) the employer offered sufficient admissible evidence, including affidavits from a customer, from which a jury could conclude that the employee was fired for, inter alia, possibly committing an egregious error with the customers negatives; and (2) the only admissible, probative evidence of age discrimination was the bare fact that the employee was 63 years old when he was discharged. Pronin v Raffi Custom Photo Lab, Inc., 383 F. Supp. 2d 628, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18142 (S.D.N.Y. 2005).

Former employee, who was reassigned jobs, given a pay cut, and then terminated and replaced by a younger worker failed to establish a prima facie case of age discrimination in violation of the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a), because replacement by a younger worker, without more, was insufficient to establish a prima facie case of age discrimination. Shain v Ctr. for Jewish History, Inc., 418 F. Supp. 2d 360, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20629 (S.D.N.Y. 2005).

In an action that an employee brought pursuant to the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, 29 U.S.C.S. § 621 et seq., and the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, an employer, which stated that it dismissed the employee for submitting reports late and missing sales targets, was entitled to summary judgment on the age discrimination claims because ambiguous comments made by non-decision makers, the turnover of older employees, the bare allegation that a younger sales representative was favored, and the fact that the employer tolerated the employee's deficiencies in the past did not support the inference that the employer's stated reasons were pretextual. Hoffman v CIBA Vision Corp., 436 F. Supp. 2d 389, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 39773 (N.D.N.Y. 2006).

Although an employer's decision to discharge an employee was markedly influenced by questions regarding the employee's capabilities and the need to reduce the employer's workforce, the employer violated both the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, 29 U.S.C.S. § 623(a)(1), and the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, because age had considerable influence on the employer's decision as to who should be included in the workforce reduction. The employer acted on the assumption that because of his age, the employee would be unable to conform his job performance as plant controller to the expectations of the new management, and the employer did not engage in any meaningful measures to determine whether the employee could meet the employer's expectations as he apparently had in prior years. Ferguson v Lander Co., 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26738 (N.D.N.Y. Apr. 2, 2008).

Aside from alleging that he was age 51 at the time his employment was terminated, the urologist did not make a single allegation that his termination or the alleged disparate treatment was related to his age; the urologist failed to allege that the counterparts who allegedly received better treatment were younger than the urologist. Accordingly, the claims for age discrimination under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, 29 U.S.C.S. § 621 et seq. and N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(7) were dismissed without prejudice and with leave to amend. Rehman v State Univ. of N.Y., 596 F. Supp. 2d 643, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12897 (E.D.N.Y. 2009).

Defendants waived the reasonable factors other than age (RFOA) affirmative defense and that waiver was not excused; there existed no dispute that having asserted the RFOA defense in their answer, defendants never again asserted that defense throughout the trial, in their appeal, in their petition for certiorari, or at any time before proceedings in 2005. Defendants' decision to abandon their RFOA defense appeared to be the product of a rational choice of strategies and plaintiffs satisfied their burden of demonstrating that defendants' intentionally relinquished their right to assert the RFOA defense; defendants' references at trial to business necessity and business justification did not suffice to press or preserve an RFOA defense—defendants' failure to press the RFOA defense in words reasonably understood as asserting that defense rather than another could not survive a claim of waiver. Meacham v Knolls Atomic Power Lab., 627 F. Supp. 2d 72, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36999 (N.D.N.Y.), vacated, in part, 358 Fed. Appx. 233, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 27956 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2009).

No conflicting statements in Second Circuit law concerning the reasonable factors other than age (RFOA) defense existed at the time of the trial; neither conflicts among circuit courts, silence on the issue in the Second Circuit at the time of trial, nor decisions on the issue by the Second Circuit or the U.S. Supreme Court years after the trial excused defendants' waiver under the Salomon Analyst exception to the waiver rule. Accordingly, defendants' waiver was not excused. Meacham v Knolls Atomic Power Lab., 627 F. Supp. 2d 72, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36999 (N.D.N.Y.), vacated, in part, 358 Fed. Appx. 233, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 27956 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2009).

Reasonable factors other than age defense is an affirmative defense for which the employer bears the burden of persuasion. Meacham v Knolls Atomic Power Lab., 627 F. Supp. 2d 72, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36999 (N.D.N.Y.), vacated, in part, 358 Fed. Appx. 233, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 27956 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2009).

Employer was entitled to summary judgment on a pressman's age discrimination claim because (1) comments indicating that management had a preference for younger workers were not made by persons who had authority to terminate the pressman's employment and did not support the inference that the pressman was discharged because of his age and (2) the pressman's resignation letter and a supervisor's report compelled the conclusion that the pressman voluntarily resigned. Ko Sheng Chuang v T.W. Wang Inc., 647 F. Supp. 2d 221, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3182 (E.D.N.Y. 2009).

Employer was entitled to summary judgment on a staff member's age discrimination claim because the staff member's department was eliminated during internal restructuring, the employee retained in the reduction was the same age as the staff member and had superior qualifications, and the staff member had questioned the authority of a supervisor in a manner that could have supported termination for cause. Ko Sheng Chuang v T.W. Wang Inc., 647 F. Supp. 2d 221, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3182 (E.D.N.Y. 2009).

Employer was entitled to summary judgment on age discrimination claims asserted by a deputy supervisor and a supervisor of a circulation department because the deputy supervisor was terminated for delegating his collection responsibilities in violation of company policy, the supervisor was terminated for interfering with the investigation of the deputy supervisor's misconduct, and stray remarks expressing a desire to hire younger employees did not support the inference that the deputy supervisor and the supervisor were terminated because of their age. Ko Sheng Chuang v T.W. Wang Inc., 647 F. Supp. 2d 221, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3182 (E.D.N.Y. 2009).

Public school teacher's New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, age-based hostile work environment claims failed to meet the standard of Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a) because the teacher's complaints about a planning book meeting, an e-mail about another administrator's meeting with the teacher, and the teacher's year-end evaluation contained no suggestion that this conduct was engaged in because of her age, let alone that the workplace was permeated with discriminatory intimidation and insult. Fordham v Islip Union Free Sch. Dist., 662 F. Supp. 2d 261, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 82767 (E.D.N.Y. 2009).

Any inference of age discrimination is undercut where a plaintiff is over 40 years old when she is hired. Vinokur v Sovereign Bank, 701 F. Supp. 2d 276, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26854 (E.D.N.Y. 2010).

Because no reasonable jury could have conclude that age was a motivating factor in the decision to terminate a doctor, especially in light of the doctor's long and documented history of discipline and his complete failure to offer evidence that this history of discipline was a pretext for age discrimination, summary judgment was appropriate on his claims brought under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, 29 U.S.C.S. § 621 et seq., as well as the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, and New York City discrimination laws. Saenger v Montefiore Med. Ctr., 706 F. Supp. 2d 494, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 43026 (S.D.N.Y. 2010).

25. —Termination at age 32

The provisions of this statute in the light of its legislative history, are limited in their application to persons between the ages of 40 and 65, and therefore, airline could terminate the employment of a stewardess upon her attaining the age of 32. American Airlines, Inc. v State Com. for Human Rights, 29 A.D.2d 178, 286 N.Y.S.2d 493, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4784 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1968).

Cause of action under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a) for racial, gender and age discrimination resulting from defendant's alleged failure to consider plaintiff for tuition reimbursement plan accrued when plaintiff learned that employer had reimbursed another employee for similar educational program, not on later date when employer rejected formal request for reimbursement. Fern v IBM Corp., 204 A.D.2d 907, 612 N.Y.S.2d 492, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5390 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1994).

In action by university professor alleging series of related acts and continuing policy of discrimination against women faculty members, plaintiff's claim that she was denied tenure by same individual for 6 successive years, despite having been recommended for tenure, was sufficient to trigger continuing violation doctrine; thus, Human Rights claim under CLS Exec § 297 was not barred by statute of limitations. Sunshine v Long Island Univ., 862 F. Supp. 26, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12685 (E.D.N.Y. 1994).

Coach's 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e-2(a)(1) sexual orientation discrimination claims were not viable because sexual orientation was not a protected characteristic under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., but the coach could assert such claims under the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 290 et seq. Stouter v Smithtown Cent. Sch. Dist., 687 F. Supp. 2d 224, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12279 (E.D.N.Y. 2010).

Terminated employee's age discrimination claims failed because the bare allegations that two other employees over 40 were fired, and that the employer had a practice of firing older employees, were not enough to make out an age claim. Foster v Humane Soc'y of Rochester & Monroe County, Inc., 724 F. Supp. 2d 382, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 73384 (W.D.N.Y. 2010).

26. —Termination at age 55

The Legislature did not intend to repeal subdivision e of section 381-b of the Retirement and Social Security Law, providing for mandatory retirement of uniformed State Police at age 55, by its subsequent definition of "civil right" in subdivision 1 of section 291 of the Executive Law to include freedom from age discrimination, since it had expressly excepted qualified retirement plans from "unlawful discriminatory practices" relating to age discrimination ever since the enactment of subdivision 3-a of section 296 of the Executive Law, prior to the adoption of section 381-b. Mandatory retirement at age 55 for uniformed members of the State Police under subdivision e of section 381-b of the Retirement and Social Security Law is not a subterfuge to evade the purposes of the age discrimination provisions of the Executive Law and, therefore, is not within its ban on age discrimination. Inasmuch as subdivision e of section 381-b of the Retirement and Social Security Law, calling for mandatory retirement of uniformed State Police at age 55, and subdivision 3-a of section 296 of the Executive Law, prohibiting unlawful age discrimination in employment, can be read together in a consistent manner, there is no conflict between the two statutes; even if the two statutes could not be reconciled, section 381-b would prevail because it was enacted at a later date. State Div. of Human Rights ex rel. Kozlowski v State, 62 A.D.2d 617, 406 N.Y.S.2d 401, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10885 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1978), app. dismissed, 46 N.Y.2d 939, 415 N.Y.S.2d 1028, 1979 N.Y. LEXIS 3035 (N.Y. 1979).

Complaint by 55-year-old plaintiff, alleging age discrimination under CLS Exec § 296, was properly dismissed on grounds of payment and release where plaintiff executed severance agreement specifically releasing "all actions, causes of action, suits, debts...claims, and demands whatsoever, in law...or in equity, which [the parties] ever had, now have or hereafter can, shall or may have," since plaintiff was aware that his replacement was 48 years old at time he executed severance agreement. Stone v National Bank & Trust Co., 188 A.D.2d 865, 591 N.Y.S.2d 609, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14375 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992).

Terminated marketing and sales director for company providing telephone services failed to make showing under Exec § 296 and federal law that he was qualified for position or that termination for unsatisfactory job performance was pretextual by presenting affidavits of fellow workers not involved in termination decision as to his good qualities. Gambello v Time Warner Communs., Inc., 186 F. Supp. 2d 209, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3167 (E.D.N.Y. 2002).

Although the trader's evidence was based almost entirely on their own testimony, and the employer had presented strong evidence to show that its actions where not discriminatory, the traders' age discrimination claims survived summary judgment. Schreiber v Worldco, LLC, 324 F. Supp. 2d 512, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12888 (S.D.N.Y. 2004).

27. —Termination at age 59

An amended cause of action alleging unlawful age discrimination based upon plaintiff's discharge from his position with defendant corporation at age 59 after 23 years of service pursuant to Exec Law § 296 was time barred by the mandatory one-year statute of limitations applicable to such an action where the age discrimination amendment did not relate back to the original complaint to which it was added for purposes of the period of limitations, in that the original complaint failed to indicate any facts connecting plaintiff's discharge to the newly added age discrimination theory. Murphy v American Home Products Corp., 112 Misc. 2d 507, 447 N.Y.S.2d 218, 1982 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3157 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), modified, 88 A.D.2d 870, 451 N.Y.S.2d 770, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17189 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1982).

Former department store manager's human rights claim under CLS Exec Law § 296 will not be denied summarily, where he was forced into early retirement at age 59 ½ after purported harassment by superiors but also admitted violation of company policy by "floating" $907,000 in markdowns over 7-month period, because genuine issues are presented as to whether decision to terminate was (1) substantially related to manager's age, or (2) based on legitimate business reasons. Hastie v J.C. Penney Co., 886 F. Supp. 1017, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20375 (W.D.N.Y. 1994).

Store manager established prima facie case of age discrimination where he was qualified for his position and had been employed as store manager for almost 20 years, he was forced to take early retirement at age 59 rather than be discharged, he was replaced by younger employee, and he presented evidence that employer encouraged employees to retire by age 60. Hastie v J.C. Penney Co., 886 F. Supp. 1017, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20375 (W.D.N.Y. 1994).

Summary judgment was denied to a former employer in an age discrimination case brought by a 59-year-old former employee under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 (ADEA), 29 U.S.C.S. § 631, and N.Y. Exec. Law §§ 296 and 297 because allegations of constructive discharge and intolerable working conditions satisfied the elements of an adverse employment action leading to an inference of discrimination, and because even though the employer claimed that the conditions under which an employee worked never rose to the level required to show constructive discharge and that the employee left his position because he feared termination before the vesting of his medical benefits, the fact-finding required to accept the employer's version of the events was not an exercise that could be carried out in the context of a motion for summary judgment. Kern v Brookhaven Nat'l Lab., 293 F. Supp. 2d 214, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21350 (E.D.N.Y. 2003).

28. —Termination at age 62

Employer was entitled to summary judgment dismissing age discrimination action where (1) employer submitted several sworn affidavits asserting that plaintiff was discharged solely for incompetency, (2) it was uncontradicted that plaintiff, 62 years old, was replaced by 60-year-old individual, and (3) plaintiff offered only conclusory assertion that "I believe that age was the determining factor in defendant's decision to terminate me"; mere fact that plaintiff was 62 years old when dismissed was not sufficient to raise fact question as to age discrimination. Heffernan v Colonie Country Club, Inc., 160 A.D.2d 1062, 553 N.Y.S.2d 544, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3769 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1990).

Court properly denied leave to amend complaint (for third time) to allege that defendant religious institution had discriminated against 3-year-old disabled child in violation of CLS Exec § 296(4) by expelling child from nursery school where plaintiff's own letters and pleadings revealed that his son frequently ran out of nursery school classroom for no apparent reason, that school had legitimate reason, implemented as school policy, for classroom door to remain open, and that plaintiff himself had voluntarily removed his son from nursery school after school refused to change its policy. Posner v Central Synagogue, 202 A.D.2d 284, 609 N.Y.S.2d 195, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2501 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. dismissed, 83 N.Y.2d 953, 615 N.Y.S.2d 878, 639 N.E.2d 419, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 1385 (N.Y. 1994).

Plaintiff stated cause of action for discrimination under CLS Exec § 296(1) where he alleged that defendant attempted to induce its older workers to retire early, and that he was told that had better take advantage of next retirement incentive offer that came along. Fern v IBM Corp., 204 A.D.2d 907, 612 N.Y.S.2d 492, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5390 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1994).

Division of Human Rights properly determined that employer unlawfully discriminated against employee due to his age (63 years) where evidence showed that employer terminated employee and replaced him with younger person, and only purportedly nondiscriminatory reason proffered by employer was "downsizing due to financial difficulties." Laverack & Haines, Inc. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 217 A.D.2d 955, 629 N.Y.S.2d 595, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8381 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1995), rev'd, 88 N.Y.2d 734, 650 N.Y.S.2d 76, 673 N.E.2d 586, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3057 (N.Y. 1996).

Black shoppers could not maintain action against town for violation of CLS Exec § 296(2)(a) based on town police officers' conduct in removing them from department store at request of store manager, who suspected them of shoplifting, since town defendants did not fall within definition of persons liable under § 296(2)(a), and plaintiffs failed to set forth any facts that would support finding that agency relationship existed between town defendants and store. Robinson v Town of Colonie, 878 F. Supp. 387, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2849 (N.D.N.Y. 1995).

Age discrimination claim of terminated dispatcher cannot be denied summarily, where gist of claim is that he was replaced by 26-year-old for conduct that, although seemingly insubordinate and rude, was in fact commonplace according to customs of dispatch room where he had worked for 25 years, because other evidence of company president's animus toward older employees leaves questions of fact remaining concerning actual reason for firing. Abramowitz v Inta-Boro Acres, Inc., 64 F. Supp. 2d 166, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14132 (E.D.N.Y. 1999).

Employer was granted summary judgment on a 63-year-old employee's age discrimination claim, even though she stated a prima facie case, because she was unable to show that the employer's legitimate, non-discriminatory reason for terminating her was pretextual; the employer contended that it fired the employee because she could not process resident complaints efficiently, her duties were reduced, her work was reassigned to other workers, and she violated the employer's corporate policy for communicating with the media. Her supervisor's remarks about her age were nothing more than stray remarks, and he had promoted the employee and raised her salary. Tomassi v Insignia Fin. Group, Inc., 398 F. Supp. 2d 263, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26962 (S.D.N.Y. 2005), vacated, 478 F.3d 111, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 3490 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2007).

Town's decision to layoff complainant from his maintenance position at town recreation center and its decision not to rehire complainant as seasonal security guard did not constitute age discrimination where layoff was based on complaints as to complainant's performance and supervisor's assessment of his performance, and security guard positions were committed to otherwise qualified people before complainant verbally announced his interest in position. 2000 Order Comm HR No. 9D-E-A-92-1200959A.

29. —Termination at age 65

A school bus driver's action challenging the validity of his termination upon his reaching the age of 65, pursuant to a regulation of the Commissioner of Education would be remitted for determination of whether Exec Law § 296(3-a)(d), which allows termination of employment due to age if age is a bona fide occupation qualification "reasonably necessary" to the performance of the job duties, affected plaintiff's entitlement to back pay and other benefits which may have resulted from his involuntary retirement at age 65. Ten Hoeve v Board of Education, 64 N.Y.2d 1036, 489 N.Y.S.2d 59, 478 N.E.2d 200, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 16948 (N.Y. 1985).

Any claim that employment discrimination grounded on age under 65 is unlimited in scope is contrary to the public policy of this state against the employment of minors. American Airlines, Inc. v State Com. for Human Rights, 29 A.D.2d 178, 286 N.Y.S.2d 493, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4784 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1968).

The dismissal of petitioner from his job pursuant to a provision of a company retirement plan permitting involuntary retirements before the age of 65 was not a violation of Exec Law § 296 where the company's retirement plan was obviously bona fide and not a subterfuge to evade the purposes of the Human Rights Law. Gross v New York State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 80 A.D.2d 678, 436 N.Y.S.2d 376, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10378 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981).

Evidence supported determination of Commission on Human Rights that petitioner was not fired because of her handicap in violation of NYC Admin Code § 8-107(1)(a) and (15) where record established that petitioner was terminated for reasons of economy, and that decision to terminate her was reached before employer learned of her medical condition; employer's humanitarian gesture of continuing petitioner's salary during 9 weeks of her convalescence would not operate to its prejudice. Buckhout v New York City Comm'n on Human Rights, 203 A.D.2d 67, 609 N.Y.S.2d 608, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3610 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1994).

Jury's finding that employer had discharged employee in retaliation for her sexual harassment complaint was not against weight of evidence, despite employer's contention that decision to terminate employee was made before she advised employer of her complaint and that decision was based on employee's poor job performance, where (1) employee received regular and intermittent raises, was scheduled to receive another raise after date of her complaint, and had never had poor job review, and (2) she was fired shortly after submitting her sexual harassment complaint to employer. Gleason v Callanan Indus., 203 A.D.2d 750, 610 N.Y.S.2d 671, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4163 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1994).

Jury verdict in favor of terminated security officer is vacated and judgment is entered as matter of law in favor of employer, where record unequivocally establishes that officer was terminated because he repeatedly lied when questioned about his admitted falsifications of ammunition records, because jury's verdict in plaintiff's favor on CLS Exec Law § 296 claim that he was fired for contracting Lyme disease was based upon improper considerations that lacked evidentiary foundation. Jones v Associated Univs., 870 F. Supp. 1180, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17920 (E.D.N.Y. 1994), aff'd, 71 F.3d 406, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 33395 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1995).

30. —Termination at age 70

Complaint alleged that the independent contractor was 74 years old and he was terminated because of his age, that he was told that he was "too old" to continue working and that letting him go would make way for "younger blood," and that "upon information and belief" the contractor was replaced by a younger employee; accordingly, the complaint provided defendants with fair notice of the basis for plaintiff's age discrimination claim and thus comported with the requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P. 8. Banks v Corr. Servs. Corp., 475 F. Supp. 2d 189, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13092 (E.D.N.Y. 2007).

31. Discrimination based on arrest and/or conviction of crime

The State Division of Human Rights properly dismissed a complaint alleging an unlawful discriminatory practice where petitioner's employment as a trainee in a State psychiatric center was terminated when his employer learned that he had been charged with the sale of a controlled substance and had been adjudicated a youthful offender, since, although subdivision 15 of section 296 of the Executive Law provides that it is an unlawful discriminatory practice to deny employment to an individual by reason of his having been convicted of a criminal offense when such denial is in violation of the provisions of article 23-A of the Correction Law, in relation to actions by public agencies the provisions of article 23-A are enforceable by a proceeding brought pursuant to CPLR article 78. Perez v New York State Human Rights Appeal Board, 71 A.D.2d 150, 422 N.Y.S.2d 767, 1979 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13241 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1979), app. denied, 49 N.Y.2d 702, 426 N.Y.S.2d 1027, 403 N.E.2d 188, 1980 N.Y. LEXIS 4983 (N.Y. 1980).

In an action alleging that an employer committed an unlawful dicriminatory act in employment by terminating plaintiff's employment solely on the basis of a criminal arrest that was disposed of in her favor, the trial court erred in granting the employer's application for disclosure of the Grand Jury minutes for use in preparing for the civil trial, notwithstanding that in a proper case a court may order the release of minutes for use at a civil trial for the limited purposes of impeachment and of leading a hostile witness, where there was no showing of a particularized need for such purposes and the application was not addressed to the testimony of a named witness. In re Application by U.S. Air for Disclosure of Grand Jury Testimony with Respect to Salanger, 97 A.D.2d 961, 469 N.Y.S.2d 39, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 20781 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1983).

An order terminating a corrections officer's employment was proper where it was based on testimony by witnesses that during a domestic argument the officer had aimed a loaded revolver at his wife, discharged it and that the bullet lodged in a wall after nearly missing his wife, even though a criminal action against the officer for the same conduct had been dismissed. Kenner v Coughlin, 105 A.D.2d 1130, 482 N.Y.S.2d 615, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 21227 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1984), app. dismissed, in part, app. denied, 65 N.Y.2d 603, 491 N.Y.S.2d 1028, 481 N.E.2d 573, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 15104 (N.Y. 1985).

There was probable cause to believe respondent employer unlawfully discriminated against petitioner by firing him for denying existence of criminal record where he had been convicted of disorderly conduct, since petitioner truthfully answered question on employment application; crime is defined as misdemeanor or felony and disorderly conduct is neither. State Div. of Human Rights ex rel. Maymi v Sorrento Cheese Co., 115 A.D.2d 323, 495 N.Y.S.2d 865, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 54602 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1985).

Employer did not violate CLS Exec § 296 by discharging employee after criminal action against her was adjourned in contemplation of dismissal with view to ultimate dismissal of accusatory instrument in furtherance of justice pursuant to CLS CPL § 170.55, since criminal action was not yet "terminated" in employee's favor within meaning of CLS CPL § 160.50 and thus was still "pending" for purposes of § 296; criminal action is considered terminated in favor of accused under § 160.50 only where order to dismiss accusatory instrument has been entered, or where accusatory instrument is "deemed to have been dismissed" by failure to restore action to trial calendar within 6-month period, as set forth in § 170.55(2). Giles v Lockport Sav. Bank, 142 A.D.2d 943, 530 N.Y.S.2d 367, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14962 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1988).

Judgment which dismissed petition reversed–petitioner's employment as caseworker was terminated based solely upon allegedly false statements on his employment application that he had no criminal record; petitioner contended that his discharge was arbitrary, capricious, abuse of discretion and in violation of Executive Law (Human Rights Law) § 296 (16) because he had obtained certificates of relief from civil disabilities (with box checked for "relieve the holder of all disabilities and bars to employment") as to two misdemeanor crimes of which he had been convicted as adult; in any event, petitioner had given his employer actual notice of existence of these matters, because he submitted copies of not only certificates, but also dispositions of his criminal cases along with his application–certificate of relief from civil disabilities bar forfeiture of employment based upon State law; petitioner, who became "superior", if not "outstanding" caseworker for disadvantaged, and showed great promise in community, should be enabled to continue to be valuable member of society, rather than be relegated to life of crime due to this baseless allegation that he was anything less than forthcoming about his past; Supreme Court erred in summarily dismissing petition; fact-finding hearing should be held so that both petitioner and respondent are afforded opportunity to present any evidence concerning relevant issues. Rodgers v New York City Human Resources Administration/Department of Social Services, 154 A.D.2d 233, 546 N.Y.S.2d 581, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12224 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1989).

Court erred in summarily dismissing Article 78 petition to challenge petitioner's termination as caseworker based solely on allegedly false statements in his employment application that he had no criminal record where (1) petitioner's statements in employment application were made in good faith and on advice of counsel, (2) petitioner had obtained certificates of relief from civil disabilities, with box checked for relief from all disabilities and bars to employment, as to 2 misdemeanor crimes of which he had been convicted as adult, (3) petitioner had submitted certificates and dispositions of criminal cases along with his application, (4) petitioner was questioned by investigator from personnel department about apparent inconsistency and was subsequently informed that there would be no further problems with application, and (5) 2 years later, petitioner was terminated despite having received grades of "outstanding" and "superior" on his performance review; to summarily dismiss petition without fact-finding hearing was contrary both to intent of legislature as shown by CLS Correc § 702(2)(c) and to courts which granted petitioner second chance at life. Rodgers v New York City Human Resources Administration/Department of Social Services, 154 A.D.2d 233, 546 N.Y.S.2d 581, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12224 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1989).

Physician was not entitled to summary judgment dismissing action for violation of CLS Exec § 296 where (1) plaintiff alleged that she was permitted to register at hospital's high-risk prenatal care clinic based on her physical examination and history, that she consented to AIDS test which proved positive for HIV antibody, and that physician then refused to treat her at clinic, told her she should have abortion, and referred her to another hospital at which she had abortion, and (2) physician failed to establish absence of any triable fact issues. Doe v Jamaica Hosp., 202 A.D.2d 386, 608 N.Y.S.2d 518, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1922 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994).

Court properly denied employer's motion for summary judgment in action alleging that disparate treatment and eventual discharge of employee from employment constituted unlawful racial discrimination in violation of CLS Exec § 296(1), even though employee was collaterally estopped from challenging factual findings made by arbitrator and by Administrative Law

Judge in prior quasi-judicial proceedings regarding accumulation of sufficient points to justify discharge of employee pursuant to employer's absenteeism policy, since fact issues existed as to alleged disparate treatment of employee during employment, and whether his discharge under absenteeism policy constituted pretext for racial discrimination, issues which were not raised during either of prior proceedings. Clark v Cargill, Inc., Flour Milling Div., 206 A.D.2d 870, 615 N.Y.S.2d 210, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7782 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1994).

Termination of cashier/wire service operator for banking and brokerage firm was not due to misconduct, and thus he was not disqualified from receiving unemployment insurance benefits, even though he did not reveal on his employment application 2 arrests in 1991 for misdemeanor of aggravated harassment, where (1) those charges had been adjourned in contemplation of dismissal, and records thereof had been sealed, (2) application questions sought information about arrests for misdemeanors relating to acts of dishonesty, theft, or fraud, (3) cashier's arrests were not so related, and (4) CLS Exec § 296(16) prohibits employer, "unless specifically required or permitted by statute [from making] any inquiry about, whether in any form of application or otherwise, or to act upon adversely to the individual, any arrest or criminal accusation of such individual not then pending against that individual which was followed by a termination of that criminal action or proceeding in favor of such individual." In re Claim of Ruggiero, 263 A.D.2d 554, 693 N.Y.S.2d 266, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7706 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Commissioner's award of $25,000 in compensatory damages to an employee for mental anguish and humiliation in an age discrimination claim was not supported by the evidence, and was reduced to $15,000. New York State Tug Hill Commn. v New York State New York State Div. of Human Rights, 52 A.D.3d 1169, 860 N.Y.S.2d 698, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5159 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2008).

In an Article 78 proceeding brought by a New York City marshal who was suspended from office after being charged with various crimes relating to his office, a directive issued by respondent officials of the Department of Investigation of the City of New York which provided that "any former Marshal who has been convicted of a crime related to the performance of his/her official duties may not be employed by any present City Marshal when such employment bears a direct relationship to the criminal offense for which the former Marshal was convicted" was constitutional on its face and as applied to petitioner and did not violate Correc Law § 752 or Exec Law § 290 where petitioner was an ex-city marshal currently employed in a marshal's office and was convicted of racketeering-based crimes said to have been committed while he was employed as a City marshal and in connection with his official duties. Ribotsky v Lupkin, 114 Misc. 2d 913, 452 N.Y.S.2d 806, 1982 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3586 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1982).

In an employment discrimination action, while N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(16) did not permit an employer to act adversely to an employee based on a pending drug possession charge followed by a conviction for disorderly conduct, the employer could consider the independent evidence of the conduct leading to the criminal charges, particularly in light of the fact that the employer was statutorily required to do a criminal background check under N.Y. Mental Hyg. Law §§ 16.33 and 31.35. Johnson v Association for the Advancement of the Blind & Retarded, 863 N.Y.S.2d 323, 21 Misc. 3d 268, 240 N.Y.L.J. 17, 2008 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4800 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2008).

Department of Corrections (DOC) properly terminated a probationary correction officer's employment—filing a false claim—even though the charge for which he was arrested was dismissed and sealed because the Human Rights Law was not violated where the DOC made an independent assessment that the conduct underlying the officer's arrest violated its internal rules and regulations, whether or not the officer's supervisor lied to the police about their relationship was irrelevant to his arrest, and there was no indicia of bias in either the police department's determination to arrest the officer, based upon its investigation, or the DOC's determination that making a false claim constituted conduct unbecoming an officer. Matter of Young v City of New York, 68 Misc. 3d 514, 124 N.Y.S.3d 892, 2020 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2332 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2020).

Employee's claims against employer under NY Exec Law § 296(16) were not preempted by federal law, where employer discharged employee upon his arrest on charges that were later dismissed, because employee's claims did not involve interpretation of a collective bargaining agreement. Gonzalez v Dynair Service Co., 728 F. Supp. 100, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 701 (E.D.N.Y. 1990).

32. Discrimination based on maritial status

Human Rights Law § 296(1)(a), making it an unlawful discriminatory practice for an employer to refuse to hire or employ or to bar or to discharge from employment an individual because of his marital status, did not prohibit an employer from enforcing an employment rule forbidding an employee from working under the supervision of a relative, which term was defined as including a spouse, a parent, a sibling, or an offspring, since the term marital status proscribed conduct that discriminated according to the individual's status, i.e., divorced, separated, widowed or single, and did not prohibit discrimination based on an individual's marital relationship to a specific spouse. The Commissioner of Human Rights erred in sustaining a complaint alleging that the complainant was discriminated against because of her marital status when she was terminated by her employer while employed under the direct supervision of her husband, since the term marital status means that employers may no longer decide whether to hire, fire, or promote someone because he or she is single, married, divorced, separated or the like, and the complainant was not discharged because she was married but rather because she was married to her supervisor. Manhattan Pizza Hut, Inc. v New York State Human Rights Appeal Board, 51 N.Y.2d 506, 434 N.Y.S.2d 961, 415 N.E.2d 950, 1980 N.Y. LEXIS 2744 (N.Y. 1980).

A village's conduct in terminating the employment of the wife of a tax assessor who had angered certain village residents by increasing the assessments of their properties did not constitute discrimination in employment on the basis of marital status prohibited by Exec Law § 296; rather, the conduct was an act of political retaliation against the husband who was employed by a neighboring municipality but whose jurisdiction extended to the village. State Div. of Human Rights ex rel. Howarth v Spencerport, 78 A.D.2d 50, 434 N.Y.S.2d 52, 1980 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13406 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1980).

Termination of petitioner's employment as correction officer did not violate CLS Exec §§ 291 and 296, which prohibit discharge of employee due to marital status, although petitioner's undisclosed marriage to inmate and parolee was mentioned in notice of discipline, where basis for her termination was violation of Employees' Manual rules prohibiting employees from engaging in relationship with any inmate in manner or form not necessary or proper for discharge of duties, and requiring that any such relationship be reported. Vega v Department of Correctional Services, 186 A.D.2d 340, 588 N.Y.S.2d 202, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10816 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992), app. dismissed, 81 N.Y.2d 782, 594 N.Y.S.2d 718, 610 N.E.2d 391 (N.Y. 1993).

Plaintiff employee established prima facie case of discrimination based on marital status under CLS Exec § 296 where he submitted evidence that his supervisor had stated that one reason he was chosen for reduction-in-force layoff was that he was single and could withstand lack of work better from financial standpoint than co-worker who was married. Kipper v Doron Precision Sys., 194 A.D.2d 855, 598 N.Y.S.2d 399, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5507 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1993).

Award of $54,000 for emotional distress as result or retaliatory discharge in violation of CLS Exec § 296(1)(e) was not excessive where (1) plaintiff testified that she suffered from irritable bowel syndrome, pains in her sides, insomnia, migraines and depression, and that as result thereof she sought medical treatment, (2) after her discharge, she was deeply concerned about her ability to support herself and her child because she was single mother with limited professional experience and training, and (3) she had been unable to secure comparable employment for approximately one year. Gleason v Callanan Indus., 203 A.D.2d 750, 610

N.Y.S.2d 671, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4163 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1994).

Damages for lost wages in action under CLS Exec Art 15 should be calculated by difference between what plaintiff would have earned had he or she continued to remain employed with offending employer and what he or she actually earned; thus, in action for retaliatory discharge in violation of CLS Exec § 296(1)(i), jury was entitled to presume that plaintiff was to receive wage increases in years following her discharge commensurate with wage increases that she had received in past. Gleason v Callanan Indus., 203 A.D.2d 750, 610 N.Y.S.2d 671, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4163 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1994).

Defendant was entitled to dismissal of action for age discrimination since plaintiff had signed release whereby she released defendant from any and all causes of action arising from or during her employment, including claims for employment discrimination; plaintiff could not escape impact of release by claiming that she had misinterpreted terms of release. Koster v Ketchum Communications, 204 A.D.2d 280, 611 N.Y.S.2d 298, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4571 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994), app. dismissed, 85 N.Y.2d 857, 639 N.Y.S.2d 782, 662 N.E.2d 1072, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 266 (N.Y. 1995).

Assertion that plaintiff "Annette Cramer" was terminated "because she was married to Joseph Cramer" did not set forth cognizable action under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a), which prohibits discrimination based on individual's marital status rather than on fact that individual is married to any particular partner. Cramer v Newburgh Molded Prods., 228 A.D.2d 541, 645 N.Y.S.2d 46, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7114 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 803, 653 N.Y.S.2d 280, 675 N.E.2d 1233, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 4267 (N.Y. 1996).

In action under CLS Exec § 296, plaintiff's claim that defendant's discriminatory firing caused her to choose to have abortion, and to separate from her husband, would be dismissed for lack of proximate cause. Martinez v Ketchum Advertising Co., 865 F. Supp. 166, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14330 (S.D.N.Y. 1994).

Employee's claim alleging discrimination pursuant to N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a) due to his marital status to his wife, who was a fellow employee with the same employer, could not stand because there was no protection afforded under the New York Human Rights Law regarding one's marriage to a particular person. The relevant provision related to the employee's "marital status" not his or her "marital relationships." Pibouin v CA, Inc., 867 F. Supp. 2d 315, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 47102 (E.D.N.Y. 2012).

33. Discrimination based on disability, generally

In an Article 78 proceeding in which a city railroad clerk contended that his employer terminated his probationary appointment to a supervisory position because of a physical disability in violation of Exec Law § 296, the clerk's petition was improperly dismissed without a hearing, since discrimination is barred against an impaired individual who is reasonably able to do what the position requires; on remand, the employer must submit an answer addressing the discrimination issue, and it must be decided whether facts exist justifying conclusion that clerk cannot perform the job in a reasonable manner. Miller v Ravitch, 60 N.Y.2d 527, 470 N.Y.S.2d 558, 458 N.E.2d 1235, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 3542 (N.Y. 1983).

An employee is properly terminated from employment where he indicated in his job application that he had no ailment or handicap such as would prevent him from doing any kind of work and, after being hired for a particular job he informed his employer that he was physically unable to perform that job; the employer was under no obligation to offer him a job which he could perform, and there was no unlawful discrimination against the employee. Korn v New York State Human Rights Appeal Board, 64 A.D.2d 308, 410 N.Y.S.2d 138, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12735 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1978).

An employer who pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement construed an employee's failure to respond to a request for medical verification that she was unable to return to work after having been determined capable of doing so as a voluntary resignation did not engage in unlawful discriminatory practices, where the employer would have made such a determination with any employee who also failed to respond. Varano v New York State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 96 A.D.2d 1044, 466 N.Y.S.2d 454, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19701 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1983).

CLS Executive § 296, making it unlawful discriminatory practice for employer to discharge employee because of disability, is limited under CLS Executive § 292 for disabilities which do not prevent employee from performing activities involved in job or occupation in reasonable manner; where record discloses that employee's physical disability prevented her from doing job in reasonable manner since it caused her to miss unacceptably high number of days of work in job that required consistently good attendance, complaint of unlawful discriminatory practice based on physical disability is dismissed. Silk v Huck Installation & Equipment Div., 109 A.D.2d 930, 486 N.Y.S.2d 406, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 47452 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1985).

Probationary employee who has been on medical leave without pay for some 5 months prior to termination of employment is not discriminatorily discharged where records indicate that employee was not reasonably able to perform duties of subject position. Dukelow v Lum, 112 A.D.2d 302, 491 N.Y.S.2d 990, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 56091 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1985).

In order to establish liability it is incumbent upon employee to prove that employment termination was because of disability and that, although disabled, his impairment did not preclude him from performing his duties in reasonable manner; summary judgment may not be granted where there is no clear indication of reason for employee's discharge. Doin v North American Carbide, Inc., 112 A.D.2d 499, 490 N.Y.S.2d 910, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 55845 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1985).

Probationary New York City Transit Police Officer who was unable to reasonably do what position required because of disability was not improperly terminated pursuant to CLS Exec § 296; under CLS Exec § 292 term "disability" is limited to disabilities which do not prevent complainant from performing in reasonable manner activities involved in job or occupation, and since officer could not be placed on patrol duty (his most important function as police officer), termination of his employment was proper. Caminiti v New York City Transit Authority Police Dep't, 125 A.D.2d 306, 508 N.Y.S.2d 590, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 62568 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Determination that removal of employee without subjecting him to physical examination constituted discrimination on basis of physical disability was supported by substantial evidence where employer (1) relied merely on lay opinion of one of its other employees that dismissed employee was disabled when he attempted to return to work following heart bypass surgery, (2) terminated employee without consulting medical personnel, (3) did not discuss matter with employee or his doctor, and (4) did not examine employee's medical records or seek to have him evaluated by doctors; moreover, employee's own doctor certified that he was able to return to his usual duties as warehouse manager, that he had been asymptomatic since operation, and that he had no medical restrictions. State Div. of Human Rights ex rel. Pecci v S. A. Cook Factory Showroom, 132 A.D.2d 935, 518 N.Y.S.2d 483, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49388 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1987), aff'd, 71 N.Y.2d 922, 528 N.Y.S.2d 537, 523 N.E.2d 824, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 592 (N.Y. 1988).

Employer was entitled to summary judgment dismissing employee's action alleging discrimination due to disability under CLS Exec § 296 where it was undisputed that employee's excessive absences were caused by various illnesses requiring hospitalization and employer's absence control plan required good employee attendance to effectively provide its communication services 24 hours per day, 365 days per year; since employee's condition was preventing her from reasonably performing her tasks, employee's decision to dismiss her was not unlawful discrimination. Giaquinto v New York Tel. Co., 135 A.D.2d 928, 522 N.Y.S.2d 329, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52841 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 701, 535 N.Y.S.2d 595, 532 N.E.2d 101, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 3347 (N.Y. 1988).

Court erred in granting summary judgment dismissing employee's cause of action for wrongful discharge because of disability in violation of CLS Exec § 296, where fact question existed as to whether employer, in terminating employee for misconduct, had good faith belief that employee was no longer disabled during 6-month period in which he received disability benefits, based on employee's statement that he had been free of pain for 6 months. Miano v Caterpillar Tractor Co., 184 A.D.2d 807, 584 N.Y.S.2d 234, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7822 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992).

Employer was entitled to summary judgment in former employee's action for wrongful discharge where employee, because of non-job related automobile accident, suffered injuries which concededly often rendered him totally unable to perform his work; under circumstances, employer was permitted, under CLS Exec § 296, to dismiss employee due to his excessive absences and unsatisfactory performance. DiGeronimo v First Nationwide Bank, 209 A.D.2d 575, 619 N.Y.S.2d 640, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11527 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994), app. dismissed, 85 N.Y.2d 905, 627 N.Y.S.2d 326, 650 N.E.2d 1328, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 5655 (N.Y. 1995).

Employer was entitled to summary judgment in action alleging that it violated CLS Exec § 296 by discharging plaintiff from his position as store manager, where plaintiff sustained foot injury that prevented him from performing his duties, which required much standing, bending, lifting, and walking around store to supervise other employees and where, upon his return to work after second surgical procedure, plaintiff admittedly only walked around store for about "an hour a day" and spent rest of his time sitting. Lawson v High Bar Wholesale Food Distribs., 217 A.D.2d 646, 629 N.Y.S.2d 807, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8104 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1995).

Evidence supported determination that employee was not improperly terminated because of disability or in retaliation for instituting Human Rights proceedings where it was shown that she had received poor job performance ratings for 3 years, had many unexplained absences, and offered false excuses for missing work. Kamen v Rosa, 223 A.D.2d 433, 636 N.Y.S.2d 59, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 337 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

There was no basis to set aside jury verdict dismissing plaintiff's claim that county failed to appoint her to permanent security guard position because of her physical disability although her eligibility for position was certified under CLS Civ S § 55-a, where she failed civil service exam administered for that position, and she failed to establish that commissioner had designated prescribed number of positions with duties that could be performed by certified physically disabled individuals or that open position existed in this category to which she could be appointed. Coluccio v County of Albany, 258 A.D.2d 756, 685 N.Y.S.2d 823, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1165 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

There was no basis to conclude that bridge and tunnel authority discriminated against employee on basis of disability by discharging him under CLS Civ S § 73 for continuous absence from work due to disability for more than one year where, in his 12-year absence on disability leave, employee never sought to return to work with or without accommodation, even after he was denied ordinary disability retirement. Fallon v Triborough Bridge & Tunnel Auth., 259 A.D.2d 377, 687 N.Y.S.2d 123, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2835 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1999).

Court properly dismissed Article 78 proceeding in which petitioner alleged that his probationary employment was terminated based on perceived disability in violation of anti-discrimination laws where (1) in order to settle disciplinary charges relating to extensive history of absenteeism, petitioner agreed that, during stipulated probationary period, he could be terminated "without recourse to Article 33 of the State-CSEA Agreement or any other provision or law," and (2) during next 6 months, he was absent from work 7 times. Williams v Commissioner of the Office of Mental Health, 259 A.D.2d 623, 686 N.Y.S.2d 788, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2496 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

At-will employee asserting disability discrimination failed to raise triable issue sufficient to defeat defendants' summary judgment motion where she had been unable to perform her duties at time of adverse employment decision. Kelly v Poughkeepsie Area Chamber of Commerce, 265 A.D.2d 307, 696 N.Y.S.2d 215, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9674 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

Defendants were entitled to summary judgment dismissing employee's action alleging that they unlawfully discriminated against her by discharging her because of her disability in violation of CLS Exec § 296(1)(a) where (1) within a few days after employee was fired for poor work performance, she applied for workers' compensation benefits, claiming that she was totally disabled and unable to work as result of back injury sustained during course of her employment, (2) CLS Exec § 292(21) limits Human Rights Law recovery to disabilities that "do not prevent the complainant from performing in a reasonable manner the activities involved in the job or occupation sought or held," and (3) employee could not claim that she was entitled to workers' compensation benefits on ground that she was totally disabled and, at same time, claim that her "disability" was within protection of § 292(21). Sherman v Kang, 275 A.D.2d 1016, 713 N.Y.S.2d 597, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9602 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000).

In action alleging that plaintiff was discharged from her job as receptionist and clerical worker, in violation of state and city Human Rights Laws, after it was discovered that she had condition similar to carpal tunnel syndrome ("bilateral ulnar nerve entrapment"), defendants were not entitled to summary judgment on ground that plaintiff's employment was terminated solely because of her poor job performance, as triable issues existed as to whether her disability prevented her from performing her job in reasonable manner and/or whether her termination was motivated by legitimate non-discriminatory reason. Umansky v Masterpiece Int'l Ltd., 276 A.D.2d 691, 714 N.Y.S.2d 735, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10772 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2000).

Employee discrimination complaint against New York City Department of Correction (DOC) alleging harassment based on "perceived disability" was devoid of merit, as complainant's erratic and hostile conduct (including use of excessive force against inmates and verbal abuse of superiors and fellow officers) warranted subjecting him to drug tests and psychiatric evaluation, and DOC's precaution of first suspending and then terminating him could not be viewed as unreasonable or discriminatory, although test results were negative, given DOC's responsibility for safety of employees and inmates, its exposure to liability for any injury that might result, and fact that complainant's behavior continued to be erratic. Robinson v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 277 A.D.2d 76, 716 N.Y.S.2d 47, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12002 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000), app. dismissed, 96 N.Y.2d 775, 725 N.Y.S.2d 633, 749 N.E.2d 202, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 586 (N.Y. 2001).

Determination that an employer violated N.Y. Exec. Law § 292(21-e) by failing to provide reasonable accommodations for the complainant's disability, which was a sensitivity to an ingredient in a cleaning solution used in her work, was supported by substantial evidence because, although the employer had protective equipment at the work site that may have alleviated the complainant's adverse reaction to the ingredient at issue, at no time before her termination from employment did the employer advise the complainant that the protective equipment was available for her use. Neither of the complainant's supervisors addressed the medical issues raised by the complainant and her physician before terminating her. Matter of New Venture Gear, Inc. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 41 A.D.3d 1265, 839 N.Y.S.2d 375, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7165 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2007).

Trial court properly concluded that an employee failed to state a cause of action for employment discrimination on the basis of disability as the employee failed to set forth factual allegations sufficient to show that, upon the provision of reasonable accommodations, she could perform the essential functions of her job. Staskowski v Nassau Community Coll., 53 A.D.3d 611, 862 N.Y.S.2d 544, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6202 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2008).

Employee was not entitled to a judgment on a disability discrimination claim under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 as her termination under N.Y. Civ. Serv. Law § 71 from her job as a developmental aide with the Office of Mental Retardation and Developmental Disabilities (OMRDD) was appropriate because the employee could no longer perform the essential functions of her job, such as lifting and performing physical interventions with disabled individuals; even if she was reassigned to a work location with higher functioning individuals, she would have to do some lifting in certain circumstances. Gill v Maul, 61 A.D.3d 1159, 876 N.Y.S.2d 751, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2635 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2009).

Finding that an employee suffered employment discrimination based on disability was proper because the employee testified that the restaurant manager told him he was fired from his part-time dishwashing job because of scarring on his head caused by a psoriasis and cellulitis condition, which presented a prima facie case of discrimination, and the employer's three explanations for the employee's termination were pretextual; there was no evidence that the employee was unable to perform his job responsibilities because of his condition and the employer was not permitted to discriminate on the basis of customers' preferences. There was no showing that the employee's condition constituted a health code violation, and while the employee's change in shift at another job required a change in his schedule with the employer, the employee was never warned that he could be terminated based on his unavailability. Matter of Tosha Rests., LLC v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 79 A.D.3d 1337, 911 N.Y.S.2d 734, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9173 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2010).

Terminated employee's New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a), and the New York City Human Rights Law, New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(1)(a), claim failed where: (1) employee was unable to perform the duties of his job as a construction inspector because of his lung condition, and no reasonable accommodation was available under N.Y. Exec. Law § 292(21) and New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(15) as the only way the employee was able to report on construction progress was to be at the site; (2) the employee could not complete his duties from the central office; and (3) the employee's doctor and the employee stated that the employee could not visit construction sites. Jacobsen v New York City Health & Hosps. Corp., 97 A.D.3d 428, 948 N.Y.S.2d 586, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5386 (N.Y. Terminated employee's New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a), and the New York City Human Rights Law, New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(1)(a), claim failed as the employer engaged in an interactive process for purposes of N.Y. Exec. Law § 292 and New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(15) by: (1) seeking clarification from the employee's doctor, keeping the employee's job open during two separate medical leaves, and communicating with the employee and his doctor; and (2) it was only after it was confirmed that the employee could not work at construction sites that he was terminated. Jacobsen v New York City Health & Hosps. Corp., 97 A.D.3d 428, 948 N.Y.S.2d 586, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5386 (N.Y. Employee's claims under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a) and New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(1)(a) were properly dismissed because the employee, through counsel, abruptly cut off the interactive process begun by the employer to reach a mutually acceptable accommodation. Romanello v Intesa Sanpaolo S.p.A., 97 A.D.3d 449, 949 N.Y.S.2d 345, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5517 (N.Y. Division of Human Rights properly concluded that a hearing-impaired court interpreter established a prima facie case of disability discrimination because permitting the interpreter to wear a hearing aid was a reasonable accommodation and would not pose a significant risk of substantial harm where the employer failed to provide any legitimate non-discriminatory reason for its decision, no sufficiently individualized assessment occurred, and, given the employer's blanket policy barring hearing-impaired persons from employment as court officers and its failure to accommodate the employee who had an asymmetric hearing loss, the civil penalty of $ 30,000 was correctly assessed. Matter of New York State Unified Ct. Sys. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 180 A.D.3d 555, 120 N.Y.S.3d 292, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1244 (N.Y. CLS Exec § 296(1)(a) claim for wrongful discharge based on physical disability was not exempt from broad arbitration clause in employment contract subject to Federal Arbitration Act, 9 USCS §§ 1 et seq., notwithstanding plaintiff's contention that her employment as registered securities representative involved transactions in commerce, since absence of federal statute prohibiting disability-based discrimination by private employers precluded inference that Congress intended to exempt such category of claims from rigorous enforcement of arbitration claims required by policy underlying Federal Arbitration Act. DeSapio v Josephthal & Co., 143 Misc. 2d 611, 540 N.Y.S.2d 932, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 228 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1989).

In discrimination cases under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, a discriminatory intent may have been inferred from the very fact that an employer offered a sham excuse for its action, and a plaintiff may have defeated a motion for summary judgment by raising a triable issue of fact concerning either the falsity of the employer's explanation for the challenged action or the employer's discriminatory motive; however, discrimination count was properly dismissed where nurse failed to raise a triable fact issue concerning either the falsity of the hospital's reason for terminating her employment or the alleged discriminatory motive of the hospital for its actions. Morse v Wyo. County Cmty. Hosp. & Nursing Facility, 305 A.D.2d 1028, 758 N.Y.S.2d 749, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4726 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2003).

State university health science center established that a resident's narcolepsy prevented the resident from performing his duties in a reasonable manner despite reasonable attempts to accommodate his needs, and the trial court erred by denying the center's motion for summary judgment on the resident's claim that he was illegally terminated from his position, in violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 and New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107. Timashpolsky v State Univ. of N.Y. Health Sci. Ctr., 306 A.D.2d 271, 761 N.Y.S.2d 94, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6244 (N.Y. Employee's discrimination action based on her alleged disability failed because by her own admission, the employee could not perform an essential function of her customer service job, even with an accommodation. The employer's statutory obligation to provide a "reasonable accommodation" did not extend to reassignment or transfer of the employee to another position, particularly where the employee failed to adequately explain the extend and limits of her restriction. Pimentel v Citibank, N.A., 29 A.D.3d 141, 811 N.Y.S.2d 381, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2949 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.3d 707, 854 N.E.2d 1277, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 2120 (N.Y. 2006).

Substantial evidence supported a finding that a state department of correction (DOC) unlawfully discriminated against a correction officer on the basis of a disability under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 by terminating his employment allegedly based on N.Y. Civ. Serv. Law § 73 as while a DOC medical examiner indicated that the officer could not perform his duties after suffering a heart attack because a physical confrontation with an inmate could possibly damage his defibrillator, such a possibility was speculative and the treating cardiologist, as well as a physician who performed an independent medical examination, found that the officer could work without restriction. Matter of New York State Dept. of Correctional Servs. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 57 A.D.3d 1057, 868 N.Y.S.2d 387, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9201 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

Dismissal of an actor's disability discrimination claim was error because the actor sufficiently stated a claim under, inter alia, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296; the actor stated that he suffered a disability when he was injured and that, at the time of his termination, he was still capable of resuming his employment as a performer. The production company's stated reason for the actor's termination was directly related to his disability, or its perception that he was disabled, i.e., that he was not eligible for the medical leave he had taken after his surgery to repair the injury he suffered. Vig v New York Hairspray Co., L.P., 67 A.D.3d 140, 885 N.Y.S.2d 74, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6312 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2009).

State Division of Human Rights dismissal of former employee's disability discrimination claim was upheld in an N.Y. Exec. Law § 298 proceeding because the employer made reasonable efforts to both communicate with the former employee and consider accommodations requested, and former employee's delay in responding to employer was unexplained; the employer kept the former employee and his lawyer informed of the leave time, but, after the request for additional information, neither of them contacted the employer to inquire about the status of the accommodations request, or seek additional time to respond to the employer's inquiry. Matter of Vinikoff v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 83 A.D.3d 1159, 920 N.Y.S.2d 458, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2698 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2011).

In an employment discrimination case, the federal district court properly granted summary judgment because plaintiff was collaterally estopped from asserting claims under ADA and the New York State Human Rights Law that he raised in a N.Y. C.P.L.R. art. 78 proceeding before the New York Supreme Court; plaintiff's state petition specifically asserted that his disqualification violated N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 and could be actionable pursuant to the ADA. The state supreme court reasonably concluded it would have been impossible to provide any reasonable accommodations for the essential functions of a police officer, because plaintiff could become mentally or physically incapacitated during bursts of severe exertion. Roth v Cty. of Nassau, 747 Fed. Appx. 891, 2019 U.S. App. LEXIS 1526 (2d Cir. N.Y.), cert. denied, 139 S. Ct. 2674, 204 L. Ed. 2d 1070, 2019 U.S. LEXIS 3756 (U.S. 2019).

Former employee who had performed landscaping and maintenance work for a county's parks department sufficiently stated a claim of disability discrimination under the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, against his former supervisor and park superintendents because the employee alleged that he suffered from a mental disability, that he was able to perform the essential functions of job, and that he was discharged on the basis of his disability. The employees' allegation that he received permission to leave work early gave rise to an inference that the decision to discharge the employee was based on unlawful discrimination rather than on the fact that the employee left work fifteen minutes early. Costabile v County of Westchester, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 29787 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 20, 2007), amended, 485 F. Supp. 2d 424, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 33484 (S.D.N.Y. 2007).

Directed verdict for an employer on employee's N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 of the New York Human Rights Law claim was vacated and remanded; because the employee's evidence was sufficient to survive judgment as a matter of law on her Rehabilitation Act, 29 USCS § 701 et seq., claim, then a fortiori her New York Human Rights Law claim should have been submitted to the jury. Peters v Baldwin Union Free Sch. Dist., 320 F.3d 164, 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 2510 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2003).

Employee's inability to perform part of his job may provide legitimate, non-discriminatory reason for terminating employment. O'Keefe v Niagara Mohawk Power Corp., 714 F. Supp. 622, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6454 (N.D.N.Y. 1989).

Human Rights Law claim under CLS Exec Law § 296 need not be denied summarily, where former railroad worker supplies substantial evidence showing himself qualified to perform duties of trainman/freight conductor despite loss of his right hand and lower arm, because claim is not preempted by Railway Labor Act (45 USCS §§ 151 et seq.) and complaint makes out prima facie case of discrimination on basis of his disability. Jefferlone v Canadian Pac. (U.S.), 887 F. Supp. 487, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7802 (W.D.N.Y. 1995).

Railroad employee who lost his hand and lower arm in railroad accident established prima facie case of unlawful discrimination based on physical disability where he showed that railroad refused to allow him to "bump" into bargaining unit position of trainman/freight conductor after his management position was eliminated, that railroad did not evaluate his ability to do tasks necessary for position or give him opportunity to show that he was qualified, that examining physician found him to be medically qualified for position, that his management position had periodically required him to perform duties of trainman/freight conductor, and that he was capable of performing those duties. Jefferlone v Canadian Pac. (U.S.), 887 F. Supp. 487, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7802 (W.D.N.Y. 1995).

Railway Labor Act (45 USCS §§ 151 et seq.) did not preempt claim by railroad employee who alleged that railroad unlawfully discriminated against him on basis of disability after his hand and lower arm were amputated; trier of fact could decide, without interpreting parties' collective bargaining agreement, whether railroad violated New York law when it refused to allow employee to "bump" into bargaining unit position of trainman/freight conductor after his management position was eliminated, where complaint alleged that railroad did not evaluate employee's ability to do tasks necessary for position or give him opportunity to show that he was qualified, even though examining physician had reported that he was capable of performing necessary job functions. Jefferlone v Canadian Pac. (U.S.), 887 F. Supp. 487, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7802 (W.D.N.Y. 1995).

Mere fact that plaintiff was discharged shortly after he voluntarily revealed his disability to his employer did not, by itself, establish factual basis to infer illegal discrimination where there was no evidence of underlying animus, plaintiff admittedly was met with sympathetic to neutral reactions from people he informed of his disability, and employer met its burden of showing reasonable, independent, and nondiscriminatory motive for discharge. Fitzgerald v Alleghany Corp., 904 F. Supp. 223, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17337 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

Deaf employee's claim under New York State Human Rights Law (CLS Exec Law §§ 290 et seq.) will not be denied summarily, where deaf employee makes out prima facie case alleging his firing was caused by lack of qualified interpreter at meeting regarding employee's placement of money of co-worker in his locker, because analysis of disability discrimination claim under § 296 is substantially same as that for failure-to-accommodate claim under Americans with Disabilities Act (42 USCS §§ 12101 et seq.). Mohamed v Marriott Int'l, 905 F. Supp. 141, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15762 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

Employee's status as breast-feeding mother does not render her "disabled" under Human Rights Law; to extent that plaintiff argues that her child must breast-feed as matter of medical necessity, any disability is that of child alone. Bond v Sterling, Inc., 997 F. Supp. 306, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3103 (N.D.N.Y. 1998).

African-American clerk's disability discrimination claim must be dismissed, where she developed carpal tunnel syndrome, and employer responded by getting her ergonomically friendly work station and chair, assigning her to records department, and allowing her to type no more than 4 hours per day, because nothing in record supports her contentions that (1) her disabilities were not accommodated, and (2) employer reaction to her medical restrictions was racially biased. Hudson v Delphi Energy & Engine Mgmt. Sys., 10 F. Supp. 2d 256, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16072 (W.D.N.Y. 1998).

Gender and disability discrimination claims against Postal Service, brought pursuant to Exec § 296, must be dismissed, where former employee sues following her discharge for excessive absences, because claims are preempted by federal discrimination law. Snay v United States Postal Serv., 31 F. Supp. 2d 92, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18860 (N.D.N.Y. 1998).

Former nurse anesthetist has no viable state disability discrimination claim against medical center, where he really is only contesting disparity in long-term disability benefits for employees with mental, as opposed to physical, disorders, because complaint admits he is unable to perform each of material duties of his former regular occupation, and he is not qualified to sue for disability discrimination under Exec § 296. Muller v First UNUM Life Ins. Co., 90 F. Supp. 2d 204, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4026 (N.D.N.Y. 2000).

Employment discrimination case is remanded but without award of fees and costs under 28 USCS § 1447(c), even though employer removed arguing claim regarding termination for taking leaves of absence states claim only under federal law, where court finds such termination can support discrimination cause of action under Exec § 296, because employer's removal theory was colorable but ultimately unsuccessful. Bellido-Sullivan v American Int'l Group, 123 F. Supp. 2d 161, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16970 (S.D.N.Y. 2000).

Where a city bus driver was terminated after having a mechanical heart valve implanted and starting a life-long anticoagulant regimen, the driver's disability discrimination claims failed to survive summary judgment because the employers did not perceive the driver as disabled and the driver was not qualified to perform the essential functions of the position. Burton v Metro. Transp. Auth., 244 F. Supp. 2d 252, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2314 (S.D.N.Y. 2003).

In an action in which a former employee former employee filed suit against his former employer et al. alleging violations of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and New York Human Rights Law (NYHRL), there was genuine issues of material fact exist regarding whether the individual defendants participated in the alleged discrimination giving rise to violations of the NYHRL. Picinich v UPS, 321 F. Supp. 2d 485, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11323 (N.D.N.Y. 2004).

In an action in which a former employee former employee filed suit against his former employer et al. alleging violations of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and New York Human Rights Law (NYHRL), the employee raised a material question of fact regarding whether the employer refused to accommodate him when it failed to engage in an interactive process in order to identify his limitations and the appropriate accommodations which would allow him to resume working; it was questionable whether the employer engaged in the interactive process in a timely matter in light of the fact that its ADA procedure took twice as long as estimated prior to its meeting with the employee. Picinich v UPS, 321 F. Supp. 2d 485, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11323 (N.D.N.Y. 2004).

In an action in which a former employee former employee filed suit against his former employer et al. alleging violations of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and New York Human Rights Law (NYHRL), the employer's motion for summary judgment was denied as to the employee's claim for discriminatory discharge; there were genuine issues of material fact remaining regarding whether the employee was a qualified individual with a disability, whether the employer refused to accommodate him, and whether the requested accommodations would imposed an undue hardship upon the employer. Picinich v UPS, 321 F. Supp. 2d 485, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11323 (N.D.N.Y. 2004).

Claim for disability discrimination failed because the employee failed to present sufficient evidence from which a reasonable jury could have found that he was discharged or otherwise treated adversely because of his disability. The employee was repeatedly absent without explanation; he was using drugs and alcohol leading up to and during the time of his absences; he ignored repeated requests to provide explanation for his absences; he was dismissed only after a hearing at which he was represented by his union and a neutral officer found that the charges of insubordination and excessive absenteeism were valid; and, three months after his discharge, he was rehired, as the employer gave him another chance. Robertson v AMTRAK, 400 F. Supp. 2d 612, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 31201 (S.D.N.Y. 2005).

New York Human Rights Law (NYHRL), N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(3-a)(g), does not protect an employee who, even upon the provision of a reasonable accommodation, is physically unable to perform her duties; therefore, a former teachers' aides discrimination claim under the NYHRL against a school district and others failed because she admitted that she was totally disabled and unable to work. Casale v Reo, 522 F. Supp. 2d 420, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83611 (N.D.N.Y. 2007).

Former employee failed to show that he was unlawfully terminated due to his disability of corticobasal degeneration, in violation of the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, because there was no evidence that the employer knew of the disability until the employee stopped working after being diagnosed. Gallo v Alitalia - Linee Aeree Italiane - Societa Per Azioni, 585 F. Supp. 2d 520, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 94195 (S.D.N.Y. 2008).

Former employee raised genuine issues of fact concerning whether she had an Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA) disability so as to preclude the entry of summary judgment and a genuine issue of material fact existed whether or not the supervisor considered the employee as having an impairment that limited her ability to work or freely go about other major life activities; the employee also at least raised a genuine issue of fact concerning the reasonableness of the short-term accommodation she actually sought. The New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law §§ 296.1(a), 296.6; and, New York City Human Rights Law (NYCHRL), New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107. recognize depression as a disability and even if the employee did not suffer from an ADA-recognized disability, her supervisor did not believe that the employee could resume her position. Reilly v Revlon, Inc., 620 F. Supp. 2d 524, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 45611 (S.D.N.Y. 2009).

Former employee offered evidence sufficient to show that her former employer discriminated against the employee, in violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a), where the employee offered evidence to show that (1) she had not had previous performance deficiencies; (2) she was discharged after returning to work following her brain aneurysm surgery; (3) the manager who discharged the employee, after discussing her aneurysm, commented that they needed "someone at the top of their game" and someone "who could handle the pressure"; and (4) the employer appeared to regard the employee as being precluded from all television production jobs due to the aneurysm. Primmer v CBS Studios, Inc., 667 F. Supp. 2d 248, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 81187 (S.D.N.Y. 2009).

Employee stated a retaliation claim under both the New York State Human Rights Law (NYSHRL), N.Y. Exec. Law § 290 et seq., and the New York City Human Rights Law (NYCHRL), New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-101 et seq., based on her letter to a city official in which she voiced her opposition to unlawful employment practices with regard to her need to take an absence from work due to multiple sclerosis under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA), 29 USCS § 2601 et seq. . Harper v New York City, Hous. Auth., 673 F. Supp. 2d 174, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 105427 (S.D.N.Y. 2009).

While there is no unbending or rigid rule about what circumstances allow an inference of discrimination when there is an adverse employment decision, a plaintiff cannot simply rely on the fact that she was terminated; rather, she must point to facts that suggest the termination was motivated, at least in part, by animus based on her alleged disability. A plaintiff cannot sustain an action based on her conclusory allegations of discrimination. Vinokur v Sovereign Bank, 701 F. Supp. 2d 276, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26854 (E.D.N.Y. 2010).

Based on the undisputed evidence and drawing every inference in the former employee's favor, no reasonable juror could conclude that the employer refused or failed to reasonably accommodate the employee's disability; on at least five occasions between 1999 and 2006, the employee was provided medically-excused leaves of absence from work due to her medical condition, and further, in response to the employee's request for Thursdays off, which was supported by a physician's note indicating that the employee could not work evenings past 5:00 p.m., she was reassigned to work on Sundays, when the branch was open until 1:00 p.m. That the parties dispute whether the employer asked for additional medical documentation was immaterial; although the employee was not happy with her reassignment, she failed to produce any admissible evidence that the steps taken by the employer to accommodate her disability were unreasonable, otherwise inadequate under the circumstances, or motivated by discriminatory animus. Vinokur v Sovereign Bank, 701 F. Supp. 2d 276, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26854 (E.D.N.Y. 2010).

Fact issues remained on a former employee's disability discrimination claim as to whether the employer was alerted to the need for additional accommodations, whether the employee could perform the essential functions of the job with assistance, and whether proposed accommodations were reasonable. Lavigna v State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 736 F. Supp. 2d 504, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 86865 (N.D.N.Y. 2010).

Very close temporal proximity between a supervisor's realization of the severity of the employee's condition and the mailing of the termination letter, coupled with a disbelief of the supervisor's stated reasons for terminating the employee rooted in a suspicion of mendacity, could justify a finder of fact in inferring intentional discrimination. Voltaire v Home Servs. Sys., 823 F. Supp. 2d 77, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 115081 (E.D.N.Y. 2011).

Even if the U.S. Supreme Court decided that transgendered individuals were not members of a protected class for the purposes of Title VII, creditor would still belong to a protected class for purposes of the New York State Human Rights Law and her state court judgment would still be valid and entitled to full faith and credit by the bankruptcy court in the creditor's action to have the judgment determined to be nondischargeable. Fuller v Rea (In re Rea), 606 B.R. 531, 2019 Bankr. LEXIS 2364 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2019).

34. —AIDS-related

Discharge of complainant from his job as waiter occurred immediately after it became known he was diagnosed as suffering from AIDS-related complex; to extent restaurant asserts complainant failed to present expert testimony to establish he was afflicted with ARC, or that ARC is not "disability" contemplated by article 15 of Executive Law, these issues were not before administrative agency, and court may not consider them for first time on review–to extent complainant was similarly employed by another restaurant, Commissioner of Human Rights should offset wages and tips so earned against instant back-pay award–$5,000 awarded by Commissioner for mental anguish will not be disturbed; complainant's testimony as to mental anguish he suffered is sufficient to support such award, and expert medical or other corroborative testimony is not required. Club Swamp Annex v White, 167 A.D.2d 400, 561 N.Y.S.2d 609, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13621 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1990), app. denied, 77 N.Y.2d 809, 571 N.Y.S.2d 912, 575 N.E.2d 398, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 2508 (N.Y. 1991).

Determination that employer did not unlawfully discriminate against complainant because of his HIV-seropositive status was supported by medical and other evidence that physical manifestations of complainant's disability rendered him physically unable to perform job duties of any available position. Phillips ex rel. Phillips v Rosa, 222 A.D.2d 592, 635 N.Y.S.2d 92, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12917 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1995), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 968, 647 N.Y.S.2d 722, 670 N.E.2d 1354, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 5189 (N.Y. 1996).

Under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a), employee claimed that he was discriminatorily discharged based upon his employer's perception that he had the human immunodeficiency virus. The court dismissed that claim by summary judgment as the employee did not make a showing that the employer's legitimate nondiscriminatory financial distress reason for discharging him was pretextual. Scardace v Mid Island Hosp., Inc., 21 A.D.3d 363, 800 N.Y.S.2d 42, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8229 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2005).

