Although defendant's challenge to the 10 percent surcharge on the $ 200,000 award of restitution was not preserved, the appellate court exercised its interest of justice jurisdiction to address the claim because the record did not include an affidavit indicating that the cost of collection and administration of the restitution imposed on the grand larceny conviction exceeded 5 percent of the amount awarded, as was necessary to justify the imposition of a 10 percent surcharge. People v Grumberg, 153 A.D.3d 1525, 62 N.Y.S.3d 199, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6688 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2017).

Agency Opinions

Analysis

1. Who is entitled to restitution
2. Defendant's failure to pay

1. Who is entitled to restitution

In both civil and criminal matters brought under both CLS § 121 and town Dog Control Ordinance, town justice may order restitution, reparations, or other damages to dog attack victim. 2005 NY Ops Atty Gen I 05-12.

2. Defendant's failure to pay

A county official designated to receive payment of restitution must report to the court any failure to comply with an order of restitution. Restitution funds collected in instances where the victim cannot be located should be disposed of only as directed by the court. A county is not authorized to apply for resentence under Criminal Procedure Law, § 420.10(4) to restore restitution to a defendant. 1983 NY Ops Atty Gen Feb 4 (Informal).

(b) Class C violent felony offenses: an attempt to commit any of the class B felonies set forth in paragraph (a) of this subdivision; aggravated criminally negligent homicide as defined in section 125.11, aggravated manslaughter in the second degree as defined in section 125.21, aggravated sexual abuse in the second degree as defined in section 130.67, assault on a peace officer, police officer, firefighter or emergency medical services professional as defined in section 120.08, assault on a judge as defined in section 120.09, gang assault in the second degree as defined in section 120.06, strangulation in the first degree as defined in section 121.13, aggravated strangulation as defined in section 121.13-a, burglary in the second degree as defined in section 140.25, robbery in the second degree as defined in section 160.10, criminal possession of a weapon in the second degree as defined in section 265.03, criminal use of a firearm in the second degree as defined in section 265.08, criminal sale of a firearm in the second degree as defined in section 265.12, criminal sale of a firearm with the aid of a minor as defined in section 265.14, aggravated criminal possession of a weapon as defined in section 265.19, soliciting or providing support for an act of terrorism in the first degree as defined in section 490.15, hindering prosecution of terrorism in the second degree as defined in section 490.30, and criminal possession of a chemical weapon or biological weapon in the third degree as defined in section 490.37.

(c) Class D violent felony offenses: an attempt to commit any of the class C felonies set forth in paragraph (b); reckless assault of a child as defined in section 120.02, assault in the second degree as defined in section 120.05, menacing a police officer or peace officer as defined in section 120.18, stalking in the first degree, as defined in subdivision one of section 120.60, strangulation in the second degree as defined in section 121.12, rape in the second degree as defined in section 130.30, criminal sexual act in the second degree as defined in section 130.45, sexual abuse in the first degree as defined in section 130.65, course of sexual conduct against a child in the second degree as defined in section 130.80, aggravated sexual abuse in the third degree as defined in section 130.66, facilitating a sex offense with a controlled substance as defined in section 130.90, labor trafficking as defined in paragraphs (a) and (b) of subdivision three of section 135.35, criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree as defined in subdivision five, six, seven, eight, nine or ten of section 265.02, criminal sale of a firearm in the third degree as defined in section 265.11, intimidating a victim or witness in the second degree as defined in section 215.16, soliciting or providing support for an act of terrorism in the second degree as defined in section 490.10, and making a terroristic threat as defined in section 490.20, falsely reporting an incident in the first degree as defined in section 240.60, placing a false bomb or hazardous substance in the first degree as defined in section 240.62, placing a false bomb or hazardous substance in a sports stadium or arena, mass transportation facility or enclosed shopping mall as defined in section 240.63, aggravated unpermitted use of indoor pyrotechnics in the first degree as defined in section 405.18, and criminal manufacture, sale, or transport of an undetectable firearm, rifle or shotgun as defined in section 265.50.

(d) Class E violent felony offenses: an attempt to commit any of the felonies of criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree as defined in subdivision five, six, seven or eight of section 265.02 as a lesser included offense of that section as defined in section 220.20 of the criminal procedure law, persistent sexual abuse as defined in section 130.53, aggravated sexual abuse in the fourth degree as defined in section 130.65-a, falsely reporting an incident in the second degree as defined in section 240.55 and placing a false bomb or hazardous substance in the second degree as defined in section 240.61.

2. Authorized sentence.

(a) [Eff until Sept 1, 2021] Except as provided in subdivision six of section 60.05, the sentence imposed upon a person who stands convicted of a class B or class C violent felony offense must be a determinate sentence of imprisonment which shall be in whole or half years. The term of such sentence must be in accordance with the provisions of subdivision three of this section.

(a) [Eff Sept 1, 2021] The sentence imposed upon a person who stands convicted of a class B or class C violent felony offense must be an indeterminate sentence of imprisonment. Except as provided in subdivision five of section 60.05, the maximum term of such sentence must be in accordance with the provisions of subdivision three of this section and the minimum period of imprisonment under such sentence must be in accordance with subdivision four of this section.

(b) Except as provided in paragraph (b-1) of this subdivision, subdivision six of section 60.05 and subdivision four of this section, the sentence imposed upon a person who stands convicted of a class D violent felony offense, other than the offense of criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree as defined in subdivision five, seven or eight of section 265.02 or criminal sale of a firearm in the third degree as defined in section 265.11, must be in accordance with the applicable provisions of this chapter relating to sentencing for class D felonies provided, however, that where a sentence of imprisonment is imposed which requires a commitment to the state department of corrections and community supervision, such sentence shall be a determinate sentence in accordance with paragraph (c) of subdivision three of this section.

(b-1) Except as provided in subdivision six of section 60.05, the sentence imposed upon a person who stands convicted of the class D violent felony offense of menacing a police officer or peace officer as defined in section 120.18 of this chapter must be a determinate sentence of imprisonment.

(c) Except as provided in subdivision six of section 60.05, the sentence imposed upon a person who stands convicted of the class D violent felony offenses of criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree as defined in subdivision five, seven, eight or nine of section 265.02, criminal sale of a firearm in the third degree as defined in section 265.11, the class E violent felonies of attempted criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree as defined in subdivision five, seven, eight or nine of section 265.02, or criminal manufacture, sale, or transport of an undetectable firearm, rifle or shotgun as defined in section 265.50 must be a sentence to a determinate period of imprisonment, or, in the alternative, a definite sentence of imprisonment for a period of no less than one year, except that:

(i) the court may impose any other sentence authorized by law upon a person who has not been previously convicted in the five years immediately preceding the commission of the offense for a class A misdemeanor defined in this chapter, if the court having regard to the nature and circumstances of the crime and to the history and character of the defendant, finds on the record that such sentence would be unduly harsh and that the alternative sentence would be consistent with public safety and does not deprecate the seriousness of the crime; and

(ii) the court may apply the provisions of paragraphs (b) and (c) of subdivision four of this section when imposing a sentence upon a person who has previously been convicted of a class A misdemeanor defined in this chapter in the five years immediately preceding the commission of the offense.

3. Term of sentence. The term of a determinate sentence for a violent felony offense must be fixed by the court as follows:

(a) For a class B felony, the term must be at least five years and must not exceed twenty-five years, provided, however, that the term must be: (i) at least ten years and must not exceed thirty years where the sentence is for the crime of aggravated assault upon a police officer or peace officer as defined in section 120.11 of this chapter; and (ii) at least ten years and must not exceed thirty years where the sentence is for the crime of aggravated manslaughter in the first degree as defined in section 125.22 of this chapter;

(b) For a class C felony, the term must be at least three and one-half years and must not exceed fifteen years, provided, however, that the term must be: (i) at least seven years and must not exceed twenty years where the sentence is for the crime of aggravated manslaughter in the second degree as defined in section 125.21 of this chapter; (ii) at least seven years and must not exceed twenty years where the sentence is for the crime of attempted aggravated assault upon a police officer or peace officer as defined in section 120.11 of this chapter; (iii) at least three and one-half years and must not exceed twenty years where the sentence is for the crime of aggravated criminally negligent homicide as defined in section 125.11 of this chapter; and (iv) at least five years and must not exceed fifteen years where the sentence is imposed for the crime of aggravated criminal possession of a weapon as defined in section 265.19 of this chapter;

(c) For a class D felony, the term must be at least two years and must not exceed seven years, provided, however, that the term must be: (i) at least two years and must not exceed eight years where the sentence is for the crime of menacing a police officer or peace officer as defined in section 120.18 of this chapter; and (ii) at least three and one-half years and must not exceed seven years where the sentence is imposed for the crime of criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree as defined in subdivision ten of section 265.02 of this chapter;

(d) For a class E felony, the term must be at least one and one-half years and must not exceed four years.

4. (a) Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this subdivision, where a plea of guilty to a class D violent felony offense is entered pursuant to section 220.10 or 220.30 of the criminal procedure law in satisfaction of an indictment charging the defendant with an armed felony, as defined in subdivision forty-one of section 1.20 of the criminal procedure law, the court must impose a determinate sentence of imprisonment.

(b) In any case in which the provisions of paragraph (a) of this subdivision or the provisions of subparagraph (ii) of paragraph (c) of subdivision two of this section apply, the court may impose a sentence other than a determinate sentence of imprisonment, or a definite sentence of imprisonment for a period of no less than one year, if it finds that the alternate sentence is consistent with public safety and does not deprecate the seriousness of the crime and that one or more of the following factors exist:

(i) mitigating circumstances that bear directly upon the manner in which the crime was committed; or

(ii) where the defendant was not the sole participant in the crime, the defendant's participation was relatively minor although not so minor as to constitute a defense to the prosecution; or

(iii) possible deficiencies in proof of the defendant's commission of an armed felony.

(c) The defendant and the district attorney shall have an opportunity to present relevant information to assist the court in making a determination pursuant to paragraph (b) of this subdivision, and the court may, in its discretion, conduct a hearing with respect to any issue bearing upon such determination. If the court determines that a determinate sentence of imprisonment should not be imposed pursuant to the provisions of such paragraph (b), it shall make a statement on the record of the facts and circumstances upon which such determination is based. A transcript of the court's statement, which shall set forth the recommendation of the district attorney, shall be forwarded to the state division of criminal justice services along with a copy of the accusatory instrument.

This act shall take effect on the first of November next succeeding the date on which it shall have become a law; provided that any state agency and any political subdivision of the state are authorized to promulgate any and all rules and regulations and take any other measures necessary to implement this act on its effective date on or before such date.

Laws 2004, ch 1, § 1 (Part A), eff July 23, 2004, provides as follows:

Section 1. Legislative intent. The tragic events of the September 11, 2001 attack, together with the more recent arrests of members of alleged terrorist cells in Erie county and elsewhere throughout the world, underscore the compelling need for further anti-terror measures to enhance public safety. It is our nation's profound commitment to the principles of democracy and the rule of law that enables us to respond efficiently and effectively to the outrageous criminal acts of terrorists. Creating new criminal offenses and increasing penalties to enhance the powers of law enforcement are necessary to combat their cowardly and inhumane acts of terror.

A chemical or biological attack against a civilian population or the threat of such an attack, however unimaginable before September 11, 2001, has become a stark and disturbing reality. The subsequent outbreaks of anthrax, a deadly disease that caused death and illness across our nation, awakened us to a new type of crime, a crime so indecent that it threatens our values as well as our lives. Terrorists committed to causing death and destruction with deadly or incapacitating chemicals or biological weapons must be brought to justice and punished severely. Although federal law explicitly proscribes such monstrous conduct, state law does not. This act, modeled on federal law, punishes those who criminally use or possess chemical or biological weapons and imposes the penalty of life imprisonment without parole in appropriate cases.

The images of the savage attack on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon on September 11, 2001 will be forever emblazoned on the psyches of all Americans. The slaughter of innocent civilians, and the sacrifice of selfless police officers, brave firefighters, and other heroic emergency services personnel, will never be forgotten. A crime of unimaginable horror, terrorism tears at the very fabric of our society, threatening to rob us of our commitment to freedom, justice, and democracy. This act protects that commitment by providing law enforcement officials with appropriate and effective tools to investigate, prosecute, and punish terrorists.

Laws 2005, ch 764, § 8, eff Dec 21, 2005, provides as follows:

§ 8. This act shall take effect immediately; provided, however, that the amendments to paragraph (a) of subdivision 2 of section 70.02 of the penal law, made by section one of this act, shall be subject to the expiration and reversion of such paragraph, as provided in subdivision d of section 74 of chapter 3 of the laws of 1995, as amended.

Laws 2005, ch 765, § 1, eff Dec 21, 2005, provides as follows:

Section 1. Short title. This act shall be known and may be cited as the "crimes against police act."

Laws 2006, ch 110, § 1, eff Nov 1, 2006, provides as follows:

The 2020 amendment by ch 94, § 4, added "aggravated strangulation as defined in section 121.13-a" in 1(b).

PRACTICE INSIGHTS:

Sentences Of Imprisonment For First Time Violent Felony Offender

By Spiros A. Tsimbinos, Esq., Member of New York Bar
General Editor, John M. Castellano, Esq., Member of New York Bar

INSIGHT

Violent felony offenses should immediately trigger a danger warning for any defense counsel. An offense specifically designated as a violent felony offense means mandatory jail time and increased imprisonment. The first thing that counsel must do is to identify whether the felony is categorized as a violent one and what class level it has been designated. Penal Law § 70.02 specifically defines all of the violent felonies according to their class categories. After identifying the class category, defense counsel should proceed to determine the parameters of the authorized sentence, which is covered in Penal Law § 70.02(2). If counsel is representing a first time violent felony offender with respect to an incident that has arisen as a result of domestic violence, the possibility exists for an alternative indeterminate sentence rather than a mandatory determinate term. Alternative definite sentences may also be available under certain circumstances with respect to Class D and E weapons possession cases.

ANALYSIS

Distinguishing violent felony offenses.

The legislature has repeatedly added to the list of violent felony offenses so that today at least 60 crimes are on the list. Check the list to see whether the felony with which the defendant is charged is designated as a violent felony. If so, both the form and the length of the defendant's sentence may be greatly enhanced. Review the list before advising defendant about possible sentencing options.

Length of determinate term for first time violent felony offender.

The length of the applicable term for a first time violent felony offender depends upon the class of felony for which the defendant has been convicted. Penal Law § 70.02(3) sets the term as follows:

Class B felony — 5 to 25 years
Class C felony — 3½ to 15 years
Class D felony — 2 to 7 years
Class E felony — 1½ to 4 years

The determinate sentence imposed must be in the form of a whole or half year.

Remember that period of post-release supervision is part of determinate term.

Defense counsel is reminded that the determinate term imposed also includes a period of post-release supervision as specified in Penal Law § 70.45. The applicable post-release periods for a first time violent felony offense are as follows:

Class B violent felony — 2½ to 5 years
Class C violent felony — 2½ to 5 years
Class D violent felony — 1½ to 3 years

Under legislation passed in 2007, these ranges are significantly higher for violent felony sex offenses, as defined under new Penal Law § 70.80.

Class B violent felony sex offense — 5 to 20 years
Class C violent felony sex offense — 5 to 15 years
Class D violent felony sex offense — 3 to 10 years
Class E violent felony sex offense — 3 to 10 years

Defense counsel must make certain that the defendant is aware of the period of post-release supervision and that it is mentioned and recorded as part of the sentencing judgment. The failure to do so will create issues on appeal and may lead to the vacating of the sentence, the undoing of any plea bargain, and possible allegations of ineffective assistance of counsel.

Be aware of reasons for determinate term and time frame of its applicability.

The legislative purpose in utilizing the determinate term was to basically remove all options of discretionary early release by parole authorities and to limit judicial discretion in imposing sentence. Discretionary early release was effectively removed by the elimination of minimum and maximum terms under the former indeterminate system and the reduction of the good behavior credit of one third of the maximum to one seventh when dealing with determinate terms. (See Corr. L. § 803(c)) Thus, for example, if a defendant is sentenced today for a Class C violent felony offense to a term of seven years in prison, he will actually serve six sevenths of that time or six years. This situation is in line with the current "Truth in Sentencing" philosophy where a violent felony offender is required to actually serve almost all of the time he is sentenced to rather than to obtain the benefits of substantial early release options.

Alternative sentencing for domestic violence and weapons possession cases.

Although the new determinate terms with the additional term of post-release supervision are mandated for violent felony offenses, a special narrow exception was created in Jenna's Law for domestic violence cases which may allow a defendant to escape both consequences. Viewed as a minor concession in order to achieve broader support for the bill, this exception was accomplished by adding new Penal Law § 60.12, entitled "Authorized disposition; alternative indeterminate sentences of imprisonment for domestic violence cases." Thus, if counsel has a matter involving a domestic violence issue, he or she should remind the judge about the indeterminate sentencing alternative and seek to obtain a disposition within the minimum range of the authorized sentence. An alternative definite sentence may also be possible for Class D and E weapons possession cases pursuant to Penal Law § 70.02(2).

After the 2012 Sandy Hook Elementary School tragedy in Connecticut, increased penalties were imposed for certain firearm-related offenses. Thus, a defendant who possesses an unloaded firearm while committing a drug trafficking felony, as defined in Penal Law § 10.00(21), is now guilty of a felony, instead of a misdemeanor. See P.L. § 265.02(9). The crime carries a mandatory minimum of a three and one-half year determinate sentence, unless a judge determines that a lower sentence is appropriate. P.L. §§ 60.11-a, 70.02(3)(c)(ii). Similarly, a defendant may receive increased punishment for the new crime of Aggravated Criminal Possession of a Weapon if he or she commits the crime of second-degree criminal possession of a weapon and, in the same criminal transaction, commits a violent felony offenses or a drug trafficking felony. The mandatory minimum is five years. P.L. § 70.02(3)(b)(iv). Counsel should be sure to take these mandatory minimum sentences into account in negotiating a plea or arguing for a particular sentence.

Consequences of Persistent Violent Felony Offender Finding

By Spiros A. Tsimbinos, Esq., Member of New York Bar

INSIGHT

A defendant found to be a persistent violent felony offender faces the most severe imprisonment penalties, including a maximum of life. Carefully determine whether the criteria have been reached to place a defendant within the persistent felony offender category and whether any underlying predicates can be attacked. Verify information received from the defendant regarding prior felony history. Counsel should also seek ways to minimize the possible sentence by exploring, at an early stage, possible plea negotiations and making clear to the defendant the severe consequences of being found a persistent violent felony offender.

ANALYSIS

Factors to consider in determining whether defendant falls within persistent violent felony category.

It is important to immediately identify the violent felony status of the defendant. Eligibility for persistent violent felony status basically requires commission of two prior violent felonies with a 10-year period prior to commission of the new violent felony offense. The prior violent felonies may be New York convictions pursuant to the listing in Penal Law § 70.02, or can be offenses in other jurisdictions that have the same essential elements of the New York crime and for which a sentence in excess of one year was authorized (although not necessarily imposed). With respect to New York violent felony offenses, the listing in Penal Law § 70.02 currently consists of 58 crimes and is continually increasing. Penal Law § 70.08 specifically adopts the criteria applicable to second felony offenders in Penal Law § 70.04.

Verify information received regarding prior violent felonies.

Counsel can ascertain the defendant's prior felony status by speaking to the defendant, but should also check the official court and police records. Don't blindly accept the defendant's statements as to past offenses: Instead, verify any information furnished by referring to the official documents. Clearly establish the felony category (including Class B, C, D, and E) of the defendant's current charges. Also ascertain the circumstances of the prior felonies, especially those in other jurisdictions.

Consequences of being found persistent violent felony offender.

If a defendant is found to be a persistent violent felony offender under Penal Law § 70.08, he or she faces a possible minimum 12 to 25 year sentence and a maximum of life. The actual sentence imposed will depend on the felony category of the crime for which the defendant is currently being sentenced. Unlike the situation involving persistent felony offenders, a persistent violent felony offender faces mandatory sentencing within the specified ranges.

Practitioners should be aware of an unusual omission in Penal Law § 70.08 relating to the sentence for a Class E felony. This omission has resulted in years of litigation in New York with the New York Court of Appeals finally determining the issue in People v. Green, 68 N.Y.2d 151, 506 N.Y.S.2d 298, 497 N.E.2d 665 (1986), and People v. Tolbert, 93 N.Y.2d 86, 688 N.Y.S.2d 105, 710 N.E.2d 669 (1999). Based upon these Court of Appeals rulings, the authorized sentence for a persistent violent felony offender convicted of a Class E violent felony is a minimum of 3 to 4 years and a maximum of life. Counsel representing a Class E violent felony offender who falls within the persistent category must thus refer the sentencing court to the case law mentioned above since the legislature has repeatedly failed to fill-in this missing sentence gap.

Certain procedures required to determine persistent violent felony status.

CPL § 400.16 sets forth the procedures that must be followed before a defendant can be sentenced as a persistent violent felony offender. Basically, the prosecution is required to file a pre-sentence notice or statement designating the alleged prior felonies and a preliminary hearing must be held if the defendant contests the validity of the prior alleged felonies. Be aware that, in most cases, the defendant and defense counsel concede the prior felonies if there is no question as to their accuracy or legality. In rare situations, a challenge can be raised either to the time sequence, factual basis of the allegations, or legality or constitutionality of the alleged prior offenses. Carefully discuss this issue with the defendant to determine the proper course of action.

Counsel may also wish to consider attacking the constitutional validity of the statute under Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466, 120 S. Ct. 2348, 147 L. Ed. 2d 435 (2000), which generally requires any fact that elevates the range of available sentences to be pleaded and proved to a jury. While current law provides an exception for statutes elevating the sentencing range based on recidivism alone, see Almendarez-Torres v. United States, 523 U.S. 224, 118 S. Ct. 1219, 140 L. Ed. 2d 350 (1998); People v. Bell, 15 N.Y.3d 935, 915 N.Y.S.2d 208, 940 N.E.2d 913 (2010), there may now be a majority in the Supreme Court in favor of eliminating this exception. See Shepard v. United States, 544 U.S. 13, 27-28, 125 S. Ct. 1254, 161 L. Ed. 2d 205 (2005) (Thomas, J., concurring).

Minimizing full consequences of persistent violent felony offender designation.

Review the defendant's prior felony status immediately upon taking the case and discuss the possibility of early plea discussions with the defendant. Prosecutors in various counties, knowing jail time is mandated for persistent violent felony offenders, usually offer an early plea disposition in the minimum range provided the defendant pleads early so a lengthy trial and proceedings can be avoided. For example, if a defendant is offered a Class D violent felony plea with a minimum sentence of 12 years to life and it is clear that he or she is a persistent violent felony offender with the present case being strong, defense counsel may be well advised to recommend that defendant take this plea offer rather than being faced with the possibility of receiving a possible sentence of 25 years to life.

1. In general

A CPLR article 78 proceeding in the nature of prohibition, an extraordinary remedy issued only in the sound discretion of the court, is an appropriate means to consider whether a defendant charged with burglary in the first degree who pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor and received a sentence of probation, in violation of CPL 220.10 (subd 5, par [e]) which prohibits the court from accepting a guilty plea to anything less than a class D felony for a violent felony offense such as burglary in the first degree (Penal Law, § 70.02), should have her plea and sentence vacated and be ordered to stand trial on the original indictment because the Judge, District Attorney and defense counsel were unaware of section 70.02 of the Penal Law, since the defendant is threatened with jeopardy for a second time. Wadsworth v Mogavero, 71 A.D.2d 157, 422 N.Y.S.2d 499, 1979 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13243 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1979).

Court erred in sentencing defendant to "split sentence" in accordance with CLS Penal § 60.01 (that is, definite sentence of 6 months to run concurrently with 5 years' probation for third degree weapon possession)where court expressly stated that definite one-year term or indeterminate term would not be unduly harsh; absent determination of undue harshness, CLS Penal § 70.02(2)(c) mandates that defendant be sentenced either to indeterminate period of imprisonment or to definite sentence of at least one year. People v Goetz, 141 A.D.2d 446, 529 N.Y.S.2d 782, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7256 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), aff'd, 73 N.Y.2d 751, 536 N.Y.S.2d 45, 532 N.E.2d 1273, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 3327 (N.Y. 1988).

Appellate Division would not vacate sentence of imprisonment imposed on defendant's plea of guilty to class D violent felony, although sentencing court had erroneously stated that prison term was mandated for class D violent felony conviction, since defendant knew that he faced maximum 7-year prison term, he was allowed to plead guilty to one violent class D felony in full satisfaction of several serious crimes, his sentence was in middle range for indeterminate sentences, and there was no showing that sentencing court had considered anything less than indeterminate sentence. People v McPhail, 145 A.D.2d 975, 536 N.Y.S.2d 346, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14065 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1988), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 893, 538 N.Y.S.2d 806, 535 N.E.2d 1346, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 1175 (N.Y. 1989).

Defendant was not entitled to reversal of convictions for robbery, sodomy, assault, and grand larceny on ground that defense counsel improperly failed to advise court of viability of alternative sentencing recommendations, since court was not permitted to consider sentencing alternatives as defendant was convicted of several violent felony offenses and thus indeterminate term of imprisonment was mandatory. People v Wallis, 147 A.D.2d 821, 537 N.Y.S.2d 910, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1586 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Although the People presented uncontroverted evidence that defendant missed several appointments with a probation officer and without a reasonable explanation, the appellate court was unable to determine whether defendant's designation as a violent felony offender under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02(1)(d). People v Blue, 38 A.D.3d 1234, 831 N.Y.S.2d 792, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3533 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2007).

While defendant's sentence as a first-time felony offender under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02 to assault in the second degree should have included a mandatory component of post-release supervision under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 70.00(6), 70.45(1), no such period was included in the sentence as a handwritten notation in a sentence and commitment form imposing such supervision was not signed by the sentencing judge and, thus, was a nullity. People v Duncan, 42 A.D.3d 470, 840 N.Y.S.2d 805, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8415 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 9 N.Y.3d 961, 848 N.Y.S.2d 29, 878 N.E.2d 613, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 3573 (N.Y. 2007).

Because first-degree sodomy was a violent felony offense under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 70.02, 130.50, and because the parole board considered all the relevant factors in N.Y. Exec. Law § 259-i, including defendant's positive institutional programming, minimal disciplinary record, and post-release plans and goals, defendant was not entitled to N.Y. C.P.L.R. art. 78 relief. Matter of Gutkaiss v New York State Div. of Parole, 50 A.D.3d 1418, 857 N.Y.S.2d 755, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3707 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

N.Y. Penal Law § 70.25(3) dealt with alternative definite sentences imposed under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.00(4) for class D and E felonies, not determinate sentences under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02(b) for class C violent felonies. People v Blume, 92 A.D.3d 1025, 937 N.Y.S.2d 724, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 905 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 957, 950 N.Y.S.2d 109, 973 N.E.2d 207, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 2400 (N.Y. 2012).

Insofar as Penal Law § 70.02, which defines punishment for violent felony offenses, is retroactively applied to make offenses which at the time of commission were only felonies into violent felonies for purposes of finding a defendant a second violent-felony offender or a persistent violent-felony offender, it is unconstitutional as ex post facto. People v Barbour, 111 Misc. 2d 266, 443 N.Y.S.2d 815, 1981 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3259 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1981), rev'd, 96 A.D.2d 842, 465 N.Y.S.2d 599, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19432 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1983).

At the time when defendant's crimes were committed, August, 1997, the provisions of N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02(4) (1995) were in effect, requiring that a first-time violent felon who was sentenced to state prison must have received a minimum term that was one-half of the maximum; hence, having been convicted as a first-time felony offender of second degree attempted robbery, a class D violent felony offense, defendant's sentence of 2 to 4 years' imprisonment was legal. People v McGuffie, 308 A.D.2d 636, 764 N.Y.S.2d 729, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9554 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 576, 775 N.Y.S.2d 792, 807 N.E.2d 905, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 4644 (N.Y. 2003).

Defendant's conviction for aggravated criminal contempt for violating an order of protection could not serve as a predicate for a conviction of second degree assault on the theory that an assault was committed in the course of and in furtherance of the aggravated criminal contempt because otherwise every aggravated criminal contempt would also be a second degree assault, and the legislature, when elevating third degree reckless or intentional assault from a class A misdemeanor to a class D felony when committed in violation of an order of protection against the person for whose protection the order was issued, did not intend to elevate the assault to a class D violent felony, such as second degree assault. People v Huck, 1 A.D.3d 935, 767 N.Y.S.2d 555, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12269 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2003).

Sentence imposed on defendant for rape, oral sodomy, and sexual abuse was not excessive, especially since it was within the statutory parameters for Class B violent felonies and was not even the maximum authorized. People v Morehouse, 5 A.D.3d 925, 774 N.Y.S.2d 100, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2779 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 3 N.Y.3d 644, 782 N.Y.S.2d 416, 816 N.E.2d 206, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 3391 (N.Y. 2004).

Criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 265.02(4), is defined by the penal law as a violent felony; a reputation for peacefulness was relevant to the guilt or innocence of possession of a weapon, and thus, a trial court's refusal to permit defendant's character witness to testify was error. People v Chisolm, 7 A.D.3d 728, 777 N.Y.S.2d 502, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7075 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2004).

Defendant's three-year sentence for assault in the second degree was not unconstitutionally disproportionate to the crimes committed. People v Ellis, 8 A.D.3d 826, 778 N.Y.S.2d 555, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8587 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 3 N.Y.3d 673, 784 N.Y.S.2d 12, 817 N.E.2d 830, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 3697 (N.Y. 2004).

Inmate had not demonstrated that there was an error of state law with regard to the sentence he received on sexual abuse charges, or with regard to the state appellate court's decision not to exercise its discretion to reduce it in the interests of justice, because while the aggregate term was 75 years determinate, by operation of New York statutory law, the aggregate term imposed was deemed to be fifty years, under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 70.30(1)(c), 70.30(1)(e)(vi), 70.02(1)(a). Campbell v Poole, 555 F. Supp. 2d 345, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 42888 (W.D.N.Y. 2008).