Homosexual man who did not have AIDS and did not test positive for HIV infection stated cause of action against his former employer for employment disability discrimination under CLS Exec § 296 based on his claim that he was fired because of employer's perception that he had AIDS due to his having had sexual relations with person known to be HIV-positive, since statute bans discrimination based on perception, correct or not, that someone is HIV-positive; asymptomatic HIV infection is diagnosable medical abnormality and should be considered "disability" for purposes of statute. Petri v Bank of New York Co., 153 Misc. 2d 426, 582 N.Y.S.2d 608, 1992 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 71 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1992).

Employee's termination, allegedly for his admission of petty theft, did not violate New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a), where the employer was unaware of the employee's HIV-positive status. Priore v N.Y. Yankees, 307 A.D.2d 67, 761 N.Y.S.2d 608, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6119 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 504, 775 N.Y.S.2d 781, 807 N.E.2d 894, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 4134 (N.Y. 2003).

35. —Alcoholism

Court would affirm city's determination terminating petitioner's employment as parking lot attendant where he did not contest substantial evidence of his misconduct while on duty, including drinking and refusing to undergo breathalyzer test as directed by supervisor, and although he established prima facie case that conduct which formed basis for his discharge was causally related to his alcoholism, city showed that subsequent to his completion of alcohol treatment program, he had relapse while on duty and was immediately charged with misconduct. Myszczenko v City of Poughkeepsie, 239 A.D.2d 584, 657 N.Y.S.2d 455, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5639 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

City police commissioner's decision to dismiss police officer was based on his misconduct, not his alcoholism, where officer, while attending memorial service for slain police officers, twice slid down hotel banister in nude and once discharged fire extinguisher without cause, resulting in hotel's evacuation in early morning hours. Hagmaier v Bratton, 245 A.D.2d 147, 665 N.Y.S.2d 880, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13034 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1997).

Termination of correction officer for his pre-rehabilitation alcohol-related absenteeism violated Human Rights Law where he established that his dismissal was for misconduct caused by his alcoholism and that he performed his job in satisfactory manner after his discharge from rehabilitation program. Singleton v Kerik, 282 A.D.2d 682, 723 N.Y.S.2d 695, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3974 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 602, 735 N.Y.S.2d 491, 760 N.E.2d 1287, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 3268 (N.Y. 2001).

Police officer was properly dismissed from force because of his refusal to acknowledge and accept treatment for alcoholism, even though Human Rights Law and Federal Rehabilitation Act prohibit employment discrimination on basis of disability which does not impede employee's performance of job-related activities in reasonable manner, since exclusion from employment is legally permissible where there exists rationally-based expectation that physical or psychological condition will result in future disability and it was reasonable to conclude that long-term effects of officer's alcoholism would result in diminished capacity to perform police functions and exercise judgment required of police officer. Smith v Ortiz, 136 Misc. 2d 110, 517 N.Y.S.2d 352, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2391 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1987).

Employee established prima facie case of disability discrimination where he admittedly suffered from recognized mental disability of alcoholism, his ingestion of alcohol was compulsive and beyond his control, it impaired normal function, and he was terminated from his position (in which he enjoyed unblemished record of promotions) after he revealed his disability to his supervisor and that he was seeking treatment through Alcoholics Anonymous. Grullon v South Bronx Overall Economic Dev. Corp., 185 Misc. 2d 645, 712 N.Y.S.2d 911, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 350 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 2000).

Nothing in case law or statutory framework of state and New York City Human Rights Law requires plaintiff to introduce medical evidence to prove his disability of alcoholism. Grullon v South Bronx Overall Economic Dev. Corp., 185 Misc. 2d 645, 712 N.Y.S.2d 911, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 350 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 2000).

Employee was not required to prove, in establishing prima facie case of disability discrimination, that his alcoholism adversely manifested itself in some significant way in his work, such that his performance at work would be "impaired" thereby. Grullon v South Bronx Overall Economic Dev. Corp., 185 Misc. 2d 645, 712 N.Y.S.2d 911, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 350 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 2000).

Jury was free to consider employer's "dishonesty about" reason for employee's discharge for alcoholism as affirmative evidence of guilt of disability discrimination where employer's witnesses presented weak and inconsistent testimony regarding claimed budget cuts and "budget reallocation," and evidence showed that discharge occurred shortly after employee revealed his disability to his supervisor, who was involved in decision to discharge him. Grullon v South Bronx Overall Economic Dev. Corp., 185 Misc. 2d 645, 712 N.Y.S.2d 911, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 350 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 2000).

Public employer was entitled to summary judgment dismissing discharged police officer's disability discrimination claim; although alcoholism could be the basis for a human rights violation claim, such a claim could only be made by an employee punished after rehabilitation, and, moreover, it seemed likelier that the officer was discharged for repeated incidences of family violence and other assaultive behavior. Riddick v City of New York, 4 A.D.3d 242, 772 N.Y.S.2d 294, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1854 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2004).

Physician, whose alcoholism prevented him from performing in reasonable manner activities involved in his former position as hospital's chief of internal medicine, could not maintain disability discrimination action against hospital for its refusal to reinstate him to such position. Altman v New York City Health & Hosps. Corp., 100 F.3d 1054, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 30112 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1996).

Physician's claim against hospital under CLS Exec Law § 296, arising from hospital's refusal to reinstate him as chief of internal medicine 3 months after he had been found visibly drunk while treating patient and after he completed treatment program and entered recovery program, is denied summarily, because although alcoholism is "disability" for purposes of § 296, evidence shows that had physician been restored to his old post, he could not have performed his duties in manner which involved reasonably limited risk of harm to third parties. Altman v New York City Health & Hosps. Corp., 903 F. Supp. 503, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14114 (S.D.N.Y. 1995), aff'd, 100 F.3d 1054, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 30112 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1996).

Court would dismiss recovering alcoholic's claim under CLS Exec § 296 for not being reinstated to his former position as hospital medical director after he completed alcohol treatment program; although alcoholism is "disability" under statute, plaintiff could not establish that, if he had been reinstated, he could have performed his duties in manner that involved "reasonably" limited risk of harm to third parties. Altman v New York City Health & Hosps. Corp., 903 F. Supp. 503, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14114 (S.D.N.Y. 1995), aff'd, 100 F.3d 1054, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 30112 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1996).

Employee made out claim of disability discrimination where he alleged that he suffered from alcoholism, that he was rehabilitated but had relapsed on day of his termination when he drank after work hours, and that he was fired when his employer found him on work premises 20 to 30 minutes after had shift had ended. Lugo v Milford Mgmt. Corp., 956 F. Supp. 1120, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2004 (S.D.N.Y. 1997).

36. —Cancer

Defendant's motion for summary judgment should have been granted in action for unlawful discrimination based on disability–defendant is close corporation in which husband and wife are principals; they employ one full-time person and one part-time person; plaintiff, defendant's full-time employee, was terminated following surgery for breast cancer; Executive Law § 296, which prohibits discriminatory practices based on disability, is inapplicable because of number of persons employed by defendant; Executive Law § 292 (5) provides that "employer" does not include any employer with fewer than four persons in his employ, and while plaintiff contends that defendant employed at least four persons, this figure is reached only by including principals husband and wife as employees. Germakian v Kenny International Corp., 151 A.D.2d 342, 543 N.Y.S.2d 66, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7998 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 615, 549 N.Y.S.2d 960, 549 N.E.2d 151, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 3205 (N.Y. 1989).

Cause of action for disability discrimination was sufficiently stated where plaintiff alleged that he had been retained for life term as defendant's cantor for Passover and High Holiday services, that he was terminated solely on grounds of his medical condition (cancer), and that his medical condition did not prevent him from performing his employment activities in reasonable manner. Malamood v Kiamesha Concord, Inc., 182 A.D.2d 359, 582 N.Y.S.2d 118, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5424 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1992).

Plaintiff's cancers and attendant surgeries did not constitute disability under discrimination statutes where they did not substantially limit her in "a major life activity," as evidenced by her physician's letters affirming her ability to work on regular full-time basis. Sirota v N.Y. City Bd. of Educ., 283 A.D.2d 369, 725 N.Y.S.2d 332, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6583 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2001).

Plaintiff's claim for wrongful discharge under the Human Rights Law (Executive Law § 296 [1] [a]) based on physical disability (plaintiff having been discharged after being hospitalized for treatment of breast cancer) is not exempt from the broad arbitration clause of her employment contract, which is governed by the Federal Arbitration Act (9 USC § 1 et seq.) because her employment as a registered securities representative involved transactions in commerce, since there are no external Federal "legal constraints" which preclude arbitration of plaintiff's discrimination claim. The Federal policy underlying the Federal Arbitration Act requires the rigorous enforcement of arbitration agreements "unless Congress itself has evinced an intention to preclude a waiver of judicial remedies for the statutory rights at issue" and since there is no comparable Federal statute prohibiting disability-based discrimination by private employers, there is no congressional intent to exempt that category of claims from arbitration. DeSapio v Josephthal & Co., 143 Misc. 2d 611, 540 N.Y.S.2d 932, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 228 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1989).

Trial court erred by dismissing a worker's complaint alleging employment discrimination based on a disability, in violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 and the New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107, since the employer (the City of New York), failed to engage in the required individualized process when considering the worker's request for extended medical leave, namely whether it was a reasonable accommodation, and the City's denial of such a request on the basis that extended medical leave was only for permanent civil service employees was a violation of both statutes. Separate and apart from the City's failure to engage in an individualized interactive process in evaluating the worker's request for accommodation, the worker had sufficiently pled causes of actions for disability discrimination under both statutes by establishing that her employment was terminated, that she requested leave to be able to have and recover from cancer surgery, and the accommodation she sought (extended medical leave) was not excluded by the definition of reasonable accommodation under the New York City Human Rights Law. Phillips v City of New York, 66 A.D.3d 170, 884 N.Y.S.2d 369, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5834 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2009), overruled in part, Jacobsen v New York City Health & Hosps. Corp., 22 N.Y.3d 824, 988 N.Y.S.2d 86, 11 N.E.3d 159, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 570 (N.Y. 2014).

Plaintiff's claim of discriminatory adverse employment action, alleging she was demoted, her salary was cut, she was subjected to a hostile work environment, and was constructively discharged, on account of her breast cancer, failed because plaintiff had failed to produce evidence to carry her burden of rebutting the employer's proffered nondiscriminatory reason for demoting plaintiff and reducing her salary; the employer produced evidence that plaintiff's division was merged into the employer's larger division because plaintiff's division's low and declining sales volume did not justify its existence as a freestanding division, and the employer produced evidence that the restructuring was motivated by the goal of achieving economies of scale through the combining of certain duplicative functions and that the changes in plaintiff's job description and salary resulted from that restructuring. Ferraro v Kellwood Co., 440 F.3d 96, 2006 U.S. App. LEXIS 5707 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2006).

Chief perfusionist at county hospital, 57-year-old woman diagnosed with breast cancer, states viable claim under Exec § 296, where she asserts that high-level hospital employees created and implemented policy to effect "changing of guard" at hospital and to replace her with other employees who were younger, politically and socially connected to themselves, and not physically disabled, because amended complaint pleads facts that could raise inference of age and disability discrimination. Bendel v Westchester County Health Care Corp., 112 F. Supp. 2d 324, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13075 (S.D.N.Y. 2000).

37. —Cerebral palsy

State Division of Human Rights did not act arbitrarily or capriciously in determining that claimant, victim of congenital mild cerebral palsy, was not unlawfully discriminated against when she was dismissed from her job, since alleged discriminatory act occurred prior to effective date of 1979 amendment of CLS Executive Law § 292(21), and thus it was only necessary to demonstrate that complainant's physical or medical condition in some way interfered with her performance, and since Division could have reasonably concluded that decision to dismiss complainant was motivated by its interest in upholding job standards. Washington Square Inst. for Psychotherapy & Mental Health v New York State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 67 N.Y.2d 699, 499 N.Y.S.2d 926, 490 N.E.2d 845, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 16632 (N.Y. 1986).

In an Article 78 proceeding to review the dismissal of a complaint alleging discrimination based on disability against a victim of congenital mild cerebral palsy who was dismissed by employer from its training program for psychoanalytic psychotherapy after the six patients assigned to her terminated therapy, an unprecedented 100 percent drop-out rate, the order of the State Division of Human Rights finding no probable cause would be found to have a rational basis, since the Division could have reasonably concluded that respondent's decision to dismiss petitioner from its program was motivated by its interest in upholding clinical standards as well as its concern for the patients assigned to her. Moreover, the employer in an effort to assist petitioner in meeting the program's clinical requirements, offered to tailor its curriculum to accommodate her disability, which offer she rejected. Washington Square Institute for Psychotherapy & Mental Health v New York State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 108 A.D.2d 672, 485 N.Y.S.2d 540, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 43013 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1985), aff'd, 67 N.Y.2d 699, 499 N.Y.S.2d 926, 490 N.E.2d 845, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 16632 (N.Y. 1986).

38. —Crohn's disease

Medical evidence and statistical data were insufficient to support determination of police commissioner that there was reasonable expectation that probationary officer would be unable to perform job of officer currently or in future, despite fact that officer had suffered from Crohn's disease (gastrointestinal inflammation) and general statistical data suggested that symptoms might recur, where recurring symptoms—many of which were treatable—would not be so disabling as to prevent officer from reasonably performing his duties. Antonsen v Ward, 77 N.Y.2d 506, 569 N.Y.S.2d 328, 571 N.E.2d 636, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 364 (N.Y. 1991).

39. —Drug dependency

Discharge of employee based on positive test result for cocaine did not constitute discrimination in employment against disabled person in violation of CLS Exec § 296(1) where there was no showing that basis of discharge was disability due to drug dependency, and discharge was based on adverse effect on employee's integrity brought about by even casual use of cocaine. In re Claim of Atkinson, 185 A.D.2d 415, 586 N.Y.S.2d 319, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8896 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992).

Trial court erred in denying a hospital's summary judgment motion pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. 3212 in a nurse's employment discrimination action pursuant to N.Y. Exec. Law § 296; the hospital demonstrated valid, nondiscriminatory reasons for terminating the nurse's employment which were not based on the nurse's past drug use, and the nurse failed to raise a triable issue of fact as to whether the hospital's stated reasons for her discharge were pretextual. Laub v St. Vincent's Med. Ctr., 306 A.D.2d 322, 761 N.Y.S.2d 97, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6506 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003).

40. —Leg weakness

Petitioner, who had been employed as part-time/seasonal police officer, was found to be "not qualified" for full-time status by respondent County Department of Civil Service; respondent determined that due to weakened condition of his legs, petitioner did not satisfy standard for physical fitness established by Municipal Police Training Council (see, 9 NYCRR 6000.3); it was conceded by petitioner's own orthopedist that petitioner wears orthopedic brace on his left knee; this doctor indicated that petitioner suffers from "patella atrophy", or weakness of knee cap; Medical Director of Office of Employee Medical Review found that because of his condition, petitioner would be unable to physically perform duties required of police officer–there was rational basis for determination of respondent; because it was sufficiently demonstrated that condition of petitioner's knee may "prevent the [petitioner] from performing in a reasonable manner the activities involved in the job or occupation sought" (Executive Law § 292 [21]), petitioner's contention that respondent violated Executive Law § 296 in denying him this appointment because of "disability", must be disposed of summarily. Mainzer v Suffolk County Dep't of Civil Service, 159 A.D.2d 627, 553 N.Y.S.2d 26, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2956 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 704, 559 N.Y.S.2d 983, 559 N.E.2d 677, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 1475 (N.Y. 1990).

Judgment which dismissed Article 78 proceeding affirmed–petitioner, probationary police officer, was injured in off-duty automobile accident; his injury consisted of compound fracture of left femur, which necessitated two surgeries and implantation of steel rod and pins into his leg; two police doctors expressed opinion that petitioner's leg will never heal completely and petitioner will never be able to fully perform his duties as police officer; petitioner's employment as probationary police officer was thereafter terminated–petitioner asserts he was terminated in violation of Executive Law § 296 (1) (a), which states that it is unlawful to discharge individual from employment on basis of disability; definition of "disability" (Executive Law § 292 [21]) states that term shall be limited to disabilities which do not prevent complainant from performing in reasonable manner activities involved in job or occupation sought or held–record clearly demonstrates that petitioner's disability does not fall within definition of term "disability" as contemplated by Executive Law and, accordingly, termination of petitioner did not constitute unlawful discrimination on part of respondent–additionally, where there is dispute among several doctors regarding petitioner's prognosis, it is not for courts to choose between diverse professional opinions–moreover, as probationary employee, petitioner could have been terminated at any time without hearing or statement of reasons for discharge; absent proof that discharge was in bad faith or for improper reason, probationary employees may be dismissed without hearing; there is no evidence in record which supports conclusory allegations of bad faith contained in petition. O'Hare v New York City Police Dep't, 161 A.D.2d 487, 555 N.Y.S.2d 753, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6223 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1990).

Former airline mechanic is unable to prove prima facie case of disability discrimination, where he asserted, in ultimately successful disability proceedings and elsewhere, that he could not perform essential functions of airline mechanic due to injuries to his neck, back, arms, and legs, because he cannot show that he has disability that qualifies him for protection under New York Human Rights Law (Exec §§ 290 et seq.). Micari v TWA, 43 F. Supp. 2d 275, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5976 (E.D.N.Y.), aff'd, 205 F.3d 1323, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 38264 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1999).

41. —Multiple sclerosis

In proceeding under Human Rights Law in which multiple sclerosis patient established that she was unlawfully terminated from her position as school bus driver because of her disability, bus company which employed driver was not shielded from liability on ground that it was required, by CLS Educ § 3624, to defer to school administrator's determination as to driver's physical fitness, inasmuch as it had directed driver to submit to additional physical exam and thus was not in compliance with mandates of Education Law; § 3624 provides for driver to be examined only once yearly. Bayport-Blue Point School Dist. v State Div. of Human Rights, 131 A.D.2d 849, 517 N.Y.S.2d 209, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 48286 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Evidence supported finding by Division of Human Rights that school district unlawfully discriminated against bus driver who was diagnosed as having multiple sclerosis where neurology expert testified that disease did not prevent driver from performing job in reasonable manner; district was not shielded from liability on ground that it had relied on advice of its physician since (1) subjective intent to discriminate is not element of discrimination claim under Human Rights Law, and (2) district's reliance was inappropriate inasmuch as physician lacked previous contact with multiple sclerosis and lacked informed medical opinion as to multiple sclerosis patient's physical ability to drive bus. Bayport-Blue Point School Dist. v State Div. of Human Rights, 131 A.D.2d 849, 517 N.Y.S.2d 209, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 48286 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

42. —Obesity

Dismissal of hazardous waste investigator who is unable to perform during training period as result of obesity does not constitute unlawful discrimination against person with physical impairment. Velger v Williams, 118 A.D.2d 1037, 500 N.Y.S.2d 411, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 54823 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

43. —Pregnancy

In a proceeding alleging discrimination in employment on the basis of sex arising out of a then mandatory pregnancy-related resignation, notwithstanding that the regulation policy of 1959 did not then violate a statutory prescription and a complaint thereon is untimely the seniority system which became available in 1977 effectively revived that policy and constituted a separate discriminatory act, where the seniority system purportedly treated all personnel equally but disallowed credit for service preceding any resignation, thereby failing to take into account the fact that only a pregnancy-related resignation was required and imposing a distinct burden on a woman; a seniority system can be found to currently discriminate against a woman when, in computing seniority, it disregards all service rendered prior to a resignation compelled due to pregnancy, notwithstanding that the law did not prohibit sex-based discrimination when the pregnancy-related resignation was originally demanded. Board of Education v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 56 N.Y.2d 257, 451 N.Y.S.2d 700, 436 N.E.2d 1301, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3357 (N.Y. 1982).

Record contained sufficient evidence to support the Commissioner of the New York State Division of Human Rights' judgment that an employer illegally terminated a pregnant employee to avoid problems with his wife who suspected that he fathered the employee's child, and the state supreme court held that the intermediate appellate court erred by annulling the Commissioner's judgment. Mittl v N.Y. State Div. of Human Rights, 100 N.Y.2d 326, 763 N.Y.S.2d 518, 794 N.E.2d 660, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 1313 (N.Y. 2003).

An order of the State Division of Human Rights awarding compensation to a woman formerly employed as a receptionist/file clerk in a small law firm on the ground that the firm had constructively discharged her when it had found out that she was pregnant would be reversed, where, although a partner in the firm stated that he would not have hired the woman if he had known that she was pregnant, the firm continued to treat her in a businesslike fashion, and, thus, the determination of the Division was not supported by substantial evidence. Beal, Kagan, Lentz & Romasch, P.C. v McCall, 107 A.D.2d 648, 485 N.Y.S.2d 528, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 42513 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1985).

A petition seeking to annul administrative finding of no probable cause to believe that the termination of petitioner's employment was based on her sex or pregnancy was properly dismissed, where the record showed no evidence of a policy against pregnant employees, and demonstrated repeated absences and an unsatisfactory attitude on the part of petitioner. Ditaranto v State Div. of Human Rights, 111 A.D.2d 702, 491 N.Y.S.2d 176, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49960 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1985).

Employee may not be terminated simply because she is pregnant; upon showing of prima facie case of discharge from employment because of gender-related condition of pregnancy, employer has burden to prove that circumstances warranted discharge by articulating legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for termination. Energy Expo, Inc. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 112 A.D.2d 302, 491 N.Y.S.2d 748, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 56263 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1985).

Employer was entitled to summary judgment in gender discrimination action by former employee who alleged that she had been discharged after she had expressed her intention of becoming pregnant and taking maternity leave where any inference of discrimination was rebutted by employer's evidence that he filled employee's position with another woman of childbearing age who subsequently became pregnant and whose position was held open for her return while she was on maternity leave. Anthony v Nemec, 225 A.D.2d 883, 638 N.Y.S.2d 529, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2047 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

Two incidents in which pregnant employees were terminated before complaining employee was hired constituted nothing more than conjecture and speculation and were patently insufficient to establish statistical evidence that employer had practice of discriminating against pregnant employees. Anthony v Nemec, 225 A.D.2d 883, 638 N.Y.S.2d 529, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2047 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

Employer obviously failed to rebut prima facie showing that it had terminated complainant's employment because she was pregnant, in violation of CLS Exec § 296(1)(a), where employer neither appeared at hearing, challenged determination nor appeared in enforcement proceeding. State Div. of Human Rights v Demi Lass Ltd., 232 A.D.2d 335, 648 N.Y.S.2d 925, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11215 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

Court erred in denying defendant's summary judgment motion in action under CLS Exec § 296 for unlawful termination of employment where there was no evidence that defendant's president knew of plaintiff's pregnancy before he terminated her employment, and it was undisputed that president was negotiating with third party to be plaintiff's replacement before he learned of her pregnancy. Smith v Paris Int'l Corp., 267 A.D.2d 223, 699 N.Y.S.2d 490, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12616 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

Court would annul determination finding that employer unlawfully discriminated against employee on basis of sex and pregnancy-related disability where she presented no proof that she was incapacitated by severe sickness or injury when she applied for 3 days from sick leave bank established under collective bargaining agreement or that her application was treated in manner less liberal than those applications from employees with conditions unrelated to pregnancy and recovery from childbirth. Cheektowaga Cent. Sch. Dist. v Graziadei, 267 A.D.2d 985, 700 N.Y.S.2d 334, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13715 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1999), app. denied, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14175 (N.Y. Probationary correction officer met her burden of demonstrating that there were disputed issues of material fact as to whether she was fired for good faith reasons or for discriminatory reasons and thus she was entitled to hearing at which corrections department would have burden of proving, by preponderance of evidence, that it terminated her in good faith, where she claimed that she was terminated because of pregnancy discrimination and it appeared that corrections department decided to terminate her based in part on some absences which were pregnancy-related. Card v Sielaff, 154 Misc. 2d 239, 586 N.Y.S.2d 191, 1992 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 221 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1992).

Plaintiff's disability discrimination claim under the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 290 et seq., failed to state a claim as plaintiff failed to allege that her pregnancy impaired her in exercising a normal bodily function, or that she had any complications in connection with her pregnancy, which prevented her from normal life activity under N.Y. Exec. Law 292(21). Krause v Lancer & Loader Group, LLC, 965 N.Y.S.2d 312, 40 Misc. 3d 385, 2013 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1815 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2013).

Plaintiff's discrimination claim based on pregnancy under the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 290 et seq., survived a motion to strike where plaintiff alleged that she was in a protected class due to her pregnancy immediately prior to her discharge, that she was recruited by defendant one to work for defendant two based on his prior knowledge of plaintiff's ability to procure sales, and thus, that she was qualified for her position; given that plaintiff was discharged shortly after telling her supervisor of her pregnancy, she sufficiently raised an inference of discrimination. Krause v Lancer & Loader Group, LLC, 965 N.Y.S.2d 312, 40 Misc. 3d 385, 2013 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1815 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2013).

Due to the common management, ownership, and financial control of an employer and its interrelated entities, their employees were properly aggregated to satisfy N.Y. Exec. Law § 292(5); in addition, since the employer violated N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1) by discriminating against an employee based on her pregnancy, it was not entitled to N.Y. Exec. Law § 298 relief. Matter of Argyle Realty Assocs. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 65 A.D.3d 273, 882 N.Y.S.2d 458, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5399 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2009).

Employers were not entitled to summary judgment on the employee's claim of discrimination based on pregnancy under the New York State Human Rights Law and New York City Human Rights Law due to material factual issues regarding whether the employers' reasons for terminating the employee, because she allegedly refused to speak to them, were a pretext given the employee's testimony that she merely asked to postpone a conversation until she was in less pain. Coronado v Weill Cornell Med. Coll., 66 Misc. 3d 404, 114 N.Y.S.3d 193, 2019 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 6411 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2019).

Record relied on by an administrative law judge and a New York court in finding that a Chapter 11 debtor violated N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 when he fired an attorney from her job after she became pregnant with her third child made it clear that the debtor acted willfully and with malice, and was sufficient to sustain the attorney's claim that a judgment in the amount of $244,665 she obtained against the debtor was nondischargeable under 11 U.S.C.S. § 523(a)(6). Rocco v Goldberg (In re Goldberg), 487 B.R. 112, 2013 Bankr. LEXIS 380 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 2013).

Former employee sufficiently alleged facts to survive motion to dismiss disability discrimination claim under CLS Exec Law § 296(6), where former employee alleged that she was terminated based on her pregnancy-related disabilities in violation of statute, and stated that her direct supervisor and another manager asked her if she wanted to go on disability leave or take leave of absence due to her pregnancy-related conditions, and she was terminated one week later. Cerrato v Durham, 941 F. Supp. 388, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13454 (S.D.N.Y. 1996).

Pregnancy discrimination claim of village police officer under CLS Exec Law § 296 cannot be decided summarily, because, although village's disability policy appears to be facially neutral, female officer creates issue of material fact in alleging with support that policy was applied in intentionally discriminatory manner and had adverse impact on pregnant officers. Lehmuller v Incorporated Village of Sag Harbor, 944 F. Supp. 1087, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16896 (E.D.N.Y. 1996).

Terminated physician's office manager states viable claim under CLS Exec Law § 296 for pregnancy discrimination, where physician's alleged statements regarding his preference that long time pass before manager became pregnant again raises issue of whether he acted on this preference when he made termination decision following announcement of manager's second pregnancy, because possibility of reprisal for bearing children is focus of discrimination law. Rivkin v Coleman, 978 F. Supp. 539, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15995 (S.D.N.Y. 1997).

Employee failed to support pregnancy discrimination claim in face of employer's nondiscriminatory explanation that employee was terminated because she had exceeded 12 weeks of maternity leave allowed by employer. LaCoparra v Pergament Home Ctrs., Inc., 982 F. Supp. 213, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15787 (S.D.N.Y. 1997).

Summary judgment is denied both sides in employment discrimination case brought by unmarried pregnant teacher who was fired from church-affiliated school, where she states prima facie case, while school states that she violated its religious teachings by engaging in premarital sexual activity, because issues of fact remain, and jury is in at least as good position as judge or appellate court to determine whether it was pregnancy or fornication that caused school to dismiss teacher. Ganzy v Allen Christian Sch., 995 F. Supp. 340, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20938 (E.D.N.Y. 1997).

Employee terminated 2 weeks after returning to work from maternity leave sufficiently alleged inference of pregnancy discrimination in violation of Human Rights Law, where her supervisor allegedly expressed displeasure on learning of her pregnancy and fired her under auspices of her refusal to attend seminar after being told she was not permitted to bring her baby, which she sought to do in order to breast-feed. Bond v Sterling, Inc., 997 F. Supp. 306, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3103 (N.D.N.Y. 1998).

Terminated sales representative's pregnancy discrimination claim under Exec § 296 may proceed, even though employer alleges she was fired for coming back late from vacation and poor performance, because timing of firing and other inconsistencies give rise to possibility that proffered reason was pretext for pregnancy discrimination. Flores v Buy Buy Baby, Inc., 118 F. Supp. 2d 425, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15834 (S.D.N.Y. 2000).

Cross motions for summary judgment on discharged county employee's claims under the Pregnancy Discrimination Act, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e(k) and New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, were denied where a factual issue remained whether plaintiff's pregnancy or her absence without leave was the real reason for her termination. Pellegrino v County of Orange, 313 F. Supp. 2d 303, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6565 (S.D.N.Y. 2004).

Employee's only evidence that her supervisor's stated reasons for recommending the employee's termination—her bad reputation and her unimpressive work on a pitch—were pretext for unlawful pregnancy discrimination was the fact she was pregnant and she was treated unfairly; this was plainly insufficient. The evidence created, at best, an extremely weak issue of fact as to the truth of the supervisor's reasons for suggesting her termination; yet there could be no question that the two individuals who terminated the employee only alter consulting other supervisors, and who were unaware that the employee was pregnant, acted without discriminatory intent. Lambert v McCann Erickson, 543 F. Supp. 2d 265, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26441 (S.D.N.Y. 2008).

Employer met its burden of production by putting forth evidence that the employee was fired for poor performance; the firing individuals' decisions could only have been discriminatory to the extent that they relied on recommendations or assessments that were motivated by improper consideration of the employee's pregnancy. This meant that none of the individuals' independent pre-termination actions or perceptions, however unfair or erroneous, could give rise to an inference that either was motivated by the employee's pregnancy. Lambert v McCann Erickson, 543 F. Supp. 2d 265, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26441 (S.D.N.Y. 2008).

Given that there was nothing in the record to suggest that the employee was more to blame for the altercation than a coworker, and given the disputed circumstances surrounding the employee's decision not to report to work the Monday following the altercation, the disparate disciplinary action taken by defendants against the employee could reasonably be viewed as a pretext for unlawful discrimination based on pregnancy. Polito v Tri-Wire Eng'g Solution, Inc., 699 F. Supp. 2d 480, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26008 (E.D.N.Y. 2010).

44. —Psychiatric disorder

Substantial evidence supported determination by Division of Human Rights that city board of education retirement system did not discriminate against petitioner in denying reinstatement because of his psychiatric disability where petitioner presented evidence that he was physically fit for employment but failed to controvert evidence that he suffered from continuing psychiatric disability which prevented him from performing job in reasonable manner. Bolecek v State, 151 A.D.2d 478, 542 N.Y.S.2d 268, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7460 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 613, 547 N.Y.S.2d 847, 547 N.E.2d 102, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 3092 (N.Y. 1989).

Employee with bipolar affective disorder, who admitted striking coworker, did not establish that employer's reasons for discharging her were pretext for discrimination in violation of CLS Exec § 296(1)(a). Glowacki v Buffalo Gen. Hosp., 2 F. Supp. 2d 346, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6241 (W.D.N.Y. 1998).

Hospital clerk's disability discrimination claim must fail, even though she was diagnosed with Bipolar Affective Disorder, where she was transferred due to demonstrated lack of dependability in her job and terminated after she hit and injured co-worker, because hospital articulated legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for termination, and clerk could not prove pretext, even admitting that she "swatted" co-worker. Glowacki v Buffalo Gen. Hosp., 2 F. Supp. 2d 346, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6241 (W.D.N.Y. 1998).

County department of social service's motion for summary judgment was denied on a psychiatric patient's constructive-discharge claim based on disability discrimination under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(a), where the department did not dispute that it knew of the patient's mental disorder, the patient believed that the very people responsible for employing him had him arrested, taken to a hospital in handcuffs, and involuntarily detained, and a jury could conclude that the department's given reasons for taking its actions were not its true reasons. Ruhlmann v Ulster County Dep't of Soc. Servs., 234 F. Supp. 2d 140, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25784 (N.D.N.Y. 2002).

In an employee's suit against her former employer alleging employment discrimination in violation of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), 42 U.S.C.S. § 12101 et seq., and the New York State Human Rights Law (NYSHRL), N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., wherein the employee asserted that the employer discriminated against her by terminating her from her employment due to her depression, that the employer retaliated against her by terminating her for expressing her intention to file a formal complaint against her supervisor, and that she was subjected to a hostile work environment based upon her disability, the employee set forth sufficient facts to defeat the employer's motion for summary judgment on her claims for actual disability under the NYSHRL, record of disability under the ADA and NYSHRL, perceived disability under the ADA and NYSHRL, her claim of a hostile work environment under the NYSHRL, and her claim for retaliation, since there were disputed issues of material fact as to those claims. However, the court found that there was insufficient evidence to raise genuine issues of fact regarding the employee's discrimination claim upon actual disability under the ADA since the evidence showed that, at the time she was denied a pay increase/bonus and was terminated (the adverse employment actions she alleged), she was not suffering from a disability that substantially limited a major life activity since she admittedly was not experiencing any symptoms of depression at that time. McCowan v HSBC Bank USA, 689 F. Supp. 2d 390, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12289 (E.D.N.Y. 2010).

45. —Seizures

Discharged bank employee failed to state cause of action for employment discrimination since contention that she was discharged because she suffered from nervous condition was entirely unfounded and conflicted with her acknowledgement that her dismissal resulted from inability to pass 2 polygraph tests administered to all employees following discovery of sizable cash shortage at branch; additionally, contention that her nervous condition constituted "disability" within meaning of CLS Exec § 292 was unsupported. Buffolino v Long Island Sav. Bank, FSB, 126 A.D.2d 508, 510 N.Y.S.2d 628, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 41650 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Petitioner's discharge as probationary Transit Police Officer was not violative of Executive Law § 296, which makes it unlawful discriminatory practice to discharge employee because of disability; pursuant to standards for medical fitness promulgated by Municipal Police Training Council, presence of seizure disorder is sufficient cause for disqualification of police candidate, and to qualify for service as police officer, candidate "must be seizure free for two years without medication" (9 NYCRR 6000.6 [31]); petitioner suffered from seizure disorder prior to her discharge and her disorder would have prevented her from performing her full duties until long after date on which her probationary status was scheduled to conclude; inasmuch as her permanent appointment to police force was precluded by existence of her seizure disorder and she was medically unqualified to reasonably perform activities involved in position, she is not entitled to protection of Human Rights Law; accordingly, petitioner has failed to sustain her claim of discrimination based upon her disability–as probationary employee, petitioner could be discharged without hearing and without statement of specific reasons; in absence of evidence of bad faith or unlawful reasons for discharge, respondents' determination is upheld. LaMotta v New York City Transit Authority, 165 A.D.2d 875, 560 N.Y.S.2d 346, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11511 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1990).

New York City Transit Authority did not illegally discriminate on basis of disability (CLS Exec § 296) in firing probationary police officer who suffered from epileptic seizures where (1) department's policy stated that presence of seizure disorder was sufficient cause for disqualification of candidate, and that candidate must be seizure-free for 2 years to qualify for permanent appointment, and (2) medical evidence showed that officer suffered from seizure disorder which would interfere with her duties until long after her probationary status expired; since petitioner was legally excluded from permanent appointment, she was not protected by Human Rights Law. LaMotta v New York City Transit Authority, 165 A.D.2d 875, 560 N.Y.S.2d 346, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11511 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1990).

46. —Urinary disorder

In action by probationary police officer against housing authority for being terminated based upon alleged disability, where officer alleges that termination was arbitrary and capricious contrary to CLS Executive Law § 296 forbidding employment discrimination based on physical disability, petitioner is entitled to full evidentiary hearing pursuant to CPLR 7804 in view of strong prima facie showing impermissible discrimination; respondent's position that petitioner suffered from untreatable disease of urinary tract was manifestly unsupportable since record indicated that petitioner had no underlying urinary tract disease, and if there was residual condition, it had been rendered benign through treatment; it is impossible to conclude that respondent had made good faith effort to evaluate extent to which petitioner's alleged impairment would interfere with reasonable performance of his duties as required by Executive Law § 296(1)(a). Carrero v New York City Housing Authority, 116 A.D.2d 141, 500 N.Y.S.2d

246, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50373 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1986).

47. —Vision impairment

Petitioner was discharged from his position as carpenter with New York City Transit Authority (NYCTA) in violation of CLS Exec § 296 where NYCTA failed to show that petitioner's vision impairment rendered him incapable of reasonably performing activities involved in position of carpenter. Obas v Kiley, 149 A.D.2d 422, 539 N.Y.S.2d 767, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4393 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

48. National origin discrimination

In an employment discrimination action against a county, the Appellate Division properly dismissed the complaint which alleged that employment with defendant county was terminated on the basis of plaintiff's race and national origin in violation of Exec Law § 296 where plaintiff's failure to timely file a notice of claim under Gen. Mun L § 50-e was fatal in that the action had not been brought to indicate a public interest and leave to serve a late notice of claim had not been granted. Mills v County of Monroe, 59 N.Y.2d 307, 464 N.Y.S.2d 709, 451 N.E.2d 456, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 3161 (N.Y.), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 1018, 104 S. Ct. 551, 78 L. Ed. 2d 725, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 2750 (U.S. 1983).

One-year filing requirement of CLS Exec § 297(5) did not apply to action by school district employee alleging unlawful suspension without pay due solely to his national origin or ancestry in violation of CLS Exec § 296; institution of civil actions to recover damages for unlawful discriminatory practices under § 296 is governed by 3-year statute of limitations prescribed in CLS CPLR § 214(2). School district employee was precluded from maintaining action against district for his suspension allegedly due to national origin or ancestry in violation of CLS Exec § 296 where he failed to comply with requirement of CLS Educ § 3813(1) that notice of claim be served within 3 months of accrual of claim, and he did not seek leave to serve late notice of claim until after 3-year limitation period of CLS Exec § 214(2) had expired. Stoetzel v Wappingers Cent. School Dist., 166 A.D.2d 643, 561 N.Y.S.2d 71, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12920 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1990).

Court would annul determination finding that petitioner, not-for-profit corporation which renovated abandoned buildings, discriminated against Hispanic complainant on basis of national origin where petitioner provided low-income housing for homeless and training to its trainees, majority of whom were Hispanic and black, and overwhelming evidence was that petitioner was not anti-Hispanic and that true reasons for complainant's dismissal was that he was employee malcontent who saw himself as supervisor and could not accept subordinate role. Youth Action Homes v State Div. of Human Rights ex rel. Palombo, 231 A.D.2d 7, 659 N.Y.S.2d 447, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6945 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1997).

Caucasian waitresses established prima facie case of restaurant's discrimination by showing that Asian waitresses were given preference with respect to hours and table assignments. Young Fu Hsu v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 241 A.D.2d 913, 661 N.Y.S.2d 400, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7842 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1997).

Causes of action for discrimination based on ethnic origin were viable under both CLS Exec § 296 and NYC Admin Code § 8-107, and were properly sustained on motion for summary judgment in view of evidence of persistent verbal abuse. Nacinovich v Tullet & Tokyo Forex, 257 A.D.2d 523, 685 N.Y.S.2d 17, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 646 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1999).

University was entitled to summary judgment in a former employee's disparate impact claim concerning the elimination of the employee's adjunct teaching position because the university showed that of the six other adjuncts who were not reappointed, none were Japanese, and, in fact, all were non-Asian and two were Caucasian. Abe v New York Univ., 169 A.D.3d 445, 94 N.Y.S.3d 17, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 968 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2019).

Plaintiff's discharge from his employment with a town highway department solely because he was the son of the former town supervisor, a political adversary of the successor supervisor, did not state a cause of action for unlawful discriminatory practice under Exec Law § 296(1) as a discharge based on national origin; although Exec Law § 292(8) provides that the term national origin includes ancestry, the legislative intent of the statute was to prohibit discrimination based upon the country in which an individual was born, as well as the country in which an individual's ancestors were born; the discharge of an employee based on political differences with the employee's father is not prohibited. Ingalls v Lyndon, 127 Misc. 2d 442, 486 N.Y.S.2d 659, 1985 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2614 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1985).

Jury could reasonably conclude that employee suffered discrimination due to his Korean nationality where (1) Chinese co-worker, who was primary mover in decision to terminate employee, was shown to be biased against Koreans, and (2) at meeting discussing employee's termination, employee was described as former member of Korean military who was "authoritarian." Employee, as native of Korea, was member of protected class for purpose of employment discrimination action brought under federal Civil Rights Act of 1964 and state Human Rights Law. Song v Ives Laboratories, Inc., 957 F.2d 1041, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 2608 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1992).

Bus driver, who was of Puerto Rican background, failed to establish that he was fired due to national origin or ethnic discrimination in violation of Human Rights Law, where employer asserted that driver was fired because he tested positive for cocaine, drug test was administered in nondiscriminatory fashion to all drivers, and supervisor made no remarks at termination meeting suggesting that invidious discrimination was reason for discharge. Santiago v Greyhound Lines, Inc., 956 F. Supp. 144, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1048 (N.D.N.Y. 1997).

Probationary patient representative's national origin discrimination claim must fail, even if hospital had English-only policy for conducting hospital business and she was terminated for violating it, where she was hired because of her ability to speak Spanish and English, because policy was clearly not used to discriminate against her. Velasquez v Goldwater Mem. Hosp., 88 F. Supp. 2d 257, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2926 (S.D.N.Y. 2000).

Where plaintiff claims in her national origin discrimination claims that, on two occasions her supervisor told her that she was a "wetback," referring to her Mexican heritage, this harassment could not be classified as severe or pervasive, such that, as a matter of law, plaintiff could not maintain her national origin discrimination claim under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e-2(a)(1), or the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq. EEOC v Rotary Corp., 297 F. Supp. 2d 643, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23225 (N.D.N.Y. 2003).

In an action in which a former employee filed suit against his former employer alleging discrimination based on age and national origin in violation of the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 (2003), and the New York City Human Rights Law, New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code §§ 8-107 and 8-502 et seq., the employer was granted summary judgment where the employee had not identified any facts that gave rise to an inference of discrimination; because there was no evidence in the record to suggest that coworkers engaged in conduct that was of comparable seriousness to the employee's, the employee had not shown that the coworkers were similarly situated. Milani v IBM, 322 F. Supp. 2d 434, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11025 (S.D.N.Y. 2004), aff'd, 137 Fed. Appx. 430, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 13251 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2005).

Former provisional city hospital employee failed to show that she was terminated due to her national origin, in violation of the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, because she failed to show that she was treated differently from similarly situated non-Hispanic employees as, at the time that the employee was terminated, all provisional employees were replaced by employees from an established civil service list. Cabrera v New York City, 436 F. Supp. 2d 635, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44461 (S.D.N.Y. 2006).

Former employee failed to satisfy his burden of establishing a prima facie case of discrimination based on national origin pursuant to Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 because, while it was undisputed that the employee was a member of a protected class because he was a Bosnian male in the nursing field, and the employee experienced an adverse employment action because he was terminated from his position, (1) the employee failed to meet even the de minimus standard of demonstrating he was qualified for the position of staff nurse at the employer because, while it was undisputed that the employee passed the nursing boards and met the licensing and educational requirements of the employer, he failed to meet the excellent patient care standard in the employment and retention policy, (2) specifically, the employee committed multiple errors that did not meet the excellent patient care standard required for employee retention, and (3) the employee failed to provide evidence that gave rise to an inference of discrimination based on national origin. Memisevich v St. Elizabeth's Med. Ctr., 443 F. Supp. 2d 276, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 56315 (N.D.N.Y. 2006).

Even if a former employee satisfied his burden of establishing a prima facie case of discrimination based on national origin pursuant to Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, the employer offered legitimate, nondiscriminatory reasons for its termination decision because (1) the complaints about the employee's clinical errors were investigated and reasonably credited, which would have rebutted any presumption of discrimination, (2) the employee's disputes with co-workers were evident of personality conflicts, and (3) the employee was a probationary employee at the time of his termination and under the employer's policy could have been terminated during the probationary period with or without notice. Memisevich v St. Elizabeth's Med. Ctr., 443 F. Supp. 2d 276, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 56315 (N.D.N.Y. 2006).

Former public school psychologist's national origin discrimination claims under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 failed because the school district and school officials offered legitimate and nondiscriminatory reasons for the psychologist's discharge, which included his lack of professionalism, failure to meet student needs, and intimidating attitude, and the psychologist was unable to show that these reasons were pretext for discrimination; that the school's principal told the psychologist that he did not fit into the culture at the school was not evidence of unlawful discrimination, as the principal indicated she was referring to the culture of professionalism, not the ethnic composition of the staff. Dorcely v Wyandanch Union Free Sch. Dist., 665 F. Supp. 2d 178, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 91543 (E.D.N.Y. 2009).

Former employee's hostile work environment claim against an employer failed because the record did not support the employee's claim that the employer imposed an "English only" policy; the employer provided interpreters and routinely hired workers it knew were not English speakers. Polanco v 34th St. P'ship, 724 F. Supp. 2d 420, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 68699 (S.D.N.Y. 2010).

Employee's claim alleging discrimination pursuant to New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a), based on his national origin as a person of French ancestry could not succeed because, based on evidence of the employee's worsening job performance leading up to his demotion and termination, the employer met its burden of demonstrating a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for adverse employment actions against the employee. Pibouin v CA, Inc., 867 F. Supp. 2d 315, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 47102 (E.D.N.Y. 2012).

Employer discriminated against complainant, native of Columbia, where she had been promoted to forelady after working as cleaning lady for 3 full years, shortly thereafter building supervisor removed her as forelady and replaced her with someone of national origin similar to building supervisor, Albanian national, and employer merely proffered single statement allegedly made by complainant's former supervisor that complainant was demoted because she did not work out. 2000 Order Comm HR No. 9D-E-O-89-136156E.

49. Racial discrimination

A complaint by an associate dean of a community college alleging unlawful discrimination on the basis of race in his discharge was properly dismissed, where a finding by the State Division of Human Rights of discrimination by use of a quota system was not warranted even though the evidence showed that the college tried to avoid penalizing any minority group when affecting a retrenchment plan, the college president presented a statistical analysis to the college affirmative action office showing no change in the racial balance of college employees as a result of the plan, and the college president had told the dean that his discharge was for "anthropological" reasons, in that the statement was ambiguous and the State Division of Human Rights had not found the statement to be evidence of prejudice or bias against the dean. CUNY-Hostos Community College v State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 59 N.Y.2d 69, 463 N.Y.S.2d 173, 449 N.E.2d 1251, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 3027 (N.Y. 1983).

In an employment discrimination action against a county, the Appellate Division properly dismissed the complaint which alleged that employment with defendant county was terminated on the basis of plaintiff's race and national origin in violation of Exec Law § 296 where plaintiff's failure to timely file a notice of claim under Gen. Mun L § 50-e was fatal in that the action had not been brought to indicate a public interest and leave to serve a late notice of claim had not been granted. Mills v County of Monroe, 59 N.Y.2d 307, 464 N.Y.S.2d 709, 451 N.E.2d 456, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 3161 (N.Y.), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 1018, 104 S. Ct. 551, 78 L. Ed. 2d 725, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 2750 (U.S. 1983).

Denial of summary judgment to a plaintiff with regard to her racial discrimination suit brought against her former employer was upheld on appeal because, though many factual issues were in dispute in the cause of action, none of such disputed facts were material to the plaintiff showing any causal connection between any alleged protected activity she had engaged in and her termination. The plaintiff had been discharged as a result of violating the employer's family leave policy, filed several grievances but never mentioned racial discrimination in any of them, and, though no love loss existed between the plaintiff and a supervisor, such animosity was not shown to have been racially motivated. Forrest v Jewish Guild for the Blind, 3 N.Y.3d 295, 786 N.Y.S.2d 382, 819 N.E.2d 998, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 3489 (N.Y. 2004).

A determination of the State Division of Human Rights that a black child-care worker had been discriminated against because he had been terminated, while a white child-care worker had received only a two-day suspension for an allegedly more serious offense, was not supported by substantial evidence where the evidence showed that the black worker had been found asleep on the job three times in eight days in a high-security facility, had been found sleeping on duty once before and been reprimanded, and that there were no mitigating circumstances, whereas the evidence showed that the white worker had committed the offense of leaving three boys unattended only once and not in a high security facility, and that he had presented mitigating circumstances justifying the lighter sanction. State Div. of Human Rights ex rel. Eads v Baker Hall, Inc., 80 A.D.2d 733, 437 N.Y.S.2d 160, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10461 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1981).

In an proceeding pursuant to Exec Law § 296, alleging wrongful discharge from employment based on racial discrimination, the proceeding would be barred under County Law § 52 for failure to file a notice of claim within 90 days of accrual, despite the fact that the action would not fall within the notice provisions of Gen Mun Law §§ 50-e, 50-i. Mills v County of Monroe, 89 A.D.2d 776, 453 N.Y.S.2d 486, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17889 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1982), aff'd, 59 N.Y.2d 307, 464 N.Y.S.2d 709, 451 N.E.2d 456, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 3161 (N.Y. 1983).

The State Division of Human Rights properly dismissed petitioner's complaint of unlawful discriminatory employment practice based on race and color, where petitioner's position was terminated due to a loss of federal funds and 14 white employees had also lost their jobs on the same day as petitioner for the same reason. Powe v County of Albany, Dep't of Employment & Training, 108 A.D.2d 997, 485 N.Y.S.2d 147, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 43326 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. dismissed, 65 N.Y.2d 922, 493 N.Y.S.2d 1031, 483 N.E.2d 135, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 15192 (N.Y. 1985).

Petitioner, who is black, was not dismissed from her position as a nurse aid with the employer-hospital on the basis of race where she was negligent in the performance of her duties, had received several warnings regarding her attitude, attendance and work performance, and had been denied annual merit increases on more than one occasion, and where the hospital had previously discharged white employees for the same reason and had continued to employ a number of black employees following her termination. Gray v Albany Medical Center Hospital, 108 A.D.2d 1031, 485 N.Y.S.2d 601, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 43354 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1985).

Determination that employer dismissed its employee from his position as assistant manager of supermarket in racially discriminatory manner was supported by facts that employee had proven himself to be honest and valued employee, that he was subjected to improper polygraph test based on unsubstantiated, hearsay accusation of subordinate, and that purported ground for his dismissal—allowing customer to eat grapes—was plainly disproportionate to nature of charge and was inconsistent with previous treatment accorded to white assistant manager. Domino Supermarket, Inc. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 147 A.D.2d 417, 538 N.Y.S.2d 265, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2070 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1989).

It was excessive to award $50,000 for mental anguish suffered by employee who was unlawfully discharged in racially discriminatory manner where there was no evidence of lasting harm or impairment; appropriate award was $5,000. Domino Supermarket, Inc. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 147 A.D.2d 417, 538 N.Y.S.2d 265, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2070 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1989).

Determination that petitioner discriminated against complainant on basis of race, terminating her employment in violation of Executive Law § 296, is supported by substantial evidence in record–notwithstanding constant and blatant nature of racial discrimination against complainant, where sole evidence of mental anguish was complainant's own testimony that she was "[e]motionally and physically screwed up", award of $35,000 for mental anguish is grossly excessive and new award should not exceed $5,000–award of back pay from complainant's discharge in February 1985 until her reinstatement by petitioner constitutes punitive assessment against petitioner rather than compensation; complainant obtained new employment at same pay in July 1985; Division of Human Rights may not award what would amount to punitive damages solely on finding that unlawful discrimination occurred; award of back pay must be reduced to cover only period that complainant was out of work as result of her unlawful discharge; however, Division did not abuse its discretion in ordering petitioner to reinstate complainant–three-year period between filing of complaint and issuance of Division's determination did not operate to divest Division of jurisdiction; absent showing of substantial prejudice, time limitations enunciated in Executive Law § 297 are directory and not mandatory. Cosmos Forms, Ltd. v State Div. of Human Rights, 150 A.D.2d 442, 541 N.Y.S.2d 50, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6521 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Evidence supported determination finding correctional facility guilty of unlawful discriminatory practice based on race where complainant and other black correction officers testified as to "hostile situation" at facility, black officers were placed in different "class" from white employees, they were denied more desirable assignments and shifts, they had their orders and directions disregarded by subordinates or countermanded by their superior officers, and they were disciplined more frequently and more harshly than white employees; furthermore, of 16 cases of alleged inmate abuse occurring at facility, complainant was sole correction officer who was dis-charged. New York State Dep't of Correctional Servs. v State Div. of Human Rights, 215 A.D.2d 908, 626 N.Y.S.2d 588, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5326 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1995).

Employer's motion, under CLS CPLR § 4404(a), to set aside jury verdict for plaintiff in action for retaliatory discharge was properly granted where (1) evidence supported jury's finding that employee's transfer was not in retaliation for her complaint of age and racial discrimination in denial of promotion, (2) employee's discrimination complaint preceded her termination by 2 years, during which she received salary increases, and (3) there was ample evidence of employee's insubordination after her transfer. Budzanoski v Pfizer, Inc., 245 A.D.2d 72, 664 N.Y.S.2d 796, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12836 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1997).

Employer was entitled to summary judgment in action by black former employee under CLS Exec § 296 where employer submitted evidence that plaintiff had been fired for misrepresenting transfer of account as new business in order to obtain commission, and plaintiff argued only that there was material issue as to whether account constituted new business without showing that employer's explanation was designed to mask racial discrimination. Sommerville v R.C.I., 257 A.D.2d 884, 684 N.Y.S.2d 53, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 519 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

In action alleging that plaintiff's employer impermissibly discriminated against him when it demoted him for subjecting African American coworker to ridicule, jury could reasonably infer that plaintiff was demoted only because he was white and incident was thought to be racially motivated where (1) supervisor testified that poor treatment of minority employees in facility where plaintiff worked made it difficult to accomplish employer's goal of increasing number of minority employees and expressed concern that tolerating his "prank" would discourage minorities from accepting positions in that facility, and (2) expert in field of labor-management relations and employment discrimination testified that, contrary to supervisor's belief, prank in question (posting picture of bird-like stuffed animal with long multicolored beak and black body seated at African American coworker's desk) belied intimation of racial animus. Michaelis v State, 258 A.D.2d 693, 685 N.Y.S.2d 325, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 944 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 806, 689 N.Y.S.2d 708, 711 N.E.2d 984, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1202 (N.Y. 1999).

Because an employee did not rebut an employer's evidence of a legitimate, nondiscriminatory explanation for the employee's termination, the employer was entitled to summary judgment in the employee's action for racial discrimination under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a) and New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(1)(a). Dickerson v Health Mgmt. Corp. of Am., 21 A.D.3d 326, 800 N.Y.S.2d 391, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8801 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2005).

Although an employer claimed that it fired an employee solely because of inadequate performance, the employee submitted statistical reports that allegedly demonstrated the employee's termination exemplified a pattern of racial discrimination by the employer against black managers; accordingly, the employer was not entitled to summary judgment in the employee's action under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., and New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-101 et seq. Baldwin v Cablevision Sys. Corp., 65 A.D.3d 961, 888 N.Y.S.2d 1, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6576 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2009), app. denied, 14 N.Y.3d 701, 898 N.Y.S.2d 96, 925 N.E.2d 101, 2010 N.Y. LEXIS 3821 (N.Y. 2010).

Trial court erred in denying summary judgment pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. 3212 to an employer in an employee's racial discrimination action pursuant to N.Y. Exec. Law § 296; the employer presented evidence that the employee was fired for poor job performance, and the employee failed to refute that showing. Pramdip v Bldg. Serv. 32B-J Health Fund, 308 A.D.2d 523, 765 N.Y.S.2d 44, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9641 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003).

African-American employee did not show racial discrimination because there was a legitimate and nondiscriminatory basis for most of the conduct by her employer and supervisors, of which she complained, as reprimands were based on her charting errors, which jeopardized her employer's state funding, shifting the burden to her to show pretext, which was not shown, and the racial epithets of which she complained were not alone sufficient to show race discrimination; the employee was legitimately terminated for not providing required medical documentation to support her family leave claim that she needed to care for her ill father, for not responding to inquiries about her whereabouts, and for abandoning the care of her father without returning to work. Forrest v Jewish Guild for the Blind, 309 A.D.2d 546, 765 N.Y.S.2d 326, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10478 (N.Y. African-American employee did not show that supervisors aided and abetted her employer's racial discrimination because, while an individual could be held liable under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(6) and (7) for aiding and abetting discriminatory conduct, the employee's aiding and abetting claim could not survive the supervisors' summary judgment motion because the employee did not successfully raise a question of fact as to the underlying discrimination claim. Forrest v Jewish Guild for the Blind, 309 A.D.2d 546, 765 N.Y.S.2d 326, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10478 (N.Y. In this NYCHRL and NYSHRL action, while the employee had not provided facts specific enough to suggest that race was the sole motivating factor in her termination or other adverse employment actions, the employee alleged facts that suggested that her race may have been one of the motivating factors in her termination and other adverse employment actions. Palmer v Cook, 65 Misc. 3d 374, 108 N.Y.S.3d 297, 2019 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4283 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), dismissed, in part, 64 Misc. 3d 1222(A), 117 N.Y.S.3d 469, 2019 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4286 (N.Y. Sup. In this NYCHRL and NYSHRL action, court denied employer's motion to dismiss employee's hostile work environment claim in its entirety as against assemblywoman where employee alleged that assemblywoman allegedly threw or destroyed small objects in fits of anger and when displeased with her staff assemblywoman would use profane epithets. Palmer v Cook, 65 Misc. 3d 374, 108 N.Y.S.3d 297, 2019 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4283 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), dismissed, in part, 64 Misc. 3d 1222(A), 117 N.Y.S.3d 469, 2019 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4286 (N.Y. Sup. In light of jury's findings that defendant, a county employee, participated in an assault upon plaintiff, a black co-worker, that racial discrimination was a substantial factor in defendant's conduct, and that the assault was sufficiently severe to alter the terms and conditions of the co-worker's employment, a holding that the defendant was not acting under color of state law for purposes of 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 did not affect the defendant's individual liability under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1981, or the New York Human Rights Law. Patterson v Balsamico, 440 F.3d 104, 2006 U.S. App. LEXIS 4943 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2006).

Jury's verdict holding two water department employees liable for an employee's wrongful termination for his interracial engagement was supported by evidence that both defendants knew about the harassment, did nothing to respond to it, and then participated directly in the investigation and termination of the employee. Additionally, one defendant, the employee relations specialist, had himself taunted the employee based on his fiancee's race. Executive secretary's age and race discrimination claims against African airline under CLS Exec Law § 296 must fail, where, during relevant time period, her boss hired individuals of various ethnic backgrounds in roughly same proportion as existed prior to his promotion to head of Manhattan office, including 4 blacks, and these employees ranged in age from 22 to 55, nearly half in their 40s and 50s, because this evidence, coupled with lack of support for secretary's 4 specific allegations of discriminatory actions, supports conclusion that boss's employment decisions were made without regard to age or race. Gueye v Air Afrique, 917 F. Supp. 1024, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2622 (S.D.N.Y.), aff'd, 104 F.3d 352, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 37808 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1996).

Employer is entitled to summary dismissal of terminated employee's Human Rights Law (CLS Exec Law §§ 290 et seq.) race discrimination claim, where employee was fired for testing positive for marijuana use and claims test was manufactured in order to get him out based on prior requests that he change shifts, because employee offers nothing more than conclusory allegations and fails to show any evidence of disparate treatment from which court may infer that discrimination caused his termination. Leslie v Banctec Serv. Corp., 928 F. Supp. 341, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8143 (S.D.N.Y. 1996).

White attorney, discharged after 12 years with firm, may proceed with case for race discrimination in violation of New York Human Rights Law (CLS Exec Law §§ 290 et seq.), where he claims he was terminated because he is married to black woman, because inherent in complaint is that he would not have been let go if his own race had been different—same as his wife's. Rosenblatt v Bivona & Cohen, P.C., 946 F. Supp. 298, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17576 (S.D.N.Y. 1996).

Plaintiff's allegation that he was terminated by his former employer for being married to black woman stated claim under Human Rights Law. Rosenblatt v Bivona & Cohen, P.C., 946 F. Supp. 298, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17576 (S.D.N.Y. 1996).

Standing alone, racially derogatory remarks made by company official regarding employee were not sufficient under CLS Exec Law § 296 to show that employee had been discharged in reduction in force owing to her race, even though such official had participated in ranking of employees in preparation for reduction, where official had made remarks several months before employee's termination, and remarks had related to single incident in which official had been angered by employee's behavior. Coleman v Prudential Relocation, 975 F. Supp. 234, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12937 (W.D.N.Y. 1997).

New York Human Rights Law (Exec § 296) claim of Senior Facilities Analyst is denied summarily, even though he was forced to train employee who took over his duties, because he fails to create genuine issue of material fact that he was "replaced" by someone who was not member of his protected class, nor has he advanced any evidence that his job reassignment occurred in circumstances leading to inference of racial discrimination. Morris v Northrop Grumman Corp., 37 F. Supp. 2d 556, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1700 (E.D.N.Y. 1999).

Former flight attendant's Exec § 296 claim of discriminatory discharge must fail, even though white attendant was terminated for violating regulations and leave requirements and disobeying orders in connection with caring for her injured African-American fiance who was also pilot for their employer, because employee who bore ultimate responsibility for approving discharge had no knowledge of race of either attendant or fiance, and there is no other evidence that proffered reasons for termination were merely pretext to discharge her due to interracial relationship. Segal v TWA, 63 F. Supp. 2d 373, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13724 (S.D.N.Y. 1999).

Asian male terminated by telephone company has no viable racial discrimination claim under Exec § 296, where facts elicited by company support its claim that he was terminated for engaging in prohibited business activities in competition with company, because he fails to support assertions of racially offensive jokes by assistant manager and more lenient treatment of white offenders with any admissible factual evidence. Cheng v New York Tel. Co., 64 F. Supp. 2d 280, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13588 (S.D.N.Y. 1999), aff'd, 225 F.3d 645, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 26341 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2000).

Terminated Hispanic state troopers failed to show pretextual nature of race-neutral reason for their termination, which was stated to be their obstreperous conduct during confrontation with local police in bar and afterward at station house, precluding racial discrimination in employment claim under Title VII and Exec § 296, where claim that 5 white police officers were given lesser punishments for similar conduct was insufficient, as white officers had not been in conflict with local police or involved in station house misbehavior. Aguirre v N.Y. State Police, 156 F. Supp. 2d 305, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9249 (S.D.N.Y. 2001).

African-American histology department supervisor has no viable claim for wrongful termination under Exec § 296, even though he alleges his employees made derogatory remarks about African-Americans, complained about him, and his guilt was presumed without investigation due to his race, because better evidence demonstrates that he was discharged because he repeatedly acted inappropriately as supervisor. Minton v Lenox Hill Hosp., 160 F. Supp. 2d 687, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13045 (S.D.N.Y. 2001).

Employer is denied summary dismissal of African-American store manager's discriminatory termination claims, even though it asserts it let manager go due to his (1) poor leadership, (2) failure to recruit, and (3) lack of organization and cleanliness, where his sales success belies allegation that he had poor management skills, because he has clearly raised genuine issue of material fact as to whether employer's stated reasons for his termination are pretext for actual racial discrimination. Dais v Lane Bryant, Inc., 168 F. Supp. 2d 62, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4497 (S.D.N.Y. 2001).

Insurance salesman's race discrimination claim under against an insurance company failed where the only evidence of discrimination was that the salesman was an African-American and the salesman's contract with the insurance company had been terminated and the insurance company presented substantial evidence showing that the salesman had failed to meet its production standards. Anyan v N.Y. Life Ins. Co., 192 F. Supp. 2d 228, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5724 (S.D.N.Y. 2002), aff'd, 68 Fed. Appx. 260, 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 13786 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2003).

Where a jury returned a verdict in favor of five African-American employees on their racial discrimination claims against an employer under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1981, the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., and the New York City Human Rights Law, New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107, the evidence supported finding that the employer subjected four of the employees to harsher discipline than that received by their white co-workers, but the fifth employee did not establish disparate treatment; although the four employees were entitled to compensatory and punitive damages, the amounts exceeded awards in analogous cases and were subject to remittitur. Hill v Airborne Freight Corp., 212 F. Supp. 2d 59, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12970 (E.D.N.Y. 2002).

In an action by a former employee against his former employer alleging race discrimination and retaliation in violation of 42 U.S.C.S. § 1981, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, and New York City, N.Y. Admin. Code § 8-502(a), the employer's motion for summary judgment under Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c) was granted in part where the employee's claim under New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-502(a) failed because the employee did not allege that the employer discriminated against him in New York City, and the employee's race discrimination claim failed because the employer articulated a legitimate, non-discriminatory reason for demoting the employee due to the evidence that the employee's inventory results were the worst of any of the other employees in his division, and the evidence that his supervisors warned him about his performance. Santos v Costco Wholesale, Inc., 271 F. Supp. 2d 565, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12280 (S.D.N.Y. 2003).

Employer was not entitled to summary judgment on an employee's retaliatory discharge claims brought pursuant to Title VII of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the New York State Human Rights Law, and 42 U.S.C.S. § 1981 even though the employee was terminated as part of a company-wide reduction in force where there was a disputed issue of fact as to why the employee was chosen to be part of the group that was fired. Mitchell v Am. Online, 286 F. Supp. 2d 325, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18410 (S.D.N.Y. 2003).

Employer was granted summary judgment on a former employee's hostile work environment claim based on race where a single incident of improper conduct by a fellow employee, i.e., commenting on the employee's race while dressed in a robber baron costume, did not indicate that the workplace was permeated with discriminatory intimidation, the employer had taken appropriate steps to alleviate the workplace tension and ensure that the conduct was not repeated, and the employee had not reported the other alleged acts of harassment to the employer. Kennedy v J.P. Morgan Chase & Co., 325 F. Supp. 2d 401, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13342 (S.D.N.Y. 2004).

Summary judgment was granted dismissing an African-American employee's racial discrimination claims under 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq. and N.Y. Exec. Law § 290 et seq., arising from the termination of his employment as a custodial worker at a school, because (1) he did not sufficiently show that various adverse actions were due to his race; (2) his claim that he was disciplined for acts that white workers were allowed to engage in was insufficient because he did not compare himself to similarly situated employees, as he was a probationary employee and they were non-probationary employees; and (3) the person who hired him was also involved in firing him. Jones v Yonkers Pub. Schs, 326 F. Supp. 2d 536, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14599 (S.D.N.Y. 2004).

In an action in which a former employee, a Puerto Rican female, filed suit against her former employer alleging that she was discharged because of her sex, race, and national origin in violation of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., and N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, the employer was denied summary judgment where a rational trier of fact could conclude that the employer treated employees in a non-protected group more favorably than those in the protected group; non-tenured white administrators, similarly situated to the employee and two other Hispanic female administrators, were promoted and given extensions to their probationary periods. The employee, on the other hand, was discharged even though her performance ratings were "effective" and "very effective" for her two years as a probationary principal. Vergara v Yonkers Pub. Schs., 386 F. Supp. 2d 377, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19926 (S.D.N.Y. 2005).

Racial discrimination case under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 was dismissed because a former employer showed a nondiscriminatory reason for terminating a bus driver; the employee had a serious medical condition, and she failed to pass a required driving examination. Perry v Metro. Suburban Bus Auth., 390 F. Supp. 2d 251, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21781 (E.D.N.Y. 2005).

Two former salespersons for a retail store failed to establish that the employer terminated them due to race where (1) the employees were repeatedly and admittedly late for work, (2) they did not offer any evidence that other employees were not disciplined for lateness, and (3) there was no evidence of racial hostility against the employees prior to their termination. Ebanks v Neiman Marcus Group, Inc., 414 F. Supp. 2d 320, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4802 (S.D.N.Y. 2006).

Employee for a retail store failed to show that she was constructively discharged due to her race where (1) she failed to establish that she was subjected to a constant barrage of unwarranted criticism or intimidation by her manager or that she was subjected to a pattern of frequent behavior to show that the workplace was intolerable, and (2) there was no evidence linking anything that happened to the employee to her race. Ebanks v Neiman Marcus Group, Inc., 414 F. Supp. 2d 320, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4802 (S.D.N.Y. 2006).

Former employee, who was a department manager for a retail store, failed to establish that the former employer failed to promote her due to her race because she failed to show that she applied for specific positions and was rejected; her assertion that she generally requested a promotion was insufficient. Ebanks v Neiman Marcus Group, Inc., 414 F. Supp. 2d 320, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4802 (S.D.N.Y. 2006).

Former employee, who was a department manager for a retail store, failed to show that she was constructively discharged due to racial discrimination because she failed to show that the work conditions preceding her voluntary resignation rose to the level of intolerable where she earned five percent raises, her supervisor's conduct towards her improved markedly, and she did not seek any promotions. Ebanks v Neiman Marcus Group, Inc., 414 F. Supp. 2d 320, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4802 (S.D.N.Y. 2006).

In an action in which a former employee filed suit against defendants, former employer and manager, alleging violations of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., the Civil Rights Act of 1866, 42 U.S.C.S. § 1981, New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, and Title 8 of the Administrative Code and Charter of the City of New York, New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107 et seq., defendants were granted summary judgment on the disparate treatment claims where (1) according to defendants, the employee was demoted because in the supervisor's judgment, the employee had demonstrated inappropriate behavior as a manager by engaging in a relationship with a direct report, showed poor judgment in allowing it to continue without requesting to have the direct report transferred to another team, and failed to disclose the information until threats were made by his subordinate; and (2) the court found that the employee failed to show that the reasons were merely a pretext for discrimination. Conway v Microsoft Corp., 414 F. Supp. 2d 450, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6351 (S.D.N.Y. 2006).

Plaintiff's N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 claim survived because the complaint sufficiently alleged that the individual defendants had power to make personnel decisions and/or actually participated in the alleged discriminatory and/or retaliatory conduct. Abdi v Brookhaven Sci. Assocs., LLC, 447 F. Supp. 2d 221, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 60983 (E.D.N.Y. 2006).

Verbal comments made by individuals not involved in making the adverse employment decision cannot themselves give rise to an inference of racial discrimination. Anderson v Hertz Corp., 507 F. Supp. 2d 320, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 63092 (S.D.N.Y. 2007), aff'd, 303 Fed. Appx. 946, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 25926 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2008).

Employee pointed to the fact that he was subjected to derogatory racial remarks by several subordinates and that senior management did not discipline those subordinates for their behavior, a subordinate instigated the verbal and physical altercation that led to the employee's termination, he was the only African-American manager hired at the facility in which the employee's supervisor's oversaw for 12 years, and he was replaced by a Caucasian man; however, even drawing all inferences in favor of the employee, none of these arguments was sufficient to make out a prima facie case that his termination came as a result of racial discrimination. Even if the employee's arguments were interpreted as sufficient to meet his prima facie burden, the employer demonstrated a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for the employee's termination; the employee could not maintain that the employer had no basis to believe that its reason for terminating the employee's employment—fighting—was false and the employee himself admitted to being part of the fight—the mere fact of the paucity of African-American managers did not rebut the employer's explanation for the employee's discharge. Anderson v Hertz Corp., 507 F. Supp. 2d 320, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 63092 (S.D.N.Y. 2007), aff'd, 303 Fed. Appx. 946, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 25926 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2008).

Employee did not make a prima facie case as she could not show that she was performing her job in a satisfactory manner at the time of her termination; the employer submitted numerous negative employer evaluations and the employee's only response to this voluminous evidence of unsatisfactory performance was her bare-bones contention, made for the first time in her opposition brief, that the evaluations themselves were conducted in a discriminatory fashion. The employee's conclusory allegation was not supported by any evidence. Bryant v Verizon Communs., Inc., 550 F. Supp. 2d 513, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35916 (S.D.N.Y. 2008).

Employer's obligation under the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a), to not discriminate on the basis of race did not give rise to a cause of action for breach of contract by the termination of an employee allegedly due to his race because any promise to not discriminate due to race could not constitute the consideration necessary to create a contract of employment. Hargett v Metro. Transit Auth., 552 F. Supp. 2d 393, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 30599 (S.D.N.Y. 2008).

Defendant contractor's motion to dismiss plaintiff employee's racial harassment action was denied because individuals could be held liable under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 and New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107. Doe v City of New York, 583 F. Supp. 2d 444, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 33488 (S.D.N.Y. 2008).

Former employee failed to show that her former employer, which was a state university, and three individuals, terminated her from her office manager job due to race discrimination, in violation of the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., because there was no circumstantial or direct evidence raising an inference of race discrimination, the employer asserted that the employee was terminated due to budget cuts, and the employee failed to show that this legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for her termination was pretextual. Westbrook v City Univ. of N.Y., 591 F. Supp. 2d 207, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 102765 (E.D.N.Y. 2008).

Former employee, who was terminated from her office manager job due to budget cuts by her former employer, which was a state university, failed to show a racially hostile work environment in violation of the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., because she did not show that a supervisor made any direct racially offensive comments, and an arguably racially offensive comment made by the supervisor approximately two years before she was terminated regarding students at a predominantly African-American college at the university was a stray comment, which was insufficient to establish a racially hostile work environment. Westbrook v City Univ. of N.Y., 591 F. Supp. 2d 207, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 102765 (E.D.N.Y. 2008).

Employee's allegations that she was not paid at the maximum rate and that she was forced to work overtime and double shifts all occurred prior to the statutory period; each incident was separate and discrete and not alleged to bear any relation to the employee's timely claims. Therefore, the separate and discrete acts of discrimination and retaliation alleged to have occurred prior to January 2003, specifically, the employee's allegation of discriminatory scheduling, fell outside the scope of the continuing violation doctrine. Aspilaire v Wyeth Pharms., Inc., 612 F. Supp. 2d 289, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35523 (S.D.N.Y. 2009).

Employee's claims of discrimination based on the fact that, in 2002, she was assigned to work double shifts and was reassigned from shift 1 to shift 2 were barred by the statute of limitations and even if these claims were timely, the claims would fail because the employee did not show an adverse employment act; moreover, even if shift assignments and reassignments were materially adverse employment acts, the employee was still unable to meet her prima facie burden because there was no evidence that gave rise to an inference of discrimination. The employee herself admitted that people of all races in her department were forced to work double shifts and it was undisputed that operators and lead operators were moved to different shifts based on manufacturing needs; no evidence indicated that any assignments or reassignments were based on race. Aspilaire v Wyeth Pharms., Inc., 612 F. Supp. 2d 289, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35523 (S.D.N.Y. 2009).

Former employee's unlawful termination claim against defendants, two public entities and individuals, failed because (1) the circumstances surrounding the employee's discharge did not give rise to an inference of discrimination; (2) assuming that one of the individuals' conduct toward the employee was racially motivated, there simply was no evidence that the individual's racial bias tainted the ultimate decision to terminate the employee; and (3) even if the employee could have established a prima facie case of discrimination with regard to her termination, defendants proffered a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for her discharge, namely, her insubordination toward the individual. Anderson v New York, 614 F. Supp. 2d 404, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36029 (S.D.N.Y. 2009).

Former employee's hostile work environment claim against defendants, two public entities and individuals, failed because, when viewed objectively, the conduct in issue was not sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of her employment, and there was no evidence that the conduct occurred because of the employee's race, color, or national origin. Anderson v New York, 614 F. Supp. 2d 404, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36029 (S.D.N.Y. 2009).

Assuming the employee made out a prima facie case and defendants articulated a legitimate non-discriminatory reason—namely, that the employee sent inappropriate e-mails and falsified employment documents—for taking disciplinary action against the employee, because he failed to meet his burden of raising a material issue of fact concerning whether defendants' stated reasons for firing him were a mere pretext for discrimination, the claim that defendants practiced illegal discrimination failed. Hargett v N.Y. City Transit Auth., 640 F. Supp. 2d 450, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 67896 (S.D.N.Y. 2009), aff'd, 381 Fed. Appx. 12, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 12273 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2010).

Former public school psychologist's race discrimination claims under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 failed because the school district and school officials offered legitimate and nondiscriminatory reasons for the psychologist's discharge, which included his lack of professionalism, failure to meet student needs, and intimidating attitude, and the psychologist was unable to show that these reasons were pretext for discrimination; that the school's principal told the psychologist that he did not fit into the culture at the school was not evidence of unlawful discrimination, as the principal indicated she was referring to the culture of professionalism, not the ethnic composition of the staff. Dorcely v Wyandanch Union Free Sch. Dist., 665 F. Supp. 2d 178, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 91543 (E.D.N.Y. 2009).

African-American woman's employment discrimination claims based on race and/or national origin under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1981, and N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1) survived summary judgment because the the record was devoid of any contemporaneous writings that showed any indication that anyone was dissatisfied with her performance, a client for whom she had worked went with her when she left the employer, and she raised questions as to discriminatory animus. Memnon v Clifford Chance US, LLP, 667 F. Supp. 2d 334, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 99936 (S.D.N.Y. 2009).

Even if one could divorce the final warning from the termination, a reasonable juror could still determine that the coworker incident was merely a pretext for retaliation based on the circumstantial evidence that defendants never told the former employee specifically about the coworker and the employee's warning, discipline, and termination might have been disparate when compared to that accorded other employees; the claims of pretext presented disputed material facts for a jury to resolve, not the court. Kanhoye v Altana, Inc., 686 F. Supp. 2d 199, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 112506 (E.D.N.Y. 2009).

Employer was entitled to summary judgment on a former employee's claims for discrimination under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e, 42 U.S.C.S. § 1981, and N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, because the employee had not established that an employer's determination to terminate the employee was motivated by any sort of improper racial animus but was rather part of a business decision to reduce the employer's work force. The employee had not shown that he was not promoted because of race, but rather the employee did not meet the qualifications for promotion, and there was no evidence of a hostile work environment or an adverse employment action taken. Sealy v Hertz Corp., 688 F. Supp. 2d 247, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 76609 (S.D.N.Y. 2009).

Plaintiff had stated an actionable claim for a hostile work environment against an employer, in part due to the acts of the plaintiff's supervisor, under both federal, state, and city law, because plaintiff had alleged that his supervisor had subjected plaintiff, the only African American in the department, to harsh criticisms, unreasonable demands, shouting and profanity. Drew v Plaza Constr. Corp., 688 F. Supp. 2d 270, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8699 (S.D.N.Y. 2010).

Union was entitled to summary judgment on a former employee's claims under the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., because the employee failed to establish that the union breached its duty of fair representation. Furthermore, the employee did not allege that the union had anything directly to do with the employee's termination, other than failing to fairly represent the employee in the employee's efforts to join the bargaining unit. Beachum v AWISCO N.Y. & Local 810, 785 F. Supp. 2d 84, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28856 (S.D.N.Y. 2011), aff'd, 459 Fed. Appx. 58, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 2996 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2012).

Former employee was not entitled to bring claims that an employer violated civil rights laws by discriminating against the employee due to the employee's race because (1) the employee failed to show discriminatory reasons for adverse employment actions; (2) the employee could not recall any specific alleged racist comment or the first time any such comment was made; and (3) the employer had a nondiscriminatory reason for terminating the employee, based upon the employee's prolonged and unexcused medical absence. Beachum v AWISCO N.Y. & Local 810, 785 F. Supp. 2d 84, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28856 (S.D.N.Y. 2011), aff'd, 459 Fed. Appx. 58, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 2996 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2012).

Former employee was not entitled to bring claims that an employer violated civil rights laws by retaliating against the employee for the employee's complaint of discrimination because the employee's evidence of temporal proximity was insufficient to permit an inference that the employer's proffered non-retaliatory reason for the employee's termination was pretextual and that retaliation was a substantial reason for the employee's termination. Beachum v AWISCO N.Y. & Local 810, 785 F. Supp. 2d 84, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28856 (S.D.N.Y. 2011), aff'd, 459 Fed. Appx. 58, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 2996 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2012).

In a suit alleging that a city's drug testing policy for firefighters was intentionally racially discriminatory, the employees failed to rebut the employer's legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for employee discipline due to the clinically determined positive drug tests. M.O.C.H.A. Soc'y, Inc. v City of Buffalo, 872 F. Supp. 2d 264, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 74822 (W.D.N.Y. 2012), aff'd, 529 Fed. Appx. 20, 2013 U.S. App. LEXIS 13563 (2d Cir. 2013).

In a suit alleging that a city's drug testing policy for firefighters was intentionally racially discriminatory, where the employees failed to rebut the employer's legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for employee discipline due to the clinically determined positive drug tests, they failed to establish liability of individual city employees on a theory of aiding and abetting a discriminatory practice. M.O.C.H.A. Soc'y, Inc. v City of Buffalo, 872 F. Supp. 2d 264, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 74822 (W.D.N.Y. 2012), aff'd, 529 Fed. Appx. 20, 2013 U.S. App. LEXIS 13563 (2d Cir. 2013).

50. Religious discrimination

The Commissioner of the State Human Rights Division reasonably concluded that an employer engaged in an unlawful discriminatory practice and compelled an employee to quit her job, where the evidence indicated that the employer had made blatantly obscene anti-Semitic remarks to her in the presence of other employees and had refused to apologize, notwithstanding the fact that the employer did not directly fire the employee and in fact had urged her to return to work. In exercising his broad powers to adopt measures reasonably deemed necessary to redress the injury to the employee, the commissioner properly directed that the employer apologize in writing, offer to reinstate the woman with back pay, together with $500 in damages for the shock, humiliation and outrage she experienced. Imperial Diner, Inc. v State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 52 N.Y.2d 72, 436 N.Y.S.2d 231, 417 N.E.2d 525, 1980 N.Y. LEXIS 2830 (N.Y. 1980).

Finding of Human Rights Division that New York City Transit Authority, as employer, violated CLS Exec § 296(10) was supported by evidence that (1) Seventh Day Adventist was discharged as bus driver because her Sabbath observance prevented her from working normal weekend shift, and (2) although Transit Authority was under strictures of collective bargaining agreement that made shift selection dependent on seniority, and although union was unwilling to waive seniority rights to accommodate Sabbath observers, Transit Authority failed to take reasonable steps, short of labor litigation, in effort to reach accommodation of bus driver's religious needs. New York City Transit Auth. v Executive Dep't, Div. of Human Rights, 89 N.Y.2d 79, 651 N.Y.S.2d 375, 674 N.E.2d 305, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3162 (N.Y. 1996).

The Division of Human Rights properly found that an employer had discriminated against an employee by failing to accommodate her observance of the Sabbath as a Seventh Day Adventist and by terminating her employment, where the employer had placed the burden upon the employee to find other workers who were willing to swap assignments with her in order to permit her to observe her Sabbath. North Shore University Hospital v State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 82 A.D.2d 799, 439 N.Y.S.2d 408, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14453 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1981), app. denied, 56 N.Y.2d 506, 437 N.E.2d 1160, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 5389 (N.Y. 1982), app. dismissed, 459 U.S. 984, 103 S. Ct. 335, 74 L. Ed. 2d 379, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 4206 (U.S. 1982).

Jewish theological seminary was properly granted summary judgment in action for breach of employment contract brought by its former professor, who had resigned in response to seminary's decision to admit women into its program for ordination of Rabbis, since (1) professor failed to prove that seminary had contractual duty to refrain from changing its admission policies or from doing anything to offend professor's religious beliefs, and (2) professor failed to demonstrate that seminary's policy decision discriminated against him on basis of his religious convictions. Faur v Jewish Theological Seminary, 146 A.D.2d 566, 536 N.Y.S.2d 516, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 120 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. dismissed, 74 N.Y.2d 842, 546 N.Y.S.2d 559, 545 N.E.2d 873, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 2932 (N.Y. 1989), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 706, 560 N.Y.S.2d 988, 561 N.E.2d 888, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 3024 (N.Y. 1990).

Plaintiffs, licensed practical nurses, stated action under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a) by alleging that they showed religious or moral belief held by them, that defendants were aware thereof, and that defendants failed to reasonably accommodate such religious belief by summarily terminating plaintiffs for their refusal to the form abortive procedures. Larson v Albany Med. Ctr., 252 A.D.2d 936, 676 N.Y.S.2d 293, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8687 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Former employees, who alleged that their jobs were terminated because they were Sunni Moslems rather than Shiite Moslems, were members of statutorily protected class, but defendant employer provided sufficient nondiscriminatory reasons by showing that their terminations were part of economically motivated reduction in force. Sheikh v Habib Bank Ltd., 270 A.D.2d 107, 704 N.Y.S.2d 75, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2851 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

State human rights commissioner's dismissal of complaint alleging that petitioner had been forced to resign from his employment because of his religious beliefs would be annulled, and case would be remitted for new decision with findings of fact, where (1) commissioner's decision was inconsistent in concluding both that petitioner failed to prove prima facie case of discrimination and that employer "has presented sufficient evidence to rebut the presumption of discrimination," which presumption arises only if employee proves prima facie case, (2) in deciding whether petitioner proved prima facie case, commissioner improperly considered employer's reasons for its actions, and (3) commissioner did not decide whether those reasons were pretext for discrimination. Draman v Lamar Advertising of Penn, Inc., 273 A.D.2d 808, 709 N.Y.S.2d 306, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6841 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000).

Where the former employee alleged that the former employee was harassed because the former employee was gay and Jewish and was fired for complaining, the employer, a religious organization, was not exempt from liability under N.Y. Exec. § 296(11); that provision only provided limited exemptions with regard to hiring preferences that did not allow harassment and discrimination of the kind alleged. Logan v Salvation Army, 809 N.Y.S.2d 846, 10 Misc. 3d 756, 234 N.Y.L.J. 99, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2542 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2005).

Reasonable jury could find that an employee's religion, Othrodox Judaism, was a motivating factor in his discharge since: (1) the employee's probationary period was extended three times, each instance following an accommodation of his religion and/or under circumstances giving rise to an inference of discrimination; (2) a performance appraisal contained references to his special needs, in particular his fairly complicated set of working hours; it noted his shrewd attention to examining what further accommodations he could be given, without fully living up to the deals struck with him; and it gave him an overall score that was significantly lower than his overall average score in each individual area and required automatic re-evaluation; and (4) defendants made additional comments reflective of discriminatory animus. Goldschmidt v N.Y. State Affordable Hous. Corp., 380 F. Supp. 2d 303, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16233 (S.D.N.Y. 2005).

Although former employees presented sufficient evidence to preclude summary judgment on their claim that they were terminated due to their religious beliefs in violation of the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 621(a)(1), based on comments about their religious practices made by management, these comments were not so pervasive that they also established a hostile work environment. Shain v Ctr. for Jewish History, Inc., 418 F. Supp. 2d 360, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20629 (S.D.N.Y. 2005).

Former employee contended that the superintendent's alleged anti-Semitic comments created a work environment permeated by religious discrimination; however, because the employee was admittedly not Jewish, she could not show that she was subjected to hostility because of her membership in a protected class. Accordingly, the employee's religion-based hostile work environment cause of action was dismissed. Illiano v Mineola Union Free Sch. Dist., 585 F. Supp. 2d 341, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 91854 (E.D.N.Y. 2008).

51. Sexual harassment

State was not entitled to dismissal of state employee's suit under CLS Exec § 296 which alleged that her supervisor fired her in retaliation for complaining about his sexually harassing conduct, even though she was not actually discharged but only placed on leave at half pay until being reassigned several months later, since her supervisor's acts in ordering her to clear out her desk and changing locks in her office could be considered constructive termination; Human Rights Law forbids not only discriminatory termination but also discrimination in terms, conditions or privileges of employment. Brown v State, 125 A.D.2d 750, 509 N.Y.S.2d 169, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 62984 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986), app. dismissed, 70 N.Y.2d 747, 519 N.Y.S.2d 1034, 514 N.E.2d 392, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 18626 (N.Y. 1987).

New York City Commission on Human Rights properly determined that New York City Transit Authority was guilty of sexual harassment and properly awarded discharged probationary employee back pay and damages for mental anguish where employee's supervisor unsuccessfully asked her for date on several occasions, then began writing reports charging her with various disciplinary infractions; harassment was exacerbated when she was told by Authority's manager of departmental relations that such conduct was to be expected because of her appearance and mode of dress. Levy v City Comm'n on Human Rights, 196 A.D.2d 214, 609 N.Y.S.2d 576, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2436 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1994), aff'd, 85 N.Y.2d 740, 628 N.Y.S.2d 245, 651 N.E.2d 1264, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 1122 (N.Y. 1995).

Finding by Unemployment Insurance Appeal Board that plaintiff "had been offered two transfers but had declined to accept either one" did not establish that sexual harassment did not constitute term or condition of plaintiff's continued employment so as to warrant summary judgment in favor of employer in action under CLS Exec § 296, where board's inquiry centered on unrelated question of whether plaintiff had provided employer with adequate evidence of disability to justify his failure to report to work, and employer offered no detail as to purported offers of transfer, or even verified that they were made; moreover, absent evidence that it took any disciplinary action against employee who perpetrated alleged harassment or other steps to alleviate threat of further occurrences, mere showing that employer offered to transfer plaintiff to different work location would not entitle it to judgment as matter of law. Goering v NYNEX Info. Resources Co., 209 A.D.2d 834, 619 N.Y.S.2d 167, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11352 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1994).

Petitioner failed to establish prima facie case of either quid pro quo sexual harassment or harassment based on existence of hostile work environment where her claims were supported only by bald conclusory statements; thus, she was properly terminated by city transit authority for excessive absences, inability to get along with her subordinates and fellow managers, and poor job performance. Watts v New York City Transit Auth., 213 A.D.2d 253, 624 N.Y.S.2d 124, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2796 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1995).

Rule against imposing vicarious liability in sex discrimination cases did not preclude imposition of direct liability on corporate employer for acts of sexual harassment committed by its chief executive officer. Father Belle Community Ctr. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 221 A.D.2d 44, 642 N.Y.S.2d 739, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5508 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), reh'g denied, 647 N.Y.S.2d 652, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10989 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1996), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 809, 655 N.Y.S.2d 889, 678 N.E.2d 502, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 214 (N.Y. 1997).

Court would annul determination that petitioner was subjected to quid pro quo sexual harassment where petitioner solely offered her own testimony, she consistently testified that employer never made any sexual advances toward her, that frequency or intensity of alleged contacts never changed, that those interactions predominantly occurred in open view, and that, despite several after-hours meetings alone with employer, he never used those opportunities to engage in any inappropriate contact; moreover, petitioner's own testimony evinced that she never communicated, by words or behavior, that contacts were uninvited, offensive, or unwarranted. Bartle v Mercado, 235 A.D.2d 651, 652 N.Y.S.2d 139, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 95 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 815, 659 N.Y.S.2d 855, 681 N.E.2d 1302, 1997 N.Y. Substantial evidence supported correction commissioner's decision that terminated correction officer had sexually harassed his subordinates where testimony of 2 complainants proved that officer sexually harassed them by exposing himself to them, and testimony of third complainant proved that officer sexually assaulted her. Arroyo v City of New York, 245 A.D.2d 186, 666 N.Y.S.2d 168, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13150 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1997).

Penalty of termination of correction officer's employment was not so disproportionate to offenses as to shock Appellate Division's sense of fairness where 2 complainants testified that officer sexually harassed them by exposing himself to them, and third complainant testified that officer sexually assaulted her; either set of charges was sufficient, by itself, to support dismissal. Arroyo v City of New York, 245 A.D.2d 186, 666 N.Y.S.2d 168, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13150 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1997).

Plaintiff failed to establish prima facie case of sexual harassment where majority of incidents alleged in her complaint took place before defendant became responsible for operation of her workplace and, once notified, defendant took immediate and adequate measures to ensure that alleged offensive behavior would cease. Pace v Ogden Servs. Corp., 257 A.D.2d 101, 692 N.Y.S.2d 220, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6819 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Attorney was entitled to summary judgment dismissing his legal secretary/office manager's action for sex discrimination where, after attorney broke off parties' wholly consensual sexual relationship in order to attempt reconciliation with his wife, he terminated manager's employment because he no longer desired to have intimate relationship with her, and there was no coercion, harassment, or unwelcome sexual conduct before or after breakup of relationship, which was based on mutual affection. Mauro v Orville, 259 A.D.2d 89, 697 N.Y.S.2d 704, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10935 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 759, 705 N.Y.S.2d 6, 726 N.E.2d 483, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 60 (N.Y. 2000).

Restaurant owner was entitled to summary judgment insofar as its employee's action for sexual harassment under Human Rights Law was for damages suffered as result of rape by coworkers, since there was no evidence that owner encouraged, condoned, or approved of such conduct. Hendricks v 333 Bayville Ave. Restaurant Corp., 260 A.D.2d 545, 688 N.Y.S.2d 593, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4081 (N.Y. Court properly denied plaintiff's motion to amend her complaint to assert cause of action under CLS Exec § 296(2)(a) where it was made after expiration of 3-year statute of limitations (CLS CPLR § 214(2)); moreover, Executive Law cause of action could not relate back to filing of original complaint as that action was not timely commenced. Karczewski v Sharpe, 260 A.D.2d 606, 688 N.Y.S.2d 673, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4294 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. dismissed, 94 N.Y.2d 858, 704 N.Y.S.2d 533, 725 N.E.2d 1095, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 3958 (N.Y. 1999).

Substantial, if not overwhelming, evidence supported employer's failure to take proper measures to halt male employees' increasingly aggressive verbal and physical harassment of sole female employee in frozen food warehouse, constituting condonation of gender and age discrimination and hostile work environment, where (1) taunts included remarks that she was too old and slow, was taking man's job away, and was "biggest whore" in town, (2) physical abuse culminated in her being picked up by legs, turned upside down, carried in attempt to place her headfirst in garbage receptacle, and slammed into door of men's room, which caused disabling injuries, and (3) although principal perpetrator was warned that he would be fired if he did not refrain from such conduct, he was merely suspended for 3 days and continued to taunt complainant after suspension. Grand Union Co. v Mercado, 263 A.D.2d 923, 694 N.Y.S.2d 524, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8451 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Corporate employer was not entitled to dismissal of female employee's sexual harassment claims based on her refusal to participate in its "prompt" and "neutral" investigation of her allegations, where alleged harasser was officer and ½ -owner of corporation, and his wife (who owned other ½) acknowledged that they jointly operated corporate business and that, if employees had any issues or concerns, they raised them directly with her husband or herself. Randall v Tod-Nik Audiology, Inc., 270 A.D.2d 38, 704 N.Y.S.2d 228, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2576 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

Defendant law firm was properly held vicariously liable for individual defendant's sexual harassment of plaintiff when she was first year associate at firm, where individual defendant was partner in firm, he assigned work to plaintiff, he voted for her termination, and he would be responsible for providing her with job references. Sier v Jacobs Persinger & Parker, 276 A.D.2d 401, 714 N.Y.S.2d 283, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10763 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

State Division of Human Rights' finding of sex discrimination in termination of female employee was not supported by substantial evidence where (1) employee's claim of reduced work hours was inconsistent with her claim that she was given more work than her coworkers were, (2) although she did not have locker for changing clothes, she was provided small room to change in, because of unavailability of separate lockers for female employees, (3) every fact finder who had heard employee's testimony had found it incredible, (4) court-appointed psychiatrist who examined employee described her belief of sexual harassment in terms of paranoid personality disorder, delusional psychosis, and distorted view of reality, and (5) employee's prior complaints against 2 former employers were never substantiated, one of them prompting federal judge to condemn her strongly. Jamco Bldg. Maint. Corp. v N.Y. State Div. of Human Rights, 281 A.D.2d 364, 724 N.Y.S.2d 20, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3139 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2001), app. denied, 98 N.Y.2d 613, 749 N.Y.S.2d 475, 779 N.E.2d 186, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 2699 (N.Y. 2002).

Issue of fact existed whether sexual harassment was so pervasive as to alter terms or conditions of plaintiff's employment where she allegedly was subjected to offensive touching and obscene communications on many occasions while still temporary employee, defendant's human resources officer informed her that he had been reluctant to hire her on permanent basis because she complained of sexual harassment, plant manager told her not to wear perfume or makeup and not to talk to any coworkers, she was taken from her work on production line more than once to answer allegedly fabricated complaints from male employees who reported that she had sexually harassed them, and numerous male employees on her shift engaged in horseplay against her that she perceived as hostile. Vitale v Rosina Food Prods., 283 A.D.2d 141, 727 N.Y.S.2d 215, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5748 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2001).

Plaintiff's employer and supervisor were entitled to summary judgment dismissing her cause of action for sexual harassment where (1) she alleged that employer allowed, condoned, and ratified supervisor's conduct and that supervisor, over period of about 10 days, touched her shoulder several times, screamed at her about work, invaded her personal space, made one comment about sexual orientation, and glanced at her in sexual manner "one or two" times, and (2) alleged conduct was not sufficiently severe or pervasive. Baliva v State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 286 A.D.2d 953, 730 N.Y.S.2d 655, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8896 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2001).

Because an employee failed to offer any evidence that, through the employee's work on a state education program, the department of labor obtained any control over or responsibility for the employee's work, the employee failed to present a cognizable legal basis for holding either the employer or the department liable under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e, or the Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(6). Strauss v New York State Dept. of Educ., 26 A.D.3d 67, 805 N.Y.S.2d 704, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14128 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2005).

Former employer failed to show prejudice resulting from 12-year gap before a former employee brought a sexual harassment action; although two witnesses had died during that time, three other witnesses who observed the incidents complained of survived to testify, so subtantial evidence supported the deterimination of the Division of Human Rights that compensable harassment had occurred. Matter of Kowalewski v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 26 A.D.3d 888, 809 N.Y.S.2d 347, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1336 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2006).

Because triable issues of fact existed as to whether the workplace was permeated with discriminatory sexual intimidation, ridicule, and insult, and as to whether the employer was aware of and acquiesced in a coworker's discriminatory conduct, the trial court erred in granting the employer's motion for summary judgment on the issue of whether the employer subjected the employee to a hostile work environment in violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a). Sutherland v Roman Catholic Diocese of Rochester, 39 A.D.3d 1151, 833 N.Y.S.2d 819, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5013 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2007).

Because a correction officer failed to show that the officer was subjected either to quid pro quo or hostile work environment sexual harassment under N.Y. Exec. Law art. 15, and because the officer's workplace was not permeated with discriminatory intimidation, ridicule, and insult, the officer's complaint was properly dismissed; accordingly, the officer was not entitled to N.Y. Exec. Law § 298 relief. Matter of Bracci v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 62 A.D.3d 1146, 878 N.Y.S.2d 830, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3714 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2009), app. dismissed, 15 N.Y.3d 865, 910 N.Y.S.2d 31, 936 N.E.2d 912, 2010 N.Y. LEXIS 2963 (N.Y. 2010).

Because an employee was subjected to a hostile work environment, based on sex, that led to the employee's constructive discharge, pursuant to N.Y. Exec. Law §§ 296(1), 297(4)(c), the employer and its president were liable for the discriminatory conduct, and the employee was entitled to back pay, compensatory damages, and pre-determination interest. Matter of Eastport Assoc., Inc. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 71 A.D.3d 890, 897 N.Y.S.2d 177, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2066 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2010).

In an action for a sexually hostile work environment, the jury verdict for the employee was legally sufficient and not against the weight of the evidence, which showed the employer knew or should have known of the supervisor's harassing conduct, including inappropriate comments and unwanted touching, and failed to take action. Reynolds v State of New York, 180 A.D.3d 1116, 119 N.Y.S.3d 266, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 961 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2020).

Court denied defense motion to set aside jury verdict finding that plaintiff was subjected to hostile work environment based on her gender where proof showed that (1) comments were made about her breasts, she was subjected to sexually explicit jokes and derogatory language, she was physically assaulted twice, she was subjected to humiliating comments regarding her miscarriage, and she was exposed to profanity and other such incidents on almost daily basis, (2) her supervisor failed to investigate her complaints, take disciplinary action or dispel workplace hostility, (3) she did nothing to justify, condone or exonerate abusive behavior, and (4) she saw psychologist 21 times due to offensive nature of her work environment and her inability to cope with it, until she was discharged and could no longer afford his fees. McIntyre v Manhattan Ford, Lincoln-Mercury, 175 Misc. 2d 795, 669 N.Y.S.2d 122, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 656 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997), aff'd in part, modified, app. dismissed, 256 A.D.2d 269, 682 N.Y.S.2d 167, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13944 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Trial court granted the employee and the employer's motion to dismiss after the terminated employee filed a sexual harassment suit against them, as the four isolated, relatively mild comments that she said the employee made to her while she was working for the employer were not sufficient to show that her workplace was permeated with the required hostility necessary to maintain a sexual harassment cause of action. Constantine v Kay, 792 N.Y.S.2d 308, 6 Misc. 3d 927, 2004 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2916 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2004).

In action alleging sexual harassment, plaintiff's claim that each individual defendant sexually assaulted her, thereby creating hostile working environment, sufficiently alleged violation of CLS Exec § 296(6). Tomka v Seiler Corp., 66 F.3d 1295, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 27612 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1995).

No reasonable jury could find that employer's failure to transfer employee to different job following sale of company was retaliatory for her providing deposition testimony in sexual harassment matter where there was no evidence suggesting that employer treated employee differently from other employees in connection with sale. Coffey v Dobbs Int'l Servs., Inc., 170 F.3d 323, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 4124 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1999).

Female probationary firefighters establish that their discharge violated Title VII where evidence shows they were not given full training opportunities, were improperly critiqued on performance, and were subjected to ostracism and mistreatment. Berkman v New York, 580 F. Supp. 226, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11022 (E.D.N.Y. 1983), aff'd, 755 F.2d 913 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1985).

Former employees' Human Rights Law claims under CLS Exec Law § 296(1)(a) will not be dismissed due to likelihood of jury confusion, where employees sue employers as well as individuals who allegedly continually sexually harassed them during office hours, resulting in their constructive discharge, because differences between state claim under § 296 and federal claim under Title VII (42 USCS §§ 2000e et seq.)—damages limitation of $3,000 on Title VII claim and need to prove that employer "encouraged, condoned, or approved" harassment under § 296 claim —are not so radical as to be inexplicable by instruction. Bridges v Eastman Kodak Co., 800 F. Supp. 1172, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13083 (S.D.N.Y. 1992).

Sexually explicit birthday cake presented to plaintiff by several coworkers would not be attributable to employer in sexual discrimination action where there was no indication that employer sanctioned such activity, plaintiff partook enthusiastically in event and failed to inform any supervisory personnel of incident, and when similar situation involving another female employee was reported to employer, employer issued memorandum stating that such behavior would not be tolerated and that any persons involved in such activity would be terminated. Hansen v Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., 887 F. Supp. 669, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7701 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

Female employee's sexual harassment claim against supervisor under CLS Exec Law § 296(6) will not be dismissed, even though supervisor has no ownership interest in business they both worked for, where she alleges that supervisor actively participated in discriminatory conduct by making repeated unwelcome sexual comments and looking down her blouse, because court believes supervisor could be found individually liable under § 296(6). McIlwain v Korbean Int'l Inv. Corp., 896 F. Supp. 1373, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11970 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

Employee stated claim under CLS Exec § 296(6) against coworkers who allegedly made repeated unwelcome sexual comments to her and looked down her blouse while she was performing her job duties. McIlwain v Korbean Int'l Inv. Corp., 896 F. Supp. 1373, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11970 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

Supplemental federal jurisdiction will not be exercised over claims brought under CLS Exec Law §§ 296(1)(a,e) and 297(9), where court dismissed federal claim for sexual harassment and New York law is unclear with respect to sexual harassment vicarious liability for employers who take prompt and appropriate remedial action in response to hostile work environment complaints, because federal statute specifically provides that District Court may decline jurisdiction where claim raises novel or complex issue of state law. Walsh v National Westminster

Bancorp., 921 F. Supp. 168, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20838 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

Former employee's claim against former supervisor under CLS Exec Law § 296 is not dismissed, where employee alleged that supervisor created hostile work environment by making sexually lewd remarks and derogatory comments about employee's age while in her presence, because these allegations are sufficient to state claim under § 296(6). Storr v Anderson Sch., 919 F. Supp. 144, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3039 (S.D.N.Y. 1996).

Thirty-year employee with clothing store has no viable cause of action under New York Human Rights Law (CLS Exec Law §§ 290 et seq.), where he was fired for sexually harassing 24-year-old female stock clerk, because detailed affidavits of personnel officials articulate completely appropriate and justifiable reason for dismissing employee, and nothing in record suggests that employer was motivated by his age, gender, or pension status. Agugliaro v Brooks Bros., 927 F. Supp. 741, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7965 (S.D.N.Y. 1996).

Summary judgment is inappropriate on female police sergeant's CLS Exec Law § 296(6) claims against commanding officer and lieutenant, where their personal involvement in alleged sexual harassment and retaliation claims is disputed, because issues of material fact remain concerning (1) whether commanding officer knew about and/or condoned hostile working environment in precinct, and (2) whether lieutenant observed and failed to intervene in particular training room incident involving pornographic magazine. Wise v New York City Police Dep't, 928 F. Supp. 355, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8242 (S.D.N.Y. 1996).

Employer is not liable for failure to investigate and take remedial action on employee's complaint of sexual harassment by supervisor, where jury finds no actual sexual harassment by supervisor, since conduct which violates CLS Exec Law § 296 is discrimination, and § 296 does not create liability for failure to investigate and remedy a complaint of discrimination. Karibian v Columbia Univ., 930 F. Supp. 134, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9111 (S.D.N.Y. 1996).

Summary dismissal is denied with respect to former stenographer's claims of sexual harassment and retaliation under CLS Exec Law § 296, even though individual defendants claim they only had power to carry out personnel decisions of others, because any defendant who actually participates in conduct giving rise to discrimination claim may be held personally liable under § 296(6). Riedinger v D'Amicantino, 974 F. Supp. 322, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12604 (S.D.N.Y. 1997).

Sexual harassment claims against corporate employers are sufficient to withstand motion to dismiss, where building concierge alleges that defendants knew or should have known of pervasive sexual harassment she was suffering at hands of executives of building's owner and leasing agent, yet did not investigate harassment or discipline executives, because complaint adequately pleads calculated inaction to harassment, which constitutes condonation actionable under CLS Exec Law § 296. Ross v Mitsui Fudosan, 2 F. Supp. 2d 522, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5780 (S.D.N.Y. 1998).

Female city audit inspector has established her exposure to sexually hostile work environment, and $30,000 is appropriate measure of damages for emotional distress that she suffered, because she demonstrated that supervisor engaged in offensive sexual harassment that included commenting about her breasts, making obscene gestures directed at her, repeatedly using vulgar and offensive language when speaking to her or others in her presence, and leaving inappropriate and embarrassing messages over her work pager, and that city did not take reasonable care to prevent or promptly correct bad situation. Hollis v City of Buffalo, 28 F. Supp. 2d 812, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20351 (W.D.N.Y. 1998), reh'g denied, 189 F.R.D. 260, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12147 (W.D.N.Y. 1999).

Male former hospital worker's Exec § 296 claims are dismissed, although he may have subjectively believed he was experiencing sexually hostile work environment, where there is question as to whether female supervisor's irreverent conduct was truly unwelcome, because isolated incidents described by worker did not rise to level of pervasive hostile work environment. Lucas v South Nassau Communities Hosp., 54 F. Supp. 2d 141, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6504 (E.D.N.Y. 1998).

Sexual harassment and retaliation claims of former employee need not be dismissed or arbitrated, even though she has not exhausted grievance and arbitration procedures under applicable collective bargaining agreement, because agreement does not contain clear and unmistakable waiver of plaintiff's right to judicial forum for her Exec § 296 claim of employment discrimination. Prince v Coca-Cola Bottling Co., 37 F. Supp. 2d 289, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2352 (S.D.N.Y. 1999).

Former employee's state-law claims arising from alleged sexual harassment are not time-barred, even though she did not file timely charge of discrimination with EEOC or commence claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress within one year, because these statute-of-limitations defenses were not raised in responsive pleading and were waived. Funk v F&K Supply, Inc., 43 F. Supp. 2d 205, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2865 (N.D.N.Y. 1999).

Terminated African-American security guard's sexual harassment claim against former employer will not be denied summarily, where she complained about harassment to at least 2 employees charged with responsibility for relaying employee complaints to company management, because complaint asserts that employer had actual notice of harassment, and question of fact remains whether it reasonably investigated and took corrective action. Sowemimo v D.A.O.R. Sec., Inc., 43 F. Supp. 2d 477, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5436 (S.D.N.Y. 1999).

Employer is denied summary dismissal of sexual harassment claim of 3 female employees brought under Exec § 296, where employees complained to their supervisors, certain supervisors witnessed some of alleged harassment, and employer is charged with knowledge of complaints, because employer offers no evidence that it took appropriate action in response to complaints. Badlam v Reynolds Metals Co., 46 F. Supp. 2d 187, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5787 (N.D.N.Y. 1999).

Sexual harassment action need not be declined by federal district court, even though federal claims have dropped out, where complaint alleges that female former employee is citizen of Florida, former supervisor is citizen of New Jersey, and amount in controversy exceeds $75,000, because court has jurisdiction over state-law claims, including Exec § 296 claim under New York Human Rights Law, based not only on supplemental but also on diversity jurisdiction. Moore v Sam's Club, 55 F. Supp. 2d 177, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4868 (S.D.N.Y. 1999).

Under Exec § 296(6) prohibiting gender discrimination, female employee's co-workers could be held liable for such discrimination as aiders or abettors. Petrosky v New York State DMV, 72 F. Supp. 2d 39, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20884 (N.D.N.Y. 1999).

Harbor master's sexual harassment claim against town board liaison may proceed under Exec § 296, even though exact nature of their unique supervisory relationship is not clear, where master alleges that liaison had authority to affect his employment, because, at this stage, liaison could be held liable as employer and/or aider and abettor. Perks v Town of Huntington, 96 F. Supp. 2d 222, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7243 (E.D.N.Y. 2000).

Terminated receptionist's Exec § 296 discrimination claim is denied summarily, even though she claims she was fired for complaining about sexual harassment, because record is replete with evidence that she was, in fact, fired for simple reason that her performance was substandard. Galarza v American Home Assur. Co., 99 F. Supp. 2d 251, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7822 (E.D.N.Y. 2000).

Female student's allegations are sufficient to state cause of action for sexual harassment against male professor, where harassment consisted of professor continuously referring to her as "Monica Lewinsky," observing that she wore same color lipstick as Monica, and making comments such as "How was your weekend with Bill," and "Shut up, Monica. I'll give you a cigar later," in front of entire class, because comments were not only insensitive and politically incorrect, but also actionable. Hayut v State Univ. of New York, 127 F. Supp. 2d 333, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18845 (N.D.N.Y. 2000).

Former female executive at banking institutions may proceed with sexual harassment claim, where she testified she was subjected to hostile and degrading remarks and threats over 4-week period and that she was fired after she complained about these remarks, because she has presented sufficient evidence from which reasonable jury could find that defendant's conduct constituted sexual harassment and that defendants failed to investigate her complaints. Carroll v Bayerische Landesbank, 150 F. Supp. 2d 531, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6939 (S.D.N.Y. 2001).

Sexually hostile environment claim brought by female fast-food worker against male supervisor under Exec § 296 may proceed, even though he claims individual liability is improper, because supervisor, as general manager of restaurant, had authority to set schedules and salaries and to assign hours to employees, without consultation, so that he was empowered to do more than simply carry out others' personnel decisions, and was source of all alleged discriminatory conduct. Chamblee v Harris & Harris, Inc., 154 F. Supp. 2d 670, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11153 (S.D.N.Y. 2001).

Employer is denied summary dismissal of long-time employee's sexually hostile environment claim, even though it asserts it had "open door policy" by which employees could complain to high-level manager about perceived sexual harassment, where plaintiff here presents evidence of high-level knowledge and alleged complicity in harassment, because grievance policy which does not specifically address sexual harassment does not, on its own, provide sufficient evidence of reasonable care for grant of summary judgment. Robles v Cox & Co., 154 F. Supp. 2d 795, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10899 (S.D.N.Y. 2001).

Former employee's Exec § 296 claim need not be dismissed, where she alleges her supervisor used pejorative derivations of her first name and sexually explicit terms in addressing her and treated her like secretary, and that management ignored her complaints, because amended complaint clearly alleges sufficiently severe and persistent incidents directed at her because of her age and sex to support hostile work environment claim. Dooner v Keefe, Bruyette & Woods, Inc., 157 F. Supp. 2d 265, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12507 (S.D.N.Y. 2001), dismissed, in part, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 619 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 13, 2003).

Supervisors may be personally liable under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(6) as aiders and abettors of the employer's alleged unlawful conduct where the employee alleged that one supervisor aided and abetted the alleged sexual harassment violation, and that two other supervisors incurred liability not only for aiding and abetting in the alleged sexual harassment of and retaliation against the employee, but also for their participation in the sham investigation of the employee's complaint. Bennett v Progressive Corp., 225 F. Supp. 2d 190, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18605 (N.D.N.Y. 2002).

Employee sufficiently stated a claim of sexual harassment discrimination under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 against her employer and one of its officers to survive dismissal where she alleged that certain instances of sexual harassment by the officer created a hostile work environment. Wait v Beck's N. Am., Inc., 241 F. Supp. 2d 172, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 844 (N.D.N.Y. 2003).

Former employee had established a hostile work environment case sufficient to proceed to a jury where on four occasions her supervisor placed his hand under her skirt and rubbed her leg above the knee moving his hand towards her groin; there were genuine issues in dispute with regard to the employee's prima facie case for retaliation and whether the grounds articulated by the employer to justify the employee's discharge were the real reasons for the action or a pretext for unlawful discrimination. Parrish v Sollecito, 249 F. Supp. 2d 342, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2225 (S.D.N.Y. 2003).

Allegations, which included an incident where the male social worker sniffed the female teacher's genital area, taken as a whole, created a genuine issue of material fact as to whether the social worker, on the basis of her race or gender, undertook a campaign of continuous and concerted campaign of harassment over the course of her 10 week employment at the school which was so pervasive that it rendered her work environment objectively hostile. The trier of fact had to determine whether (1) his behavior was motivated by the teacher's race and/or sex, and (2) whether the teacher's work environment was objectively hostile, that is, whether the nature and frequency of his conduct was sufficiently pervasive so as to objectively alter the conditions of employment for the worse. Sullivan v Newburgh Enlarged Sch. Dist., 281 F. Supp. 2d 689, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15943 (S.D.N.Y. 2003).

Summary judgment was denied to a former employer in an age discrimination case brought by a 59-year-old former employee under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 (ADEA), 29 U.S.C.S. § 631, and N.Y. Exec. Law §§ 296 and 297 because allegations of constructive discharge and intolerable working conditions satisfied the elements of an adverse employment action leading to an inference of discrimination, and because even though the employer claimed that the conditions under which an employee worked never rose to the level required to show constructive discharge and that the employee left his position because he feared termination before the vesting of his medical benefits, the fact-finding required to accept the employer's version of the events was not an exercise that could be carried out in the context of a motion for summary judgment. Kern v Brookhaven Nat'l Lab., 293 F. Supp. 2d 214, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21350 (E.D.N.Y. 2003).

Summary judgment on the merits of plaintiff's sexual harassment claims under Title VII, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e-2, and the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., was denied in light of questions surrounding whether defendant employer had in place a reasonable procedure for dealing with sexual harassment, as of the date plaintiff spoke to defendant's upper management, (if it did not, surely plaintiff could not be penalized for failing to utilize something that did not exist). EEOC v Rotary Corp., 297 F. Supp. 2d 643, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23225 (N.D.N.Y. 2003).

Municipal defendants were denied summary judgment in hostile work environment (sexual harassment) claim where even though plaintiff made no oral or written harassment complaint, the municipal defendants were arguably given constructive notice of the plaintiff's harassment/hostile work environment claims as she contended that she made oral complaints regarding her own alleged sexual harassment to human resources investigators when they interviewed her regarding an unrelated charge of sexual harassment. Dunbar v County of Saratoga, 358 F. Supp. 2d 115, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3193 (N.D.N.Y. 2005).

Employer was granted summary judgment on a female employee's hostile work environment claim because she failed to take advantage of the employer's sexual harassment complaint procedure publicized in its employee handbook and stated in a sexual harassment seminar. The employee did not provide any evidence that she was afraid a complaint would be ignored or that she would face adverse employment action if she reported her supervisor. Tomassi v Insignia Fin. Group, Inc., 398 F. Supp. 2d 263, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26962 (S.D.N.Y. 2005), vacated, 478 F.3d 111, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 3490 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2007).

As to the employee's constructive discharge claims, there was no possible way that a reasonable person in the employee's shoes could have felt compelled to resign; the employer credited the employee's complaint, disciplined the coworker, and the sexual harassment stopped. Nothing supported a finding that the employer deliberately created working conditions that made life too difficult for the employee. Durant v A.C.S. State & Local Solutions, Inc., 460 F. Supp. 2d 492, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 80987 (S.D.N.Y. 2006).

To the extent the employee was attempting to assert a claim that she was retaliated against by losing her job offer from another company, she was barred from doing so, as such a claim was neither alleged in the civil complaint nor reasonably related to the allegations contained in the employee's New York State Division of Human Rights complaint; however, neither party was entitled to summary judgment on the hostile work environment claim. There were obvious issues of credibility regarding the nature and extent of the sexually-oriented comments and behavior to which the employee was subjected, the extent to which she complained about these matters and to whom, and what if any measures the employer took in response. Ribis v Mike Barnard Chevrolet-Cadillac, Inc., 468 F. Supp. 2d 489, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1397 (W.D.N.Y. 2007).

Former employer was entitled to summary judgment as to a former employee's hostile work environment claims under 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e and N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 becuase no physical threat was attached to the allegedly inappropriate comments and the employee's allegations did not meet the threshold for frequency and severity as the comments were too few and too mild to create an abusive working environment. Allen v Advanced Digital Info. Corp., 500 F. Supp. 2d 93, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23676 (N.D.N.Y. 2007).

Former employee's version of the facts, more specifically the requirement that he submit to a customer's sexual demands in order to keep his job, if true, appeared to set forth a claim of sexual harassment such that a reasonable fact-finder could conclude that the employee was subject to a hostile working environment and constructive discharge. Lopes v Caffe Centrale LLC, 548 F. Supp. 2d 47, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 31449 (S.D.N.Y. 2008).

In her lawsuit against a university, a professor failed to show gender-based harassment in violation of the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, because the behavior that she complained about was facially neutral, and she considered the other professor's behavior bizarre, rather than romantic, which did not constitute gender discrimination. Guarino v St. John Fisher College, 553 F. Supp. 2d 252, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 31353 (W.D.N.Y. 2008), aff'd, 321 Fed. Appx. 55, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 7511 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2009).

In a female police officer's suit against a city, its police department, and others (defendants), her claims that defendants' acts of transferring her, ordering her to wear a uniform, denying other requested transfers and overtime assignments, and denying her a take-home vehicle failed to show a sexually hostile work environment in violation of the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, because none of these action demonstrated objectively hostile or abusive behaviour on account of gender. Lore v City of Syracuse, 583 F. Supp. 2d 345, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 89484 (N.D.N.Y. 2008), aff'd in part, vacated in part, 670 F.3d 127, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 1954 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2012).

Former employee alleged that the deputy superintendent referred to another woman using a derogatory term, told the employee she could be one of his girls and that he could have her any time he wanted to, and maintained an inappropriate relationship with his other administrative assistant by constantly placing his hands on her body and speaking to her with profane and sexually suggestive language;the employee alleged that the superintendent also referred to another woman using several derogatory terms. On these facts, the employee offered allegations that were sufficient to survive defendants' motions to dismiss; the individual defendants' comments and epithets were such that a reasonable employee could find that her employment had been altered for the worse by gender-based hostility. Illiano v Mineola Union Free Sch. Dist., 585 F. Supp. 2d 341, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 91854 (E.D.N.Y. 2008).

Police officer's hostile work environment claim did not survive summary judgment because derogatory comments made by other employees were not sufficiently severe and pervasive to alter the officer's working conditions, the officer admitted that she had no complaint about the presence of pornography at work, and the officer admitted that she sometimes used derogatory language when referring to other people at work. Lee v City of Syracuse, 603 F. Supp. 2d 417, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24966 (N.D.N.Y. 2009), overruled in part, Widomski v State Univ. of N.Y., 748 F.3d 471, 2014 U.S. App. LEXIS 6466 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2014).

Employee's hostile work environment claim under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(6) survived summary judgment because a reasonable juror could find that harassment consisting of sexual comments and unwelcome sexual contact made by a manager who did not work in the employee's department was sufficiently severe or pervasive as to alter the conditions of the employee's work environment and that requiring the manager to apologize two months after the employee initially reported the misconduct to her supervisor did not constitute appropriate remedial action. Maher v Alliance Mortg. Banking Corp., 650 F. Supp. 2d 249, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 79486 (E.D.N.Y. 2009).

Although it was a close call, the former employee submitted sufficient evidence to create an issue of fact; assuming arguendo that none of the acts or comments of two coworkers was sufficiently egregious on its own, when taken together they did describe a work environment in which a jury could find an ongoing pattern of sexually offensive and humiliating conduct. A jury could find that the coworkers' sexually offensive remarks, directed at the employee as well as at least one other female employee, together with one coworker's unwanted physical touches and the employee's pleas for him to stop, cast women in a demeaning role and negatively impacted the employee's working environment. Polito v Tri-Wire Eng'g Solution, Inc., 699 F. Supp. 2d 480, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26008 (E.D.N.Y. 2010).

Where a terminated employee alleged that an affair between the employer's president and a donor adversely affected the employee's ability to perform the employee's job, the hostile work environment claims failed because the allegations did not indicate that gender was causally related to the hostility that the employee allegedly faced since, inter alia, nothing in the complaint suggested that the employee would have been treated any differently had the employee been a man, and the facts alleged did not show that a fellow employee was given preferential treatment. Foster v Humane Soc'y of Rochester & Monroe County, Inc., 724 F. Supp. 2d 382, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 73384 (W.D.N.Y. 2010).

Jailor did not establish a hostile work environment claim based on an incident involving sexual conduct by a jail visitor; the evidence did not show that the jailor was required to watch the visitor's conduct, and co-workers' alleged offensive utterances were not frequent, severe, or threatening. However, the jailor sufficiently alleged retaliation for having reported a hostile work environment; the jailor claimed to have been denied leave and compelled to return to work despite a medical condition. Kleehammer v Monroe County, 743 F. Supp. 2d 175, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 93395 (W.D.N.Y. 2010), app. dismissed, 583 Fed. Appx. 18, 2014 U.S. App. LEXIS 22110 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2014).

Former employee failed to establish sexual harassment in violation of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e-2(a), 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983, or the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 because the disputed behavior was not severe enough to rise to the level of a hostile work environment, but only amounted to mundane and routine workplace actions that were too trivial to constitute harassment as a matter of law, and in any event, none of the alleged actions were due to the fact that the employee was a man, but instead were facially neutral incidents. Conklin v County of Suffolk, 859 F. Supp. 2d 415, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 62436 (E.D.N.Y. 2012).

Where a former employee failed to establish sexual harassment in violation of the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, he was unable to establish that a coworker aided and abetted the fostering of a sexually hostile work environment. Conklin v County of Suffolk, 859 F. Supp. 2d 415, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 62436 (E.D.N.Y. 2012).

Plaintiff former employee stated a claim for discrimination in violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a) because her female supervisor's conduct was because of her sex and the allegation of unwanted sexual contact—grabbing and squeezing one of her breasts—concerned unwanted sexual contact sufficient to defeat defendant employer and supervisor's motion to dismiss. Reid v Ingerman Smith LLP, 876 F. Supp. 2d 176, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 93974 (E.D.N.Y. 2012).

Plaintiff's quid pro quo and hostile work environment claims against her former employer under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(6). but her claims brought for age and disability discrimination brought under 29 U.S.C.S. § 621 et seq. and 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., were dismissed for failure to exhaust administrative remedies. Sloth v Constellation Brands, Inc., 883 F. Supp. 2d 359, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 79979 (W.D.N.Y. 2012).

Complainant, part-time legal secretary, was not subjected to hostile work environment by exposure to sexually explicit materials that were mailed to law office where, inter alia, owner of law firm was involuntarily placed on mailing lists of several direct marketers selling sexual materials, materials were marked with warning notices stating that contents were sexually explicit, materials were not directed toward complainant, or displayed by law firm, and complainant opened mail knowing it contained sexual materials. 2000 Order Comm HR No. 9S-E-S-96-7940895.

52. Sex discrimination

Restaurant's belief that replacement of waiters with waitresses dressed in alluring costumes would enhance sales volume did not establish a bona fide occupational qualification for purposes of exempting discharge of waiters from operation of sex discrimination laws. Guardian Capital Corp. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 46 A.D.2d 832, 360 N.Y.S.2d 937, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3585 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974), app. dismissed, 36 N.Y.2d 806, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 2680 (N.Y. 1975), app. denied, 37 N.Y.2d 705, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 2770 (N.Y. 1975).

Although the Human Rights Appeals Board erred in dismissing an employee's appeal from the Division's order of no probable cause since Exec Law § 297(2) is directory and not mandatory in setting 180 days as the time period within which the Division must investigate and determine a complaint of unlawful discrimination, the Division's finding of no probable cause would be confirmed where, in view of the evidence in the record of the employee's unsatisfactory performance, the employer was not guilty of unlawful discrimination in discharging him two weeks after he was hired. State Div. of Human Rights v American Can Co., 78 A.D.2d 1005, 433 N.Y.S.2d 906, 1980 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13781 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1980).

A sex discrimination complaint by a female worker who was discharged after she failed to return to work following her lunch hour was properly dismissed, even though she claimed she was discharged because she refused to continue a personal relationship with her immediate supervisor, where defendant submitted affidavits showing that it had no knowledge of any discriminatory acts by plaintiff's supervisor and plaintiff in opposition submitted no evidence to the contrary. McBride v General Ry. Signal Co., 96 A.D.2d 1145, 467 N.Y.S.2d 457, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19832 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1983).

A petition seeking to annul administrative finding of no probable cause to believe that the termination of petitioner's employment was based on her sex or pregnancy was properly dismissed, where the record showed no evidence of a policy against pregnant employees, and demonstrated repeated absences and an unsatisfactory attitude on the part of petitioner. Ditaranto v State Div. of Human Rights, 111 A.D.2d 702, 491 N.Y.S.2d 176, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49960 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1985).

Instructor failed to make out cause of action for discrimination on basis of sex where complaint focused only on injury that she allegedly incurred by virtue of college's nonrenewal of her appointment and she did not allege that (1) she was paid lower salary than others performing similarly, (2) she was excluded from organizational meetings, (3) she was downgraded in evaluation, or (4) she was subjected to disparate treatment in nonrenewal of her appointment. Brumbach v Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, 126 A.D.2d 841, 510 N.Y.S.2d 762, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 41975 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987).

Plaintiffs' motion to amend their complaint to add cause of action for gender-based employment discrimination should have been granted–complaint stated 11 causes of action, all of which were predicated on alleged wrongful termination of plaintiffs' employment with defendant in violation of employment contracts entered into between parties; shortly after discovery commenced, plaintiffs moved to amend their complaint to add twelfth cause of action on behalf of female plaintiff for gender-based employment discrimination under New York Executive Law § 296 (1) (a) et seq.–plaintiffs' proposed twelfth cause of action states legally sufficient claim under Executive Law § 296 (1) (a); female plaintiff alleges that she is member of protected class (women) and that defendant discharged her because of her gender; plaintiffs submitted affidavit in support of their motion containing excerpted deposition testimony of president of defendant corporation which corroborates allegations made by plaintiffs in their proposed amended complaint; in absence of prejudice or unfair surprise, requests for leave to amend should be granted freely. Daniels v Empire-Orr, Inc., 151 A.D.2d 370, 542 N.Y.S.2d 614, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8121 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1989).

Division of Human Rights properly found that there was no probable cause to believe that employer had engaged in sex or age discrimination in layoff of 4 female complainants where (1) employer experienced drastic reduction in customer orders which resulted in layoffs of more than $^1/_3$ of employees (i.e., over 1,000 employees), (2) record showed that employer laid off complainants because of economic necessity, (3) employees of both sexes older and younger than complainants were laid off at about same time, and (4) some female employees older than complainants were retained. Giles v State Div. of Human Rights, 166 A.D.2d 779, 563 N.Y.S.2d 142, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12018 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1990).

Court would annul determination finding that petitioner had been discriminated against based on gender, in that employer had not enforced its time and attendance policy as stringently with similar female employees as with petitioner, or that employer had ever put similar female employees on disciplinary probation for having violated its time and attendance policy as it did with petitioner, where (1) petitioner's treatment was in accordance with employer's disciplinary policy, under which time and attendance disciplinary infractions were typically negotiated with employee, (2) statistical analysis of average measure of time and attendance violations (TAV), constructed by Commissioner of Division of Human Rights and used as basis for his determination of discrimination, used 4 other similar female employees as sample, (3) TAV analysis had no relationship to manner in which employer disciplined employees for time and attendance abuse, (4) TAV analysis failed to account for differences in number of months over which each employee accumulated their time and attendance violations, and contained errors in computation, (5) TAV analysis did not reflect severity of violations during certain periods, or reveal improvements in time and attendance made by employees during other time periods, (6) petitioner was not treated differently as to his first 3 notices of discipline from 3 of similar female employees sampled, and (7) there was no gender discrimination in settlement voluntarily entered into by petitioner as opposed to settlement made by fourth female. Male bank employee, who had been discharged for sexually harassing 2 subordinate female employees, failed to make out prima facie case of sexual discrimination under CLS Exec § 296 where he did not show that he was treated differently from female employees in same situation. Traviglia v Fleet Bank, N.A., 219 A.D.2d 644, 631 N.Y.S.2d 423, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9881 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 87 N.Y.2d 805, 640 N.Y.S.2d 877, 663 N.E.2d 919, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 5038 (N.Y. 1995).

Defendants' former employee stated cause of action for unlawful employment discrimination on basis of sex where she had exemplary performance evaluations for 11 years prior to 7-month tenure of supervisor who fired her for poor job performance, she claimed that supervisor actually fired her because she refused to perform certain menial tasks (such as bringing him coffee, tea and oranges) that were not part of her job description, and she alleged that her successor (also female) was fired for refusing to do same tasks. Spector v Hebrew Hosp. Home, 229 A.D.2d 571, 646 N.Y.S.2d 37, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8254 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

Employee's complaint of sex discrimination against her former employer was properly dismissed by state Human Rights Commission where there was no proof of retaliatory firing, employer was experiencing financial difficulties, employee was not replaced by male, her position was eliminated, and her duties were assumed by another female on staff. Maury v Frederick Goldman, Inc., 232 A.D.2d 215, 648 N.Y.S.2d 80, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9972 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

Cause of action for discrimination based on sexual orientation, while viable under NYC Admin Code § 8-107, was not viable under CLS Exec § 296, and thus insofar as claim was based on state statute, defendant was entitled to summary judgment. Nacinovich v Tullet & Tokyo Forex, 257 A.D.2d 523, 685 N.Y.S.2d 17, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 646 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1999).

Discrimination against employee on basis of failed voluntary sexual relationship is not discrimination because of "sex" under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a); statutory term is synonymous with "gender" and does not include such concepts as "sexual activity," "sexual liaisons," or "sexual attractions." Mauro v Orville, 259 A.D.2d 89, 697 N.Y.S.2d 704, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10935 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 759, 705 N.Y.S.2d 6, 726 N.E.2d 483, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 60 (N.Y. 2000).

Evidence supported determination finding that employer discriminated against claimant on basis of sex where there were promotions and regular pay increases given to claimant and other indications of her satisfactory performance, lay-off of only female employees in claimant's department, retention of claimant's male peer in same department despite unfavorable evaluation by his immediate supervisor, pay differential between claimant and that male peer for 3 years, continuation of department services after claimant's termination, and employer's hiring of male for position involving claimant's former duties created less than year after claimant's termination and for which she was not considered. Georgeson & Co. v Stewart, 267 A.D.2d 126, 700 N.Y.S.2d 9, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13054 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1999), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 758, 713 N.Y.S.2d 522, 735 N.E.2d 1287, 2000 N.Y. Defendant was properly granted summary judgment in action alleging that plaintiff, licensed architect, was fired from her position as associate, after 14 years of increasingly responsible employment with defendant, because of her sex where plaintiff presented no evidence that she was replaced by male employee; further, defendant showed that plaintiff was discharged for poor work performance. Kapila v Divney, 269 A.D.2d 127, 702 N.Y.S.2d 56, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 985 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

State Division of Human Rights' finding of sex discrimination in termination of female employee was not supported by substantial evidence where (1) employee's claim of reduced work hours was inconsistent with her claim that she was given more work than her coworkers were, (2) although she did not have locker for changing clothes, she was provided small room to change in, because of unavailability of separate lockers for female employees, (3) every fact finder who had heard employee's testimony had found it incredible, (4) court-appointed psychiatrist who examined employee described her belief of sexual harassment in terms of paranoid personality disorder, delusional psychosis, and distorted view of reality, and (5) employee's prior complaints against 2 former employers were never substantiated, one of them prompting federal judge to condemn her strongly. Jamco Bldg. Maint. Corp. v N.Y. State Div. of Human Rights, 281 A.D.2d 364, 724 N.Y.S.2d 20, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3139 (N.Y. Defendants were entitled to summary judgment as to plaintiff's action alleging employment discrimination in violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, as defendants made a prima facie showing that plaintiff's employment was terminated for legitimate, nondiscriminatory reasons, and plaintiff failed to raise a triable issue of fact as to whether the reasons proffered by defendants for her discharge were merely pretextual. Morse v Cowtan & Tout, Inc., 41 A.D.3d 563, 838 N.Y.S.2d 162, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7439 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2007).

Plaintiff stated valid cause of action for sexual discrimination in employment where she alleged that her employment was terminated on account of discontinuance of her consensual sexual relationship with her employer. Mauro v Orville, 172 Misc. 2d 499, 660 N.Y.S.2d 662, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 235 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 259 A.D.2d 89, 697 N.Y.S.2d 704, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10935 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Former employee's sexual orientation discrimination claim under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a) failed because the alleged conduct occurred before the sexual orientation discrimination amendment to § 296(1) became effective; the amendment applied prospectively only. Logan v Salvation Army, 809 N.Y.S.2d 846, 10 Misc. 3d 756, 234 N.Y.L.J. 99, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2542 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2005).

Division of Human Rights erred in finding no probable cause to support an employee's claim of sex discrimination because, even if it lacked jurisdiction over familial status discrimination in the employment context, a claim for "sex plus" was a form of sex discrimination under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, which was within its jurisdiction. Bailey v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 959 N.Y.S.2d 833, 38 Misc. 3d 756, 2012 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 5838 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2012).

Plaintiff's discrimination claim based on pregnancy under the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 290 et seq., survived a motion to strike where plaintiff alleged that she was in a protected class due to her pregnancy immediately prior to her discharge, that she was recruited by defendant one to work for defendant two based on his prior knowledge of plaintiff's ability to procure sales, and thus, that she was qualified for her position; given that plaintiff was discharged shortly after telling her supervisor of her pregnancy, she sufficiently raised an inference of discrimination. Krause v Lancer & Loader Group, LLC, 965 N.Y.S.2d 312, 40 Misc. 3d 385, 2013 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1815 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2013).

Trial court erred in setting aside a jury verdict in an action by an employee, alleging gender discrimination in violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 and N.Y. Lab. Law § 194, where there was evidence to support a finding that the employee was terminated for misconduct due to her insubordination, rather than due to gender discrimination; further, the disparity in pay between her and other employees could have been due to a variety of nondiscriminatory reasons. Wheeler v Citizens Telcoms. Co. of N.Y., Inc., 18 A.D.3d 1002, 795 N.Y.S.2d 370, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5174 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2005).

Terminated trader's New York Human Rights Law claim under CLS Exec Law § 296 must fail, even though male trader was kept on while she was terminated, because record contains ample testimony supporting brokerage firm's position that male was better qualified for position than plaintiff. Hansen v Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., 887 F. Supp. 669, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7701 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

In sex discrimination case against employer, evidence established that male employee, who was retained on staff of Transactional Finance Unit ("TFU") repo trading desk following its consolidation with "fixed income desk," was better qualified than female plaintiff where it was shown that he had more experience in mortgage-backed trading than she did, that he was easier to work with than she was, and that he was able to negotiate better rate for clients than she could. Hansen v Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., 887 F. Supp. 669, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7701 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

Management employee was not subject to liability in sex discrimination action brought by former concierge in office building where she had no ownership interest in defendant entities and complaint did not allege that she had ability to discharge plaintiff or that she participated in any conduct that would give rise to sex discrimination claim. Ross v Mitsui Fudosan, 2 F. Supp. 2d 522, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5780 (S.D.N.Y. 1998).

Terminated employee's Exec § 296 gender-based discrimination claim is denied summarily, even though former Assistant Director of Engineering Minority Programs Office cites 10 instances as evidence of hostile work environment, because alleged incidents—mostly rude and negative comments by director about female employees' dress and appearance—are isolated and sporadic and not sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter terms or conditions of work environment so as to constitute sex discrimination. Roman v Cornell Univ., 53 F. Supp. 2d 223, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10071 (N.D.N.Y. 1999).

Woman is unable to establish prima facie case with respect to her claim of discriminatory discharge as associate clinical professor, where discharge occurred after she began to work full-time for another university in November 1996, because her failure to comply with employer's rules concerning outside employment renders performance of her job duties unsatisfactory after that. Marks v New York Univ., 61 F. Supp. 2d 81, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13424 (S.D.N.Y. 1999).