14. —Sex crimes

Defendant's sentences for multiple sex offenses committed against children were not harsh or excessive based on the circumstances of the crimes, defendant's repeated conduct against the children, and that the sentences imposed were less than the maximum allowed for the class B and class D violent felonies. People v Thiel, 134 A.D.3d 1237, 21 N.Y.S.3d 745, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9168 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2015), app. denied, 27 N.Y.3d 1156, 62 N.E.3d 129, 39 N.Y.S.3d 389, 2016 N.Y. LEXIS 2544 (N.Y. 2016).

2. Constitutional issues

Defendant's conviction of robbery in the first degree and sentence as a second violent felony offender under Penal Law §§ 70.02, 70.04, did not violate the ex post facto clause of the United States Constitution even though the conviction upon which the second felony offender status was predicated was obtained prior to the enactment of the statute. The increased punishment mandated by the violent felony offender statute was imposed only for the crime for which defendant was convicted in the instant proceeding and in no way affected the punishment for the previous conviction. People v Aiello, 93 A.D.2d 864, 461 N.Y.S.2d 370, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17733 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 60 N.Y.2d 588, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 5814 (N.Y. 1983).

Sentence of 12 ½ to 25 years for first degree manslaughter was not excessive, even though defendant was only 19 years old and expressed remorse, where he was acquitted of second degree murder in shooting of victim, and he had criminal history. People v Owens, 251 A.D.2d 898, 674 N.Y.S.2d 847, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7756 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 951, 681 N.Y.S.2d 481, 704 N.E.2d 234, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4223 (N.Y. 1998).

Court improperly resentenced defendant to prison term of 2 to 6 years after originally sentencing him to prison term of 2 ½ to 5 years where his original sentence was governed by provisions of CLS Penal § 70.02(4) then in effect, requiring minimum term to be no greater than one-third of maximum term imposed; thus, higher maximum sentence imposed on defendant's second degree burglary conviction violated Double Jeopardy Clause in that after imposition of original sentence, defendant acquired legitimate expectation of finality of its maximum term. People v Trimm, 252 A.D.2d 673, 675 N.Y.S.2d 241, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8151 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 931, 680 N.Y.S.2d 472, 703 N.E.2d 284, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 3954 (N.Y. 1998).

Where a 14-year-old juvenile offender, following his plea of guilty to a violent felony offense (Penal Law, § 30.00, subd 2), moves to dismiss the indictment against him on the grounds that the sentencing provisions of chapter 481 of the Laws of 1978 are violative of his constitutional rights to equal protection of the laws, due process of law and protection against cruel and inhuman punishment in that, because of the classification scheme created by such laws, he is being denied consideration for youthful offender treatment solely because of his age and he will be subject to a mandatory period of imprisonment if a simultaneous motion for removal to Family Court is not granted (Penal Law, § 70.05, subd 4), such grounds do not set forth a basis for dismissal of the indictment, particularly since the court has the option on sentencing to construe the challenged statute in a constitutional manner. Accordingly, under such circumstances, the court will treat the motion as one requesting that the allegedly unconstitutional portion of the statute be disregarded for purposes of sentencing, and that the defendant be considered as eligible for youthful offender treatment. People v Williams, 100 Misc. 2d 183, 418 N.Y.S.2d 737, 1979 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2437 (N.Y. County Ct. 1979).

Because petitioner's sentence was not outside of the applicable statutory range, his sentencing challenge did not present a constitutional claim upon which habeas relief could be granted; petitioner pleaded guilty to four counts of robbery in the first degree pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 160.15 (a class B violent felony offense), and N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02(2)(a) provided that the sentence imposed upon a person convicted of a class B violent felony offense had to be a determinate sentence of at least 5 years and must not exceed 25 years (defendant was sentenced to maximum determinate sentence of 20 years). Steele v Filion, 377 F. Supp. 2d 332, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6895 (W.D.N.Y. 2005).

3. —Due process

There was no due process infirmity under either the Federal or the State Constitution in the requirment of Penal Law § 70.02(5) that defendant, who had been charged with an armed felony after he allegedly displayed both a knife and a pistol while stealing a "Grateful Dead" button from another passenger on a subway train and was permitted to plead guilty to a class D violent felony, receive an indeterminate sentence of one to three years unless the court found that the factors specified in the statute warranted imposition of less than an indeterminate sentence; the statute did not improperly subject defendant to enhanced punishment on the basis of an unproven charge that he was "armed," in that the statute does not give preclusive effect to the indictment's allegation; para (c) does not improperly place upon the defendant the burden of proving one or more of the ameliorating factors referred to in subd (b), for by pleading guilty to the class D violent felony the defendant in effect admitted for the purpose of sentence that he was armed as charged, and any new facts found in the postplea presentence hearing could only reduce, not enhance, the punishment imposed; due process is not offended by the probability that in most cases establishment of an ameliorative factor would require that defendant come forward with proof. People v Felix, 58 N.Y.2d 156, 460 N.Y.S.2d 1, 446 N.E.2d 757, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 2835 (N.Y.), app. dismissed, 464 U.S. 802, 104 S. Ct. 47, 78 L. Ed. 2d 68, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 927 (U.S. 1983).

Defendant's sentence as a second felony offender under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02, following his conviction for the crime of burglary in the second degree, to a prison term of ten and one-half years with post-release supervision was affirmed. Defendant neither overcame the presumption of constitutionality attached to the legislative classification, nor established any due process deprivation resulting from it. People v Johnson, 38 A.D.3d 1057, 832 N.Y.S.2d 312, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2861 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

4. Sentence as unduly harsh

Only prior New York Penal Law misdemeanor convictions automatically disqualify defendant from consideration of issue whether mandatory sentence would be "unduly harsh" under CLS Penal § 70.02(2)(c)(i). People v Williams, 79 N.Y.2d 281, 582 N.Y.S.2d 71, 590 N.E.2d 1199, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 938 (N.Y. 1992).

Question of whether or not sentence of incarceration specified in CLS Penal § 70.02(2)(c) would be "unduly harsh," taking into account nature and circumstances of particular crime involved and history and character of defendant, rests within sound discretion of trial court. People v Goetz, 141 A.D.2d 446, 529 N.Y.S.2d 782, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7256 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), aff'd, 73 N.Y.2d 751, 536 N.Y.S.2d 45, 532 N.E.2d 1273, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 3327 (N.Y. 1988).

Sentence of indeterminate term of $8^1/_3$ to 25 years on conviction of first degree manslaughter was unduly harsh, and would be reduced to indeterminate term of 5 to 15 years, where defendant continually expressed remorse over incident, he had no prior arrests or convictions, he was 35 years old, and he had history of gainful employment. People v Masa Kuramura, 148 A.D.2d 331, 538 N.Y.S.2d 545, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2378 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 812, 546 N.Y.S.2d 570, 545 N.E.2d 884, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 3551 (N.Y. 1989).

Sentence of 6 ⅔ to 20 years' imprisonment for first degree manslaughter was unduly harsh, and should be reduced to prison term of 3 to 9 years, where defendant was 44 years old, and crime (stabbing of his wife) was his first felony conviction and appeared to have been aberrational unpremeditated act inconsistent with his essentially stable and law-abiding past existence. 159 A.D.2d 6.

Evidence was sufficient to sustain defendant's conviction for attempted murder in the second degree but appellate court found that trial court's decision to impose a 25-year determinate prison sentence on defendant who was 53 years old and had never been convicted of a felony was unduly harsh and excessive and it reduced defendant's sentence to a determinate prison term of 15 years. People v Demeritt, 291 A.D.2d 726, 738 N.Y.S.2d 727, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2113 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 98 N.Y.2d 650, 745 N.Y.S.2d 508, 772 N.E.2d 611, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 2051 (N.Y. 2002).

Based on the infant victim's tender age, gravity of his injuries and defendant's failure to take responsibility for his actions, there was no abuse of discretion nor extraordinary circumstance such as defendant's sentence for his violent felony offense as being unduly harsh or excessive that warranted a sentence reduction. People v Ash, 162 A.D.3d 1318, 80 N.Y.S.3d 495, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4570 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 32 N.Y.3d 1002, 111 N.E.3d 1116, 86 N.Y.S.3d 760, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 3154 (N.Y. 2018).

Defendant's knowing, voluntary and intelligent guilty plea precluded his challenge to County Court's denial of his motion to sever counts 5 and 6 of the indictment from the remaining counts of the indictment. Defendant's negotiated sentence, which was below the statutory maximum was not harsh or excessive. People v Burks, 187 A.D.3d 1405, 133 N.Y.S.3d 333, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6382 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2020).

In its reference to "any other sentence authorized by law" that court might impose on finding that one-year sentence would be unduly harsh, CLS Penal § 70.02(2)(c)(i) must be interpreted as referring to other sentences that would be less harsh; otherwise, "unduly harsh" escape value would be meaningless. People v Goetz, 137 Misc. 2d 380, 520 N.Y.S.2d 919, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2597 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1987), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 141 A.D.2d 446, 529 N.Y.S.2d 782, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7256 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1988).

Where defendant had never been informed that if defendant failed to complete a drug rehabilitation program, the sentence imposed under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 70.02(3)(c), 70.45(2) for violation of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 160.10(1), would include a period of post-release supervision, pursuant to N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 470.15(6)(b), the sentence excessive. People v Rosenthal, 305 A.D.2d 327, 760 N.Y.S.2d 460, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6122 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2003).

Defendant's sentence to an indeterminate sentence of 20 years' to life was reduced to an indeterminate sentence of 15 years' to life under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 470.20(6) as although the trial court did not err in sentencing defendant as a persistent felony offender, the sentence was unduly harsh since even though a burglary offense under N.Y. Penal, Law § 140.25(2) was a violent felony offense under N,Y. Penal Law § 70.02(1)(b), defendant did not employ actual violence in the offense despite being confronted by the resident; with the possible exception of two misdemeanor convictions of resisting arrest and criminal possession of a weapon in the 1980's, and a 2001 burglary conviction, defendant never used or threatened violence in the commission of a crime during his lengthy criminal history. People v Smart, 100 A.D.3d 1473, 954 N.Y.S.2d 322, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7782 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2012), aff'd, 23 N.Y.3d 213, 989 N.Y.S.2d 631, 12 N.E.3d 1061, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 904 (N.Y. 2014).

Because petitioner's sentence of 10 years for burglary and larceny was well within the authorized statutory range, his claim that his sentence was unduly harsh and severe did not present a federal constitutional question cognizable on habeas review. Dalcin v New York, 438 F. Supp. 2d 176, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 47534 (W.D.N.Y. 2006).

5. Illegal sentence

A sentence of five to twenty-five years, and an additional term of one year in prison condition on failure to pay a fine of $1,500 by the end of the service of the minimum term, imposed upon defendant convicted of manslaughter, was illegal, since the minimum term for manslaughter must be one third of the maximum term imposed, since when a jail term for nonpayment of a fine is added together with the maximum term imposed the resulting sentence exceeds the maximum authorized term of imprisonment, and since, given the judge's intention to impose a minimum five-year term, the maximum term that could be imposed was fifteen years. People v Vigo, 100 A.D.2d 823, 474 N.Y.S.2d 762, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17930 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 63 N.Y.2d 680, 1984 N.Y. LEXIS 5625 (N.Y. 1984).

Court was not authorized to impose sentence of 2 ½ to 7 ½ years' imprisonment on defendant's plea of guilty to Class D felony of first degree sexual abuse since maximum permissible sentence for that crime is $2^1/_3$ to 7 years. People v Tulko, 135 A.D.2d 851, 522 N.Y.S.2d 678, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52790 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 1011, 526 N.Y.S.2d 946, 521 N.E.2d 1089, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 979 (N.Y. 1988).

Sentence of probation imposed on conviction for robbery in second degree, which was class C offense, was illegal; sentence of incarceration was statutorily mandated. People v Garcia, 143 A.D.2d 842, 533 N.Y.S.2d 383, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10175 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

It was unlawful to impose sentence of 12 ½ to 25 years' imprisonment on defendant's conviction of second degree attempted murder, class B violent felony offense, since minimum term for such crime must be fixed at $1/_3$ of maximum term imposed; thus, sentence would be reduced to $8^1/_3$ to 25 years. People v Oquendo, 147 A.D.2d 506, 537 N.Y.S.2d 598, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1534 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 667, 543 N.Y.S.2d 410, 541 N.E.2d 439, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 2242 (N.Y. 1989).

Sentence would be vacated and matter would be remanded for resentencing where defendant was sentenced to indeterminate term of from 9 to 18 years pursuant to plea bargain under which he pleaded guilty to manslaughter in first degree since sentence was illegal under CLS Penal § 70.02(4). People v Marty, 150 A.D.2d 171, 540 N.Y.S.2d 783, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5451 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1989).

Sentences imposed for first and second degree robbery were not legally permissible since defendant was not convicted of armed felony offenses and therefore minimum term of imprisonment should have been $1/_3$ of maximum term, rather than ½ of maximum term. People v Walker, 189 A.D.2d 564, 592 N.Y.S.2d 253, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 978, 598 N.Y.S.2d 779, 615 N.E.2d 236, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 2142 (N.Y. 1993).

Prison sentence of 12 ½ to 25 years imposed on defendant's first degree robbery conviction was illegal; thus, sentence would be modified by reducing minimum term to $1/_3$, rather than ½ , maximum term. People v Agramonte, 228 A.D.2d 607, 644 N.Y.S.2d 632, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7189 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 979, 649 N.Y.S.2d 386, 672 N.E.2d 612, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3360 (N.Y. 1996).

Indeterminate sentence of imprisonment of 5 to 15 years imposed for second degree assault was illegal since maximum sentence for that offense committed before October 1, 1995 was $2^1/_3$ to 7 years. People v Bates, 233 A.D.2d 937, 649 N.Y.S.2d 878, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13479 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1996).

On defendant's conviction of second and third degree robbery, definite sentence of 7 years imposed on third degree count was illegal under CLS Penal § 70.06(3)(d) and would be reduced to concurrent term of 3 ½ to 7 years. People v Tyler, 245 A.D.2d 1100, 667 N.Y.S.2d 578, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13894 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1997), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 978, 672 N.Y.S.2d 858, 695 N.E.2d 727, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 1699 (N.Y. 1998).

Sentencing court was not authorized to fix minimum period of defendant's indeterminate sentence at one-third maximum term imposed on his guilty plea to attempted second degree burglary, and thus People's motion to set aside sentence as illegal should have been granted. People v Correa, 248 A.D.2d 630, 670 N.Y.S.2d 513, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2926 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998), aff'd, 93 N.Y.2d 821, 687 N.Y.S.2d 615, 710 N.E.2d 261, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1294 (N.Y. 1999).

Sentence of 25 years to life for second degree kidnapping would be reduced to $8^1/_3$ to 25 years where original sentence was illegal under CLS Penal §§ 70.00(2)(b) and 135.20, and court's intention to impose maximum sentence was clear. People v Gammon, 251 A.D.2d 512, 675 N.Y.S.2d 548, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6927 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 924, 680 N.Y.S.2d 466, 703 N.E.2d 278, 1998 N.Y. Sentence of 3 to 9 years for class D felony of second degree assault was unlawful and would be reduced to $2^1/_3$ to 7 years. People v Vukel, 263 A.D.2d 416, 695 N.Y.S.2d 73, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4779 (N.Y. 1999), overruled in part, People v Wells, 24 N.Y.3d 971, 996 N.Y.S.2d 569, 21 N.E.3d 198, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 2820 (N.Y. 2014).

In prosecution for 3 counts of first degree rape and 6 counts of first degree sexual abuse of defendant's stepdaughter, who reported at age 13 that defendant had molested her since age 6, sentence for first 6 counts exceeded maximum allowed by law where those counts were for crimes committed before October 1, 1995, effective date of amendment to CLS Penal § 70.02(4), and thus minimum term could be no greater than ⅓, rather than ½ , of maximum imposed by court. People v Carroll, 263 A.D.2d 768, 695 N.Y.S.2d 154, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8287 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999), rev'd, 95 N.Y.2d 375, 718 N.Y.S.2d 10, 740 N.E.2d 1084, 2000 N.Y. Sentence of 3 ½ to 7 years for first degree reckless endangerment would be reduced to 2 ½ to 7 years where original sentence was unlawful under CLS Penal §§ 70.00(2)(d) and (3)(b), 70.02(1)(c), and 120.25. People v Matthews, 273 A.D.2d 411, 711 N.Y.S.2d 332, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7022 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 906, 716 N.Y.S.2d 647, 739 N.E.2d 1152, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3674 (N.Y. 2000).

Despite People v Brown, 67 NY2d 555, defendant was properly convicted and sentenced for both first degree assault and first degree use of firearm where (1) clear intent of CLS Penal § 265.09(2), which contains language "Notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary," was that display of loaded weapon during commission of class B violent felony would automatically result in 5-year additional sentence, absent any mitigating factor set forth therein, and (2) to apply Brown in such cases would effectively repeal § 265.09(2) as to many violent felonies, which result legislature could not have intended. People v Rhodes, 281 A.D.2d 225, 723 N.Y.S.2d 2, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2474 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 906, 730 N.Y.S.2d 804, 756 N.E.2d 92, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2915 (N.Y. 2001).

There was no merit in defendant's claim that he was improperly sentenced under CLS Penal § 265.09(2) because he was not indicted for, or convicted of, "displaying" loaded weapon, which is essential element of that subdivision, where he was convicted under both CLS Penal § 265.09(1), which requires either possession of loaded operable weapon or display of apparent firearm, and CLS Penal § 120.10(1) for having shot victim, and thus jury necessarily found that defendant had displayed loaded weapon, and there was no violation of his right to have penalty-enhancing determinations made by jury. People v Rhodes, 281 A.D.2d 225, 723 N.Y.S.2d 2, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2474 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 906, 730 N.Y.S.2d 804, 756 N.E.2d 92, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2915 (N.Y. 2001).

Sentence of 2 to 6 years for second degree assault was illegal where sentencing statute in effect at time of crime required minimum sentence for class D violent felony of ½, rather than ⅓, of maximum term. People v Carter, 286 A.D.2d 773, 730 N.Y.S.2d 733, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8692 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 655, 737 N.Y.S.2d 56, 762 N.E.2d 934, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4198 (N.Y. 2001).

Trial court's sentence of imprisonment for a term of 12 ½ to 25 years on defendant convicted of manslaughter in the first degree was illegal and appellate court modified trial court's judgment by reducing defendant's sentence. People v White, 291 A.D.2d 842, 737 N.Y.S.2d 181, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 940 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 98 N.Y.2d 656, 745 N.Y.S.2d 515, 772 N.E.2d 618, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 2214 (N.Y. 2002).

Because the People conceded that defendant's sentence of seven years' imprisonment with five years' post-release supervision for third-degree robbery was illegal under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 70.06(2), (3)(d), (4)(b), 160.05, 70.02(1)(c), 70.45, the sentence was vacated. People v Rowlett, 29 A.D.3d 922, 815 N.Y.S.2d 707, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6908 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

Because defendant's conviction for second-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02(1)(c) required a determinate sentence of two to seven years, in accordance with § 70.02(2)(b), (3)(c), the trial court's imposition of an indeterminate sentence of one to three years in prison was illegal. People v Delorenzo, 34 A.D.3d 868, 823 N.Y.S.2d 564, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13004 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

Resentencing was required on defendant's conviction of criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree because the trial court incorrectly imposed an indeterminate sentence, and a determinate sentence was required. People v McLawrence, 108 A.D.3d 571, 968 N.Y.S.2d 569, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4999 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2013), recalled, vacated, sub. op., 114 A.D.3d 964, 983 N.Y.S.2d 806, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1295 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2014).

Determinate term of imprisonment imposed on one of two counts of sodomy in the first degree was illegal, as the People failed to prove that the crime in the subject count was committed on or after September 1, 1998, and, therefore, the only authorized sentence for that count was an indeterminate prison term pursuant to former N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02(3)(a). People v Mosca, 294 A.D.2d 938, 741 N.Y.S.2d 780, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4544 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 99 N.Y.2d 538, 752 N.Y.S.2d 599, 782 N.E.2d 577, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 4161 (N.Y. 2002).

Where a trial court sua sponte changed defendant's sentence to a five-year term under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.45(2) because the three-year sentence under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02 was unlawful (as defendant was not being sentenced as a violent felony offender), the trial court should have held a resentencing hearing; however, because defendant withdrew a N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 440.20 motion to vacate before it was decided, defendant waived the claim that the trial court erred by not holding a resentencing hearing. People v Hollis, 309 A.D.2d 764, 765 N.Y.S.2d 67, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10463 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 597, 776 N.Y.S.2d 229, 808 N.E.2d 365, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 349 (N.Y. 2004).

Where the trial court imposed a sentence of a minimum of 25 years and a maximum of 25 years imprisonment on each of defendant's convictions for attempted murder in the second degree in violation of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 125.25 and kidnapping in the second degree in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 135.20 for the crimes committed in 1996, the sentence was illegal under former N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02(3)(a). People v Reed, 2 A.D.3d 463, 767 N.Y.S.2d 821, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12837 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 600, 776 N.Y.S.2d 232, 808 N.E.2d 368, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 417 (N.Y. 2004), app. dismissed, 2 N.Y.3d 754, 778 N.Y.S.2d 458, 810 N.E.2d 911, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 596 (N.Y. 2004).

Where defendant was convicted of third degree criminal possession of a weapon in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 265.02(1), the trial court's imposition of a determinate term of three years in prison was erroneous; because the felony was nonviolent pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02(1)(c), any term of incarceration had to be indeterminate pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 70.06(2), (3)(d), (4)(b). People v La Var, 4 A.D.3d 787, 771 N.Y.S.2d 458, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1498 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 3 N.Y.3d 642, 782 N.Y.S.2d 414, 816 N.E.2d 204, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 3346 (N.Y. 2004).

Respective post release supervision periods imposed on defendant's convictions for strangulation in the second degree of five years was illegal because strangulation in the second degree is a class D violent felony and the permitted period of post release supervision is from one and one-half to three years only; therefore, the case was remitted to the county court to modify the post release supervision period. People v Manigault, 150 A.D.3d 1331, 54 N.Y.S.3d 193, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3499 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 29 N.Y.3d 1130, 86 N.E.3d 572, 64 N.Y.S.3d 680, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 2815 (N.Y. 2017).

Defendant was illegally sentenced as a second violent felony offender because the People failed to demonstrate that the California offense of robbery in the first degree was equivalent to a New York criminal offense designated as a violent felony. People v Salako, 165 A.D.3d 846, 86 N.Y.S.3d 93, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6694 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2018), app. denied, 32 N.Y.3d 1177, 121 N.E.3d 232, 97 N.Y.S.3d 604, 2019 N.Y. LEXIS 337 (N.Y. 2019).

Where an inmate was convicted of second degree assault and third degree criminal possession of a weapon, imposition of a determinate sentence of four and one-half years was proper as there was no requirement that sentences imposed pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02 be only in "whole numbers." Willson v Berbary, 421 F. Supp. 2d 589, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 29281 (W.D.N.Y. 2006).

6. Persistent or repeat offenders

The convictions of three defendants sentenced as second or persistent violent felony offenders would be affirmed even though the predicate convictions antedated the effective date of the statute classifying the crime on which the conviction was based as a violent felony offense, where the elements of the crime when committed were the same as those of an offense now defined as a violent felony offense by Penal Law § 70.02; such procedure does not violate the restriction against ex post facto laws contained in Article I of the United States Constitution; persistent violent felony adjudications against two defendants who pleaded guilty to two violent felony offenses on the same day, the charges having arisen out of separate incidents, and who were sentenced on a single day to concurrent prison sentences, would be vacated, and the cases remitted for sentencing of the defendants as second violent felony offenders, since the Legislature did not intend the persistent violent felony law (Penal Law § 70.08) to apply unless each of the two or more predicate violent felony convictions other than the first was for a felony which occurred after sentence had been imposed for the conviction which preceded it. People v Morse, 62 N.Y.2d 205, 476 N.Y.S.2d 505, 465 N.E.2d 12, 1984 N.Y. LEXIS 4286 (N.Y. 1984), app. dismissed, 469 U.S. 1186, 105 S. Ct. 951, 83 L. Ed. 2d 959, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 663 (U.S. 1985).

Where the predicate offense under the second violent offender law (Penal Law § 70.04) and the persistent violent offender law (Penal Law § 70.08) is only so classified because it occurs after a plea of guilty to a lesser included offense, there is no statutory infirmity in the failure to recite in the predicate felony information that the prior conviction was obtained upon a plea of guilty or any constitutional defect because the same offense would not be classified as a violent felony if conviction had been obtained after trial; there was no jurisdictional defect because the sentencing minutes include the Judge's statement that "there has been no jury connected with any of these prior criminal acts"; since the information stated the prior conviction to have been for attempted criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree and made specific reference to Penal Law § 70.02(1), which refers to a lesser included offense, it is clear that the offense could be a lesser included offense only when conviction is on a plea of guilty and not by verdict; therefore, the claimed missing allegation is sufficiently incorporated by reference. People v Morse, 62 N.Y.2d 205, 476 N.Y.S.2d 505, 465 N.E.2d 12, 1984 N.Y. LEXIS 4286 (N.Y. 1984), app. dismissed, 469 U.S. 1186, 105 S. Ct. 951, 83 L. Ed. 2d 959, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 663 (U.S. 1985).

Defendant was improperly sentenced as persistent class E violent felony offender based on his plea of guilty to top count of superior court information charging him with attempted third degree weapon possession in full satisfaction of all pending charges, since third degree weapon possession constitutes class E violent felony only when defendant is convicted of such charge as lesser included offense under indictment charging greater offense (CLS Penal § 70.02, CLS CPL § 220.20(1); sentence would be vacated, and since People's consent to plea was predicated on defendant receiving sentence he did, People would be permitted to withdraw their consent to plea agreement. People v Dickerson, 85 N.Y.2d 870, 626 N.Y.S.2d 50, 649 N.E.2d 1194, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 686 (N.Y. 1995).

Defendants were not entitled to resentencing under the Drug Law Reform Act of 2009 because they had predicate violent felony convictions under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 440.46(5)(a)(i) which excluded such resentencing; contrary to defendants' claims, it was evident from § 440.46(5)(a) that predicate felony convictions were not limited to convictions that had been so "adjudicated," particularly in light of § 440.46(5)(b)'s explicit language that an "exclusion offense" was also a second violent felony offense pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 70.06 or a persistent violent felony offender pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 70.08 for which the person had previously been adjudicated. By including a "prior adjudication" requirement in § 440.46(5)(b) (which did not include the 10-year limitation) but not § 440.46(5)(a), the legislature plainly intended that defendants with violent felony offenses did not need to be previously adjudicated as such before being rendered ineligible for resentencing under § 440.46(5)(a). People v Steward, 18 N.Y.3d 493, 941 N.Y.S.2d 17, 964 N.E.2d 388, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 216 (N.Y. 2012).

Defendant's adjudication as a second violent felony offender was proper, where the instant offense was committed after the effective date of Penal Law §§ 70.02, 70.04, and constituted a violent felony, and where the crime of attempted robbery in the second degree of which defendant was convicted in 1977 and upon which the second violent felony offender status was predicated is now also classified as a violent felony offense, under such circumstances the second violent felony offender statutes do not violate the ex post facto clauses of the United States Constitution. People v Melvin, 99 A.D.2d 517, 470 N.Y.S.2d 690, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16727 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1984).

Defendant was improperly sentenced as predicate violent felony offender on his plea of guilty to sodomy, sexual abuse, and unlawful imprisonment, based upon prior conviction for attempted sexual abuse in first degree, since that crime is not classified as violent felony offense under Penal Law § 70.02. People v Falk, 108 A.D.2d 925, 485 N.Y.S.2d 815, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 43259 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1985).

Defendant who had previously been convicted of third degree robbery was improperly sentenced as second violent felony offender, and was entitled to resentencing, since third degree robbery is not among offenses which may be used as predicate for second violent felony offender status. People v Le Grand, 123 A.D.2d 290, 506 N.Y.S.2d 443, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 60062 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1986).

Defendant was properly sentenced as persistent violent felony offender under CLS Penal § 70.02 where plea minutes, to which defense counsel did not object, stated that defendant had previously pleaded guilty to attempted criminal possession of dangerous weapon consisting of "loaded" revolver, and such plea had been made in satisfaction of indictment charging him with criminal possession of "loaded" firearm. People v Seaton, 127 A.D.2d 620, 511 N.Y.S.2d 417, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 43103 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Use of federal felony of bank robbery as defined in 18 USCS § 2113(a) as predicate for adjudicating defendant as second violent felony offender was improper since New York statutory analogue of federal offense is crime of robbery in third degree, which is not deemed violent for sentencing purposes. People v Smith, 129 A.D.2d 517, 514 N.Y.S.2d 369, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 45194 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1987).

Sentencing of defendant as persistent violent felony offender would be vacated and matter would be remanded for resentencing since prior conviction for criminal possession of defaced weapon was not offense designated as violent felony offense under CLS Penal § 70.02. People v Richardson, 142 A.D.2d 537, 531 N.Y.S.2d 218, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8035 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1988), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 1020, 541 N.Y.S.2d 775, 539 N.E.2d 603, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 1984 (N.Y. 1989).

Defendant with 2 prior convictions for third degree weapon possession, which is class D violent felony, was properly adjudicated to be persistent violent felony offender on convictions for second degree robbery, despite fact that he had not previously been sentenced as second felony offender. People v Solomon, 156 A.D.2d 400, 548 N.Y.S.2d 529, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15370 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 871, 553 N.Y.S.2d 303, 552 N.E.2d 882, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 883 (N.Y. 1990).

Defendant was improperly adjudicated second violent felony offender, rather than second felony offender, where his prior conviction was for third degree robbery, which is class D nonviolent felony. People v Bennett, 162 A.D.2d 694, 557 N.Y.S.2d 116, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8160 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 1019, 565 N.Y.S.2d 769, 566 N.E.2d 1174, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 4780 (N.Y. 1990).

Defendant was improperly adjudicated as second violent felony offender based on his conviction of attempted second degree assault; such crime is not violent felony offense. People v McManus, 228 A.D.2d 453, 643 N.Y.S.2d 413, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6209 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

Defendant was properly sentenced as a second violent felony offender on drug charges as his prior conviction of attempted criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree under former N.Y. Penal Law § 265.02(4) was based on a guilty plea to that offense as a lesser included offense under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 220.20 of criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree and thus was a class E violent felony offense under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02(d). People v Henry, 52 A.D.3d 841, 860 N.Y.S.2d 619, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5774 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 11 N.Y.3d 789, 866 N.Y.S.2d 615, 896 N.E.2d 101, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 3881 (N.Y. 2008).