Complainant could not bring discrimination action under Exec §§ 296 and 297 while complaint was still pending with local commission on human rights, even if Equal Opportunity Commission had already issued right to sue letter. Gonzalez v N.Y. State Dep't of Corr. Servs. Fishkill Corr. Facility, 122 F. Supp. 2d 335, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17317 (N.D.N.Y. 2000).

First female banquet room sous chef at hotel may proceed with retaliation claim under Exec § 296, where it is undisputed that she made 15 to 20 complaints over course of one year to her supervisor and human resources director concerning her work environment, because genuine issue is presented as to whether she was fired for complaining about gender discrimination or because she could not get along with co-workers. Ramos v Marriott Int'l, 134 F. Supp. 2d 328, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2819 (S.D.N.Y. 2001).

Employer's summary judgment motion was denied as the fired employee showed a prima facie case of employment discrimination based on his sex and national origin where the supervisor's comment that Russian men like to flirt with blondes and her subsequent practices were direct evidence of a discriminatory sales policy and practice and where, under the McDonnell Douglas burden shifting analysis, the employer's proffered nondiscriminatory reasons were not credible. Ames v Cartier, Inc., 193 F. Supp. 2d 762, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5609 (S.D.N.Y. 2002).

Where record did not show that harassment that corrections officer endured was based on non-conformity with gender norms instead of his sexual orientation, or that he was perceived to act in an effeminate manner, his claim for sexual discrimination failed; harassment on basis of sexual orientation was not actionable. Martin v N.Y. State Dep't of Corr. Servs., 224 F. Supp. 2d 434, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18094 (N.D.N.Y. 2002).

Former employer was awarded summary judgment on a former employee's gender discrimination claims because the employer claimed that the employee was fired for removing her performance review from her supervisor's desk without permission, and the employee did not offer evidence that created a triable issue of fact as to pretext. Burniche v GE Automation Servs., 306 F. Supp. 2d 233, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1969 (N.D.N.Y. 2004).

In an action in which a former employee filed suit against her former employer alleging violations of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, and the New York City Human Rights Law, New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107, the employer was denied summary judgment on the discriminatory discharge claim where (1) the employer's inconsistent explanations created an issue of fact as to whether the reason it currently asserted for terminating the employee was pretextual; and (2) the employee raised a triable issue of fact that her suprvisor's inability to get along with her had its genesis in the fact that the employee was a woman. Giannone v Deutsche Bank Sec., Inc., 392 F. Supp. 2d 576, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20493 (S.D.N.Y. 2005).

Former employee, who was reassigned jobs, given a pay cut, and then terminated and replaced by a younger male employee failed to establish a prima facie case of gender discrimination in violation of the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a), because replacement by a male and the fact that there was a certain amount of camaraderie among the male workers, without more, was insufficient to establish a violation of Title VII. Shain v Ctr. for Jewish History, Inc., 418 F. Supp. 2d 360, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20629 (S.D.N.Y. 2005).

Former employee failed to satisfy his burden of establishing a prima facie case of discrimination based on sex pursuant to Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 because, while it was undisputed that the employee was a member of a protected class because he was a Bosnian male in the nursing field, and the employee experienced an adverse employment action because he was terminated from his position, (1) the employee failed to meet even the de minimus standard of demonstrating he was qualified for the position of staff nurse at the employer because, while it was undisputed that the employee passed the nursing boards and met the licensing and educational requirements of the employer, he failed to meet the excellent patient care standard in the employment and retention policy, (2) specifically, the employee committed multiple errors that did not meet the excellent patient care standard required for employee retention, and (3) the employee failed to provide evidence that gave rise to an inference of discrimination based on sex. Memisevich v St. Elizabeth's Med. Ctr., 443 F. Supp. 2d 276, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 56315 (N.D.N.Y. 2006).

Even if a former employee satisfied his burden of establishing a prima facie case of discrimination based on sex pursuant to Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, the employer offered legitimate, nondiscriminatory reasons for its termination decision because (1) the complaints about the employee's clinical errors were investigated and reasonably credited, which would have rebutted any presumption of discrimination, (2) the employee's disputes with co-workers were evident of personality conflicts, and (3) the employee was a probationary employee at the time of his termination and under the employer's policy could have been terminated during the probationary period with or without notice. Memisevich v St. Elizabeth's Med. Ctr., 443 F. Supp. 2d 276, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 56315 (N.D.N.Y. 2006).

Since a former employee contended that she was constructively discharged, she was unable to maintain a claim of wrongful termination, in violation of the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, against her former employer and a former coworker. Maney v Corning, Inc., 547 F. Supp. 2d 221, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 91382 (W.D.N.Y. 2007).

Defendants cited three reasons for their decision to terminate the employee: client cancellations, lack of business production by the employee, and the employee's poor attitude, however, viewing the record in favor of the employee, there were issues of fact concerning whether defendants' proffered reasons for terminating the employee were pretextual. The employee presented evidence that after she complained about what she perceived to be discriminatory treatment on account of her sex, her performance reviews became more negative and she was terminated about two months after she filed her Equal Employment Opportunity Commission complaint. Heinemann v Howe & Rusling, 529 F. Supp. 2d 396, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 177 (W.D.N.Y. 2008).

Employee's allegations included events spanning a period from 1999 to the disciplinary action taken against her regarding shift differential pay in 2003; further, throughout the relevant period, command of the unit remained under the supervision of the individuals responsible for the alleged harassment. Reading the complaint in the light most favorable to the employee, the employee sufficiently alleged a pattern of discrimination that continued over a period of years with some incidents occurring within the appropriate filing period; this reasoning applied with equal force to the employee's hostile environment claims pursuant to 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 and N.Y. Exec. Law § 290 et seq. Anderson v Nassau County Dep't of Corr., 558 F. Supp. 2d 283, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21774 (E.D.N.Y. 2008).

In a female police officer's suit against a city, its police department, and others, alleging gender discrimination, her claim regarding her transfer to the uniform patrol division failed to show gender discrimination in violation of the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law 296, because the officer failed to show that the transfer was motivated at all by her gender. Lore v City of Syracuse, 583 F. Supp. 2d 345, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 89484 (N.D.N.Y. 2008), aff'd in part, vacated in part, 670 F.3d 127, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 1954 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2012).

Police officer did not establish a gender discrimination claim with regards to the seizure of her weapon and requests for medical records because the officer was placed on psychiatric medical leave and there was no evidence that the officer was treated differently that similarly situated male colleagues. Lee v City of Syracuse, 603 F. Supp. 2d 417, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24966 (N.D.N.Y. 2009), overruled in part, Widomski v State Univ. of N.Y., 748 F.3d 471, 2014 U.S. App. LEXIS 6466 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2014).

Police officer failed to establish a gender discrimination claim with respect to disciplinary actions taken against her because the officer's violation of a city police department's rules provided a nondiscriminatory reason for disciplining the officer and there was no evidence that the city's actions were motivated by the officer's gender. Lee v City of Syracuse, 603 F. Supp. 2d 417, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24966 (N.D.N.Y. 2009), overruled in part,

Widomski v State Univ. of N.Y., 748 F.3d 471, 2014 U.S. App. LEXIS 6466 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2014).

Employee claimed that the employer discriminated against her on the basis of her sex by: claims that assigning older bucket trucks to her, while assigning better trucks to less-senior male employees; assigning her to perform two-man jobs alone and encouraging her co-workers not to assist her; failing to provide a women-only bathroom and reprimanding her for using offsite bathrooms; criticizing her work and micro-managing her; denying her light duty work; employee also claimed retaliatory discharge based on the argument that she was forced to retire because she was denied light duty; retaliation based on allegations of co-worker hostility; and a hostile work environment claim; however, employee failed to establish a prima facie case of discrimination and her disparate treatment claims all failed. The retaliation claims failed, either because they were untimely or because employee two did not make out a prima facie case and as to the hostile environment claims, she did not offer sufficient evidence for a jury to find that her supervisors' alleged negative conduct was directed at her because of her sex. Dauer v Verizon Communs. Inc., 613 F. Supp. 2d 446, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21506 (S.D.N.Y. 2009), vacated, 618 F.3d 112, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 16749 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2010).

No reasonable jury could have found that a former employee met his evidentiary burden in establishing a prima facie case with regard to showing circumstances that gave rise to an inference of gender discrimination, under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000 et seq., and the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., because the employee did not present any direct evidence of discriminatory intent, and although the employee identified female comparators who were subject to the same disciplinary standards, the employee failed to adduce any evidence from which a reasonable juror could have inferred that the employee was treated differently under these standards based on his gender. Bennett v Hofstra Univ., 842 F. Supp. 2d 489, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 115315 (E.D.N.Y. 2012).

In an action by a former employee against her former employer alleging gender discrimination, failure to promote, and retaliation under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, and New York City law, following the employer's production of a sample of e-mails from restored computer backup tapes, the employee's motion to compel production of all remaining backup e-mails was granted and one quarter of the cost of any further production concerning the computer backup tapes requested under Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a) was shifted to the employee pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2) and (c) because the employee demonstrated that the marginal utility of the backup tapes was potentially high, the cost of restoration was not significantly disproportionate to the projected value of the case, the employee probably had the financial wherewithal to cover at least some of the cost of restoration, and, although the employee did not show that there was indispensable evidence on the backup tapes, there was plainly relevant evidence that was only available on the backup tapes. Zubulake v UBS Warburg LLC, 216 F.R.D. 280, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12643 (S.D.N.Y. 2003).

Maintenance of separate seniority lists of male and female physical education teachers is impermissible form of sex discrimination which no bona-fide occupational qualification can justify; thus, if female physical education teachers having less seniority were, in fact, retained in preference to male physical education teacher dismissed because of fiscal crisis, school district should reinstate male and pay salary from date of termination to date of reinstatement. Ops Comr Ed #9321.

Complainant, store cashier, failed to show that employer acted unlawfully in discharging her for failing to produce receipt for store merchandise placed in bag underneath her register, even though she showed that she was discharged on very day that she said she told employer's coordinator of detectives that she was breaking off their sexual relationship. 1999 Order Comm HR No. 9S-E-S-90-144553.

Complainant failed to show that she was denied employment opportunity on ground she rebuffed amorous advances of employer's vice president of finance where employer's chief financial officer and employer's executive board, not vice president, had final say in both offering complainant job and later revoking that offer of employment, and employer was motivated by financial considerations when it revoked its offer of employment to complainant and hired someone at roughly half salary. 1999 Order Comm HR No. 9D-E-S-89-136970-E.

Respondent, owner of insurance brokerage firm, did not engage in unlawful practices of sexual discrimination and harassment against complainant, respondent's office manager, where complainant's employment was ended because of her admitted falsification of clients' signatures, and because of statements made, or believed by respondent that complainant made, to insurance company which were inimical to respondent's financial interest. 2000 Order Comm HR No. 9S-E-S 95-7940446.

53. Retaliation

The trial court erred in denying a company's and individual's motion for summary judgment on claims of retaliation under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, because an injured party failed to demonstrate that the temporary change in her duties was disadvantageous to her, or that the restriction on her entry into the warehouse was based on a subjective retaliatory motive. Martinez v Triangle Maint. Corp., 293 A.D.2d 721, 741 N.Y.S.2d 427, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4134 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2002).

Although a police officer established, in accordance with the Americans with Disabilities Act, 42 U.S.C.S. § 12101 et seq., and N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, that the officer was disabled and that the police department failed to grant the officer a light-duty assignment or to approve the officer's request for "injured on duty" status, the officer failed to establish that any light-duty positions were available or that retaliation based on a supervisor's animosity; therefore, the officer was not entitled to N.Y. C.P.L.R. art. 78 relief. Matter of Abram v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 71 A.D.3d 1471, 896 N.Y.S.2d 764, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2200 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2010).

Trial court erred in dismissing a minority employee's retaliation cause of action because he was involved in a prior federal action against the employer, which resulted in the issuance of a consent decree that subjected the employer to significant damages, and an employee with less experience was upgraded over the first employee shortly after the consent decree was issued. 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7981.

Trial court erred in denying a city's motion to dismiss a former police officer's action for refusal to withdraw a notice of discipline, termination of arbitration, and retaliation because the refusal was only the continuation of the arbitration that the officer had requested, he was not terminated until the arbitrator rendered his decision finding that the officer had engaged in misconduct warranting his dismissal, and the city's alleged request for additional security at a workers' compensation hearing could not constitute an adverse employment action as the city was no longer the officer's employer at that time. Miller v City of Ithaca, 179 A.D.3d 1235, 117 N.Y.S.3d 719, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 196 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2020).

Defendants were not entitled to summary judgment on plaintiff's retaliation claim because plaintiff raised disputed issues of fact about whether there was a mixed motive to terminate his employment, including plaintiff's manager telling him that if they could not be together then plaintiff could not work around her, and defendants' failure to adequately investigate plaintiff's claims prior to his termination. Franco v Hyatt Corp., 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7687 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2020).

In a former employee's suit asserting retaliatory and discriminatory discharge against his former employer under New York State Executive Law (NYSHRL), N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., and the New York City Human Rights Law (NYCHRL), New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-101 et seq., based on his alleged termination due to his sister-in-law previously suing the employer, the claim under NYSHRL required dismissal since NYSHRL clearly indicated that it only prohibited discrimination against individuals who were themselves disabled and was not intended to provide a cause of action for disability association discrimination. However, the former employee sufficiently established a cause of action under the NYCHRL since he made sufficient allegations for pleading purposes to reasonably infer that he was terminated in retaliation for his association with his sister-in-law. Rivera v Lutheran Med. Ctr., 866 N.Y.S.2d 520, 22 Misc. 3d 178, 240 N.Y.L.J. 83, 2008 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 6060 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2008), aff'd, in part, 73 A.D.3d 891, 899 N.Y.S.2d 859, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4127 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2010).

African-American employee did not show retaliation, when she was terminated from her employment, because she did not show that she was engaged in a protected activity, as she did not show that she had complained to her employer of racial discrimination. Forrest v Jewish Guild for the Blind, 309 A.D.2d 546, 765 N.Y.S.2d 326, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10478 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2003), aff'd, 3 N.Y.3d 295, 786 N.Y.S.2d 382, 819 N.E.2d 998, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 3489 (N.Y. 2004).

Appeal board properly determined that a worker was not eligible for unemployment insurance benefits pursuant to N.Y. Lab. Law § 593; the worker was terminated for misconduct, based on a failure to comply with orders not to discuss harassment accusations with an accuser, and the worker's conduct had the potential of jeopardizing the employer's best interests by making it vulnerable to a claim of retaliatory discrimination on the part of the employee with whom the worker discussed the matter, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(7). In re Claim of Bolasny, 3 A.D.3d 657, 770 N.Y.S.2d 767, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 96 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2004).

Summary judgment was properly granted to the school district and the board of education on the teacher's unlawful retaliation claim because, although the teacher was engaging in a protected activity when he filed his grievance alleging age discrimination, the school district and the board of education established that the teacher was terminated because the school district eliminated the drafting program, in which the teacher had a position, for economic reasons, not because of the teacher's grievance, and the teacher failed to raise an issue of fact. Davis v Sch. Dist. of Niagara Falls, 4 A.D.3d 866, 772 N.Y.S.2d 180, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1379 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2004).

Although an employee failed to dispute an employer's prima facie showing of a lack of a hostile work environment based on a supervisor's alleged sexual harassment, the employee raised a triable issue of fact as to a claim of retaliation under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(7); accordingly, the trial court erred in granting the employer's motion for summary judgment on that issue. Beharry v Guzman, 33 A.D.3d 742, 823 N.Y.S.2d 195, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12486 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

Because an employee's counterclaims were conclusory and failed to show that the employee either assisted or encouraged the filing of a "proceeding" within the meaning of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(e) or New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(7), the trial court erred in dismissing the employer's action for fraud and breach of fiduciary duty. Hunts Point Multi-Service Ctr., Inc. v Bizardi, 45 A.D.3d 481, 846 N.Y.S.2d 159, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12084 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2007), app. dismissed, 10 N.Y.3d 909, 861 N.Y.S.2d 270, 891 N.E.2d 304, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 1626 (N.Y. 2008).

Dismissal of the police officer's retaliation action against the town for discrimination in not promoting the officer because of an seizure disorder, in violation of the Americans With Disability Act, 42 USCS § 12101 et seq., the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, specifically 29 USCS § 794, and the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., was reversed as a reasonable jury could find that the non-retaliatory reasons given by the town were pretextual. Treglia v Town of Manlius, 313 F.3d 713, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 26120 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2002).

Where a former employee alleged that her employer retaliated against her because she refused to submit to a company officer's sexual advances, the district court properly granted summary judgment to the employer and the officer on the employee's retaliation claim under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., and the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, because there was no evidence that the employer or the officer took an adverse employment action against her in response to her complaints of sexual harassment; a proposed change by her supervisor in the employee's reporting structure could not be characterized as adverse treatment because the supervisor rescinded the change the following day, and did so with an apology. Schiano v Quality Payroll Sys., 445 F.3d 597, 2006 U.S. App. LEXIS 10279 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2006).

Because there was no indication that plaintiff employee, a human resources manager at her family business, believed that her sex had anything to do with her treatment after complaining about an affair that one of her brothers, a vice president, was having with another worker in the office or that her employers could have understood her statements as such, she had failed to establish a prima facie case for retaliation under Title VII or the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 290 et seq. Kelly v Howard I. Shapiro & Assocs. Consulting Eng'rs, P.C., 716 F.3d 10, 2013 U.S. App. LEXIS 8496 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2013).

City parks department did not terminate employee in retaliation for his filing complaint with EEOC, in violation of Title VII and Exec §§ 296 and 297, where evidence indicated normal termination in response to employee's disruptive work performance, with no showing of retaliatory animus. Allah v City of N.Y. Dep't of Parks & Rec., 162 F. Supp. 2d 270, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14754 (S.D.N.Y. 2001), aff'd, 47 Fed. Appx. 45, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 20475 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2002).

Employer's Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(a) motion for judgment as a matter of law on an employee's retaliation claim brought pursuant to 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e-3 and N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 was denied where a reasonable juror could have inferred from the timing of the alleged conversation just days following the harassment incident that a supervisor understood that the employee was referring to the harassing behavior and not to regular workplace problems, there was evidence the supervisor began to consider terminating the employee at about the time of the harassment incident, and the supervisor's reaction to the employee's complaint, i.e., confronting the employee and making statements of non-belief, was direct evidence of hostility directed at the employee. Parrish v Sollecito, 258 F. Supp. 2d 264, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6262 (S.D.N.Y. 2003).

In an action by a former employee against his former employer alleging race discrimination and retaliation in violation of 42 U.S.C.S. § 1981, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, and New York City, N.Y. Admin. Code § 8-502(a), the employer's motion for summary judgment under Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c) was denied in part where the employee established his retaliation claim because his evidence suggested that, after he complained about the alleged discrimination, the employer started to collect negative information regarding his poor performance as manager of a warehouse, and the employer did not terminate the employee's predecessor after it discovered that he had downloaded pornography and visited a race track during work, and the employee was entitled to pursue his punitive damages claim under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1981a(b)(1). Santos v Costco Wholesale, Inc., 271 F. Supp. 2d 565, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12280 (S.D.N.Y. 2003).

In order to show a retaliation claim under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., and the New York Human Rights Act, a plaintiff must show, among other things, a causal connection exists between the protected activity and the adverse action taken by an employer; in an action for discrimination based on sex, since an employee failed to produce any evidence of a causal connection between her complaints and the alleged adverse actions taken against her, the employers were entitled to summary judgment. Gibson v Crucible Materials Corp., 290 F. Supp. 2d 292, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19990 (N.D.N.Y. 2003).

Pursuant to Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., and New York Human Rights Law, in order to state a case for retaliation, among other things, a plaintiff must show that she is engaged in a protected activity; a professor denied tenure failed to show that teaching at a college was a protected activity. Byerly v Ithaca College, 290 F. Supp. 2d 301, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20090 (N.D.N.Y. 2003), aff'd, 113 Fed. Appx. 418, 2004 U.S. App. LEXIS 21484 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2004).

Public employer was denied summary judgment on terminated employee's retaliation claim under the Americans with Disabilities Act, 42 U.S.C.S. § 12101 et seq., and the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law §§ 293-96, because there was sufficient evidence to satisfy the de minimis causal connection requirement because: (1) termination of plaintiff's N.Y. Gen. Mun. Law § 207-c benefits followed his initial requests for explication of his light-duty assignment; and (2) his employment was terminated pursuant to N.Y. Civ. Serv. Law § 71 after his subsequent requests for a light-duty assignment and filing his complaint to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. King v Town of Wallkill, 302 F. Supp. 2d 279, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2487 (S.D.N.Y. 2004).

Individual defendants' motion for summary judgment was denied on terminated employee's claims against them under N.Y. Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law §§ 296(6),(7), where the record revealed evidence of the active participation by all five named individual defendants in the actions giving rise to the employee's claims of retaliation. King v Town of Wallkill, 302 F. Supp. 2d 279, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2487 (S.D.N.Y. 2004).

For purposes of her retaliation claim, plaintiff sheriff's office employee engaged in activity protected under both Title VII and the Equal Pay Act (EPA) and known to defendants, including filing complaints with the New York State Division of Human Rights, but the employees' other activities such as her claimed public advocacy for pay equality and complaints to her supervisor did not constitute protected activity under the EPA because these were not formal complaints or proceedings as required under the EPA; however, these activities could be found to constitute protected activity under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1965, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e-2 and/or the First Amendment. Pfeiffer v Lewis County, 308 F. Supp. 2d 88, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4126 (N.D.N.Y. 2004).

For the purposes of plaintiff sheriff's office employee's retaliation claim, a fair-minded trier of fact could conclude that the change in title and duties from performing supervisory functions as a dispatch supervisor to performing D/CO functions, being transferred back into the control room, and the non-renewal of an additional contract was an adverse could constitute a materially adverse change in employment. Pfeiffer v Lewis County, 308 F. Supp. 2d 88, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4126 (N.D.N.Y. 2004).

Temporal proximity between plaintiff sheriff's office employee's complaints to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, her continual complaints concerning pay, the non-renewal of her administrative services agreement, the denial of her application to use sick bank leave time, the abolishment of her dispatch supervisor position, and the removal of her dispatch supervisor responsibilities were sufficient to support an inference of causation in the employee's retaliation claim against defendant employer county. Pfeiffer v Lewis County, 308 F. Supp. 2d 88, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4126 (N.D.N.Y. 2004).

Where defendant county legislators' actions were taken by virtue of their positions with the county legislature, their actions were under color of state law; accordingly, the legislators could be held liable to the extent it could be found that their actions in refusing to permit defendant sheriff to provisionally appoint the employee to the dispatch supervisor position and/or in refusing to renew an administrative service contract with the employee were in retaliation for the employee's protected activity. Pfeiffer v Lewis County, 308 F. Supp. 2d 88, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4126 (N.D.N.Y. 2004).

Court granted the employer summary judgment on the employee's retaliation claim because the supervisor who made the decision to terminate the employee declared under oath that he was unaware of the employee's complaints of a former supervisor at the time of his decision, the employee was terminated two months after complaining about her former supervisor's discriminatory comments, and the supervisor who terminated the employee stated that he did so because of his mandate to cut costs; he stated that the employee was a very highly compensated temporary clerical employee who did not provide any unique or essential skills. Hill v Citibank Corp., 312 F. Supp. 2d 464, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5069 (S.D.N.Y. 2004).

Employer was denied summary judgment on a former employee's claim of retaliatory discharge where the employee was fired only months after bringing the instant action despite a supervisor's recommendation that he be retained after a reduction in force, thereby raising issues of fact as to whether his discharge occurred in circumstances giving rise to genuine issues to an inference of discrimination on the basis of the employee's race. Kennedy v J.P. Morgan Chase & Co., 325 F. Supp. 2d 401, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13342 (S.D.N.Y. 2004).

When an an African-American employee sued his employer and supervisors for retaliation, under 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e-3(a) and N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(e), arising from the termination of his employment as a custodial worker at a school, summary judgment dismissing this claim was denied because the employee produced sufficient admissible evidence to create a genuine issue of material fact as to whether retaliation for threatening to sue the school and subpoena its employees was a factor in the decision to terminate his employment. Jones v Yonkers Pub. Schs, 326 F. Supp. 2d 536, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14599 (S.D.N.Y. 2004).

53 year old probation officer failed to establish a prima facie case for age based retaliation under state and federal law where even if she was able to demonstrate participation in a protected activity known to defendants, she would be unable to show that there was a causal connection between the protected activity and an adverse employment action because each of the alleged adverse employment actions occurred before she filed her charge with the equal employment opportunity commission (EEOC) and thus she was unable to establish a causal connection between the alleged adverse employment actions and the filing of her EEOC complaint. Kearney v County of Rockland, 373 F. Supp. 2d 434, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11956 (S.D.N.Y. 2005), aff'd, 185 Fed. Appx. 68, 2006 U.S. App. LEXIS 14670 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2006).

Reasonable jury could find that the steps an employer took immediately following receiving a letter from an employee accusing the employer of religious discrimination — immediately informing the employee his review would occur in only three months, not the six months originally stated; giving the employee a review that restated the identical ratings with no explanation whatsoever; and ultimately dismissing the employee — were taken, at least in part, because of the employer's strong negative reactions to the employee's accusations. Summary judgment on the employee's retaliation claim was denied. Goldschmidt v N.Y. State Affordable Hous. Corp., 380 F. Supp. 2d 303, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16233 (S.D.N.Y. 2005).

In an action in which a former employee filed suit against his former employer alleging violations of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, 29 U.S.C.S. § 621 et seq., Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., and the New York City Human Rights Law, New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-101 et seq., the employer was denied summary judgment on the retaliation claim; the employee presented evidence that the employer was displeased with his position and participation in an investigation involving a co-worker. Pronin v Raffi Custom Photo Lab, Inc., 383 F. Supp. 2d 628, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18142 (S.D.N.Y. 2005).

In an action in which a former employee filed suit against her former employer alleging violations of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, and the New York City Human Rights Law, New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107, the employer was granted summary judgment on the employee's claim of retaliatory discharge where the employee was unable to make the required showing of pretext; the employer satisfied its burden by presenting evidence that the employee was fired because she and her supervisor could not get along. Giannone v Deutsche Bank Sec., Inc., 392 F. Supp. 2d 576, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20493 (S.D.N.Y. 2005).

In an action brought by employees who alleged religious discrimination by a church employer that contracted with government entities, federal retaliation claims were barred by 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e-1(a); the employees could, however, maintain state and local retaliation claims under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(7) and New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(7). Lown v Salvation Army, Inc., 393 F. Supp. 2d 223, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22260 (S.D.N.Y. 2005).

In an action brought by employees who alleged religious discrimination by a church employer that contracted with government entities, federal retaliation claims were barred by 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e-1(a); the employees could, however, maintain state and local retaliation claims under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(7) and New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(7). Lown v Salvation Army, Inc., 393 F. Supp. 2d 223, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22260 (S.D.N.Y. 2005).

Former employee, who was a department manager for a retail store, failed to show retaliation for filing a complaint with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) because there was no evidence of any adverse employment actions taken against the employee after she filed the EEOC complaint, particularly as she received positive reviews and five percent raises and was not denied any other benefits in the time period following the EEOC filing, and she was not terminated from the company, but voluntarily resigned two years later. Ebanks v Neiman Marcus Group, Inc., 414 F. Supp. 2d 320, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4802 (S.D.N.Y. 2006).

Employer was entitled to summary judgment on an employee's retaliation claim because (1) there was no evidence that the employee's termination was causally related to his filing of a complaint about a coworker's sexual harassment, (2) the employer produced evidence that the employee was terminated under a progressive discipline policy based upon the employee's misconduct in using a company car to drive coworkers the wrong way down a one-way street and in taking money from the employer without permission, and (3) there was no evidence tending to show that the employer's legitimate, non-discriminatory reasons were merely pretextual. Godineaux v Laguardia Airport Marriott Hotel, 460 F. Supp. 2d 413, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 80862 (E.D.N.Y. 2006).

Former employee failed to establish unlawful retaliation by her former employer and a former coworker, in violation of the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, because her summary judgment opposition papers did not address this issue, and in any event, she failed to present any evidence rebutting the employer's nondiscriminatory reason for terminating her due to her inability to perform her job, based on her doctor's work restrictions, and she also did not present any evidence of a discriminatory animus. Maney v Corning, Inc., 547 F. Supp. 2d 221, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 91382 (W.D.N.Y. 2007).

Former employee failed to show that she was terminated in retaliation for engaging in protected activity by complaining that a coworker created a hostile work environment and engaged in sexual harassment when he exchanged vulgarities with her at a staff meeting, in violation of the new York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, because (1) the complaint did not constitute protected activity since the employee did not have a reasonable belief that the coworker's conduct constituted an unwanted sexual advance, particularly as she only made the complaint after the employer began investigating whether her behavior warranted discipline; (2) there was no causal connection since the termination decision preceded the employee's complaint; and (3) the employee did not rebut the legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for terminating her due to her inappropriate behavior. Middleton v Metro. College, 545 F. Supp. 2d 369, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 32607 (S.D.N.Y. 2008).

In her lawsuit against a university, a professor failed to show unlawful retaliation, in violation of the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, because the alleged retaliatory behavior all occurred before she complained, and arguably engaged in protected activity, and after she complained, the employee did not suffer any adverse employment consequences, but, in fact, she was granted tenure. Guarino v St. John Fisher College, 553 F. Supp. 2d 252, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 31353 (W.D.N.Y. 2008), aff'd, 321 Fed. Appx. 55, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 7511 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2009).

Fact that an electrical industry board was not an electrician's employer did not entitle the board to summary judgment on retaliation claims that the electrician filed under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(7) because a defendant could violate § 296(7) even if the defendant were not the plaintiff's employer. Infantolino v Joint Indus. Bd. of the Elec. Indus., 582 F. Supp. 2d 351, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 77330 (E.D.N.Y. 2008).

In a female police officer's suit against a city, its police department, and others (defendants), her claim that defendants gave her a subpar evaluation and a certain supervisor made a misconduct report in retaliation for her various protected activities, in violation of the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, failed because defendants established that the misconduct report and the evaluation were based on legitimate facts and were not due to unlawful retaliation, and the officer failed to show that these legitimate, nondiscriminatory reasons were pretext. Lore v City of Syracuse, 583 F. Supp. 2d 345, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 89484 (N.D.N.Y. 2008), aff'd in part, vacated in part, 670 F.3d 127, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 1954 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2012).

In a female police officer's suit against a city, its police department, and others (defendants), her claim that defendants denied her a requested overtime assignment in retaliation for her various protected activities, in violation of the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, failed because defendants established that the entity requesting this particular overtime placement requested a specific officer, who had been there before, and the officer had made more overtime requests than other, and the officer failed to show that this legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason was pretext. Lore v City of Syracuse, 583 F. Supp. 2d 345, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 89484 (N.D.N.Y. 2008), aff'd in part, vacated in part, 670 F.3d 127, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 1954 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2012).

Former employee possessed a good faith, reasonable belief that she was speaking out against gender discrimination and it was beyond dispute that defendants were aware of the employee's protected activity as she complained to both directly; with respect to the third element, defendants argued that the employee did not suffer an adverse employment action because she resigned of her own free will, but the employee countered that she was constructively discharged because she was coerced into resigning. According to the employee, the superintendent gave her three options: apologize to the deputy superintendent for the complaints she made about him. resign,or be fired; when she refused to do any of the three, he instructed her to type and sign her own resignation letter, thus under these facts, the employee offered allegations that were sufficient to establish she was constructively discharged. Illiano v Mineola Union Free Sch. Dist., 585 F. Supp. 2d 341, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 91854 (E.D.N.Y. 2008).

At the pleading stage, the former employee could establish that the deputy superintendent's lawsuit against her for defamation was the type of adverse action that might dissuade a reasonable former employee from bringing a discrimination claim; in this regard, that the employee was no longer a school district employee when the suit was filed in April of 2008 was immaterial. The employee alleged that her former employer explicitly threatened to sue her if she sought to vindicate her rights; accordingly, the employee's retaliatory lawsuit claim survived the motion to dismiss. Illiano v Mineola Union Free Sch. Dist., 585 F. Supp. 2d 341, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 91854 (E.D.N.Y. 2008).

Former employee, who was terminated from her office manager job due to budget cuts by her former employer, which was a state university, failed to show retaliation in violation of the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., due to the fact that the employee was directed to use up all of her accrued annual leave prior to the end of her job term because even though the employee filed a grievance regarding her termination and the required use of her accrued leave, the employer granted the employee five extra days of leave so that she was paid through the end of her job term. Westbrook v City Univ. of N.Y., 591 F. Supp. 2d 207, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 102765 (E.D.N.Y. 2008).

Urologist sufficiently alleged adverse actions in response to his complaints; he contended that following his complaints, certain equipment awarded to him pursuant to a grant was removed from his laboratory at the direction of the department chair, further, the urologist contended that he was ignored by the department chair at professional meetings and excluded from professional activities, such as interviewing faculty and residents. Finally, the urologist contended that he was disrupted during surgery and denied proper equipment, facilities, and assistance during his surgical procedures in retaliation for his complaints; such actions, if true, might well have dissuaded the urologist's complaints for fear that his ability to carry out his professional duties would be compromised. Rehman v State Univ. of N.Y., 596 F. Supp. 2d 643, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12897 (E.D.N.Y. 2009).

It was not the constitution of the complaining group that rendered speech protected, but rather the articulated complaint itself and as no other evidence supported a finding that the employee made any complaint of racial discrimination, she failed to set forth a prima facie case of retaliation for the exercise of protected speech. Aspilaire v Wyeth Pharms., Inc., 612 F. Supp. 2d 289, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35523 (S.D.N.Y. 2009).

Employee claimed that the employer unlawfully retaliated against her by subjecting her to hostility, micro management, and unjust scrutiny and denying her light duty; although she did not so plead in the complaint, employee also argued that her transfer and subsequent termination were retaliatory. The retaliation claims failed because employee did not establish a prima facie case of retaliation and the termination claim failed as she failed to exhaust her administrative remedies; the hostile work environment claim failed because she did not offer evidence from which a jury could find that the complained of conduct was objectively severe or pervasive. Dauer v Verizon Communs. Inc., 613 F. Supp. 2d 446, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21506 (S.D.N.Y. 2009), vacated, 618 F.3d 112, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 16749 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2010).

Former public school psychologist's retaliatory discharge claims under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 failed because although the court assumed that the psychologist made out a prima facie case of retaliation, school officials articulated legitimate, non-retaliatory reasons for their termination of the psychologist, including his poor work performance, lack of professionalism, insubordination, and inappropriate workplace behavior, as reflected in multiple reports and evaluations, and the psychologist failed to show that the proffered reasons were pretextual where he offered only his conclusory assertions as to the school officials' alleged lack of cultural sensitivity and also did not offer actual evidence that he repeatedly complained about that alleged lack of sensitivity. Dorcely v Wyandanch Union Free Sch. Dist., 665 F. Supp. 2d 178, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 91543 (E.D.N.Y. 2009).

Supervisor was responsible for setting the employee's work schedule, evaluating her job performance and disciplining her—given these facts, the supervisor was not entitled to summary judgment on the employee's claims against him under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296.1 for retaliatory acts that occurred through July 2002; however, the employee did not offer any evidence showing that the supervisor had the authority to hire or fire her, or change her schedule or salary, after July 2002. Accordingly, the supervisor was entitled to summary judgment onthe employee's § 296.1 claim against him for her termination in October 2002. Mugavero v Arms Acres, Inc., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 30431 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2009).

Employee offered evidence from which a jury could find that the supervisor directly participated in the conduct that gave rise to each of her viable retaliation claims by providing information (or misinformation) about her conduct and the employer's policies and protocols; therefore, the supervisor was not entitled to summary judgment on the aiding-and-abetting retaliation claims relating to the April 24, May 3, July 25, and October 2002, adverse actions. However, because the employee could not prevail on any other retaliation claims against the employer, her N.Y. Exec. Law § 296.6 claims against the supervisor were otherwise dismissed. Mugavero v Arms Acres, Inc., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 30431 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2009).

While defendants' arguments failed to convince that the former employee did not establish his prima facie case, the evidence they proffered in opposition did provide legitimate, nonretaliatory reasons for the issuance of the final warning, but the employee presented evidence sufficient to demonstrate that the reasons given by defendants were pretextual; the retirement party incident did not occur during work hours or at the employment site, casting some doubt on claims of work disruption and although the court recognized that allegations of discrimination could not per se immunize a plaintiff against the consequences of offensive or inappropriate conduct, the allegedly unprofessional behavior was so closely intertwined with the act of complaining itself that the court could not parse the two as a matter of law. The final warning did not address the retirement party conversation, nor did it mention any specific incident precipitating its issuance, which worked against defendants' claim that it was the true, underlying cause. Kanhoye v Altana, Inc., 686 F. Supp. 2d 199, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 112506 (E.D.N.Y. 2009).

Former employee had set forth an actionable claim for employment discrimination under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, N.Y. State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 and the New York City Human Rights Law, New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(1)(a), because the employee had set forth allegations that he was terminated in retaliation for attempting to exercise his rights under the Family Medical Leave Act, 29 U.S.C.S. § 2615, and that his supervisor had created a hostile work environment based on the employee's race. Drew v Plaza Constr. Corp., 688 F. Supp. 2d 270, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8699 (S.D.N.Y. 2010).

Employer clearly articulated a legitimate, non-discriminatory reason for the employee's termination, namely, her apparent structuring of transactions and her inadequate explanation for doing so; even though the employee presented sufficient evidence to establish a prima facie retaliation case, she failed to demonstrate that the employer's stated legitimate, non-discriminatory reason for her termination was pretextual. Nor was there any evidence to indicate that unlawful retaliation was the real reason for the employee's termination; furthermore, mere temporal proximity was insufficient to support a claim of retaliation at the summary judgment stage. Vinokur v Sovereign Bank, 701 F. Supp. 2d 276, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26854 (E.D.N.Y. 2010).

Where a terminated employee allegedly complained that an affair between the employer's president and a donor adversely affected the employee's ability to perform the employee's job, the retaliation claims failed because the employee never complained of unlawful discrimination; the mere fact that the employee used the term "hostile environment" in an email to a supervisor was not enough. Foster v Humane Soc'y of Rochester & Monroe County, Inc., 724 F. Supp. 2d 382, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 73384 (W.D.N.Y. 2010).

Former employee's retaliation claim failed because the record did not show that the employee's route change or alleged assignment of additional tasks resulted from complaints about discrimination; the employee's last documented complaint occurred four years before the route was changed. Polanco v 34th St. P'ship, 724 F. Supp. 2d 420, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 68699 (S.D.N.Y. 2010).

Former employee failed to establish a prima facie case of retaliatory termination because the fact that she told a supervisory person that she agreed with an anonymous letter criticizing a particular supervisor was not a protected activity since there was no indication in the letter that the criticism was due to gender or any other protected activity, rather than simply a complaint that the supervisor was a nasty and incompetent person. Mayers v Emigrant Bancorp, Inc., 796 F. Supp. 2d 434, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44011 (S.D.N.Y. 2011).

Employee's retaliation claim against her immediate supervisor under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 was dismissed because the employee alleged no facts which suggested that her immediate supervisor aided, abetted, or in any way influenced the general manager or the services manager's allegedly discriminatory employment actions. Atkinson v New York State Olympic Reg'l Dev. Auth., 822 F. Supp. 2d 182, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 112796 (N.D.N.Y. 2011).

Former employee failed to set forth a prima facie case of retaliation, under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000 et seq., and the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., because (1) a reasonable juror could not have found that an email, or the employee's complaints about the supervisor's conduct towards students, constituted protected activity because the employee did not assert that any of the complaints pertained to unlawful discrimination; and (2) assuming the employee had a good faith, reasonable belief that he was the victim of discrimination on the basis of gender, he failed to establish that there was a genuine issue of material fact with respect to whether the supervisor understood, or reasonably could have understood, that his complaints were about gender discrimination. Bennett v Hofstra Univ., 842 F. Supp. 2d 489, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 115315 (E.D.N.Y. 2012).

Where there were disputed factual issues as to whether a former employee was subjected to a change in job position and eventual termination in retaliation for engaging in protected activities, the employee failed to establish that a particular coworker was liable for such retaliation under the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, because there was no evidence that the coworker participated in any of the alleged retaliatory acts taken against the employee. Conklin v County of Suffolk, 859 F. Supp. 2d 415, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 62436 (E.D.N.Y. 2012).

Defendants were granted summary judgment on the retaliation claims because plaintiff failed to show that she engaged in any "protected activity" as defined by federal, state, or city discrimination law; taking Family and Medical Leave Act leave was not a "protected activity" under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, the New York State Human Rights Law, or the New York City Human Rights Law. Sotomayor v City of New York, 862 F. Supp. 2d 226, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 72641 (E.D.N.Y. 2012), aff'd, 713 F.3d 163, 2013 U.S. App. LEXIS 7357 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2013).

Employee, however, failed to state a claim for retaliation under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(7); there was no allegation that she took any action in response to the alleged harassment, and the mere rejection of sexual advances did not constitute a protected activity. Reid v Ingerman Smith LLP, 876 F. Supp. 2d 176, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 93974 (E.D.N.Y. 2012).

In this Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and New York State Human Rights Law action, the employer was granted summary judgment because the employee had not made a prima facie showing that she suffered a materially adverse action that could support a retaliation claim; the managing director's actions —other than the alleged false disciplinary write ups—fell into the category of "trivial harms" that were not likely to deter a reasonable employee from making a complaint. Bundschuh v Inn on the Lake Hudson Hotels, LLC, 914 F. Supp. 2d 395, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 158443 (W.D.N.Y. 2012).

D. Benefits/Denial of Benefits

54. Seniority-related benefits

Provisions of Retirement and Social Security Law, which permit former public employees who have reached retirement age to continue working for government without loss or suspension of pension benefits but do not extend like permission to those retired because of disabilities, were not invalid as constituting discriminatory treatment of the disabled; pension programs for those retired on basis of age and for disabled were not comparable, since former employees have earned their benefits through longer service and greater monetary contributions, while latter are accorded pension to meet special needs. Kuhnle v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 40 N.Y.2d 720, 389 N.Y.S.2d 824, 358 N.E.2d 507, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 3098 (N.Y. 1976), app. dismissed, 434 U.S. 898, 98 S. Ct. 290, 54 L. Ed. 2d 184, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 3606 (U.S. 1977), reh'g denied, 41 N.Y.2d 901, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 3325 (N.Y. 1977).

In a civil rights action alleging that women were being discriminated against by defendant Transit Authority by the use of a facially neutral seniority system as the basis for provisional promotions and by giving seniority disproportionate weight as compared to performance in determining permanent promotional appointments, which practices allegedly had a disparate impact on women as a class, a valid cause of action for violation of Exec Law § 296 was stated; however, where the complaint alleged no present intent to discriminate, it did not sufficiently allege a cause of action under the equal protection clause of NY Const Art 1 § 11 and the constitutional claim would be dismissed without prejudice to an application by plaintiff for leave to amend said cause of action. People v New York City Transit Authority, 59 N.Y.2d 343, 465 N.Y.S.2d 502, 452 N.E.2d 316, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 3174 (N.Y. 1983).

Human rights law does not bar employers, in their collective bargaining with their employees as to terms and conditions of employment, from altering seniority patterns from position seniority to departmentwide seniority, so long as purpose and effect of such a change is not to preserve previously existing patterns of unlawful discrimination. Trans World Airlines, Inc. v State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 46 A.D.2d 138, 361 N.Y.S.2d 380, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3509 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1974), aff'd, 38 N.Y.2d 810, 382 N.Y.S.2d 40, 345 N.E.2d 583, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 2401 (N.Y. 1975).

Where change in airline's seniority system, which allowed persons moving from one category of cabin attendants to another to carry with them the seniority acquired in the former category, in no way established sex as a criterion for employment benefits but rather barred sex criterion as a basis for promotion or demotion, and neither did it involve actions or standards which would offend statutory ban on discrimination based on sex, accident of a high percentage of women in cabin service staff with substantial seniority credit and its concomitant impact on seniority status of male pursers did not constitute discrimination based on sex. Trans World Airlines, Inc. v State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 46 A.D.2d 138, 361 N.Y.S.2d 380, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3509 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1974), aff'd, 38 N.Y.2d 810, 382 N.Y.S.2d 40, 345 N.E.2d 583, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 2401 (N.Y. 1975).

In an action by a black schoolteacher against a school board, claiming discrimination in employment on the basis of race, the trial court's finding that but for the board's discrimination the teacher would have been granted retention rights as an evening per-session teacher was unsupported by the evidence, where there was no proof that the evening community centers in which the teacher worked were in operation during the years he claimed to have been unable to work due to discrimination, and where, by the terms of a collective bargaining agreement between the school and the teachers' union, the teacher lost his retention rights after there were no programs for two years. A finding of discrimination against a black schoolteacher by refusing him retention rights as an evening community center per-session teacher would be confirmed; however, the award of compensatory damages would be reversed due to the trial court's failure to take into consideration the teacher's duty to mitigate damages. New York City Bd. of Education v Simley, 96 A.D.2d 947, 466 N.Y.S.2d 401, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19579 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1983).

A directive of the New York City Department of Correction limiting the amount of overtime that may be worked by correction captains with over 14 years of service to 10% more than the average worked by all captains in the subject facility is not arbitrary and capricious nor is it age discrimination in violation of section 296 of the Executive Law, since the policy is intended to prevent "ballooning" which would overburden the pension system by increasing an employee's salary through excessive overtime in the year before retirement and is not discriminatory since the reason for the length of service criteria, which was formulated because pensions vest after 15 years and any year after the 14th might be considered an employee's last, serves the legitimate government interest of protection of the rights of all employees to their pension fund. Freeman v New York City Dep't of Correction, 101 Misc. 2d 22, 420 N.Y.S.2d 536, 1979 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2621 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1979).

Provisions of Policemen's and Firemen's Retirement System Act (PFRSA), CLS Retire & S S Art 8, which deny accidental disability retirement benefits to those over age 60, are not discriminatory and do not violate anti-age discrimination provisions of Human Rights Law (CLS Exec § 296), since PFRSA, although enacted 8 years after Human Rights Law, embodies policy which has been in effect prior to passage of Human Rights Law and is thus exempt from Human Rights Law; furthermore, age provisions of PFRSA do not violate anti-age discrimination provisions of federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 (29 USCS § 623) since PFRSA involves bona fide retirement plan in that it exists and pays benefits, and PFRSA was enacted prior to passage of federal law and thus cannot be subterfuge to evade that law. Laudage v Regan, 135 Misc. 2d 195, 514 N.Y.S.2d 868, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2197 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1987).

55. Right to overtime work

In view of evidence that, in 27 nepotism cases involving husbands and wives at university, none of the husbands was required to accept temporary appointment while wife was either given temporary appointment or had nepotism rule waived permitting her to receive term appointment and that rule was waived when university sought to attract a "star" professor whose wife also wanted to work, rule resulted in discrimination against women and female faculty member, whose husband had a term appointment and who was denied a term appointment for herself on basis of nepotism rule, was discriminated against on basis of her sex. Sanbonmatsu v Boyer, 45 A.D.2d 249, 357 N.Y.S.2d 245, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4466 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1974), app. dismissed, 36 N.Y.2d 871, 370 N.Y.S.2d 926, 331 N.E.2d 701, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 1917 (N.Y. 1975), app. denied, 37 N.Y.2d 705, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 2779 (N.Y. 1975).

Division's finding that employer implemented employee's schedule change earlier than planned based on disability was inconsistent with the finding of no probable cause, and determination is therefore unsupported by record and must be remitted for hearing; whether employer acted in good faith, based on information available to it at time, is irrelevant. State Div. of Human Rights ex rel. Stratton v Haverling Cent. School Dist., 112 A.D.2d 787, 492 N.Y.S.2d 285, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 56031 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1985).

New York Transit Authority employee did not qualify as disabled person within purview of Human Rights Law, CLS Exec § 292(21)(c), since he was capable of performing certain tasks required of other employees assigned overtime work, but his medical condition prevented him from performing important function of patrol duty; under circumstances, failure to assign overtime work to employee did not violate antidiscrimination provisions of Human Rights Law. Yasinosky v New York City Transit Auth., 193 A.D.2d 731, 598 N.Y.S.2d 52, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4951 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1993).

56. Right to be paid for religious holiday

Under statute prohibiting discrimination in employment based on person's observance of any particular day or days as sabbath or other holy day except where uniform application of terms and conditions of attendance to employees is essential to prevent undue economic hardship to employer, "undue economic hardship" does not require any threat or undermining of economic stability of enterprise; it is enough that palpable increase in costs or risk to industrial peace would be required. Record was insufficient to determine whether retaining employee in former higher-paid position would have resulted in undue economic hardship to employer because of employee's refusal to work on Saturdays by reason of religious belief, and record would be remanded for evidentiary hearing. State Div. of Human Rights v Carnation Co., 42 N.Y.2d 873, 397 N.Y.S.2d 781, 366 N.E.2d 869, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 2216 (N.Y.), reh'g denied, 42 N.Y.2d 1015, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 4759 (N.Y. 1977).

In an Article 78 proceeding, an employer had the discretion to properly charge to an employee's vacation time days off for observance of religious holidays, where prior to the holiday in question the employer changed its policy to provide that absences for religious holidays would be in all cases charged to either personal, vacation or compensatory leave. State Div. of Human Rights v Rochester Housing Authority, 85 A.D.2d 897, 446 N.Y.S.2d 736, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16739 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1981).

Employee's failure to inform employer of religious needs and failure to assist in accommodation process may be fatal to rights of employee to have his beliefs accommodated by employer; employee's failure to inform superiors of religious basis for his request for time off for purpose of attending church dedication may constitute waiver of claim of religious discrimination. State Div. of Human Rights ex rel. Campbell v Rochester Products Div. of General Motors Corp., 112 A.D.2d 785, 492 N.Y.S.2d 282, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 56028 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1985).

Company violated CLS Executive § 296(10)(a) by scheduling employee who was member of Jewish faith to work on Sabbath and on Jewish holydays despite being informed that employee could not work on these days due to his religious beliefs, and award was supported by testimony of both employee and rabbi, establishing that employee is Sabbath observer, and that he had given his employer advance notice that he did not wish to work on such days, and award for mental anguish is warranted. Anchor Motor Freight, Inc. v McCall, 119 A.D.2d 672, 500 N.Y.S.2d 800, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 55589 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Appeals court decided that the teachers' union collective bargaining agreement's religious observance provision at issue (three days per year paid leave) did not offend the Establishment Clause in that it did not impermissibly advance religion by coercing members of the union to profess a religious belief; the provision imposed no requirements regarding which religious holidays could be invoked and limited the number of such days to three. Maine-Endwell Teachers' Ass'n v Bd. of Educ., 3 A.D.3d 685, 771 N.Y.S.2d 246, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 315 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2004).

New York, as well as the federal government, have enacted legislation mandating the reasonable accommodation of employees' religious needs, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(10)(b), Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e(j); the United States Supreme Court implicitly has held that such accommodation is constitutional. Maine-Endwell Teachers' Ass'n v Bd. of Educ., 3 A.D.3d 685, 771 N.Y.S.2d 246, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 315 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2004).

Human Rights Law which makes it unlawful for an employer to disqualify any person or to discriminate against any person in obtaining or holding employment because of his observance of a particular day as sabbath or holy day but which exempts from such requirement any position dealing with safety or health where such person holding position must be available for duty whenever needed is not applicable to state police whose policemen are under duty to work at times and on dates and shifts assigned. State Div. of Human Rights v State, 77 Misc. 2d 597, 354 N.Y.S.2d 287, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1227 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1973).

57. Insurance benefits

Claim of petitioner that she was discriminated against because of her sex in that, while her employer was granting to all male employees option of a voluntary layoff, petitioner was directed to either accept transfer to another department or be terminated was without support in record indicating that petitioner was offered option of a voluntary layoff but refused such option due to risk that she would not then be eligible for unemployment insurance benefits. Pixley v Raymond Corp., 59 A.D.2d 979, 399 N.Y.S.2d 411, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14248 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

Proposal submitted by city to bargaining unit during interest arbitration that members "shall not be eligible for health insurance by the City if they are eligible for coverage under the plan of a spouse" did not violate city's duty to negotiate in good faith because proposal did not discriminate on basis of "marital status"; in upholding city's proposal, Public Employment Relations Board adopted interpretation of "marital status" as used in CLS Exec § 296 and interpreted in prior court decisions, and thus did not act in arbitrary fashion. Police Ass'n v N.Y. State Pub. Empl. Rels. Bd., 126 A.D.2d 824, 510 N.Y.S.2d 742, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 41963 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987).

In action by women's organizations arising from insurance company's refusal to sell life and disability insurance to women on same terms as men, company was entitled to declaration that it did not violate CLS Exec § 296, and plaintiffs' claims for compensatory and injunctive relief would be dismissed, since Insurance Law permits distinctions based on sex in terms and conditions (but not offering) of life and disability insurance policies; legislature intended later, more specific legislation contained in Insurance Law to override more general prohibition against gender discrimination under Human Rights Law. NOW v Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 131 A.D.2d 356, 516 N.Y.S.2d 934, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 47844 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1987), app. dismissed, 70 N.Y.2d 939, 524 N.Y.S.2d 672, 519 N.E.2d 618, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 266 (N.Y. 1988).

Award of $35,000 for mental anguish in employment discrimination case was grossly excessive, and on remittitur should be reduced to no more than $5,000, despite "constant and blatant" nature of racial discrimination against complainant, where sole evidence of mental anguish was complainant's own testimony that she was "emotionally and physically screwed up" and there was no evidence of duration of her condition, its severity or consequences, or its treatment. Cosmos Forms, Ltd. v State Div. of Human Rights, 150 A.D.2d 442, 541 N.Y.S.2d 50, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6521 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Finding of retaliation by employer against former employee (based on employer's threatened denial of unemployment insurance benefits) did not violate due process, even though no claim of retaliation was contained in age discrimination complaint, nor was complaint amended to include such claim, where employer had notice of and opportunity to contest allegations that were basis of finding of retaliation, and such allegation was within ambit of discrimination charges since retaliation is form of discrimination under CLS Exec § 296. Electchester Hous. Project v Rosa, 225 A.D.2d 772, 639 N.Y.S.2d 848, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3155 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

Employer's act of contesting employee's right to receive unemployment insurance benefits, after assuring employee that she would be entitled to such benefits, solely because she filed age discrimination complaint with state Division of Human Rights, was disadvantaging employment action for purposes of establishing claim of retaliation, even though employer's conduct occurred after employee's discharge and employee was ultimately unsuccessful in proving her age discrimination claim. Electchester Hous. Project v Rosa, 225 A.D.2d 772, 639 N.Y.S.2d 848, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3155 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

School district was entitled to dismissal, for failure to state cause of action, of retired teacher's action for employment discrimination where district's refusal to provide health insurance benefits for teacher's domestic partner was not discrimination based on "marital status" under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a), and dependent benefit coverage available to teacher as unmarried retiree was same as that available to married employees and retirees. Funderburke v Uniondale Union Free Sch. Dist. No. 15, 251 A.D.2d 622, 676 N.Y.S.2d 199, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7881 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 813, 681 N.Y.S.2d 474, 704 N.E.2d 227, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 3717 (N.Y. 1998).

Employee's valid, same-sex Canadian marriage was entitled to recognition in New York because it did not fall within either of the two exceptions to the marriage-recognition rule; by refusing to recognize the employee's valid marriage for purposes of spousal health care insurance benefits, an employer violated N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a). The sole reason for the employer's rejection of the marital status of the employee was her sexual orientation. Martinez v County of Monroe, 50 A.D.3d 189, 850 N.Y.S.2d 740, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 854 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. dismissed, 10 N.Y.3d 856, 859 N.Y.S.2d 617, 889 N.E.2d 496, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 1450 (N.Y. 2008).

Retirees' claim that the town provided disparate insurance coverage to them on the basis of age could not be sustained under the New York Human Rights Law. Based on the plain reading of the statute, and in the absence of any authority to the contrary, the claim was dismissed. Lawrence v Town of Irondequoit, 246 F. Supp. 2d 150, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26250 (W.D.N.Y. 2002).

Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) did not prohibit employers from offering different insurance coverage to those with disabilities, so long as every employee was offered the same coverage regardless of current or future disability status. Given that disability claims pursuant to the ADA and the New York Human Rights Law were analyzed substantially the same, the retirees' claim of disability discrimination in violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 failed. Lawrence v Town of Irondequoit, 246 F. Supp. 2d 150, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26250 (W.D.N.Y. 2002).

Insurer's limitation of group coverage to same-sex domestic partners is not prohibited by Insurance Law or regulations, and enactment of SONDA in 2002 (CLS Exec § 296) does not on its face appear to compel different conclusion. Insurance Department, Opinions of General Counsel, Opinion Number 07-11-10.

58. Pregnancy-related benefits

Denial of sick leave benefits for pregnancy-related disabilities, when they are provided for other forms of disability, constitutes impermissible discrimination under the Human Rights Law. The Disability Benefits Law, which excepts disabilities caused by or arising in connection with pregnancy from the minimum benefits mandated by that law, and the Human Rights Law, which prohibits discrimination in employment based on sex, impose two concurrent independent minimum standards; for employers with three or fewer employees, the operative minimum is only that of the Disability Benefits Law; but for all others, within the reach of both statutes, the operative standard which imposes the greater obligation is controlling. Provision of the Disability Benefits Law which excepts disabilities caused by or arising in connection with pregnancy from the minimum benefits mandated by that law does not excuse private employers with more than three employees from the necessity of complying with provision of the Human Rights Law which prohibits discrimination in employment based on sex and which has been held to prohibit employment personnel policies which single out pregnancy and child birth for treatment different from that accorded other instances of physical or medical impairment or disability. Brooklyn Union Gas Co. v New York State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 41 N.Y.2d 84, 390 N.Y.S.2d 884, 359 N.E.2d 393, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 3253 (N.Y. 1976), reh'g denied, 42 N.Y.2d 824, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 3961 (N.Y. 1977).

A woman, who was denied pregnancy-related disability benefits solely on the basis that she had not applied for them within the 26-week period as provided by Work Comp Law § 217(1), was not subjected to an unlawful discriminatory practice on the basis of sex in employment in violation of Exec Law § 296(a)(1). Corbin, Ltd. v State Div. of Human Rights, 56 N.Y.2d 537, 449 N.Y.S.2d 966, 434 N.E.2d 1344, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3222 (N.Y. 1982).

Hospital had to permit female employee to apply her accrued paid sick leave against her maternity related absence. Hospital had to compensate maternity related disability just as it compensates other nonoccupational disabilities, notwithstanding an express statutory authorization for such an exclusion in the Workmen's Compensation Law, since a recognition of the continuing validity of that provision would sufficiently frustrate and impede the intended reforms meant to be accomplished by the later amendment of the Executive Law, whereby discrimination on the basis of sex became unlawful, as to work an implied repeal of the Workmen's Compensation Law provision. State Div. of Human Rights ex rel. Ambruster v Crouse-Irving Memorial Hospital, 50 A.D.2d 1083, 377 N.Y.S.2d 315, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12113 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1975), aff'd, 41 N.Y.2d 84, 390 N.Y.S.2d 884, 359 N.E.2d 393, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 3253 (N.Y. 1976).

Disallowance by medical center of pregnancy-related disabilities violated section of statute prohibiting discrimination by employer because of age, race, or sex in terms, conditions or privileges of employment. St. Vincent's Medical Center v State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 59 A.D.2d 778, 398 N.Y.S.2d 735, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13833 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1977), app. dismissed, 44 N.Y.2d 731, 1978 N.Y. The determination of the Commissioner of the State Division of Human Rights finding a company guilty of unlawful discrimination because of sex in terms, conditions, and privileges of employment would be anulled where the record conclusively established that the employee was denied pregnancy-related disability benefits solely because she had not applied for them within the 26 week period provided by Work Comp Law § 217. Corbin, Ltd. v State Div. of Human Rights, 84 A.D.2d 524, 443 N.Y.S.2d 656, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15559 (N.Y. Evidence established that award of $450,000 in compensatory damages was reasonably related to wrongdoing suffered by bus driver who was refused restricted duty during period of temporary disability due to pregnancy, was refused full-duty status after miscarriage, was required to submit to psychiatric evaluation, and was forced to go on unpaid leave for 8 months when she requested restricted duty after becoming pregnant again, where (1) episodes of intentional sexual discrimination continued for more than one year, (2) driver testified that she suffered anguish, guilt, depression, and anger at time of each occurrence, that anguish persisted to time of hearing, and that anguish would continue for rest of her life, and (3) hearing judge described case as "most shocking instance of abuse of an employee by an employer" in his 20-year experience with Division of Human Rights. New York City Transit Authority v State Div. of Human Rights, 181 A.D.2d 891, 581 N.Y.S.2d 426, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5258 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), amended, 185 A.D.2d 889, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9980 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1992), app. denied, 80 N.Y.2d 762, 592 N.Y.S.2d 671, 607 N.E.2d 818, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 3944 (N.Y. 1992).

In an action challenging the constitutionality of the Women's Health and Wellness Act, to the extent that a group of religious employers presented an issue of statutory construction on the ground that the contraceptive coverage mandate of the Act conflicted with the exemption for religious-related employers from the application of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, nothing in N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 (11) suggested that the New York Legislature could not, in another section of law, impose affirmative requirements upon religious-related employers; Section 296(11) merely excused such employers from compliance with N.Y. Exec. Law § 296. Catholic Charities of Diocese of Albany v Serio, 28 A.D.3d 115, 808 N.Y.S.2d 447, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 278 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), aff'd, 7 N.Y.3d 510, 825 N.Y.S.2d 653, 859 N.E.2d 459, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 3201 (N.Y. 2006).

A state's human rights law, prohibiting, among other practices, discrimination in employee benefit plans on the basis of pregnancy, is preempted with respect to benefit plans under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (29 USCS §§ 1001 et seq.) only insofar as it prohibits practices that are lawful under federal law. Shaw v Delta Air Lines, Inc., 463 U.S. 85, 103 S. Ct. 2890, 77 L. Ed. 2d 490, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 86 (U.S. 1983).

Executive Law §§ 290–301 to extent it obliged airlines to provide full coverage in employee benefits plans for pregnancy-related disabilities was pre-empted by Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974. Delta Air Lines, Inc. v Kramarsky, 666 F.2d 21, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 13407 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1981), modified, Shaw v Delta Air Lines, Inc., 463 U.S. 85, 103 S. Ct. 2890, 77 L. Ed. 2d 490, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 86 (U.S. 1983).

Human Rights Law (CLS, Executive Law §§ 290 et seq.) bars exclusion of pregnancy-related benefits from general employee disability plan as sex discrimination. Section 703(a)(1) of Title VII of Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 USCS § 2000e-2(a)(1)), which provides that it is unlawful for employer to discriminate against individual with respect to compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment because of sex, does not render New York Human Rights Law a nullity under supremacy clause of Article VI of US Constitution; Human Rights Law may prohibit employers from excluding pregnancy benefits from coverage although it has been determined that Title VII does not prohibit such practices. Thomas Publishing Co. v Division of Human Rights, 456 F. Supp. 1104, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15466 (S.D.N.Y. 1978).

Female employee's state-law claims against employer's self-insured employee health benefits plan for breach of contract and violation of Exec § 296 arising from plan denial of benefits for infertility treatments were preempted by ERISA. Saks v Franklin Covey Co., 117 F. Supp. 2d 318, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14792 (S.D.N.Y. 2000), modified, 316 F.3d 337, 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 549 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2003).

59. —Availability to teachers

Personnel policy which singles out pregnancy, among all other physical conditions to which a teacher may be subject, as a category for special treatment in determining when leave from duty shall begin is prohibited by proscriptions of the Human Rights Law. Human Rights Law requires that pregnant teacher who takes pregnancy-related leave must be permitted to take advantage of her sick and sabbatical leave entitlements to the same extent as would be the case where she is suffering from some other temporary physical disability. Union Free Sch. Dist. No. 6 v N.Y. State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 35 N.Y.2d 371, 362 N.Y.S.2d 139, 320 N.E.2d 859, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1177 (N.Y. 1974), reh'g denied, 36 N.Y.2d 807, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 2685 (N.Y. 1975).

School district and board of education, by enforcing terms of teachers' collective bargaining agreement requiring maternity leave to commence after third month of pregnancy, were properly found to have discriminated against female teachers on the basis of sex. Union Free School Dist. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 43 A.D.2d 31, 349 N.Y.S.2d 757, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3068 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1973), app. dismissed, 33 N.Y.2d 975, 353 N.Y.S.2d 739, 309 N.E.2d 137, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1762 (N.Y. 1974).

Maternity leave was required to be treated as all other disabilities, and hence teacher who claimed that the maternity leave time which she had taken should have been credited to her in computing the length of time she spent in service as a probationary teacher was entitled to a hearing of her contention that she had been discriminated on account of sex in violation of the Human Rights Law. Div. of Human Rights ex rel. Schwabenbauer v Bd. of Educ., 46 A.D.2d 483, 363 N.Y.S.2d 370, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8524 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1975).

School district would be required to pay any teacher physically disabled by reason of maternity accrued sick leave benefits for that portion of school year coinciding with such disability or aggravation of such disability, unless such teacher elected to take unpaid maternity leave during which sick leave was not applicable, provided she furnished to district certificate from her attending physician to effect that during such period of time she was, in fact, physically disabled. State Div. of Human Rights v Board of Education, 51 A.D.2d 357, 381 N.Y.S.2d 544, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11080 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), aff'd, 40 N.Y.2d 1021, 391 N.Y.S.2d 532, 359 N.E.2d 1327, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 3155 (N.Y. 1976).

Female teacher who was informed in February of 1968 that she would have to obtain a master's degree or complete 30 semester hours of approved graduate study by February 1, 1973, who, in September of 1969, requested and was granted five-year maternity leave, and who was discharged in January 1974 because she did not obtain the required additional study was not discriminated against on the basis of sex despite her contention that she should have been allowed an extension of time to complete her educational requirements coextensive with the length of her maternity leave. New York City Board of Education v New York State Human Rights Appeal Board, 54 A.D.2d 656, 387 N.Y.S.2d 873, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14183 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1976).

Division of Human Rights had jurisdiction over teacher's claim that she was denied due process by reason of school district's enforcement of allegedly illegal maternity leave policy. State Div. of Human Rights ex rel. Mossler v Westmoreland Cent. School Dist., 56 A.D.2d 205, 392 N.Y.S.2d 149, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10047 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1977).

A school teacher who chose maternity leave during her pregnancy would not be entitled to receive sick leave benefits for the period of her pregnancy-related disability where the teacher failed to carry her burden of proof that someone on a non-pregnancy-related leave of absence would be entitled to accrued sick leave during the period of the leave of absence. Jericho Union Free School Dist. v New York State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 97 A.D.2d 762, 468 N.Y.S.2d 393, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 20508 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1983).

E. Other Employment Matters

60. In general

Record supported conclusion that employee was victim of quid pro quo sexual harassment, and thus was entitled to compensatory damages, where employer exploited employee by, among other things, coercing her, as implicit condition of her employment, into having sexual liaisons with 2 business associates of employer's chairman and principal shareholder. Thoreson v Penthouse Int'l, 80 N.Y.2d 490, 591 N.Y.S.2d 978, 606 N.E.2d 1369, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 4231 (N.Y. 1992).

Provision of CLS Exec § 296(10)(c) requiring employers to take reasonable steps to accommodate Sabbath observers does not necessarily require that employer become Sabbath observer's advocate by initiating adversarial proceedings against third party such as collective bargaining agent in effort to narrow scope of contractual protections afforded other employees. New York City Transit Auth. v Executive Dep't, Div. of Human Rights, 89 N.Y.2d 79, 651 N.Y.S.2d 375, 674 N.E.2d 305, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3162 (N.Y. 1996).

Under CLS Exec § 296(10)(c), employer must show that it exerted reasonable efforts to accommodate its Sabbath-observing employees; this standard does not require proof that accommodation was actually found, but rather than genuine search for reasonable alternatives was undertaken. New York City Transit

Auth. v Executive Dep't, Div. of Human Rights, 89 N.Y.2d 79, 651 N.Y.S.2d 375, 674 N.E.2d 305, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3162 (N.Y. 1996).

The statute does not require the operation of business enterprises in subordination to diverse religious practices and customs of employees, and employer engaged in a non-governmental and private business enterprise is not required to make exceptions to its established and uniformly applied rule requiring all employees to be clean-shaven in order to accommodate the religious practice of a potential employee. Eastern Greyhound Lines Div. of Greyhound Lines, Inc. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 34 A.D.2d 916, 311 N.Y.S.2d 465, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4578 (N.Y. Milk processors could not be found to have discriminated against employee because of his religious beliefs where although job which employee was offered so as to avoid Saturday work paid 50 cents per hour less than prior job where employer had made every effort to cooperate with the employee and did so until circumstances prevented it from continuing the prior work schedules, which had existed for two years, there being no record evidence, that the employer's decision was in fact actuated by discrimination against creed. State Div. of Human Rights ex rel. Clarke v Carnation Co., 53 A.D.2d 1053, 385 N.Y.S.2d 888, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15866 (N.Y. Equality of footing is established only if employees otherwise entitled to the position, whether male or female, are excluded only upon a showing of individual incapacity. A sex discrimination complaint by a 65-year-old college professor whose academic load and status was reduced following her 65th birthday was properly dismissed, where the sex discrimination allegations were purely speculative and conclusory, where the college at which the professor taught had appointed more females than males to positions of responsibility in recent years, and where the demotion was made on the recommendation of a female chairperson of the professor's division for academic, budgetary and personal reasons having nothing whatsoever to do with the professor's sex. Jochnowitz v Junior College of Albany, Div. of Russell Sage College, 96 A.D.2d 1131, 467 N.Y.S.2d 732, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19798 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 60 N.Y.2d 559, 1983 N.Y. Granting of position to male employee who held permanent appointment did not discriminate on basis of sex against female employee with seasonal position in view of legitimate and rational basis for decision, including desire of agency to protect provisional and permanent employees whose jobs were in jeopardy because of budgetary constraints. Mathis v New York State Office of Parks, Recreation & Historic Preservation, 109 A.D.2d 931, 486 N.Y.S.2d 407, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 47453 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1985).

School district was entitled to summary judgment dismissing action by teacher, alleging that district discriminated against her on account of her sex by denying her request for extension of educational leave and relief from administrative assignment, despite fact that 2 male teachers were granted educational leaves and one male teacher was granted administrative relief, since (1) teacher sought one-semester extension, not initial leave, (2) teacher failed to refute school district's showing that personnel needs in her department were more acute than in departments in which male teachers taught and that it was more difficult to secure replacement for one semester than for one year, and (3) teacher failed to account for fact that school district granted her initial request for one-year leave, even though request was tardy, and that school district offered her administrative relief for one semester following return from leave even though such action was unprecedented. Baker v Board of Educ. of West Irondequoit Cent. School Dist., 156 A.D.2d 1005, 550 N.Y.S.2d 762, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16211 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1989), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 709, 555 N.Y.S.2d 691, 554 N.E.2d 1279, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 748 (N.Y. 1990).

Determination by Division of Human Rights that employer (medical college) did not discriminate against employee (phlebotomist) based on her HIV-positive disability when it reassigned her to billing department was supported by evidence that employee was aware of policy requiring that gloves be worn on both hands when drawing blood and violated that policy on at least 3 occasions, and that employer was unaware of similar infractions by any other employee. Friedel v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 219 A.D.2d 547, 632 N.Y.S.2d 520, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9604 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1995), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 802, 667 N.Y.S.2d 682, 690 N.E.2d 491, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4084 (N.Y. 1997).

In absence of discriminatory motive, employer (parking garage) did not violate law by requiring its cashier to wear bow tie, although she asserted that tie would violate her religious beliefs as Jehovah's Witness; although employer must accommodate employee's observance of Sabbath, there is no duty to accommodate general religious practices. Engstrom v Kinney Sys., 241 A.D.2d 420, 661 N.Y.S.2d 610, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8153 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 801, 666 N.Y.S.2d 563, 689 N.E.2d 533, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4149 (N.Y. 1997).

Employer (parking garage) was entitled to summary judgment in action by its cashier asserting that change in her working hours was instituted for purpose of interfering with her religious activities in violation of CLS Educ § 296(1)(e) where employer submitted unrefuted evidence that it changed work shifts of several employees due to changing business conditions, and cashier offered no evidence that change was instituted to harm her, claiming only that employer was aware of her evening religious meetings; prima facie case of retaliation requires evidence of subjective retaliatory motive. Engstrom v Kinney Sys., 241 A.D.2d 420, 661 N.Y.S.2d 610, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8153 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 801, 666 N.Y.S.2d 563, 689 N.E.2d 533, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4149 (N.Y. 1997).

Employee's rejection of employer's offer to seek accommodation regarding her schedule amounted to refusal to cooperate and constituted waiver of her right to maintain action for employment discrimination. Engstrom v Kinney Sys., 241 A.D.2d 420, 661 N.Y.S.2d 610, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8153 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 801, 666 N.Y.S.2d 563, 689 N.E.2d 533, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4149 (N.Y. 1997).

Employer was entitled to summary judgment in employment discrimination action alleging violation of employee's free speech rights, since employer was private entity, and state and federal constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech protect individual against action by governmental authorities. Engstrom v Kinney Sys., 241 A.D.2d 420, 661 N.Y.S.2d 610, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8153 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 801, 666 N.Y.S.2d 563, 689 N.E.2d 533, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4149 (N.Y. 1997).

Allegation that plaintiff was harassed by her female supervisor, not because of her gender but because of their nonwork-related intimate relationship, did not state cause of action for discrimination or retaliation under New York City Human Rights Law, either against plaintiff's supervisor or their employer. Stallings v U.S. Elecs., Inc., 270 A.D.2d 188, 707 N.Y.S.2d 9, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3296 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

It was proper to dismiss employees' hostile work environment claim where their factual allegations fell short of establishing that the workplace was permeated with discriminatory intimidation, ridicule, and insult that was sufficiently severe or pervasive so as to alter the conditions of their employment and create an abusive working environment. Schenkman v New York Coll. of Health Professionals, 29 A.D.3d 671, 815 N.Y.S.2d 159, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6294 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

Because an employer did not approve or condone the behavior of its supervisor, and because the offensive conduct was not sufficiently severe or pervasive to create an objectively hostile or abusive work environment in violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, the employer was entitled to summary judgment. Barnum v New York City Tr. Auth., 62 A.D.3d 736, 878 N.Y.S.2d 454, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3960 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2009).

Dismissal of employment discrimination claims alleging that an employer forced the employee to assist with the performance of an abortion despite her known religious objections to doing so was proper because, inter alia, with respect to the N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a) claim, the employer made a prima facie showing that the employee did not suffer an adverse employment action and, in any event, offered legitimate, nondiscriminatory reasons for the challenged actions; in opposition, the employee failed to raise a triable fact issue as to whether she suffered an adverse employment action and whether the reasons proffered by the employer for the challenged actions were merely pretextual. Cenzon-Decarlo v Mount Sinai Hosp., 101 A.D.3d 924, 957 N.Y.S.2d 256, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8625 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2012), app. denied, 21 N.Y.3d 858, 970 N.Y.S.2d 748, 992 N.E.2d 1093, 2013 N.Y. LEXIS 1663 (N.Y. 2013).

While issues of fact existed as to a nurse's claims of unlawful discrimination and retaliation under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1), (7), the nurse failed to show that the supervisors actually participated in the alleged discriminatory acts in support of her alternative theory of aiding and abetting the alleged acts under § 296(6). Asabor v Archdiocese of N.Y., 102 A.D.3d 524, 961 N.Y.S.2d 17, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 275 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2013).

Plaintiff's allegations that she was denied favorable benefits, terms and conditions of employment because of supervisor's favoring of another female employee under plaintiff's supervision with whom supervisor was having sexual relationship states cause of action for unlawful sex discrimination in employment under CLS Executive Law § 296[1][a], so long as plaintiff amends her pleadings so as to specify that her supervisor's relationship with other employee was sexual in nature. Kersul v Skulls Angels, Inc., 130 Misc. 2d 345, 495 N.Y.S.2d 886, 1985 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3201 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1985).

Cause of action based on claim of sexual harassment arising out of plaintiff actress' employment relationship with defendant, who coerced her into sexual activity with his business associates to further his own business interests, was cognizable under Human Rights Law, CLS Exec § 297(9), since actions of employer which discriminate against person in terms and conditions of employment because of person's sex are encompassed within ambit of wrongs actionable under statute. Under Human Rights Law, employer is prohibited from even attempting to exploit his dominant position by imposing sexual demands on employee as implicit condition of continued employment, and employee need not prove that he or she resisted abuse or refused to comply with sexual demands, that tangible job benefits were lost, or that discriminatory conduct was intentional. A cause of action based on plaintiff's claim of sexual harassment arising out of her employment relationship with defendant, who coerced her into sexual activity with his business associates in order to further his business, is cognizable under Executive Law § 297 (9), which provides that any person aggrieved by an unlawful discriminatory practice shall have a cause of action for damages, and actions of an employer which discriminate against an individual in the "terms, conditions or privileges of employment" because of that person's sex are encompassed within the ambit of actionable wrongs (see, Executive Law § 296 [1] [a]; § 292 [4]). Under the Human Rights Law, an employer is prohibited from even attempting to exploit his dominant position by imposing sexual demands upon an employee as an implicit condition of continued employment, and the employee need not prove that he or she resisted the abuse or refused to comply with the sexual demands, that tangible job benefits were lost, or that discriminatory conduct was intentional. Thoreson v Penthouse Int'l, 149 Misc. 2d 150, 563 N.Y.S.2d 968, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 609 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1990), modified, 179 A.D.2d 29, 583 N.Y.S.2d 213, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5427 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1992).

Cause of action for loss of consortium cannot be based on employment discrimination. Belle v Zelmanowicz, 305 A.D.2d 272, 761 N.Y.S.2d 26, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5705 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2003).

Employee's allegation of the creation of a hostile work environment in the from of harassment, in violation of the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, failed because the employer's managers could not be held to be vicariously liable for condoning a situation implicating non-management employees, about which they were not only unaware, but had no reason to suspect. Priore v N.Y. Yankees, 307 A.D.2d 67, 761 N.Y.S.2d 608, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6119 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 504, 775 N.Y.S.2d 781, 807 N.E.2d 894, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 4134 (N.Y. 2003).

Trial court properly determined that the injured party's sexual discrimination action filed pursuant to N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1) against the Town of Van Buren and the Town's Board member was time-barred, where the action was filed three years and two months after the last of the alleged conduct occurred; this exceeded both the three-year statute of limitations under N.Y. C.P.L.R. 214(2) and the one-year and 90-day statute of limitations for an action against the Town under N.Y. Town Law § 67(2), and the statutes were not tolled during the pendency of the injured party's complaints filed with the New York State Division of Human Rights since they were dismissed, not for administrative convenience, but so that the injured party could file the instant action pursuant to N.Y. Exec. Law § 297(9). Henderson v Town of Van Buren, 15 A.D.3d 980, 789 N.Y.S.2d 355, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1187 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 4 N.Y.3d 710, 797 N.Y.S.2d 817, 830 N.E.2d 1146, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 1106 (N.Y. 2005).

It was error to grant summary judgment dismissing an employee's disparate treatment claim because the employee raised triable issues as to (1) why the employee received the employee's boss's job without a pay increase, grade change, or better bonus pool, (2) whether reasons for this treatment were pretextual. Nettles v LSG Sky Chefs, 94 A.D.3d 726, 941 N.Y.S.2d 643, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2421 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2012).

Summary judgment dismissing an employee's hostile work environment claim, based on race, was proper because the employee's employer and supervisor showed (1) alleged offensive conduct was intermittent, (2) racial comments were made once when the employee was not present, and (3) no objectively offensive acts were shown. Nettles v LSG Sky Chefs, 94 A.D.3d 726, 941 N.Y.S.2d 643, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2421 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2012).

Summary judgment dismissing an employee's retaliation claim, based on race, was proper because (1) there was no causal connection between the employee's complaints of discrimination and alleged retaliation, and (2) the employee was treated favorably after the complaints. Nettles v LSG Sky Chefs, 94 A.D.3d 726, 941 N.Y.S.2d 643, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2421 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2012).

Judgment for the State in a correction officer's N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 claim was proper because, inter alia, the trial court made a credibility determination that there was no evidence of a causal connection between the protected activity and the discipline imposed on the correction officer; the trial court's finding that the confrontation was more serious than the unrelated incident was supported by evidence that there were approximately 65 unconfined inmates in the vicinity observing the correction officer's confrontation, and a superintendent testified that the correction officer's conduct could have had serious consequences. The evidence did not support the claim of prior oral complaints, and the record demonstrated that isolated conduct was not sufficiently severe or pervasive so as to create an actionable hostile work environment. Clauberg v State of New York, 95 A.D.3d 1385, 943 N.Y.S.2d 653, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3487 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2012).

Former employee who had performed landscaping and maintenance work for a county's parks department sufficiently stated a claim of hostile working environment the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, against his former supervisor and park superintendents because the employee alleged that the supervisor subjected the employee to numerous vicious acts of discriminatory treatment, including tying the employee to a tree and to chairs with shrink wrap, based on the employee's mental disability and that the superintendents were aware of the harassment and took no actions to stop it. Costabile v County of Westchester, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 29787 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 20, 2007), amended, 485 F. Supp. 2d 424, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 33484 (S.D.N.Y. 2007).

Plaintiff stated claim under CLS Exec § 296 where she alleged that her former employer gave negative recommendation to her prospective employer to retaliate against her for objecting to workplace sexual harassment. Beckett v Prudential Ins. Co. of Am., 893 F. Supp. 234, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6513 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

Hospital employee failed to establish adverse retaliatory action predicated on hospital personnel department's delay in providing her with medical leave forms where there was no showing that she was harmed beyond inconvenience or that she was deprived of pay for period during which she was on leave, and she failed to show that delay in providing forms was traceable to her participation in protected activity. Dortz v City of New York, 904 F. Supp. 127, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14438 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

Employer's decision to split off 2 burgeoning district offices located on Long Island from Manhattan branch office, in order to create separate branch office located on Long Island, constituted reasonable exercise of informed judgment, and was not pretext for age discrimination against 52-year-old plaintiff, whose incentive compensation was somewhat lessened thereby. Ellis v Provident Life & Accident Ins. Co., 926 F. Supp. 417, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6979 (S.D.N.Y. 1996), aff'd, 107 F.3d 2, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 6984 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1997).

Age discrimination claim of insurance company branch sales office manager is denied, where he complains solely about contraction of part of his source of incentive compensation due to decision to split off 2 district offices and restructure them into new branch office, because record is replete with evidence of business reasons for split that allowed more efficient servicing of brokers and their business through suburban branch office rather than through city branch office. Ellis v Provident Life & Accident Ins. Co., 926 F. Supp. 417, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6979 (S.D.N.Y. 1996), aff'd, 107 F.3d 2, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 6984 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1997).

Race discrimination claim under Human Rights Law, challenging events that culminated in employee's decision to accept early retirement plan, was not preempted by ERISA; employee did not challenge structure of retirement plan, nor did he dispute execution or administration of plan. Parker v Chrysler Corp., 929 F. Supp. 162, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8758 (S.D.N.Y. 1996), aff'd, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 6021 (2d Cir. N.Y. Mar. 27, 1997).

Human Rights Law does not provide for liability for failure on part of employer to take investigative and remedial measures in response to employee's sexual harassment complaint where it is determined that no sexual harassment occurred. Karibian v Columbia Univ., 930 F. Supp. 134, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9111 (S.D.N.Y. 1996).

Complaint stated retaliation claim under Human Rights Law where husband alleged that his employment conditions deteriorated following his wife's complaints to management, and that deterioration intensified after she was discharged. Murphy v Cadillac Rubber & Plastics, 946 F. Supp. 1108, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17463 (W.D.N.Y. 1996).

Female police officer's Exec § 296 claim is denied summarily, where she claims "retaliation for having opposed gender based discrimination in workplace," because she has adduced no admissible material facts showing gender-based retaliation after writing of her May 1997 letter complaining of gender bias was publicized by village clerk. Davis v Carey, 63 F. Supp. 2d 361, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13498 (S.D.N.Y. 1999).

Disgruntled community college worker's retaliation claim must fail, where he was injured moving furniture but was covered by workers' compensation, returned to work, and was later promoted, because he has put forth nothing more than conclusory allegations to suggest causal relationship between his filing of grievances and complaints and his being assigned as part of furniture removal crew despite his light-duty status. Bembry v Darrow, 97 F. Supp. 2d 281, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7569 (N.D.N.Y. 2000), aff'd, 7 Fed. Appx. 33, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 5091 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2001).

Human resources vice-president cannot be held liable for "aiding and abetting" employment discrimination in violation of Exec § 296(6), where complaint alleges only that she "set up" employee by asking him to come forward with information about his supervisor's improprieties but then harassed him after taking over for supervisor by requiring him to observe variety of new and unwanted working conditions, because these changes do not constitute "adverse employment actions" as matter of law. Smith v AVSC Int'l, Inc., 148 F. Supp. 2d 302, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8646 (S.D.N.Y. 2001).

Plaintiff argued that solely as a result of her disability she was required to remain in her residence 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and that this requirement was not placed on non-disabled police officers, but, as all sick or injured police officers were subject to the same provisions, she utterly failed to demonstrate how she in particular was adversely treated on the basis of a disability or other personal attribute. Capasso v Metro. Transp. Auth., 198 F. Supp. 2d 452, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6437 (S.D.N.Y. 2002).

Public school teachers' N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(e) retaliation claims failed because the teachers' contention that their requests for leaves of absence were denied in retaliation for protected conduct was belied by the fact that the denials issued before the teachers' protected activity occurred. Pearson v Bd. of Educ., 499 F. Supp. 2d 575, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 59244 (S.D.N.Y. 2007).

Public school teachers' N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(e) retaliation claims failed because the teachers' contention that their requests for leaves of absence were denied in retaliation for protected conduct was belied by the fact that the denials issued before the teachers' protected activity occurred. Pearson v Bd. of Educ., 499 F. Supp. 2d 575, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 59244 (S.D.N.Y. 2007).

While there was a triable issue of fact as to whether an employee's diabetes was a cognizable disability under the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, an offer of accommodation by defendants, an employer and a manager, was reasonable as a matter of law because, while the employee produced a note saying that she needed to be able to eat at 6 p.m., defendants offered the employee accommodation by allowing her to eat while on the food line, and the employee did not produce anything to dispute the reasonableness of the accommodation. Krikelis v Vassar College, 581 F. Supp. 2d 476, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 61543 (S.D.N.Y. 2008).

In a female police officer's suit against a city, its police department, and others (defendants), her claims that defendants' acts of transferring her, ordering her to wear a uniform, denying other requested transfers and overtime assignments, and denying her a take-home vehicle failed to show gender discrimination in violation of the New York Human Rights Act, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, because defendants proffered legitimate, nondiscriminatory reasons for each action, and the officer failed to rebut this by showing that it was pretext. Lore v City of Syracuse, 583 F. Supp. 2d 345, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 89484 (N.D.N.Y. 2008), aff'd in part, vacated in part, 670 F.3d 127, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 1954 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2012).

Public school teacher's New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, retaliation claim met the standard of Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a) where the teacher alleged that she engaged in protected activity by sending letters to the school district about age discrimination and that the school's principal made an allegation of child abuse against the teacher shortly thereafter. Fordham v Islip Union Free Sch. Dist., 662 F. Supp. 2d 261, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 82767 (E.D.N.Y. 2009).

Although the former employee established a prima facie case, he could not show a genuine factual dispute about whether defendants' proffered reasons for the 2004 evaluation were merely a pretext for retaliation; the employee was unable to point to inconsistencies in defendants' story, and instead relied solely on his own speculation that a director manipulated the results because he had to approve all employee evaluations. Kanhoye v Altana, Inc., 686 F. Supp. 2d 199, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 112506 (E.D.N.Y. 2009).

61. Compensation

Where the evidence indicated that matrons performed substantially the same duties as the male guards at a city police headquarters, they were entitled to equal pay from the city. Mize v State Div. of Human Rights, 38 A.D.2d 278, 328 N.Y.S.2d 983, 1972 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5293 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1972),

A board of education may compensate teachers who coach girls' sports teams performing duties of the same nature as coaches of boys' teams, but to a lesser degree, differently from the coaches of boys' teams. State Div. of Human Rights v Syracuse City Teachers Asso., 66 A.D.2d 56, 412 N.Y.S.2d 711, 1979 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9989 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1979).

In a proceeding initiated by a black citizen of a foreign country (charging a university with discrimination on the basis of race, color, and national origin), the complaint was properly dismissed where the alleged discrimination was based on length of appointment to the faculty on a 12-month contract, rather than a nine-month contract held by certain other faculty members, where all faculty members in petitioner's department held 12-month contracts, and where petitioner received a salary approximately 30 percent greater than comparable faculty members holding nine-month contracts. Murapa v Kramarsky, 88 A.D.2d 1009, 451 N.Y.S.2d 934, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17420 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1982).

Finding of CLS Exec § 296 violation was supported by evidence that woman performed functions of general manager but was paid less than male general managers, and that employer's proffered gender-neutral explanation—lack of experience—was pretextual, since 2 inexperienced men had been offered general manager positions at higher pay. Classic Coach v Mercado, 280 A.D.2d 164, 722 N.Y.S.2d 551, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2571 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 601, 735 N.Y.S.2d 490, 760 N.E.2d 1286, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 3231 (N.Y. 2001).

Employee's racial discrimination claim based on different pay and stock options, denial of a fixed cost of living adjustment (COLA), and exclusion from a bonus pool failed because legitimate nondiscriminatory reasons were given as (1) the employee's job grade determined the employee's pay, stock options, and bonus pool, and (2) fixed COLAs were limited to those hired before a policy change. Nettles v LSG Sky Chefs, 94 A.D.3d 726, 941 N.Y.S.2d 643, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2421 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2012).

In action alleging unequal pay for equal work, inference that employer acted with discriminatory intent was not supported by fact that male employees who performed substantially equal work under similar working conditions were paid more than female plaintiff, in absence of any evidence that employer paid plaintiff less because of her gender. Tomka v Seiler Corp., 66 F.3d 1295, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 27612 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1995).

Federal law preempts pilots' age-discrimination claim brought under CLS Exec Law § 296, where pilots challenge (1) manner in which they were integrated into pilots' seniority list, (2) requirement that they serve 10 years before they become eligible for full postretirement medical benefits, and (3) manner in which their pay is increased over 3-year period to reach parity with other pilots, because terms and conditions of employment sought by pilots would have potential impact on airline's prices and services, and such claims are preempted by federal statute. Abdu-Brisson v Delta Air Lines, Inc., 927 F. Supp. 109, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6844 (S.D.N.Y. 1996), rev'd, 128 F.3d 77, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 28555 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1997).

Claims of discriminatory pay under Exec § 296 require showing of intentional discrimination. Sobol v Kidder, Peabody & Co., 49 F. Supp. 2d 208, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1877 (S.D.N.Y. 1999).

Pay disparity claim of African-American administrative assistant for publisher must fail, even though she claims she took over research duties of white employee but received no extra pay, where she compares herself to magazine editor who provided editorial and research assistance to author of book and was paid $2,000 in extra compensation, because she is not similarly situated to white employee who was professional editor while she was administrative assistant with no experience as editor. Cruse v G & J United States Publ'g, 96 F. Supp. 2d 320, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6084 (S.D.N.Y. 2000).

Although a former employee established that her former employer paid her less than a male coworker in the same job, she failed to establish a violation of the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a), because there was no evidence that the employer's compensation decisions were based on the employee's gender and that she was intentionally paid less than her coworker because of her gender. Cox v Quick & Reilly, Inc., 401 F. Supp. 2d 203, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28434 (N.D.N.Y. 2005).

Despite substantial discovery, employee one conceded that he was unable to identify a single similarly-situated, non-African-American employee who was paid more than he and employee two failed to identify or provide evidence concerning any comparators that would support his claims of discriminatory compensation disparities. Wright v Eastman Kodak Co., 550 F. Supp. 2d 371, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 33509 (W.D.N.Y. 2008), aff'd, 328 Fed. Appx. 738, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 15647 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2009).

Employee's allegations that she was not paid at the maximum rate and that she was forced to work overtime and double shifts all occurred prior to the statutory period; even if timely, the claim still failed as the employee did not meet her prima facie burden of establishing that the adverse employment action (i.e., not being paid at the maximum pay rate) gave rise to an inference of discrimination. Aspilaire v Wyeth Pharms., Inc., 612 F. Supp. 2d 289, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35523 (S.D.N.Y. 2009).

Former employee failed to demonstrate a prima facie case of gender discrimination; his claim was based solely on his own testimony that an unspecified female colleague told him that she was obtaining additional compensation for gowning up, from which he concluded an intent to discriminate on the basis of gender. Kanhoye v Altana, Inc., 686 F. Supp. 2d 199, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 112506 (E.D.N.Y. 2009).

Employee's claim of race discrimination under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 failed at the prima facie stage because there was no evidence that the employee was discriminated against when he was promoted but placed in an ungraded salary plan; this was true even though the employee alleged that he was not informed that the new position was not part of the municipal employer's graded salary plan. Russell v County of Nassau, 696 F. Supp. 2d 213, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14018 (E.D.N.Y. 2010).

Employee's claims of race discrimination under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 failed at the prima facie stage for lack of evidence that a similarly-situated Caucasian coworker was higher paid; the persons to whom the employee cited as comparators were not similarly situated because they held higher or differing positions than the employee. Russell v County of Nassau, 696 F. Supp. 2d 213, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14018 (E.D.N.Y. 2010).

Employee's claims of race discrimination under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 failed at the prima facie stage for lack of evidence of discriminatory intent because the mere fact that the employee did not receive cost of living increases in and of itself did not permit an inference that the reason was his race. Russell v County of Nassau, 696 F. Supp. 2d 213, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14018 (E.D.N.Y. 2010).

Because the employee conceded that she received offers of overtime employment, she did not establish that she suffered an adverse employment action—namely, the denial of overtime opportunities based on her race, gender, or age—and thus failed to establish her prima facie case of discrimination regarding her denial of overtime claims. Hall v N.Y. City DOT, 701 F. Supp. 2d 318, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 31077 (E.D.N.Y. 2010).

62. Failure to promote

The Appellate Division improperly vacated an affirmance by the State Human Rights Appeal Board of an order finding that a school board and board of education unlawfully discriminated against two interim acting school principals employed by the district, one of whom was black and the other Hispanic, based on their race, where such determination was supported by substantial evidence consisting of statistical evidence of a pervasive pattern within the school district of removing black and Hispanic principals and replacing them with white principals. New York City Bd. of Education v Batista, 54 N.Y.2d 379, 446 N.Y.S.2d 1, 430 N.E.2d 877, 1981 N.Y. LEXIS 3164 (N.Y. 1981).

In a proceeding in which a university professor alleged that she was denied tenure on the basis of her sex and that her department chairman had committed certain improper acts, the complaint was properly dismissed on the basis that the university was not responsible for the chairman's acts where the university did not condone the chairman's discriminatory behavior but rather took affirmative action to investigate and correct it. State University of New York v State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 55 N.Y.2d 896, 449 N.Y.S.2d 29, 433 N.E.2d 1277, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3098 (N.Y. 1982).

Substantial evidence supported determination of Commissioner of Human Rights that black female employee was victim of race and sex discrimination where, inter alia, employee was acknowledged to be competent, she received her first promotion later than white male coworker whom she had trained, employer did not formally announce second opportunity for promotion for which employee was qualified, and she was denied advancement twice without receiving serious consideration. Consolidated Edison Co. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 77 N.Y.2d 411, 568 N.Y.S.2d 569, 570 N.E.2d 217, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 363 (N.Y. 1991).

Requirement that candidate have at least three years of experience as volunteer fireman supported finding that petitioner "knowingly excluded all Negroes as a class from competing for fire alarm dispatcher positions", as a fire alarm system is completely automated and requires no discretion on the part of the dispatcher or any special knowledge of fire fighting equipment or geography of the area and only one governmental entity has a requirement of fireman experience thus requiring Civil Service Commission to cease and desist from setting forth such qualifications. Glen Cove Municipal Civil Service Com. v Glen Cove NAACP, 34 A.D.2d 956, 312 N.Y.S.2d 400, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4640 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, (N.Y. App. Div. 1970).

The State Division of Human Rights properly found no probable cause to believe respondents engaged in the discriminatory practice complained of, where there was evidence in the record from which the division could reasonably conclude that the employer's decision not to promote complainant was in no way based on race but rather upon an evaluation of complainant's qualifications vis-a-vis the job requirements and the qualifications of other candidates. Logan v New York State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 86 A.D.2d 910, 448 N.Y.S.2d 259, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15582 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1982).

A doctor's allegations claiming discrimination against him because of his Egyptian heritage and national origin on the part of the hospital in failing to promote him to the position of chief resident of the urology division, were unsubstantiated where two other urology residents, who were white, male, American, and Anglo-Saxon, and whose evaluation reports were higher than the doctor's, were also denied appointments as chief residents on the grounds of substandard work performances. Grace v New York State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 87 A.D.2d 726, 449 N.Y.S.2d 339, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16067 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1982).

An order dismissing a complaint by a black Nigerian who alleged that the bank with whom he was employed had denied his admission to its management training program on the basis of his race was properly affirmed, where the record contained evidence from which the State Division of Human Rights could reasonably conclude that the bank's decision was not actuated by discrimination, including evidence that employee was not placed in the management training program due to a combination of nondiscriminatory factors, among which were lack of openings in the program and employee's qualifications, and the fact that employee became impatient and voluntarily terminated his employment. Omoragbon v Bankers Trust Co., N.A., 90 A.D.2d 887, 456 N.Y.S.2d 853, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19156 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1982).

An employee of the state Workers' Compensation Board who was denied promotion to the position of Assistant Director of the Research and Statistics Department in favor of a younger, less well-qualified person, and who then chose to retire, was entitled to an award for age discrimination based on proper considerations, including backpay commencing from the date when the position was available, where the evidence was overwhelming that the employee was denied promotion based on her age, where the employee was thus put in the horrendous position of having to work for a younger person, where the employee was not required to accept such an inferior position as a result of discriminatory practices and also suffer the extreme humiliation, mental anguish and embarrassment attendant to the position, and where any employee placed in such an untenable position had a right to retire; the employee was not entitled to the position sought, however, since the Workers' Compensation Board, as a public employer, could not be directed by the administrative agency to make such an appointment. Further, an award of $1,000 to compensate the employee for the humiliation, mental anguish and embarrassment of having to work for a younger person was inadequate and an abuse of discretion. Weiss v New York State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 102 A.D.2d 471, 477 N.Y.S.2d 342, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18808 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1984).

The State Division of Human Rights properly dismissed petitioner's complaint of an unlawful discriminatory practice based on age, for failure to promote him, where the record was replete with evidence, which petitioner was afforded ample opportunity to rebut, that it was petitioner's substandard performance which had caused him to be passed over for promotion, that 16 of the 49 people in the position he sought were over 50 years of age, and that 13 of those 16 employees were promoted within the last four years. Sedlacek v IBM Corp., 108 A.D.2d 1029, 485 N.Y.S.2d 599, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 43352 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1985).

Female deputy sheriff was not improperly passed over for appointment to position of sergeant, where uncontradicted testimony was that position to be filled required seargent to conduct daily announced and unannounced inspections of cell block areas to monitor security and sanitation conditions and, since inmates' toilet and shower facilities are in open view to personnel walking by cells, it would be violation of male inmates' right to privacy to have woman monitoring their activities, such that sex is "bona fide occupational qualification" within exception of CLS Exec § 296(1)(d). State Div. of Human Rights ex rel. Johnson v Oneida County Sheriff's Dep't, 119 A.D.2d 1006, 500 N.Y.S.2d 995, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 55945 (N.Y. Transit authority's denial of promotion to employee in favor of applicant who scored below him on civil service test, based on employee's significantly poorer attendance record resulting from physical illness, was not discrimination on basis of disability in violation of CLS Exec § 296, since employee's illness prevented him from coming to work and thus was not disability as defined in CLS Exec § 292. Schmitt v Kiley, 124 A.D.2d 661, 507 N.Y.S.2d 907, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 61962 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986), app. denied, 69 N.Y.2d 612, 517 N.Y.S.2d 1027, 511 N.E.2d 86, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 16891 (N.Y. 1987).

Law professors, of whom one was black and one female, failed to plead facts sufficient to show violation of Title VII of Civil Rights Act or CLS Exec § 296 based on mere fact that they were rejected for tenure while 3 white male candidates were granted tenure, where it was acknowledged that law school, in accordance with its mission, would probably seek out other minority faculty. Faculty of City University of New York Law School at Queens College v Murphy, 149 A.D.2d 315, 539 N.Y.S.2d 367, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4387 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1989).

Evidence did not support Division of Human Rights' determination that telephone company unlawfully discriminated against African-American employee by denying her promotion, where company established that it promoted white employee to Facilities Assistant position instead of complainant because complainant was not familiar with telephone company power equipment, while white employee was familiar with equipment, having already performed some of those job duties, and because white employee had 4-year college education including physics and calculus, while complainant only had 2-year degree and had not studied physics or calculus. New York Tel. Co. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 222 A.D.2d 234, 634 N.Y.S.2d 691, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12729 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1995).

Determination of state Division of Human Rights finding that employee of city transportation department was denied promotion to "gasoline roller engineer" due to racial discrimination would be annulled where employee provided no evidence that he had worked for 3 years—or for 2 years plus additional year of relevant experience—operating gasoline roller on full-time paid basis, and thus division's finding that he was qualified to operate roller at time of his application for provisional position was unsupported by substantial evidence. City of New York v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 225 A.D.2d 421, 638 N.Y.S.2d 957, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2800 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

Explanation offered by city department of transportation for its decision to investigate and ultimately reject employee's application for promotion as "gasoline roller engineer"—department's knowledge of conflict between employee's claims of experience and his job duties as department employee—was not pretext for racial discrimination. City of New York v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 225 A.D.2d 421, 638 N.Y.S.2d 957, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2800 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

Commissioner of Human Rights' inference of retaliatory motive behind acts of city department of transportation against employee was unfounded and would be annulled, despite employee having filed prior complaint of racial discrimination after he was denied promotion, where, with regard to various incidents, department provided ample evidence that denial of overtime was based on assessments of his qualifications and job performance, amendment of his performance evaluation was based on 2 disciplinary incidents unknown to supervisor who drafted evaluation initially, and denial of his application for another promotion was based on his complete lack of qualifications for post. City of New York v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 225 A.D.2d 421, 638 N.Y.S.2d 957, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2800 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

Employee's assertion that civil service promotion examination regarding operation of "gasoline roller" (highway construction vehicle) was conducted against him in discriminatory or retaliatory manner due to his filing of racial discrimination complaint was unsupported where record established that he failed test on account of his own inabilities, including failure to reply correctly to questions which could be answered by simple observation of vehicle. City of New York v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 225 A.D.2d 421, 638 N.Y.S.2d 957, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2800 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

There was no merit in petitioner's complaint of race discrimination in employment and retaliation where substantial evidence supported findings that candidates who received 2 higher level positions sought by petitioner were more qualified than petitioner, who lacked necessary qualifications, undercut his claim that his poor performance evaluations were part of continuing pretext disguising retaliatory motive linked to his having expressed to superiors his belief that decisions not to promote him were based on race, and that such motive ultimately led to his termination, and there was no other basis to disturb findings crediting performance evaluations and other evidence offered by employer of legitimate, nondiscriminatory reasons for termination. Davis v Mercado, 240 A.D.2d 163, 658 N.Y.S.2d 862, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5836 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1997).

Averments of city electrician in Article 78 proceeding stated viable claim that city and its pubic works commissioner acted illegally, in violation of statutory proscriptions (CLS Civ S § 107(1) and CLS Labor § 201-d(2)(a)) against making employment decisions on basis of employee's political activities where he alleged that, shortly after he was directed to refrain from wearing campaign sticker supporting commissioner's political opponent, and while city and commissioner knew that he continued to express his opposing political views on his own time, his job duties were adjusted—including reduction in responsibility—in way that was calculated to, and did, lead to his being denied promotion and concomitant salary increase. Federal mail fraud conviction, which involved petitioner's submission of false car service vouchers in connection with his employment as New York City Human Resources Administration caseworker, raised legitimate issues about his fitness for supervisory position, warranting dismissal of his Article 78 petition to compel city to promote him to supervisory position on basis that denial of promotion violated CLS Exec § 296(15). Alston v City of New York, 270 A.D.2d 3, 703 N.Y.S.2d 186, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2231 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

Physician failed to state a cause of action for failure to promote in violation of N.Y. Exec. Although a determination to allow firefighter eligibility lists to expire was made because those next in line for promotion were Caucasian, the Caucasian firefighters did not establish liability under N.Y. Exec. Law art. 15 by showing the absence of a compelling interest or that the action was not narrowly tailored to meet an allegedly compelling interest. Retiree failed to make out a prima facie case of employment age discrimination under CLS Exec Law § 296(1)(a), where police sergeant's provisional promotion to lieutenant was withdrawn when it became clear that he was in process of retirement and would be unavailable for service, but retiree alleged entitlement to pension benefits based on the higher grade, because rescission of promotion was legitimately based on his retirement. Russo v White, 775 F. Supp. 639, 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14361 (S.D.N.Y. 1991).

Disgruntled fire lieutenant's Exec § 296 claim is denied summarily, where he sues consultant involved in preparation of 1994 and 1997 civil service exams, because she was private, independent consultant and neither agent of city nor lieutenant's "employer." McMenemy v City of Rochester, 63 F. Supp. 2d 309, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14427 (W.D.N.Y. 1999), aff'd in part, vacated in part, 241 F.3d 279, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 3243 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2001).

Employer's proffered reason for failing to promote 2 black employees, that white candidate was better qualified for position, was not pretext for race discrimination under Exec § 296 or federal law, where there was no evidence that team interview process was pretext for race discrimination other than employees' vague conclusory allegations. Hines v Hillside Children's Ctr., 73 F. Supp. 2d 308, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16200 (W.D.N.Y. 1999).

African-American clerk's race discrimination claim under Exec § 296 is denied summarily, where employer was in process of downsizing and consolidating its internal operations and as result only 2 promotions were made during year in question, bona fide promotion of African-American and proficiency promotion of white woman, because employer has articulated legitimate, nondiscriminatory reasons for its actions. Kent v GM Reg'l Pers. Ctr.-E. Region, 179 F. Supp. 2d 102, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21146 (W.D.N.Y. 2001).

Employee offered sufficient proof that a county's and county manager's claims that she was not suited for an open position were blatantly false, sufficient to demonstrate pretext and sufficient to create factual issues regarding whether their true motive was discriminatory to establish a prima facie case of gender discrimination in violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296. Heap v

County of Schenectady, 214 F. Supp. 2d 263, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15143 (N.D.N.Y. 2002).

Although the dean was personally involved in recruiting the doctor, there were no indications that he was involved in any discriminatory activities against the doctor. In fact the the decision to deny doctor tenure, upon which the lawsuit was based, was made two years after the dean left the medical school; the doctor's discrimination claims under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, and New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107, were dismissed. Hirsch v Columbia Univ., 293 F. Supp. 2d 372, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21340 (S.D.N.Y. 2003).

Former employer was granted summary judgment on the former employee's discrimination claims under New York state and New York City anti-discrimination laws. N.Y. Exec. Law § 296-1; N.Y. City Admin. Code § 8-107(1)(a), that she was denied a promotion in late 2000, she was denied a promotion in the summer of 2001, and she was terminated in late 2001, instead of promoted, where the court found that the facts suggested that the employer was very pleased with the employee's work and was willing to promote her — that was, until it discovered her suspiciously excessive overtime. Ascione v Pfizer, Inc., 312 F. Supp. 2d 572, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5808 (S.D.N.Y. 2004), aff'd, 138 Fed. Appx. 347, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 13366 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2005).

Probation officer failed to establish a prima facie case of age discrimination based on County's decision not to promote her to the position of Senior Probation Officer because she was unable to show that she was qualified for the promotion, and even assuming she were so qualified, the probation officer's age discrimination claims would fail as a matter of law as she presented absolutely no evidence to support her claim that the County's failure to promote her occurred under circumstances giving rise to an inference of age discrimination. Kearney v County of Rockland, 373 F. Supp. 2d 434, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11956 (S.D.N.Y. 2005), aff'd, 185 Fed. Appx. 68, 2006 U.S. App. LEXIS 14670 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2006).

In an action in which a former employee filed suit against her former employer alleging violations of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, and the New York City Human Rights Law, New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107, the employer was granted summary judgment on the employee's claims that ther employer failed to promote her or rehire her because she was a woman; for all three employment decisions, the employer offered the legitimate, non-discriminatory reason that the decisionmakers had prior experience with the men they promoted, were comfortable working with them and lacked first-hand experience with the employee. Giannone v Deutsche Bank Sec., Inc., 392 F. Supp. 2d 576, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20493 (S.D.N.Y. 2005).

Where an employee claimed that an employer violated 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e-2(a)(1) of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000 et seq., the Civil Rights Act of 1866, 42 U.S.C.S. § 1981, and the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., by denying the employee's request to have her Level 5 executive secretary position reclassified as a Level 6 senior executive secretary position, the employer was entitled to summary judgment on the employee's racial discrimination claims because (1) the employee did not meet the criteria set forth in a union contract insofar as she did not directly report to a dean and (2) there was no evidence that the criteria for the Level 6 position were developed in bad faith or applied inconsistently. Bush v Fordham Univ., 452 F. Supp. 2d 394, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 69510 (S.D.N.Y. 2006).

Employee one failed, in interrogatory responses, deposition testimony, or in response to the instant motion, to identify any position or promotion which he sought and was denied. Wright v Eastman Kodak Co., 550 F. Supp. 2d 371, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 33509 (W.D.N.Y. 2008), aff'd, 328 Fed. Appx. 738, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 15647 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2009).

As the employee filed her claims with the Human Rights Division on February 23, 2004 and was issued a right to sue letter on April 30, 2004, all events taking place before May 28, 2001 were time barred for purposes of the the employee's New York State failure to promote claims; however, earlier activities could be considered for the purposes of the hostile environment claims. Further, evidence of earlier promotion denials could constitute relevant background evidence in support of a timely claim and because the employee asked to be considered for a promotion, at least once during the limitations period—her last request made to the sheriff was on September 19, 2003—her failure to promote claims were not barred in their entirety. Anderson v Nassau County Dep't of Corr., 558 F. Supp. 2d 283, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21774 (E.D.N.Y. 2008).

Employee's claims of race discrimination under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 failed at the prima facie stage for lack of evidence of discriminatory intent where the evidence showed that in denying the employee's request for placement in more advanced positions, the county human rights commission for which the employee worked relied on requisite job qualifications, which the employee did not possess. Russell v County of Nassau, 696 F. Supp. 2d 213, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14018 (E.D.N.Y. 2010).

Employee failed to satisfy her de minimis burden to establish a prima facie disparate treatment case of race, gender, or age discrimination based on her employer's alleged failure to promote her to a permanent letterer position with the City of New York because she did not satisfy the requirements for permanent competitive appointment to the civil service letterer position and, as a matter of New York law, was not "qualified" for the position. Hall v N.Y. City DOT, 701 F. Supp. 2d 318, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 31077 (E.D.N.Y. 2010).

Complainant's failure to receive promotion to associate professor did not constitute unlawful retaliation for filing previous complaints with Division of Human Rights where he was denied promotion for having failed to meet standards contained in parties' collective bargaining agreement as to any significant community activities or college service, same reasons that he was not promoted in preceding years. 2000 Order Comm HR No. 5-E-O-86-111682-E.

Complainant failed to show that respondent New York City Transit Authority was motivated by race in selecting line mechanics for provisional appointment to fill vacancies for "line supervisor" in its maintenance department, where list of eligible candidates was based strictly on employment seniority, complainant was 26th applicant on eligible list, and blacks were included in top 25 applicants who were trained and appointed provisionally; why respondent would not "grandfather" in complainant after he successfully completed training, when they had discretion to do so, was beyond scope of review. 2000 Order Comm HR No. 1D-E-R-88-132133E.

63. Demotion

Employee's demotion from probationary assistant station supervisor to railroad clerk did not violate antidiscrimination proscriptions of Human Rights Law where his heart condition prevented him from engaging in excessive stair climbing or other types of physical exertion required by his probationary position, so that he could not perform his duties in reasonable manner; thus, employee was not disabled within meaning of statute and was not protected by its provisions. Miller v Ravitch, 130 A.D.2d 579, 515 N.Y.S.2d 518, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 46579 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 610, 522 N.Y.S.2d 110, 516 N.E.2d 1223, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19330 (N.Y. 1987).

Even if reason for reduction of petitioner from rank of deputy inspector to rank of captain was police commissioner's belief that petitioner had been on his job too long, it did not follow that petitioner was being discriminated against because of his age. Foran v Cawley, 77 Misc. 2d 809, 354 N.Y.S.2d 757, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1233 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1973).

Demoted 60-year-old maintenance supervisor at bottling/canning facility establishes prima facie case of age discrimination in violation of CLS Exec Law § 296, where supervisor managed maintenance functions of plant successfully for 16 years before arrival of new plant manager in 1987, he was replaced by 35-year-old, and he submits evidence to effect that new manager wanted "new 'blood' for maintenance department" and complained about numbers of older men in maintenance department at plant, because supervisor raised triable issue as to pretextual nature of his demotion to technician for poor performance. Gallaway v Curtice-Burns Foods, Inc., 806 F. Supp. 28, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20582 (W.D.N.Y. 1992).

Assistant director's retaliation claim under Exec § 296 is dismissed with leave to amend, where sole protected activity upon which she relies is memorandum to employer dated June 5, 1995 supporting her mother's assertion of disabilities and right to pursue claim of discrimination based on disabilities, because she was informed of temporary transfer of which she complains on May 30, 1995, destroying causal nexus between alleged protected activity and adverse employment action, but possibility exists that protected activity in form of oral complaints regarding her mother's treatment occurred earlier than May 30, 1995. Sacay v Research Found., 44 F. Supp. 2d 505, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6324 (E.D.N.Y. 1999).

Demoted African-American bus operator's claim of race discrimination and retaliation in violation of Exec § 296 may proceed, where he has shown that he was demoted despite his qualification for job after being subjected to what he claims was hostile work environment and immediately after sending written complaint of harassment to employer's vice-president, and he presents affidavit of union business agent that white supervisors were not demoted for making payroll errors similar to errors for which he was demoted, because he has made sufficient showing of discrimination and pretext to defeat summary judgment. Morris v CNY Centro, Inc., 99 F. Supp. 2d 241, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8650 (N.D.N.Y. 2000).

64. Adverse employment action

Employee's discrimination claims are properly dismissed for lack of allegations sufficient to show at least one adverse employment action or at least one discrete act contributing to a hostile work environment within the limitations period. Belle v Zelmanowicz, 305 A.D.2d 272, 761 N.Y.S.2d 26, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5705 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2003).

Only purported acts of discrimination or retaliation alleged to have occurred within the three-year limitations period were a false offer of a generous retirement package intended to dissuade the employee from filing a discrimination claim, the lack of a pay raise, and utterance of racial epithets; those allegations, concerning the retirement offer and plaintiff's salary, did not show the requisite adverse change in the employee's employment. Belle v Zelmanowicz, 305 A.D.2d 272, 761 N.Y.S.2d 26, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5705 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2003).

Retired judge failed to allege employment discrimination under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 with respect to his reassignment because he did demonstrate any adverse employment action under § 296(1)(a) as his reassignment did not involve a demotion or a decrease in salary among other things. Ponterio v Kaye, 25 A.D.3d 865, 808 N.Y.S.2d 439, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 48 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 6 N.Y.3d 714, 816 N.Y.S.2d 750, 849 N.E.2d 973, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 1298 (N.Y. 2006).

University was entitled to summary judgment in a former employee's discrimination claims because the university demonstrated a legitimate nondiscriminatory reason why the employee's part-time darkroom lab manager and photography adjunct teaching positions were eliminated, citing budget cuts and that the duties of a full-time employee overlapped significantly with most of the employee's duties as part-time lab manager, and, in turn, the employee failed to raise an inference of pretext. Abe v New York Univ., 169 A.D.3d 445, 94 N.Y.S.3d 17, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 968 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2019).

None of the actions identified by the employee constituted a materially adverse change in the terms and conditions of employment under the New York State Human Rights Law, as they did not involve any demotion, decrease in salary, loss of privilege, diminution of responsibilities, or loss of benefits. Golston-Green v City of New York, 184 A.D.3d 24, 123 N.Y.S.3d 656, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2870 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2020).

Public policy considerations were violated by an arbitrator's finding that an openly gay librarian engaged in inappropriate touching when his actions, i.e. touching, whispering and standing silently next to the students, were the same as the heterosexual female librarian and touching students and whispering in their ear were acceptable practices to maintain order in the library; thus, there was no rational basis for such a finding, especially given his history of 20 years of exemplary service. Asch v New York City Board/Department of Educ., 927 N.Y.S.2d 836, 32 Misc. 3d 886, 2011 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3104 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2011), rev'd, 104 A.D.3d 415, 960 N.Y.S.2d 106, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1314 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2013).

Summary judgment dismissing professors' age discrimination claims against a university should have been granted because (1) a professor never sought research grants or assistants that were allegedly denied, and nondiscriminatory reasons supported the denials that occurred as to other professors, (2) the professors were allowed to teach overload and summer courses, contrary to the professors' claim, (3) the record contradicted a professor's claimed denial of a chance to teach graduate courses, which, in any event, was not an adverse employment action, under the circumstances, (4) nothing showed the professors received unfavorable course schedules, (5) barring a professor's continued service as department chair was not discriminatory, as it was pursuant to the university's term limits, and (6) the record did not support a professor's retaliation claim, so nothing showed the professors suffered an adverse employment action. Furfero v St. John's Univ., 94 A.D.3d 695, 941 N.Y.S.2d 639, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2408 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2012).

In this NYCHRL and NYSHRL action, employer's motion to dismiss the employee's discrimination claim pursuant to her caregiver status was denied where the employee alleged that the employer made "grossly inappropriate and objectively hurtful statements" related to the employee's husband's health. Palmer v Cook, 65 Misc. 3d 374, 108 N.Y.S.3d 297, 2019 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4283 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), dismissed, in part, 64 Misc. 3d 1222(A), 117 N.Y.S.3d 469, 2019 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4286 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2019), dismissed, in part, 64 Misc. 3d 1222(A), 117 N.Y.S.3d 469, 2019 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4301 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2019).

District court applied an incorrect standard to employees' retaliation claims against a supervisor, as the employees were not required to show a meaningful change in the terms and conditions of their employment in order to establish an adverse employment action. The employees offered sufficient evidence to survive summary judgment as to a claim of workplace sabotage and as to several punitive scheduling claims, as those alleged actions could well have dissuaded a reasonable worker from making or supporting a charge of discrimination. Hicks v Baines, 593 F.3d 159, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 2146 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2010).

Given the jury's finding, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the City attorney was motivated to retaliate against the employee because of her protected activity in making complaints of discrimination, the district court would not have been free to make a finding that the attorney proved by a preponderance of the evidence that he did not acted in bad faith; accordingly, the attorney did not establish his entitlement to qualified immunity with respect to the employee's claim that he retaliated against her in violation of the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq. Lore v City of Syracuse, 670 F.3d 127, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 1954 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2012).

Written reprimand, coupled with reduction in job responsibilities, ostracization, and prevention of teacher from chaperoning school trip, constituted "adverse employment action" for purposes of § 1983 and Exec § 296(6). Beattie v Guilderland Cent. Sch. Dist., 124 F. Supp. 2d 802, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18269 (N.D.N.Y. 2000).

Teacher's retaliation claim truly faltered on the two elements of an adverse employment action and a causal connection between his complaints and the adverse action. His transfers to and from various schools could not be considered adverse because there was no showing that plaintiff lost some tangible job benefits such as compensation, terms, conditions or privileges of employment. Murphy v Bd. of Educ., 273 F. Supp. 2d 292, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12608 (W.D.N.Y. 2003), aff'd, 106 Fed. Appx. 746, 2004 U.S. App. LEXIS 15544 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2004).

Employer was entitled to summary judgment on an employee's retaliation claims involving a change in job title brought pursuant to Title VII of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the New York State Human Rights Law, and 42 U.S.C.S. § 1981 because a change in job title without any change in duties, compensation, benefits, or reporting structure was not an adverse employment action. Mitchell v Am. Online, 286 F. Supp. 2d 325, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18410 (S.D.N.Y. 2003).

Probation officer's involuntary reassignment did not constitute an actionable adverse employment action for purposes of her age discrimination claims because her reassignment was not "tantamount to a demotion" as she failed to proffer any evidence demonstrating that her reassignment resulted in a change in her job responsibilities "so significant as to constitute a setback" to her career, or that her chances for promotion were in any way affected by her reassignment. Kearney v County of Rockland, 373 F. Supp. 2d 434, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11956 (S.D.N.Y. 2005), aff'd, 185 Fed. Appx. 68, 2006 U.S. App. LEXIS 14670 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2006).

Former employee sufficiently alleged that her conditions of work were affected and that the action was within the ambit of the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y, Exec. Law § 296 et seq., by claiming that the harassing and discriminatory conduct made her job in New York more difficult to perform. Curto v Med. World Communs., Inc., 388 F. Supp. 2d 101, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27088 (E.D.N.Y. 2005).

Motion to dismiss an employee's claim for retaliation, which was brought pursuant to violation of 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e-3 and N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(e), was granted for failure to state a claim for relief because: the employee's allegations that negative elements of her performance review did not constitute adverse action; her allegations of diminished secretarial functions failed to establish that the work reductions were sufficiently adverse; and, she did not complain about the reduction in responsibilities for over two years, and she was not claiming that any such adverse treatment was currently being imposed. Patane v Clark, 435 F. Supp. 2d 306, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 42581 (S.D.N.Y. 2006), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 508 F.3d 106, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 27391 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2007).

Employee failed to establish a prima facie retaliation case, because he has not shown a causal connection between his protected activities and the asserted adverse action—the employee failed to show temporal proximity since the observed rides he complained of did not even begin until more than four months after he filed his federal lawsuit; casting further doubt on the employee's attempts to establish a causal connection was evidence of the employee's history of job infractions and customer complaints. Moreover, neutral arbitrators upheld each of the two suspensions—one involving a collision with a light pole, among other infractions, and the other an incident where the employee closed the doors of his bus on a passenger's neck. George v New York City Transit Auth., 496 F. Supp. 2d 231, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 51638 (E.D.N.Y. 2007).

Public school teacher's N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(e) retaliation claim failed because the teacher alleged that he was retaliated against for assisting a coworker with filing a sexual harassment complaint against their supervisor but failed to state was form this retaliation took. Pearson v Bd. of Educ., 499 F. Supp. 2d 575, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 59244 (S.D.N.Y. 2007).

In a former employee's race discrimination lawsuit against his former employer, a state university, and several professors and administrators, under the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, most of the employee's claims based on discrete incidents failed because they did not constitute adverse employment actions, particularly the employee's claims regarding the failure to appoint him to a certain committee, giving him a used computer, controlling his administrative assistant, requiring presentation of a complete grant package, and the initial denial of a paid research assistant and other administrative assistance. Whaley v City Univ. of N.Y., 555 F. Supp. 2d 381, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35156 (S.D.N.Y. 2008).

Although the sexually-tinged remarks directed at the employee, standing alone, would likely not withstand a motion for summary judgment, when they were combined with her account of disparate treatment, failure to promote, and inappropriate discipline, there was a triable issue of fact as to whether her treatment was severe and pervasive; inter alia, the employee claimed she was the target of ten sexually charged statements made by superiors and the presence of superiors, she observed and was subjected to more burdensome requirements for medical leave and time accounting than her male counterparts, the use of her county vehicle was limited whereas use was not limited for male officers, and she was never considered for a promotion despite having attained the requisite two years of experience while the list created from the results of the June 2000 lieutenant's exam remained active. That the employee's claims raised a triable issue for a jury was further bolstered by the fact that both the alleged harassment and discrimination occurred at the hands of her superiors Anderson v Nassau County Dep't of Corr., 558 F. Supp. 2d 283, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21774 (E.D.N.Y. 2008).

Because plaintiff employee offered no evidence that he suffered any adverse employment action as a result of the negative evaluations, and no evidence tending to suggest that the negative evaluations were occasioned by his race, ethnic background or religion, he failed to make out a prima facie case of discrimination under state and local as well as federal law. Siddiqi v New York City Health & Hosps. Corp., 572 F. Supp. 2d 353, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 63024 (S.D.N.Y. 2008).

In a female police officer's suit against a city, its police department, and others, alleging gender discrimination, her claim regarding a transfer to the technical operations section failed to show gender discrimination in violation of the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law 296, because the officer failed to show that the transfer resulted in a substantial reduction of her material employment opportunities, and thus, that it constituted an adverse employment action. Lore v City of Syracuse, 583 F. Supp. 2d 345, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 89484 (N.D.N.Y. 2008), aff'd in part, vacated in part, 670 F.3d 127, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 1954 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2012).

In a female police officer's suit against a city, its police department, and others, alleging gender discrimination, her claim regarding her removal from a position as a public information officer failed to show gender discrimination in violation of the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law 296, because the officer failed to show any reduction in responsibilities, and thus, that it constituted an adverse employment action. Lore v City of Syracuse, 583 F. Supp. 2d 345, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 89484 (N.D.N.Y. 2008), aff'd in part, vacated in part, 670 F.3d 127, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 1954 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2012).

Employee one claimed that the employer discriminated against her on the basis of her sex by: failing to provide her with a permanent bucket truck assignment and assigning an older bucket truck to her; assigning her to perform two-man jobs alone and instructing her co-workers not to assist her; failing to provide a women-only bathroom and reprimanding her for using offsite bathrooms; criticizing her work; denying her light duty work; and denying her pay for time off; however, employee one did not offer evidence from which a reasonable jury could find that she suffered an adverse employment action in circumstances giving rise to an inference of discrimination, and her disparate treatment claims all failed. Dauer v Verizon Communs. Inc., 613 F. Supp. 2d 446, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21506 (S.D.N.Y. 2009), vacated, 618 F.3d 112, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 16749 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2010).

Where a refusal to provide equipment significantly interferes with or precludes job performance, or creates unreasonably dangerous conditions, such conduct can constitute an adverse employment action; but where the equipment at issue is more desirable, but the job can be performed without it, the failure to provide the desired equipment does not constitute an adverse employment action. Dauer v Verizon Communs. Inc., 613 F. Supp. 2d 446, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21506 (S.D.N.Y. 2009), vacated, 618 F.3d 112, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 16749 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2010).

Employer's failure to provide same-sex bathrooms is not an adverse employment action. Dauer v Verizon Communs. Inc., 613 F. Supp. 2d 446, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21506 (S.D.N.Y. 2009), vacated, 618 F.3d 112, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 16749 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2010).

African-American doctor's N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 race discrimination claims failed because a letter of reprimand that was issued to him by the director of the emergency physicians company for which he worked did not constitute an adverse employment action where (1) the letter had no impact on the doctor's compensation, benefits, or privileges; (2) the doctor's allegations that the letter "poisoned people against him" were insufficient to establish an adverse employment action because it was the doctor, not the director, who publicized the communications regarding the reprimand letter; and (3) there was no evidence that the doctor's shifts were further decreased as a result of the reprimand letter, and instead, there was evidence that the doctor had requested to work fewer shifts because he was working at two other hospitals. Lawrence v Nyack Emergency Physicians, P.C., 659 F. Supp. 2d 584, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 87386 (S.D.N.Y. 2009), aff'd, 389 Fed. Appx. 54, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 16636 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2010).

Plaintiff employee could not show adverse employment actions as to her claims for employment discrimination under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., 42 U.S.C.S. § 1981, and N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1) because the claims were based on alleged activities which took place after her employment had ended, including failure to provide an appropriate letter of recommendation and blackballing the employee with other prospective employers. Memnon v Clifford Chance US, LLP, 667 F. Supp. 2d 334, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 99936 (S.D.N.Y. 2009).

In a case in which the only claims remaining before the court were a former employee's retaliation claims under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., and the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 290 et seq., and the former employer moved for summary judgment, the former employee could not establish her prima facie case, much less demonstrate an factual issues regarding pretext. The former employee did not allege any adverse employment action following her complaints to her plant manager. Hall v Parker Hannifan Corp., 824 F. Supp. 2d 464, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 108663 (W.D.N.Y. 2009).

Assuming that the employee experienced an adverse employment action as a result of enhanced scrutiny, she failed to present any admissible evidence that non-African-American male coworkers, or coworkers younger than the employee, were also not scrutinized, reprimanded, or written up. Thus, the employee has failed to satisfy her de minimis burden to establish a prima facie disparate treatment case of race, gender, or age discrimination based on her supervisors' alleged excessive scrutiny and reprimands. Hall v N.Y. City DOT, 701 F. Supp. 2d 318, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 31077 (E.D.N.Y. 2010).

Former employee's race and national origin discrimination claims failed because a route reassignment, a written warning, and other alleged actions did not amount to materially adverse employment actions. Polanco v 34th St. P'ship, 724 F. Supp. 2d 420, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 68699 (S.D.N.Y. 2010).

In the absence of any documentary evidence showing that someone substitute taught for an employee, the employer could not establish, as a matter of law, that the temporary decline in the employee's weekly pay was attributable to her having failed to teach a scheduled class; consequently, because the causal relation between the pay decrease and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission claim was disputed, the court was unable to hold, as a matter of law, that the drop in pay was not retaliatory. Butler v N.Y. Health & Racquet Club, 768 F. Supp. 2d 516, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9629 (S.D.N.Y. 2011).

Fifty-eight-year-old Hispanic female former employee of Puerto Rican descent failed to demonstrate discrimination under the New York State Human Rights Law, as none of the alleged actions, including denial of the former employee's request for a hotel overnight stay, giving negative performance evaluations, "micromanaging" the former employee's schedule, and denying the former employee a "work-at-home" day, qualified as adverse employment actions. Costello v New York State Nurses Ass'n, 783 F. Supp. 2d 656, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44211 (S.D.N.Y. 2011).

Employee of a car service did not establish a discrimination claim under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(15), as the service's temporary suspension of the employee after a background check revealed criminal convictions did not constitute an adverse employment action. The suspension was justified by the need to investigate the employee's past convictions, which was anticipated by N.Y. Correct. Law § 752. Fox v Commonwealth Worldwide Chauffeured Transp. of Ny, 865 F. Supp. 2d 257, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 45675 (E.D.N.Y. 2012).

Record contained sufficient evidence for a fact finder to conclude that there was a causal connection between the supervisor's actions and the employee's participation in protected activity; the proximity between the employee's complaint on July 10, 2006, and the Letter of Instruction (LOI) issuance on August 1, 2006—a matter of weeks—was plainly sufficient to satisfy this prong. The timing of the supervisor's discovery of the complaint, moreover, only reinforced the connection—a mere four days before the LOI was issued—such a close temporal connection between the protected activity and the adverse action was sufficient to establish causation. Alvarado v Metro. Transp. Auth., 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 48530 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 30, 2012).

Female employee had plausibly alleged a hostile work environment under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq., and the New York Human Rights Law where her allegations regarding the pornographic snowman cartoon and the "bitch is back" song plausibly suggested a connection between the conduct and her gender, and the pleadings were silent as to whether an anti harassment policy was in place. Seale v Madison Cnty, 929 F. Supp. 2d 51, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 31284 (N.D.N.Y. 2013).

Female employee had not plausibly alleged discrimination, disparate treatment, or retaliation under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 where her change in work schedule did not alter her compensation. Seale v Madison Cnty, 929 F. Supp. 2d 51, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 31284 (N.D.N.Y. 2013).

Court declined to dismiss a female employee's retaliation claim where although she had not alleged any extenuating circumstances in addition to the change in the level of flexibility of her work schedule, she had alleged that the flexibility of being able to work evenings, weekends and holidays was part of the incentives and compensation for her employment, and thus, it was plausible that the change of the location of her office, which eliminated that flexibility, was materially adverse to her. Seale v Madison Cnty, 929 F. Supp. 2d 51, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 31284 (N.D.N.Y. 2013).

65. Slurs and insults

Numerous inquiries by library trustee as to librarian's race, religion and maiden name, by constant harassment of her while she was performing her duties, and the incorporation by him in his charges of a gratuitous, baseless, irrelevant and insulting statement concerning her religious sect and "language background", notwithstanding her extensive educational background and vocational excellence, when examined in aggregate, evidenced a prejudicial and biased attitude and a pattern of discrimination which the Human Rights Law was designed to combat. State Div. of Human Rights v Gorton, 32 A.D.2d 933, 302 N.Y.S.2d 966, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3409 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1969).

Use of ethnic slurs and insults by a coworker or superior without knowledge or acquiescence of employer is not an unlawful discriminatory practice reached by provision of Human Rights Law prohibiting discrimination in compensation, terms, conditions or privileges of employment because of race, creed, color or national origin. State Div. of Human Rights v Henderson, 49 A.D.2d 1026, 375 N.Y.S.2d 497, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11383 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1975).

An isolated insult of an employee by a supervisor is insufficient proof to find that the employer discriminated because of race and color, without evidence that the employer condoned or ratified the use of such language. Thus, an order of the Commissioner of Human Rights finding that an employer had discriminated against an employee because of race and color would be vacated where no evidence had been presented to show that the employer permitted or condoned the racial slur used by the supervisor against the employee in an argument over a work assignment. State Div. of Human Rights v GMC, Fisher Body Div., 78 A.D.2d 1006, 433 N.Y.S.2d 904, 1980 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13783 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1980), aff'd, 54 N.Y.2d 905, 445 N.Y.S.2d 150, 429 N.E.2d 829, 1981 N.Y. LEXIS 3107 (N.Y. 1981).

Determination that petitioner engaged in unlawful discriminatory practice in conditions of complainant's employment was supported by substantial evidence where it was established that manager of store at which complainant worked frequently made derogatory comments about complainant's race, including references that complainant was his "little nigger slave," in presence of customers and complainant's co-workers; compensatory award of $5,000 for mental anguish was not excessive. Broad Elm Auto Centers, Inc. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 159 A.D.2d 978, 552 N.Y.S.2d 763, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3281 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1990).

Commissioner of Division of Human Rights had authority to determine that petitioner engaged in discriminatory practice based on manager's racial slurs, notwithstanding that complainant did not make that specific allegation in his complaint, since (1) elimination of discrimination in provision of basic opportunities is predominant purpose of Human Rights Law, (2) although complainant's testimony regarding racial slurs was in context of charge of unlawful termination, it was also directed at employment relationship between parties, and (3) petitioner could not claim surprise or prejudice from testimony as manager admitted making remarks on several occasions. Broad Elm Auto Centers, Inc. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 159 A.D.2d 978, 552 N.Y.S.2d 763, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3281 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1990).

Parking garage cashier's assertion that employer's vice-president once told her to tighten her bow tie, and that "I don't care if it chokes you" would not support finding of harassment or hostile work environment where she claimed that it occurred only once, and she was not disciplined as result. Engstrom v Kinney Sys., 241 A.D.2d 420, 661 N.Y.S.2d 610, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8153 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 801, 666 N.Y.S.2d 563, 689 N.E.2d 533, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4149 (N.Y. 1997).

In an action, inter alia, to recover damages for discrimination based on sex in violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, etc., there was no evidence that an employee's coworker's isolated remarks and offensive conduct were so severe or pervasive as to permeate the workplace and alter the conditions of the employee's employment. The employee claimed that one of the employee's male coworkers repeatedly referred to the women in the office as "soup chickens" and "peasants," and intentionally punched the employee in the left breast during an argument. Thompson v Lamprecht Transp., 39 A.D.3d 846, 834 N.Y.S.2d 312, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5167 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2007).

Plaintiff's employer and supervisor were entitled to summary judgment dismissing sexual harassment claims because plaintiff was unable to show that supervisor's alleged conduct, even if true, was promoted simply because of her gender, where he made negative gay comments to both men and women, his boorish behavior and inappropriate social skills did not constitute discriminatory harassment, and his touching of plaintiff's shoulders on "several" occasions over 10-day period in small work cubicle did not rise to level of sexual harassment. Baliva v State Farm Mut. Ins. Co., 186 Misc. 2d 254, 718 N.Y.S.2d 144, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 478 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2000), aff'd, 286 A.D.2d 953, 730 N.Y.S.2d 655, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8896 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2001), aff'd, 286 A.D.2d 953, 730 N.Y.S.2d 920, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9016 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2001).

African-American employee did not show that she was constructively discharged from her employment due to racial discrimination as she did not show more than a few isolated incidents or racial enmity, and the occasional racist remarks she alleged did not suffice, even though directed at her, because they did not constitute harassment sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of employment and create an abusive working environment. Forrest v Jewish Guild for the Blind, 309 A.D.2d 546, 765 N.Y.S.2d 326, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10478 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2003), aff'd, 3 N.Y.3d 295, 786 N.Y.S.2d 382, 819 N.E.2d 998, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 3489 (N.Y. 2004).

Supervisor's occasional nastiness did not constitute adverse action disadvantaging former employee for purposes of retaliation claim under Human Rights Law. Van Zant v KLM Royal Dutch Airlines, 80 F.3d 708, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 5687 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1996).

Discrimination claim based on alleged hostile work environment was properly dismissed where sexual harassment that led to hostile work environment was attributable to co-employee, plaintiff complained to employer in accordance with employer's procedures, and employer promptly investigated complaint and dealt with situation by reprimanding (and then terminating) offending co-employee. Van Zant v KLM Royal Dutch Airlines, 80 F.3d 708, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 5687 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1996).