For purposes of a persistent-violent-felony-offender hearing, defendant's two previous convictions for violent felonies could be considered, notwithstanding that such convictions occurred prior to September 1, 1978, the effective date of the felony offender law. In addition, where defendant failed to raise the issue of the alleged unconstitutionality of the earliest of the two convictions when he was sentenced as a persistent felony-offender for the second conviction, defendant would be precluded from contesting the constitutionality of his first conviction. People v Graham, 111 Misc. 2d 666, 444 N.Y.S.2d 988, 1981 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3337 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1981).

Defendant's sentence for two recent violent felonies could be enhanced under Penal Law § 70.08 by the use of three prior convictions for criminal possession of a weapon, even though at the time defendant was convicted of possession, it was not defined in Penal Law § 70.02 as a violent felony, where an amendment to that statute redefined the crime as a violent felony, where § 70.08 was not an ex post facto law as applied to defendant in that both it and the statute redefining criminal possession of a weapon were in force and effect prior to defendant's commission of the most recent violent felonies, and where the fact that the sentences for defendant's convictions for criminal possession of a weapon ran concurrently would not alter his status as an individual with two or more previous violent felony convictions. People v Santana, 117 Misc. 2d 1016, 459 N.Y.S.2d 705, 1983 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3244 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1983), modified, 107 A.D.2d 613, 483 N.Y.S.2d 1020, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49775 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1985).

Defendant was properly sentenced as a persistent violent felony offender where the trial court determined: (1) the assault was a violent felony offense; (2) defendant had previously been convicted of two predicate violent felonies as defined by N.Y. Penal Law § 70.04(1)(b), consisting of a 1994 conviction in New York of assault in the second degree, and a 1980 conviction in South Carolina for voluntary manslaughter; (3) the People proved the remaining requirements for sentencing as a persistent violent felony offender; and (4) defendant had been incarcerated for approximately 11 ½ years since the 1980 conviction, excluding that time under the tolling provision, which brought the 1980 predicate to within 10 years of the felony at issue. People v Sudan, 298 A.D.2d 620, 748 N.Y.S.2d 415, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9644 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2002), app. denied, 99 N.Y.2d 620, 757 N.Y.S.2d 831, 787 N.E.2d 1177, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 657 (N.Y. 2003).

Since defendant's predicate North Carolina conviction was equivalent to the crime of burglary in the third degree in New York, a nonviolent felony under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 70.02(1)(c), 140.20, the trial court erred in sentencing defendant as second violent felony offender in two New York cases. People v McKoy, 300 A.D.2d 601, 751 N.Y.S.2d 882, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12705 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2002).

Defendant was improperly sentenced as a persistent violent felony offender pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 70.08(1)(a), where defendant was twice previously convicted of attempted criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 110.00; defendant had not previously been convicted of two violent felonies as defined in N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02, because one of the attempted criminal possession convictions arose out of a plea to an offense of a lesser grade than the charged offense. People v Banuchi, 304 A.D.2d 402, 760 N.Y.S.2d 10, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4102 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2003).

Adjudication as a persistent violent felony offender was proper because the People filed a persistent violent felony offender statement setting forth two prior violent felony convictions-a conviction of robbery in the second degree on June 18, 1993 and a conviction of attempted robbery in the second degree on March 7, 1995; inasmuch as the first violent felony conviction was 15 years and 119 days prior to defendant's commission of the instant offense, in order to have defendant adjudicated a persistent violent felony offender, the People had the burden of proving that he was incarcerated for at least five years and 119 days so as to bring the lapse within 10 years under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.04(1)(b)(v). The People demonstrated excludable periods of incarceration of approximately five years and 345 days, which was more than sufficient to sustain such burden. People v Shuler, 100 A.D.3d 1041, 952 N.Y.S.2d 687, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7167 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 20 N.Y.3d 988, 958 N.Y.S.2d 704, 982 N.E.2d 624, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 3901 (N.Y. 2012).

7. Mitigating circumstances

The trial court properly sentenced a defendant convicted of two counts of manslaughter to the minimum term of two years, notwithstanding the facts offered in mitigation that he was a 28-year-old black male who had spent most of his life in the south, that he was in Binghamton attending a special remedial course geared to prepare him for ultimate enrollment in a regular curriculum, that he had never engaged previously in any violent or other criminal conduct, that he was characterized as passive, gentle, co-operative, posing no threat to society, and a person who would be especially vulnerable in a prison environment, that defendant's victims were violent men with lengthy criminal records, and that facts adduced at trial indicated that defendant had been attacked by his victims prior to arming himself with a butcher knife and killing them, since defendant was not that very rare case calling for judicial interference with the legislative prerogative, since he did not demonstrate any disproportionality in sentencing in comparison with equally serious crimes within the state or in the treatment of manslaughter in other jurisdictions, and since the trial court clearly took into account the mitigating circumstances in sentencing defendant to the minimum term authorized by law. People v Hooks, 96 A.D.2d 1001, 467 N.Y.S.2d 8, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19611 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1983).

Total indeterminate prison sentence of 8 to 20 years imposed on conviction of 4 counts of second degree burglary, 2 counts of third degree grand larceny, and first and second degree possession of stolen property was well within statutory guidelines and not excessive where court considered mitigating factors of defendant's age and health. People v Mikolasko, 144 A.D.2d 760, 535 N.Y.S.2d 167, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10916 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 666, 543 N.Y.S.2d 409, 541 N.E.2d 438, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 2226 (N.Y. 1989).

Four concurrent terms of 12 ½ years in prison was not a harsh or excessive sentence for convictions for attempted murder in the second degree, gang assault in the first degree, and assault in the first degree (two counts) because defendant's conduct in repeatedly stabbing an unarmed victim was not mitigated by his youth, lack of significant criminal history, and childhood hardships; defendant's sentence was significantly more lenient than the maximum authorized under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02(3)(a). People v Arnold, 32 A.D.3d 1051, 820 N.Y.S.2d 857, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10687 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

8. Plea bargaining

Where a defendant charged with burglary in the first degree pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor and received a sentence of probation, in violation of CPL 220.10 (subd 5, par [e]), which prohibits the court from accepting a guilty plea to anything less than a class D felony for a violent felony offense such as burglary in the first degree (Penal Law, § 70.02), the plea bargaining having been conducted in good faith, the trial court may, upon becoming aware of the relevant statutes, vacate the guilty plea and sentence and order the defendant to stand trial on the original indictment, since the plea was erroneous as a matter of law and the plea bargain a nullity; under the circumstances, the court had not only the power, but the inherent duty, to correct the error. Wadsworth v Mogavero, 71 A.D.2d 157, 422 N.Y.S.2d 499, 1979 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13243 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1979).

On pleading guilty to manslaughter in first degree and other offenses, defendant was improperly sentenced to 12 ½ to 25 years on manslaughter count, even though facts of case established his use of gun, since manslaughter in first degree is violent felony offense but not armed felony offense for purpose of CLS Penal § 70.02(4), and thus minimum term of imprisonment could not exceed $^{1}/_{3}$ of maximum; since clear intent of sentencing court was to give maximum sentence, remand would not be required and sentence would be modified to $8^1/_3$ to 25 years. People v Garcia, 129 A.D.2d 505, 514 N.Y.S.2d 344, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 45179 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 704, 519 N.Y.S.2d 1038, 513 N.E.2d 715, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 18081 (N.Y. 1987).

Prison sentence of $8^1/_3$ to 25 years, imposed on defendant's negotiated guilty plea to first degree manslaughter, was not excessive where facts presented strong case of second degree murder, penalty for which ranged from prison term of 15 years to life to term of 25 years to life. People v Bourne, 139 A.D.2d 210, 531 N.Y.S.2d 899, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7981 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 72 N.Y.2d 955, 534 N.Y.S.2d 668, 531 N.E.2d 300, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 5630 (N.Y. 1988).

Sentence of 8 to 24 years' imprisonment, which was imposed after sentence of 10 to 20 years' imprisonment was vacated, did not violate plea agreement where (1) promised sentences could not be legally imposed, (2) defendant did not avail himself of opportunity to withdraw plea and proceed to trial, (3) court imposed less than original minimum term of imprisonment, which benefitted defendant because he became eligible for parole at earlier date, and (4) longer maximum term was required for sentence to be within legal parameters. People v Stewart, 144 A.D.2d 601, 534 N.Y.S.2d 439, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11902 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 896, 538 N.Y.S.2d 809, 535 N.E.2d 1349, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 1245 (N.Y. 1989).

On appeal from denial of defendant's motion to vacate his conviction of second degree murder and first degree burglary, matter would be remitted for hearing as to defendant's motivation for pleading guilty and extent to which court's unfulfilled promise induced his plea where court's unfulfilled promise was that sentence would not exceed 20 years to life in lieu of 25 years to life allowed under CLS Penal § 70.00(3)(a)(i), and defendant stated at his plea allocution that he was pleading guilty because he had no defense to prosecution's case, wished to avoid expense and time of trial, did not want to undergo pain and humiliation of trial, and did not want sentence to exceed 20 years to life. People v Di Donato, 263 A.D.2d 677, 695 N.Y.S.2d 145, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8044 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 798, 700 N.Y.S.2d 431, 722 N.E.2d 511, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 3767 (N.Y. 1999).

On appellate counsel's motion to be relieved of assignment on ground that of lack of nonfrivolous issues, counsel would be relieved of his assignment, and new counsel would be assigned to consider whether defendant's sentence was properly enhanced where (1) in exchange for plea of guilty to first degree robbery as violent felony offender, defendant was promised sentence of 3 to 6 years, and (2) at sentencing, court imposed enhanced sentence of 5 to 10 years based on defendant's failure to cooperate with probation officers who were preparing presentence investigation report. People v Rucker, 281 A.D.2d 993, 727 N.Y.S.2d 833, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2904 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2001).

Because the indeterminate sentence that defendant bargained for and received was impermissible under N.Y. Penal Law 70.06(6), the trial court properly reduced the conviction for falsely reporting an incident in the first degree from a class D violent felony under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02 (1)(c) to a class E felony under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 240.60(1). People v Surdis, 23 A.D.3d 841, 805 N.Y.S.2d 433, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13123 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2005), app. denied, 6 N.Y.3d 818, 812 N.Y.S.2d 458, 845 N.E.2d 1289, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 910 (N.Y. 2006).

Trial court properly denied defendant's motion to withdraw his guilty plea because it was a knowing, voluntary, and intelligent choice among alternative courses of action, the trial court was not required to engage in a factual recitation in order to establish the elements of the crime since defendant pleaded guilty to a lesser crime as part of a plea bargain, defendant made no factual admissions that were inconsistent with the crime to which he was pleading, the allocution was sufficient, and there were no extraordinary circumstances or abuse of discretion warranting a reduction of the agreed-upon sentence in the interest of justice inasmuch as it resolved other charges and was significantly less than the maximum permissible sentence. People v Hollenbeck, 152 A.D.3d 974, 60 N.Y.S.3d 521, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5697 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 30 N.Y.3d 1061, 94 N.E.3d 493, 71 N.Y.S.3d 11, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 4001 (N.Y. 2017).

Where a defendant in a domestic violence prosecution previously refused to cooperate with the DA's office as a complainant in a high-profile case and thereafter filed lawsuits against members of the Domestic Violence Bureau in their individual and official capacities, those facts alone did not meet the high standard for removing the DA and appointing a special prosecutor. DA office's refusal to offer defendant, indicted for committing a class B violent felony offense, for which the minimum sentence was five years' incarceration, a non-incarceratory plea to a lesser charge was wholly consistent with the DA office's long-standing post-indictment plea policy, demonstrating the evenhanded manner in which it was administered. People v Barba, 60 Misc. 3d 1074, 82 N.Y.S.3d 820, 2018 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3343 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2018).

Sentence of 10 years of imprisonment imposed for a guilty plea to one count of first degree assault was proper because the 10-year term was within the statutory range as the offense was classified as a class B violent felony under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02(1)(a), and the court was required to impose a determinate term of imprisonment of at lease five years and no more than 25 years. Willett v Berbary, 456 F. Supp. 2d 404, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 77685 (W.D.N.Y. 2006).

9. Sentences for particular crimes

Burglary in first degree as defined in CLS Penal § 140.30(2) (requiring that defendant cause physical injury in course of burglary) is not class B armed felony offense because it does not include elements enumerated in CLS CPL § 1.20(41) defining "armed felony," and thus minimum sentence for first degree burglary under § 140.30(2) must be one-third of maximum; a defendant may be sentenced to minimum of one-half of maximum on conviction of class B armed felony offense, but otherwise, minimum must be fixed at one-third of maximum. People v Edwards, 121 A.D.2d 254, 503 N.Y.S.2d 40, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 58238 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1986).

It was not abuse of court's discretion to impose sentence within permissible range and less than maximum allowable, notwithstanding defendant had no prior criminal record, since defendant was convicted of forcing his way into innocent woman's apartment, striking her, ripping off her clothes and attempting to sexually attack her; court properly characterized acts as violent and abhorrent crime. People v Frederickson, 122 A.D.2d 580, 504 N.Y.S.2d 925, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 59858 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1986).

Attempted second degree burglary may serve as predicate violent felony offense for purpose of imposing enhanced sentence for second degree burglary. People v Hemphill, 129 A.D.2d 460, 514 N.Y.S.2d 24, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 45159 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1987).

Imposition of maximum sentence for first degree assault was fully justified where defendant was convicted of severely beating woman he lived with, and of throwing pot of boiling oil at her, which caused her to suffer permanent scarring. People v Moloi, 135 A.D.2d 576, 521 N.Y.S.2d 794, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52517 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 1009, 526 N.Y.S.2d 943, 521 N.E.2d 1086, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 912 (N.Y. 1988).

There was no abuse of discretion in imposition of maximum sentence for second degree arson where defendant knew apartment house was occupied and he nonetheless deliberately set it on fire. People v Royce, 137 A.D.2d 931, 525 N.Y.S.2d 355, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1741 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 72 N.Y.2d 866, 532 N.Y.S.2d 516, 528 N.E.2d 906, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 3904 (N.Y. 1988).

It was not abuse of discretion to sentence defendant to concurrent indeterminate terms of 5 to 15 years on convictions of first degree assault and second degree weapon possession in view of violent nature of crime and fact that sentence was within statutory limits. People v Buckhanon, 140 A.D.2d 850, 528 N.Y.S.2d 439, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5318 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 72 N.Y.2d 911, 532 N.Y.S.2d 760, 528 N.E.2d 1233, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 2837 (N.Y. 1988).

Prison sentences of 6 to 25 years imposed on defendant's convictions for first degree manslaughter and first degree robbery, and sentence of 4 ½ to 15 years imposed on his second degree robbery conviction, were improper since court was required to set minimum at one third of maximum; thus, sentences would be modified by imposing minimum terms of $8^1/_3$ years on manslaughter and first degree robbery convictions and 5 years on second degree robbery conviction. People v Paxhia, 140 A.D.2d 962, 529 N.Y.S.2d 638, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5920 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 72 N.Y.2d 960, 534 N.Y.S.2d 674, 531 N.E.2d 306, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 5850 (N.Y. 1988).

Sentences imposed on convictions for assault in first degree, criminal possession of weapon in second degree and criminal possession of weapon in third degree would be modified since offenses are not class B armed felonies and, pursuant to CLS Penal § 70.02(4), minimum sentence on those charges should have been fixed at $^1/_3$ of maximum. People v Bennett, 144 A.D.2d 564, 534 N.Y.S.2d 422, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11920 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 889, 538 N.Y.S.2d 801, 535 N.E.2d 1341, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 1058 (N.Y. 1989).

Statutory maximum sentence of $8^1/_3$ to 25 years' imprisonment was not excessive where (1) defendant pleaded guilty to single count of first degree burglary in full satisfaction of 7-count indictment which included felony murder, (2) he admitted conduct that would constitute felony murder as well as crime of burglary, and (3) court informed him, before accepting his plea, that he would very likely receive maximum sentence. People v D'Angelo, 145 A.D.2d 783, 535 N.Y.S.2d 765, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13254 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 976, 540 N.Y.S.2d 1010, 538 N.E.2d 362, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 1530 (N.Y. 1989), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 1013, 541 N.Y.S.2d 768, 539 N.E.2d 596, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 1811 (N.Y. 1989), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 738, 545 N.Y.S.2d 112, 543 N.E.2d 755, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 2432 (N.Y. 1989).

Defendant's sentence of 2 to 4 years' imprisonment for attempted second degree assault should be reduced to 1 ½ to 3 years where court was incorrectly informed that offense was violent felony offense and it was clear that greater sentence was imposed only due to such misinformation. People v King, 148 A.D.2d 382, 540 N.Y.S.2d 168, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3853 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 742, 545 N.Y.S.2d 116, 543 N.E.2d 759, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 2529 (N.Y. 1989).

Sentence of 3 to 6 years' imprisonment on defendant's guilty plea to second degree assault was not harsh and excessive where, on pleading guilty, he was informed that he could receive maximum term of 7 years, crime stemmed from incident in which he pushed his girlfriend off porch railing, causing her to break her spinal column and to injure her spinal cord, and he had extensive criminal record including another assault conviction. People v Cummings, 172 A.D.2d 886, 568 N.Y.S.2d 185, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4214 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 78 N.Y.2d 1075, 577 N.Y.S.2d 238, 583 N.E.2d 950, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 5239 (N.Y. 1991).

Court would reject contention that sentence imposed on defendant was harsh and excessive in light of more lenient sentences imposed on codefendants where (1) defendant pleaded guilty to class C violent felony of second degree burglary in satisfaction of 3-count indictment as well as 2 other pending indictments, and (2) codefendants pleaded guilty to class D violent felony of attempted second degree burglary. People v Hicks, 189 A.D.2d 1039, 593 N.Y.S.2d 99, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 759 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 887, 597 N.Y.S.2d 948, 613 N.E.2d 980, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 1438 (N.Y. 1993).

Concurrent sentence of 2 to 6 years on charges of second degree burglary and first degree reckless endangerment was not harsh and excessive where defendant was permitted to plead guilty to such offenses in satisfaction of 7-count indictment which included first and second degree burglary, first and second degree use of firearm, first degree robbery, first degree reckless endangerment and second degree kidnapping arising from incident during which defendant entered tavern, discharged .22-caliber rifle, left tavern, forcibly entered woman's home, and held her hostage at gunpoint for several hours before surrendering to police. People v Brown, 205 A.D.2d 854, 613 N.Y.S.2d 719, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6071 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 84 N.Y.2d 866, 618 N.Y.S.2d 12, 642 N.E.2d 331, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 3904 (N.Y. 1994).

It was not excessive to sentence defendant to prison term of 4 to 12 years on his second degree burglary conviction, even though he was 17 at time of crime, where he engaged in such criminal activity less than 2 months after his release from county jail on serving 1-year sentence. People v Doane, 208 A.D.2d 971, 617 N.Y.S.2d 232, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9657 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1994).

Sentence of 1 ½ to 3 years for attempted second degree burglary was not harsh or excessive where it was most lenient indeterminate sentence permissible for that crime and was agreed result of plea bargain under which 2 other charges against defendant were dropped. People v Clark, 240 A.D.2d 781, 659 N.Y.S.2d 798, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6044 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Sentence of 3 to 6 years for first degree assault was not harsh or excessive where defendant had prior criminal history and received benefit of his plea bargain. People v Shabazz, 242 A.D.2d 764, 661 N.Y.S.2d 1012, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8544 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 836, 667 N.Y.S.2d 690, 690 N.E.2d 499, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4391 (N.Y. 1997).

Defendant's sentence of 25 years to life for first degree kidnapping would be reduced to 18 years to life in view of significant disparity between defendant's sentence and that imposed on prime perpetrator. People v Leonor, 245 A.D.2d 22, 665 N.Y.S.2d 76, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12515 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1997), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 855, 677 N.Y.S.2d 85, 699 N.E.2d 445, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 2534 (N.Y. 1998).

Sentence of 5 to 15 years for first degree assault, although maximum, was not excessive where it was consistent with plea agreement in satisfaction of 4-count indictment that included charge of attempted second degree murder. People v Catts, 245 A.D.2d 385, 665 N.Y.S.2d 586, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12762 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

Court properly imposed harshest permissible aggregate sentence of 10 ½ to 21 years for first and second degree assault and first degree reckless endangerment where those crimes involved multiple, brutal assaults on helpless newborn infant. People v Persons, 245 A.D.2d 845, 666 N.Y.S.2d 773, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13196 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Sentence of 4 to 12 years for first degree assault was not excessive where it was within statutory limits and was result of plea bargain under which 3 other counts, including attempted second degree murder, were dropped, defendant's long criminal history included assaults on present victim, who was mother of his 2 children, and heinous present offense involved brutal beating that fractured victim's skull, facial bones, and wrist. People v Nichols, 245 A.D.2d 889, 666 N.Y.S.2d 55, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13404 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 1011, 676 N.Y.S.2d 139, 698 N.E.2d 968, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 2051 (N.Y. 1998).

Sentence of 3 ½ to 7 years for second degree assault as second felony offender was not excessive where defendant stabbed victim with knife, causing 4-inch laceration to victim's abdomen, defendant had extensive criminal history, he committed present crime while on parole, sentence was in accordance with plea agreement and statutory parameters, and there were no extraordinary circumstances warranting reduction in interest of justice. People v Lamica, 245 A.D.2d 897, 666 N.Y.S.2d 52, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13603 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 942, 671 N.Y.S.2d 722, 694 N.E.2d 891, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 1150 (N.Y. 1998).

Sentence of 2 to 4 years for second degree assault was not excessive, and would not be reduced in interest of justice, where defendant pleaded guilty to that charge in full satisfaction of 3-count indictment, thus significantly reducing his sentence exposure. People v Hicks, 245 A.D.2d 979, 667 N.Y.S.2d 130, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13568 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Sentence of 3 ½ to 7 years for second degree assault would be reduced, in interest of justice, to $2^1/_3$ to 7 years where Appellate Division vacated defendant's adjudication as second felony offender. People v Robles, 251 A.D.2d 20, 673 N.Y.S.2d 654, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6397 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied,

Sentence of 7 ½ to 15 years for second degree burglary was not excessive, even though it was statutory maximum sentence, where defendant was second felony offender, he had entered victim's apartment with intent to commit sexual abuse, and there were no extraordinary circumstances warranting modification. People v Brown, 251 A.D.2d 694, 674 N.Y.S.2d 149, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6456 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 1029, 684 N.Y.S.2d 494, 707 N.E.2d 449, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4556 (N.Y. 1998).

Sentence to 2 concurrent prison terms of $1^1/_3$ to 4 years for attempted second degree assault and attempted third degree weapon possession was not excessive where defendant had long criminal history, and sentence was agreed to and was not harshest one possible. People v Green, 255 A.D.2d 833, 681 N.Y.S.2d 795, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12766 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 971, 695 N.Y.S.2d 57, 716 N.E.2d 1102, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 2500 (N.Y. 1999).

Consecutive sentences of 7 ½ to 15 years for attempted first degree robbery and 2 to 4 years for fourth degree conspiracy as second felony offender was not excessive, and would not be modified in interest of justice, where his serious crimes involved attempted gunpoint robbery of tavern and planning of robbery of jewelry store, he had extensive prior criminal record, he was fully apprised that he could face maximum penalty if he failed to cooperate with authorities, and there were no extraordinary mitigating circumstances. People v Fernandez, 263 A.D.2d 673, 696 N.Y.S.2d 242, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8045 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 822, 702 N.Y.S.2d 592, 724 N.E.2d 384, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 4141 (N.Y. 1999).

Sentence of 6 to 12 years for first and second degree robbery and third degree sale of controlled substance was proper where it fell within statutory limits, despite defendant's claim that his crimes were motivated by drug addiction for which he intended to seek treatment. People v McKenzie, 263 A.D.2d 778, 694 N.Y.S.2d 793, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8273 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 1045, 697 N.Y.S.2d 877, 720 N.E.2d 97, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 3537 (N.Y. 1999).

Sentence to concurrent prison terms of 3 to 6 years for second degree assault, 3 ½ to 7 years for second degree weapon possession, and one year for fourth degree possession of marijuana was not excessive where sentence was less than harshest allowed, and there was no manifestation that court abused its discretion or that extraordinary circumstances warranted modification. People v Hart, 266 A.D.2d 584, 698 N.Y.S.2d 72, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11214 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 903, 707 N.Y.S.2d 388, 728 N.E.2d 987, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 697 (N.Y. 2000).

Sentence of 7 years for second degree assault was not excessive, even though it was maximum sentence for second felony offender, where plea agreement included prosecution's dropping of first degree reckless endangerment count and not pursuing persistent felony offender status. People v Williams, 266 A.D.2d 647, 698 N.Y.S.2d 347, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11410 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 886, 705 N.Y.S.2d 19, 726 N.E.2d 496, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 490 (N.Y. 2000).

Sentences of 7 years in prison and fine of $5,000 for second degree assault and one year in jail and fine of $1,000 for child endangerment were not excessive where they were in accordance with favorable plea bargain, defendant had criminal history, and there were no extraordinary circumstances warranting modification. People v Schultz, 273 A.D.2d 508, 709 N.Y.S.2d 456, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6431 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Sentence of 3 to 9 years for second degree conspiracy was not excessive where defendant tried to hire "hit man" to murder her husband, and mitigating circumstances of her troubled childhood, emotional problems, and concern over her ill child's health and well-being were before County Court at time of sentencing. People v Tasber, 273 A.D.2d 542, 709 N.Y.S.2d 242, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6646 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 858, 714 N.Y.S.2d 9, 736 N.E.2d 870, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 2781 (N.Y. 2000).

Sentence for first degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.10(1) would be vacated, and case would be remitted for resentencing, where that crime, when committed, was class C violent felony under CLS Penal § 70.02, which was later amended to reclassify that crime as class B felony, and record was unclear as to whether defendant was properly sentenced for class C violent felony or improperly for class B. People v Jennings, 273 A.D.2d 828, 709 N.Y.S.2d 305, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6908 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 890, 715 N.Y.S.2d 382, 738 N.E.2d 786, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3341 (N.Y. 2000).

Article 78 proceeding to amend inmate's correctional records to reflect that his 1983 sentence for attempted second degree assault had expired and that he was currently serving only his 1965 sentence for second degree murder was properly dismissed for failure to state cause of action where (1) defendant's 2 sentences ran consecutively, and thus, under CLS Penal § 70.25(2-a), he was still subject to 1983 conviction, (2) sentencing court's calculation of defendant's term was consistent with CLS Penal § 70.30(1)(b), and (3) § 70.30(1)(b) was in effect before defendant's 1983 conviction and thus did not violate ex post facto clause. Cook v Goord, 275 A.D.2d 819, 713 N.Y.S.2d 507, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9189 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 769, 722 N.Y.S.2d 472, 745 N.E.2d 392, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3837 (N.Y. 2000).

Defendant's sentence would be vacated, and case would be remitted for either imposition of promised sentence or opportunity for defendant to withdraw his plea, where he pleaded guilty to second degree assault with understanding that he would be sentenced as second felony offender to incarceration for 3 years, and court imposed that sentence but further ordered him to pay restitution of $1,664.52. People v Austin, 275 A.D.2d 913, 715 N.Y.S.2d 173, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9697 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000).

Sentence for second degree assault would be modified from determinate term of 7 years to indeterminate term of 3 ½ to 7 years where original sentence was illegal under CLS Penal § 70.00(2) and (3)(b), and it was clear that sentencing court had intended to impose maximum sentence for that offense. People v Santiago, 281 A.D.2d 566, 721 N.Y.S.2d 832, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2604 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 867, 730 N.Y.S.2d 42, 754 N.E.2d 1125, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2637 (N.Y. 2001).

Sentence of 5 years in prison with mandatory 1 ½ years of postrelease supervision for second degree assault was unduly severe and would be reduced to statutory minimum term of 2 years where defendant had virtually no criminal record and no history of violent conduct, and he was hard-working person who was extensively involved in his community. People v Coleman, 281 A.D.2d 653, 721 N.Y.S.2d 160, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2024 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

Maximum sentence of 25 years, as second felony offender, for second degree arson and first degree reckless endangerment was not excessive and would not be reduced in interest of justice where fact that no one was injured by 5 separate fires set by defendant in theater complex was fortuitous rather than indicative of lack of vicious intent, defendant lacked remorse, and sentencing court properly considered defendant's suppressed confession to present arson as well as another in college dormitory. People v Brown, 281 A.D.2d 700, 728 N.Y.S.2d 100, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2312 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 826, 729 N.Y.S.2d 446, 754 N.E.2d 206, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2089 (N.Y. 2001).

Concurrent prison sentences of 7 years for second degree assault, 12 years for second degree weapon possession, and 3 ½ to 7 years for reckless endangerment would not be disturbed where defendant, who had prior criminal record, shot victim in foot and failed to identify any extraordinary circumstances warranting modification. People v Rivera, 281 A.D.2d 702, 721 N.Y.S.2d 429, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2294 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 805, 726 N.Y.S.2d 383, 750 N.E.2d 85, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1735 (N.Y. 2001).

Sentence to four consecutive 15-year prison terms for 4 separate second degree burglaries, and concurrent term of 7 ½ to 15 years for third degree arson, although long, was not excessive where it fell within permissible range for those crimes, defendant had prior criminal record, and there were no extraordinary circumstances warranting modification. People v Cleveland, 281 A.D.2d 815, 721 N.Y.S.2d 876, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3000 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 900, 730 N.Y.S.2d 797, 756 N.E.2d 85, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2752 (N.Y. 2001).

Sentence to consecutive prison terms of 8 to 16 years for first degree manslaughter and 2 to 6 years for second degree assault where not excessive where those crimes involved separate and distinct acts and were violent, resulting in death of one victim and injury to the other. People v Carter, 286 A.D.2d 773, 730 N.Y.S.2d 733, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8692 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 655, 737 N.Y.S.2d 56, 762 N.E.2d 934, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4198 (N.Y. 2001).