Plaintiff's allegation that her former supervisor created hostile work environment by making sexually lewd and derogatory remarks about her while in her presence stated cause of action under CLS Exec § 296(6), which makes it unlawful to aid, abet, incite, compel or coerce doing of any acts forbidden by Human Rights Law. Storr v Anderson Sch., 919 F. Supp. 144, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3039 (S.D.N.Y. 1996).

Jurisdiction over racially hostile environment claim is sustained, where assembler/tester generally claims he was reassigned to finishing line and ultimately discharged due to his race, and specifically alleges one incident in which co-worker called him "black monkey" and that racial epithets appeared regularly on bathroom walls during his employment, because allegations could state claim under CLS Exec Law § 296. Cooper v Xerox Corp., 994 F. Supp. 429, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1697 (W.D.N.Y. 1998).

African-American female security supervisor's Exec § 296 claim is denied summarily, even though white male manager called her "black bitch" on one occasion, because inability to establish prima facie case under Title VII (42 USCS §§ 2000e et seq.) is fatal to her claims under state law. Khan v Abercrombie & Fitch, Inc., 35 F. Supp. 2d 272, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3808 (E.D.N.Y.), aff'd, 201 F.3d 431, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 36865 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1999).

Puerile and tasteless memoranda, insulting to residents of Arkansas and New Jersey, that were circulated at white employee's office, as well as comment made by co-worker about working with blacks were insufficient, either separately or together, to transform employee's work environment into hostile work environment under Exec Law § 296. Baer v Sprint Long Distance, 60 F. Supp. 2d 209, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12245 (S.D.N.Y. 1999).

Race-based hostile environment claim of Indian information technology architect is denied summarily, even though co-worker made 6 comments over period of 7 months that architect found offensive, because infrequency and lack of severity of alleged discriminatory conduct defeats claim. Kodengada v IBM, 88 F. Supp. 2d 236, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3066 (S.D.N.Y.), aff'd, 242 F.3d 366, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 36563 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2000).

Employees of municipal park service did not aid and abet violation of Exec § 296(1)(a), and similar city code provision, where noose was hung where black complaining employee would see it, he was exposed to poster depicting blacks in negative stereotypical fashion, and fellow employee allegedly once called him "fucking nigger," spat at him, and made obscene gesture, since incidents were too sporadic. McCoy v City of New York, 131 F. Supp. 2d 363, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1534 (E.D.N.Y. 2001).

In a case alleging unlawful termination and hostile work environment due to age, the jury, considering the totality of the evidence, could and did conclude that $80,000 was a reasonable sum for a former employee's pain and suffering caused by defendants, her employer and its executive director. On the evidence, the jury's award for emotional distress did not deviate materially from the maximum compensation found reasonable in other similar cases, and defendants' motion to set aside the verdict or for a new trial on this issue was denied. Gatti v Cmty. Action Agency of Greene County, Inc., 263 F. Supp. 2d 496, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8577 (N.D.N.Y. 2003), aff'd, 86 Fed. Appx. 478, 2004 U.S. App. LEXIS 2036 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2004).

Where an employee alleged that a coworker hissed at him, made offensive comments on two occasions, licked a bagel suggestively, and attempted to kiss the employee, an employer was not liable for creating a hostile work environment because the incidents were not severe or pervasive, the coworker was not in a supervisory position over the employee, and the employer took appropriate remedial action by issuing a warning that stopped the unwanted behavior. Godineaux v Laguardia Airport Marriott Hotel, 460 F. Supp. 2d 413, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 80862 (E.D.N.Y. 2006).

Employee did not merely suffer a few isolated incidents of name-calling, rather, he produced evidence that he was the victim of a persistent barrage of ethnically offensive comments that spiked following the $^{9}/_{11}$ attacks on the World Trade Center as well as one serious physical assault and a reasonable jury could thus find that the employee's working conditions were altered for the worse by the near-constant stream of biased rhetoric punctuated by a physical assault. The employee also showed that material issues of fact existed regarding whether the conduct could be imputed to his employer; given that the coworker was employee's union representative and the employee complained to supervisors about the coworker's own offensive conduct, the employee also raised triable issues of fact as to whether the employer provided the employee with a reasonable avenue for complaints. George v New York City Transit Auth., 496 F. Supp. 2d 231, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 51638 (E.D.N.Y. 2007).

African-American doctor's N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 race discrimination claims failed because there was no evidence that a letter of reprimand that was issued to him by the director of the emergency physicians company for which he worked was motivated by racial animus where (1) a coworker who was not disciplined with regard to the incident was not similarly situated to the doctor because the coworker was a recent medical school graduate and had not spoken with police or other hospital staff during the incident underlying the reprimand letter, which concerned a hysterical patient; and (2) the director's alleged sporadic racial comments before the incident were unconnected by time or date to the reprimand letter and were thus insufficient to support a claim of racial discrimination. Lawrence v Nyack Emergency Physicians, P.C., 659 F. Supp. 2d 584, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 87386 (S.D.N.Y. 2009), aff'd, 389 Fed. Appx. 54, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 16636 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2010).

66. —Interim position

Union had valid nondiscriminatory reason for acquiescing in employer's removal of female from position, furnishing her with interim positions, and then restoring her to original position, precluding claim of gender discrimination under federal law and CLS Exec Law § 296, where actions were taken in response to reduction in force, in accordance with seniority and pursuant to collective bargaining agreement. Szarka v Reynolds Metals Co., 17 F. Supp. 2d 115, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13426 (N.D.N.Y. 1998).

Requiring black deputy to bring in doctor's excuse for taking one sick day from work in violation of union contract, attempting to dock his pay, and asking him to leave did not amount to adverse employment actions as required to establish racial discrimination claim under Exec § 296. Brown v Middaugh, 41 F. Supp. 2d 172, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2225 (N.D.N.Y. 1999).

County police commissioner and county executive were entitled to qualified immunity from liability under Exec § 296 arising from their involvement in adoption and implementation of affirmative action program for county police department, absent evidence that decisions to formulate and implement program were not discretionary or that officials acted in bad faith. Hiller v County of Suffolk, 81 F. Supp. 2d 420, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 743 (E.D.N.Y. 2000).

III. Housing Discrimination

67. In general

Application for enforcement of order establishing discriminatory practices with relation to housing was premature where there was no evidence of noncompliance with said order. Castelluzzo v State Human Rights Appeal Board, 41 A.D.2d 1015, 343 N.Y.S.2d 718, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4437 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1973).

Action to recover damages for unlawful discriminatory practices in housing was properly dismissed as to plaintiffs who were employees of antidiscrimination organization and who had visited defendants' apartment building only as "testers" under pretense of being prospective tenants after others had reportedly been denied accommodations there because of race, since testers conceded that they did not wish to rent apartment and had acted only on behalf of others. Dunn v Fishbein, 123 A.D.2d 659, 507 N.Y.S.2d 29, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 60809 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Jury verdict for defendants in action for housing discrimination based on sexual orientation was supported by evidence that board of directors had valid reasons for not approving plaintiff's housing application, including his admittedly false answers on his application form, his persistent tardiness in paying rent to his present landlord, and his lack of any apparent assets, where plaintiff did not show that those reasons were pretext for discrimination. Fine v Berman, 238 A.D.2d 220, 657 N.Y.S.2d 6, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4080 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1997).

Plaintiffs' housing discrimination claims under 42 USCS §§ 1981 or 3604, and CLS Civ R § 40-c and CLS Exec § 296, were properly dismissed where property was sold to other bidders on terms more favorable to defendants than those then being offered by plaintiffs. Rice v Buie, 259 A.D.2d 360, 687 N.Y.S.2d 52, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2813 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1999).

University's written policy, allowing medical students to live in its housing with fellow students or with their spouses and dependent children, did not discriminate against plaintiffs, unmarried women who were denied permission to live with their life partners in such housing, on basis of marital status in violation of state and city human rights laws (CLS Exec § 296(2-a), (5)(a)(1); NYC Admin Code §§ 8-107(5) and 8-130); further, university's policy did not have disparate impact on homosexuals since it had same impact on non-married, heterosexual medical students as it had on non-married, homosexual medical students. Levin v Yeshiva Univ., 272 A.D.2d 158, 709 N.Y.S.2d 392, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5398 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000), aff'd in part, modified, 96 N.Y.2d 484, 730 N.Y.S.2d 15, 754 N.E.2d 1099, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2016 (N.Y. 2001).

Attorney general was entitled to a permanent injunction prohibiting the landlord from violating West Seneca Fair Housing Code § 71-3 (A) because the landlord had engaged in discrimination based on a person's source of income by refusing to accept housing vouchers under § 8 of the United States Housing Act of 1937. Section 8 vouchers constituted a "source of income" because they were a recurrent benefit, measured in terms of money, that constituted financial gain to the recipient. People v Ivybrooke Equity Enters., LLC, 175 A.D.3d 1000, 107 N.Y.S.3d 248, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6345 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2019).

Nothing in this and the two next succeeding sections states or indicates an intent to reserve to the state exclusive power over discrimination in housing which would preclude local legislation in that field not inconsistent with state laws. New York v

Claflington, Inc., 40 Misc. 2d 547, 243 N.Y.S.2d 437, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1934 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963).

By its enactment of General Municipal Law § 239-s giving New York City concurrent jurisdiction with the State Commission for Human Rights with respect to discrimination in housing, the legislature conclusively demonstrated its intention not to grant exclusive jurisdiction to the state in the matters of discrimination in housing. Feigenblum v Commission on Human Rights, 53 Misc. 2d 360, 278 N.Y.S.2d 652, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1658 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1967).

Provision in order of commission for human rights restraining discrimination in rental of housing accommodations, land or commercial space subject to the law against discrimination would be deleted insofar as it applied to land and commercial space where hearing upon which such order was based since involved no property of such nature. New York State Com. for Human Rights v E. Landau Industries, Inc., 57 Misc. 2d 918, 293 N.Y.S.2d 917, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1200 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1968).

University's housing policy, which required proof of marriage in order for nonstudent spouses to reside in apartments, did not violate provisions of state and city Human Rights Law prohibiting discrimination on basis of marital status, notwithstanding alleged disparate impact on homosexuals who (unlike heterosexual couples) are not allowed to marry their same-sex partners. Levin v Yeshiva Univ., 180 Misc. 2d 829, 691 N.Y.S.2d 280, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 205 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1999).

Likelihood of success of a housing applicant's fair housing claims under the New York State's and City's Human Rights Laws (N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq.; New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-101 et seq.) is the same as the analysis of his claim under the Fair Housing Act, 42 U.S.C.S. § 3601 et seq., as, like the Fair Housing Act, New York State's and City's Human Rights Laws expressly prohibit an owner of a housing accommodation to make any record or inquiry in connection with the prospective purchase, rental or lease of such a housing accommodation which expresses, directly, or indirectly, any limitation, specification, or discrimination as to disability (N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(5)(a)(3); New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(5)(a)(3)). Hirschmann v Hassapoyannes, 811 N.Y.S.2d 870, 11 Misc. 3d 265, 234 N.Y.L.J. 114, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2748 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2005).

While this section makes it an unlawful discriminatory practice to refuse to rent accommodations in multiple dwellings to any person because of race, creed, color or national origin, it gives no specific remedy to a person so discriminated against and he can accordingly seek redress only through the existing procedures contained in this article of the Executive Law. Redd v Zier, 229 N.Y.S.2d 582, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4175 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1962).

In a N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 action, defendants' policy with respect to combining incomes to meet minimum financial qualifications for housing eligibility did not constitute discrimination based on marital status. Rather, defendants' policy was based on the absence of a marital relationship between plaintiffs, which was not unlawful discrimination. Heard v Stratford I Ltd. Partnership, 27 A.D.3d 1152, 811 N.Y.S.2d 841, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3263 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2006).

Claim of sexual harassment states cause of action under state fair housing law, where state courts have recognized cause of action for sexual harassment under employment discrimination laws, and where employment discrimination laws and fair housing law are both part of overall scheme. New York by Abrams v Merlino, 694 F. Supp. 1101, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10461 (S.D.N.Y. 1988).

Tenant's claims that a property rental agency violated N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 by failing to install ramps or widen doorways so as to accommodate the tenant's wheelchair-bound daughter failed because the agency was not obligated to undertake wholly new construction or to modify existing facilities. Reyes v Fairfield Props., 661 F. Supp. 2d 249, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 88328 (E.D.N.Y. 2009).

Tenant's claims that a property rental agency violated N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 by allowing the parking lot of the apartment complex to fall into disrepair and by refusing to allow the tenant a parking spot that was easily accessible to the tenant's wheelchair-bound minor daughter, were viable because such accommodations were considered reasonable and did not involve renovation or construction. Reyes v Fairfield Props., 661 F. Supp. 2d 249, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 88328 (E.D.N.Y. 2009).

68. Constitutionality issues

Provisions of Executive Law Article 15 are constitutional insofar as they authorize Human Rights Commission to effectuate state policy against discrimination in private housing. State Com. for Human Rights v Kennelly, 30 A.D.2d 310, 291 N.Y.S.2d 686, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3427 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), aff'd, 23 N.Y.2d 722, 296 N.Y.S.2d 367, 244 N.E.2d 58, 1968 N.Y. LEXIS 992 (N.Y. 1968).

Provisions of Executive Law Article 15 held constitutional insofar as they authorize Human Rights Commission to effectuate state policy against discrimination in private housing. State Com. for Human Rights v Kennelly, 30 A.D.2d 310, 291 N.Y.S.2d 686, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3427 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), aff'd, 23 N.Y.2d 722, 296 N.Y.S.2d 367, 244 N.E.2d 58, 1968 N.Y. LEXIS 992 (N.Y. 1968).

The statutory exemptions of owner-occupied, two-family houses from the application of the statute prohibiting discrimination in the rental of dwellings is constitutional. Berback v Mangum, 59 Misc. 2d 41, 297 N.Y.S.2d 853, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1741 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), aff'd, 33 A.D.2d 655, 306 N.Y.S.2d 671, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5650 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1969).

Even if § 296(5) of the Executive Law is unconstitutional, this fact alone would not serve to expand the jurisdiction of the Commission of Human Rights to previously exempted property, since the Legislature might well determine these cases are outside the Commission's jurisdiction leaving them for private disposition in suits pursuant to USCS § 1982 of Title 42. Richards v Mangum, 60 Misc. 2d 410, 303 N.Y.S.2d 320, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1370 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1969), rev'd, 35 A.D.2d 124, 314 N.Y.S.2d 512, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3884 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1970).

Tenants of Harlem apartment complex, members of board of directors of tenants' association, and real estate developer whose bid to purchase complex was rejected by plaintiffs could not be held liable under Human Rights Law, CLS Exec § 296, for activities which included sending of letters to potential purchasers and issuing of newsletters expressing their views against sale of complex to white purchaser, since all such activities were constitutionally protected under of freedoms of speech, assembly and association. Delano Village Cos. v Orridge, 147 Misc. 2d 302, 553 N.Y.S.2d 938, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 125 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1990).

State and its agencies, which negotiated lease for residence to provide housing for developmentally disabled persons and decided which individuals to place there, violated due process and equal protection rights of actual occupants of residence by failing to notify them of summary holdover proceeding involving residence. DiScala v Facilities Dev. Corp., 180 Misc. 2d 355, 691 N.Y.S.2d 229, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 689 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1998).

69. Leases, generally

The trial court improperly dismissed a holdover proceeding brought by a landlord to evict a tenant for allegedly violating her lease by allowing a person not a tenant and not part of her immediate family to occupy the apartment with her, where in seeking to enforce the restrictive covenant, the landlord did not discriminate against the tenant on the basis of marital status in violation of Exec Law § 296 or the applicable city human rights law, in that the applicability of the restriction did not depend on the tenant's marital status, but would apply whether the additional resident was male or female. Hudson View Properties v Weiss, 59 N.Y.2d 733, 463 N.Y.S.2d 428, 450 N.E.2d 234, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 3090 (N.Y. 1983).

Where Special Term modified an order of the State Commission on Human Rights by deleting a paragraph requiring certain apartment owners to maintain records for one year showing the number of apartments rented, the number unrented, and as to each vacant apartment the number of rooms, required rental, and names and addresses of accepted and rejected applicants with reasons for rejection, such paragraph was reinstated as being reasonably related to the unlawful act which such owners were found to have committed and as not imposing undue hardship upon them. Kindt v State Com. for Human Rights, 23 A.D.2d 809, 258 N.Y.S.2d 250, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4484 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), aff'd, 16 N.Y.2d 1001, 265 N.Y.S.2d 662, 212 N.E.2d 898, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1001 (N.Y. 1965).

Sufficient evidence supported determination by New York City Commission on Human Rights that sublessor was guilty of discrimination where he had terminated dentist's sublease on ground that dentist provided treatment to persons who were ill with AIDS. Barton v New York City Com. on Human Rights, 151 A.D.2d 258, 542 N.Y.S.2d 176, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7353 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1989).

Landlord's refusal to rent apartment to cohabiting couple was not unlawful discrimination on basis of "marital status" under CLS Exec § 296(5)(a); although landlords are prohibited from discriminating against persons because they are unmarried, landlords may discriminate against persons, married or unmarried, who wish to cohabit with nonspouse. Hoy v Mercado, 266 A.D.2d 803, 698 N.Y.S.2d 384, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11920 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1999).

Based on evidence of a tenant's significant limitations on major life activities and interacting with others, he was disabled within the meaning of the Fair Housing Act and the New York Human Rights Act and established that he was entitled to an emotional support dog in his dog restricted apartment complex under both Acts. Hollandale Apts. & Health Club, LLC v Bonesteel, 173 A.D.3d 55, 100 N.Y.S.3d 711, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3703 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2019).

There is nothing illegal in a landlord discriminating against lawyers as a group, or trying to keep out of his building intelligent persons, aware of their rights, who may give him trouble in the future, or rejecting any prospective tenant because of his or her failure to meet standards of acceptability other than standards which section 296 (subd 5) of the Human Rights Law (Executive Law, art 15) prohibits him from using. Kramarsky v Stahl Management, 92 Misc. 2d 1030, 401 N.Y.S.2d 943, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2630 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1977).

In addition to prohibiting a landowner or other person from refusing to sell, rent, or lease housing accommodations on a discriminatory basis, Exec Law § 296 prohibits a landowner from failing to renew a lease or serving a "notice to cure" for a discriminatory reason after a lease has been signed and, accordingly an unmarried couple who began living together after the commencement of a one-year lease would be granted a preliminary injunction restraining a landlord from evicting them under a clause in the lease which provided that "only a party signing this lease and the spouse and children of that party may use the apartment"; furthermore, the landlord would not be allowed to use a possible technical violation by the couple of the overcrowding provision of the city's Code which did not provide for enforcement of its terms by private persons, to circumvent the purpose of human rights legislation prohibiting discrimination based on marital status. Munroe v 344 East 76th Realty Corp., 113 Misc. 2d 155, 448 N.Y.S.2d 388, 1982 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3262 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1982).

In a holdover proceeding against respondent, who resided for 3 years in the apartment in question with her lover who was the only signatory on the lease, respondent would be entitled to remain in possession after the signatory tenant moved out and the proceeding would be dismissed, notwithstanding that the signatory tenant violated a substantial obligation of the tenancy in permitting the apartment to be occupied by persons other than his immediate family, since it is unlawful for a landlord to seek to evict someone in possession solely on the basis that she was not married to the signatory tenant under Exec Law § 296, which proscribes discrimination in housing on the basis of marital status, in that had the respondent been married to the signatory tenant she would have been allowed to remain in the apartment even if they subsequently became separated and she had not signed the lease. Yorkshire House Associates v Lulkin, 114 Misc. 2d 40, 450 N.Y.S.2d 962, 1982 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3431 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1982).

A "singles only" provision in a residential lease, restricting occupancy of an apartment to only one named tenant, would be violative of public policy of the State of New York as expressed by Exec Law § 296, where the arbitrary enforcement of the "singles only" restriction in such lease would, if the tenant married or chose a life-style with a man without benefit of marriage, subsequent to the inception of the lease term, constitute marital discrimination. Leonedas Realty Corp. v Brodowsky, 115 Misc. 2d 88, 454 N.Y.S.2d 183, 1982 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3635 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1982).

Discrimination in leasing of commercial space, in violation of New York City Administrative Code and Human Rights Law, is affirmative defense to summary holdover proceeding, although discriminatory motive is hard to prove and easy to allege without any factual basis; state may not judicially enforce landlord's bigotry. Elisau Estates v Schrager, 136 Misc. 2d 289, 518 N.Y.S.2d 712, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2426 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1987).

Nonprofit hospital's staff housing lease agreements, which provided for termination of employment and ancillary housing tenancy "without cause," would not be enforced in holdover summary proceedings if tenants were terminated because of their prior revelation of disability due to AIDS, in violation of NYC Admin Code § 8-108 and CLS Exec § 292(21). New York Infirmary - Beekman Downtown Hosp. v Sarris, 154 Misc. 2d 798, 588 N.Y.S.2d 748, 1992 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 393 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1992).

Religious organization, which operated residence for young single working women between ages of 18 and 45 for period not to exceed 4 years, was not barred from enforcing 4-year residency restriction since (1) restriction was permissible to further organization's mission to provide safe haven for women of limited means embarking on new life in city, and (2) although organization had not enforced restriction in past, application forms signed by plaintiffs clearly stated that condition of admission was that length of stay would not exceed 4 years. Priolo v Saint Mary's Home for Working Girls, 157 Misc. 2d 494, 597 N.Y.S.2d 890, 1993 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 144 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1993), modified, aff'd, 207 A.D.2d 664, 616 N.Y.S.2d 36, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8646 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1994).

As the principles of Title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the federal Fair Housing Act, specifically 42 U.S.C.S. § 3604(b), applied under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(5)(a)(2), and a landlord engaged in a course of unwelcome, sexually-offensive behavior against a tenant, the New York State Division of Human Rights' petition pursuant to N.Y. Exec. Law § 298, seeking to enforce an award against the landlord was granted. Matter of State Div. of Human Rights v Stoute, 36 A.D.3d 257, 826 N.Y.S.2d 122, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14350 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

Offer of $6,000 per month renewal lease to operator of small grocery store in New York City was within realm of commercial reasonableness and thus economically rather than racially motivated; accordingly, New York Human Rights Law was inapplicable to action. In re Owens, 30 B.R. 399, 1983 Bankr. LEXIS 6043 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1983).

Evidence that landlord denied sublease application because of proposed subtenant's race supported conclusions that legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason was pretext for housing discrimination and that landlord retaliated against tenant for supporting subtenants, for purpose of claim under CLS Exec Law § 296. Broome v Biondi, 17 F. Supp. 2d 211, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17349 (S.D.N.Y. 1997).

70. —Rent control; stabilization

Division of Human Rights acted arbitrarily and capriciously in dismissing complaint of retiree who had filed waiting-list application for rent-stabilized apartment and who claimed landlord (1) was discriminating against him based on his age, (2) had raised his waiting-list number, and (3) was "warehousing" apartments and not renting to senior citizens in preparation for impending cooperative conversion plan, since division's investigation was inadequate and abbreviated in that after landlord denied allegations without any detail and failed to deliver division-requested roster of senior citizen tenants, division made "no probable cause" determination and dismissed retiree's complaint instead of investigating further. Flinker v State Div. of Human Rights, 123 A.D.2d 578, 507 N.Y.S.2d 12, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 60719 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1986).

A landlord would be awarded judgment of possession of a rent-stablized apartment, where a male tenant, who had been living with an unrelated male friend under a lease which restricted the use of the apartment to the tenant's "immediate family", would be in violation of a substantial obligation of the lease; but issuance of a warrant would be stayed on condition that the tenant's friend vacate the premises within 20 days. Evangelista Associates v Bland, 117 Misc. 2d 558, 458 N.Y.S.2d 996, 1983 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3184 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1983).

Because New York's disparate treatment of heterosexual and same-sex couples did not violate the due process or equal protection provisions of N.Y. Const. art. I, §§ 6, 11, and because a tenant and the tenant's same-sex partner were not spouses under N.Y. Comp. Codes R. & Regs. tit. 9, § 2522.5(g)(1), the Division of Housing and Community Renewal could rationally and lawfully treat them differently than a married couple seeking joint tenancy rights under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(5)(a) and New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(5)(a); therefore, the tenant's petition to compel the division to add the partner to a rent-stabilized lease was dismissed for failing to state a claim upon which relief could be granted. Zagrosik v New York State Div. of Hous. & Cmty. Renewal, 817 N.Y.S.2d 486, 12 Misc. 3d 1076, 2006 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1503 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2006).

71. —Racial discrimination

There is sufficient evidence in the record to support the findings of the Commissioner of the Division of Human Rights that petitioner, in violation of section 296 (subd 5, par [a], cl [1]) of the Human Rights Law, had discriminated against claimant because of his race and color, by refusing to consider him as a prospective tenant for an available apartment, where established facts included the vacancy of the apartment, its preparations for and readiness for rental, the failure to notify the superintendent that the apartment was not to be shown, the communication that it was available at a specified rental, the meeting with the superintendent at the apartment site for the purpose of exhibition, his concern about the key upon seeing the Black prospect, his inquiries of the prospect as to whether the unit did in fact please when the prospect had already indicated enthusiastic acceptance, the failure to halt the prospect's departure to the bank to secure the down payment, the extended wait outside the superintendent's door upon return, the proffered excuse that the apartment was in litigation when in fact it was not and reasonably would not be, the failure to show another vacant apartment of similar size, the lack of proof of any suggestion by the managing agent that such other vacancy existed, the failure to obtain normal background particulars concerning the prospect, the subsequent lease for the same rental, and the dearth of Black tenants in the building; moreover, in view of the strong statutory policy to be effected, the award of compensatory damages should not be disturbed. 300 Gramatan Ave. Associates v State Div. of Human Rights, 45 N.Y.2d 176, 408 N.Y.S.2d 54, 379 N.E.2d 1183, 1978 N.Y. LEXIS 2107 (N.Y. 1978).

Misrepresentation as to the availability of apartments based upon color and racial identity constitutes an unlawful discriminatory practice under this section and is prohibited. Diona v Lomenzo, 26 A.D.2d 473, 275 N.Y.S.2d 663, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2849 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1966).

Order of State Division of Human Rights finding that landlord had improperly denied housing on basis of applicant's race violated state's public policy to insure every individual an equal opportunity for housing insofar as said order required landlord to consider applicants referred by State Division of Human Rights without regard to any waiting list of other applicants. State Div. of Human Rights v Jakoblew, 41 A.D.2d 889, 343 N.Y.S.2d 141, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4732 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1973).

Record supported determination by Commissioner of Human Rights that petitioner violated Human Rights Law, CLS Exec Art 15, by refusing to rent apartment to caucasian respondent because her 2 sons were black, where petitioner, earlier receptive to renting apartment, arranged second meeting so that she could meet children, and expressed reluctance to rent only after such meeting. Moore v State Div. of Human Rights, 154 A.D.2d 823, 546 N.Y.S.2d 487, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12709 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Determination by Division of Human Rights that landlord had discriminated against complainant by refusing to rent apartment to her by reason of her race was supported by evidence that (1) when complainant contacted landlord about apartment, she told him that she was black and he avoided talking with her, and subsequently told her that apartment was not available, (2) when complainant's sister called by telephone about apartment, she was told it was available but when she inquired in person she was told that it was not available, and (3) when complainant's sister asked co-worker to inquire about apartment, she was told it was available. Szpilzinger v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 160 A.D.2d 196, 554 N.Y.S.2d 4, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3680 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 707, 560 N.Y.S.2d 989, 561 N.E.2d 889, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 3041 (N.Y. 1990).

Court annulled Division of Human Rights' determination that respondent unlawfully discriminated in rental of available housing on basis of race and color, where respondent contended that it did not rent townhouse to complainant because it was unaware of her offer and because it intended to sell townhouse and would rent it only as "a last resort," no employee of respondent ever met complainant, there was no evidence that respondent knew that she was black, and there was no evidence that respondent entertained any offers from other persons interested only in renting. State Div. of Human Rights v RHS Mgmt. Corp., 270 A.D.2d 426, 707 N.Y.S.2d 123, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4242 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2000).

A refusal to rent a room in a hotel to a Negro and his white wife constituted racial discrimination against both, and the corporation owning the hotel was liable for the acts of its desk clerk where it did not show that instructions had been given to the clerk not to discriminate racially. Hobson v York Studios, Inc., 145 N.Y.S.2d 162, 208 Misc. 888, 1955 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3300 (N.Y. Mun. Ct. 1955).

Subdivision 5 of this section, added in 1961, extending the discrimination ban to private multiple dwellings, etc., did not become effective until April 11, 1961, and was accordingly inapplicable to a 1955 refusal of accommodations to a Negro woman in a private apartment development outside New York City. Kates v Lefkowitz, 28 Misc. 2d 210, 216 N.Y.S.2d 1014, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2714 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1961).

The amendment of this article, effective July 1, 1955, banning discrimination in renting housing accommodations, extended only to "publicly-assisted housing accommodations" and would not sustain jurisdiction of the Estate Commission Against Discrimination to investigate a complaint by a Negro of refusal to rent her a vacant apartment in a private apartment building. Kates v Lefkowitz, 28 Misc. 2d 210, 216 N.Y.S.2d 1014, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2714 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1961).

Evidence by a complainant attempting to prove racial discrimination as the sole cause of her failure to secure an apartment in the form of elicited testimony designed to show the comparison between the treatment accorded to her and to a white "checker" posing as a prospective tenant was sufficient to support findings of the Commission of illegal discrimination, and those findings, supported by sufficient evidence, were conclusive. Lawrence Gardens, Inc. v State Com. for Human Rights, 53 Misc. 2d 20, 277 N.Y.S.2d 857, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1238 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1966).

A landlord was found in civil contempt for failure to properly obey a court order that he offer certain premises to a tenant, previously discriminated against by reason of race, and that the lease offered be the "in the standard form." It was provided the landlord could purge himself of contempt by complying with all provisions of the original order. State Com. for Human Rights v Kennelly, 59 Misc. 2d 278, 299 N.Y.S.2d 342, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1651 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1969).

In summary holdover proceeding, tenant failed to show discrimination in leasing in violation of CLS Exec § 296, based on landlord's changeover from residential tenants of various races to commercial tenants of Chinese heritage, since landlord was able to charge higher rent for commercial tenants than residential tenants regardless of their race, and changeover to commercial tenants complied with certificate of occupancy; furthermore, landlord's refusal to renew leases of white-owned bar and liquor store did not prove discrimination where other white merchants' leases were renewed, since landlord was apparently motivated by permissible prejudice against alcohol, not impermissible prejudice against westerners. Elisau Estates v Schrager, 136 Misc. 2d 289, 518 N.Y.S.2d 712, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2426 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1987).

72. Public housing

Evidence that applicant for public housing accommodations was likely to be a disruptive and disorderly tenant who would be a potential threat to the peace and tranquility of the elderly and disabled tenants with whom she would reside sufficiently established that the New York Housing Authority did not violate the Executive Law by denying the applicant eligibility for public housing because she suffered from a mental disability and that the Housing Authority did not act arbitrarily or discriminatorily in denying eligibility to the applicant. Though, under the Executive Law provision prohibiting the managing agent of a publicly assisted housing accommodation from denying public housing to an applicant because such person suffers a disability, a determination of ineligibility for public housing accommodations grounded solely on mental disability would constitute an unlawful discriminatory practice, statute did not mean that a mentally disabled person could under no circumstances be denied eligibility; statute could not be used to insulate such an applicant from disqualification for public housing based on a valid reason. New York City Housing Authority Tenant Selection Div. v State Human Rights Appeal Board, 59 A.D.2d 742, 398 N.Y.S.2d 562, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13750 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1977).

On a complaint alleging racial discrimination against a nonprofit housing corporation operated to provide moderately priced housing for professionals in the fine arts, the State Human Rights Division's dismissal of the complaint was proper where the division appeared to have appropriately exercised its legislatively endowed discretion to weigh and assess the conduct of the parties and reached its conclusion based on what was fairly inferable from the facts. The guidelines for screening an apartment applicant called for submission of a resume and references from three persons to demonstrate professional standing and provided that the owning of a substantial part of the applicant's income in an artistic field would be considered strong evidence of professional standing and applicant's evidence of professional earnings told approximately $400 for a eight-year period and revealed on his application for residence no current income from an artistic field and specified social services as his source of income from other sources. Westbeth Corp. Housing Dev. Fund Co. v New York State Human Rights Appeal Bd. Westbeth Corp. Housing Dev. Fund Co. v New York State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 93 A.D.2d 756, 461 N.Y.S.2d 313, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17593 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1983).

A public housing authority's policy of restricting tenancies of residual single-person occupancies to people 50 years of age and older would not constitute a discriminatory practice under Exec Law § 296(2-a) as applied to a 28-year-old tenant who was evicted by the authority, since the tenant was not denied occupancy due to his age, but rather because he was a single-person occupant, and since the authority's election not to enforce the prohibition of residual single-person occupancies against tenants in its housing project who were 50 years of age and older did not constitute the use of a criterion or classification for tenancy based on age, but was merely a means of avoiding the imposition of undue hardship on older tenants. Mt. Vernon Housing Authority v Jordan, 120 Misc. 2d 670, 466 N.Y.S.2d 546, 1982 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4117 (N.Y. City Ct. 1982), aff'd, 124 Misc. 2d 886, 480 N.Y.S.2d 72, 1984 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3268 (N.Y. App. Term 1984).

It was premature to bring proceeding to compel New York City Housing Authority (NYCHA) to accept and place petitioner in public housing or, alternatively, to order NYCHA to process petitioner's application on priority basis without regard to his wife's medical disability, since it is incumbent on NYCHA to make investigation of people seeking admittance to project, and while NYCHA could not exclude petitioner's family because petitioner's wife suffered from mental illness, it would be obligated to exclude her if her conduct would cause substantial disturbance to other project tenants; such inquiry is not equivalent to exclusion. Custodio v Popolizio, 139 Misc. 2d 391, 527 N.Y.S.2d 333, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2821 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1987), aff'd, 138 A.D.2d 270, 526 N.Y.S.2d 392, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2913 (N.Y. 73. Cooperatives/condominiums

State Division of Human Rights determination that the management of a federally financed cooperative apartment building had not unlawfully discriminated against two single women, who had been denied the right to purchase shares for an apartment they occupied as sublessees, would be remanded where the Division's initial investigation was one-sided and abbreviated, and its determination constituted an arbitrary and capricious exercise of its discretion in that the women made out at least a preliminary showing of age, sex or marital status discrimination, particularly in view of the management's failure to dispute the women's factual allegations, and the management's repeated attempts to use patently erroneous grounds for denying the women's application to purchase shares. Bachman v State Div. of Human Rights, 104 A.D.2d 111, 481 N.Y.S.2d 858, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 20216 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1984).

In action for specific performance of contract wherein cooperative corporation agreed to amend its offering plan and proprietary lease to allow 2 doctors (who already resided in cooperative apartments) to purchase additional unit for use as medical office, and to "cooperate" with doctors in obtaining amended certificate of occupancy, doctors were entitled to interim injunctive relief preventing corporation's attempted cancellation of contract, based on doctors' showing of (1) likelihood of success on merits, since corporation refused to cooperate only after learning that doctors treated patients suffering from acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS), (2) irreparable injury absent grant of injunctive relief, in that doctors would be prevented from having office in building where they lived if they were relegated to monetary damages, and (3) equities in favor of granting relief, in view of public policy as codified by CLS Exec § 296 which makes it unlawful to refuse to sell commercial space to anyone because premises will be used in furnishing of facilities or services to disabled. Seitzman v Hudson River Associates, 126 A.D.2d 211, 513 N.Y.S.2d 148, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 41216 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1987).

Defendant sellers of cooperative unit were entitled to summary judgment dismissing housing discrimination claims for lack of evidence that their actions were participating or contributing cause of cooperative board's withholding of consent to plaintiff's purchase application. Moustakas v Noble, 259 A.D.2d 602, 686 N.Y.S.2d 778, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2498 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. dismissed, 93 N.Y.2d 958, 694 N.Y.S.2d 635, 716 N.E.2d 700, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1406 (N.Y. 1999).

Housing discrimination claim under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(5) was properly dismissed because there was no evidence that either an attorney or an agent was involved in the determination to turn down a buyer's application to buy an apartment, and thus, there was no basis for a discrimination claim; there was no evidence raising an inference of discrimination. Sayeh v 66 Madison Ave. Apt. Corp., 73 A.D.3d 459, 901 N.Y.S.2d 26, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3842 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2010).

While the cooperative owners failed to state claims for breach of a tenant corporation's fiduciary duties or against its directors individually, they stated causes of action for housing discrimination under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(5)(a)(2) and 42 U.S.C.S. § 3601 et seq., and for punitive damages, which were limited to $10,000 by N.Y. Exec. Law § 297(4)(c)(iv), (9). Stalker v Stewart Tenants Corp., 93 A.D.3d 550, 940 N.Y.S.2d 600, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2110 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2012).

Commissioner of the New York State Division of Human Rights properly determined that a co-op unlawfully discriminated against a tenant on the basis of disability when it would not allow her to keep an emotional support dog in her apartment because there was substantial evidence to conclude that the tenant suffered from generalized anxiety disorder, an impairment demonstrable by medically accepted clinical or laboratory diagnostic techniques, and that she required the use of a companion dog to use and enjoy her apartment; there was sufficient evidence that having a dog would affirmatively enhance her quality of life by ameliorating the effects of her disability, thus demonstrating necessity within the meaning of the state human rights law. Matter of 1 Toms Point Lane Corp. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 176 A.D.3d 930, 112 N.Y.S.3d 250, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7404 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2019).

Because a buyer's failure to come forward with information concerning a disability and need for an accommodation was not a valid basis for withdrawing approval of a purchase application, the cooperative board's withdrawal of its initial approval violated New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-101, et seq., N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, et seq., and 42 U.S.C.S. § 3604. Hirschmann v Hassapoyannes, 843 N.Y.S.2d 778, 16 Misc. 3d 1014, 237 N.Y.L.J. 121, 2007 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 6642 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2007), aff'd, 52 A.D.3d 221, 859 N.Y.S.2d 150, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4787 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2008).

Apartments' N.Y. C.P.L.R. art. 78 action was granted, because an agency erred in determining that a resident in a cooperative apartment could keep a dog as a reasonable accommodation for her son's depression pursuant to N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 (2004), as the resident failed to show that a dog was required for the son's use and enjoyment of the apartment. One Overlook Ave. Corp. v N.Y. State Div. of Human Rights, 8 A.D.3d 286, 777 N.Y.S.2d 696, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7458 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2004), app. denied, 5 N.Y.3d 714, 806 N.Y.S.2d 165, 840 N.E.2d 134, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 2765 (N.Y. 2005).

Claim by a condominium unit owner that a condominium board acted in a discriminatory manner, in violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, towards him due to his national origin when he had a prospective contract to sell his unit, such that the board interfered with the sale thereof, survived a summary judgment dismissal motion because unlawful discrimination was sufficiently culpable to support a claim of interference with prospective economic relations. 30 CPS, LLC v Board of Mgrs. of Cent. Park S. Med. Condominium, 874 N.Y.S.2d 879, 23 Misc. 3d 1024, 2009 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 388 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2009).

Co-op resident could bring discrimination and retaliation claims against a co-op director; N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 and New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107 provided for individual liability without an exemption for corporate directors, and discriminatory conduct was not protected by the business judgment rule. Fletcher v Dakota, Inc., 99 A.D.3d 43, 948 N.Y.S.2d 263, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5245 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2012).

Plaintiffs, persons of Irish descent, fail to establish cause of action against housing co-operative and its president under CLS Exec L § 296(5)(a) based on allegation that defendants discriminated against plaintiffs in refusing to approve transfer of shares in co-operative to plaintiffs, since defendant's intent was not discriminatory but instead was based on subjective, non-discriminatory reasons in that decision was made upon subjective evaluation of unknown kind of tenancy which would result as consequence of one plaintiff's vague and unresponsive answers during interview with defendant. Murphy v 253 Garth Tenants Corp., 579 F. Supp. 1150, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13275 (S.D.N.Y. 1983).

74. Discrimination by real estate brokers

Secretary of State exceeded her authority when, in response to community complaints regarding excessive solicitation and aggressive real estate activities, she promulgated order interdicting real estate brokers and salespersons from soliciting for sale residential realty in eastern Bronx County, despite legislatively-declared policy to ban blockbusting and secretary's power to discipline licensees who demonstrate "untrustworthiness," since order indicted all broker-initiated solicitation, not just illegal solicitation as targeted by legislature. Campagna v Shaffer, 73 N.Y.2d 237, 538 N.Y.S.2d 933, 536 N.E.2d 368, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 4953 (N.Y. 1989).

A real estate broker's license was properly revoked for untrustworthiness, where it was proven he had employed a salesman who misrepresented the availability of apartments to deny housing to Negroes and improperly collected a fee from persons desiring apartments which was not refunded when no housing was secured. Rejecting the contention that the Secretary of State had not been delegated the power to deal with discriminatory acts, because this power had been vested in the State Commission for Human Rights, the court held the fact that certain actions may be expressly prohibited by one branch of law does not preclude the consideration of those acts to determine if a person is to be trusted in dealing with the general public. Diona v Lomenzo, 26 A.D.2d 473, 275 N.Y.S.2d 663, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2849 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1966).

Article 15 of the Executive Law does not prevent the Department of State from disciplining real estate brokers and salesmen under Real Property Law § 441-c by reason of discriminatory practices in refusing to rent or sell housing accommodations to persons of the Negro race, notwithstanding that such department has not promulgated an express rule relating to such discriminatory practices. Kamper v Department of State, 26 A.D.2d 697, 272 N.Y.S.2d 808, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3575 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1966), aff'd, 22 N.Y.2d 690, 291 N.Y.S.2d 804, 238 N.E.2d 914, 1968 N.Y. LEXIS 1379 (N.Y. 1968).

Petitioner committed unlawful discriminatory practice by refusing to sell piece of real property to complainant because of her race; realtor who represented complainant, and who was also black, was also victim of petitioner's discrimination insofar as petitioner refused to deal with realtor because of complainant's race. Feggoudakis v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 230 A.D.2d 739, 646 N.Y.S.2d 175, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8219 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

Where a real estate broker had shown the Negro complainant one unsatisfactory house, and represented no other homes in complainant's price range were listed with her and that she would contact complainant if such houses became available, evidence that, without contacting complainant, six days later the broker had shown six houses in the discussed price range to a white prospective buyer was sufficient to constitute proof of unlawful discriminatory practices. Mid Village Realty, Inc. v New York State Com. for Human Rights, 59 Misc. 2d 651, 300 N.Y.S.2d 483, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1520 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1969), aff'd, 34 A.D.2d 794, 311 N.Y.S.2d 977, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4920 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1970).

Where prospective home buyers, who were African-American, sued for racial discrimination under the Fair Housing Act, 42 U.S.C.S. § 3601 et seq., 42 U.S.C.S. §§ 1981 and 1982, and N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(5)(a)(1), after a property was sold to a white purchaser, issues of fact existed as to whether the realtor departed from local custom by failing to inform the buyers that the homeowners received a better offer from the white purchaser, and if so, whether such a departure was based on racial grounds; accordingly, the appellate court reversed the district court's grant of summary judgment in favor of the realtor. Mitchell v Shane, 350 F.3d 39, 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 23322 (2d Cir. 2003).

Plaintiff prospective home purchasers were not entitled to a preliminary injunction against homeowners, a real estate broker, and a real estate agent, as it was unlikely they would succeed on the merits of their claims that they were denied the opportunity to purchase a home because of their race; plaintiffs did not qualify for the property at the time of contracting and were given several opportunities to procure the home, and the agent took measures to keep the deal alive. Mitchell v Century 21 Rustic Realty, 233 F. Supp. 2d 418, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21585 (E.D.N.Y. 2002).

75. Zoning as discriminatory

Since regulation of occupancy by reason of age is inherent in very concept of planned housing for the elderly and is rationally related to achievement of this laudatory purpose, and since drawing line at age 55, although necessarily arbitrary, was nonetheless reasonable, zoning ordinance limiting occupancy in planned retirement community to persons over 55 did not violate equal protection guaranty. Campbell v Barraud, 58 A.D.2d 570, 394 N.Y.S.2d 909, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12589 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1977).

A zoning ordinance which, with a limited exception for two persons 62 years of age or over, restricted occupancy of one-family homes to persons related by blood, marriage or adoption, did not conflict with Exec Law § 296(5), since a restriction against occupancy by persons who have no familial relationship does not constitute illegal discrimination based on "marital status." McMinn v Oyster Bay, 105 A.D.2d 46, 482 N.Y.S.2d 773, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 20677 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1984), aff'd, 66 N.Y.2d 544, 498 N.Y.S.2d 128, 488 N.E.2d 1240, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 17940 (N.Y. 1985).

Rejection of plaintiff's multi-purpose subdivision development plan and adoption of competing developer's plan, by town board and town planning board, did not violate due process or equal protection, even though competing developer's attorney was married to member of town board, where (1) even if plaintiff and competing developer were similarly situated, plaintiff did not prove that its application was maliciously singled out with intent to injure plaintiff, (2) competing developer's plan met town's legitimate interest in providing senior citizen housing without duplex units, and (3) plaintiff had no vested interest in subject property's existing zoning classification, which town board changed to accommodate competing developer's plan. Masi Mgmt., Inc. v Town of Ogden, 273 A.D.2d 837, 709 N.Y.S.2d 734, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6737 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000).

In action against town, town board, and town planning board for discrimination in rejection of plaintiff's multi-purpose subdivision development plan and adoption of competing developer's plan, there was no precedent for applying protection of CLS NY Const Art I § 1 to land use regulations, and Appellate Division would not do so. Masi Mgmt., Inc. v Town of Ogden, 273 A.D.2d 837, 709 N.Y.S.2d 734, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6737 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000).

IV. Other Discriminations

76. Advertising

Newspaper publisher who produced paper which contained separate help wanted listings for male and female help could not be held culpable for directly perpetuating discrimination due to sex because of the manner in which it labeled the ads. Newspaper publisher which published want ads under separate sex designations aided and abetted sex discrimination in violation of state law. NOW v State Div. of Human Rights, 34 N.Y.2d 416, 358 N.Y.S.2d 124, 314 N.E.2d 867, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1480 (N.Y. 1974).

Newspaper advertisements for employment opportunities located within the Republic of South Africa which merely referred to that country as the situs of employment and which did not recite, on the surface, any discriminatory conditions did not violate New York City antidiscrimination laws and newspaper's publishing of the advertisements did not thereby aid and abet invidious discrimination. Test for determining whether advertisement violates New York City antidiscrimination laws is not whether actual discrimination is practiced but whether the advertising expresses discrimination, directly or indirectly. Geographical reference in advertisement for employment opportunity to South Africa as the place of employment does not carry with it an expression of discrimination, directly or indirectly, and use of the term "South Africa" is not the type of code word impermissible in such advertising under New York City antidiscrimination laws. (Per Jasen, J., with two Judges concurring and two Judges concurring specially.) New York Times Co. v New York Com. on Human Rights, 41 N.Y.2d 345, 393 N.Y.S.2d 312, 361 N.E.2d 963, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 1846 (N.Y. 1977).

Tavern owner who admitted that name selected for tavern and sign used for tavern were intended to attract male patrons and who was ordered to cease and desist from discriminating against women was not required to remove name and sign. Law relating to discriminatory practices does not prohibit appealing by signs or trade names to one sex or another but does prohibit displaying notice or advertisement to the effect that any of the facilities or privileges will be refused or withheld from or denied person on account of sex. Rosenberg v State Human Rights Appeal Board, 45 A.D.2d 929, 357 N.Y.S.2d 325, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4500 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1974).

Under the provisions of section 296 (subd 1, par [d]) of the Executive Law, it is an unlawful discriminatory practice for any employer or employment agency to circulate an advertisement which expresses an employment preference based upon sex unless that preference represents a bona fide occupational qualification; however, a newspaper is not an "employer" or "employment agency" within the meaning of the statute, and, accordingly, a newspaper may not be held culpable under section 296 (subd 1, par [d]) for publishing an advertisement which expresses an employment preference based upon sex. A newspaper aids and abets sex discrimination, which constitutes an unlawful discriminatory practice (Executive Law, § 296, subd 6), when the body content of a published advertisement is palpably discriminatory and the published job title clearly lacks any basis as a bona fide occupational qualification; such a construction of subdivision 6 of section 296 does not violate State or Federal free press guarantees where the patently discriminatory content of the advertisement could be determined by the newspaper through visual examination inasmuch as commercial advertising proposing an illegal transaction, i.e., sex discrimination in employment, is not entitled to First Amendment protection. An order of the State Division of Human Rights, which directs a company to "cease and desist from publishing any employment advertisement in any of its newspapers which specifies a preference for applicants on the basis of sex without first securing from the prospective employer or agent thereof a written certification that the job is not covered by the Human Rights Law or is instinct with a bona fide occupational qualification", should not be set aside as the Human Rights Law (Executive Law, art 15) authorizes the Commissioner of Human Rights to direct that an offending party cease and desist from an unlawful discriminatory practice and further authorizes him to direct that affirmative action be taken as will effectuate the purposes of the law (Executive Law, § 297, subd 4, par [c]); while it would be unreasonable to impose upon a newspaper the burden of making an independent investigation to determine whether a particular job is instinct with a bona fide occupational qualification, the purpose and effect of requiring a newspaper to procure the written certification in advance of publication is to eliminate the need for the independent investigation and to insulate the newspaper from the imposition of penalties under the Human Rights Law. State Div. of Human Rights v Binghamton Press Co., 67 A.D.2d 231, 415 N.Y.S.2d 523, 1979 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10097 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1979).

Unless it is established that the decision was based on legitimate business concerns unconnected with racial bigotry, refusal to distribute a free advertising circular in a predominantly black neighborhood is encompassed within the ambit of Exec Law § 296(13), providing that it is an unlawful discriminatory practice "for any person to discriminate against, boycott or blacklist, or refuse to buy from, sell or to trade with, any person, because of the race, creed, color, national origin or sex of such person," since the distribution of a circular is a business practice within the statute's protective scope, the activity of the distributor being profit motivated; the statute, as a remedial civil rights provision, is to be construed liberally for the accomplishment of its purposes. Holly v Pennysaver Corp., 98 A.D.2d 570, 471 N.Y.S.2d 611, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16508 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1984).

Unless it is established that the decision was based on legitimate business concerns unconnected with racial bigotry, refusal to distribute a free advertising circular in a predominantly black neighborhood is encompassed within the ambit of Exec Law § 296(13), providing that it is an unlawful discriminatory practice "for any person to discriminate against, boycott or blacklist, or refuse to buy from, sell or to trade with, any person, because of the race, creed, color, national origin or sex of such person," since the distribution of a circular is a business practice within the statute's protective scope, the activity of the distributor being profit motivated; the statute, as a remedial civil rights provision, is to be construed liberally for the accomplishment of its purposes. 77. Automobile rental

Where the record supported State Human Rights Appeals Board's finding that petitioner refused to rent automobile to individual as retaliation for such individual's bringing complaint against him, but did not substantiate finding that such refusal was based on fact that the individual was a Negro, the automobile rental agency should not have been ordered to cease and desist from racially discriminatory practices in renting its automobiles. Avis-High Bennett Rent-A-Car, Inc. v State Human Rights Appeal Board, 40 A.D.2d 992, 338 N.Y.S.2d 694, 1972 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3143 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1972).

Plaintiffs set forth prima facie case of discrimination under Human Rights Law where (1) they presented evidence that manager of car rental agency said that agency would not rent to them because they were Puerto Ricans and there was suspicion that Puerto Ricans, as group, use false forms of identification, and (2) they produced evidence that agency's articulated reasons for denying rental were pretextual. Rivera v Hertz Corp., 990 F. Supp. 234, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21660 (S.D.N.Y. 1997).

78. "Arab boycott"

Specific reference in CLS Exec § 296(13) to boycotts, blacklisting, and refusals to deal indicates that statute is directed at curbing, in particular, types of business practices that involve concerted use of economic means to disadvantage trade or commercial activities of member of targeted group; since term "discriminate" immediately precedes list of terms including boycott, blacklisting, and refusals to trade, such term should be construed to refer to similar types of commercial activity. Scott v Massachusetts Mut. Life Ins. Co., 86 N.Y.2d 429, 633 N.Y.S.2d 754, 657 N.E.2d 769, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 3548 (N.Y. 1995).

Absence of evidence of formal boycott or blacklisting campaign will not be fatal to discrimination claim under CLS Exec § 296(13); for example, evidence establishing that defendant engaged in pattern of conduct that commercially disadvantaged only members of protected class may be sufficient to defeat summary judgment. Scott v Massachusetts Mut. Life Ins. Co., 86 N.Y.2d 429, 633 N.Y.S.2d 754, 657 N.E.2d 769, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 3548 (N.Y. 1995).

Insurance company was properly granted summary judgment in discrimination action brought by agent for termination of her agency contract predicated on CLS Exec § 296(13), assuming that termination of agency contract qualified as business conduct or, more specifically, refusal to trade within statute's scope, where agent otherwise failed to show that contract termination was propelled by or was result of company's desire to collectively discriminate against protected class that included agent, it was not shown that termination resulted from blacklisting or commercial boycott of women, or of persons of her age or marital status, nor did she allege any facts to show that contract cancellation was part of larger pattern of dealing or policy instituted by company in effort to disadvantage females economically; agent's bare allegations that no other women had achieved district manager status in company (without some other proof of showing, for example, policy or pattern of rejections of qualified females who had applied for such posts) was insufficient to defeat summary judgment motion. Scott v Massachusetts Mut. Life Ins. Co., 86 N.Y.2d 429, 633 N.Y.S.2d 754, 657 N.E.2d 769, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 3548 (N.Y. 1995).

It is within the legitimate police powers of the state for the New York Legislature to determine the effects of the so-called "Arab Boycott" in New York, to educate the public accordingly, and to monitor and otherwise evaluate new legislation passed to eradicate discrimination against citizens of New York in terms of such boycotts or black listing because of race, color, creed or national origin. General Electric Co. v New York State Assembly Committee on Governmental Operations, 425 F. Supp. 909, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14579 (N.D.N.Y. 1975).

N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 did apply to a case where a provision of the charterparty read that "Owners warrant this vessel is not Israeli owned or controlled, and will not call at Israeli ports;" however, the correlative federal statute provided a stronger basis for the decision of a federal court, but the vessel's owners were Greek citizens. The court did not refuse to confirm the arbitral award on the basis of federal and state anti-discrimination statutes. Karen Mar. Ltd. v Omar Int'l Inc., 322 F. Supp. 2d 224, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11390 (E.D.N.Y. 2004).

79. Insurance

Determination of whether insurance provision discriminates in contravention of CLS Exec § 296 must be made in court or before division of human rights; accordingly, arbitrator's award based on arbitrator's determination of issue will be vacated as having been made in excess of powers of arbitrator. Fallon v Greater Johnstown School Dist., 118 A.D.2d 936, 499 N.Y.S.2d 503, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 54767 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 68 N.Y.2d 603, 506 N.Y.S.2d 1025, 497 N.E.2d 705, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 19412 (N.Y. 1986).

Insurer which cancels automobile insurance policy (CLS Insurance § 3425) on basis of suspension of driver's license (CLS Vehicle & Traffic § 510) arising out of reversed conviction for driving while impaired has engaged in unlawful discriminatory practice (CLS Executive § 296) since suspension must be deemed vitiated by reversal of conviction and is thus not valid basis for cancellation where insurer has not considered evidence of conduct leading to criminal charges independent of driving record disseminated by department of motor vehicles which improperly includes conviction and reversal. Brown v Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 131 Misc. 2d 525, 500 N.Y.S.2d 500, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2556 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1986).

80. Licensing matters

Department of Health was properly granted summary judgment dismissing action alleging that, by revoking plaintiff's medical license, it discriminated against him in violation of CLS Exec § 296, based on his adult Attention Deficit Disorder, as plaintiff essentially sought judicial review of determination which revoked his medical license, and such review had to be made via Article 78 proceeding, which was time barred. Horne v New York State Dep't of Health, 287 A.D.2d 940, 731 N.Y.S.2d 781, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9979 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

81. Places of public accommodation

A non-profit, tax-exempt foreign corporation and three of its local charter organizations located in New York, whose principal function was to offer courses on boat handling and safety at 650 locations nationwide to approximately 70,000 people a year, and who extended membership invitations to all males who passed a basic piloting course, were properly found to have unlawfully discriminated on the basis of sex against qualified female applicants based on the all-male membership policy. A non-profit, tax-exempt foreign corporation and three of its local charter organizations located in New York, which systematically offered a service or accommodation to the public through their boating courses and promotional activities, were owners of places of public accommodation, resort or amusement, notwithstanding that the place of such public accommodation was not of fixed location, and the corporation and its charter organizations failed to establish that they were distinctively private clubs within the statutory exclusion. United States Power Squadrons v State Human Rights Appeal Bd., 59 N.Y.2d 401, 465 N.Y.S.2d 871, 452 N.E.2d 1199, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 3181 (N.Y. 1983).

Hospital policy with regard to drug treatment program which discriminates against pregnant women by treating them differently from others solely because they are pregnant constitutes facial sexual discrimination with regard to public accommodation under Human Rights Law; however, policy is supportable if hospital can establish (1) that blanket exclusion is medically warranted—i.e., that no pregnant woman, regardless of state of her general health, stage of her pregnancy, or severity of her addiction, can be treated safely, or (2) that hospital cannot, prior to admission, identify with reasonable medical certainty those women who might receive treatment without needing immediate, on-site obstetrical services. Elaine W. v Joint Disease N. Gen. Hosp., Inc., 81 N.Y.2d 211, 597 N.Y.S.2d 617, 613 N.E.2d 523, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 1167 (N.Y. 1993).

Burden rested on hospital, as actor drawing distinctions based on pregnancy with regard to admission to drug treatment program, to prove that policy's distinctions were based on medical necessity, not on generalizations associated with pregnant women; that its motives were benign would not relieve hospital of burden. Elaine W. v Joint Disease N. Gen. Hosp., Inc., 81 N.Y.2d 211, 597 N.Y.S.2d 617, 613 N.E.2d 523, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 1167 (N.Y. 1993).

Appellate Division properly annulled determination by Division of Human Rights that medical facility violated CLS Exec § 296(2)(a) by using heightened precautionary measures in 1985 while treating petitioner who was perceived to be at risk of carrying AIDS virus, even though petitioner complained of treatment in isolated room located at end of dark hallway, with all equipment draped in plastic, small "x" on door, and treating physician and staff outfitted in protective clothing, since medical facility showed that its protocol was reasonable, medically warranted, and consistent with its desire to protect patients and staff from spread of infectious diseases; such protocol was consistent with accepted medical practice in 1985 for treatment of patients known or perceived to be at high risk of infection of then recently discovered, contagious, and fatal disease and was not pretext for discrimination. North Shore Univ. Hosp. v Rosa, 86 N.Y.2d 413, 633 N.Y.S.2d 462, 657 N.E.2d 483, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 3553 (N.Y. 1995).

Commission against discrimination had power to waive time limit of its own rules which provided that application for reconsideration must be filed within 15 days from date of mailing of notice of disposition of investigation to determine whether petitioner was place of public accommodation within meaning of statute which forbids discrimination. Lake Placid Club, Inc. v Abrams, 6 A.D.2d 469, 179 N.Y.S.2d 487, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4278 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958), aff'd, 6 N.Y.2d 857, 188 N.Y.S.2d 561, 160 N.E.2d 92, 1959 N.Y. Evidence that private club had permitted it premises to be used for a fashion show, that tickets to such event were sold to general public without restriction and without limitation thereon as to facilities of club which would be open during show, and that there was a free flow of guests from banquet room to bar room with no attempt to restrict any except blacks, was ample to support determination that club was a place of public accommodation during show and that blacks had been refused service because of race or color. Batavia Lodge No. 196, L. O. M. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 43 A.D.2d 807, 350 N.Y.S.2d 273, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2914 (N.Y. A transportation authority did not engage in unlawful discriminatory practices toward disabled persons in violation of Exec Law § 296(2) (a) by virtue of its failure to buy buses and to construct terminals providing access to wheelchair-bound and semi-ambulatory persons, since that statute only prohibits discrimination against the disabled and does not require special efforts or affirmative action. Eastern Paralyzed Veterans Ass'n v Metro. Transp. Auth., 79 A.D.2d 516, 433 N.Y.S.2d 461, 1980 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13832 (N.Y. Although the Commissioner of the State Division of Human Rights properly found that the 1978 New York City Marathon course was a "place of public accommodation" within the meaning of Exec Law § 292(9), the commissioner erred in determining that the running club which organized the marathon had engaged in an unlawful discriminatory practice by not permitting disabled individuals in wheelchairs to participate in the marathon since a marathon had historically been a foot race and since the running club had not excluded other disabled individuals who could compete on foot. New York Roadrunners Club v State Div. of Human Rights, 81 A.D.2d 519, 437 N.Y.S.2d 681, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10976 (N.Y. Airline travel club open only to professional travel counselors and travel agents was not place of public accommodation within meaning of CLS Exec §§ 296(2)(a) and 292(9) since travel club was not available to general public but was merely incentive program for travel agents. Nursing home unlawfully discriminated against resident by placing him in strict isolation because he tested HIV-seropositive, and by refusing to allow him to use public telephone in nursing home. Petitioners' dental practice was not "place of public accommodation" since they were private practitioners and operated on appointment basis in private facilities. Trading floor of Commodities Exchange, Inc. (COMEX) was place of public accommodation under CLS Exec § 296(2)(a) since COMEX's trading floor supplied public service by enabling commodities to be traded, routinely accepted qualified applicants, and placed no subjective limits on number of persons eligible for membership. No cause of action was stated for gender discrimination under CLS Exec § 296 where there was no allegation that female patrons or guests of marina were denied accommodations or use of facilities on basis of gender, and defendants installed video cameras and surreptitiously conducted surveillance of persons using both men's and women's rooms. Mastro v Oak Park Marina, Inc., 238 A.D.2d 930, 661 N.Y.S.2d 554, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4747 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1997), reh'g denied, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7993 (N.Y. Determination that dentist discriminated against complainant based on his HIV status would be annulled where dentist performed complete oral examination of complainant, and concluded that further treatment, in form of root canal therapy, was needed, it was undisputed that dentist did not perform root canal work, and that his associate, who performed root canal work on only 30 to 40 percent of practice's patients, was away on vacation, it was dentist's professional judgment that complainant needed immediate treatment because he was in pain, and that dental unit of university hospital would best provide that treatment in view of risk of secondary infection, no evidence was presented that such recommendation was inappropriate or medically unsound, and complainant contacted dentist's secretary to request additional referrals, but he sought no further treatment from dentist or his associates. Schulman v State Div. of Human Rights, 239 A.D.2d 588, 658 N.Y.S.2d 70, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5622 (N.Y. Elks Lodge was not place of public accommodation, but rather was distinctly private for purposes of CLS Exec § 292(9). Cummings v Watertown Lodge No. 496 Benevolent & Protective Order of Elks, Inc., 262 A.D.2d 1007, 693 N.Y.S.2d 786, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7207 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1999).

In a discrimination action under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(2)(a) on the basis of disability by a stock exchange member alleging that a stock exchange's prohibition on the use of stools in major evacuation routes on the exchange floor was discriminatory, the trial court properly granted the exchange summary judgment where the exchange showed that its actions were nondiscriminatory since the prohibition at issue was based on a legitimate safety concern for its members and the member failed to raise a triable issue of fact in opposition. Blum v N.Y. Stock Exch., Inc., 298 A.D.2d 343, 751 N.Y.S.2d 202, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9444 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2002).

In a disability discrimination action under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(2)(a) by a stock exchange member alleging that a stock exchange's prohibition on the use of stools in major evacuation routes on the exchange floor was discriminatory, the issue of whether the exchange provided a reasonable accommodation to the member, who used a stool for medical reasons, was not relevant to the cause of action despite the member's contentions to the contrary. Blum v N.Y. Stock Exch., Inc., 298 A.D.2d 343, 751 N.Y.S.2d 202, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9444 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2002).

A restaurant and bar which maintained a policy of refusing service to long haired males, but which did not refuse service to long haired females, violated Executive L § 296, subd 2, which proscribes discrimination on the basis of sex in places of public accommodation. Braun v Swiston, 72 Misc. 2d 661, 340 N.Y.S.2d 468, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1335 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1972).

Respondent State Division of Human Rights does not have concurrent jurisdiction with the Insurance Department over petitioners' alleged discriminatory practice of refusing to issue complainant, a married woman, a Blue Cross and Blue Shield health insurance policy for single persons because of her marital status since insurance carriers are not places of "public accommodation" (Executive Law, § 296, subd 2, par [a]) over which respondent has jurisdiction. Places of "public accommodation" include "wholesale and retail stores and establishments dealing with goods or services of any kind" (Executive Law, § 292, subd 9). While an insurance carrier may be an establishment providing services, it is not a "wholesale and retail" establishment within the meaning of the statute. The Insurance Department has exclusive jurisdiction over questions concerning "unfairly discriminatory" rates (Insurance Law, § 255, subd 2). In any event, under subdivision 40 of the Insurance Law, rates which take into account an applicant's marital status are not "unfairly discriminatory". Rochester Hospital Service Corp. v Division of Human Rights of Executive Dep't, 92 Misc. 2d 705, 401 N.Y.S.2d 413, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2608 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1977).

A complaint which alleges that defendants have illegally used public funds in the purchase of buses and in the construction of transportation facilities which are inaccessible to wheelchair bound and semiambular persons in violation of statutes making it an unlawful discriminatory practice to deny to disabled persons the facilities of "any place of public accommodation" (Executive Law, § 292, subd 9; § 296, subd 2, par [a]), states a cause of action since the disabled require more than equal treatment to insure them the same rights in the utilization of mass transportation as other persons and defendants have not demonstrated on the motion for summary judgment that any of the required "special efforts" have been made; Federal law requires local transportation authorities receiving Federal funds to make special efforts in making facilities accessible to the disabled (US Code, tit 49, § 1612, subd [a]; tit 23, § 142) and affirmative action is imposed on the Secretary of Transportation not merely to refrain from discrimination against handicapped persons but to provide directly for them. Eastern Paralyzed Veteran's Ass'n v Metropolitan Transp. Authority, 103 Misc. 2d 933, 426 N.Y.S.2d 406, 1980 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2225 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), modified, 79 A.D.2d 516, 433 N.Y.S.2d 461, 1980 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13832 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1980).

Blind person has no statutory right to be allowed into hospital delivery room accompanied by his guide dog during birth of his child since delivery room as well as labor room and maternity ward are not public facilities, and hospital's exclusion of guide dog from delivery room is not unlawful discriminatory practice since Human Rights Law was never intended to effectuate radical change in hospital's compliance with law concerning control and/or prevention of infectious diseases; presence of dog would present unacceptable danger to expectant mother and to physicians and nurses in attendance. Perino v St. Vincent's Medical Center, 132 Misc. 2d 20, 502 N.Y.S.2d 921, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2630 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1986).

Local Elks lodge was not place of public accommodation under CLS Exec § 292(9), warranting dismissal of claims against lodge and lodge officials for alleged violations of CLS Exec § 296(2)(a) relative to denial of plaintiff's application for membership. Gifford v Guilderland Lodge, No. 2480, 178 Misc. 2d 707, 681 N.Y.S.2d 194, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 530 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1998), aff'd, 272 A.D.2d 721, 707 N.Y.S.2d 722, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. Blanket exclusion of the mentally ill from the Metropolitan Transit Authority's Half-Fare Program without justification violated the Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 290 et seq., which the New York State Division of Human Rights was required to rectify. Staten Island Alliance for the Mentally Ill v Tolbert, 306 A.D.2d 31, 762 N.Y.S.2d 36, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6312 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2003).

Fact that federal law did not require the mentally ill to be included as eligible for a transit authority's reduced fare program and that the state legislature only intended to gradually extend this specific benefit to the mentally ill by increments did not limit the broad anti-discriminatory protections provided mentally ill individuals under the Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 290 et seq. Staten Island Alliance for the Mentally Ill v Tolbert, 306 A.D.2d 31, 762 N.Y.S.2d 36, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6312 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2003).

When an individual suffering from undifferentiated schizophrenia, who was seriously disabled and unable to use a map or plan a new route on the transit authority's system or even negotiate a round trip fare, was denied participation in the transit authority's reduced fare program, because her condition was not an "eligible handicap," and she was as disabled as an individual who fit within one of the categories of individuals eligible for the reduced fare, she suffered discrimination which was prohibited by N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(2). Staten Island Alliance for the Mentally Ill v Tolbert, 306 A.D.2d 31, 762 N.Y.S.2d 36, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6312 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2003).

Trial court erred in denying a store summary judgment in plaintiff's claim based on discriminatory denial of use of a public accommodation under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(2)(a); the store made a prima facie case that plaintiff's momentary detention, by asking her to pass through a security sensor a second time, had a legitimate, nondiscriminatory basis, i.e., the sensor's sounding. No evidence indicated that the store's nondiscriminatory explanation of the incident was a pretext for racially disparate treatment, that plaintiff otherwise suffered racial discrimination, or that a security guard even saw a Caucasian woman who plaintiff alleged was allowed to exit the store. Johnson v Lord & Taylor, 25 A.D.3d 435, 807 N.Y.S.2d 367, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 313 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2006).