Although aggregate sentence of 10 to 20 years was not unduly harsh, sentence of 7 ½ to 15 years on each conviction of second degree assault was illegal where that crime is class "D" violent felony offense, which at time of crime was punishable by indeterminate sentence with maximum term of 7 years and minimum term of ½ of maximum; thus, judgment of conviction would be modified by vacating sentences imposed on those counts and remitting case for resentencing on those counts. People v Fuller, 286 A.D.2d 910, 731 N.Y.S.2d 132, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9157 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 682, 738 N.Y.S.2d 297, 764 N.E.2d 401, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4382 (N.Y. 2001).

Judgment of conviction would be modified by vacating sentences imposed on 2 counts of first degree assault, and case would be remitted for resentencing on those counts, where there was discrepancy between sentencing minutes, which showed improper sentence of 4 to 20 years on those counts, and certificate of conviction, which showed legal sentence of 10 to 20 years on those counts. People v Fuller, 286 A.D.2d 910, 731 N.Y.S.2d 132, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9157 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 682, 738 N.Y.S.2d 297, 764 N.E.2d 401, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4382 (N.Y. 2001).

Maximum seven-year sentence under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 70.02. 70.15 for a defendant father's conviction of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(9) assault in the second degree of his four-month-old son that created bruising and broken bones was not an abuse of discretion. Even though the father had no prior felony convictions, the court noted the victim's age and the father's violent history and lack of remorse. People v Jennings, 20 A.D.3d 777, 798 N.Y.S.2d 597, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7961 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 5 N.Y.3d 829, 804 N.Y.S.2d 43, 837 N.E.2d 742, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 3053 (N.Y. 2005).

At the time that an inmate committed his offense of attempted murder in the second degree and was sentenced, N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02(3)(a), (4) authorized his sentence of 8 to 16 years as a first offender convicted of a class B violent felony offense; the inmate was not entitled to an adjustment of his term of imprisonment. Matter of LaRocco v Goord, 43 A.D.3d 500, 840 N.Y.S.2d 477, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8842 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

Because the maximum permissible postrelease supervision for second-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 70.02(1)(c), 70.45(2)(e) was three years, the trial court erred by imposing five years of postrelease supervision. People v Robertson, 46 A.D.3d 928, 846 N.Y.S.2d 755, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12434 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 844, 859 N.Y.S.2d 402, 889 N.E.2d 89, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 1764 (N.Y. 2008).

Criminal mischief in the third degree was not a violent felony, and the People conceded that defendant should have been sentenced to an indeterminate term as a second felony offender rather than a determinate term as a second violent felony offender for such crime. People v Ramos, 48 A.D.3d 984, 851 N.Y.S.2d 724, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1633 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 938, 862 N.Y.S.2d 345, 892 N.E.2d 411, 2008 N.Y. Because defendant faced a minimum of five years and a maximum of 25 years in prison under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02(3)(a) for her conviction of assault in the first degree and was only sentenced to 15 years followed by five years of postrelease supervision, defendant's sentence was not harsh or excessive under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 470.15. People v Gratton, 51 A.D.3d 1219, 857 N.Y.S.2d 363, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4236 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 11 N.Y.3d 736, 864 N.Y.S.2d 395, 894 N.E.2d 659, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 3002 (N.Y. 2008).

After convicting defendant of assault in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05, the trial court erred in imposing a five-year period of post-release supervision for a class D violent felony offense under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 70.02(1)(c), 70.45(2)(e) and, thus, reduced the period of post-release supervision to three years, which was the maximum allowed. People v Brown, 52 A.D.3d 1237, 859 N.Y.S.2d 548, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5219 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 956, 863 N.Y.S.2d 140, 893 N.E.2d 446, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 2922 (N.Y. 2008).

Defendant was properly sentenced as a second felony offender in view of his two prior felony convictions, one in 1992 for attempted burglary in the second degree and one in 1996 for promoting prison contraband in the first degree (at which time he was sentenced as a second felony offender); although defendant contended at his sentencing here that he was told at the time of his 1992 plea to the burglary charge that it was a nonviolent felony, he failed to demonstrate good cause for his failure to contest that conviction at the time of his 1996 sentencing or on appeal therefrom. Thus, he waived any claim as to the unconstitutionality of the earlier conviction. People v Young, 86 A.D.3d 796, 927 N.Y.S.2d 221, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5871 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 17 N.Y.3d 905, 933 N.Y.S.2d 660, 957 N.E.2d 1164, 2011 N.Y. LEXIS 3507 (N.Y. 2011).

Defendant's maximum sentence for his conviction of burglary in the second degree was not an abuse of discretion in light of his extensive criminal history; furthermore, the fact that the accomplice received a lesser sentence was not a compelling reason to reduce defendant's sentence as the accomplice, unlike defendant, entered a plea agreement and, pursuant to it, testified against defendant. People v Garcia, 131 A.D.3d 732, 14 N.Y.S.3d 809, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6316 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2015), app. denied, 27 N.Y.3d 997, 59 N.E.3d 1219, 38 N.Y.S.3d 107, 2016 N.Y. LEXIS 1367 (N.Y. 2016).

In 2003, defendant entered a plea of guilty to attempted criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree as the sole count of a superior court information. Therefore, his conviction of that crime, upon his plea of guilty, did not constitute a violent felony pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02(1)(d); consequently, he should not have been adjudicated a second violent felony offender. People v Coleman, 148 A.D.3d 717, 48 N.Y.S.3d 478, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1540 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 29 N.Y.3d 1077, 86 N.E.3d 254, 64 N.Y.S.3d 167, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 2036 (N.Y. 2017).

Given the violent nature of defendant's participation in an attack in which he and others were stomping on the defenseless victim, his lengthy prior criminal history and his inability to comply with supervision, the 12-year sentence for attempted gang assault and attempted assault, followed by 5 years of post-release supervision on each count, with the sentences to be served concurrently, which was less than the possible maximum, was proper. People v Coleman, 151 A.D.3d 1385, 58 N.Y.S.3d 631, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5073 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 29 N.Y.3d 1125, 86 N.E.3d 567, 64 N.Y.S.3d 675, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 3016 (N.Y. 2017).

Defendant who pleaded guilty to 2 counts of attempted assault in first degree as lesser included offenses, after having been indicted for 2 counts of attempted manslaughter in first degree for shooting 2 individuals, would be given community-based sentence with "limited incarceration" on his consent to perform 600 hours of community service designed to educate public to problems associated with drug abuse, on basis of mitigating circumstances that defendant was 18 years old, had no criminal history, had weak motive and had committed irrational act under influence of alcohol and drugs, that defendant had also shot himself, that grand jury had made unsolicited extraneous conclusion as to existence of extreme emotional influence, that defendant suffered from personality disorder but had undergone extensive counseling, had made positive gains, and there was expert proof that he did not constitute threat to community, reconciliation had been accomplished between defendant and one victim, there was no discernable sense of outrage in community, and defendant had remorseful attitude. People v Mooney, 133 Misc. 2d 313, 506 N.Y.S.2d 991, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2901 (N.Y. County Ct. 1986).

When defendant was sentenced to concurrent indeterminate prison terms of $8^1/_3$ to 25 years for first degree manslaughter and first degree robbery, each sentence was within the requisite statutory parameters, under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02(3)(a), and would not be disturbed on appeal absent a showing that the trial court abused its discretion or that extraordinary circumstances existed in the record which warranted modification of the sentences, neither of which were present. People v Gilliam, 300 A.D.2d 701, 752 N.Y.S.2d 722, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11596 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2002), app. denied, 99 N.Y.2d 628, 760 N.Y.S.2d 109, 790 N.E.2d 283, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 1114 (N.Y. 2003).

Where defendant was convicted of second degree assault in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3), the trial court erroneously sentenced defendant to a determinate term of imprisonment based upon its misapprehension that such a sentence was mandatory for second degree assault; while a determinate term of imprisonment was authorized under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02(2)(b), (3)(c), it was not required, and although some imprisonment was mandatory, N.Y. Penal Law § 60.05(5), a definite term of imprisonment of one year or less under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.00(4) or an intermittent term of imprisonment under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 60.05(5), 85.00 were also authorized, as was a split sentence of imprisonment and probation, N.Y. Penal Law § 60.01(2)(d). People v Endresz, 1 A.D.3d 888, 767 N.Y.S.2d 732, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12406 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2003).

Imposition of a prison sentence close to the minimum authorized was not improvident in a case in which defendant participated with two co-defendants in assaulting a victim; the court was justifiably persuaded to deny youthful offender status by defendant's unrepentance and failure to accept responsibility. While defendant had been offered a plea deal with a recommendation for probation and youthful offender status, this would have been in exchange for testifying against his codefendants, which he rejected. People v Francis, 83 A.D.3d 1119, 922 N.Y.S.2d 581, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2686 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 17 N.Y.3d 806, 929 N.Y.S.2d 565, 953 N.E.2d 803, 2011 N.Y. LEXIS 2401 (N.Y. 2011).

10. —Homicide

The judgment of the trial court convicting defendant of two counts of manslaughter in the first degree and sentencing him to consecutive terms of not less than eight years nor more than 25 years and not less than two years nor more than six years would be modified to reduce the sentences to consecutive terms of not less than eight years nor more than 24 years and not less than two years nor more than six years where the defendant pleaded guilty to two separate counts of manslaughter, at that time the court expressed an intent to sentence the defendant to consecutive terms, the aggregate of which would approximate a minimum of ten years and a maximum of 30 years; under Penal Law § 70.02(4) the minimum sentence imposed for a class B violent felony offense, such as manslaughter in the first degree, must be fixed at one-third of the maximum term imposed, and as eight is slightly less than one-third of 25, the sentence would be modified on that count to impose a minimum of eight years and a maximum of 24 years. People v Feliciano, 92 A.D.2d 832, 460 N.Y.S.2d 334, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17210 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 59 N.Y.2d 765, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 5088 (N.Y. 1983).

A sentence of twelve and one-half to twenty five years imprisonment on a plea of guilty to the offense of manslaughter in the first degree was improper and would be modified to impose a sentence of from eight and one-third to twenty five years since, absent a finding that defendant is a predicate felon, the minimum period of imprisonment that may imposed for a violent felony offense cannot exceed one-third of the maximum, unless the sentence is for a conviction of a class B armed felony offense, under Penal Law § 70.02(4), and since manslaughter in the first degree is not such an offense, neither possession nor display of a gun being a statutory element of the crime. People v Gonzalez, 99 A.D.2d 1001, 473 N.Y.S.2d 459, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17427 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1984).

Manslaughter in the first degree is not an armed violent felony offense in that neither the possession nor display of a gun constitutes an element of the crime, and the trial court thus erred in sentencing defendant for that crime to incarceration for more than one third of the maximum term (Penal Law § 70.02(4)). People v Rhodes, 107 A.D.2d 582, 484 N.Y.S.2d 539, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 42580 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1985).

Where defendant was not found to be predicate felon, minimum period of imprisonment imposed for manslaughter conviction could not exceed one-third of maximum, unless sentence was for conviction of class B armed felony offense. People v Sellers, 113 A.D.2d 850, 493 N.Y.S.2d 586, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52486 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1985).

Defendant who pled guilty to and was convicted of manslaughter in first degree arising from defendant's killing of his estranged wife by stabbing her repeatedly with knife was improperly sentenced to indeterminant term of imprisonment of $8^1/_3$ to 25 years, and sentence will be modified as matter of discretion in interest of justice, by reducing sentence to indeterminate term of 5 to 15 years, where defendant was acting in state of extreme emotional disturbance at time of homicide and where defendant has only one prior conviction, for petty larceny, which occurred several years prior. People v Maggio, 114 A.D.2d 522, 494 N.Y.S.2d 424, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 53225 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1985).

Manslaughter in first degree is not felony offense since neither possession nor display of gun is statutory element of crime; thus, although defendant admitted guns were used in killing, trial court erred in imposing enhanced minimum term of 12 ½ years under misapprehension that manslaughter in first degree was "armed felony". People v Roman, 114 A.D.2d 809, 495 N.Y.S.2d 649, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 53813 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1985).

Sentence of 8 to 16 years on conviction of first degree manslaughter was improper since, under CLS Penal § 70.02, minimum period of imprisonment for first conviction of violent felony offense cannot exceed $^1/_3$ of maximum unless sentence is for class B armed felony offense, and first degree manslaughter is not armed felony offense because neither possession nor display of gun is element of crime. People v Mercer, 121 A.D.2d 476, 503 N.Y.S.2d 579, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 58446 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Defendant convicted of first degree manslaughter was illegally sentenced as armed felony offender since use of gun is not element of first degree manslaughter, and therefore first degree manslaughter is not "armed felony offense" as defined in CLS CPL § 1.20. People v Campaneria, 123 A.D.2d 271, 506 N.Y.S.2d 344, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 60039 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 69 N.Y.2d 709, 512 N.Y.S.2d 1035, 504 N.E.2d 403, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 21391 (N.Y. 1986).

Sentence of first degree manslaughter defendant to indeterminate term of 12 ½ to 25 years' imprisonment should be modified to minimum term of $8^1/_3$ years since manslaughter is not armed felony offense and minimum term should be $^1/_3$ of maximum rather than ½ . People v Ramirez, 123 A.D.2d 890, 507 N.Y.S.2d 667, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 61005 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

First degree manslaughter is not armed felony offense for purpose of calculating minimum term of imprisonment under CLS Penal § 70.02(4) since use of gun is not statutory element of crime. People v Garcia, 129 A.D.2d 505, 514 N.Y.S.2d 344, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 45179 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 704, 519 N.Y.S.2d 1038, 513 N.E.2d 715, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 18081 (N.Y. 1987).

Sentence on conviction of first degree manslaughter would be reduced from 6-18 years to 4-12 years in view of defendant's age, background, and future potential, and where his violent and unlawful behavior, after 40 years as law-abiding productive member of society, was apparently related to fears for his own future safety, inasmuch as victim had known history of threatening behavior. People v Rodriguez, 136 A.D.2d 509, 524 N.Y.S.2d 40, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 531 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1988).

Court improperly sentenced defendant as armed violent felony offender to 12 ½ to 25 years' imprisonment on his convictions for first degree manslaughter and first degree use of firearm, since first degree manslaughter does not contain, as element, any criteria set forth under CLS CPL § 1.20(41)(a) or (b), therefore it is not armed violent felony offense, and thus minimum sentence imposed on that conviction could only have been set at $^1/_3$ maximum; sentence would be modified to $8^1/_3$ to 25 years. People v Durakovic, 138 A.D.2d 395, 525 N.Y.S.2d 679, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2152 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 72 N.Y.2d 858, 532 N.Y.S.2d 508, 528 N.E.2d 898, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 3698 (N.Y. 1988).

Prison term of 12 ½ to 25 years imposed on defendant's first degree manslaughter conviction would be reduced to $8^1/_3$ to 25 years since required minimum term was $^1/_3$ of maximum. People v Sterling, 141 A.D.2d 680, 529 N.Y.S.2d 382, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6861 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 790, 536 N.Y.S.2d 750, 533 N.E.2d 680, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 6166 (N.Y. 1988).

Sentence of imprisonment for 4 to 12 years on plea of guilty to manslaughter in first degree was excessive and would be reduced to imprisonment for 2 to 6 years where (1) defendant, whose only prior conviction was for nonviolent misdemeanor in 1978, was present in his aunt's apartment when decedent, her boyfriend, stabbed her and murdered her son, defendant's cousin, (2) decedent fled apartment with defendant, who had grabbed metal pipe, in pursuit, (3) when defendant caught up with decedent, decedent slashed defendant's arm with murder weapon, (4) defendant hit decedent at least 4 times, and possibly as many as 15 times, with metal pipe, (5) defendant then took knife which decedent had dropped and stabbed him with it, causing his death, and (6) when police arrived, defendant was still standing over body of decedent. Sentence of $8^1/_3$ to 25 years' imprisonment for first degree manslaughter would be reduced to term of 5 to 15 years where offense was committed when defendant was temporarily and uncharacteristically deprived of better judgment by extreme emotional disturbance, and he had no prior criminal record. People v Moye, 148 A.D.2d 345, 538 N.Y.S.2d 557, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2704 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1989).

On conviction of white teenagers for second degree manslaughter and first degree assault arising out of confrontation with 3 black men which resulted in death of one man and serious beating of another man, sentences of imprisonment, longest of which was 2 consecutive terms of 5 to 15 years, were not harsh or excessive given defendants' vicious and wanton conduct motivated solely by color of victims' skin and defendants' lack of remorse. People v Kern, 149 A.D.2d 187, 545 N.Y.S.2d 4, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10653 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989), aff'd, 75 N.Y.2d 638, 555 N.Y.S.2d 647, 554 N.E.2d 1235, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 669 (N.Y. 1990).

There was no merit to defendant's contention that, by imposing maximum sentence on first degree manslaughter conviction, court had improperly considered defendant to be cold blooded executioner despite defendant's acquittal of murder, since court, which was uniquely familiar with heinous aspects of case, expressed perceived extent of public condemnation and social outrage engendered by defendant's act, and court gave due consideration to circumstances of case, defendant's probation report, his prior criminal history, and comments of prosecutor, defense counsel and defendant. People v Harrison, 188 A.D.2d 374, 591 N.Y.S.2d 375, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13783 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1992), aff'd, 82 N.Y.2d 693, 601 N.Y.S.2d 573, 619 N.E.2d 651, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 2308 (N.Y. 1993).

Imposition of sentence of 12 ½ to 25 years' imprisonment for first degree manslaughter was illegal and would be vacated, since that crime is not armed violent felony offense. People v Aybar, 202 A.D.2d 600, 610 N.Y.S.2d 818, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2619 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 84 N.Y.2d 822, 617 N.Y.S.2d 142, 641 N.E.2d 163, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 3512 (N.Y. 1994).

Sentence of 10 to 20 years for first degree manslaughter would be reduced to 6 ⅔ to 20 years where original sentence was based on mistaken belief that first degree manslaughter was armed felony offense; thus, minimum term should have been $^1/_3$, rather than ½, of maximum term. People v Wilson, 240 A.D.2d 603, 658 N.Y.S.2d 659, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6926 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

Sentence of 12 to 24 years for first degree manslaughter was not unduly harsh where defendant had obtained favorable plea bargain after being charged with second degree murder in connection with shooting death of his adoptive father. People v Thornton, 242 A.D.2d 784, 662 N.Y.S.2d 142, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8672 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 881, 668 N.Y.S.2d 580, 691 N.E.2d 652, 1997 N.Y. Imposition of long sentence for second degree murder and first degree manslaughter was proper where defendant caused death of her fiance's 2-year-old son by beating, punching, and kicking child in stomach. People v Soule, 251 A.D.2d 1056, 674 N.Y.S.2d 531, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7145 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 951, 681 N.Y.S.2d 482, 704 N.E.2d 235, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4243 (N.Y. 1998).

Defendant's agreed-upon 20-year prison sentence was not unduly harsh or excessive and a reduction of the sentence was not warranted because defendant engaged in protracted violent conduct with his young daughter in the house, holding his father hostage for hours while shooting in the father's vicinity at least 20 times to control his movements and then repeatedly shot his father in the head and body, for which defendant expressed no remorse; defendant pleaded guilty to manslaughter. It was illegal to sentence defendant, following his guilty plea to second degree manslaughter, as second violent felony offender to maximum determinate term of 15 years since second degree manslaughter was not enumerated violent felony under CLS Penal § 70.02(1). People v Hathaway, 173 Misc. 2d 701, 662 N.Y.S.2d 234, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 367 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997), aff'd, 260 A.D.2d 717, 688 N.Y.S.2d 720, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3661 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Court would not vacate defendants' guilty plea to second degree manslaughter in satisfaction of indictment charging them with, inter alia, "depraved mind" murder, A-1 felony, even though second degree manslaughter was not listed in CLS Penal § 70.02(a)(b) definition of class C violent felony offenses, and CLS CPL § 220.10(5)(d)(i) required that any guilty plea to indictment charging class A felony include at least guilty plea to class C violent felony offense, where all parties thought that second degree manslaughter was class C violent felony offense, guilty plea was entered and accepted, sentences were imposed, defendants were committed to custody of Department of Correctional Services, and neither People nor defendants would consent to undoing of their bargain; moreover, there was no specific reference in CLS CPL § 220.10(5)(d)(i) to class C violent felony offense "as defined in" CLS Penal § 70.02(1)(b). People v Hathaway, 173 Misc. 2d 701, 662 N.Y.S.2d 234, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 367 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997), aff'd, 260 A.D.2d 717, 688 N.Y.S.2d 720, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3661 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

11. — —Murder

In a prosecution wherein the defendant was convicted of attempted murder in the second degree and sentenced to an indeterminate term of imprisonment of 12 and one-half to 25 years, the sentence would be modified to reduce it to an indeterminate term of imprisonment of 8 and one-third to 25 years, where the defendant's sentence was imposed pursuant to Penal Law § 70.02(4) authorizing the court to fix a minimum term of imprisonment between one-third and one-half the maximum, but the amendment authorizing a minimum in excess of one-third of the maximum took effect subsequent to the crime involved in this case at which time the statute directed merely a minimum term of imprisonment equal to one-third of the maximum; accordingly, the sentence must be modified to conform to the earlier statute. People v Farrow, 92 A.D.2d 847, 460 N.Y.S.2d 562, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17217 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 59 N.Y.2d 972, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 5333 (N.Y. 1983).

Defendant's sentence to concurrent indeterminate prison terms of 12 ½ to 25 years for attempted murder and robbery, and from 5 to 15 years for assault, would be modified to the extent of reducing the sentence for the attempted murder conviction to $8^1/_3$ to 25 years. The crime of attempted murder in the second degree is a Class B violent felony offense (Pen Law § 70.02[1][a]) and not an armed felony offense (CPL § 1.20[41]), and Penal Law § 70.02(4) states that "[t]he minimum period of imprisonment under an indeterminate sentence for a violent felony offense must be fixed by the court at one-third of the maximum term imposed," or $8^1/_3$ years on a 25-year maximum term. People v Maloney, 108 A.D.2d 673, 486 N.Y.S.2d 696, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 43017 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 65 N.Y.2d 697, 491 N.Y.S.2d 1037, 481 N.E.2d 265, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 14945 (N.Y. 1985).

A sentence of 7 ½ to 15 years, as a violent felony offender, on a count of attempted murder in the second degree was improper under Penal Law § 70.02 on the basis that it was in excess of one-third of the maximum, where under § 70.02(4), the minimum sentence to be imposed for attempted murder in the second degree, as a violent felony offense, must be fixed by the court at one-third of the maximum term imposed, except if the conviction is for a Class B armed felony offense, and where CPL § 1.20(41)(a) defines an armed felony as a violent felony, an element which includes possession of a loaded weapon or display of a firearm, but neither murder nor attempted murder in the second degree, as defined in Penal Law § 125.25 requires the use of a firearm. People v Colon, 111 A.D.2d 9, 488 N.Y.S.2d 668, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 51162 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 65 N.Y.2d 977, 494 N.Y.S.2d 1046, 484 N.E.2d 676, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 16342 (N.Y. 1985).

Attempted murder in second degree is class B violent felony offense for which sentence may be imposed under CLS Penal § 70.02, but is not armed felony offense as defined in CLS CPL § 1.20. People v Battles, 117 A.D.2d 509, 498 N.Y.S.2d 3, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52790 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 68 N.Y.2d 665, 505 N.Y.S.2d 1030, 496 N.E.2d 688, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 19088 (N.Y. 1986).

Crime of attempted murder in second degree is not offense for which armed felony sentence may be imposed. People v Frawley, 117 A.D.2d 613, 497 N.Y.S.2d 955, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52885 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Consecutive indeterminate sentences of 18 years to life for felony murder were not unduly harsh or severe where defendant drove perpetrators to crime scene, stood by while crimes were committed, and then drove getaway car; consecutive sentences were within court's discretion, indeterminate sentence with life maximum was required by law, and 18 year minimum took into account defendant's lack of extensive criminal record and fact that he did not personally rob or kill victims. People v Truesdell, 122 A.D.2d 444, 504 N.Y.S.2d 835, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 59743 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986), aff'd, 70 N.Y.2d 809, 523 N.Y.S.2d 429, 517 N.E.2d 1315, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19038 (N.Y. 1987).

It was improper to impose minimum prison term that was ½ of maximum for defendant's convictions of second degree attempted murder since such crime is not armed felony offense and defendant was first felony offender. People v Newton, 138 A.D.2d 415, 525 N.Y.S.2d 699, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2131 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 72 N.Y.2d 864, 532 N.Y.S.2d 514, 528 N.E.2d 904, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 3843 (N.Y. 1988).

It was error for court to have imposed minimum term that was ½ of maximum term on defendant's conviction for attempted murder in second degree because that crime is not armed felony offense by definition, and defendant was first felony offender; thus, defendant's sentence for that crime would be reduced from term of 12 ½ to 25 years to $8^1/_3$ to 25 years. People v Bartlett, 146 A.D.2d 705, 537 N.Y.S.2d 58, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 627 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 845, 546 N.Y.S.2d 1009, 546 N.E.2d 192, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 3805 (N.Y. 1989).

On conviction for attempted second degree murder, court erred in imposing minimum term that was ½ of maximum term since crime was not armed felony offense by definition and defendant was first felony offender; minimum sentence would be reduced to$^1/_3$ of maximum term. People v King, 155 A.D.2d 480, 547 N.Y.S.2d 140, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13967 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 869, 553 N.Y.S.2d 301, 552 N.E.2d 880, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 832 (N.Y. 1990).

Defendant's sentence for second degree murder and first degree robbery was not excessive as compared to that received by his codefendant where it was defendant who stabbed victim to death, and codefendant had cooperated with prosecution and negotiated plea to lesser crime. People v Merchant, 171 A.D.2d 887, 567 N.Y.S.2d 812, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3921 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1991).

Court erred in imposing minimum term that was ½ of maximum term on defendant's conviction of second degree attempted murder since crime was not armed felony offense by definition and defendant was first felony offender; minimum term should have been$^1/_3$ of maximum term. People v Pride, 173 A.D.2d 651, 570 N.Y.S.2d 227, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7629 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 78 N.Y.2d 972, 574 N.Y.S.2d 952, 580 N.E.2d 424, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 4527 (N.Y. 1991).

Imposition of sentence of 25 years to life for felony murder was excessive where (1) decedent's death resulted from subdural hematoma caused by single punch to eye during argument between victim and defendant, and (2) although defendant had numerous convictions stemming from his addiction to alcohol, he had never been convicted of felony. People v Doty, 175 A.D.2d 564, 572 N.Y.S.2d 230, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10060 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 78 N.Y.2d 1127, 578 N.Y.S.2d 884, 586 N.E.2d 67, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 5482 (N.Y. 1991).

Sentence of defendant, who was first felony offender, to indeterminate term of 10 to 20 years on conviction of attempted second degree murder was unlawful, since CLS Penal § 70.02(4) authorizes minimum term that is between$^1/_3$ and ½ of maximum term for first felony offender convicted of class B armed felony offense, but attempted second degree murder is not "armed felony" offense by definition; thus, sentencing court erred in imposing minimum term that was ½ of maximum term. People v Keiffer, 207 A.D.2d 1022, 617 N.Y.S.2d 103, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10325 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1994).

Court erred in sentencing defendant to concurrent prison terms of 10 to 20 years for his convictions of 2 counts of attempted second degree murder; since attempted murder is not armed felony, minimum period could be no more than $8^1/_3$ years on each count. People v Durran, 210 A.D.2d 34, 619 N.Y.S.2d 269, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12365 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1994), app. denied, 84 N.Y.2d 1031, 623 N.Y.S.2d 187, 647 N.E.2d 459, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 420 (N.Y. 1995).

It was error to impose minimum term of imprisonment that was ½ of maximum term on defendant's conviction of attempted second degree murder, since such crime is not armed felony offense, and defendant was first felony offender. People v Bernard, 214 A.D.2d 576, 625 N.Y.S.2d 78, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3479 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 86 N.Y.2d 732, 631 N.Y.S.2d 612, 655 N.E.2d 709, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 3076 (N.Y. 1995).

Defendant, who was convicted of attempted second degree murder and attempted aggravated assault on police officer, was improperly sentenced as armed felon under CLS Penal § 70.02(4) since neither crime was class B armed felony; thus, his sentence of concurrent terms of 12 ½ to 25 years and 4 to 8 years, respectively, would be modified to extent of reducing minimum terms to $8^1/_3$ and 2 ⅓ years. People v Garcia, 226 A.D.2d 229, 640 N.Y.S.2d 756, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3939 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996), app. denied, 11 N.Y.3d 855, 872 N.Y.S.2d 77, 900 N.E.2d 560, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 4066 (N.Y. 2008).

Because crime of attempted second degree murder does not meet definition of armed violent felony in CLS CPL § 1.20(41), imposition of minimum term of imprisonment that was ½ of maximum term for that count was improper, and sentence would be reduced from term of 6 to 12 years to term of 4 to 12 years. People v Staton, 242 A.D.2d 747, 663 N.Y.S.2d 57, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9173 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

Court erred in imposing, on defendant's convictions of attempted second degree murder, minimum terms of imprisonment that were one-half of maximum terms since such crime was not armed felony offense by definition. People v D'Lucca, 243 A.D.2d 487, 674 N.Y.S.2d 47, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9306 (N.Y. App.

Sentence of 18 years to life for second degree murder, 5 to 15 years for second degree weapon possession, and $2^1/_3$ to 7 years for third degree weapon possession would be modified by reducing weapon possession sentences to 3 to 9 years and 2 to 6 years where plea bargain to that effect was not kept. People v Pagan, 245 A.D.2d 533, 666 N.Y.S.2d 41, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13294 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

Defendant's sentence on each of 3 counts of attempted second degree murder would be reduced from term of 12 ½ to 25 years to term of $8^1/_3$ to 25 years where applicable law when attempted murders were committed directed minimum sentence of$^1/_3$, rather than ½ , of maximum term imposed. People v Mojica, 244 A.D.2d 138, 677 N.Y.S.2d 100, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8128 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 950, 681 N.Y.S.2d 481, 704 N.E.2d 234, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4213 (N.Y. 1998).

Concurrent sentences of 25 years to life for second degree murder and 5 to 15 years for third degree arson were not excessive where (1) defendant stabbed and slit victim's throat and then returned several hours later to pour gasoline over body, burning it and house in which it was located, (2) defendant had history of drug use and violent behavior, (3) sentences were imposed on guilty plea in satisfaction of 8-count indictment, with result that defendant's exposure to prison time was significantly reduced, and (4) there were no extraordinary circumstances warranting intervention in Appellate Division's discretion. People v Hickey, 251 A.D.2d 748, 674 N.Y.S.2d 795, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6777 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 898, 680 N.Y.S.2d 62, 702 N.E.2d 847, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 3416 (N.Y. 1998).

Sentence of 25 years to life for second degree murder was not excessive, even though codefendant rather than defendant did actual stabbing of victim, and both defendant and codefendant received same sentence, where defendant nevertheless was involved in brutal and senseless crime, he had criminal history, and sentence given to codefendant was not controlling, because statutory guidelines had constrained court from imposing harsher sentence on codefendant. People v Fink, 251 A.D.2d 751, 674 N.Y.S.2d 793, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6745 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 924, 680 N.Y.S.2d 465, 703 N.E.2d 277, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 3797 (N.Y. 1998).

Sentence of 12 ½ to 25 years for 3 counts of second degree murder and 2 counts of first degree robbery was not excessive where defendant had long criminal record, and present crime was brutally violent. People v Leo, 255 A.D.2d 458, 680 N.Y.S.2d 859, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12393 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 973, 695 N.Y.S.2d 59, 716 N.E.2d 1104, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 2563 (N.Y. 1999).

Sentence of 12 ½ to 25 years for attempted second degree murder would be reduced to $8^1/_3$ to 25 years where (1) defendant was originally sentenced as armed felony offender, (2) attempted second degree murder is not "armed felony" offense by definition, because possession, use, or display of weapon is not statutory element of that crime, (3) thus, minimum term should not have been ½ of maximum term, and (4) because court intended maximum allowable sentence, corrected sentence would reflect that intent. People v Roye, 255 A.D.2d 464, 682 N.Y.S.2d 217, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11979 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 857, 688 N.Y.S.2d 505, 710 N.E.2d 1104, 1999 N.Y. In prosecution for attempted second degree murder of defendant's wife, although defendant was sentenced as persistent felony offender after hearing under CLS CPL § 400.20, judgment would be modified by vacating sentence and remitting case for resentencing where court did not state on record its reasons for finding that "the history and character of the defendant and the nature and circumstances of his criminal conduct are such that extended incarceration and lifetime supervision of the defendant are warranted to best serve the public interest." People v Johnson, 275 A.D.2d 949, 713 N.Y.S.2d 410, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9741 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 965, 722 N.Y.S.2d 482, 745 N.E.2d 403, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 4300 (N.Y. 2000).

Discretion was not abused in imposing maximum sentences for intentional murder of first victim and assault and attempted murder of second in light of defendant's felony record and brutal nature of crimes that ended one young life and severely impacted another. People v Walker, 279 A.D.2d 696, 719 N.Y.S.2d 322, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 275 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 868, 730 N.Y.S.2d 43, 754 N.E.2d 1126, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2679 (N.Y. 2001).

There was no merit in defendant's claim that his plea of guilty to first degree murder was result of mistake of law, based on provisions of CLS Penal § 70.00(5) and CLS CPL § 400.27, where prosecution did not seek death penalty, prohibition against pleas and plea negotiations during pendency of death penalty notice thus was not implicated, and Supreme Court had statutory authority to sentence defendant to life imprisonment without parole. People v Mower, 280 A.D.2d 25, 719 N.Y.S.2d 780, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 983 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001), aff'd, 97 N.Y.2d 239, 739 N.Y.S.2d 343, 765 N.E.2d 839, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 183 (N.Y. 2002).

Court did not abuse its discretion in imposing maximum sentence on defendant convicted of intentional murder although he was only 20 years old and had no prior felony convictions, where his crime was motivated by anger over victim's refusal to let him to deal drugs from his apartment. People v Leader, 285 A.D.2d 823, 728 N.Y.S.2d 289, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7540 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 756, 742 N.Y.S.2d 617, 769 N.E.2d 363, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 1270 (N.Y. 2002).

Conviction in South Carolina for voluntary manslaughter under S.C. Code Ann. § 16-3-50, for which a sentence of 21 years was imposed was analogous to manslaughter in the first degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 125.20[2], a class B violent felony offense under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 70.02[1][a] and 70.04[1][b][i]. People v Sudan, 298 A.D.2d 620, 748 N.Y.S.2d 415, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9644 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2002), app. denied, 99 N.Y.2d 620, 757 N.Y.S.2d 831, 787 N.E.2d 1177, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 657 (N.Y. 2003).

Although a trial judge did not mention post-release supervision (PRS) in pronouncing an inmate's sentence for attempted second-degree murder, pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law §§ 70.02(6), 70.45, it automatically became a part of the sentence once the determinate sentence was pronounced; thus, the Department Of Corrections' inclusion of PRS in the inmate's sentence was not improper or unlawful. Matter of Quinones v State of New York Dept. of Correctional Servs., 824 N.Y.S.2d 877, 14 Misc. 3d 390, 2006 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3327 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2006), rev'd, 46 A.D.3d 1268, 848 N.Y.S.2d 757, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13234 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

12. —Theft crimes

Defendant's extensive criminal history and gravity of transgressions justified sentence of concurrent prison terms of 4 to 12 years for second degree robbery and 1 to 4 years for third degree grand larceny. People v Kinsman, 144 A.D.2d 772, 534 N.Y.S.2d 756, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10979 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 1017, 541 N.Y.S.2d 771, 539 N.E.2d 599, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 1904 (N.Y. 1989).

Sentence of 5 years for attempted second degree burglary was not excessive where he had extensive juvenile and adult criminal record, and he had agreed to that sentence as part of his guilty plea. People v Davis, 246 A.D.2d 931, 668 N.Y.S.2d 289, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 752 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 1006, 676 N.Y.S.2d 134, 698 N.E.2d 963, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 1944 (N.Y. 1998).

Sentence of 10 to 20 years for first degree burglary was not excessive, even though conviction was defendant's first for felony, where he had extensive criminal history, neither short-term incarceration nor probation had succeeded at quelling his aberrant behavior, and no extraordinary circumstances were presented. People v Kindred, 263 A.D.2d 672, 693 N.Y.S.2d 689, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8014 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 1021, 697 N.Y.S.2d 579, 719 N.E.2d 940, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 3193 (N.Y. 1999).

Persistent felony offender finding would be vacated as matter of discretion in interest of justice, and thus defendant's sentence would be reduced from 15 years to life to 3 ½ to 7 years where latter was maximum sentence authorized for predicate felon convicted of attempted second degree burglary committed before October 1, 1995. People v Collazo, 273 A.D.2d 93, 709 N.Y.S.2d 78, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6577 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

Trial court erred in sentencing the defendant as a persistent violent felony offender for his conviction of two counts of grand larceny in the fourth degree because those offenses were not violent felonies. People v McKinney, 302 A.D.2d 993, 755 N.Y.S.2d 541, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1046 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 584, 764 N.Y.S.2d 395, 796 N.E.2d 487, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 3134 (N.Y. 2003).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by imposing an aggregate prison term of eight years, followed by five years of postrelease supervision upon a verdict convicting defendant of, inter alia, burglary in the second degree because defendant committed the instant crimes while he was on parole for a prior burglary conviction and his sentence was only one year more than the minimum sentence required by law. People v Arce, 150 A.D.3d 1403, 55 N.Y.S.3d 465, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3736 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 29 N.Y.3d 1090, 85 N.E.3d 101, 63 N.Y.S.3d 6, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 2363 (N.Y. 2017).

13. — —Robbery

Imposition of a three-year indeterminate term of imprisonment was appropriate where defendant, who was indicted for second-degree robbery as an armed and violent class C felony, pleaded guilty to class D violent felony, although the court had discretionary power to grant a lesser sentence. People v Felix, 87 A.D.2d 529, 447 N.Y.S.2d 945, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15777 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1982), aff'd, 58 N.Y.2d 156, 460 N.Y.S.2d 1, 446 N.E.2d 757, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 2835 (N.Y. 1983).

Defendant's sentence of from four to eight years for second-degree robbery would be reduced to two and two thirds to eight years, where under Penal Law § 70.02 the minimum term defendant could have received for second-degree robbery was one third of the maximum imposed by the court, and since the maximum imposed was eight years. People v Quitcon, 100 A.D.2d 801, 474 N.Y.S.2d 415, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17902 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1984).

Robberies accomplished by displaying knife to victims were not "armed felony" offenses under CLS CPL § 1.20; thus, indeterminate sentences fixing minimum imprisonment at one-half of maximum imprisonment (12 ½ to 25 years) were illegal under CLS Penal § 70.02, and would be reduced to terms of $8^1/_3$ to 25 years. People v Edwards, 121 A.D.2d 886, 503 N.Y.S.2d 577, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 59018 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 68 N.Y.2d 811, 507 N.Y.S.2d 1028, 499 N.E.2d 877, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 20264 (N.Y. 1986).

Interests of justice did not require reduction of 12 ½ to 25 year sentence for class B armed felony (first degree robbery) where defendant had engaged in burglary and robbery spree, preying on elderly women and causing physical injury in some instances, and had received benefit of plea bargain. People v Edwards, 121 A.D.2d 886, 503 N.Y.S.2d 577, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 59018 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 68 N.Y.2d 811, 507 N.Y.S.2d 1028, 499 N.E.2d 877, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 20264 (N.Y. 1986).

Sentence of 12 ½ to 25 years imprisonment on conviction of first degree robbery was within statutory limits and was not excessive, since first degree robbery is class B violent felony offense, as well as armed felony offense, for which court may impose minimum term between $^1/_3$ and ½ of maximum term imposed. People v Coit, 122 A.D.2d 150, 504 N.Y.S.2d 620, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 59200 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 68 N.Y.2d 810, 507 N.Y.S.2d 1027, 499 N.E.2d 876, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 20239 (N.Y. 1986).

Indeterminate sentence of 5 to 15 years for one count of second degree robbery was not excessive where defendant's record showed prior arrests for prostitution, assault, battery, and robbery, and where defendant was well known to both local police and local probation department. People v Van Fonda, 122 A.D.2d 489, 505 N.Y.S.2d 249, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 59771 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

Under CLS Penal § 70.02, minimum period of imprisonment under indeterminate sentence for class B violent felony must be fixed at one-third maximum term imposed except where conviction is for class B armed felony offense, in which case court may impose minimum term up to one-half maximum imposed; accordingly, minimum term of 5- to 10-year sentence imposed on defendant's first degree robbery conviction would be reduced to $3^1/_3$ years even though indictment specified that dangerous instrument used by defendant was pistol and defendant admitted use of gun during plea colloquy, since neither possession nor display of gun is statutory element of first degree robbery to qualify such crime as "armed felony" under CLS CPL § 1.20. People v Thorpe, 129 A.D.2d 822, 514 N.Y.S.2d 809, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 45524 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Minimum term of defendant's sentence for first degree robbery would be modified to one third of maximum, in place of one half of maximum as imposed by sentencing court based on alleged fact that first degree robbery, pursuant to CLS Penal § 160.15(3), was armed felony; crime is not armed felony since neither possession nor display of gun is statutory element of first degree robbery based on use or immediate threat of use of dangerous instrument. People v Ulses, 132 A.D.2d 584, 517 N.Y.S.2d 303, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49124 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Sentence of 3 to 6 years imposed on defendant on conviction for second degree robbery was invalid, and would be reduced to 2 to 6 years, where defendant was not predicate felon, and his conviction under CLS Penal § 160.10 could not be considered armed felony since use, possession, or display of weapon is not element of second degree robbery. People v Aguilar, 135 A.D.2d 480, 523 N.Y.S.2d 23, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52443 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1987), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 1003, 526 N.Y.S.2d 938, 521 N.E.2d 1081, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 764 (N.Y. 1988).

Third degree robbery does not constitute violent felony. People v Webb, 135 A.D.2d 855, 522 N.Y.S.2d 948, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52794 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Concurrent sentences of 7 to 25 years' imprisonment imposed on defendant's convictions on 2 counts of first degree robbery were not unduly harsh even though defendant was young, had no prior criminal record, and claimed that crimes were precipitated by drug and alcohol abuse for which he had sought counseling, since (1) defendant received less than maximum sentence, (2) he agreed to sentence as part of plea, (3) plea arrangement resulted in several other serious charges being dropped, and (4) defendant pleaded guilty to violent offenses involving brutal use of physical force. People v Mackey, 136 A.D.2d 780, 523 N.Y.S.2d 242, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 41 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 899, 527 N.Y.S.2d 1008, 523 N.E.2d 315, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 1479 (N.Y. 1988).

Conviction for first degree robbery of taxicab and sentence as armed violent felony offender would be modified to vacate sentence and for remand for resentencing where (1) court, in sentencing, took into account earlier arrest on weapons charges which were dismissed, earlier arrest for unauthorized use of vehicle which was dismissed, pending indictment for robbery of taxicab which resulted in acquittal, and unsupported allegations of crack use by defendant, (2) prosecutor urged court to consider 15 unsolved taxicab robberies that police suspected defendant of having committed, and (3) court held that defendant's crime conformed with his prior criminal behavior; sentencing record was so permeated with improper considerations and prejudicial references that defendant was deprived of due process of law. People v Villanueva, 144 A.D.2d 285, 534 N.Y.S.2d 166, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15106 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1988), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 897, 538 N.Y.S.2d 810, 535 N.E.2d 1350, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 1263 (N.Y. 1989).

Sentence of imprisonment for 6 to 18 years on plea of guilty to robbery in first degree was excessive and would be reduced to imprisonment for 3 to 9 years where (1) defendant pleaded guilty in satisfaction of 2 consolidated indictments, (2) judge told defendant that he would receive youthful offender status and probation if he stayed out of trouble and was not rearrested, but that he could be sentenced to maximum of 25 years if he got into trouble or was rearrested, and (3) prior to sentencing, defendant was rearrested on charge of criminal mischief which was subsequently dismissed. People v Blagrove, 146 A.D.2d 490, 536 N.Y.S.2d 82, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 99 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1989).

It was error to sentence defendant, as armed felon, to concurrent prison terms of 9 to 18 years on his convictions of first degree robbery under CLS Penal § 160.15(1) and second degree attempted murder since neither crime satisfied definition of armed felony because their elements did not include either possession of deadly weapon or display of firearm; thus, since minimum period of imprisonment under indeterminate sentence for violent felony offense, not otherwise designated as armed felony offense, must be fixed at $^1/_3$ of maximum term imposed, court would reduce minimum term of each sentence to 6 years. People v Drew, 147 A.D.2d 411, 538 N.Y.S.2d 9, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1969 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1989).

Defendant was properly sentenced as armed felony offender where he pleaded guilty to committing first degree robbery while armed with pistol. People v Jiminez, 165 A.D.2d 692, 560 N.Y.S.2d 145, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11060 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 987, 563 N.Y.S.2d 775, 565 N.E.2d 524, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 4626 (N.Y. 1990).

Defendant was properly adjudicated to be second violent felony offender where he had pleaded guilty to attempted second degree robbery for acts committed on December 23, 1978, and crime was classified as class C violent felony effective September 1, 1978. People v Graham, 185 A.D.2d 992, 587 N.Y.S.2d 997, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10346 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1992).

Defendant, who was improperly sentenced as second violent felony offender to prison term of 5 to 10 years, was improperly resentenced, as first-time felony offender, to term of 5 to 15 years on his guilty plea to attempted first degree robbery where he had reasonable expectation of finality in 10-year maximum term originally imposed under his plea bargain, and minimum period of imprisonment for first-time attempted first degree robbery offender at time instant offense was committed was $^1/_3$ of maximum term; thus, sentence would be modified to $3^1/_3$ to 10 years. People v Gilchrist, 231 A.D.2d 424, 647 N.Y.S.2d 77, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9335 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

Sentence of 2 concurrent terms and one consecutive term of 3 ½ to 10 ½ years for 3 counts of second degree robbery was not harsh or excessive, given violent nature of crime, in which defendant and 2 codefendants forcibly took money from restaurant and pedestrian, and fact that sentence was within statutory parameters. People v Davila, 238 A.D.2d 625, 655 N.Y.S.2d 698, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3161 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Despite defendant's expressions of remorse and plans to rehabilitate himself, aggregate sentence to concurrent terms of imprisonment totaling $8^1/_3$ to 25 years was not excessive for heinous crimes of first degree sodomy, second degree robbery (2 counts), and first degree unlawful imprisonment, where sentence comported with statutory parameters and resulted from plea bargain under which 4 other charges against defendant were dropped. People v McCann, 242 A.D.2d 762, 661 N.Y.S.2d 313, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8527 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Sentence of 4 to 8 years for attempted first degree robbery as second felony offender, to be served consecutively with term of one to 3 years that defendant was already serving, was not excessive, even though present conviction was his first for violent felony, where he had amassed extensive history of criminal conduct over past 20 years, causing his probation officer to characterize him as "a habitual criminal," and sentence was imposed in accordance with plea bargain by which he was allowed to plead guilty to lesser crime than that originally charged. People v Kenyon, 245 A.D.2d 914, 666 N.Y.S.2d 56, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13649 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 854, 677 N.Y.S.2d 85, 699 N.E.2d 445, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 2525 (N.Y. 1998).

There was no error in court's failure to decide whether defendant was "eligible youth" at time of his conviction of first degree robbery or in its allegedly belated decision not to treat him as youthful offender where, on court's acceptance of defendant's plea of guilty to armed felony, defendant could be classified as eligible youth only in court's discretion, and there was no evidence of abuse of that discretion. People v Campbell, 245 A.D.2d 983, 667 N.Y.S.2d 128, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13433 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Sentence of 12 ½ to 25 years for first degree robbery would not be vacated, even though Appellate Division vacated defendant's adjudication as second felony offender, where sentence was lawful for class B armed felony under former subdivision (4) of CLS Penal § 70.02, which was applicable at time of crime. People v Robles, 251 A.D.2d 20, 673 N.Y.S.2d 654, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6397 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 904, 680 N.Y.S.2d 68, 702 N.E.2d 853, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 3562 (N.Y. 1998).

Sentences of 25 years to life for 2 counts of first degree robbery were not excessive where defendant had extensive criminal history. People v Roberts, 251 A.D.2d 431, 674 N.Y.S.2d 117, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6550 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 882, 678 N.Y.S.2d 29, 700 N.E.2d 567, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 3019 (N.Y. 1998), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 904, 680 N.Y.S.2d 68, 702 N.E.2d 853, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 3556 (N.Y. 1998).

Sentence of 12 ½ to 25 years for 3 counts of second degree murder and 2 counts of first degree robbery was not excessive where defendant had long criminal record, and present crime was brutally violent. People v Leo, 255 A.D.2d 458, 680 N.Y.S.2d 859, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12393 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 973, 695 N.Y.S.2d 59, 716 N.E.2d 1104, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 2563 (N.Y. 1999).

Maximum sentence of 12 ½ to 25 years for first degree robbery was not excessive where (1) court informed defendant during plea proceeding that such maximum sentence could be imposed if defendant failed to comply with plea bargain, (2) defendant failed to so comply, and (3) sentence reflected gravity of crime, which included threats to use firearm against tellers and others in bank during robbery. People v Paige, 266 A.D.2d 587, 697 N.Y.S.2d 771, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11219 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 827, 702 N.Y.S.2d 598, 724 N.E.2d 390, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 4267 (N.Y. 1999).

Sentence of 8 ½ to 17 years for first degree robbery as second felony offender was not excessive where it was not maximum sentence allowed, and defendant's forcible seizure of 70-year-old victim's purse caused her to fall and break her arm. People v Smith, 266 A.D.2d 639, 698 N.Y.S.2d 343, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11399 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 907, 707 N.Y.S.2d 392, 728 N.E.2d 991, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 792 (N.Y. 2000).

Defendant was not subject to postrelease supervision imposed in CLS Penal § 70.45(1) where violent felonies of which he was convicted—first degree rape and first degree robbery—were committed before September 1, 1998. People v Copeland, 281 A.D.2d 985, 721 N.Y.S.2d 896, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2910 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 861, 730 N.Y.S.2d 35, 754 N.E.2d 1118, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2476 (N.Y. 2001).

Enhanced sentence for second degree robbery was properly imposed where court clearly warned defendant that if he failed to appear for sentencing, court would not be bound by its sentence promise and would impose enhanced sentence of up to 15 years in prison, defendant agreed to that condition but failed to appear for sentencing, and condition was not rendered invalid by fact that it was imposed after defendant entered guilty plea. People v Hines, 286 A.D.2d 987, 730 N.Y.S.2d 910, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8996 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 683, 738 N.Y.S.2d 298, 764 N.E.2d 402, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4407 (N.Y. 2001).

Defendant was not entitled to withdraw the guilty plea to robbery in the second degree in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 160.10, where defendant asserted that the People had promised defendant a lesser sentence than the statutory minimum under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02(3)(b) if defendant acted as a confidential informant for them; defendant admitted that defendant stopped cooperating because defendant feared retribution and because defendant was incarcerated on a new charge. People v Heffelfinger, 19 A.D.3d 508, 798 N.Y.S.2d 475, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6590 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 5 N.Y.3d 828, 804 N.Y.S.2d 43, 837 N.E.2d 742, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 3042 (N.Y. 2005).

Defendant's sentence as a persistent violent felony offender for robbery in the third degree was illegal and was vacated because the crime of robbery in the third degree was not a violent felony offense. People v Coleman, 23 A.D.3d 1033, 803 N.Y.S.2d 851, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12449 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2005).

Although defendant's waiver of the right to appeal was invalid due to an insufficient explanation by the trial court and no indication that counsel did so, the sentence imposed was not harsh or excessive as it was only six months more than the statutorily permissible minimum sentence for second-degree robbery under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02(1)(b), (3)(b). People v Edwards, 37 A.D.3d 871, 828 N.Y.S.2d 708, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1022 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 8 N.Y.3d 945, 836 N.Y.S.2d 556, 868 N.E.2d 239, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 1337 (N.Y. 2007).

County court did not abuse its discretion in imposing the maximum permissible sentences for robbery where defendant had a prior criminal history and defendant's actions in the situation which led to these charges revealed that defendant was a danger to the community. People v Rumrill, 40 A.D.3d 1273, 836 N.Y.S.2d 333, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6053 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 9 N.Y.3d 926, 844 N.Y.S.2d 181, 875 N.E.2d 900, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 3564 (N.Y. 2007).

Sentence of a term of 12 years, followed by 5 years of postrelease supervision, for a first degree robbery conviction was not unduly harsh; defendant, who was 27 years old at the time of sentencing, had 11 prior nonfelony convictions, including two for assault and one for unlawful imprisonment. Inasmuch as the relatively light sentences received for those prior convictions were ineffective in deterring criminal behavior, it was within the exercise of the trial court's discretion to impose a sentence higher than the minimum, although, significantly, still within the lower half of the statutory range of 5 to 25 years. People v Kadarko, 73 A.D.3d 639, 901 N.Y.S.2d 612, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4426 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 15 N.Y.3d 853, 909 N.Y.S.2d 30, 935 N.E.2d 822, 2010 N.Y. LEXIS 3169 (N.Y. 2010).

Determinate sentence of seven years imposed upon defendant's third degree robbery conviction was improper; for a second felony offender who was convicted of a class D nonviolent felony, , N.Y. Penal Law §§ 160.05, 70.02(1)(c), an indeterminate term of three and one-half to seven years was proper pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 70.06(3)(d), (4)(b). People v McKay, 10 A.D.3d 734, 782 N.Y.S.2d 128, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11074 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2004).

Where defendant was convicted of robbery in the first degree and criminal use of a firearm in the first degree based on a bank robbery, defendant was properly sentenced as a persistent violent felony offender because the State complied with the applicable procedures and otherwise established that defendant was a persistent violent felony offender based on two qualifying predicate felonies. People v Kirton, 36 A.D.3d 1011, 827 N.Y.S.2d 352, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 231 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 8 N.Y.3d 947, 836 N.Y.S.2d 557, 868 N.E.2d 240, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 1416 (N.Y. 2007).

Defendant was properly sentenced as second felony offender for attempted first-degree robbery because the sentence was just above the minimum permitted for a class C violent felony and substantially less than the potential sentence if he were convicted of first-degree robbery as charged in the indictment and there was no abuse of discretion or extraordinary circumstances warranting a reduction of the agreed-upon sentence in the interest of justice given the nature of the crime and the favorable plea deal. People v Gutek, 151 A.D.3d 1281, 58 N.Y.S.3d 164, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4834 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2017).

Defendant was properly sentenced as second felony offender for attempted first-degree robbery because the sentence was just above the minimum permitted for a class C violent felony and substantially less than the potential sentence if he were convicted of first-degree robbery as charged in the indictment and there was no abuse of discretion or extraordinary circumstances warranting a reduction of the agreed-upon sentence in the interest of justice given the nature of the crime and the favorable plea deal. People v Gutek, 151 A.D.3d 1281, 58 N.Y.S.3d 164, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4834 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2017).

14. —Sex crimes

The trial court erred by sentencing defendant who was convicted of sodomy in the first degree, Penal Law § 130.50, as an armed violent felony offender pursuant to Penal Law § 70.02(4); although sodomy in the first degree is a class B violent felony offense under Penal Law § 70.02, it is not an armed felony, since the requisite elements do not include either possession of a deadly weapon or display of a firearm. People v Valles, 99 A.D.2d 444, 471 N.Y.S.2d 271, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16607 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1984).

Remittal for resentencing was required since minimum sentences were not $^1/_3$ of maximums imposed where defendant was given terms of 2 to 10 years for attempted rape and 3 to 15 years for sodomy; however, consecutive nature of terms was not improper where sodomy was separate and discrete offense occurring after victim successfully warded off rape attack and defendant then dragged her out of car. People v Maxwell, 122 A.D.2d 435, 504 N.Y.S.2d 832, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 59740 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

Despite absence of any prior convictions, prison sentence of $2^1/_3$ to 7 years imposed on defendant's conviction for first degree sodomy was not excessive considering that violent act committed on 4-year-old child also involved serious breach of trust, given that defendant was victim's stepfather. People v Carlin, 136 A.D.2d 781, 523 N.Y.S.2d 244, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 25 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

Sentence for first degree sodomy to indeterminate prison term of 3 to 12 years would be vacated, and matter would be remitted for resentencing, since minimum period of imprisonment was required to be $^1/_3$ of maximum period of imprisonment. People v Tice, 147 A.D.2d 776, 537 N.Y.S.2d 648, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1128 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 748, 545 N.Y.S.2d 122, 543 N.E.2d 765, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 2674 (N.Y. 1989).

Sentence of 3 to 6 years for first degree sexual abuse was not harsh or excessive where defendant admitted having sexual contact with his 4-year-old stepdaughter over period of about 3 months. People v Bleecker, 165 A.D.2d 935, 561 N.Y.S.2d 99, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11296 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1990), app. denied, 77 N.Y.2d 836, 567 N.Y.S.2d 204, 568 N.E.2d 653, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 3652 (N.Y. 1991).

In prosecution for first degree rape, sodomy, and sexual abuse (2 counts) stemming from sexual acts perpetrated on 6-year-old child, it was not unduly harsh or excessive to sentence defendant to consecutive indeterminate prison terms of $8^1/_3$ to 25 years for rape and $8^1/_3$ to 25 years for sodomy, and 2 indeterminate prison terms of $2^1/_3$ to 7 years on sexual abuse charges to be served concurrently with sentences imposed on rape and sodomy convictions. People v Dworakowski, 208 A.D.2d 1129, 617 N.Y.S.2d 965, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10573 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1994), app. denied, 84 N.Y.2d 1031, 623 N.Y.S.2d 187, 647 N.E.2d 459, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 421 (N.Y. 1995).

Sentence of consecutive indeterminate prison terms of 2 ½ to 7 ½ years imposed on counts of first degree sexual abuse exceeded maximum permissible prison sentence of $2^1/_3$ to 7 years, and thus would be reduced to consecutive indeterminate prison terms of $2^1/_3$ to 7 years. People v Wingate, 225 A.D.2d 1085, 639 N.Y.S.2d 754, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2945 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 970, 647 N.Y.S.2d 724, 670 N.E.2d 1356, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 2930 (N.Y. 1996).

Aggregate sentence of 25 to 75 years for first degree rape, first degree sexual abuse, and 2 counts of first degree sodomy was not harsh or excessive where crimes included sexual abuse of defendant's 2 stepdaughters, and he had history of pedophilia. People v Kent, 240 A.D.2d 772, 658 N.Y.S.2d 530, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6009 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 1012, 666 N.Y.S.2d 107, 688 N.E.2d 1391, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3984 (N.Y. 1997), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 875, 668 N.Y.S.2d 573, 691 N.E.2d 645, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4603 (N.Y. 1997).

In prosecution for first degree rape, first degree sodomy, and second degree trespass, sentence to concurrent terms of 10 to 20 years as second felony offender on rape and sodomy charges was not harsh or excessive, even though no weapon was used and victim was not kicked, punched, beaten, slapped, or bitten, where defendant used physical force, including holding sweatshirt over victim's face, and threatened to kill her if she did not do as he said. People v Ryan, 240 A.D.2d 775, 658 N.Y.S.2d 527, 1997 N.Y.

App. Div. LEXIS 6025 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 910, 663 N.Y.S.2d 522, 686 N.E.2d 234, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3501 (N.Y. 1997).

Despite defendant's expressions of remorse and plans to rehabilitate himself, aggregate sentence to concurrent terms of imprisonment totaling $8^1/_3$ to 25 years was not excessive for heinous crimes of first degree sodomy, second degree robbery (2 counts), and first degree unlawful imprisonment, where sentence comported with statutory parameters and resulted from plea bargain under which 4 other charges against defendant were dropped. People v McCann, 242 A.D.2d 762, 661 N.Y.S.2d 313, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8527 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Although aggregate maximum sentence of 60 years would be reduced in light of 50-year limitation provided in CLS Penal § 70.30(1)(e)(vi), sentence was neither harsh nor excessive where defendant was convicted of 4 counts of first degree sodomy and 4 counts of first degree sexual abuse involving innocent children committed to his care, and he had prior convictions for similar crimes. People v Crane, 242 A.D.2d 783, 661 N.Y.S.2d 679, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8671 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Sentence to consecutive indeterminate prison terms of 10 to 20 years for first degree sodomy and 3 to 6 years for first degree sexual assault was not unduly harsh, given defendant's long criminal history, his status as second felony offender, and nature of his crimes against very young children. People v Farless, 245 A.D.2d 878, 666 N.Y.S.2d 832, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13611 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 972, 672 N.Y.S.2d 851, 695 N.E.2d 720, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 1541 (N.Y. 1998).