Application of Massachusetts' public accommodations law to require private parade sponsor to include, as marching unit, organization of gays, lesbians and bisexuals violated sponsor's First Amendment right to free speech; inasmuch as every participating parade unit affects message conveyed by parade, application of state's law essentially forced private sponsor to alter parade's expressive content. Hurley v Irish-American Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual Group, 515 U.S. 557, 115 S. Ct. 2338, 132 L. Ed. 2d 487, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 4050 (U.S. 1995).

Commissions established by New York State Human Rights Law were authorized only to hear complaints about discriminatory employment practices by employers, employment agencies, labor organizations and apprenticeship committees and had no jurisdiction as to governmental action, or action by any entity not falling within the categories mentioned above. Percy v Brennan, 384 F. Supp. 800, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5879 (S.D.N.Y. 1974).

Physician's claim under CLS Exec Law § 296 that emergency medicine board discriminated against him as black male native of Trinidad will not be dismissed, although board has argument that it is organization "which is in its nature distinctly private" and not subject to New York Human Rights Law (CLS Exec Law §§ 290 et seq.), because it may also prove to be case that board is place of public accommodation, and its requirement that photograph be attached to application prior to physician's being adjudged qualified to sit for board's examination at least raises suspicion of discriminatory purpose. Daniel v Am. Bd. of Emergency Med., 802 F. Supp. 912, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21193 (W.D.N.Y. 1992).

Police officers were not agents of store under CLS Exec Law § 296(2)(a), where they asked black shoppers to leave at management's request due to shoplifting suspicion, because store had no right to control officers' actions. Robinson v Town of Colonie, 878 F. Supp. 387, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2849 (N.D.N.Y. 1995).

Father's and son's claims against financial consultant under 42 USCS § 1981 are dismissed but not those under CLS Exec Law § 296 except as to citizenship discrimination, where consultant in process of setting up investment account for Canadian citizen father and U.S. citizen son merely followed order of his branch manager to terminate meeting, because complaint does not set forth facts from which one could infer that consultant intended to discriminate as required for federal claim, but consultant's execution of manager's order could be considered aiding and abetting under § 296(6), although state law does not extend to "citizenship" discrimination. Cheung v Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, 913 F. Supp. 248, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 591 (S.D.N.Y. 1996).

82. Private clubs

Blacks who were refused service at private club while attending fashion show open to public, although angered, embarrassed, and humiliated by the incident, were entitled to compensatory damages absent evidence of expense, lost salary, or measurable damages suffered by reason of the discrimination; the indiscriminate award of $250 damages to each complainant was clearly not unreasonably large under the circumstances, and was within the statutory power to award compensatory damages to aggrieved persons. Batavia Lodge No. 196, etc. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 35 N.Y.2d 143, 359 N.Y.S.2d 25, 316 N.E.2d 318, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1377 (N.Y. 1974).

A private organization did not unlawfully discriminate against the disabled when, in organizing and promoting the New York City Marathon, it required participants to use only their feet and not wheelchairs, skateboards, bicycles or other extraneous aids since, in setting the standards for the race traditionally planned as a foot event, it was a valid consideration for the club to take into account the fact that the uniform requirement that the race be run on foot would tend to equalize competition. New York Roadrunners Club v State Div. of Human Rights, 55 N.Y.2d 122, 447 N.Y.S.2d 908, 432 N.E.2d 780, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3076 (N.Y. 1982).

Police power delegated to municipalities under State Constitution's home rule provision permits City of New York to define for itself when club loses its "distinctly private" nature so as to subject it to antidiscrimination provision of City Human Rights Law, despite use of term "distinctly private" without further definition in CLS Exec § 292(9), since no evidence exists of legislature's preemption of antidiscrimination legislation and city's more specific definition merely established criteria of selectivity and privateness based on size and amount of business-related income from nonmembers. N.Y. State Club Ass'n v City of New York, 69 N.Y.2d 211, 513 N.Y.S.2d 349, 505 N.E.2d 915, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 15359 (N.Y. 1987), aff'd, 487 U.S. 1, 108 S. Ct. 2225, 101 L. Ed. 2d 1, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 2861 (U.S. 1988).

Airline travel club open only to professional travel counselors and travel agents was not place of public accommodation within meaning of CLS Exec §§ 296(2)(a) and 292(9) since travel club was not available to general public but was merely incentive program for travel agents. Ness v Pan American World Airways, 142 A.D.2d 233, 535 N.Y.S.2d 371, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12457 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Cause of action brought by a husband and a wife alleging that the board of a country club aided and abetted unlawful discrimination was properly dismissed, because an individual could not have been held to have aided and abetted his or her own actions. Goldin v Engineers Country Club, 54 A.D.3d 658, 864 N.Y.S.2d 43, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6559 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2008), app. denied, 13 N.Y.3d 763, 886 N.Y.S.2d 864, 915 N.E.2d 1160, 2009 N.Y. LEXIS 3475 (N.Y. 2009).

Complaint filed by a husband and a wife against a country club failed to state a cause of action for sex discrimination based on their suspension from the country club; the husband and the wife failed to plead any facts showing how they were denied the privileges of membership on the basis of sex, particularly as both the husband and the wife were suspended while the other couple involved in a dispute with the husband and the wife, also a male and a female, were reinstated. Goldin v Engineers Country Club, 54 A.D.3d 658, 864 N.Y.S.2d 43, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6559 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2008), app. denied, 13 N.Y.3d 763, 886 N.Y.S.2d 864, 915 N.E.2d 1160, 2009 N.Y. LEXIS 3475 (N.Y. 2009).

Commissioner of the New York State Division of Human Rights, properly found that a country club's membership admissions policy discriminated against applicants on the basis of creed, in violation of N.Y. Executive Law § 296(2)(a), as the club was properly determined to be a place of public accommodation, and did not fall within the distinctly private exception under N.Y. Executive Law § 292(9) since it had over 100 members and provided regular meals and services to non-members, thus, the club's religious quota system to admit new members was violative of N.Y. Executive Law § 296(2)(a). Further, a current member of the club had standing to file the discrimination complaint as his hearing testimony demonstrated that he was deprived of the associational benefits of interacting with at least two potential members who were placed on a waiting list because there were no available openings for members of their religion. Matter of Mill Riv. Club, Inc. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 59 A.D.3d 549, 873 N.Y.S.2d 167, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1108 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. dismissed, 12 N.Y.3d 871, 882 N.Y.S.2d 679, 910 N.E.2d 428, 2009 N.Y. LEXIS 1779 (N.Y. 2009).

Bringing of action for libel and malicious prosecution by tavern owner against defendant who had filed discrimination complaint against the tavern owner with Division of Human Rights constituted an unlawful discriminatory practice on the part of the tavern owner requiring dismissal of the complaint and finding in favor of defendant on his counterclaim. Moran v Simpson, 80 Misc. 2d 437, 362 N.Y.S.2d 666, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1906 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1974).

Board of commissioners of fire district has discretion and authorization to approve or disapprove any person elected for membership in fire company, but board does not have unfettered discretion since (1) CLS Town § 176-b(3) and (16) expressly prohibit membership of nonresidents and convicted arsonists, and (2) discretion is also limited by antidiscrimination statutes. Waskewicz v Guy, 141 Misc. 2d 983, 535 N.Y.S.2d 345, 1988 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 732 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1988).

Jewish religious organization could be held liable under CLS Civ R § 40 and CLS Exec § 296 for threatening boycott against resort facility in retaliation for proposed use of resort by plaintiff (allegedly anti-Jewish religious corporation), despite Jewish organization's right of free speech, since boycott (as with any mode of expression) designed to secure unlawful objective (i.e., discrimination based on religion) is not protected by First Amendment; moreover, it was of no constitutional significance that Jewish organization merely threatened boycott. Defendants (Jewish religious organization and its members) were not immune from liability under CLS Civ R § 40 and CLS Exec § 296 for threatening boycott against resort facility in retaliation for proposed use of resort by plaintiff (allegedly anti-Jewish religious corporation), despite defendants' desire to safeguard integrity of their religion, since, apart from certain statutory exceptions, parties are not exempt from conforming their actions to laws of general application not directed at speech but at conduct. Jews for Jesus, Inc. v Jewish Community Relations Council, Inc., 968 F.2d 286, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 15614 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1992).

83. Discrimination by religious organizations

Defendants did not violate CLS Exec § 296(2)(a) by circulating memorandum critical of plaintiffs' religious activities, even though it requested that recipients of memorandum urge others to deny plaintiffs access to facilities in which to conduct such activities, where plaintiffs conceded that they were not, in fact, denied access to place of public accommodation and that defendants (group of religious organizations) were not owners, lessees, or proprietors of such place. Defendants did not violate CLS Exec § 296(13) by circulating memorandum critical of plaintiffs' religious activities, even though it requested that recipients of memorandum urge others to deny plaintiffs access to facilities in which to conduct such activities, where defendants neither blacklisted nor refused to trade with plaintiffs. Defendants' conduct in circulating memorandum critical of plaintiffs' religious activities, and requesting that recipients of memorandum urge others to deny plaintiffs access to facilities in which to conduct such activities, was not prohibited by CLS Exec § 296(6), even though steps proposed were inconsistent with Human Rights Law and Civil Rights Law, where memorandum was not directed to restaurant owners or caterers, only to religious associates, and conduct did not go beyond proposal stage. Jews for Jesus, Inc. v Jewish Community Relations Council, Inc., 79 N.Y.2d 227, 581 N.Y.S.2d 643, 590 N.E.2d 228, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 211 (N.Y. 1992).

Organization, which was membership corporation devoted to mutual improvement in religious knowledge of Spiritualism, which owned land claimed to be largest center for Spirtualism in world and which had received charter from national Spiritualist association, was "religious institution" within statutory exemption that nothing in statute pertaining to unlawful discriminatory practices bars religious institution from limiting sales or rental of housing accommodations or giving preference to persons of same religion or from making selection calculated to promote religious principles for which it is established or maintained. Attempt by religious organization to make nonmembers conversant with the organization by making its residential properties available to nonmembers during summer tourist season was not beyond scope of organizations's fundamental rights under free exercise clause of first Amendment, notwithstanding contention that practice was inconsistent with denial of housing accommodations to other nonmember at other times during the year and was thus arbitrary and capricious and constituted a denial of equal protection to such nonmembers. Cowen v Lily Dale Assembly, 44 A.D.2d 772, 354 N.Y.S.2d 269, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5308 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1974).

Jewish theological seminary was properly granted summary judgment in action for breach of employment contract brought by its former professor, who had resigned in response to seminary's decision to admit women into its program for ordination of Rabbis, since (1) professor failed to prove that seminary had contractual duty to refrain from changing its admission policies or from doing anything to offend professor's religious beliefs, and (2) professor failed to demonstrate that seminary's policy decision discriminated against him on basis of his religious convictions. Faur v Jewish Theological Seminary, 146 A.D.2d 566, 536 N.Y.S.2d 516, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 120 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. dismissed, 74 N.Y.2d 842, 546 N.Y.S.2d 559, 545 N.E.2d 873, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 2932 (N.Y. 1989), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 706, 560 N.Y.S.2d 988, 561 N.E.2d 888, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 3024 (N.Y. 1990).

There is nothing in CLS Exec § 296(11) requiring that organization be incorporated pursuant to Religious Corporations Law in order to invoke exemption for organizations operated in connection with religious organization; thus, college could invoke exemption, notwithstanding that it was incorporated under Membership Corporations Law, since it was Catholic University and had fundamental purpose of offering education in Catholic atmosphere. There is nothing in CLS Exec § 296(11) requiring that organization be incorporated pursuant to Religious Corporations Law in order to invoke exemption for organizations operated in connection with religious organization; thus, college could invoke exemption, notwithstanding that it was incorporated under Membership Corporations Law, since it was Catholic University and had fundamental purpose of offering education in Catholic atmosphere. Scheiber v St. John's Univ., 195 A.D.2d 544, 600 N.Y.S.2d 734, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7409 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1993), modified, aff'd, 84 N.Y.2d 120, 615 N.Y.S.2d 332, 638 N.E.2d 977, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 1348 (N.Y. 1994).

Jewish religious organization was not entitled to summary judgment in action alleging that it violated CLS Exec § 296(6) in threatening boycott of resort facility in retaliation for proposed use of facility by plaintiff (allegedly anti-Jewish religious corporation) where trier of fact could find that statute was violated by application of concerted economic pressure and explicit threats on resort to coerce, compel or incite resort to cancel plaintiff's contract and deny access to plaintiff and its members. Jewish religious organization was not privileged and exempt from regulation under Human Rights Law based on its threat to boycott resort facility in retaliation for proposed use of facility by plaintiff (allegedly anti-Jewish religious corporation), and thus plaintiff's action under statute should go to trial on merits, since statute does not authorize forcing neutral party to discriminate on basis of religion in such party's daily operations. Jews for Jesus, Inc. v Jewish Community Relations Council, Inc., 968 F.2d 286, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 15614 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1992).

In an action brought by employees who alleged religious discrimination by a church employer that contracted with government entities, statutory religious discrimination claims could not be maintained because 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e-1(a), N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(11), and New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 8-107(12) allow religious organizations to advance their religious missions by discriminating on the basis of religion in employment. Lown v Salvation Army, Inc., 393 F. Supp. 2d 223, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22260 (S.D.N.Y. 2005).

84. Schools

Where petitioners alleged that the school board had illegally rezoned a school district so as to transfer white children to other schools and create room to transfer in Negro and Puerto Rican children in order to correct allegedly harmful racial imbalance, it was held that there existed neither a constitutional nor statutory mandate directing the board to promote integration nor any prohibition against such an attempt, and that the board's freedom to act was untrammeled by the courts, which would not substitute their views for those of the board if there was some reasonable basis for the board's conclusion. Van Blerkom v Donovan, 15 N.Y.2d 399, 259 N.Y.S.2d 825, 207 N.E.2d 503, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1405 (N.Y. 1965).

University's policy of limiting cohabitational housing eligibility to students, their spouses and dependent children did not facially discriminate against lesbians and gay men based on marital status, and thus action alleging such discrimination in violation of state and city Human Rights Laws was properly dismissed. Levin v Yeshiva Univ., 96 N.Y.2d 484, 730 N.Y.S.2d 15, 754 N.E.2d 1099, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2016 (N.Y. 2001).

In a civil rights proceeding brought by an epileptic nurse trainee who had been barred from a nurses' training program based on the dissatisfaction of the Board of Cooperative Education Services by which she was being trained with her physicians' attestations that her grand mal epilepsy was controlled by medication and that she was able to properly function as a licensed practical nurse, the Commissioner of Human Rights properly determined that the subject board was not an "employer" as defined in Exec Law § 296, since such board existed "for the purpose of carrying out a program of shared educational services in the schools of the supervisory district and for providing instruction in such special subjects as the [education] commissioner may approve" pursuant to Educ Law § 1950(1), so that the trainee's relationship to the board was educational in nature and lacked the mutually beneficial economic substance that is the touchstone of an employer-employee relationship; however, the commissioner erred in ruling that, due to the fact that the board was a public educational institution, it was not an "education corporation or association" within the meaning of Exec Law § 296(4) so as to be subject to the jurisdiction of the Division of Human Rights, since the board was an education corporation organized and existing under Educ Law § 1950, was nonsectarian, and was exempt from real property taxes under Real P Tax Law § 408, and so fell within the definition of the statute, and since the fact that the board was also subject to Educ Law § 313 did not affect the jurisdiction of the Human Rights Division, in that the division exercises concurrent jurisdiction over discrimination claims. State Div. of Human Rights v Board of Coop. Educ. Services, 98 A.D.2d 958, 470 N.Y.S.2d 209, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 21283 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1983), app. dismissed, 62 N.Y.2d 645 (N.Y. 1984).

An award of compensatory damages to a person aggrieved by an illegal discriminatory practice may include compensation for mental anguish, and such an award may be based solely on the testimony of the complainant. Board of Educ. v McCall, 108 A.D.2d 855, 485 N.Y.S.2d 357, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 43182 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 65 N.Y.2d 601, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 14750 (N.Y. 1985).

Fifty-three-year-old practicing psychologist, who alleged age discrimination under CLS Exec § 296(4), failed to establish cognizable cause of action since undisputed facts showed that his academic performance was below accepted standard for admission to defendant medical school where (1) estimated undergraduate grade point average in basic sciences of admitted students was 3.5, whereas plaintiff's average was 1.98 and was significantly lower than any admitted student, (2) overall grade point average of admitted students was 3.4, whereas plaintiff's average was 2.09, and (3) plaintiff's medical college admission test scores were well below average; contrary result was not required by fact that plaintiff was called for interview instead of being summarily eliminated from consideration on basis of his grades. Brown v Albert Einstein College of Medicine of Yeshiva University, 172 A.D.2d 197, 568 N.Y.S.2d 61, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4233 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1991).

Medical student failed to state cause of action for discrimination by medical college where he alleged that college discriminated against him on basis of illness when it dismissed him purportedly because of poor academic performance since student's illness was not disability within meaning of CLS Exec § 292(21) as he did not dispute that illness was cause of his poor performance. Lowinger v State University of New York Health Science Center, 180 A.D.2d 606, 580 N.Y.S.2d 316, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2860 (N.Y. Plaintiffs stated cause of action for discrimination where private nursery school denied use of its facilities to infant plaintiff by reason of her disability, in violation of CLS Exec § 296(2)(a) and (4) and NYC Admin Code § 8-107(4)(a), and denials complained of were not "strictly educational or pedagogic in nature" so as to remove them from purview of Code's antidiscrimination provisions by operation of NYC Admin Code § 8-107(4)(f). Stein v 92nd St. YM-YWHA, Inc., 273 A.D.2d 181, 710 N.Y.S.2d 68, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7493 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

Dismissal of a parent's statutory discrimination claims against a board of education—based on the board's alleged failure to provide the parent's handicapped child with an appropriate mode of transportation on a minibus to a special education school—was inappropriate because the board may have acted with bad faith, gross misjudgment, or deliberate indifference to the rights of the child to be transported by minibus thereby depriving the child of a free appropriate public education. I.M. v City of New York, 178 A.D.3d 126, 111 N.Y.S.3d 273, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7763 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2019).

Dismissal of a parent's statutory discrimination claims against a school bus operator—based on a board of education's alleged failure due to a coding error to provide the parent's handicapped child with an appropriate mode of transportation on a minibus to a special education school—was appropriate because the operator was not liable for the failure to accommodate the child emanating solely from the board's statutory obligation to provide the child with a free appropriate public education. I.M. v City of New York, 178 A.D.3d 126, 111 N.Y.S.3d 273, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7763 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2019).

As respects statute prohibiting any educational corporation or association that holds itself out to public to be nonsectarian and exempt from taxation from denying "use of its facilities" to any person otherwise qualified, by reason of race, color, religion, or national origin, attempt to distinguish between "denial of use of facilities" and "denial of admission" is a strained and tenuous construction not consonant with plain meaning in language; "use of facilities" covers admission of qualified students. New York University v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 84 Misc. 2d 702, 378 N.Y.S.2d 842, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3202 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), aff'd, 49 A.D.2d 821, 373 N.Y.S.2d 719, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. Sex discrimination claim arising from university's decision to eliminate varsity wrestling, asserted by male students who had decided to attend university because they were told that wrestling program would be offered for 4 years, would be dismissed absent specific allegations that termination of wrestling program constituted intentional discrimination, or circumstance that could give rise to inference of racial discriminatory intent; furthermore, there was no proof that wrestlers were excluded on basis of gender from participating in, denied benefits of, or subjected to discrimination in university's athletic program. Cooper v Peterson, 164 Misc. 2d 878, 626 N.Y.S.2d 432, 1995 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 179 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1995).

Trial court erred in an N.Y. C.P.L.R. art. 78 proceeding in prohibiting the State Division of Human Rights (SDHR) from investigating discrimination complaints against a school district because the school district had not exhausted its administrative remedies in that the hearing process was not completed, and, in the context of that administrative proceeding, the school district could have challenged the applicability of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(4) and, at the same time, mounted a defense to the discrimination charges; once a final determination was issued, the school district, if necessary, had the opportunity to raise its issues in a challenge to SDHR's final determination, In addition, it was by no means certain that the SDHR would not find for the school district as to the discrimination charges and the school district, if necessary, also had the opportunity to challenge any final determination pursuant to N.Y. Exec. Law § 298. Matter of Newfield Cent. School Dist. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 66 A.D.3d 1314, 888 N.Y.S.2d 244, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7593 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2009).

Public school districts were among the "educational institutions" over which the New York State Division of Human Rights had jurisdiction for N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(4) purposes. Matter of Ithaca City School Dist. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 87 A.D.3d 268, 926 N.Y.S.2d 686, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5474 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2011), rev'd, 19 N.Y.3d 481, 950 N.Y.S.2d 67, 973 N.E.2d 162, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 1353 (N.Y. 2012).

Determination that a school district, which did not dispute that the majority of the alleged incidents occurred, permitted students to engage in a course of racially-motivated harassment of a student was supported by substantial evidence where ample testimony and other evidence, including a videotape of one of these incidents, supported allegations that the student was subjected to verbal and physical abuse on a bus, including being spat upon, which was reported to the school; nevertheless, the school district's middle school administrators routinely imposed only two to three-day suspensions on the offending students in response and testified that they felt it was "unfair" to move a problem student to another school to address that student's conduct. The assistant principal conceded that there was a "racial tidal wave" that year, the school bus was a "hell hole" and he knew that the student had been threatened with gun violence, but did not require the offenders to submit to more serious superintendent's hearings, did not impose lengthier suspensions, and did not even exercise his unilateral power to ban the offenders from riding on that particular bus. Matter of Ithaca City School Dist. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 87 A.D.3d 268, 926 N.Y.S.2d 686, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5474 (N.Y. High school teacher was not discriminated against pursuant to N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 when directed to teach a weight-training class. The teacher conceded that other teachers at the school had been assigned to teach the same class and that, as a licensed physical education teacher, the teacher met the requirement for teaching weight training. Ruane-Wilkins v Board of Education of the City of New York, 238 N.Y.L.J. 17, 2007 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 5422 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. July 3, 2007), aff'd, 56 A.D.3d 648, 868 N.Y.S.2d 112, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8719 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2008).

High school teacher was not discriminated against pursuant to N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 when her request for a transfer was denied. The teacher acknowledged that the board of education was correct in denying her request since the teacher did not have enough seniority to qualify for a transfer that was not based on hardship. Ruane-Wilkins v Board of Education of the City of New York, 238 N.Y.L.J. 17, 2007 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 5422 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. July 3, 2007), aff'd, 56 A.D.3d 648, 868 N.Y.S.2d 112, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8719 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2008).

High school teacher alleged retaliation pursuant to N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(7) by being placed in an oversized class or being assigned to a weight training class, but except for the filing of a transfer request, the teacher did not advance any reason for the alleged retaliatory actions. The teacher's retaliation claims failed. Ruane-Wilkins v Board of Education of the City of New York, 238 N.Y.L.J. 17, 2007 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 5422 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. July 3, 2007), aff'd, 56 A.D.3d 648, 868 N.Y.S.2d 112, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8719 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2008).

School district could not have a public hearing enjoined on a probable cause determination by the New York State Division of Human Rights (SDHR) that it engaged in an unlawful discriminatory practice under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(14) by not allowing a hearing impaired student to use a service dog as the district could not claim res judicata or collateral estoppel on the issue as the parents' separate action in federal district court did not include the SDHR as a party; the district had also not exhausted its administrative remedies under N.Y. Exec. Law § 298 as the public hearing had not yet been held. E. Meadow Union Free Sch. Dist. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 238 N.Y.L.J. 36, 2007 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 6004 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. Aug. 7, 2007).

School district could not have a public hearing enjoined on a probable cause determination by the New York State Division of Human Rights (SDHR) that it engaged in an unlawful discriminatory practice under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(14) by not allowing a hearing impaired student to use a service dog because such a determination was not subject to review under N.Y. C.P.L.R. art. 78. E. Meadow Union Free Sch. Dist. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 238 N.Y.L.J. 36, 2007 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 6004 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. Aug. 7, 2007).

Disgruntled graduate student may proceed with human rights law claim against university, where he was forced out of doctorate program after failing oral examination for third time, because he claims that, had he been female, defendants would have given him opportunity to take examination in writing, given him different committee on third try, or permitted him to take course to make up for any deficiencies in his understanding of material. Bucklen v Rensselaer Polytechnic Inst., 166 F. Supp. 2d 721, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12686 (N.D.N.Y. 2001).

Student's claim under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 failed because no provision of New York Human Rights Law prohibited discrimination by a state college against a student on the basis of sex. Hayut v State Univ. of New York, 217 F. Supp. 2d 280, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14203 (N.D.N.Y. 2002), aff'd in part, vacated in part, 352 F.3d 733, 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 25723 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2003).

In an action in which students filed suit against a school district and a teacher claiming violations of § 296 of the New York Human Rights Law (NYHRL), N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, defendants were granted summary judgment because all of the alleged incidents in the present case occurred in the years 2000 and 2001, well before § 296(4) the NYHRL was amended in 2003 to allow students to sue for sexual harassment by a teacher, and because the NYHRL's provisions did not apply retroactively, Tesoriero v Syosset Cent. Sch. Dist., 382 F. Supp. 2d 387, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22347 (E.D.N.Y. 2005).

In an action in which parents of a hearing impaired student alleged that a school district and its officials violated N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 by refusing to allow the student to bring a service dog to school, the parents failed to prove a likelihood of success on the merits because the school district provided the student with reasonable accommodations by providing a sign language interpreter, an FM transmitter, a student note taker, extra time to take tests, and daily one-on-one sessions with a specialist teacher for the deaf and hearing impaired. Cave v E. Meadow Union Free Sch. Dist., 480 F. Supp. 2d 610, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19908 (E.D.N.Y. 2007).

In an action in which parents of a hearing impaired student alleged that a school district and its officials discriminated against the student by refusing to allow the student to bring a service dog to school, the parents were not likely to succeed on a claim under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(14) because the parents did not prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the student had a speech discrimination score of forty percent or less and the legislature did not intend the phrase "a person with a disability" to include persons with hearing impairments. Under the parents' interpretation that § 296(14) applied because the student was a person with a disability, the portion of the law speaking specifically to hearing impairments was superfluous. Cave v E. Meadow Union Free Sch. Dist., 480 F. Supp. 2d 610, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19908 (E.D.N.Y. 2007).

In a suit based on a sexual relationship between a teacher and a student, school employees were not liable under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(4) because this provision only applied to education corporations. Romero v City of New York, 839 F. Supp. 2d 588, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36049 (E.D.N.Y. 2012).

In a suit based on a sexual relationship between a teacher and a student, a special commissioner for investigation to a city school district was not liable under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(4) because it was not an education corporation or association. Romero v City of New York, 839 F. Supp. 2d 588, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36049 (E.D.N.Y. 2012).

In a suit based on a sexual relationship between a teacher and a student, a city department of education was not liable under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(4) because it immediately took remedial measures when it obtained knowledge of the sexual relationship. Romero v City of New York, 839 F. Supp. 2d 588, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36049 (E.D.N.Y. 2012).

Appeal alleging that superintendent and principal violated federal and state anti-discrimination laws by denying petitioner's hearing impaired son access to hearing dog during administration of Regents examination was dismissed to extent that petitioner sought determination that students who utilize guide dogs, hearing dogs or service dogs be granted access to all New York State Education Department approved Regents examination testing sites; commissioner does not have authority to issue declaratory judgments, petitioner lacked standing to seek relief on behalf of other students, and there were other proceedings involving same issues and same parties which were currently pending in state court. 2009 Op Comm Ed No. 15,899.

V. Practice and Procedure

85. In general

An award by the Commissioner of Human Rights of compensatory damages to a female complainant on the basis of sex discrimination in job qualifications should have been deleted from his order, not because of the failure of proof that the discrimination had been intentional, but because the record did not contain proof that she had suffered mental anguish or humiliation. Cullen v Nassau County Civil Service Com., 53 N.Y.2d 492, 442 N.Y.S.2d 470, 425 N.E.2d 858, 1981 N.Y. LEXIS 2583 (N.Y. 1981).

Town was not entitled to writ of prohibition to prevent Division of Human Rights from considering town employee's complaint of racial discrimination, despite assertion that employee had already litigated his discrimination claim in disciplinary proceeding brought against him under Civil Service Law, since division had jurisdiction to investigate and pass on claim of discrimination, and town would have opportunity to challenge division's findings on merits after division investigated complaint, and thus town suffered no irreparable harm. Town of Huntington v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 82 N.Y.2d 783, 604 N.Y.S.2d 541, 624 N.E.2d 678, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 3273 (N.Y. 1993).

Defendant employer was not entitled to dismissal of gender discrimination complaint under CLS Exec § 296 on basis that State Division of Human Rights (SDHR) delayed 11 years before holding hearing on complaint and then delayed its order for another 3 years, where no substantial actual prejudice resulted in that employer's witnesses were able to testify without difficulties owing to memory loss regarding issues on which SDHR based its finding of discrimination. Diaz Chem. Corp. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 91 N.Y.2d 932, 670 N.Y.S.2d 397, 693 N.E.2d 744, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 599 (N.Y. 1998).

Commission against discrimination had power to waive time limit of its own rules which provided that application for reconsideration must be filed within 15 days from date of mailing of notice of disposition of investigation to determine whether petitioner was place of public accommodation within meaning of statute which forbids discrimination. Lake Placid Club, Inc. v Abrams, 6 A.D.2d 469, 179 N.Y.S.2d 487, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4278 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958), aff'd, 6 N.Y.2d 857, 188 N.Y.S.2d 561, 160 N.E.2d 92, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1289 (N.Y. 1959).

An employee was not collaterally estopped from asserting claims alleging sexual harassment where a prior administrative hearing that resulted in denial of unemployment benefits did not provide a full opportunity to litigate the issues raised, in that the prior administrative proceeding did not provide a full opportunity to litigate the instant issues. Schwarz v Schnipper, 87 A.D.2d 510, 447 N.Y.S.2d 488, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15746 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1982).

The Commissioner of Human Rights erred in determining that complainant's civil service employment had been terminated due to an unlawful discriminatory practice under Exec Law § 296(16), and in ordering reinstatement of the complainant to his prior position and an allowance of back pay, since the commissioner lacked the power to order complainant's reinstatement in that the complainant was a probationary employee, and since the award of back pay was dependent at its terminus upon the offer of appointment. New York State Dep't of Mental Hygiene v State Div. of Human Rights, 103 A.D.2d 546, 481 N.Y.S.2d 371, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19972 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1984), aff'd, 66 N.Y.2d 752, 497 N.Y.S.2d 361, 488 N.E.2d 107, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 17645 (N.Y. 1985).

State was not entitled to dimsissal of state employee's suit for sexual discrimination under CLS Exec § 296 for failure to meet 90-day statute of limitations, even though some acts complained of had occurred more than one year earlier, where complaint alleged not isolated instances, but continuous course of discriminatory conduct resulting in employee's termination, date of which was within 90-day time period. State was not entitled to dismissal of state employee's suit for sexual discrimination in violation of CLS Exec § 296, on theory that employee had elected to pursue administrative remedies, where letter of complaint employee had sent to State Division of Human Rights did not result in investigation of charges, but only in division's sending employee letter indicating employee had to file formal, verified complaint before division would take any action, and employee did not respond further to division but instead filed suit. Brown v State, 125 A.D.2d 750, 509 N.Y.S.2d 169, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 62984 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986), app. dismissed, 70 N.Y.2d 747, 519 N.Y.S.2d 1034, 514 N.E.2d 392, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 18626 (N.Y. 1987).

State was entitled to dismissal of state employee's cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress which was part of CLS Exec § 296 action against both state and several of employee's supervisors for sexual discrimination since, under doctrine of respondeat superior, state could be liable for supervisors' acts only if employee could establish that supervisors were acting in their official capacities, proof of which would also bring into play public policy prohibiting maintenance against state of suits for intentional infliction of emotional distress where act complained of constitutes official conduct. Brown v State, 125 A.D.2d 750, 509 N.Y.S.2d 169, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 62984 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986), app. dismissed, 70 N.Y.2d 747, 519 N.Y.S.2d 1034, 514 N.E.2d 392, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 18626 (N.Y. 1987).

Employee was denied fair trial in age discrimination case when trial court limited testimony of plaintiff employee's witness (retired employee of defendant employer) concerning his personal experience with discriminatory attitude toward older employees displayed by individual responsible for terminating plaintiff's employment; it could not be said, as matter of law, that witness' intended testimony was so remote that potential for prejudice outweighed probative value of evidence on age discrimination issue. Murphy v American Home Products Corp., 159 A.D.2d 46, 558 N.Y.S.2d 920, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8346 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1990).

Although action brought under CLS Exec § 296 is not tort claim which falls under notice provisions of General Municipal Law, notice of claim was nevertheless required by CLS Town § 67(1) and (2). Scopelliti v Town of New Castle, 210 A.D.2d 308, 620 N.Y.S.2d 405, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12598 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994).

Action brought under CLS Exec § 296 is not tort claim; thus, such action is not subject to notice of claim provisions of CLS Educ § 3813(2) or CLS Gen Mun § 50-e. Lane-Weber v Plainedge Union Free Sch. Dist., 213 A.D.2d 515, 624 N.Y.S.2d 185, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2912 (N.Y. Plaintiff was not entitled to jury trial in action alleging age discrimination in employment where he sought both monetary damages and equitable relief in form of judgment setting aside his retirement and reinstating him to his former position. Bockino v Metropolitan Transp. Auth., 224 A.D.2d 471, 638 N.Y.S.2d 137, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1204 (N.Y. LEXIS 1688 (N.Y. 1996).

Administrative Law Judge abused his discretion in refusing employer's request to have complainant examined by its psychiatrist where complainant had alleged serious psychiatric injuries as result of discrimination; any alleged difficulties complainant might experience with examination could be mitigated by imposition of reasonable conditions. Carrier Corp. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 224 A.D.2d 936, 637 N.Y.S.2d 877, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1572 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1996).

Employer was not prejudiced by Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ's) conduct of hearing on age discrimination and retaliation matter, even if ALJ had acted in prosecutorial fashion or partial manner, where none of questions asked by ALJ elicited 2 admissions of retaliatory conduct that were basis of finding of retaliation against employer. Electchester Hous. Project v Rosa, 225 A.D.2d 772, 639 N.Y.S.2d 848, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3155 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

Award of $25,000 to employee as compensatory damages for mental anguish and humiliation was excessive where she testified that, as result of employer's retaliatory action in threatening to deny her unemployment insurance benefits for bringing age discrimination action against it, she felt "bad, angry, hurt, embarrassed, and shocked"; such testimony only supported award of up to $2,500 for mental anguish and humiliation. Electchester Hous. Project v Rosa, 225 A.D.2d 772, 639 N.Y.S.2d 848, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3155 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

Determination by State Division of Human Rights that there was no probable cause to believe that employer unlawfully discriminated against petitioner on basis of his age was not arbitrary and capricious merely because no hearing was held since petitioner was given full opportunity to present his evidence and to discuss with Division status of investigation, and his submissions were in fact considered. Gleason v W.C. Dean Sr. Trucking, 228 A.D.2d 678, 646 N.Y.S.2d 20, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7390 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

It is within discretion of State Division of Human Rights to decide method to be used in investigating claim, and as long as petitioner has full opportunity to present claim, neither hearing nor confrontation conference is mandated. Gleason v W.C. Dean Sr. Trucking, 228 A.D.2d 678, 646 N.Y.S.2d 20, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7390 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

Delay of some 4 years from time of hearing to final determination of Division of Human Rights was not substantially prejudicial as matter of law so as to warrant dismissal of petition. Comor v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 231 A.D.2d 715, 647 N.Y.S.2d 842, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9693 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

Award of back pay should have been reduced by amount of unemployment insurance petitioner received during period covered by award. Allender v Mercado, 233 A.D.2d 153, 649 N.Y.S.2d 144, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11498 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996), app. dismissed, app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 1055, 659 N.Y.S.2d 846, 681 N.E.2d 1292, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 765 (N.Y. 1997).

In employees' discrimination action under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a), sanction imposed against employees' counsel of $1,000 payable to Lawyers' Fund for Client Protection would be vacated where counsel's actions did not rise to level of "frivolous conduct." Stephenson v Hotel Emples. & Restaurant Emples. Union Local 100, 246 A.D.2d 457, 668 N.Y.S.2d 193, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 626 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Dismissal of complaint by Division of Human Rights on ground of administrative convenience (ACD) was arbitrary, in contravention of CLS Exec § 297(9) and 9 NYCRR § 465.5(e)(2)(vi), where complainant filed administrative complaint with Division and thereafter sought ACD from Division in order to commence action in state court, and, before Division granted ACD, complainant commenced action in state Supreme Court. Legg v Eastman Kodak Co., 248 A.D.2d 936, 670 N.Y.S.2d 291, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2969 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

Court should have granted defendants' motion to change venue from Bronx to New York County where New York County was site of allegedly discriminatory conduct and county in which all of anticipated nonparty witnesses resided, defendants furnished names and addresses of potential nonparty witnesses, setting forth essence of their anticipated testimony, and manner in which they would be inconvenienced, and plaintiffs failed to identify single nonparty witness who would be inconvenienced by attending trial in New York County. Mohammad v Board of Managers, 262 A.D.2d 76, 691 N.Y.S.2d 486, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6472 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1999).

In action alleging that school district negligently and recklessly administered health insurance claims of plaintiff's decedent, causes of action under CLS Exec § 296 and 42 USCS §§ 12101 et seq., based on alleged medical disability discrimination, were not tort claims governed by CLS Gen Mun § 50-e. Polvino v Island Group Admin., Inc., 264 A.D.2d 720, 694 N.Y.S.2d 728, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9084 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

Verdict sheet asking whether plaintiff attorney, suing his former law firm for age discrimination in firing him when he was 60 years old, possessed qualifications necessary for position required by firm at time of his discharge, did not unfairly increase his burden of proof; satisfactory job performance depends on employer's criteria, not standards that may seem reasonable to jury or judge. Schutz v Finkelstein, Bruckman, Wohl, Most & Rothman, 275 A.D.2d 407, 712 N.Y.S.2d 606, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8850 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2000), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 779, 725 N.Y.S.2d 634, 749 N.E.2d 204, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 645 (N.Y. 2001).

Testimony of employer's former director of equal opportunity which contained hearsay statements was not admissible on behalf of employment discrimination plaintiff, as admission of employer; declaration made by agent without authority to speak for principal is not within "speaking agent" exception to hearsay rule, even if agent was authorized to act in matter to which his declaration relates. Simpson v N.Y. City Transit Auth., 283 A.D.2d 419, 724 N.Y.S.2d 196, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4772 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2001).

Sua sponte dismissal of a former employee's claim of disability discrimination in violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 was error because, although the former employee failed to comply with the grievance procedure set forth in the parties' collective bargaining agreement (CBA), the CBA contained no provisions for resolution of employment discrimination disputes, let alone any clear and unmistakable language waiving the right to judicial forum for such claims; although the former employer and the superintendent asserted a failure to exhaust administrative remedies in support of their motion to dismiss the former employee's separate cause of action alleging breach of contract, the former employer and the superintendent never set forth the failure to exhaust administrative remedies in support of their motion to dismiss the employment discrimination claim, and thus the former employee was deprived of an opportunity to submit additional proof in opposition. Ambrosino v Village of Bronxville, 58 A.D.3d 649, 873 N.Y.S.2d 312, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 372 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2009).

Fire company, its president, and fire chief were not entitled to dismissal of a former fireman's discrimination causes of action based on the fireman's failure to serve a notice of claim because the notice of claim requirements of N.Y. Gen. Mun. Law § 50-e did not apply to discrimination causes of action under the Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq. Thygesen v North Bailey Volunteer Fire Co., Inc., 106 A.D.3d 1458, 964 N.Y.S.2d 816, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3128 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2013).

Grand Jury minutes, sealed pursuant to CPL 160.50 upon the dismissal of indictments against physicians accused of assault in the second degree, may not be disclosed to the Attorney-General for the purpose of aiding an investigation of the physicians' alleged professional misconduct since the purpose of CPL 160.50 and the related subdivision 14 of section 296 of the Executive Law is to protect individuals from adverse consequences based upon unsustained accusations, statutorily allowed judicial discretion to release Grand Jury minutes does not permit the disclosure of minutes sealed pursuant to CPL 160.50 except in limited circumstances and the instant action is not an appropriate case, as the key witness has published a book in which his activities as a "ghost surgeon" are detailed; the Attorney-General has, therefore, failed to demonstrate any overriding need for the Grand Jury minutes. In re Attorney-General of New York, 101 Misc. 2d 36, 420 N.Y.S.2d 685, 1979 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2624 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1979).

Doctrine of strict liability does not apply in cases involving sexual discrimination, but it is affirmative burden to plead and prove that employer either had knowledge or acquiesced in discriminatory conduct of supervisor or co-worker, however where plaintiff alleges in pleadings that her supervisor, who committed alleged sexual discrimination is president of corporate employer, his knowledge of wrongful conduct must be considered imputed to corporate defendant. Kersul v Skulls Angels, Inc., 130 Misc. 2d 345, 495 N.Y.S.2d 886, 1985 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3201 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1985).

Assertion of third cause of action for retaliatory firing under CLS Labor § 740, in complaint also alleging common law breach of contract and violation of Human Rights Law (CLS Exec § 296), technically required dismissal of first 2 causes of action since institution of action for retaliatory firing is "deemed a waiver of the rights and remedies available under any other contract, collective bargaining agreement, law, rule or regulation or under the common law" by CLS Labor § 740(7). Gonzalez v John T. Mather Memorial Hosp., 147 Misc. 2d 1082, 559 N.Y.S.2d 467, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 388 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1990).

Cause of action under Human Rights Law, CLS Exec § 296, based on alleged discriminatory "rehiring" of Caucasian woman to fill plaintiff's position following her termination as part of general staff reduction, would be dismissed due to existence of prior administrative complaint for discrimination based on same hiring, even though administrative complaint did not use exact word "rehiring," since private person may commence action for violation of Human Rights Law only if that person has not previously filed administrative complaint with State Division of Human Rights covering same grievance. Plaintiff's cause of action under the Human Rights Law (Executive Law § 296), based upon the alleged discriminatory "rehiring" of a Caucasian woman to fill plaintiff's old position following her termination as part of a general staff reduction in defendant's news division, must be dismissed due to the existence of a prior administrative complaint based on the very same hiring. A private person may commence an action for violation of the Human Rights Law only if that person had not previously filed an administrative complaint with the State Division of Human Rights covering the same grievance. Although the administrative complaint does not use the word "rehire", there is a substantial identity of issues between the administrative complaint and the legal claim for a wrongful failure to rehire so as to require dismissal of the legal claim. Tong v National Broadcasting Co., 150 Misc. 2d 4, 566 N.Y.S.2d 819, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 703 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1990), aff'd, 182 A.D.2d 354, 585 N.Y.S.2d 695, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5206 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1992).

State procedures for adjudicating claim of employment discrimination are sufficient under due process clause of Fourteenth Amendment, where under state's law (1) claim requires state's antidiscrimination agency to investigate whether there is probable cause to believe that complaint is true, (2) before probable cause determination is made, claimant is entitled to full opportunity to present on record, though informally, charges against his employer or other respondent, including right to submit all exhibits which he wishes to present and testimony of witnesses in addition to his own testimony, (3) complainant is entitled to opportunity to rebut evidence submitted by or obtained from employer, (4) complainant may have attorney assist him and may ask state agency to issue subpoenas, (5) if investigation discloses probable cause and efforts at conciliation fail, state agency must conduct public hearing to determine merits of complaint, (6) public hearing must also be held if administrative appeal board within state agency finds that there has not been full investigation and opportunity for complainant to present his contentions and evidence, with full record, and (7) judicial review in state's appellate courts is available to assure that claimant is not denied any of procedural rights to which he was entitled and that state agency's determination was not arbitrary or capricious. Kremer v Chemical Constr. Corp., 456 U.S. 461, 102 S. Ct. 1883, 72 L. Ed. 2d 262, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 104 (U.S.), reh'g denied, 458 U.S. 1133, 103 S. Ct. 20, 73 L. Ed. 2d 1405, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 2945 (U.S. 1982).

In employment discrimination action brought under both state and federal law, district court sitting at equity in federal Title VII action must resolve Title VII claims in accordance with jury's determination on CLS Exec § 296 claim since elements of successful employment discrimination claim under both statutes are virtually identical. Song v Ives Laboratories, Inc., 957 F.2d 1041, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 2608 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1992).

Remedial defendants, state departments and department heads included simply because they might be required to satisfy judgment pursuant to state procedural law, are dismissed from action in which state employee claims she was demoted due to her age and gender in violation of CLS Exec Law § 296, because they are not proper parties since they had no personal involvement in alleged discriminatory demotion. Hamilton v New York State Dep't of Mental Hygiene, 876 F. Supp. 470, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20198 (W.D.N.Y. 1994).

Judgment will be entered for fired female banker in amount of, inter alia, $300,000 in back pay awarded by jury, although 42 USCS § 1981a appears to leave back pay issue for court, because both parties agree that, even if back pay is issue for court, court, sitting in equity, is bound by jury's factual findings under Human Rights Law (CLS Exec Law §§ 296 et seq.). Dailey v Societe Generale, 889 F. Supp. 108, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8626 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

Employee's discrimination claims under CLS Exec Law § 296 of Human Rights Law against employer, state Health and Hospitals Corporation (HHC), and hospital are not denied summarily, where employee did not file notice of claim against HHC, because actions brought under § 296 are not regarded as tort actions, so notice-of-claim provision does not apply. Dortz v City of New York, 904 F. Supp. 127, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14438 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

Gender discrimination claim against city and its Health and Hospitals Corporation under CLS Exec § 296 was not barred by plaintiff's failure to file notice of claim under CLS Gen Mun § 50-e and CLS Unconsol Ch 214-A § 20, since New York courts do not regard claims under § 296 as tort claims. Dortz v City of New York, 904 F. Supp. 127, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14438 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

Individual employee defendants are denied dismissal of claim brought against them under New York Human Rights Law (CLS Exec Law §§ 290 et seq.), where former fellow employed alleged that defendants participated in plan to misappropriate his unique creative skills and worldwide telecommunications expertise with view toward breaching their obligations to him because of his national origin and skin color, because individuals who actually participate in conduct giving rise to discrimination claim may be held personally liable under CLS Exec Law § 296(6). Tagare v NYNEX Network Sys. Co., 921 F. Supp. 1146, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4538 (S.D.N.Y. 1996).

Employee was precluded from asserting claim under CLS Exec § 296 where he knowingly and voluntarily signed release of employment discrimination claims and his assertions of ambiguity, fraud and economic duress were insufficient to create question of fact regarding validity of release. Nicholas v NYNEX, Inc., 929 F. Supp. 727, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8527 (S.D.N.Y. 1996).

Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 USCS §§ 701 et seq.) preempted claim against federal employer for alleged violation of Human Rights Law asserted by federal employee with Human Immunodeficiency Virus. Rivera v Heyman, 982 F. Supp. 932, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15524 (S.D.N.Y. 1997), aff'd, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 20859 (2d Cir. N.Y. Aug. 26, 1998), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 157 F.3d 101, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 22598 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1998).

Sexual harassment plaintiff shall have jury decide her state-law claim and advisory jury will be utilized for her federal claims, where alleged harassment ended with her termination on March 4, 1991 but federal law amending Title VII (42 USCS §§ 2000e et seq.) to allow claimants to have trial by jury as well as to seek compensatory and punitive damages did not become effective until November 21, 1991, because 1991 expansion of Title VII does not apply but she is entitled to trial by jury and to compensatory damages pursuant to Exec § 296 claim. Waterson v Plank Rd. Motel Corp., 43 F. Supp. 2d 284, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4582 (N.D.N.Y. 1999).

Standards applied by courts evaluating age and race discrimination claims under Exec § 296 are parallel to analysis used in Title VII and claims under ADEA. Dawkins v Witco Corp., 103 F. Supp. 2d 688, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9758 (S.D.N.Y. 2000).

In an action in which television writers filed suit against various employers and agencies, alleging an industry-wide pattern or practice of age discrimination in violation of the Age Discrimination Employment Act, California's Fair Employment and Housing Act, and New York State's Human Rights Law, as well as the Labor Management Relations Act, the writers' claims seeking to hold each defendant jointly and severally liable for alleged acts of discrimination by other defendants pursuant to a uniform "industry-wide" practice of age discrimination were dismissed; there was no cognizable theory upon which one employer could be held jointly and severally liable for the discriminatory practices of another, without an alleged relationship between the two employers. Wynn v NBC, 234 F. Supp. 2d 1067, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25893 (C.D. Cal. 2002), dismissed, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28774 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 6, 2002).

Notice of claim requirement set forth in N.Y. Educ. Law § 3813(1) (2001) applied to an employee's claims of age and gender discrimination under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 against a school district, its superintendent, and a high school principal where the employee did not seek to vindicate a public interest but rather sought to vindicate his own private interest and to recover money damages for his own alleged emotional and financial loss. The district, superintendent, and principal were not entitled to judgment on the pleadings on the age discrimination claim because an Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) notice of a charge of age discrimination, which the EEOC sent to the district's director of personnel, satisfied the statutory notice of claim requirement; the district, superintendent, and principal were entitled to judgment on the pleadings on the employee's gender discrimination claim where the EEOC's notice of charge contained no reference to gender discrimination. Kushner v Valenti, 285 F. Supp. 2d 314, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17637 (E.D.N.Y. 2003), abrogated, Brtalik v S. Huntington Union Free Sch. Dist., 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 107373 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 6, 2010).

In an action in which a police officer asserted gender discrimination and retaliation claims against a city under the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Gen. Mun. Law § 50-e did not permit the city to impose a notice of claim requirement. N.Y. County Law § 52, which permitted a notice of claim requirement in a broader range of cases, was inapplicable because the case involved a municipality rather than a county. Lee v City of Syracuse, 603 F. Supp. 2d 417, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24966 (N.D.N.Y. 2009), overruled in part, Widomski v State Univ. of N.Y., 748 F.3d 471, 2014 U.S. App. LEXIS 6466 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2014).

Employee's claims of retaliation under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(3) were barred because the employee failed to file a notice of claim in accordance with N.Y. County Law § 52; grievances and correspondence between the employee and the employer from 2001 to 2006 did not constitute notice because the one year and 90-day time limit in N.Y. Gen. Mun. Law § 50-i was not observed. Russell v County of Nassau, 696 F. Supp. 2d 213, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14018 (E.D.N.Y. 2010).

Plaintiff employee stated a claim under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 for aiding and abetting pursuant to § 296(6) only against those individual defendants who she alleged participated directly in the unlawful discrimination, harassment, and retaliation. Because the other individual defendants had not been participants and because they were not "employers" under § 296(1), they were dismissed from the lawsuit. Cohn v Keyspan Corp., 713 F. Supp. 2d 143, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 48672 (E.D.N.Y. 2010).

Although an employee labeled his claim as a discrimination claim under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a), the employee's claim that his employer terminated him for the sole purpose of preventing the employee from receiving disability benefits was completely preempted by 29 U.S.C.S. § 1144(a) because the claim was a benefits deprivation claim under 29 U.S.C.S. § 1140 and fell within the scope of 29 U.S.C.S. § 1132(a)(1)(B) and the employee alleged no instances of discrimination that arose separately from his benefits termination claim. Thus, the action was properly removed pursuant to 28 U.S.C.S. § 1441(a) and remand was not warranted under 28 U.S.C.S. § 1447(c). Schultz v Tribune ND, Inc., 754 F. Supp. 2d 550, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 129581 (E.D.N.Y. 2010), dismissed, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 103452 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 14, 2011).

In a suit brought by parents asserting defamation and discrimination against a school district and others with regard to their son, their state claims against the school district for violating N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(4) were dismissed because the school district was a public corporation, which cannot be held liable under the section since it was not an education corporation within the meaning of § 296(4), however, the claims against the individual defendants survived dismissal. TC v Valley Cent. Sch. Dist., 777 F. Supp. 2d 577, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 41486 (S.D.N.Y. 2011), different results reached on reconsid., 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 90260 (S.D.N.Y. June 29, 2011).

86. Jurisdiction

Trial court properly dismissed an employee's N.Y. Exec. Law § 290 et seq. age discrimination claim for want of subject matter jurisdiction because the employee did not allege that he was not a resident of, or employed in, the state of New York; nor did the employee claim that the alleged discriminatory conduct had an impact in the state of New York. Hoffman v Parade Publs., 15 N.Y.3d 285, 907 N.Y.S.2d 145, 933 N.E.2d 744, 2010 N.Y. LEXIS 1346 (N.Y. 2010).

Division lacked jurisdiction to investigate students' discrimination complaints against school districts under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(4) because a public school district was not an "education corporation or association" as contemplated by § 296(4). Matter of North Syracuse Cent. School Dist. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 19 N.Y.3d 481, 950 N.Y.S.2d 67, 973 N.E.2d 162, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 1353 (N.Y. 2012).

In an action by a former employee against her employer charging a violation of the Human Rights Law, the employee, having invoked the jurisdiction of New York State, was properly ordered to appear for oral examination prior to trial in New York City, although she lived in South Carolina. Moreover, the employee, who had moved for class action certification, could not validly contend that she lacked financial resources to travel to New York for examination when she was simultaneously attempting to show that she would fairly and adequately protect the class. Mack v J. C. Penney Co., 81 A.D.2d 761, 439 N.Y.S.2d 118, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11395 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1981).

CLS Exec §§ 296 and 297 did not grant jurisdiction to State Division of Human Rights to consider issue of union local's refusal to waive requirements of union labor for low bidding non-union subcontractor who was offered, but refused, opportunity to sign full time agreement with union; clear intent of law was to prohibit discrimination by labor union in its membership practices, not to deal with issues concerning persons neither union members nor applying for memberships. Gomez v New York State, Executive Dep't Div. of Human Rights, 122 A.D.2d 337, 504 N.Y.S.2d 307, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 59671 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

In action to recover damages for unlawful discrimination based on marital status, plaintiff was not required to exhaust administrative remedies before commencing action in Supreme Court, even though Division of Human Rights is administrative agency charged with investigating and remedying discriminatory practices, since victims of discriminatory practices are given choice as to forum in which they may seek relief. Ness v Pan American World Airways, 142 A.D.2d 233, 535 N.Y.S.2d 371, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12457 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Employer was not entitled to preliminary injunction of administrative proceedings before Division of Human Rights (DHR), since DHR maintains jurisdiction to investigate and pass on claims of discrimination, including claim raised by employee herein regarding employment discrimination based on disability; employer's argument as to effect of arbitration award (i.e., alleged error of law) lay first in administrative review and, following exhaustion of that remedy, in subsequent judicial review under CLS Exec § 298. Anker Management Corp. v State Div. of Human Rights, 215 A.D.2d 706, 627 N.Y.S.2d 73, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5741 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1995).

Court properly dismissed action for employment discrimination where plaintiff had brought administrative action against corporate defendant, which was voluntarily withdrawn with no indication that withdrawal was done for administrative convenience. Brown v Wright, 226 A.D.2d 570, 641 N.Y.S.2d 125, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4401 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

Claimant could not avoid jurisdictional bar under CLS Exec § 297(9) by merely adding additional elements of damage arising out of same underlying conduct, by changing his legal theory, or couching his claim in such vague and conclusory terms as to thwart comparison of administrative and legal proceedings; further, given that administrative complaints of discrimination were dismissed due to absence of probable cause, and not "on the grounds of administrative convenience" (CLS Exec § 297(9)), failure to conduct hearing was irrelevant. Bhagalia v State, 228 A.D.2d 882, 644 N.Y.S.2d 398, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7256 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

Judicial Hearing Officer (JHO), in purporting to hold tenant liable to landlord for back rent, acted beyond his jurisdiction where court had consolidated landlord's summary holdover proceeding with tenant's discrimination action, deeming holdover proceeding to be counterclaim, and on landlord's default in failing to comply with discovery demands, court struck his answer, referring case to JHO for determination of tenant's damages. Likoua v Saudi, 231 A.D.2d 609, 647 N.Y.S.2d 540, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9469 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

Court should have granted defendants' summary judgment motion on ground that plaintiff elected to pursue administrative remedy by filing complaint with New York State Division of Human Rights (NYSDHR) since plaintiff failed to produce admissible proof as to whether her complaint was referred to NYSDHR by Equal Employment Opportunity Commission or whether she filed it directly with NYSDHR; she submitted only attorney's affirmation that was not based on personal knowledge of facts stated therein. Hirsch v Morgan Stanley & Co., 239 A.D.2d 466, 657 N.Y.S.2d 448, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5365 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

Prior service of process on New York City Commission on Human Rights and Corporation Counsel of City of New York under NYC Admin Code § 8-502(c) is not condition precedent to valid commencement of sex discrimination action under NYC Admin Code Title 8. Teller v America West Airlines, 240 A.D.2d 727, 659 N.Y.S.2d 314, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7132 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

Writ of prohibition was improperly granted divesting New York State Division of Human Rights s/h/a State of New York Executive Department, Division of Human Rights (SDHR) of jurisdiction to prosecute complaint of employment discrimination, despite fact that there had been delay in processing complaint, since one reason for delay was transfer of matter from county human rights commission to SDHR, which was result of administrative restructuring, and determination as to whether petitioner suffered substantial prejudice by delay and death of petitioner's former owner should have been made by SDHR after hearing; once there is final determination, appropriate appellate review is available. Pat's Carpet Outlet v State Exec. Dep't, Div. of Human Rights, 244 A.D.2d 338, 663 N.Y.S.2d 885, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11011 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

New York State Division of Human Rights properly dismissed, for lack of jurisdiction, claim of racial discrimination brought by certified home health care aide, who was employed by 93-year-old quadriplegic to provide 24-hour care to attend to his health and personal hygiene needs, to cook for him, to transport him, and otherwise to care for him. Thomas v Dosberg, 249 A.D.2d 999, 672 N.Y.S.2d 164, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5177 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

State Division of Human Rights had no jurisdiction to afford Article 78 petitioner relief for perceived wrongs not within remedial ambit of CLS Exec § 296. Flinker v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 265 A.D.2d 178, 695 N.Y.S.2d 570, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9732 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1999).

State Division of Human Rights (DHR) had subject matter jurisdiction over complaint against Metropolitan Transit Authority (MTA) alleging MTA's denial of advantage by reason of disability of mental illness, even though MTA was not required by federal law to include mentally ill persons in its half-fare program, where DHR was not thereby precluded from deciding that automatic exclusion of that class of disabled persons from public accommodation program was discriminatory practice in violation of State Human Rights Law. Staten Island Alliance for the Mentally Ill v Mercado, 273 A.D.2d 36, 708 N.Y.S.2d 402, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6319 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

An action instituted by New York City to restrain defendants from further discrimination with respect to housing rentals and from further violations of local laws was not subject to being stricken on the ground that the court had no jurisdiction over such an action, exclusive jurisdiction of the subject matter being vested in the State Commission against Discrimination. New York v Claflington, Inc., 40 Misc. 2d 547, 243 N.Y.S.2d 437, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1934 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963).

The New York State Division of Human Rights in a special proceeding against a South African Airway was without jurisdiction to conduct a hearing on the visa policy of the Republic of South Africa as it affects the airline in carrying passengers. South African Airways v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 64 Misc. 2d 707, 315 N.Y.S.2d 651, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1180 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1970).

Education department and Division of Human Rights had concurrent jurisdiction to pass on complaint alleging that student applicant was denied admission to medical school on basis of discriminatory practices of school; thus school was not entitled to extraordinary remedy of writ to prohibit student applicant and Division from conducting discrimination complaint hearing on grounds they were proceeding in excess of jurisdiction. New York University v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 84 Misc. 2d 702, 378 N.Y.S.2d 842, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3202 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), aff'd, 49 A.D.2d 821, 373 N.Y.S.2d 719, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10940 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1975).

CLS Veh & Tr Art 19-A did not supersede or preempt Human Rights Law and thus did not oust Division of Human Rights from jurisdiction over complaint by 400-pound bus driver, whose employment was terminated when medical examiner determined that he was not physically qualified to perform his duties as bus driver under CLS Veh & Tr Art 19-A since regulations setting forth criteria to determine whether driver is qualified did not conflict with Human Rights Law provisions against discrimination. Public transportation authority was entitled to writ of prohibition precluding Division of Human Rights from holding hearing or taking any action in regard to complaint by former employee of authority's wholly owned subsidiary since discrimination alleged in complaint related to unlawful employment practices, and authority was not employee's employer. Subsidiary of public transportation authority was not entitled to writ of prohibition precluding Division of Human Rights (DHR) from holding hearing or taking any action in regard to discriminatory employment complaint by subsidiary's former employee, despite DHR's failure to comply with notice of claim provisions of CLS Pub A § 1342 since (1) statute only applied to "action" and not to "proceeding" such as instituted by DHR, (2) statute excluded subsidiary corporation from notice of claim requirement, and (3) notice of claim provision had no application to action to vindicate public interest. A proceeding in the nature of prohibition to preclude the State Division of Human Rights from holding a hearing or taking any action with respect to a complaint filed with the Division does lie with respect to the parent corporation of a wholly owned subsidiary which employed the complainant, who alleged that he was the victim of an unlawful discriminatory employment practice, since the parent corporation was not the complainant's employer; consequently, the Division lacks statutory jurisdiction to proceed against the parent corporation (see, Executive Law § 296 [1], [2]). Central New York Centro, Inc. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 142 Misc. 2d 935, 539 N.Y.S.2d 626, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 150 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1989).

A complaint addressed to a Supreme Court seeking an injunction against rental of apartments or sale or disposition of an apartment building because the owner and rental agent had violated this section by refusing to rent an apartment to plaintiff was dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Redd v Zier, 229 N.Y.S.2d 582, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4175 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1962).

While plaintiff employee was fired by defendant employer after her preliminary injunction motion in a racial and sexual harassment employment discrimination case under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code 8-502, the Family and Medical Leave Act, 29 U.S.C.S. § 2601 et seq., was denied, the issues were not moot because the appellate court could feasibly preclude intimidation of other employees who could be witnesses, which was a harm the employee feared and thus, the appellate court had U.S. Const. art. III jurisdiction. Moore v Consol. Edison Co. of N.Y., Inc., 409 F.3d 506, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 10042 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2005).

Supplemental jurisdiction will be exercised over terminated female law firm associate's remaining employment discrimination and related claims, where operative facts underlying her federal Title VII claims are identical to those underlying her CLS Exec Law § 296 and other state law claims, because dismissal of her state law claims on jurisdictional grounds would result in duplicative litigation over same conduct. Sigmon v Parker Chapin Flattau & Klimpl, 901 F. Supp. 667, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14611 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

Employment discrimination plaintiff is granted leave to amend complaint to add claim under CLS Exec Law § 296, although different recoveries may be available under § 296 and federal Title VII (42 USCS §§ 2000e et seq.), because that fact does not make § 296 claim "novel and complex" and best left to state court. Fastiggi v Waterview Hills Nursing Ctr., 6 F. Supp. 2d 242, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7923 (S.D.N.Y. 1998).

U.S. Const. Amend. XI bars suits for money damages by reason of a state's failure to comply with the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296. Briggs v New York State DOT, 233 F. Supp. 2d 367, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22436 (N.D.N.Y. 2002).

Court did not have to decide whether the law with respect to N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(6) was so unsettled as to present a novel or complex issue of state law that would warrant the court declining to exercise jurisdiction over an employee's New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., claim against individual defendants, for the simple reason that the individual stated a facially valid claim against those defendants under § 296(1). Heinemann v Howe & Rusling, 260 F. Supp. 2d 592, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7599 (W.D.N.Y. 2003).

Defendants, a town and a supervisor of the former employee, lacked the statutory authority to conduct a N.Y. Gen. Mun. Law § 50-h examination before the employment discrimination case could have been filed in the district court because no such examination was required under the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law, § 290 et seq. Gentile v Town of Huntington, 288 F. Supp. 2d 316, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18870 (E.D.N.Y. 2003).

Aggrieved party has a right of action under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 for actions committed outside New York when that discrimination was committed by a resident person or domestic corporation; claim by a male employee that he was discriminated against by his supervisors after having reported over the course of one year three separate incidents of alleged sexual harassment of female co-workers was dismissed on summary judgment as against the employer, because it was not a New York corporation, and as against one of the supervisors, because there was no proof that he was a New York resident. Howard v Sprint/United Mgmt. Co., 299 F. Supp. 2d 180, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24090 (S.D.N.Y. 2003).

Where plaintiff former federal employee's employment discrimination action was dismissed as untimely, the court declined to exercise its discretion under 28 U.S.C.S. § 1367(c) over the employee's remaining state law claim under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296. Harrison v Potter, 323 F. Supp. 2d 593, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12448 (S.D.N.Y. 2004).

Although the federal claims against the union and the union representative had been dismissed for want of subject matter jurisdiction, the doctrine of supplemental jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C.S. § 1367 permitted the court to exercise jurisdiction over the employee's claim against the union and the union representative under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 in light of the remaining federal claims against the city and the hospital because the state law claims against all defendants and the federal claim against the city and the hospital shared a common nucleus of operative fact, and trying the claims together promoted judicial efficiency; therefore, the motion to dismiss the employee's claim for lack of jurisdiction was denied. Cabrera v New York City, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18402 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 13, 2004).

Where the employee sued her employer and supervisor in state court alleging claims of gender discrimination and retaliation in violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, and the employer removed the case to federal court on the basis of diversity jurisdiction, the employee's motion to remand was granted after the employer and the supervisor failed to show that the supervisor was fraudulently joined to defeat diversity. The supervisor's citizenship in New York destroyed the complete diversity necessary for federal diversity jurisdiction. Gross v Home Depot U.S.A., Inc., 386 F. Supp. 2d 296, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9052 (S.D.N.Y. 2005).

In an action for, inter alia, violations of New York State Human Rights Law (NYSHRL), N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., slander per se, and intentional infliction of emotional distress, it was undisputed that none of the defendants was either a New York resident or a domestic corporation; thus, plaintiff's claim was viable only if she alleged that the discriminatory acts occurred in New York. Curto v Med. World Communs., Inc., 388 F. Supp. 2d 101, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27088 (E.D.N.Y. 2005).

After plaintiff's Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), 42 U.S.C.S. § 12101 et seq., claim was dismissed, the federal court declined to exercise jurisdiction over plaintiff's state law claim; because the pendent state law claim was not congruent with the federal claim, it was most appropriate for it to be adjudicated in the New York State courts. Almond v Westchester County Dep't of Corr., 425 F. Supp. 2d 394, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15426 (S.D.N.Y. 2006).

87. Standing to bring action

Under above provisions plaintiff has standing to complain only of grievances to which he has been one of the persons subjected. Gaynor v Rockefeller, 15 N.Y.2d 120, 256 N.Y.S.2d 584, 204 N.E.2d 627, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1651 (N.Y. 1965).

Where evidence that private club served non-member whites while refusing service to blacks present at fashion show open to public established a violation of Executive Law § 296, subd 2, blacks who had not requested service were nevertheless aggrieved persons within the meaning of Executive Law § 297. Batavia Lodge No. 196, L. O. M. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 43 A.D.2d 807, 350 N.Y.S.2d 273, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2914 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1973), rev'd, 35 N.Y.2d 143, 359 N.Y.S.2d 25, 316 N.E.2d 318, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1377 (N.Y. 1974).

As between victim and spouse, it is only former who is "person . . . aggrieved" within ambit of statute granting right of action in damages to any person claiming to be aggrieved by unlawful discriminatory practice, and spouse of person discriminated against is impermissible plaintiff. Weinstein v Hospital for Joint Disease & Medical Center, 53 A.D.2d 627, 384 N.Y.S.2d 203, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13330 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1976).

In a summary proceeding by an administratrix to recover from the decedent's cohabiter, a woman with whom he was living as husband and wife at the time of his death, possession of an apartment leased by decedent, the appellate court held that the proceeding was not an unlawful discrimination on the asserted ground of marital status in violation of Exec Law § 296 since the statute has no application to persons who do not stand substantially in the relationship of landlord and tenant. Young v Carruth, 89 A.D.2d 466, 455 N.Y.S.2d 776, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18408 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1982).

Roommates (one white man and one black man) had standing to bring action against owners of apartment building for damages for alleged unlawful discriminatory practices where roommates alleged that owners knew that white roommate was seeking accommodation for himself and his roommate and that discriminatory practice occurred after white roommate's disclosure that his roommate was black; if such allegations were established, jury could find that both roommates were injured by owner's racial bias, and it was not relevant that one roommate was white. Dunn v Fishbein, 123 A.D.2d 659, 507 N.Y.S.2d 29, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 60809 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Principals of close corporation are generally not considered employees for purposes of determining applicability of CLS Exec § 296, which applies only to employers with 4 or more employees; essential element of control over conduct (including selection, payment of wages and power of dismissal) is generally lacking for principals. Germakian v Kenny International Corp., 151 A.D.2d 342, 543 N.Y.S.2d 66, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7998 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 615, 549 N.Y.S.2d 960, 549 N.E.2d 151, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 3205 (N.Y. 1989).

Sublessee which sought prime landlord's consent to proposed sub-sub-lease of portion of subleased premises to sub-sub-lessee whose principals were black females did not fall within zone of interest which Human Rights Law protects, and thus landlord was entitled to summary judgment in sublessee's action for racial discrimination. Ivan Mogull Music Corp. v Madison-59th Street Corp., 162 A.D.2d 336, 556 N.Y.S.2d 906, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7745 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1990).

Cause of action concerning alleged age discrimination would be dismissed where plaintiff was "partner" of defendant law firm as opposed to "employee" of firm, and thus lacked standing to sue under CLS Exec § 296. Levy v Schnader, Harrison, Segal & Lewis, 232 A.D.2d 321, 648 N.Y.S.2d 572, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10552 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

Plaintiffs, licensed practical nurses, lacked standing to assert claim that medical center's per se policy contravened CLS Civ R § 79-i and CLS Exec § 296 by punishing employees who had asserted their intention to refrain from participating in abortive procedures by requiring them to participate in emergency situations involving abortions since no emergency was implicated in instant circumstances nor did plaintiffs allege that they were forced to perform abortive procedure. Larson v Albany Med. Ctr., 252 A.D.2d 936, 676 N.Y.S.2d 293, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8687 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Prospective sellers did not have standing to assert action under CLS Exec §§ 296 and 297 against property owners association and its environmental control committee for their denial of application by prospective buyers to use property as vacation convent, since prospective sellers had not been victims of any discrimination. In Article 78 proceeding to annul state human rights commissioner's decision that State Division of Human Rights lacked subject matter jurisdiction over complaint alleging that Metropolitan Transit Authority (MTA) denied advantage to petitioner by reason of disability of mental illness, equitable relief sought might have been rendered moot by 1999 and 2000 amendments to Public Authorities Law requiring MTA to establish half-fare program for mentally ill persons on its mass transit system. Staten Island Alliance for the Mentally Ill v Mercado, 273 A.D.2d 36, 708 N.Y.S.2d 402, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6319 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

Within statute to effect that any person claiming to be aggrieved by an unlawful discriminatory employment practice shall have cause of action, "aggrieved person" means victim of the discriminatory practice. Wife of individual against whom an allegedly unlawful discriminatory practice was committed during his employment was not an "aggrieved" person within Executive Law providing that any person claiming to be aggrieved by unlawful discriminatory practice shall have cause of action. Weinstein v Hospital for Joint Diseases & Medical Center, 81 Misc. 2d 366, 365 N.Y.S.2d 398, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2390 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1975), aff'd, 53 A.D.2d 627, 384 N.Y.S.2d 203, 1976 N.Y. New York State had standing to bring suit, in its parens patriae capacity, on behalf of mentally disabled persons, to prove that a partnership, formed by neighboring residential property owners to purchase a house to prevent New York State from purchasing same to be used as a facility for mentally retarded adults, had thereby engaged in unlawful discriminatory practices which violate the civil rights of said mentally retarded citizens. People by Abrams v 11 Cornwell Co., 695 F.2d 34, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 23700 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1982), vacated, 718 F.2d 22, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 16825 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1983).

Naturalized citizen who graduated from foreign medical school, and was neither United States citizen nor permanent resident when he entered medical school, lacked standing to challenge his ineligibility for "Fifth Pathway" program under CLS Educ § 6528(a), whereby United States residents who graduate from foreign medical schools may be licensed after only one year of residency, as board of regents had granted him 2 years' credit toward his residency requirement so that he was required to complete only one year of residency and thus was placed in same position he would have occupied if he had been admitted to Fifth Pathway program, and court would not assume that, because board exercised its discretion to grant 2 years' credit under CLS Educ § 6506(5), it also would have exercised its discretion to waive requirement that he serve one year residency under Fifth Pathway program. Jaghory v New York State Dep't of Educ., 131 F.3d 326, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 35140 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1997).

Wife had standing to sue car rental agency for violation of Human Rights Law, although she who did not personally fill out application to rent car after her husband's application was refused, based on evidence that she showed rental agent her license in effort to secure car after her husband's attempt to rent car was rejected, and that rental agent told her that agency would not rent to her family because they were Puerto Rican. Indian business developer's national origin discrimination claim under CLS Exec Law § 296 is denied summarily, where his agreement with defendant explicitly and unequivocally expressed parties' intent to create independent contractor relationship, because undisputed facts overwhelmingly indicate that developer was independent contractor, not employee of defendant. Tagare v NYNEX Network Sys. Co., 994 F. Supp. 149, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19655 (S.D.N.Y. 1997).

O'Dell v Trans World Entm't Corp., 153 F. Supp. 2d 378, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8865 (S.D.N.Y. 2001), aff'd, 40 Fed. Appx. 628, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 14446 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2002).

Employees lack standing to challenge school district policy, which allows officials to make inquiry into religious tenets of employees' religions before granting "personal" days, where district has given them all leave requested since new policy was implemented, and questioning for "sincerity analysis" of requests has been limited and not intrusive, because employees make no showing that policy is likely to cause them recurring injury. Burns v Warwick Valley Cent. Sch. Dist., 166 F. Supp. 2d 881, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16785 (S.D.N.Y. 2001).

88. Complaint, generally

Where plaintiff merely alleges that he was "born on December 28, 1930" and that his dismissal from employment was based on age discrimination in violation of CLS Exec Law § 296, and where defendants make factual assertions as to cause for plaintiff's dismissal and assert that 6 of 22 employees were plaintiff's age or older, unsubstantiated allegation of discrimination is insufficient to defeat motion for summary judgment. Hill v Westchester Aeronautical Corp., 112 A.D.2d 977, 492 N.Y.S.2d 789, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52191 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1985).

Action to recover damages for unlawful discriminatory practices in housing was properly dismissed as to plaintiffs who were employees of antidiscrimination organization and who had visited defendants' apartment building only as "testers" under pretense of being prospective tenants after others had reportedly been denied accommodations there because of race, since testers conceded that they did not wish to rent apartment and had acted only on behalf of others. Dunn v Fishbein, 123 A.D.2d 659, 507 N.Y.S.2d 29, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 60809 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Employer was entitled to summary judgment dismissing employee's action for wrongful discharge because of disability (under CLS Exec § 296) where employee was discharged for "misuse of sick time" while she was already on disciplinary probation; employee was not discharged because she was unable to perform her duties as result of disability, but was discharged for misconduct. Dicocco v Capital Area Community Health Plan, Inc., 135 A.D.2d 308, 525 N.Y.S.2d 417, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2050 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

Court properly denied county's motion to dismiss county employees' cause of action under Human Rights Law alleging that county discriminated against women by failing to give them equal pay for equal work, since claim was properly maintained against county, it involved continuing wrong and thus was not barred by statute of limitations, and no notice of claim was required because plaintiffs sought to vindicate public right. In action under Human Rights Law, alleging that county discriminated against women by failing to give them equal pay for equal work, court properly dismissed claim against individual county defendants where complaint failed to allege which of them had requisite authority to carry out personnel decisions; however, despite inartful pleadings, court properly granted leave to replead where it determined that plaintiffs' claim might be meritorious. Court properly dismissed action by female county employees against county and individual county defendants insofar as it alleged retaliatory conduct by certain individual defendant in violation of Human Rights Law, since complaint failed to allege discriminatory intent or to allege that any other defendants condoned retaliatory conduct; however, since alleged misconduct was ongoing to time of complaint, notice of claim was not untimely, and leave to replead was properly granted. Court properly dismissed county employees' action against county and individual county defendants insofar as it alleged that female employee was subjected to retaliatory demotion by individual defendant in violation of Human Rights Law, since complaint failed to allege discriminatory intent or to allege that other defendants acquiesced in demotion. Summers v County of Monroe, 147 A.D.2d 949, 537 N.Y.S.2d 703, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1294 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. dismissed, 74 N.Y.2d 735, 544 N.Y.S.2d 819, 543 N.E.2d 84, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 4950 (N.Y. 1989).

Claim of violation of federal and state prohibitions of discrimination against handicapped was sufficiently pleaded, and motion to dismiss was properly denied, where hearing-impaired Haitian woman alleged that (1) city and state governmental entities, in attempting to provide service to prevent foster care placement of her children, deprived her of benefits by communicating with her only once in sign language and thus failed to perform any reasonably adequate provision of services, and (2) her children were removed from her because of her deafness and inability to hear them. Martin A. v Gross, 153 A.D.2d 812, 546 N.Y.S.2d 75, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11926 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1989), app. dismissed, 75 N.Y.2d 808, 552 N.Y.S.2d 110, 551 N.E.2d 603, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 31 (N.Y. 1990).

Attorneys were entitled to dismissal of action for violation of plaintiffs' civil rights which arose when attorneys, on behalf of hospital, applied to Supreme Court for order permitting hospital to give blood transfusions to plaintiff (Jehovah's Witness who was experiencing severe hemorrhaging after giving birth), which was granted ex parte but later vacated for failure to give notice, since plaintiff failed to expressly allege that attorneys were motivated by "malicious intentions." Nicoleau v Brookhaven Memorial Hosp. Ctr., 181 A.D.2d 815, 581 N.Y.S.2d 382, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3918 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 80 N.Y.2d 754, 587 N.Y.S.2d 905, 600 N.E.2d 632, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 1655 (N.Y. 1992).

State bar candidate, who suffered from dyslexia and who failed state bar examination, failed to state cause of action against state Board of Law Examiners under anti-discrimination provisions of CLS Exec § 296(1)(a); only Court of Appeals is empowered to waive or modify requirement of written bar exam, and CLS Jud § 464 merely authorizes Board of Law Examiners to perform ministerial role of certifying names of candidates who have successfully passed written exam. Koeppel v Wachtler, 183 A.D.2d 808, 583 N.Y.S.2d 975, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7293 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1992).

Complaint under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a), alleging improper discharge of attorneys by client based solely on race, was properly dismissed since statute applies to employees, and parties' relationship was that of attorney and client rather than employer and employee. Giaimo & Vreeburg v Smith, 192 A.D.2d 41, 599 N.Y.S.2d 841, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7011 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. dismissed, 82 N.Y.2d 803, 604 N.Y.S.2d 559, 624 N.E.2d 697, 1993 N.Y. Actions against municipality to recover damages for unlawful discriminatory practices brought under CLS Exec § 296 are not subject to notice of claim requirement set down in CLS Gen Mun § 50-e for tort claims involving personal injury, wrongful death, or property damage. Morrison v New York City Police Dep't, 214 A.D.2d 394, 625 N.Y.S.2d 174, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4208 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1995), app. denied, sub. op., 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7519 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't June 20, 1995).

Complaint alleging that termination of school teacher's employment was unlawfully based on acts of sex discrimination by principals employed by school district should have been dismissed for failure to comply with notice of claim requirement under CLS Educ § 3813(1). Saranac Lake Cent. Sch. Dist. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 226 A.D.2d 794, 640 N.Y.S.2d 303, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3503 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 816, 651 N.Y.S.2d 406, 674 N.E.2d 336, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3340 (N.Y. 1996)).

Plaintiff's age discrimination action was barred by release where it was undisputed that he executed employment termination agreement expressly releasing defendant from all claims including those "arising under federal, state or local laws prohibiting employment discrimination." Cramer v Newburgh Molded Prods., 228 A.D.2d 541, 645 N.Y.S.2d 46, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7114 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 803, 653 N.Y.S.2d 280, 675 N.E.2d 1233, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 4267 (N.Y. 1996).

Bare allegation that plaintiff was forced to resign due to his age was insufficient to state action to set aside release on ground that it was procured by duress. Cramer v Newburgh Molded Prods., 228 A.D.2d 541, 645 N.Y.S.2d 46, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7114 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 803, 653 N.Y.S.2d 280, 675 N.E.2d 1233, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 4267 (N.Y. 1996).

Assertion that plaintiff "Annette Cramer" was terminated "because she was married to Joseph Cramer" did not set forth cognizable action under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a), which prohibits discrimination based on individual's marital status rather than on fact that individual is married to any particular partner. Cramer v Newburgh Molded Prods., 228 A.D.2d 541, 645 N.Y.S.2d 46, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7114 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 803, 653 N.Y.S.2d 280, 675 N.E.2d 1233, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 4267 (N.Y. 1996).

Employment discrimination action brought against board of education was properly dismissed for failure to timely file notice of claim under CLS Educ § 3813(1), even though such failure is not fatal where action is brought to vindicate public interest, since plaintiffs were merely seeking damages for lost retirement benefits. Doyle v Board of Educ., 230 A.D.2d 820, 646 N.Y.S.2d 842, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8550 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

Complaint was properly dismissed where plaintiffs did not plead that they offered to bear expense of building modifications they requested (CLS Exec § 296(18)(1)), they admitted that originally alleged discriminatory practices and policies were corrected, and they failed to adduce evidence of any other discriminatory practices and policies. Mansolino v Haberman, 239 A.D.2d 276, 658 N.Y.S.2d 843, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5425 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1997).

Plaintiff failed to state cause of action under Executive Law where she did not allege any acts of age or disability discrimination. Arroyo v New York State Ins. Dep't, 240 A.D.2d 307, 659 N.Y.S.2d 750, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6726 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 803, 668 N.Y.S.2d 558, 691 N.E.2d 630, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4203 (N.Y. 1997).

Allegations that individual defendant made both physical and verbal sexual advances toward plaintiff that were unwelcome and repelled, that she was told her job evaluation was tied to her willingness to accept advances, and that she was forced to resign because corporate defendant did not provide vehicle of redress stated action for both hostile environment and quid pro quo sexual harassment under Human Rights Law; those same allegations also showed discriminatory conduct within limitations period sufficiently similar to alleged conduct without limitations period to justify conclusion that both were part of single discriminatory practice, and thus plaintiff's claim was timely in its entirety under continuing violation doctrine. Walsh v Covenant House, 244 A.D.2d 214, 664 N.Y.S.2d 282, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11535 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1997).

Plaintiffs, licensed practical nurses, stated action under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a) by alleging that they showed religious or moral belief held by them, that defendants were aware thereof, and that defendants failed to reasonably accommodate such religious belief by summarily terminating plaintiffs for their refusal to the form abortive procedures. Larson v Albany Med. Ctr., 252 A.D.2d 936, 676 N.Y.S.2d 293, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8687 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

In action for retaliation under CLS Exec § 296(7) brought against Board of Trustees of divinity school (defendant), court should have granted defendant's motion to dismiss complaint where there were no allegations that defendant fell within ambit of CLS Exec § 292(1), nor was it alleged that activity or activities in which defendant engaged were allegedly prohibited under Human Rights Law; although plaintiff alleged that defendant violated general duty to accommodate her disability under CLS Exec § 296(3)(a), that section applied to employers, licensing agencies, employment agencies, and labor organizations and did not apply here. Edwards v Board of Trustees of Colgate Rochester Divinity Sch., 254 A.D.2d 709, 677 N.Y.S.2d 868, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10379 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

Defendant's motion to strike jury demand should have been denied in this employment discrimination/sexual harassment action wherein plaintiff seeks back pay and compensatory money damages for mental pain and suffering and alleged wrongful infliction of mental distress; plaintiff has never requested reinstatement in her complaint; plaintiff is proceeding primarily under State Human Rights Law and nowhere does plaintiff actually request equitable relief; plaintiff's ritualistic use in prayer for relief of language "and such other and further relief as to this court seems just and proper" does not change legal character of relief demanded; fact that complaint asserts that plaintiff "seeks appropriate relief in contract" is also not determinative since plaintiff will be able to receive full redress from award of money damages only and she has claimed that she does not desire reinstatement or other equitable relief. Vega v Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 146 A.D.2d 495, 536 N.Y.S.2d 451, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 228 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1989).

Complaint properly stated action for violation of CLS Exec § 296(16) by alleging that defendant took adverse employment actions against plaintiff, based on fact that plaintiff, police officer, was arrested, although arrest had not resulted in conviction. Annabi v Cassino, 269 A.D.2d 551, 703 N.Y.S.2d 745, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2133 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2000).

Plaintiff failed to state cause of action for retaliation under CLS Exec § 296(1)(e) where he did not allege that he had been retaliated against for participating in formal Human Rights Law proceeding, and he did not support or aid another's Human Rights Law complaint. Unotti v ABC, 273 A.D.2d 68, 710 N.Y.S.2d

822, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6339 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

Plaintiff's complaint stated a cause of action under Exec Law § 296, which prohibits discrimination in employment because of sex, by alleging: (1) that the defendant used his hegemonic position as her employer to influence her to acquiesce in and importuned her to engage in sexual intercourse with him; (2) that a condition of apprehension on her part was created to the effect that her employment would be terminated if she refused to engage in such sexual intercourse; and (3) that upon her refusal to continue sexual intercourse with defendant her employment was in fact terminated. Fletcher v Greiner, 106 Misc. 2d 564, 435 N.Y.S.2d 1005, 1980 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2734 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1980).

Plaintiff's discharge from his employment with a town highway department solely because he was the son of the former town supervisor, a political adversary of the successor supervisor, did not state a cause of action for unlawful discriminatory practice under Exec Law § 296(1) as a discharge based on national origin; although Exec Law § 292(8) provides that the term national origin includes ancestry, the legislative intent of the statute was to prohibit discrimination based upon the country in which an individual was born, as well as the country in which an individual's ancestors were born; the discharge of an employee based on political differences with the employee's father is not prohibited. Ingalls v Lyndon, 127 Misc. 2d 442, 486 N.Y.S.2d 659, 1985 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2614 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1985).

Complaint alleging that plaintiff was ultimately removed from job as result of action of his immediate supervisor in attempting to replace him with female employee with whom supervisor was having intimate sexual relationship would be dismissed, without prejudice, as failing to state cause of action under CLS Exec § 296 in absence of allegation that preferential treatment accorded to other employee resulted in discrimination not just against plaintiff but against other employees of same gender. Nicolo v Citibank New York State, N. A., 147 Misc. 2d 111, 554 N.Y.S.2d 795, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 184 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1990).

Plaintiff failed to state cognizable claim under either New York City or New York State Human Rights Law by alleging that school district's denial of health insurance benefits to his domestic partner constituted discrimination on basis of marital status and sexual orientation. Funderburke v Uniondale Union Free Sch. Dist. No. 15, 172 Misc. 2d 963, 660 N.Y.S.2d 659, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 260 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997), aff'd, 251 A.D.2d 622, 676 N.Y.S.2d 199, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7881 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

Claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress based on plaintiff's allegations of sex discrimination by defendant employer and its president was insufficient as matter of law where no physical contact or threat thereof was involved. Gerson v Giorgio Sant'Angelo Collectibles, 176 Misc. 2d 388, 671 N.Y.S.2d 958, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 114 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1998).

Claims that the lessor owners of a commercial building sought to bar the transgender clients of one of their tenants from using any rest room in the building, and in fact to bar them from the building entirely, stated a claim for gender discrimination under the New York Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(5)(b). Hispanic Aids Forum v Estate of Bruno, 839 N.Y.S.2d 691, 16 Misc. 3d 960, 238 N.Y.L.J. 28, 2007 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4843 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2007).

Claims that the lessor owners of a commercial building discriminated against the transgender clients of one of the building tenants on the basis of disability when the lessors demanded that the clients stop using rest rooms that were not for their biological sex, failed to state a cause of action because there were no allegations that the tenant had suggested reasonable accommodations that were rejected by the lessors. Hispanic Aids Forum v Estate of Bruno, 839 N.Y.S.2d 691, 16 Misc. 3d 960, 238 N.Y.L.J. 28, 2007 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4843 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2007).

Because an employee's notice of claim alleging a violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 did not comply with N.Y. County Law § 52 or N.Y. Gen. Mun. Law § 50-e, it was dismissed. Sowich v County of Oneida, 938 N.Y.S.2d 413, 35 Misc. 3d 486, 2011 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 6360 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2011), aff'd, 109 A.D.3d 1170, 971 N.Y.S.2d 720, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6206 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2013).

A complaint charging violation of this section of the law by an apartment owner and his rental agent and seeking an injunction against sale or transfer of the property or rental of certain vacant apartments states no cause of action against the State Commission for Human Rights and that agency is accordingly not a proper party to the proceedings. Redd v Zier, 229 N.Y.S.2d 582, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4175 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1962).

Trial court properly dismissed a claim by a law client against a law firm, alleging a violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, as, even if it were assumed that a law firm or an attorney's office was considered a "place of public accommodation" as defined by N.Y. Exec. Law § 292(9), the client failed to state a cause of action because she was not denied any "accommodations, advantages, facilities, or privileges" by the law firm under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(2)(a). Ferdinand v Crecca & Blair, 5 A.D.3d 538, 774 N.Y.S.2d 714, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2740 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 3 N.Y.3d 609, 786 N.Y.S.2d 812, 820 N.E.2d 291, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 2495 (N.Y. 2004).

Former employee sufficiently stated a cause of action for constructive discharge for opposing discriminatory practices under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(e) as to a former employer and two former coworkers where the former employee was further harassed after complaining of harassment and the coworkers allegedly aide and abetted the employer in constructively discharging the former employee from employment by making the atmosphere in the workplace intolerable. Mitchell v TAM Equities, Inc., 27 A.D.3d 703, 812 N.Y.S.2d 611, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3762 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

Former employee's complaint sufficiently stated a cause of action pursuant to N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a), based on sex and race harassment that created a hostile work environment where the employee alleged coworkers directed sexually and racially offensive language at the employee and the behavior was ignored by management. Mitchell v TAM Equities, Inc., 27 A.D.3d 703, 812 N.Y.S.2d 611, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3762 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

Former employee's complaint stated a cause of action against the employer pursuant to N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(7) based on unlawful retaliation where the employee's supervisors allegedly retaliated against the employee by, among other things, arbitrarily reprimanding the employee, personally berating the employee in front of subordinates, refusing to permit the employee normal lunch and personal breaks during long work days, and compelling the employee to return to work against medical advice after an injury. Mitchell v TAM Equities, Inc., 27 A.D.3d 703, 812 N.Y.S.2d 611, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3762 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

Former employee's N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 complaint was properly dismissed as to a parent company and sister company as there were no allegations in the complaint describing what direct role, if any, those parties had in the events underlying the discrimination action. Mitchell v TAM Equities, Inc., 27 A.D.3d 703, 812 N.Y.S.2d 611, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3762 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

Former manager of travel company must amend complaint, which alleges age and employment discrimination against employer in violation of NY Exec Law § 296, where manager failed to allege sufficient facts to determine whether there exists ongoing state administrative proceeding on claim, because federal court cannot exercise jurisdiction over state claim for age discrimination while state administrative proceeding is pending. Zinaman v USTS New York, Inc., 798 F. Supp. 128, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9991 (S.D.N.Y. 1992).

Allegations in male former employee's complaint that employer knew that he would provide evidence favorable to female employee's sexual harassment charge adequately alleged that employee "participated in any manner" in investigation, proceeding, or hearing under Title VII and CLS Exec Law § 296(1)(e). Kaible v U.S. Computer Group, 27 F. Supp. 2d 373, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19214 (E.D.N.Y. 1998).

Employee's complaint was sufficient to support a claim that her employer discriminated against her because of her marital status as a single or engaged woman in violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, to survive dismissal for failure to state a claim. McGrath v Nassau Health Care Corp., 217 F. Supp. 2d 319, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14094 (E.D.N.Y. 2002).

Employee's employment discrimination action failed to survive summary judgment because the employee's sole allegation that she was terminated under circumstances giving rise to an inference of discrimination was that she was not treated in the same way as her supervisor, but the supervisor was not a similarly situated employee; the supervisor was a permanent employee of the employer, had responsibilities different from those of the employee, and the employee and the supervisor were disciplined for wholly different conduct (the employee was terminated after she directly violated the asset protection policies causing the employer to lose in excess of $11,000, and the supervisor was given a probationary warning on account of his management failures). Ortiz v Brookstone Co., 274 F. Supp. 2d 456, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13077 (S.D.N.Y. 2003).

Because the actor's complaint did not allege any discriminatory impact in New York, the actor could not support claims under the New York City and New York State Human Rights Laws. Pearce v Manhattan Ensemble Theater, Inc., 528 F. Supp. 2d 175, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16487 (S.D.N.Y. 2007).

Former employee's claims under N.Y. Exec. Law §§ 296 and 297 failed because (1) the plain language of N.Y. County Law § 52 clearly incorporated the notice of claim requirement contained in N.Y. Gen. Mun. Law § 50-e and applied it to any claim or notice of claim against a county for invasion of personal or property rights, of every name and nature; (2) the notice of claim provision covered the employee's claims against the county and its entities, which included a community college, an entity that was owned and operated by the county and whose employees were considered county employees; (3) the employee failed to satisfy the notice of claim requirement contained in N.Y. Gen. Mun. Law § 50-e because the employee failed to file a notice of claim; (4) the action was a private civil rights lawsuit and had not been brought in the public interest; (5) the employee never sought leave to serve a late notice of claim; and (6) the employee failed to offer a single case in which a court held that the filing of a complaint with the New York State Department of Human Rights, or the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, satisfied the notice requirement of N.Y. Gen. Mun. Law § 50-e. Cody v County of Nassau, 577 F. Supp. 2d 623, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 72262 (E.D.N.Y. 2008), aff'd, 345 Fed. Appx. 717, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 20662 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2009).

In a former employee's suit for race and sex discrimination, the former employee's State of New York and city law claims survived the union's motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action because the holding of Martin, which provides that in common-law actions against unincorporated associations, individual liability of every single member must be alleged and proven, did not apply since it is established by N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1-a)(c) that a labor organization, such as a union, does have an existence independent of its members. Langford v Int'l Union of Operating Eng'rs, Local 30, 765 F. Supp. 2d 486, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17789 (S.D.N.Y. 2011).

Assuming that the employees otherwise stated a valid claim for age discrimination, identifying additional significant factors did not foreclose the possibility that age was the "but for" factor for the adverse employment actions taken against them; thus, the employees plausibly stated a claim for age discrimination under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296. Fagan v U.S. Carpet Installation, Inc., 770 F. Supp. 2d 490, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28552 (E.D.N.Y. 2011).

Plaintiff failed to state a claim for racial discrimination as he failed to allege facts showing that a co-worker's alleged racist remarks were anything other than an isolated incident and his allegation that other similarly-situated employees were treated more favorably was a bare conclusion unsupported by any specific alleged facts. McDowell v N. Shore-Long Island Jewish Health Sys., 788 F. Supp. 2d 78, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 58653 (E.D.N.Y. 2011).

Plaintiff failed to state a claim for retaliation as the only causal connection plaintiff alleged was the temporal proximity between his complaint about racial harassment and his termination; the temporal proximity, without more, was insufficient to state a claim. McDowell v N. Shore-Long Island Jewish Health Sys., 788 F. Supp. 2d 78, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 58653 (E.D.N.Y. 2011).

Only reasonable interpretation of the lease conditions provision was that plaintiffs were required to obtain a guarantee from a government agency for the remaining rent due for the one-year lease period and the complaint was devoid of any facts from which could be inferred that, if given the opportunity, plaintiffs' could have provided a guarantee from a governmental agency; thus, as plaintiffs failed to allege they were qualified to rent the unit, they failed to state valid housing discrimination claims under the Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988, , 42 U.S.C.S. §§ 3604(f) and 3617, Americans with Disabilities Act, Rehabilitation Act of 1973, and New York State Human Rights Law. Johnson v Levy, 812 F. Supp. 2d 167, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 106258 (E.D.N.Y. 2011).

89. —Amended complaint

Plaintiff would be permitted to amend complaint to add cause of action for gender based discrimination under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a) et seq. where (1) plaintiff alleged that she was member of protected class (women) and that defendant discharged her from employment and discriminated against her during her employment because of her gender, (2) plaintiff submitted supporting affidavit with exhibit which contained excerpt of deposition testimony of president of defendant which corroborated allegations, and (3) defendant opposed motion to amend complaint only with affidavit of counsel and affidavit of president of corporation which attempted to discredit his own earlier deposition testimony. Daniels v Empire-Orr, Inc., 151 A.D.2d 370, 542 N.Y.S.2d 614, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8121 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1989).

Plaintiff was properly permitted to amend his age and religious discrimination complaint against law firm in order to add individual partners of firm, despite passage of several years between original complaint and amendment, since partners are jointly and severally liable for wrongful acts of partnership under CLS Partn §§ 24 and 26. Schutz v Finkelstein Bruckman Wohl Most & Rothman, 232 A.D.2d 470, 648 N.Y.S.2d 174, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10217 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

In action for sexual harassment and retaliatory discharge, court properly denied plaintiff's motion to amend complaint to add action for wrongful termination based on disability discrimination under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a) since plaintiff had been aware of facts underlying alleged claim since inception of action, she failed to offer any reason or excuse for delay in seeking to amend complaint, and defendants had prepared case in response to original complaint, had no notice of new claim, and would suffer prejudice by its late edition. Castagne v Barouh, 249 A.D.2d 257, 671 N.Y.S.2d 283, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3656 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

Because an employee's amended complaint was sufficient under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code §§ 8-107, and 8-130 to establish a hostile work environment, that the first employer transferred the employee to a different work location and gave the employee an undesirable schedule in retaliation, and that the employers aided and abetted each other's race and gender discrimination, the employers' motion to dismiss were denied. Artis v Random House, Inc., 936 N.Y.S.2d 479, 34 Misc. 3d 858, 2011 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 6383 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2011).

Former employee is granted leave to amend her complaint to restate her claim of age discrimination based upon theory of disparate treatment but cannot add claim of age discrimination based upon disparate impact under CLS Exec Law § 296, where her EEOC complaint did not mention disparate impact theory, because proposed new claim is not reasonably related to claim asserted in EEOC complaint, and unexhausted claim may not be added. McKinney v Eastman Kodak Co., 975 F. Supp. 462, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12934 (W.D.N.Y. 1997).

Thruway employee's sex and disability discrimination claims under CLS Exec Law §§ 290 et seq. survive only to extent of her surviving federal claims, where federal claims in amended complaint were narrowed to include only those made in EEOC charge and allegation of forced, additional medical examinations after filing of charge, because allowing broader state-law claims to continue in federal court would enable plaintiff to circumvent statutory administrative exhaustion requirements. Cable v New York State Thruway Auth., 4 F. Supp. 2d 120, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7678 (N.D.N.Y. 1998).

Thruway employee's sex and disability discrimination claims under CLS Exec Law §§ 290 et seq. survive only to extent of her surviving federal claims, where federal claims in amended complaint were narrowed to include only those made in EEOC charge and allegation of forced, additional medical examinations after filing of charge, because allowing broader state-law claims to continue in federal court would enable plaintiff to circumvent statutory administrative exhaustion requirements. Cable v New York State Thruway Auth., 4 F. Supp. 2d 120, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7678 (N.D.N.Y. 1998).

Teacher who had attempted to bring Title VII employment discrimination suit against middle school director in director's personal capacity, when action could only be brought against school under Title VII, would be allowed to amend complaint in interests of justice, after teacher retained attorney, in order to bring personal capacity claim against director under Exec § 296. Copeland v Rosen, 38 F. Supp. 2d 298, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2639 (S.D.N.Y. 1999), dismissed without prejudice, 194 F.R.D. 127, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8243 (S.D.N.Y. 2000).

Female former employee's gender discrimination claim is dismissed with leave to file second amended complaint, where she has provided no specific factual allegations to enable court to evaluate her information and belief assertions that male employees performing substantially equal work were treated preferentially, because she has done nothing more than to paraphrase relevant legal standards, and her vague, conclusory allegations are insufficient to establish prima facie case of discrimination. Rose v Goldman, Sachs & Co., 163 F. Supp. 2d 238, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13744 (S.D.N.Y. 2001).

Terminated white male senior portfolio manager is granted leave to amend his race and discrimination claims within 20 days, even though he was suddenly fired and denied bonus while other old, female, or African-American managers were not, where he alleges only that he was fired and others were not and that person who fired him said he "did not fit profile of High Yield Group," because further allegations are required to raise inference of discrimination. Tappe v Alliance Capital Mgmt. L.P., 177 F. Supp. 2d 176, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17501 (S.D.N.Y. 2001).

Former employee was entitled to amend her complaint pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a) to include her race discrimination claim under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1981 and N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 against her former employer, co-employees, and officials, because 1.) the employee's allegations that she was treated more harshly than similarly situated employees who had used profanities in a patient-care area and that her tardiness did not prevent her from successfully performing her job were sufficient to withstand a motion to dismiss, and 2.) the employee's allegations regarding the authority of the co-employees and officials were sufficient to state a claim for personal liability by the co-employees and officials. Gilmore v Univ. of Rochester, 410 F. Supp. 2d 127, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1863 (W.D.N.Y. 2006).

Professional skater's amended complaint was sufficient to withstand a Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) motion on her claim of a sexually hostile workplace where she alleged sufficiently severe and pervasive abusive conditions, including that (1) her supervisor and employer required that the skaters be sexually alluring and required them to stuff their bras; (2) her supervisor made disparaging remarks about the sexual morals of a fellow skater; (3) her supervisor initiated unwelcome conversations with plaintiff and other skaters about their sex lives, his sex life, pubic hair, and oral sex; (4) the employer's deputy director of public relations made unwelcome sexual advances toward the skater and other employees of the employer; (5) at a bar, the deputy director of public relations proceeded to aggressively solicit the skater for sex verbally and by allegedly putting his tongue down her throat. Prince v Madison Square Garden, 427 F. Supp. 2d 372, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17562 (S.D.N.Y. 2006).

Professional skater's amended complaint was sufficient to withstand a Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) motion on her claim under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(6) that her supervisor was liable as an "aider and abettor," in accordance with case law of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit holding individually liable those within the employment relationship who primarily and directly perpetrated the harassment. The skater alleged that (1) her supervisor required that the skaters be sexually alluring and required them to stuff their bras; (2) her supervisor made disparaging remarks about the sexual morals of a fellow skater; and (3) her supervisor initiated unwelcome conversations with plaintiff and other skaters about their sex lives, his sex life, pubic hair, and oral sex. Prince v Madison Square Garden, 427 F. Supp. 2d 372, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17562 (S.D.N.Y. 2006).

90. Class action

Above provision is not enforceable in class action by Negro plaintiffs on behalf of themselves and all other Negro citizens of New York similarly situated for injunctive and declaratory relief against certain labor unions and various officials of State and of city therein, challenging expenditure of public funds on public works projects in such city on ground that qualified Negroes are unlawfully denied employment and opportunity therefor because contractors on such projects obtain virtually all their labor from defendant unions who exclude Negroes from membership and apprenticeship programs solely on basis of race and color. Provisions of subdivisions 1 and 1-a of above statute give full and adequate remedy for discrimination by either a labor organization, an employer, or any joint labor-management committee. There is therefore no warrant for invocation of aid of equity or for granting of declaratory relief in the case of any such discrimination. Gaynor v Rockefeller, 15 N.Y.2d 120, 256 N.Y.S.2d 584, 204 N.E.2d 627, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1651 (N.Y. 1965).

In an action by a former employee against her employer charging a violation of the Human Rights Law, the employee, having invoked the jurisdiction of New York State, was properly ordered to appear for oral examination prior to trial in New York City, although she lived in South Carolina. Moreover, the employee, who had moved for class action certification, could not validly contend that she lacked financial resources to travel to New York for examination when she was simultaneously attempting to show that she would fairly and adequately protect the class. Mack v J. C. Penney Co., 81 A.D.2d 761, 439 N.Y.S.2d 118, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11395 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1981).

Police lieutenant's motion for summary judgment is denied where police officer alleged quid pro quo sexual harassment and hostile work environment because evidence supported officer's allegation that lieutenant was actual perpetrator of sexual harassment and not merely supervisor who could claim immunity from vicarious liability. Poulsen v City of N. Tonawanda, 811 F. Supp. 884, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 922 (W.D.N.Y. 1993).

Individual incentive payment of only $2,500 is awarded to former employee of large oil company, even though other specific plaintiffs in class action race discrimination case received $50,000 or more for their special assistance or unique circumstances, because former employee, who resigned shortly before commencement of case, does not face any significant postlitigation burden or risk of retaliation by employer. Roberts v Texaco, Inc., 979 F. Supp. 185, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17056 (S.D.N.Y. 1997).

91. Declaratory judgment

Biologist claiming age and sex discrimination in termination of her employment with county health department was entitled to judgment declaring that she was not required to file notice of claim as prerequisite to maintaining that claim under CLS Exec § 296 with State Division of Human Rights (DHR) where (1) notice of claim requirements for tort claims against municipality apply to private discriminatory practice claims under § 296 that are commenced in court of law, not before administrative agency, (2) once person has elected to pursue § 296 claim with administrative agency, he or she is precluded by CLS Exec § 297(9) from pursuing same claim in court of law and thus should not be subjected to rules applicable to court claims, and (3) underlying purpose of notice of claim requirements was satisfied by DHR's compliance with administrative procedures set forth in Human Rights Law that gave county ample opportunity to investigate claim Freudenthal v County of Nassau, 283 A.D.2d 6, 726 N.Y.S.2d 116, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5645 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2001), aff'd, 99 N.Y.2d 285, 755 N.Y.S.2d 56, 784 N.E.2d 1165, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 139 (N.Y. 2003).

Before formal complaint was filed, county health department was on notice of potential claim against it under CLS Exec § 296 for age and sex discrimination in termination of biologist's employment and had ample opportunity to investigate and address that claim, and thus underlying purpose of statutory notice of claim requirements was satisfied despite lack of formal notice of claim with county, where (1) within weeks after termination on January 9, 1992, county human rights commission began investigating biologist's claim, (2) that investigation included conversations with some of biologist's former colleagues, including at least one bureau chief, (3) formal charges of discrimination were filed with State Division of Human Rights (DHR) on April 21, 1992, less than 4 months after termination, (4) DHR requested that county health department respond to discovery requests no later than June 24, 1992, and (5) at least twice between July and September 1992, county health department offered to DHR documentation and explanations to support its actions. Freudenthal v County of Nassau, 283 A.D.2d 6, 726 N.Y.S.2d 116, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5645 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2001), aff'd, 99 N.Y.2d 285, 755 N.Y.S.2d 56, 784 N.E.2d 1165, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 139 (N.Y. 2003).

Application by state police for an order staying Division of Human Rights from holding hearing on complaint charging that state police acted in discriminatory manner in violation of Human Rights Law by refusing request to take police examination on day other than Saturday which was day observed by applicant as sabbath would be considered as in nature of a request for declaratory judgment as to whether Human Rights Law was applicable to state police. State Div. of Human Rights v State, 77 Misc. 2d 597, 354 N.Y.S.2d 287, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1227 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1973).

92. Discovery

In action under Human Rights Law, CLS Exec § 296, arising out of corporation's reduction in labor force, discovery order requiring corporation to furnish specified raw data regarding its employees "in any facility in Monroe County" and furnish certain personnel information for employees hired in Monroe County was overly broad, and would be modified to limit scope of discovery to plaintiff's employing unit within Monroe County since reduction in corporation's work force was implemented and managed at local level, and decision to terminate plaintiff's employment was made, implemented and managed by plaintiff's employing unit. Hasiotis v Xerox Corp., 191 A.D.2d 973, 594 N.Y.S.2d 509, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2925 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1993).

In action against stock exchange for violation of Human Rights Law, plaintiff would be required to sign confidentiality agreement as condition of disclosure of documents regarding exchange's security and evacuation routes, even though exchange was not public entity entitled to assert "public interest" privilege, where documents sought involved sensitive security information that, if released to the public, could jeopardize safety of exchange's employees, and plaintiff gave no valid reason for refusing to sign agreement. Blum v New York Stock Exch., 263 A.D.2d 522, 693 N.Y.S.2d 225, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8377 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

In employment discrimination action setting forth disparate treatment and disparate impact claims, court properly found that plaintiff was entitled to information respecting defendant's termination of employees with 25 years of service, but should have limited defendant's disclosure to employees terminated within 5 years prior to plaintiff's termination. Abbott v Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Ctr., 276 A.D.2d 432, 714 N.Y.S.2d 287, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10750 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

In employment discrimination action setting forth disparate treatment and disparate impact claims, plaintiff was entitled to disclosure of other charges filed against defendant but court should have limited scope of defendant's disclosure to discrimination charges based on discrimination by reason of race or color. Abbott v Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Ctr., 276 A.D.2d 432, 714 N.Y.S.2d 287, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10750 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

In an action for wrongful discharge in violation of subdivision 1(a) of the above statute, it was held on motion for pretrial examination of witnesses that the tendency of any question to incriminate any of such witnesses under Penal Law § 700 could not then be dealt with and that the privilege against such incrimination must be claimed at the time each question is asked. Flanigen v Mullen & Gunn, Inc., 45 Misc. 2d 944, 258 N.Y.S.2d 609, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2051 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1965).

93. Burden of proof

Executive Law § 296, subd 1(a) in essence prevents disparate treatment of individuals, having regard for their abilities, capacities, and qualifications, gender as a source of such differentiation being neutralized, and the statute imposes the burden of warranting the exceptional treatment of the individual on the employer. Board of Education v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 42 A.D.2d 49, 345 N.Y.S.2d 93, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4062 (N.Y. Burden of proving entitlement to bona fide occupational qualification exception to sex discrimination laws must be borne by party claiming its benefit. Guardian Capital Corp. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 46 A.D.2d 832, 360 N.Y.S.2d 937, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3585 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974), app. dismissed, 36 N.Y.2d 806, 1975 N.Y. To make out prima facie case of age discrimination in employment, plaintiff must show that he or she was member of protected class, prove that he or she was discharged, prove that he or she was qualified for position, and either show that he or she was replaced by younger person, produce direct evidence of discriminatory intent, or produce statistical evidence of discriminatory conduct. Bockino v Metropolitan Transp. Auth., 224 A.D.2d 471, 638 N.Y.S.2d 137, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1204 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 87 N.Y.2d 1017, 644 N.Y.S.2d 150, 666 N.E.2d 1064, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 1204 (N.Y. 1996), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 805, 646 N.Y.S.2d 985, 670 N.E.2d 226, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 1688 (N.Y. 1996).

Article 78 proceeding to annul findings that State Office of Mental Health (SOMH) discriminated and retaliated against employee was properly dismissed where administrative law judge found that SOMH's witnesses were not credible and that employee made prima facie showing of discrimination and retaliation, and thus trier of fact could infer ultimate fact of intentional discrimination without need for employee to prove that SOMH's explanations for its conduct were pretextual. New York State Office of Mental Health v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 273 A.D.2d 829, 709 N.Y.S.2d 755, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6849 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000).

Teachers' association claiming, in Article 78 proceeding, that probationary teacher was unlawfully terminated by school district because of her protected union activity had burden of proving that (1) she was engaged in protected activity, (2) such activity was known to person making adverse employment decision, and (3) adverse action would not have been taken but for protected activity. Rockville Centre Teachers Ass'n v N.Y. State Pub. Empl. Rels. Bd., 281 A.D.2d 425, 721 N.Y.S.2d 112, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2130 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2001).

In dismissing plaintiffs' allegations that defendant employer condoned or acquiesced in sexual harassment committed by male coworkers, court erred by imposing burden on plaintiffs to prove that they reported complained-of incidents to defendant, where defendant failed to plead affirmative defense that plaintiffs failed to take advantage of preventative or corrective opportunities provided by defendant so as to mitigate their damages; furthermore, had defendant pleaded such defense, burden would have been on it to establish defense, not on plaintiffs to disprove it in first instance. Vitale v Rosina Food Prods., 283 A.D.2d 141, 727 N.Y.S.2d 215, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5748 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2001).

Under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a), employee claimed that he was discriminatorily discharged based upon his employer's perception that he had the human immunodeficiency virus. The court dismissed that claim by summary judgment as the employee did not make a showing that the employer's legitimate nondiscriminatory financial distress reason for discharging him was pretextual. Scardace v Mid Island Hosp., Inc., 21 A.D.3d 363, 800 N.Y.S.2d 42, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8229 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2005).

Because a school terminated a teacher's probationary employment due to excessive absenteeism, and because the teacher was an at-will employee under N.Y. Educ. Law § 2573(1)(a), the teacher failed to raise a triable issue of fact that the stated reasons for the teacher's discharge were pretextual; consequently, the teacher was not entitled to damages for violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 or breach of contract. Haviland v Yonkers Pub. Schs, 21 A.D.3d 527, 800 N.Y.S.2d 578, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8694 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2005).

If a plaintiff met the burdens of proof required to show prima facie cases of racial or age discrimination in employment, the employer had to then produce admissible evidence that clearly set forth legitimate, independent and nondiscriminatory reasons to rebut the presumption of discrimination, and if the employer produced such evidence, the burden shifted back to plaintiff, who had to then show that the proffered reason was merely a pretext for discrimination by demonstrating both that the reason was false, and that discrimination was the real reason, but the ultimate burden of persuading the trier of fact that the defendant intentionally discriminated against the plaintiff remained at all times with the plaintiff. Bailey v New York Westchester Sq. Med. Ctr., 38 A.D.3d 119, 829 N.Y.S.2d 30, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 72 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2007).

Trial court properly granted an employer's motion for summary judgment in an employee's action for employment discrimination on the basis of disability because it established a legitimate, non-pretextual reason for the termination of her employment by presenting evidence that the employee had been issued a warning for. inter alia, repeated tardiness, failure to dress in appropriate attire, and failing to know of the sales consultants' attendance and availability, the employee failed to demonstrate the existence of a triable issue of fact as to whether the employer's reasons were pretextual, and the employee presented no evidence that her actual or perceived disability played a role in the employer's decision to terminate her employment. D'Agostino v MMC E., LLC, 125 A.D.3d 751, 184 A.D.3d 719, 125 N.Y.S.3d 751, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3491 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2020).

Although an employee was a member of a protected class, the employee's claims were time barred and for a child's disability, not the employee's own; because the employer had legitimate, independent, and nondiscriminatory reasons to support its challenged actions, the employee was not entitled to relief under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296. Wharton v Town of N. Hempstead, 875 N.Y.S.2d 426, 22 Misc. 3d 83, 2009 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 70 (N.Y. App. Term 2009).

Under the Human Rights Law, once an employer establishes a non-discriminatory reason for the elimination of a position, or a reduction in grade, if the employee alleging age discrimination does not show that the explanation is pretextual, summary judgment in favor of the employer is appropriate. Roundtree v Sch. Dist. of Niagara Falls, 294 A.D.2d 876, 741 N.Y.S.2d 633, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4474 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2002).

Because an employer tendered sufficient evidence that a former employee's employment was terminated for legitimate, nonretaliatory reasons, and the employee failed to raise a triable issue of fact, the trial court properly dismissed the former employee's disability discrimination and retaliation causes of action under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296. Thide v New York State Dept. of Transp., 27 A.D.3d 452, 811 N.Y.S.2d 418, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2602 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

District Court erred in concluding that plaintiffs, pilots of bankrupt airline, failed to create inference of age discrimination in violation of CLS Exec § 296 where plaintiffs showed that airline management representative assigned to investigate and evaluate acquisition of bankrupt airline made numerous comments about age of bankrupt airline's pilot force, referring to them as "contaminated" and " Abdu-Brisson v Delta Air Lines, Inc., 239 F.3d 456, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 2041 (2d Cir. N.Y.), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 993, 122 S. Ct. 460, 151 L. Ed. 2d 378, 2001 U.S. LEXIS 9990 (U.S. 2001).

Plaintiff's hostile work environment and constructive discharge claims failed because no genuine issue of fact precluded the employer from successfully asserting the Faragher/Ellerth affirmative defense; plaintiff did not dispute the reasonableness of the employer's antiharassment policy or its complaint procedures, and the handling of one prior complaint against the supervisor at issue was not adequate evidence to show that the employer "ignored or resisted" complaints against the supervisor similar to the one pressed by plaintiff, nor did it provide a basis to justify plaintiff's failure to avail herself of the employer's complaint procedure. Ferraro v Kellwood Co., 440 F.3d 96, 2006 U.S. App. LEXIS 5707 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2006).

Plaintiff has burden of establishing prima facie case; once he does so, burden is on defendant to demonstrate it had independent, legitimate reason, and not pretext, for action taken against plaintiff and against which plaintiff complains; defendants also have burden to show that any unusual treatment of plaintiff was justified. After plaintiff makes prima facie showing of discrimination and defendants counter with legitimate, non-discriminatory reason for termination, plaintiff is entitled to show facts indicating that stated reason for termination was merely pretext for discrimination; this may be done either directly, by persuading court that discriminatory reason more likely motivated employer, or indirectly, by showing that employer's proffered explanation is unworthy of credence. To establish liability under Human Rights Law plaintiff must prove that employment was terminated because of his disability and that, although disabled, his impairment did not preclude him from performing duties in reasonable manner. O'Keefe v Niagara Mohawk Power Corp., 714 F. Supp. 622, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6454 (N.D.N.Y. 1989).

Elements and burdens of proof are same for discrimination claims brought under 42 USCS § 1981 and CLS Exec § 296. Smith v Cadbury Bevs., 942 F. Supp. 150, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15004 (W.D.N.Y. 1996), aff'd, 116 F.3d 466, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 20232 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1997).

Under Exec § 296, performance of former employee suffering from Type I diabetes, coupled with employer's need to reduce staff, was legitimate, nondisability-based reason for terminating employee, where employee had poor performance statistics and poor performance evaluations overall and in comparison to his co-workers, and employee handbook required employer to consider relative strengths and weaknesses of affected individuals before making any reductions in staff. Burke v Royal Ins. Co., 39 F. Supp. 2d 251, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2962 (E.D.N.Y. 1999).

Standard under Exec § 296 for proving disability is broader than that of federal Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990. Fagan v United Int'l Ins. Co., 128 F. Supp. 2d 182, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 382 (S.D.N.Y. 2001).

Burden-shifting framework of McDonnell Douglas applies to discrimination claims under Exec § 296. Mancabelli v Solvay Union Free Sch. Dist., 180 F. Supp. 2d 371, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19721 (N.D.N.Y. 2001).

In order to allege a prima facie case of gender discrimination, the employee must allege: (1) membership in a protected class/age group, (2) qualification for the position, (3) an adverse employment decision/discharge, and (4) that the decision/discharge took place under circumstances giving rise to an inference of discrimination. Gross v Home Depot U.S.A., Inc., 386 F. Supp. 2d 296, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9052 (S.D.N.Y. 2005).

To establish a prima facie case for retaliation, an employee must show that: (1) he or she was engaged in protected activity;, (2) the employer was aware of that activity, (3) the employee suffered an adverse employment action, and (4) there was a causal connection between the protected activity and the adverse employment action. Gross v Home Depot U.S.A., Inc., 386 F. Supp. 2d 296, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9052 (S.D.N.Y. 2005).

While Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C.S. § 2000e et seq.; the New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296; 42 U.S.C.S. §§ 1983, 1981; and the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment prohibit race-based employment discrimination, they do not prohibit all race-conscious affirmative action plans. An employer's demonstration of the existence and application of an affirmative action plan constitutes a legitimate nondiscriminatory reason under the McDonnell Douglas framework, thus if an employer asserts its compliance with an affirmative action plan as its legitimate nondiscriminatory reason, the burden then shifts back to the plaintiff to show that the plan is invalid. Vivenzio v City of Syracuse, 545 F. Supp. 2d 241, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 31874 (N.D.N.Y. 2008), vacated, in part, 611 F.3d 98, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 13464 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2010).

Although the mental health facility's conduct in treating the patients could have constituted discrimination under N.Y. Exec. Law § 296, the class of patients had not established that the facility acted with the requisite discriminatory intent since the patients only argued that the facility, a residential treatment center, specifically targeted mentally disabled people because of their disabilities. The argument that a party acted with discriminatory animus, simply because it operated a facility for the mentally disabled and mistreats them, was too conclusory to meet the standard for summary judgment. Romano v SLS Residential, Inc., 812 F. Supp. 2d 282, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 67769 (S.D.N.Y. 2011).

Purchasers failed to show they were improperly denied the opportunity to purchase property because of their race; the record clearly revealed that the property owners' decision to sell to another buyer as opposed to the purchasers was dictated by economical concerns and by their desire to sell the property expeditiously. Mitchell v Century 21 Rustic Realty, 233 F. Supp. 2d 445, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21545 (E.D.N.Y. 2002), aff'd in part, vacated in part, 350 F.3d 39, 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 23322 (2d Cir. 2003).

94. Collateral estoppel/res judicata

Determination by Unemployment Insurance Appeal Board that petitioner was "employee" for purposes of his claim for unemployment insurance benefits does not collaterally estop Division of Human Rights from determining that petitioner is independent contractor for purposes of age discrimination suit, since, inasmuch as issue of unemployment is ultimate fact, resolution of which is committed to discretion of board and division under independent bodies of law, there is no identity of issue in board's finding of employment that automatically mandates similar finding by division. Engel v Calgon Corp., 114 A.D.2d 108, 498 N.Y.S.2d 877, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 63686 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986), aff'd, 69 N.Y.2d 753, 512 N.Y.S.2d 801, 505 N.E.2d 244, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 15324 (N.Y. 1987).

In action for allegedly unlawful discriminatory discharge from employment, defendant was not entitled to summary judgment based on arbitration between parties which resulted in determination that plaintiff was discharged for just cause, although arbitrator's award is generally given preclusive effect in subsequent judicial proceeding, since arbitration is inappropriate forum for disposition of employment discrimination claim because arbitrator's sole task is to effectuate parties' intent in connection with collective bargaining agreement, not to consider claim of statutory discrimination. Uryevick v Pepcom Industries, Inc., 155 A.D.2d 450, 547 N.Y.S.2d 109, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13946 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Employee was collaterally estopped from bringing action against employer under CLS Exec § 296 for sexual discrimination and sexual harassment where same claims were decided against employee by federal court in Title VII action after she was given full and fair opportunity to litigate. Porras v Montefiore Medical Center, 185 A.D.2d 784, 588 N.Y.S.2d 135, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10021 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1992), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 704, 595 N.Y.S.2d 399, 611 N.E.2d 300, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 250 (N.Y. 1993).

Plaintiff's action under CLS Exec § 296(7) should have been dismissed where federal court had previously dismissed such action, together with claim based on 42 USCS § 1981, stating that "Plaintiff now concedes that the claims under (federal law) and the New York Executive Law are time barred." Mchawi v State Univ. of New York, Empire State College, 248 A.D.2d 111, 669 N.Y.S.2d 545, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1932 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 804, 677 N.Y.S.2d 779, 700 N.E.2d 318, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 1856 (N.Y. 1998).

Court would annul determination by administrative law judge (ALJ) finding that railroad company's termination of respondent for violent behavior against fellow worker was pretextual, wherein ALJ asserted that she was not bound by prior determination that assault took place, where prior determination to dismiss respondent was upheld on appeal by Special Board of Adjustment, arbitration panel authorized by Railway Labor Act (45 USCS § 153), respondent conceded that Board had administrative status, and Board conclusively determined that respondent violently assaulted and then threatened fellow worker. Metro-North Commuter R.R. Co. v New York State Exec. Dep't Div. of Human Rights, 271 A.D.2d 256, 707 N.Y.S.2d 50, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4101 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

Human Rights Law action was not barred by res judicata based on prior Workers' Compensation Law action, as petitioners were precluded by statute from obtaining compensatory damages in workers' compensation action and, in Human Rights action, employer was directed to pay them for lost wages, less actual earnings and any worker's compensation benefits that they received. Kondracke v Blue, 277 A.D.2d 953, 716 N.Y.S.2d 533, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11599 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000).

Plaintiff's application for and acceptance of disability benefits was not fatal to his action alleging disparate treatment as to terms and conditions of his employment due to disability where employer, by purposefully relieving plaintiff of his duties and "plac(ing) him in a non-salary status unless he fulfill(ed) the requirements for short-term disability," effectively required plaintiff to file application for disability benefits. Novak v Royal Life Ins. Co. of N.Y., 284 A.D.2d 892, 726 N.Y.S.2d 784, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6849 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

Employee's claims of sex discrimination in violation of N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 were barred by res judicata, as the employee had participated in a settlement of a federal class action against her employer, and insurance company, which contained claims duplicative of the allegations in the instant action. Eliasof v Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 39 A.D.3d 801, 835 N.Y.S.2d 628, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5238 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2007).

Judicially unreviewed findings by Division of Human Rights in age discrimination claim under CLS Exec Art 15 did not have preclusive effect on claim, based on same factual allegations, brought in federal court under Age Discrimination in Employment Act, 29 USCS §§ 621 et seq. Astoria Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v Solimino, 501 U.S. 104, 111 S. Ct. 2166, 115 L. Ed. 2d 96, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 3320 (U.S. 1991).

The protection against discrimination afforded by Executive Law § 296 is at least as broad as that afforded by the Federal Constitution and civil rights statutes. Thus, the determination of the Appellate Division affirming the Appeal Board's affirmance of the State Division of Human Rights' dismissal of former employee's race discrimination claim against former employer on the ground of lack of probable cause, res judicata of all other state actions as a matter of statutory law, would be entitled to full faith and credit in a federal court hearing federal constitutional and civil rights claims. Mitchell v National Broadcasting Co., 553 F.2d 265, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 13960 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1977).

State court's upholding of hearing officer's determination of civil service employee misconduct did not collaterally estop employee from litigating separate age discrimination claim in federal court since such claim requires only showing that employee possessed basic skills necessary for performance of job and state court passed only on her conduct on job, not on her minimal qualification to perform it. Owens v New York City Housing Authority, 934 F.2d 405, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 10373 (2d Cir. N.Y.), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 964, 112 S. Ct. 431, 116 L. Ed. 2d 451, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 6582 (U.S. 1991).

Where an employee benefit fund's contention that CLS Executive Law § 296 was preempted by ERISA was rejected in a prior state court proceeding, the doctrine of collateral estoppel prevented the fund from raising the preemption issue again in a federal action to enjoin the Commissioner of New York Human Rights Division from enforcing CLS Executive Law § 296. United Federation of Teachers Welfare Fund v Kramarsky, 451 F. Supp. 333, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17522 (S.D.N.Y. 1978), aff'd, 650 F.2d 1310, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 13404 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1981).

Former employee is collaterally estopped from filing suit against brokerage firm under CLS Exec Law § 296, where New York City Commission on Human Rights has already conducted investigation and determined that there is no probable cause to believe that his charges have any merit, because employee can point to only one relevant witness commission determined not to interview, and that witness was by no means so fundamental that failure to interview him resulted in absence of full and fair opportunity for employee to be heard. Forbes v Merrill Lynch, Fenner & Smith, 957 F. Supp. 450, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2661 (S.D.N.Y. 1997).

Former employee's prior proceedings before city human rights commission, alleging disability discrimination under Americans with Disabilities Act and New York City Administrative Code, collaterally estopped him from pursuing claim under CLS Exec § 296(1)(a) where he had full and fair opportunity to be heard in proceedings before city human rights commission. Forbes v Merrill Lynch, Fenner & Smith, 957 F. Supp. 450, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2661 (S.D.N.Y. 1997).

Black former employees' filing of complaint with New York State Division of Human Rights barred commencement of action under Exec § 296 based on same incident and discriminatory grievance. Whidbee v McDonald's Corp., 75 F. Supp. 2d 183, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18255 (S.D.N.Y. 1999), aff'd in part, vacated in part, 223 F.3d 62, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 20181 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2000).

Former X-ray technologist's claim under Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) (29 USCS §§ 2601 et seq.) is denied summarily, where she had full and fair opportunity to present ADA (42 USCS §§ 12101 et seq.) and Exec § 296 claims to state department of human rights, which determined there was no probable cause to believe her employer had engaged in unlawful discrimination, because collateral estoppel precludes her from relitigating here issue of whether employer terminated her position for legitimate business reasons. Kosakow v New Rochelle Radiology Assocs., P.C., 88 F. Supp. 2d 199, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3122 (S.D.N.Y. 2000), vacated, 274 F.3d 706, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 26954 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2001).

White employee's second suit, alleging race discrimination arising from a failure to promote and resignation, was dismissed based upon collateral estoppel and res judicata. Cameron v Church, 253 F. Supp. 2d 611, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4298 (S.D.N.Y. 2003).

Worker's action against a union, alleging claims under, inter alia, New York State Human Rights Law, N.Y. Exec. Law § 296 et seq., was barred on collateral estoppel grounds, as the case relied upon issues decided against the worker in an unsuccessful earlier action against the employer; the issues before the court were already litigated and decided in the worker's prior action against the employer, and in both cases, the worker claimed that she was discriminated against on account of her race, and the two complaints were based on the same underlying occurrences. Bush v O.P.E.I.U. Local 153, 499 F. Supp. 2d 571, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 59647 (S.D.N.Y. 2007).

Findings that creditor, a transgender woman, was discriminated against by debtor based on gender and disability in violation of the New York State Human Rights Law were sufficient to support a finding of willful injury for purposes of creditor's nondischargeability claim. Malice was implied by the state court's finding of deliberate discrimination, the acts and conduct of debtor in the context of the surrounding circumstances, and the imposition of a civil penalty. Fuller v Rea (In re Rea), 606 B.R. 531, 2019 Bankr. LEXIS 2364 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2019).

95. Sufficiency of evidence

Evidence which tended to demonstrate that restaurant sales volume had increased slightly following replacement of male waiters with waitresses dressed in alluring costumes was insufficient to establish a bona fide occupational qualification exception which would protect restaurant's action from operation of sex discrimination law where there was no evidence establishing that increased sales were directly attributable to replacement of waiters. Guardian Capital Corp. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 46 A.D.2d 832, 360 N.Y.S.2d 937, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3585 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974), app. dismissed, 36 N.Y.2d 806, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 2680 (N.Y. 1975), app. denied, 37 N.Y.2d 705, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 2770 (N.Y. 1975).

Where court in prior proceeding wherein waiter charged that restaurant which replaced staff of waiters with waitresses was guilty of sex discrimination held that restaurant failed to produce sufficient evidence to establish bona fide occupational qualification exception protecting restaurant's action from operation of sex discrimination law and where restaurant did not adduce any significantly different financial proof at hearing on instant sex discrimination complaint filed by another waiter who was discharged under same circumstances, prior decision controlled decision in instant proceeding on issue whether evidence was sufficient to establish bona fide occupational qualification exception. Guardian Capital Corp. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 48 A.D.2d 753, 368 N.Y.S.2d 594, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9834 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 37 N.Y.2d 712, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 2959 (N.Y. 1975).

An employer did not sustain his burden of proof, required by Exec Law § 296.10(c), to show that retaining a employee in his position, while permitting him to observe his Sabbath, would result in undue economic hardship to the employer where the employee submitted no cost analysis to support his plant foreman's opinion that accommodating the employee would have a "noticeable effect" on the employer's costs. State Div. of Human Rights ex rel. Clarke v Carnation Co., 86 A.D.2d 977, 448 N.Y.S.2d 330, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15684 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 57 N.Y.2d 607, 1982 N.Y. Hearsay affirmation of disabled professional basketball referee's physician, offered by referee to show physical fitness to fully perform as referee, is insufficient standing alone to amount to substantial evidence that referee can reasonably perform required duties where, other than statement in affirmation that referee has undergone exercise tread mill test, there is no reference to medical tests sufficient to conclude, with degree of medical certainty, that disability is not job related. National Basketball Asso. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 115 A.D.2d 365, 495 N.Y.S.2d 904, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 54768 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1985), aff'd, 68 N.Y.2d 644, 505 N.Y.S.2d 63, 496 N.E.2d 222, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 19039 (N.Y. 1986).

Employer has knowledge of and acquiesces in sexually discriminatory conduct of supervisor where employer's president and general manager in charge of employee grievances is specifically advised of several incidents of physical abuse involving supervisor, to which president responds that he will not do anything at the present but desires to be advised of subsequent improper conduct. Spoon v American Agriculturalist, Inc., 120 A.D.2d 857, 502 N.Y.S.2d 296, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 56963 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

Court properly granted employer's motion under CLS CPLR § 4401 for judgment dismissing employee's age discrimination complaint where employee failed to rebut employer's evidence that alleged discriminatory action was taken for legitimate business reasons as part of valid corporate reorganization plan. Keith v Carrier International Corp., 132 A.D.2d 926, 518 N.Y.S.2d 261, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49377 (N.Y. College employee's testimony regarding persistent daily sexual harassment during her employment at college, and significant physical manifestations that resulted from her emotional distress, so affecting her that she was unable to attend college during following semester, was clearly sufficient to establish mental anguish and humiliation, but award of $150,000 in compensatory damages for mental anguish was excessive and would be reduced to $100,000. SUNY College of Environmental Science & Forestry v State Div. of Human Rights, 144 A.D.2d 962, 534 N.Y.S.2d 270, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14449 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1988).

Evidence supported determination finding correctional facility guilty of unlawful discriminatory practice based on race where complainant and other black correction officers testified as to "hostile situation" at facility, black officers were placed in different "class" from white employees, they were denied more desirable assignments and shifts, they had their orders and directions disregarded by subordinates or countermanded by their superior officers, and they were disciplined more frequently and more harshly than white employees; furthermore, of 16 cases of alleged inmate abuse occurring at facility, complainant was sole correction officer who was dis-charged. New York State Dep't of Correctional Servs. v State Div. of Human Rights, 215 A.D.2d 908, 626 N.Y.S.2d 588, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5326 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1995).

Award of $25,000 in compensatory damages for emotional distress and humiliation as result of unlawful racial discrimination was excessive where sole evidence of such damages was complainant's testimony that employer's unlawful conduct made him feel "victimized, ambushed and abandoned" and caused him to withdraw from relationships with his friends and family, that he was unable to pay court-ordered child support or to provide entertain-ment for his 3 children, and that he could not complete purchase of items he had ordered prior to his termination and forfeited $1,000 deposit on automobile; appropriate award in such case was $15,000. New York State Dep't of Correctional Servs. v State Div. of Human Rights, 215 A.D.2d 908, 626 N.Y.S.2d 588, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5326 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1995).

Evidence did not support respondent's determination, based on disparate discriminatory impact analysis, that State Office of Mental Health was guilty of unlawful discriminatory practices for having employed African American and Hispanic employees as grade 9 Mental Health Therapy Aides (MHTAs) at regional forensic unit (RFU), while predominantly white workforce allegedly doing similar work at different forensic facility worked as grade 14 Secure Hospital Treatment Assistants; mere fact that racial imbalance existed in one segment of workforce did not, without more, establish prima facie case of disparate impact, especially in view of fact that MHTAs at two RFUs not considered by respondent, who also failed to receive grade 14 status, were predominantly white. New York State Office of Mental Health, Manhattan Psychiatric Ctr. v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 223 A.D.2d 88, 645 N.Y.S.2d 926, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8013 (N.Y. Defendants rebutted plaintiff's prima facie case of age discrimination where employer's general manager testified that he was hired, inter alia, to remedy serious deficiencies in management of employer's maintenance operations, general manager interviewed plaintiff, but found that plaintiff failed to make any suggestions to correct problems, claimed that problems were overstated, and blamed uncooperative union employees and poor conditions for problems, and general manager testified that he replaced plaintiff with another employee who ran efficient and organized repair facility and who presented sound and specific suggestions for improving operations. Evidence did not support determination that rescue mission, in conditioning complainant's stay on further discussing her HIV status, denied her privilege and advantage of place of public accommodation where (1) all witnesses, including complainant, testified that complainant was asked whether she had any medications with her and was told that, if she did, they had to be put away, that she refused to respond to that inquiry, that if she wished to stay, she had to respond, and that she left rather than answering, and (2) question as to medications was not based on her HIV status, but rather was as matter of policy asked of all potential admittees. Rescue Mission Alliance v Mercado, 224 A.D.2d 934, 637 N.Y.S.2d 580, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1571 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 805, 646 N.Y.S.2d 985, 670 N.E.2d 226, 1996 N.Y. Court would annul determination that certain acts of dentist constituted refusal to treat complainant based on his status as person perceived to be at risk for HIV infection where dental office in question did not constitute "place of public accommodation." Plaintiff who demonstrates that employer's proffered nondiscriminatory reason for unfavorable treatment is pretextual may prevail without also adducing further proof to establish that real motive was discrimination. There was no merit in inmate's claim that prison authorities arbitrarily and consistently refused to grant requests by Muslim inmates to attend religious services while in keeplock, even though he made 2 such requests that were denied, where those denials were legitimately based on his institutional record and thus were not arbitrary, he did not specifically challenge denial of his own requests, and there was no evidence to support his conclusory assertion that, as general proposition, such requests by Muslim inmates were routinely and arbitrarily denied. Determination of the New York State Division of Human Rights that an employer violated N.Y. Exec. Law § 296(1)(a) by discriminating against an employee on the basis of her military status was not supported by substantial evidence because the employer demonstrated that he terminated the employee for a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason that was not based on her military status; the employee's time cards supported the employer's contention that he terminated her employment because she continued to be late after being placed on probation for lateness for reasons having nothing to do with her military status.