Sentence of $1^1/_3$ to 4 years for attempted first degree sexual abuse was not excessive, and it would not be reduced in interest of justice, where defendant pleaded guilty in full satisfaction of information charging first degree sexual abuse, he admitted heinous crime of attempting to sexually abuse 5-year-old child in his care, and his criminal history included conviction for endangering welfare of child. People v Rousseau, 245 A.D.2d 915, 666 N.Y.S.2d 57, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13598 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Sentence of 4 ½ to 9 years for first degree sodomy was not excessive, in view of heinous nature of that crime, where defendant pleaded guilty to one such count in full satisfaction of 9-count indictment charging 4 counts of first degree sodomy and 5 counts of first degree sexual abuse. People v Fuller, 245 A.D.2d 987, 667 N.Y.S.2d 126, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13727 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 941, 671 N.Y.S.2d 721, 694 N.E.2d 890, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 1123 (N.Y. 1998), app. dismissed, 92 N.Y.2d 982, 683 N.Y.S.2d 763, 706 N.E.2d 751, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4403 (N.Y. 1998).

Penalty of parole revocation and imprisonment until maximum expiration date of prior manslaughter sentence of $8^1/_3$ to 25 years was not excessive where parolee committed forcible rape and sodomy. Velez v New York State Div. of Parole, 246 A.D.2d 833, 668 N.Y.S.2d 269, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 532 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 813, 674 N.Y.S.2d 278, 697 N.E.2d 179, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 1311 (N.Y. 1998).

Despite defendant's limited education, sentence of 4 to 12 years for attempted first degree sodomy was not excessive, given persistent nature of his actions and extremely advantageous plea bargain, where he had faced 18-count indictment for varying degrees of sexual abuse and sodomy carrying potential sentences totaling 17 ⅓ to 53 years. People v Gauthier, 246 A.D.2d 928, 667 N.Y.S.2d 866, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 742 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 852, 677 N.Y.S.2d 82, 699 N.E.2d 442, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 2467 (N.Y. 1998).

Sentence of 1 to 3 years for first degree sexual abuse and second degree bail jumping was not excessive, despite defendant's troubled childhood and alleged potential for rehabilitation, where sentence was not harshest one possible and was consistent with plea bargain, relevant statutory requirements, nature of his conduct, and his criminal history. People v Castellanos, 255 A.D.2d 836, 680 N.Y.S.2d 880, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12814 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 1030, 684 N.Y.S.2d 494, 707 N.E.2d 449, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4573 (N.Y. 1998).

Sentence of 3 ½ to 7 years for first degree sodomy was not excessive where crime was result of molestation of 6-year-old child, and there was no evidence of extraordinary circumstances warranting modification in interest of justice. People v Blair, 263 A.D.2d 614, 692 N.Y.S.2d 616, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7838 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 820, 702 N.Y.S.2d 590, 724 N.E.2d 382, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 4073 (N.Y. 1999).

Sentence of 15 to 30 years for 3 counts of first degree rape, 2 counts of first degree sodomy, and first degree course of sexual conduct against child was not excessive, given heinous nature of crimes perpetrated against 3 young victims. People v Hines, 263 A.D.2d 682, 692 N.Y.S.2d 852, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8053 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 1019, 697 N.Y.S.2d 578, 719 N.E.2d 939, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 3160 (N.Y. 1999).

With exception that terms for first and third degree aggravated sexual abuse had to run concurrently, rather than consecutively, sentence of 32 to 64 years for first and second degree sodomy and first and third degree aggravated sexual abuse, and second degree sexual abuse was not excessive, absent extraordinary circumstances, in view of egregious nature of those crimes, which involved defendant's insertion of his penis as well as grease gun filled with water into rectums of 11-year-old boy and 8-year-old girl, both of whom viewed him as grandfather figure. People v Pierce, 266 A.D.2d 721, 698 N.Y.S.2d 753, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12157 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 951, 710 N.Y.S.2d 8, 731 N.E.2d 625, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 1588 (N.Y. 2000).

After conviction of first degree sodomy, second degree rape, use of child in sexual performance, and promoting sexual performance by child, minimum sentence on one count of indictment would be reduced from 12 ½ years to $8^1/_3$ years to comply with CLS Penal § 70.02 as it provided in 1995 when crime was committed. People v Schultz, 266 A.D.2d 919, 698 N.Y.S.2d 180, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11820 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 906, 707 N.Y.S.2d 391, 728 N.E.2d 990, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 781 (N.Y. 2000).

Minimum sentence for first degree sexual abuse would be reduced from 2 years to 1 ¼ years to comply with CLS Penal § 70.02 as it provided in 1994 when crime was committed. People v Martin, 266 A.D.2d 921, 698 N.Y.S.2d 179, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11831 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 922, 708 N.Y.S.2d 361, 729 N.E.2d 1160, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 1238 (N.Y. 2000).

Sentence to concurrent terms of 25 years for first degree sodomy and 7 ½ to 15 years for use of child in sexual performance, involving 2 girls aged 8 and 9, was not excessive, given atrocious nature of his conduct, where he pleaded guilty knowing that he was second felony offender and that maximum sentence would be imposed. People v Tinkham, 273 A.D.2d 619, 711 N.Y.S.2d 522, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7218 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 872, 715 N.Y.S.2d 227, 738 N.E.2d 375, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3231 (N.Y. 2000).

Sentence of 10 to 20 years for first degree sodomy was not excessive, despite joint recommendation of prosecutor and defense counsel that defendant be sentence to 6 to 12 years, where court made no such commitment, sentence was within statutory parameters, and defendant repeatedly victimized his stepdaughter for his own sexual gratification while she was 5 to 9 years old. People v Gero, 286 A.D.2d 789, 729 N.Y.S.2d 805, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8474 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 641, 735 N.Y.S.2d 498, 761 N.E.2d 3, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 3654 (N.Y. 2001).

In prosecution for first degree rape, first degree sodomy, first degree sexual abuse, incest, and child endangerment, sentence was not illegal, even though it exceeded maximum aggregate term set forth in CLS Penal § 70.30(1)(e)(vi), where that section does not require Appellate Division to modify sentence but requires only that Department of Correctional Services determine aggregate maximum length of imprisonment consistent with applicable statutory limitations. People v Campbell, 286 A.D.2d 979, 730 N.Y.S.2d 762, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9007 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2001), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 702, 739 N.Y.S.2d 102, 765 N.E.2d 305, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 258 (N.Y. 2002).

After October 1, 1995, the maximum sentence imposed on a conviction of sexual abuse in the first degree may only be double the minimum sentence, not triple. N.Y. Pen. Law § 70.02(4), as amended by 1995 N.Y. Laws ch. 3, § 4. People v Ocean, 292 A.D.2d 545, 739 N.Y.S.2d 735, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2973 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 98 N.Y.2d 700, 747 N.Y.S.2d 419, 776 N.E.2d 8, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 3002 (N.Y. 2002).

Defendant's sentence was not excessive since it fell well within the permissible statutory range for rape in the first degree. People v Krzykowski, 293 A.D.2d 877, 742 N.Y.S.2d 138, 2002 N.Y. 15. — —Rape

Indeterminate prison terms of 12 ½ to 25 years imposed on defendant's convictions for first degree rape and first degree sodomy would be modified by reducing minimum terms from 12 ½ years to $8^1/_3$ years since neither offense is armed felony and thus minimum term cannot exceed $^1/_3$ of maximum as provided by CLS Penal § 70.02. People v Samuels, 133 A.D.2d 785, 520 N.Y.S.2d 172, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 51825 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 959, 525 N.Y.S.2d 843, 520 N.E.2d 561, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 487 (N.Y. 1988).

Defendant was properly sentenced to maximum term of $8^1/_3$ to 25 years in prison for first degree rape where rape occurred when defendant engaged in act of sexual intercourse with 7-year-old female and his prior criminal record, though minor, consisted of 2 prior convictions of driving while intoxicated, misdemeanor marijuana sale, and assault which was dismissed as family dispute. People v Williams, 137 A.D.2d 870, 524 N.Y.S.2d 551, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 814 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

Minimum term of prison sentence imposed on defendant's first degree rape conviction would be reduced from 10 years to 6 ⅔ years where court erroneously sentenced defendant in belief that first degree rape was armed felony offense; first degree rape is class B violent felony, and thus defendant should have been sentenced to minimum term of $^1/_3$ of maximum. People v Ross, 141 A.D.2d 777, 530 N.Y.S.2d 20, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7054 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Sentence of 12 ½ to 25 years for first degree rape was not authorized since offense is not armed violent felony; appropriate sentence would be $8^1/_3$ to 25 years, as class B violent felony. People v Powell, 151 A.D.2d 317, 543 N.Y.S.2d 903, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7917 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1989).

Where defendant was found guilty of brutally raping 21-year-old lifelong acquaintance at knife point after returning from date, sentence to indeterminate term of 7 to 21 years was not unduly harsh or severe considering nature of crime, vicious nature in which it was carried out, defendant's use of weapon, his threats against the victim's sister, and his lack of remorse. People v Townes, 165 A.D.2d 761, 564 N.Y.S.2d 37, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11259 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1990), app. denied, 77 N.Y.2d 844, 567 N.Y.S.2d 213, 568 N.E.2d 662, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 3874 (N.Y. 1991).

Sentence of 4 to 12 years' imprisonment for attempted first degree rape was not harsh or excessive given heinous nature of crime (committed against female of approximately 4r1/2# years old), defendant had lengthy criminal record, and sentence was in accordance with negotiated plea agreement in full satisfaction of indictment charging him with 5 separate crimes arising from incident. Dunkin' Donuts Mid-Atlantic Distrib. Ctr. v Tax Appeals Tribunal, 225 A.D.2d 903, 639 N.Y.S.2d 168, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2247 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

Despite defendant's lack of criminal history and other mitigating factors, sentence of 3 to 6 years for attempted first degree rape of his wife was not excessive, given violent nature and circumstances of crime, where, during argument over her affair, defendant handcuffed her to bed, gagged her, "cracked" her neck, and threatened to kill her if she screamed any more, and when she later tried to flee from apartment with couple's 18-month-old son, defendant pulled her back, placed baby on couch, hit wife on neck, got on top of her, held her down, ripped off her clothes, and attempted to penetrate her. People v Hale, 245 A.D.2d 576, 664 N.Y.S.2d 845, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12610 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Harshest possible sentence of 7 ½ to 15 years for attempted first degree rape was not excessive, despite defendant's lack of prior felony convictions, where he was allowed to plead guilty to lesser offense in satisfaction of 2-count indictment, and he knew that he would receive sentence ultimately imposed. People v Germaine, 263 A.D.2d 681, 692 N.Y.S.2d 620, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8016 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Defendant's challenge to his sentence was not wholly frivolous, and thus, although defense counsel's application to be relieved of her assignment would be granted, new counsel would be assigned on appeal where defendant's plea bargain for sentence of 12 ½ years for first degree rape did not include waiver of his right to appeal, and enhanced sentence of 15 years was imposed after he failed to appear for sentencing and was apprehended and returned to state. People v Haight, 281 A.D.2d 648, 720 N.Y.S.2d 857, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2019 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

Defendant was not subject to postrelease supervision imposed in CLS Penal § 70.45(1) where violent felonies of which he was convicted—first degree rape and first degree robbery—were committed before September 1, 1998. People v Copeland, 281 A.D.2d 985, 721 N.Y.S.2d 896, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2910 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 861, 730 N.Y.S.2d 35, 754 N.E.2d 1118, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2476 (N.Y. 2001).

Where defendant was convicted of rape in the first degree in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 130.35, defendant's sentence, pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02, of 10 years in prison followed by a five-year period of postrelease supervision was not excessive, as defendant admitted that the sexual intercourse with the 13-year-old victim was not consensual, and the presentence investigation report revealed that both the victim and the victim's friend were traumatized by defendant's behavior. People v Horace, 8 A.D.3d 752, 778 N.Y.S.2d 238, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7908 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 3 N.Y.3d 675, 784 N.Y.S.2d 14, 817 N.E.2d 832, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 2660 (N.Y. 2004).

16. —Weapon possession

Defendant was entitled to vacation of sentence for 2 charges of third degree weapon possession where trial court, in applying mitigation provisions of CLS Penal § 70.02(5)(b) based on manner in which crime was committed, paid little attention to making clear particular basis for mitigation, and instead referred to different basis—conduct of police in effecting arrest—in its discussion of issue; better procedure would be for trial courts to set forth in record statutory ground being relied on and circumstances of case supporting that reliance. People v Williams, 79 N.Y.2d 281, 582 N.Y.S.2d 71, 590 N.E.2d 1199, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 938 (N.Y. 1992).

Under Penal Law §§ 70.00(3) and 70.02(1),(4), the minimum sentences imposed upon the convictions of criminal possession of a weapon in the second degree and reckless endangerment in the first degree should be one-third of the maximum terms. People v Dello, 85 A.D.2d 609, 444 N.Y.S.2d 680, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16423 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1981), app. denied, 56 N.Y.2d 810, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 6030 (N.Y. 1982).

A sentence of 30 days imprisonment and three years probation imposed on 46-year-old college educated man with two children, who pleaded guilty to criminal possession of a weapon in the fourth degree, who had never before been convicted of a crime and who was aware of the gun licensing requirement but claimed a gun was necessary because the tailor shop he operated was in a high crime area, was affirmed where there was no abuse of discretion or failure to observe sentencing principles and where, although defendant did not appear to be a danger to society or in apparent need of rehabilitation, the sentencing court viewed general deterrence as an overriding principle. People v Suitte, 90 A.D.2d 80, 455 N.Y.S.2d 675, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18811 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1982).

Defendant's sentence of $8^1/_3$ to 25 years for criminal possession of a weapon would be vacated and resentencing ordered, where it appeared that the sentencing court misread Penal L § 70.02 and erroneously concluded that the sentence imposed was the minimum indeterminate sentence possible, and where the actual minimum sentence permissible was from 2 to 6 years. People v

McGonagle, 96 A.D.2d 1104, 467 N.Y.S.2d 75, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19763 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1983).

Although defendant's old age and infirmity merited judicial compassion, Penal Law § 70.02[2][c], which provides for a prison sentence upon conviction of criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree (Penal Law § 265.02(4)), is mandatory, and defendant, who was upset at having been robbed earlier that day and who shot at police who were called to the scene, was properly sentenced to terms of one to three years in prison. People v Pedraza, 107 A.D.2d 572, 483 N.Y.S.2d 699, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 42575 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), aff'd, 66 N.Y.2d 626, 495 N.Y.S.2d 30, 485 N.E.2d 237, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 17153 (N.Y. 1985).

Criminal possession of weapon in third degree is violent felony offense only when weapon is firearm, and where weapon involved in case was "hatchet", defendant, who had previously been convicted of violent felony, was improperly adjudicated and sentenced as second violent felony offender. People v Dembo, 114 A.D.2d 317, 494 N.Y.S.2d 112, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52991 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1985).

Defendant's adjudication as violent felon based on his conviction for possession of knife was improper, since only possession of firearms constitutes violent felony under sentencing statute, and thus sentence imposed was excessive as matter of law; even though not argued on appeal, court would notice such error in interest of justice. People v Oliver, 123 A.D.2d 262, 506 N.Y.S.2d 172, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 60028 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1986).

Court erred in sentencing defendant to 1 ½ to 3 years' imprisonment for attempted criminal possession of weapon in third degree, since crime was not class D armed felony offense and minimum sentence should have been one year as provided in CLS Penal § 70.00; thus, sentence would be reduced to term of one to 3 years. People v Mason, 125 A.D.2d 337, 509 N.Y.S.2d 65, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 62609 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Defendant's sentence for second degree weapon possession would be reduced from 7 ½ to 15 years' imprisonment to 5 to 15 years, since minimum term cannot exceed one third of maximum term for class C violent felony under CLS Penal § 70.02. People v Delgado, 136 A.D.2d 651, 523 N.Y.S.2d 884, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 429 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 895, 527 N.Y.S.2d 1004, 523 N.E.2d 311, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 1376 (N.Y. 1988).

Maximum sentences of $8^1/_3$ to 25 years for first degree manslaughter and $2^1/_3$ to 7 years for third degree weapon possession were not unduly harsh or excessive where defendant, at time of his arrest, was in possession of loaded weapon and 26 hollow-point bullets, indicating that he was not peaceful man, and he was convicted of first degree manslaughter as lesser included charge. People v Luzunaris, 162 A.D.2d 296, 556 N.Y.S.2d 642, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7433 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 941, 563 N.Y.S.2d 70, 564 N.E.2d 680, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 4303 (N.Y. 1990).

Concurrent sentence of 7 to 14 years on charge of second degree weapon possession would be reduced to 4 ⅓ to 14 years, since under CLS Penal § 70.02(1)(b) offense is Class C violent felony and, as such, minimum period of imprisonment is required by CLS Penal § 70.02(4) to be fixed at $1^1/_3$ maximum term imposed. People v Pagan, 193 A.D.2d 508, 598 N.Y.S.2d 1, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5009 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 82 N.Y.2d 724, 602 N.Y.S.2d 821, 622 N.E.2d 322, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 3638 (N.Y. 1993), app. denied sub. nom., People v Chino, 82 N.Y.2d 715, 602 N.Y.S.2d 812, 622 N.E.2d 313 (N.Y. 1993).

Indeterminate prison term of 7 to 14 years imposed on conviction for second degree weapon possession was unlawful; maximum sentence for that offense, class "C" violent felony, for first offender is indeterminate term of 4 ⅓ to 14 years' imprisonment. People v Nwobi, 233 A.D.2d 467, 650 N.Y.S.2d 600, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12033 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 987, 656 N.Y.S.2d 746, 678 N.E.2d 1362, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 947 (N.Y. 1997).

Defendant was properly sentenced as persistent felony offender to prison term of 15 years to life for third degree weapon possession where he had 6 prior misdemeanor and 2 prior felony convictions, he conspired while in prison to sell guns, and once out of prison he sold gun that led to his arrest. People v James, 251 A.D.2d 813, 674 N.Y.S.2d 809, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7339 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Defendant was improperly sentenced as second violent felony offender for his conviction of third degree weapon possession under CLS Penal § 265.02(1), which is not classified as violent felony (CLS Penal § 70.02(1)(c)). People v Caldwell, 272 A.D.2d 87, 708 N.Y.S.2d 370, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4934 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 933, 721 N.Y.S.2d 609, 744 N.E.2d 145, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3967 (N.Y. 2000).

Sentence of 2 to 4 years for third degree weapon possession was not excessive, and no extraordinary circumstances warranted reduction in interest of justice, where defendant violated terms of his probation by failing to stay in contact with his probation officer, leaving state without permission, and committing misdemeanors. People v Wright, 275 A.D.2d 817, 713 N.Y.S.2d 508, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9185 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 909, 716 N.Y.S.2d 650, 739 N.E.2d 1155, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3739 (N.Y. 2000).

Sentence of 25 years on conviction of first degree possession of dangerous weapon (pipe bomb with which defendant apparently planned to kill his former girlfriend) was not excessive, although it was defendant's first felony conviction and sentence imposed was maximum permissible, in light of defendant's past assaultive behavior and persistent substance abuse, and effect his conduct had on his intended victim and their children. People v Ward, 282 A.D.2d 819, 722 N.Y.S.2d 830, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4172 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 942, 733 N.Y.S.2d 383, 759 N.E.2d 382, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 3597 (N.Y. 2001).

Sentence of $1^1/_3$ to 4 years for second and third degree weapon possession was not excessive where 14-year-old defendant brought loaded .22-caliber revolver to school, indicated that he intended to use it to threaten student who had been harassing him, and indicated that he would use it if student did not leave him alone. People v Charles M., 286 A.D.2d 942, 731 N.Y.S.2d 307, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9066 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 680, 738 N.Y.S.2d 295, 764 N.E.2d 399, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4458 (N.Y. 2001).

Criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 265.02(1) is not classified as a violent felony under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02(1)(c). People v Morales, 289 A.D.2d 61, 733 N.Y.S.2d 864, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12112 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2001), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 707, 739 N.Y.S.2d 108, 765 N.E.2d 311, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 379 (N.Y. 2002).

Defendant was erroneously sentenced as a persistent violent felony offender, as defendant's prior guilty plea to one charge of third degree attempted criminal possession of a weapon did not qualify as a violent felony under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02(1)(d). People v Williams, 290 A.D.2d 570, 736 N.Y.S.2d 633, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 789 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 98 N.Y.2d 682, 746 N.Y.S.2d 472, 774 N.E.2d 237, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 2574 (N.Y. 2002).

In the absence of mitigating circumstances, defendant's conviction of criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree required a determinate rather than an indeterminate sentence of imprisonment, so his indeterminate sentence on that count was illegal, under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 265.02(4) and 70.02(1)(c) and (2)(c). People v Boyer, 31 A.D.3d 1136, 817 N.Y.S.2d 813, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8914 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.3d 865, 824 N.Y.S.2d 610, 857 N.E.2d 1141, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 3764 (N.Y. 2006), amended, 87 A.D.3d 1413, 930 N.Y.S.2d 503, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6769 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2011).

It was error for the trial court to impose an indeterminate sentence after defendant was convicted of a criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 265.02(4), and a determinate sentence was imposed instead. People v Rodriguez, 34 A.D.3d 1181, 824 N.Y.S.2d 536, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14006 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2006), app. denied, 8 N.Y.3d 926, 834 N.Y.S.2d 517, 866 N.E.2d 463, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 1216 (N.Y. 2007), amended, 87 A.D.3d 1413, 930 N.Y.S.2d 503, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6765 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2011).

Based, inter alia, upon defendant's youth, family background, and community involvement, and the People's position on appeal that the sentence imposed was excessive, pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law §§ 70.02(2)(c), 70.45(1), defendant's sentence for third-degree criminal possession of a weapon was reduced to a definite term of imprisonment of one year. People v Meriwether, 51 A.D.3d 823, 859 N.Y.S.2d 208, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4298 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 962, 863 N.Y.S.2d 146, 893 N.E.2d 452, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 2841 (N.Y. 2008).

After defendant was convicted of two counts of criminal possession of a weapon in the second degree, the imposition of an aggregate prison term of 14 years was neither harsh nor excessive because while defendant was just 16 years old at the time of the incident, the violent nature of the altercation left two people dead. People v Capers, 129 A.D.3d 1313, 12 N.Y.S.3d 317, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5135 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2015), app. denied, 27 N.Y.3d 994, 59 N.E.3d 1216, 38 N.Y.S.3d 104, 2016 N.Y. LEXIS 1271 (N.Y. 2016).

Trial court acted within its discretion by imposing a 5-year sentence after the jury convicted defendant of criminal possession of a weapon in the second degree because while defendant was a first-time offender, defendant failed to take responsibility for his offenses and showed no remorse. People v Watson, 163 A.D.3d 855, 81 N.Y.S.3d 449, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5218 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 32 N.Y.3d 1009, 111 N.E.3d 1123, 86 N.Y.S.3d 767, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 3141 (N.Y. 2018).

Where defendant was convicted upon his plea of guilty of the crimes of criminal possession of a weapon in the second degree and criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in sentencing defendant to significantly less than the maximum allowable sentence under this section and Penal Law § 70.06(6)(b) since the court considered his long history of drug addiction. People v Zirpola, 171 A.D.3d 1245, 97 N.Y.S.3d 355, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2595 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2019), app. denied, 34 N.Y.3d 1164, 142 N.E.3d 1148, 120 N.Y.S.3d 246, 2020 N.Y. LEXIS 527 (N.Y. 2020).

A defendant convicted of a class D violent felony of criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree, who had been previously convicted of a class E felony but determined not to be a second felony offender, under Penal Law § 70.06, was properly sentenced to five years' probation and required to pay a $75 mandatory surcharge, since Penal Law § 70.02(2) provides that the sentence imposed upon a person convicted of criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree must be a sentence to an indeterminate period of imprisonment or a definite sentence of imprisonment for a period of no less than one year, except that the court may impose any other sentence upon a person who had not been previously convicted in the five years immediately preceding commission of the offense for a class A misdemeanor and the court is of the opinion that such sentence would be unduly harsh; even assuming that the word "felony" was erroneously omitted in defining disqualification, the prior felony conviction of defendant is not such a disqualifier. People v Stephen, 122 Misc. 2d 592, 471 N.Y.S.2d 492, 1984 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2872 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1984).

Defendant, who was charged with the Class D felony of criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree (Penal Law § 265.02) based upon the inadvertent discovery of a loaded gun in his possession by hospital emergency room personnel after he was struck by a speeding, out-of-control taxi cab as he was walking on the sidewalk, would not be entitled to a dismissal of the felony indictment in furtherance of justice to allow him to plea guilty to a misdemeanor weapons charge and thereby avoid a mandatory felony sentence, notwithstanding defendant's stable employment history and trouble-free existence following his release from prison on a 1975 robbery conviction, since the sympathy-inducing circumstances leading to the discovery of the gun did not constitute mitigating circumstances which would allow the court to circumvent the mandatory sentencing structure of the 1980 gun control law for a second felony offender, nor did they fit within any of the ten categories that the court must consider in determining a motion to dismiss in furtherance of justice; the simple possession of a loaded firearm by a person previously convicted of a crime was one of the evils addressed by the gun control law through the establishment of a tough minimum sentence and restrictions on plea bargaining, and granting defendant's motion would defeat the purpose of the law and constitute rewriting the gun control legislation. People v Garcia, 126 Misc. 2d 579, 482 N.Y.S.2d 996, 1984 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3668 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1984).

It is appropriate for court, under CLS Penal § 70.02(2)(c)(i), without finding undue harshness, to impose another sentence that is at least equal in severity to presumptive one-year term for class D felony; accordingly, in absence of undue harshness in prosecution for third degree weapon possession, court would impose split sentence of 6 months imprisonment as condition of and to run concurrent with 5-year probationary period. People v Goetz, 137 Misc. 2d 380, 520 N.Y.S.2d 919, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2597 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1987), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 141 A.D.2d 446, 529 N.Y.S.2d 782, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7256 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1988).

Trial court improperly sentenced defendant as a persistent violent felony offender on the conviction for criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 265.02(3), which related to defaced weapons, as weapon possession under § 265.02(3) was not classified as a violent felony under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02(1)(c). People v Wicks, 2 A.D.3d 285, 768 N.Y.S.2d 596, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13594 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2003), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 636, 777 N.Y.S.2d 34, 808 N.E.2d 1293, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 920 (N.Y. 2004).

Lower court erred when it accepted defendant's plea of guilty to attempted possession of a weapon in the third degree, as part of defendant's parole violation, but imposed an indeterminate term of incarceration. People v Smith, 2 A.D.3d 1431, 770 N.Y.S.2d 527, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14239 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2003), app. denied, 2 N.Y.3d 746, 778 N.Y.S.2d 471, 810 N.E.2d 924, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 1265 (N.Y. 2004), app. denied, 2 N.Y.3d 806, 781 N.Y.S.2d 306, 814 N.E.2d 478, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 2020 (N.Y. 2004).

Defendant was properly resentenced from a three-year to a five-year period of postrelease supervision because while possession of a weapon in the third degree was a class D violent felony, defendant was adjudicated a second felony offender and, therefore, sentenced pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 70.06(6) rather than N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02; thus, the imposition of a five-year period of postrelease supervision was statutorily required under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.45(2). People v Hawkins, 45 A.D.3d 989, 845 N.Y.S.2d 171, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11179 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007), app. denied, 9 N.Y.3d 1034, 852 N.Y.S.2d 20, 881 N.E.2d 1207, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 369 (N.Y. 2008).

Sentence of 6 years in prison and 2 years of postrelease supervision for third degree weapon possession was not excessive, and no extraordinary circumstances warranted reduction in interest of justice, where, contrary to defendant's claim, sentencing court was aware of all pertinent factors concerning defendant's background, including his age, family background, minimal criminal record, reason for carrying weapon, expressions of remorse, and earlier rejected plea bargain. Marshall v Bush (Iowa 1844), aff'd, 47 U.S. 284, 12 L. Ed. 440, 1848 U.S. LEXIS 316 (U.S. 1848).

13. ——Robbery

Defendant's prison sentence for attempted robbery in the first degree, which he committed when he was 17, was vacated because he was entitled to an express determination of whether, notwithstanding his conviction for an armed felony, he was still eligible for youthful offender treatment based on the factors in N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 720.10(3), but the record did not conclusively establish that the trial court made such an express determination in the first instance; the court made no mention of the § 720.10(3) factors and, instead of first determining defendant's eligibility pursuant to that statute, appeared to have moved to the second step and determined youthful offender treatment was inappropriate under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 720.20. People v Colon, 173 A.D.3d 1255, 102 N.Y.S.3d 753, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4519 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2019).

16.5 Controlled substances.

Trial court did not err by using defendant's past violent felony to determine defendant's predicate felony status because defendant was afforded an opportunity to review the predicate felony statement, confer with counsel and acknowledged the conviction, and defendant's challenge was that he filed a motion to vacate that prior conviction; defendant pleaded guilty to criminal possession of a controlled substance in the third degree and criminally using drug paraphernalia in the second degree. People v Gray, 152 A.D.3d 1068, 59 N.Y.S.3d 580, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5809 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 30 N.Y.3d 980, 89 N.E.3d 1262, 67 N.Y.S.3d 582, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 3604 (N.Y. 2017).

17. Appellate review

The trial court in a robbery prosecution erred in vacating its original indeterminate sentence of defendant to a term of four and one-half to nine years' imprisonment and in resentencing defendant to an indeterminate term of six to 12 years' imprisonment as a second violent felony offender pursuant to Penal L § 70.02(1)(c), since defendant's predicate felony of third degree criminal possession of a weapon had not been deemed "violent" on the date defendant had committed the robbery, and the reclassifying amendment that deemed it such had not become effective until ten days after such crime had been committed. People v Griffin, 97 A.D.2d 481, 467 N.Y.S.2d 681, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 20070 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1983).

The trial court erred in sentencing defendant as a violent felony offender on his conviction of burglary in the third degree, since that crime is not classified as a violent felony offense under Penal Law § 70.02(1)(c); accordingly, the Appellate Division would reduce the sentence on the conviction to the maximum allowable for a class D felony conviction for a second felony offender, pursuant to Penal Law § 70.06(3). People v Malone, 102 A.D.2d 737, 477 N.Y.S.2d 6, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18904 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 63 N.Y.2d 947 (N.Y. 1984).

Where defendant, predicate felon, was sentenced upon plea of guilty to robbery in third degree, to 2 ½ to 5 years imprisonment, and where it was apparent that sentencing judge, who sought to sentence defendant, as predicate felon, to minimum term authorized for conviction of robbery in third degree, mistakenly believed that robbery in third degree was class D violent felony and thus sentenced defendant to minimum sentence imposed on second violent felony offender, court will modify sentence to 2 to 4 years imprisonment. People v Tomasullo, 112 A.D.2d 960, 492 N.Y.S.2d 472, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52176 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1985).

Remand was unnecessary to correct illegal sentence imposed by trial court acting under misapprehension that first degree manslaughter is class B armed felony offense where defendant and People consented to reduction of minimum term of imprisonment, from one-half to one-third maximum term, in conformity with CLS Penal 70.02. People v Campaneria, 123 A.D.2d 271, 506 N.Y.S.2d 344, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 60039 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 69 N.Y.2d 709, 512 N.Y.S.2d 1035, 504 N.E.2d 403, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 21391 (N.Y. 1986).

Criminal Term erred in imposing minimum terms of ½ of maximum for convictions of manslaughter in first degree and attempted murder in second degree, despite defendant's use of gun in committing crimes, since possession of deadly weapon or display of firearm is not element of either offense, neither crime is thus armed felony offense as defined by CLS CPL § 1.20, and minimum period of imprisonment for violent felony offenses cannot exceed$^{1}/_{3}$ § 70.02; matter required remand to Criminal Term for resentencing since that court was intimately familiar with facts and circumstances underlying convictions. People v Leacock, 125 A.D.2d 185, 508 N.Y.S.2d 448, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 62458 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1986).

Defendant who was convicted of first degree robbery involving use of dangerous instrument under CLS Penal § 160.15(3) was improperly sentenced to indeterminate term of 10 to 20 years, since conviction did not qualify as class B armed violent felony offense, which requires possession of deadly weapon; as matter of discretion, appellate court would sentence defendant to term of 5 to 15 years rather than remanding for resentencing, in view of lengthy delay in prosecuting appeal, fact that defendant was first-time felon and only 18 years old at time of offense, and fact that People had originally recommended imposition of term of 5 to 15 years. People v Burgos, 136 A.D.2d 466, 523 N.Y.S.2d 105, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 39 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1988).

Habeas corpus relief was not available to prison inmate regarding his claims that he was improperly sentenced as second violent felony offender and that his prison term was improperly calculated where (1) claimed errors could have been advanced on direct appeal or in CLS CPL Art 440 motion or remedied by means of administrative appeal, (2) his 1985 conviction was affirmed in 1988, (3) dismissal of his Article 78 proceeding challenging recalculation of his sentence was affirmed in 1990, and (4) nothing was presented that would justify departure from traditional orderly procedure. People ex rel. Rolon v Travis, 273 A.D.2d 655, 711 N.Y.S.2d 362, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7208 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 763, 715 N.Y.S.2d 376, 738 N.E.2d 780, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3406 (N.Y. 2000).

Sentences imposed against defendant upon his various convictions was not harsh or excessive, despite the fact that such was certainly greater than that proposed as part of a prior rejected plea agreement, where they were within the permissible statutory range. People v Torra, 309 A.D.2d 1074, 766 N.Y.S.2d 912, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11229 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 581, 775 N.Y.S.2d 797, 807 N.E.2d 910, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 4753 (N.Y. 2003).

Defendant's waiver of the right to appeal foreclosed his challenge to the severity of his negotiated sentence, which was less than half of the maximum possible prison term. People v Stone, 9 A.D.3d 498, 779 N.Y.S.2d 302, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9080 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 3 N.Y.3d 712, 785 N.Y.S.2d 40, 818 N.E.2d 682, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 3016 (N.Y. 2004).

As the People correctly conceded, the sentence imposed against a defendant on a third-degree criminal possession of a weapon conviction was improper, as said charge under N.Y. Penal Law § 265.02(3) was not a violent felony within the meaning of N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02. People v Fermin, 36 A.D.3d 934, 828 N.Y.S.2d 546, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 993 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2007).

Sentence of 25 years for conviction of gang assault was reduced to 15 years because defendant's conduct occurred after a chaotic and highly-charged confrontation late at night, which she did not initiate, when a group of friends burst into her home raising graphic allegations, confirmed as to her daughter, that the victim, a close friend who had babysat her five children many times, had severely sexually abused her young daughter; under the circumstances, defendant's role in this assault did not support the conclusion that she represented the type of "threat to public safety" that the enhanced crime against "assaults committed by gangs" was designed to target. Defendant's only prior felony was nonviolent (possession of a forged instrument), and she was on probation. People v Cordato, 85 A.D.3d 1304, 924 N.Y.S.2d 649, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4819 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 17 N.Y.3d 815, 929 N.Y.S.2d 803, 954 N.E.2d 94, 2011 N.Y. LEXIS 2789 (N.Y. 2011).

Where defendant pleaded guilty to second degree robbery, the county court misspoke when it referred to probation, as opposed to postrelease supervision, at the moment it pronounced sentence. However, where the court pronounces the imposition of postrelease supervision --- albeit mistakenly referring to it as probation -- and the sentence is authorized for the offense and consistent with the terms of the plea agreement, no corrective action is necessary. People v Kaetzel, 117 A.D.3d 1187, 985 N.Y.S.2d 734, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3248 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 24 N.Y.3d 962, 996 N.Y.S.2d 221, 20 N.E.3d 1001, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 3024 (N.Y. 2014).

Defendant's adjudication as a second violent felony offender was vacated because trial court was not authorized to adjudicate such as his conviction for predatory sexual assault was for class A felony. However, since the statutory sentencing parameters for such offender did not include any specifications as to proper sentences for a class A felony as that crime was more serious than crimes specified in those parameters, error could not have affected the sentence imposed to defendant's detriment. People v Bell, 188 A.D.3d 904, 135 N.Y.S.3d 413, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6737 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2020).

Notes to Unpublished Decisions

1. Sentences for particular crimes

Unpublished decision: Where a detainee received a sentence and the sentencing judge and commitment sheet did not mention post-release supervision, the imposition of supervision by the New York State Department of Correctional Services was void because (1) the sentencing judge did not exercise discretion to impose a period of supervision, (2) the sentence was not corrected, (3) the announced sentence was irrebuttably presumed to have said what it was meant to say, and (4) the detainee did not waive the claim. § 120.05. Assault in the second degree

A person is guilty of assault in the second degree when:

1. With intent to cause serious physical injury to another person, he causes such injury to such person or to a third person; or

2. With intent to cause physical injury to another person, he causes such injury to such person or to a third person by means of a deadly weapon or a dangerous instrument; or

3. With intent to prevent a peace officer, a police officer, prosecutor as defined in subdivision thirty-one of section 1.20 of the criminal procedure law, registered nurse, licensed practical nurse, public health sanitarian, New York city public health sanitarian, sanitation enforcement agent, New York city sanitation worker, a firefighter, including a firefighter acting as a paramedic or emergency medical technician administering first aid in the course of performance of duty as such firefighter, an emergency medical service paramedic or emergency medical service technician, or medical or related personnel in a hospital emergency department, a city marshal, a school crossing guard appointed pursuant to section two hundred eight-a of the general municipal law, a traffic enforcement officer, traffic enforcement agent or employee of any entity governed by the public service law in the course of performing an essential service, from performing a lawful duty, by means including releasing or failing to control an animal under circumstances evincing the actor's intent that the animal obstruct the lawful activity of such peace officer, police officer, prosecutor as defined in subdivision thirty-one of section 1.20 of the criminal procedure law, registered nurse, licensed practical nurse, public health sanitarian, New York city public health sanitarian, sanitation enforcement agent, New York city sanitation worker, firefighter, paramedic, technician, city marshal, school crossing guard appointed pursuant to section two hundred eight-a of the general municipal law, traffic enforcement officer, traffic enforcement agent or employee of an entity governed by the public service law, he or she causes physical injury to such peace officer, police officer, prosecutor as defined in subdivision thirty-one of section 1.20 of the criminal procedure law, registered nurse, licensed practical nurse, public health sanitarian, New York city public health sanitarian, sanitation enforcement agent, New York city sanitation worker, firefighter, paramedic, technician or medical or related personnel in a hospital emergency department, city marshal, school crossing guard, traffic enforcement officer, traffic enforcement agent or employee of an entity governed by the public service law; or

3-a. With intent to prevent an employee of a local social services district directly involved in investigation of or response to alleged abuse or neglect of a child, a vulnerable elderly person or an incompetent or physically disabled person, from performing such investigation or response, the actor, not being such child, vulnerable elderly person or incompetent or physically disabled person, or with intent to prevent an employee of a local social services district directly involved in providing public assistance and care from performing his or her job, causes physical injury to such employee including by means of releasing or failing to control an animal under circumstances evincing the actor's intent that the animal obstruct the lawful activities of such employee; or

3-b. With intent to prevent an employee of the New York city housing authority from performing his or her lawful duties while located on housing project grounds, real property, or a building owned, managed, or operated by such authority he or she causes physical injury to such employee; or

3-c. With intent to prevent an employee providing direct patient care, who is not a nurse pursuant to title eight of the education law, whose principal employment responsibility is to carry out direct patient care for one or more patients in any hospital, nursing home, residential health care facility, general hospital, government agency including any chronic disease hospital, maternity hospital, outpatient department, emergency center or surgical center under article twenty-eight of the public health law, from performing a lawful duty, he or she causes physical injury to such employee providing direct patient care; or

4. He recklessly causes serious physical injury to another person by means of a deadly weapon or a dangerous instrument; or

4-a. He recklessly causes physical injury to another person who is a child under the age of eighteen by intentional discharge of a firearm, rifle or shotgun; or

5. For a purpose other than lawful medical or therapeutic treatment, he intentionally causes stupor, unconsciousness or other physical impairment or injury to another person by administering to him, without his consent, a drug, substance or preparation capable of producing the same; or

6. In the course of and in furtherance of the commission or attempted commission of a felony, other than a felony defined in article one hundred thirty which requires corroboration for conviction, or of immediate flight therefrom, he, or another participant if there be any, causes physical injury to a person other than one of the participants; or

7. Having been charged with or convicted of a crime and while confined in a correctional facility, as defined in subdivision three of section forty of the correction law, pursuant to such charge or conviction, with intent to cause physical injury to another person, he causes such injury to such person or to a third person; or

8. Being eighteen years old or more and with intent to cause physical injury to a person less than eleven years old, the defendant recklessly causes serious physical injury to such person; or

9. Being eighteen years old or more and with intent to cause physical injury to a person less than seven years old, the defendant causes such injury to such person; or

10. Acting at a place the person knows, or reasonably should know, is on school grounds and with intent to cause physical injury, he or she:

(a) causes such injury to an employee of a school or public school district; or

(b) not being a student of such school or public school district, causes physical injury to another, and such other person is a student of such school who is attending or present for educational purposes. For purposes of this subdivision the term "school grounds" shall have the meaning set forth in subdivision fourteen of section 220.00 of this chapter; or

11. With intent to cause physical injury to a train operator, ticket inspector, conductor, signalperson, bus operator, station agent, station cleaner or terminal cleaner employed by any transit agency, authority or company, public or private, whose operation is authorized by New York state or any of its political subdivisions, a city marshal, a school crossing guard appointed pursuant to section two hundred eight-a of the general municipal law, a traffic enforcement officer, traffic enforcement agent, prosecutor as defined in subdivision thirty-one of section 1.20 of the criminal procedure law, sanitation enforcement agent, New York city sanitation worker, public health sanitarian, New York city public health sanitarian, registered nurse, licensed practical nurse, emergency medical service paramedic, or emergency medical service technician, he or she causes physical injury to such train operator, ticket inspector, conductor, signalperson, bus operator, station agent, station cleaner or terminal cleaner, city marshal, school crossing guard appointed pursuant to section two hundred eight-a of the general municipal law, traffic enforcement officer, traffic enforcement agent, prosecutor as defined in subdivision thirty-one of section 1.20 of the criminal procedure law, registered nurse, licensed practical nurse, public health sanitarian, New York city public health sanitarian, sanitation enforcement agent, New York city sanitation worker, emergency medical service paramedic, or emergency medical service technician, while such employee is performing an assigned duty on, or directly related to, the operation of a train or bus, including the cleaning of a train or bus station or terminal, or such city marshal, school crossing guard, traffic enforcement officer, traffic enforcement agent, prosecutor as defined in subdivision thirty-one of section 1.20 of the criminal procedure law, registered nurse, licensed practical nurse, public health sanitarian, New York city public health sanitarian, sanitation enforcement agent, New York city sanitation worker, emergency medical service paramedic, or emergency medical service technician is performing an assigned duty; or

11-a. With intent to cause physical injury to an employee of a local social services district directly involved in investigation of or response to alleged abuse or neglect of a child, vulnerable elderly person or an incompetent or physically disabled person, the actor, not being such child, vulnerable elderly person or incompetent or physically disabled person, or with intent to prevent an employee of a local social services district directly involved in providing public assistance and care from performing his or her job, causes physical injury to such employee; or

11-b. With intent to cause physical injury to an employee of the New York city housing authority performing his or her lawful duties while located on housing project grounds, real property, or a building owned, managed, or operated by such authority he or she causes physical injury to such employee; or

11-c. With intent to cause physical injury to an employee providing direct patient care, who is not a nurse pursuant to title eight of the education law, whose principal employment responsibility is to carry out direct patient care for one or more patients in any hospital, nursing home, residential health care facility, general hospital, government agency including any chronic disease hospital, maternity hospital, outpatient department, emergency center or surgical center under article twenty-eight of the public health law, he or she causes physical injury to such employee providing direct patient care while such employee is performing a lawful duty; or

12. With intent to cause physical injury to a person who is sixty-five years of age or older, he or she causes such injury to such person, and the actor is more than ten years younger than such person; or

13. Being confined to a secure treatment facility, as such term is defined in subdivision (o) of section 10.03 of the mental hygiene law, and with intent to cause physical injury to an employee of such secure treatment facility performing his or her duties, he or she causes such injury to such person; or

14. With intent to prevent or obstruct a process server, as defined in section eighty-nine-t of the general business law, from performing a lawful duty pursuant to article three of the civil practice law and rules, or intentionally, as retaliation against such a process server for the performance of the process server's duties pursuant to such article, including by means of releasing or failing to control an animal evincing the actor's intent that the animal prevent or obstruct the lawful duty of the process server or as retaliation against the process server, he or she causes physical injury to such process server.

Assault in the second degree is a class D felony.

Editor's Notes Laws 1996, ch 122, § 7, eff Aug 1, 1996, provides as follows:

§ 7. This act shall take effect on the first day of August next succeeding the date on which it shall have become a law and shall apply only to offenses occurring on or after such date.

Laws 2000, ch 181, §§ 1 and 24, eff Nov 1, 2000, provide as follows:

Section 1. This act shall be known and may be cited as "Project SAVE, Safe Schools Against Violence in Education Act".

§ 24. This act shall take effect November 1, 2000 provided that school districts shall be in full compliance with the provisions of this act by July 1, 2001, except that section seven of this act shall take effect July 1, 2001; section eight of this act shall take effect September 1, 2000; section twelve of this act shall apply to proceedings on or after such effective date; and sections nineteen through twenty-two of this act shall take effect on the first day of January next succeeding the date on which this act shall have become a law; provided, however that effective immediately, the addition, amendment and/or repeal of any rule or regulation necessary for implementation of this act on its effective date are authorized and directed to be made and completed on or before such effective date.

Commission Staff Notes Subdivision 1 presents the most familiar form of felonious assault: intentional infliction of "serious physical injury," a term defined in the General Provisions [§ 10.00(9)]. This offense is substantially the same as the former second degree assault crime applicable to one who "wilfully and wrongfully wounds or inflicts grievous bodily harm upon another" [former P.L. § 242(3)]. While the latter provision did not expressly require a specific intent to accomplish the stated result, that element had been written into it by judicial construction [People v Katz, 290 NY 361, 49 NE2d 482 (1943)].

Subdivision 2 attaches felony liability to the intentional infliction of "physical injury," whether "serious" or otherwise, so long as it is committed with a "deadly weapon" or a "dangerous instrument," which includes assaults committed with knives, crowbars, etc., as well as those committed with firearms, blackjacks, metal knuckles, etc. (see § 10.00[8, 9, 11, 12]).

It is to be noted that the comparable provision of the former Penal Law [§ 242(4)] differs in that, on the one hand, it requires no actual infliction of injury but, on the other, requires, by judicial construction at least, an intent to inflict "grievous" bodily harm with the weapon [People v Katz (1943) 290 NY 361, 49 NE2d 482].

Subdivision 3 makes it second degree assault to inflict ordinary "physical injury" upon a peace officer with intent to prevent him from performing an official duty (cf. former P.L. § 242[5]).

Subdivision 4 raises reckless assault by means of "a deadly weapon or a dangerous instrument" from third degree or misdemeanor liability [§ 120.00(2)] to felony liability when the resulting "physical injury" is "serious."

Subdivision 5, suggested by a series of former provisions [former P.L. §§ 240(2), 242(1, 2), 1752], proceeds upon the premise that the unlawful, intentional causing of stupor or other physical impairment by means of drugs administered without the victim's consent merits a felony sanction regardless of whether the "physical injury" is "serious," as that term is defined in § 10.00(9).

Amendment Notes 2013. Chapter 1, § 32 amended:

By adding sub 4-a.

2013. Chapter 259, § 1 amended:

Sub 3 by adding the matter in italics.

2013. Chapter 259, § 2 amended:

Sub 11 by deleting at figs 1 and 2 "or" and adding the matter in italics.

2012. Chapter 434, § 1 amended:

By adding sub 3-a.

By adding sub 11-a.

2000. Chapter 181, § 13 amended:

Sub 9 by deleting at fig 1 a period and adding the matter in italics.

By adding sub 1.

2008. Chapter 68, § 1 amended:

By adding sub 12.

The 2014 amendment by ch 196, § 1, in 3 and 11, added "a school crossing guard appointed pursuant to section two hundred eight-a of the general municipal law," "school crossing guard appointed pursuant to section two hundred eight-a of the general municipal law" and "school crossing guard" preceding "traffic enforcement officer."

The 2014 amendment by ch 197, § 1 added 3-b and 11-b.

The 2015 amendment by ch 423, § 1, added 3-c and 11-c.

The 2015 amendment by ch 472, § 1, added "public health sanitarian, New York city public health sanitarian" wherever it appears in 3 and 11.

The 2015 amendment by ch 477, § 1, added 13.

The 2015 amendment by ch 487, § 1, added "emergency medical service paramedic, or emergency medical service technician" throughout 11 and made related changes.

The 2016 amendment by ch 267, § 1, in 3, added "or employee of any entity governed by the public service law in the course of performing an essential service," added "or employee of an entity governed by the public service law" preceding "he or she," and added "or employee of an entity governed by the public service law" following the last occurrence of "traffic enforcement agent."

The 2016 amendment by ch 268, § 1, added 14 and made related changes.

The 2016 amendment by ch 281, § 1, in 11 [eff Feb 18, 2016], added "station cleaner or terminal cleaner" twice and added "including the cleaning of a train or bus station or terminal" and made related changes.

The 2016 amendment by ch 281, § 2, in 11 [eff Nov 1, 2016], added "station cleaner or terminal cleaner" twice and added "including the cleaning of a train or bus station or terminal" and made related changes.

I. In General

1. Generally

Where defendants were initially prosecuted for weapon possession, bank robbery and criminal conspiracy under federal indictment alleging that they "assaulted" persons, "put in jeopardy" lives of persons, and (as overt act of criminal conspiracy) "fired numerous shots at police officers" who pursued them as they fled from robbery, CLS CPL § 40.20(2)(b) did not prohibit subsequent state prosecution of same defendants for attempted murder of police officer under CLS Penal §§ 110.00 and 125.27(1)(A)(i) arising from same criminal transaction, nor did it prohibit conviction of one defendant of second degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.05(1) as lesser included offense. People v Bryant, 92 N.Y.2d 216, 677 N.Y.S.2d 286, 699 N.E.2d 910, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 2151 (N.Y. 1998).

In trial of defendant charged with assaulting his former girlfriend wherein prospective juror stated that she did not think she should be sitting on case because she had studied domestic violence extensively and questioned whether she could be impartial, trial court's seating of that juror without first obtaining her unequivocal assurance that she could be fair required reversal of defendant's second and third degree assault convictions. People v Arnold, 96 N.Y.2d 358, 729 N.Y.S.2d 51, 753 N.E.2d 846, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1447 (N.Y. 2001).

Second-degree assault conviction was reversed where finding that codefendants were the aggressors was inconsistent with their calling police and remaining on scene until police arrived, and where one defendant pled guilty to possessing a pistol during the incident. People v Sohn, 43 A.D.2d 716, 350 N.Y.S.2d 198, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2949 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1973).

Under statute defining "serious physical injury," defendant who caused protracted impairment of function of complainant's eye could be found guilty of causing "serious physical injury" and thus guilty of assault in the second degree. People v Rumaner, 45 A.D.2d 290, 357 N.Y.S.2d 735, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4329 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

Crime of assault in second degree is defined in section 120.05 of Penal Law rather than in section 120.25; reference to "assault in the second degree as defined in section 120.25," contained in subdivision 4 of section 60.05 of Penal Law, which deals with authorized disposition of such crimes, is clearly nothing but typographical error. People v Lirio, 54 A.D.2d 732, 387 N.Y.S.2d 658, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14347 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1976).

Record disclosed that defendant, in pleading guilty to charge of assault in the second degree in satisfaction of a three-count indictment, had adequate notice of the charge, that his constitutional rights were respected, and that he adequately understood the consequences of his plea. People v Biauce, 55 A.D.2d 692, 389 N.Y.S.2d 147, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15465 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976).

In prosecution for robbery in first degree, criminal possession of weapon in second degree and assault in second degree, whether defendant was guilty was jury question. People v Johnson, 57 A.D.2d 844, 394 N.Y.S.2d 39, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12056 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1977).

In a prosecution for four counts of murder in the second degree and two counts of assault in the second degree, the 16-year-old defendant's cold, detailed and impassive accounts of the two violent and brutal unrelated murders two hours apart did not evince an insane state of mind where no evidence existed that defendant was suffering from a mental disorder or defect at the time of the crimes. People v Boykins, 81 A.D.2d 922, 439 N.Y.S.2d 181, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11647 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 54 N.Y.2d 761, 1981 N.Y. LEXIS 5082 (N.Y. 1981).

Defendant's conviction for robbery and assault would be reversed, where the victim's initial description of her assailant and her trial description differed substantially, where neither description significantly matched defendant's appearance, where the prosecution made continual references, over objection and despite cautions not to do so, to the victim's direct identification, which had been suppressed as unreliable, where the only direct proof linking defendant to the crime was a commonly available cap, and where the people failed to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that a TV set carried by defendant's companion was the set taken in the robbery. People v Perez, 91 A.D.2d 921, 457 N.Y.S.2d 808, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16202 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1983).

Although police did not inform defendant convicted of assault in second degree, upon arrest, as to offenses designated in arrest warrants, failure to comply strictly with CLS CPL § 120.80 does not diminish police officer's authority or render act of arrest illegal. People v Johnson, 115 A.D.2d 330, 495 N.Y.S.2d 847, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 54614 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1985).

Police officer's involvement in scuffle in which he fell on top of defendant and second officer was not intervening cause of second officer's injuries so as to require reversal of defendant's second degree assault conviction since defendant was initial aggressor whose conduct precipitated altercation. People v Douglas, 143 A.D.2d 452, 532 N.Y.S.2d 446, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9138 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

"Physical injury" element of second degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.05(3) is not unconstitutionally vague since prosecution must prove that victim suffered "impairment of physical condition or substantial pain" as provided by CLS Penal § 10.00(9). People v Cortez, 143 A.D.2d 464, 532 N.Y.S.2d 585, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9229 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

Although it is legally impossible to commit attempted second degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.05(3), which does not include intent to cause physical injury as necessary element, it is possible to commit such offense under CLS Penal § 120.05(2), which requires intent to cause physical injury. People v Munck, 190 A.D.2d 963, 594 N.Y.S.2d 77, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1721 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 974, 598 N.Y.S.2d 775, 615 N.E.2d 232, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 2057 (N.Y. 1993).

In prosecution for second degree assault, there was no error in prosecutor's limited reference to definition of "serious physical injury" in order to give meaning to facts referenced in summation. People v Smith, 246 A.D.2d 852, 668 N.Y.S.2d 281, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 552 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 977, 672 N.Y.S.2d 857, 695 N.E.2d 726, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 1681 (N.Y. 1998).

In prosecution for second degree assault, any error in prosecutor's limited reference to definition of "serious physical injury" in summation was obviated by court's instruction that jury had to accept law as given to it by court. People v Smith, 246 A.D.2d 852, 668 N.Y.S.2d 281, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 552 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 977, 672 N.Y.S.2d 857, 695 N.E.2d 726, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 1681 (N.Y. 1998).

Police officers charged with second and third degree assault on handcuffed victim in police station's garage shortly after they had engaged in altercation with victim at nearby pub while they were off duty were not entitled to transactional immunity under CLS CPL §§ 50.10 and 190.40(2) by virtue of their nonincriminatory testimony, without having signed waivers of immunity, before different grand jury investigating events at pub, including injuries inflicted on victim while he was being physically subdued and arrested, where their testimony was not probative on issue of motive for later assault, motive was not element of assault, officers' conduct in garage was not "topic" discussed before grand jury, and mere temporal (½ hour) and geographic (2 miles) proximity between events was insufficient because victim's immobilization, arrest, and removal from scene was clear and significant break segregating events at pub from those in garage. People v McKenna, 250 A.D.2d 240, 685 N.Y.S.2d 110, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14133 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998), app. denied sub. nom., People v Bonanni, 93 N.Y.2d 850, 688 N.Y.S.2d 498, 710 N.E.2d 1097, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 462 (N.Y. 1999), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 855, 688 N.Y.S.2d 503, 710 N.E.2d 1102, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 587 (N.Y. 1999), app. dismissed, 93 N.Y.2d 859, 689 N.Y.S.2d 13, 711 N.E.2d 198, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 772 (N.Y. 1999).

Court failed to make required inquiry of defendant to ensure that he knowingly waived defense of intoxication on pleading guilty to second degree assault where he described incident by stating that he did whatever victim said happened, court further inquired as to whether charge in indictment was accurate, whereupon defendant declared that "if it says so, I did it," he also indicated that he was intoxicated and reiterated that if "she (victim) said it, I did it," and court thereupon accepted defendant's guilty plea. People v Osgood, 254 A.D.2d 571, 681 N.Y.S.2d 365, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11185 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

In prosecution for second and third degree assault, inter alia, involving stabbing of defendant's ex-girlfriend, it was reversible error to deny defendant's challenge for cause to prospective juror who had stated "In my women's studies—I did a lot of research on domestic violence and battered syndrome, and I have a problem with that," juror also stated that she may have problem refraining from voicing during deliberations what she had learned through her women's studies research, she expressed doubt as to her ability to be impartial or indicated that she might be unsworn expert witness injury room, and court failed to ascertain that her prior state of mind would not influence her verdict and that she would render impartial verdict based on evidence; later general acknowledgment by all prospective jurors that they would follow law did not establish impartiality of prospective juror in question. People v Arnold, 272 A.D.2d 857, 708 N.Y.S.2d 762, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5228 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000), aff'd, 96 N.Y.2d 358, 729 N.Y.S.2d 51, 753 N.E.2d 846, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1447 (N.Y. 2001).

In prosecution for attempted second degree murder, second degree assault, and third degree weapon possession, any Brady violation in failing to turn over information as to victim's prior misdemeanor conviction was harmless where disinterested eyewitnesses testified that defendant assaulted victim after threatening to kill him, one witness specifically saw what appeared to be knife course of brawl, and there was medical testimony that injuries inflicted were consistent with victim having been stabbed with knife or other sharp instrument and were unlikely to have been caused by his falling onto glass. People v Ingraham, 274 A.D.2d 828, 711 N.Y.S.2d 863, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8249 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Appellate Division would dismiss defendant's conviction of second degree assault since it was lesser included offense of his conviction of first degree assault. People v Woods, 275 A.D.2d 332, 712 N.Y.S.2d 407, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8554 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2000), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 740, 722 N.Y.S.2d 807, 745 N.E.2d 1030, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 507 (N.Y. 2001).

In prosecution for first and second degree assault and resisting arrest, jury was free to reject insanity defense, even though psychiatrist who evaluated defendant after shooting incident opined that defendant's behavior was triggered by drug-induced psychosis precipitated by his excessive use of cocaine and PCP and that defendant thus lacked capacity to know right from wrong, where (1) same psychiatrist conceded that defendant's psychosis was self-induced, that when defendant was not under influence of drugs, he showed no signs of functional or "real" psychosis, and that testing of defendant's personality profile indicated that defendant might have been exaggerating his symptoms to support his defense, and (2) defendant's conduct after shooting was inconsistent with that of person suffering from functional psychosis. People v Gillis, 281 A.D.2d 698, 721 N.Y.S.2d 690, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2316 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 918, 732 N.Y.S.2d 635, 758 N.E.2d 661, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4106 (N.Y. 2001).

Trial court did not err by denying defendant's motion to vacate the judgment convicting him for assault in the second degree as he failed to prove that he was denied effective assistance of counsel, because defense counsel visited the crime scene at least 50 times, obtained surveillance videotapes from the bar, and had numerous telephone conversations with the bar owner concerning the existence and identity of witnesses to the incident. Defense counsel obtained two exculpatory witnesses who testified on defendant's behalf at trial -- a bouncer and a bar patron. 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2979, 2014 NY Slip Op 3069 (May 2, 2014).

Where allegations of disorderly conduct charged against defendant involved name calling and abusive language directed toward police officers, while indictment for assault, second degree, was based on physical attack and resultant physical injuries inflicted on police officer who arrested defendant for the disorderly conduct, trial of defendant on the indictment after he had pled guilty to the disorderly conduct charge would not constitute double jeopardy. People v Bynum, 81 Misc. 2d 358, 365 N.Y.S.2d 764, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2388 (N.Y. County Ct. 1975).

Defendant's entry in district court of guilty plea to charge of driving with a revoked license did not bar his prosecution in County Court for second-degree assault even though both offenses arose out of same criminal transaction, where there was no showing that joinable traffic offense was disposed of by trial or plea in same court or that separate accusatory instruments were filed in same court and that defendant applied for and was improperly denied consolidation of charges for trial purposes. People v Durant, 88 Misc. 2d 731, 389 N.Y.S.2d 533, 1976 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2736 (N.Y. County Ct. 1976).

A court does not abuse its discretion by setting bail at $500 and hence such bail cannot be deemed preventive detention under circumstances where the defendant was charged with assault in the second degree, a felony (Penal Law, § 120.05), assault in the third degree, a misdemeanor (Penal Law, § 120.00), resisting arrest, (Penal Law, § 205.30), and the defendant had been arrested seven times in the previous two months and had a bench warrant issued concerning court proceedings on those arrests. People v Maldonado, 95 Misc. 2d 113, 407 N.Y.S.2d 393, 1978 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2391 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1978).

A person who starts a fire under circumstances evidencing a depraved indifference to human life and recklessly causes the death of another person may properly be charged with both arson and homicide. If the other person is not killed but is seriously injured, the perpetrator may then be properly charged with both arson and assault. If the other person is neither killed nor seriously injured, but is recklessly exposed to a grave risk of death, then the perpetrator may be properly charged with both arson and reckless endangerment. People v Rodriguez, 110 Misc. 2d 828, 442 N.Y.S.2d 948, 1981 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3170 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1981).

Defendant who sold firecrackers to 13-year-old boy, one of which prematurely exploded in boy's hand, could not be convicted of second degree assault charge under CLS Penal § 120.05(4) as he could not reasonably have been expected to foresee ultimate harm that occurred; evidence did not support finding that sale of fireworks was sufficiently direct cause of boy's injury. People v Suquisupa, 167 Misc. 2d 109, 637 N.Y.S.2d 302, 1996 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1996).

Trial court's order dismissing charges of attempted assault in the second degree and criminal contempt in the first degree against defendant who was committed to a psychiatric center, pursuant to N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 730.50(3), (4), was not an action terminating the prosecution in defendant's favor within the meaning of N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 160.50(3), and the trial court held that it was not required by § 160.50 to seal the court's file or order that other records pertaining to defendant's arrest be sealed. People v Willingham, 195 Misc. 2d 241, 758 N.Y.S.2d 780, 2003 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 233 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2003).

Upon defendant's knowing and voluntary pleas to second-degree assault and endangering the welfare of a child, his claims of ineffective assistance of counsel, that the lower court should have recused itself, and that his sentence was excessive, were all waived when the pleas were entered. People v Anderson, 304 A.D.2d 975, 756 N.Y.S.2d 916, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4121 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 578, 764 N.Y.S.2d 388, 796 N.E.2d 480, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 2975 (N.Y. 2003).

Where the information given by a citizen informant identified the vehicle and at least one of the suspects and the police identified the witnesses prior to stopping defendant's vehicle, the information was not obtained from an anonymous source; the police had the requisite reasonable suspicion to stop the vehicle and arrest defendant, inter alia, for robbery and assault, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 160.10(1), (2)(a), 120.05. People v Van Every, 1 A.D.3d 977, 767 N.Y.S.2d 176, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12224 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2003), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 602, 776 N.Y.S.2d 233, 808 N.E.2d 369, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 454 (N.Y. 2004).

Defendant's conviction of assault in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2), was affirmed, because the trial court properly exercised its discretion pursuant to N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law 270.35 in discharging a juror whose daughter required hospitalization for a serious illness. People v Davis, 6 A.D.3d 1168, 775 N.Y.S.2d 650, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6297 (N.Y. Attorney, who pleaded guilty to assault in the second degree in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(4), a class D felony, was automatically disbarred pursuant to N.Y. Jud. Law § 90(4); she was ordered to comply with the appellate court's rules governing the conduct of disbarred attorneys set forth in N.Y. Comp. Codes R. & Regs. tit. 22, § 691.10. In re Brown, 10 A.D.3d 182, 780 N.Y.S.2d 788, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10319 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2004).

N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(12) did not violate the Equal Protection Clause, U.S. amend. V and XIV, as § 120.05(1) had a rational basis since the New York legislature had concerns about protecting the elderly, who were particularly susceptible to crimes of violence due to their age, and § 120.05(12) effectuated that interest. People v Riley, 920 N.Y.S.2d 617, 32 Misc. 3d 626, 2011 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1312 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2011).

N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(12) was not unconstitutionally vague as the New York legislature clearly intended § 120.05(12) to be a strict liability statute in order to ensure the safety of the elderly; as individuals got older it was often hard to determine their age, and if the statute required knowledge, then the purpose of the statute would be significantly debilitated. People v Riley, 920 N.Y.S.2d 617, 32 Misc. 3d 626, 2011 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1312 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2011).

N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(12) was not unconstitutional as applied to defendant as the statute was enacted to address predatory attacks by persons who targeted seniors, but the statute did not require that it be applied exclusively for predatory attacks; the fact that defendant claimed that defendant was not a person who targeted the elderly nor was defendant motivated by the victim's alleged senior status was not a defense as the statute was not limited to predatory attacks. People v Riley, 920 N.Y.S.2d 617, 32 Misc. 3d 626, 2011 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1312 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2011).

N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(12) is not overbroad as § 120.05(12) is clear in its application and can be applied constitutionally; the mere fact that § 120.05(12) is a strict liability statute does not make the statute overly broad as a variety of strict liability statutes in New York impose criminal liability upon individuals regardless of knowledge of the victim's age, such as the N.Y. Alco. Bev. Cont. Law § 65(1), and a person can suffer administrative sanctions for violating this statute irrespective of knowledge or intent. N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(12) is not unconstitutional as deeming age 65 as elderly is not arbitrary since legislatures choose different statutory age requirements for numerous things, such as voting, drinking alcoholic beverages, receiving social security benefits, and even the age of retirement for appointed state judges, and all of these age requirements have been upheld as constitutional because each law has been passed in order to further a rational state interest; the primary goal of the legislature is to protect individuals age sixty-five and older, who might suffer deteriorating physical capabilities, from assault by younger, more physically able persons, and the legislative determination that persons age 65 and older need additional protection is reasonable. N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(12) is not unconstitutional because it does not apply to individuals once they reach the age of 65 as individuals aged 65 or older may be charged with the lesser crime of assault in the third degree, which is consistent with the principle that individuals 65 and older may have deteriorating physical abilities; the purpose of § 120.05(12) is to protect the elderly from younger, more physically capable individuals, and the statute is not arbitrary, but consistent with the New York legislature's rationale of protecting the elderly. In a personal injury case, defendant's guilty plea to reckless assault based on the same underlying incident negated his affirmative defenses regarding plaintiff's culpable conduct, assumption of risk, justification, and failure to mitigate damages arising from that incident. Russo v Dement, 61 Misc. 3d 855, 84 N.Y.S.3d 754, 2018 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4288 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2018).

Defendant's guilty plea to reckless assault collaterally estopped him, in a personal injury action arising from the same incident, from making any attempted defense that he was somehow provoked by plaintiff, or acted in self-defense, because he had a full and fair opportunity to raise those defenses in the criminal case yet chose not to. Russo v Dement, 61 Misc. 3d 855, 84 N.Y.S.3d 754, 2018 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4288 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2018).

District court properly sentenced defendant to the mandatory minimum of 15 years' imprisonment under 18 U.S.C.S. § 924(e)(1) of the Armed Career Criminal Act (ACCA) upon his guilty-plea conviction of being a felon in possession of a firearm because his prior conviction for second-degree attempted assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2) was a "violent felony" under the ACCA. United States v Walker, 442 F.3d 787, 2006 U.S. App. LEXIS 8195 (2d Cir. 2006).

In a 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 case in which a district court sua sponte dismissed an inmate's Eighth Amendment excessive force claims, the Heck decision did not bar his claims as his claims did not depend on the invalidity of his N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(7) assault conviction; the inmate's plausible claim of excessive force could be reconciled with his assault of a correctional officer, and was therefore not barred by the Heck decision. Shapard v Attea, 710 Fed. Appx. 15, 2017 U.S. App. LEXIS 20046 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2017).

Where a defendant appealed his 110-month sentence for violating 18 U.S.C.S. § 922(g), his conviction under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2) constituted a crime of violence under U.S. Sentencing Guidelines Manual § 2K2.1(a)(4)(A). United States v Rios, 717 Fed. Appx. 18, 2017 U.S. App. LEXIS 24320 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2017).

Denial of appellant's petition for relief under 28 U.S.C.S. § 2255 was affirmed because appellant's three prior convictions of assault with a deadly weapon, Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 265, § 15B(b), attempted second-degree assault, New York Penal Law § 120.05(7), and first-degree robbery, New York Penal Law § 160.15(4), were all predicate offenses under the Armed Career Criminal Act's, 18 U.S.C.S. § 924(e)(2)(B)(i), force clause making his sentence as an armed career criminal appropriate. Lassend v United States, 898 F.3d 115, 2018 U.S. App. LEXIS 21470 (1st Cir. Mass. 2018), cert. denied, 139 S. Ct. 1300, 203 L. Ed. 2d 422, 2019 U.S. LEXIS 1607 (U.S. 2019).

Magistrate judge correctly determined that a conviction under Penal § 120.05(6) was not a "crime of violence" under 18 USCS § 16(a) because a conviction under Penal § 120.05(6), while requiring proof of physical injury, did not require, as an element of the offense, that the defendant use physical force to inflict that injury. Persaud v McElroy, 225 F. Supp. 2d 420, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19076 (S.D.N.Y. 2002).

Conviction under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(6) was not a "crime of violence" under 18 U.S.C.S. § 16(b) because the minimum criminal conduct necessary to sustain a conviction under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(6) need not have been conduct that by its nature presented a substantial risk that physical force may have been used by the defendant. Persaud v McElroy, 225 F. Supp. 2d 420, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19076 (S.D.N.Y. 2002).

Conviction under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(6) does not constitute a conviction of an "aggravated felony" under 8 U.S.C.S. §§ 1101(a)(43)(F) and 1227(a)(2)(A)(iii) because it is not a "crime of violence" under 18 U.S.C.S. § 16. Persaud v McElroy, 225 F. Supp. 2d 420, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19076 (S.D.N.Y. 2002).

Because there were questions of material fact as to whether probable cause existed to prosecute plaintiff two for assault and attempted assault in second degree and resisting arrest, summary judgment on plaintiffs' malicious prosecution claims as to county was inappropriate. Frederique v Cnty. of Nassau, 168 F. Supp. 3d 455, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 32084 (E.D.N.Y. 2016).

2. Jurisdiction and venue

Where defendant was acquitted of incest but convicted of second degree assault and impairing the morals of his 11-year-old daughter, it was held the judgment should be modified by reversing the conviction for assault and that charge transferred to the Family Court which had exclusive original jurisdiction over aggravated and felonious assaults within the family group. Since the charge of endangering the morals of a minor did not come within the statutory definition of either assault or disorderly conduct and was essentially "a different crime" from either, it was held the Family Court did not have exclusive original jurisdiction of that charge. People v Nuernberger, 25 N.Y.2d 179, 303 N.Y.S.2d 74, 250 N.E.2d 352, 1969 N.Y. LEXIS 1110 (N.Y. 1969).

Venue was properly laid in New York County where one defendant formulated requisite criminal intent to commit second degree assault in county by contacting second defendant and instructing him to assist third defendant in exacting retribution for prior physical altercation between third defendant and victim; whenever defendant commits act in county sufficient to establish element of charged offense, codefendants may likewise be tried in that county. People v Guidice, 83 N.Y.2d 630, 612 N.Y.S.2d 350, 634 N.E.2d 951, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 1065 (N.Y. 1994).

Action for assault and harassment against stepfather for such conduct against stepson was not barred as there was no legal interdependence between the two where defendant and child's mother no longer lived together, thus precluding jurisdiction of family court. People v Weisman, 72 Misc. 2d 465, 339 N.Y.S.2d 482, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2331 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1973).

In view of death of wife subsequent to alleged assault against her by husband, processes of family court had become inappropriate, and the matter would be transferred back to justice court of town for further criminal proceeding in that court. Hawley v Hawley, 78 Misc. 2d 55, 355 N.Y.S.2d 962, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1328 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. 1974).

Fact that the complainant sustained serious physical injury, which was an element required for both statutes, did not make Assault 2 (degrees) under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(1) a lesser included offense of Robbery 1 (degree) since the intent to cause such injury was not an element of the crime of Robbery 1 (degree); thus the Superior Court Information did not confer jurisdiction on the County Court under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 195.20 and defendant's conviction for that charge could not stand, despite the undisputed fact that defendant consented to being so prosecuted and voluntarily pled guilty. People v Robinson, 919 N.Y.S.2d 299, 30 Misc. 3d 972, 2011 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 71 (N.Y. County Ct. 2011).

Where the victim was directed by defendant to get back into the car, threatened and told to obtain money for the defendant and then driven to his grandfather's house and to get money for the defendant, and these acts were committed after an assault was completed, they constituted a separate crime and the merger doctrine was inapplicable. People v Howard, 305 A.D.2d 869, 761 N.Y.S.2d 115, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5782 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 583, 764 N.Y.S.2d 393, 796 N.E.2d 485, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 3091 (N.Y. 2003).

3. Indictment and grand jury proceedings

Indictment for attempted rape in first degree and assault in second and third degrees would be reinstated after dismissal by Criminal Term on ground that grand jury minutes failed to sustain prima facie case where complainant testified that, while she was riding in elevator with her child, defendant pulled at her blouse and pants, banged her against sides of elevator car when she fought back, caused her pain and subsequent swelling, told her that "he wanted to fuck" her and "if I wouldn't give him no pussy he was going to kill me," placed her in fear by that threat, and fled when elevator doors opened; evidence of subjective pain felt by complainant in being slammed against wall, and swelling it induced, was sufficient at indictment stage to establish "physical injury" for purpose of assault in second degree. People v Richards, 128 A.D.2d 387, 512 N.Y.S.2d 395, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 44101 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1987).

Defendant was not entitled to dismissal of charge of attempted second degree assault allegedly committed while he was incarcerated at Elmira Correctional Facility on robbery conviction, on ground that indictment did not specifically allege that he was confined in correctional facility on prior conviction when claimed assault occurred as required by CLS Penal § 120.05(7), since indictment and attached information sufficiently informed him of crime for which he was indicted, as well as meeting statutory requirements, where indictment stated that attempted assault occurred at correctional facility, and defendant's prior robbery conviction was referred to in special information accompanying indictment; reference in indictment to prior conviction would have been legally impermissible. People v Sanchez, 147 A.D.2d 846, 538 N.Y.S.2d 335, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1997 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 746, 545 N.Y.S.2d 121, 543 N.E.2d 764, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 2641 (N.Y. 1989).

Indictment charging defendant with second degree assault of correction officer was not defective because it only alleged that assault was committed "at the Elmira Correctional Facility" without stating that defendant was actually "confined" therein at time of incident; defendant could not claim prejudice by such omission since he knew of his own confinement at correctional institution. People v Harris, 151 A.D.2d 919, 543 N.Y.S.2d 535, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8856 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 847, 546 N.Y.S.2d 1012, 546 N.E.2d 195, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 3876 (N.Y. 1989).

Defendant was entitled to reversal of second degree assault conviction where court, at close of proof, granted People's motion to amend count of indictment charging that crime in order to conform indictment (which originally accused defendant of hitting victim over head with ceramic lamp) to proof (which tended to show that victim was hit with baseball bat); by permitting amendment, court foreclosed defendant from arguing, as matter of law and fact, that blow from lamp did not cause "physical injury" within meaning of CLS Penal § 10.00. People v Powell, 153 A.D.2d 54, 549 N.Y.S.2d 276, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16167 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1989), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 969,

Indictment charging defendant with second and third degree assault, resisting arrest, and harassment against police officer was improperly dismissed on ground that prosecutor failed to inform grand jury that DMV revocation orders, which officer was attempting to execute, had been rescinded, since under no reasonable view of evidence could trier of fact rationally conclude that acts of spitting on officer and violently attacking him were perpetrated solely with intent to convince officer that revocation notices were mistake. People v Zupan, 184 A.D.2d 888, 585 N.Y.S.2d 545, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7990 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 80 N.Y.2d 978, 591 N.Y.S.2d 147, 605 N.E.2d 883, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 4372 (N.Y. 1992).

Defendant was not entitled to dismissal of indictment charging second and third degree assault, resisting arrest, and harassment against police officer, on ground that prosecutor suppressed consideration by grand jury of justification defense since (1) defendant's act of spitting on officer occurred after officer had already announced his intent to immediately depart from premises, and (2) fact that defendant stated "[y]ou're not going any [expletive] place. I've got your car blocked in" when he shoved officer showed that act was not done with intent to eject him from premises. People v Zupan, 184 A.D.2d 888, 585 N.Y.S.2d 545, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7990 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 80 N.Y.2d 978, 591 N.Y.S.2d 147, 605 N.E.2d 883, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 4372 (N.Y. 1992).

Evidence before grand jury was sufficient to indict defendant for second degree assault where it demonstrated that defendant fled following lawful arrest, and security officers' lawful attempt to detain him resulted in injuries to one officer, who was pulled down steep incline and crashed into concrete abutment while struggling with defendant to hold onto him and prevent his escape. People v Jensen, 203 A.D.2d 820, 611 N.Y.S.2d 363, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4450 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1994), aff'd, 86 N.Y.2d 248, 630 N.Y.S.2d 989, 654 N.E.2d 1237, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 2230 (N.Y. 1995).

Court erred in dismissing or reducing counts of indictment charging burglary and assault, all of which contained as element use or threatened use of dangerous instrument, on ground that defendant's teeth could not be considered dangerous instrument where evidence presented to grand jury indicated that defendant bit victim's finger to bone. People v Owusu, 248 A.D.2d 491, 669 N.Y.S.2d 366, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2324 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998), rev'd, 93 N.Y.2d 398, 690 N.Y.S.2d 863, 712 N.E.2d 1228, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1135 (N.Y. 1999).

Indictment charging second degree assault was not insufficient on ground that deputy sheriffs were no longer "performing (their) lawful dut(ies)" (CLS Penal § 120.05(3)) at time they were injured, because they had completed transporting defendant to correctional facility, since deputies' responsibility to "transport" defendant did not end as soon as their vehicle stopped moving, and they were injured as they were attempting to secure defendant inside facility. People v Townsend, 248 A.D.2d 811, 670 N.Y.S.2d 245, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2497 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 862, 677 N.Y.S.2d 92, 699 N.E.2d 452, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 2709 (N.Y. 1998).

Court erred in granting defendant's motion to dismiss indictment on ground that evidence before grand jury was insufficient to support charges of second degree assault where evidence of subjective pain felt by each of police officers on being struck by defendant with wooden stick-type bat or club, swelling induced by injury, and length of time that pain and swelling continued was sufficient to show physical injury. People v Sylvester, 254 A.D.2d 711, 677 N.Y.S.2d 865, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10384 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

Evidence supported indictment counts charging first degree assault, first and second degree gang assault, and fourth degree weapon possession, even though defendant denied participating in attack, where he drove several accomplices to and from scene for purpose of exacting revenge on victim for earlier altercation, he was present at scene with baseball bat in his hands, and victim testified that all members of gang participated in assault. People v Kim, 255 A.D.2d 337, 681 N.Y.S.2d 549, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11591 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

People were properly permitted to amend count of indictment charging second degree assault, to delete word "serious" from before words "physical injury," where amendment was necessary so that indictment accurately reflected statutory language as well as actual charge voted on by grand jury, defendant was notified of error during People's direct case, and amendment did not change theory of People's case or otherwise prejudice defendant. People v Penna, 261 A.D.2d 641, 690 N.Y.S.2d 669, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5667 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 976, 695 N.Y.S.2d 62, 716 N.E.2d 1107, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 2631 (N.Y. 1999).

People were allowed to amend indictment to delete word "serious" before phrase "physical injury" in second degree assault charge, where amendment was necessary in view of statutory language and jury's charge, and did not change theory of case or otherwise prejudice defendant. People v Clabeaux, 277 A.D.2d 988, 716 N.Y.S.2d 526, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11566 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 781, 725 N.Y.S.2d 645, 749 N.E.2d 214, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1152 (N.Y. 2001).

Defendant's motion to dismiss second degree assault charge under CLS Penal § 120.05(7) at close of People's opening statement, based on People's failure to comply with CLS CPL § 200.60(2) and (3), was properly denied where (1) court instead directed People to file special information and defendant subsequently admitted to underlying conviction, as alleged in newly filed special information, outside of jury's presence, and (2) although People had stated in opening (without objection) that defendant was incarcerated, there was no prejudice to defendant because disclosure of his inmate status was unavoidable given that setting, participants and witnesses to assault necessarily put jury on notice that he was incarcerated and, moreover, he was also charged with promoting prison contraband, which required that he be confined to correctional facility, and to which protections of § 200.60 did not apply. People v Reynolds, 283 A.D.2d 771, 728 N.Y.S.2d 503, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5189 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 866, 730 N.Y.S.2d 41, 754 N.E.2d 1124, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2617 (N.Y. 2001), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 923, 732 N.Y.S.2d 640, 758 N.E.2d 666, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4003 (N.Y. 2001).

Because an offender's convictions of two counts of second-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(1) were inclusory concurrent counts of his convictions of first-degree assault, the second-degree assault charges were vacated, along with the related sentences, and those counts were dismissed from the indictment pursuant to N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 300.40(3)(b). People v Hamm, 42 A.D.3d 550, 839 N.Y.S.2d 807, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8721 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 9 N.Y.3d 961, 848 N.Y.S.2d 30, 878 N.E.2d 614, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 3477 (N.Y. 2007).

Defendants, acting in concert, allegedly committed one continuous assault on the complainant over a short period of time, with no pronounced break. That they allegedly used more than one dangerous instrument, and struck more than one blow, did not transform the single criminal incident into multiple assaults (N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2)) or acts of menacing (N.Y. Penal Law § 120.14(1)) that had to be charged by separate counts under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 200.30(1). People v Kaid, 43 A.D.3d 1077, 841 N.Y.S.2d 784, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11589 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2007).

In cases in which a grand jury has heard testimony against a person accused of committing a felony, but, instead of indicting has directed the district attorney to file a prosecutor's information charging the defendant with a misdemeanor, there is no need to hold a preliminary hearing despite provisions of CPL 170.75. People v McClafferty, 73 Misc. 2d 666, 342 N.Y.S.2d 208, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2114 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1973).

An indictment charging the defendant with assault in the first degree, assault in the second degree and endangering the welfare of a child in that she failed to feed her child would be dismissed, since the duty to feed a child is limited to the means or ability to earn such means and the evidence was barely sufficient with regard to the defendant's ability to feed her children, since the Grand Jury was not instructed that they must find that the defendant had the means or ability to provide her children with food and without such an instruction they were unable to evaluate the exculpatory evidence that defendant had attempted to receive public assistance but the payments were delayed and that defendant received at best $25 per week from the father of the child, since the Grand Jury was informed that the defendant's age was irrelevant when it was in fact relevant on the issue of her maturity and her awareness of the consequences of her actions, and since although the expert testimony produced was sufficient to prove that the defendant's failure to feed her child caused physical injury, no instruction was given regarding evaluation of the expert testimony. People v Gladden, 118 Misc. 2d 831, 462 N.Y.S.2d 115, 1983 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3407 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1983).

Indictment charging defendant with second degree assault (alleging that he recklessly caused serious injury by means of dangerous instrument) and assault by operation of vessel in second degree (alleging criminal negligence causing serious physical injury by operation of vessel while intoxicated) would be dismissed on double jeopardy grounds due to defendant's prior guilty plea to violation of operating vessel in intoxicated condition involving same incident since assault charges of causing physical injury are intrinsically tied to determination of nonintentional culpability based on intoxication, offense to which defendant had already pleaded guilty. People v Thompson, 136 Misc. 2d 740, 519 N.Y.S.2d 320, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2490 (N.Y. County Ct. 1987).

Attempted second degree assault charge arising from defendant's alleged violation of order of protection was dismissed on ground of impairment of integrity of grand jury proceeding, where evidence was presented that second order of protection was entered one day after attempted assault which constituted alleged violation of original order of protection, grand jurors' questions indicated that they were greatly confused by conflicting evidence concerning orders of protection, and existence of second order may have influenced grand jurors to reject defendant's claim that he used force against protected witness only in response to attack by her dog. People v Cullins, 170 Misc. 2d 207, 650 N.Y.S.2d 947, 1996 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 426 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1996).

Defendant, charged with second degree assault arising out of incident at correctional facility wherein he allegedly "head butted" correction officer, was not entitled to dismissal of indictment based on "use immunity" conferred by 7 NYCRR 251-3.1(d) in Tier III prison disciplinary proceeding in connection with same incident, where district attorney affirmed that he did not hear or read defendant's statements made at Tier III hearing and that he did not receive any information "generated from" that hearing, and documentary evidence established independent source for People's grand jury evidence which predated Tier III hearing. People v Nation, 189 Misc. 2d 165, 730 N.Y.S.2d 848, 2001 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 319 (N.Y. County Ct. 2001).

Trial court dismissed count 26, charging defendant with attempted assault in the second degree, where the indictment cited a different statutory subsection than the statutory subsection voted on by the grand jury and an attempt to amend would be change in substance, not merely form; however, the trial court directed the People that they could amend count 22, where the People cited an incorrect subsection, as an amendment there would merely be one of form, not of substance, especially since the People had cited the proper statutory section. People v Guccione, 837 N.Y.S.2d 552, 16 Misc. 3d 512, 237 N.Y.L.J. 106, 2007 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3782 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2007).

Count in an indictment charging defendant with assault in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(8) had to be dismissed as the prosecutor failed to instruct the grand jury on the meaning of "serious physical injury" as defined in N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(10); even if the grand jury had been properly instructed, insufficient proof of a serious physical injury had been presented as a femur fracture suffered by the two-year-old victim was not enough to fall within the statutory definition. People v Jerreld, 852 N.Y.S.2d 833, 19 Misc. 3d 595, 2008 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1044 (N.Y. County Ct. 2008).

Indictment stated N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(6) facts and charged N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(4) so State moved to correct the clerical error. As the grand jury's minutes showed that § 120.05(4) was the proper charge, the indictment was not jurisdictionally defective and the defendant's subsequent knowing, voluntary, and intelligent guilty plea to § 120.05(4) was enforceable. People v Champion, 20 A.D.3d 772, 798 N.Y.S.2d 567, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7970 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2005).

Despite the fact that sufficient evidence of a bitten correctional officer's physical injury supported one count of second-degree assault, one additional count and two counts of attempted second-degree assault were dismissed, as defendant was not confined pursuant to a charge or conviction when she committed the same, but was confined as a youthful offender and an adjudication was not a judgment of conviction for a crime or any other offense as required by N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(7). People v Hilliard, 806 N.Y.S.2d 403, 10 Misc. 3d 1038, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2809 (N.Y. App. Term 2005).

Claim that indictment in a case charging first degree assault, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.10(1), was rendered duplicitous by testimony was meritless because the evidence established that the multiple punches and/or kicks delivered by defendant constituted a single uninterrupted assault rather than a series of distinct criminal acts and the assault occurred over a short time frame, without apparent abeyance, and was triggered by a single incident of anger. People v Snyder, 100 A.D.3d 1367, 953 N.Y.S.2d 430, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7366 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2012), app. denied, 21 N.Y.3d 1010, 971 N.Y.S.2d 262, 993 N.E.2d 1285, 2013 N.Y. LEXIS 2392 (N.Y. 2013), app. denied, 21 N.Y.3d 1010, 971 N.Y.S.2d 262, 993 N.E.2d 1285, 2013 N.Y. LEXIS 2374 (N.Y. 2013).

4. "Justification" defense

People adequately disproved defense of justification at trial on charge of second degree assault where victim had been disarmed of his "weapon" (i.e., small rubber-tipped hammer) before first stab wound was inflicted, victim was unarmed when stabbing occurred, and thus defendant could not have "reasonably believed" that victim would use imminently deadly physical force and that defendant himself would be compelled to resort to deadly physical force to avert perceived threat. People v Henegan, 150 A.D.2d 606, 541 N.Y.S.2d 476, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6887 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 810, 546 N.Y.S.2d 568, 545 N.E.2d 882, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 3512 (N.Y. 1989).

In second degree assault trial, defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel because counsel failed to interpose justification defense since counsel's decision to forego justification defense in favor of psychiatric testimony, and argument that defendant lacked requisite intent to cause physical injury, was supportable trial tactic in light of testimony by victim and witness that defendant was initial aggressor, and that victim never touched or threatened defendant. People v Ludwig, 155 A.D.2d 558, 547 N.Y.S.2d 414, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14229 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 814, 552 N.Y.S.2d 565, 551 N.E.2d 1243, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 353 (N.Y. 1990).

In prosecution for second degree assault arising from incident in which victim and others apprehended defendant after he broke into car and defendant slashed victim's hand with box cutter during escape attempt, court would not reach issue of whether victim had right to arrest defendant under CLS CPL § 140.30(1) because, even if arrest were unjustified, defendant was not permitted to use deadly physical force. People v Bonilla, 159 A.D.2d 439, 553 N.Y.S.2d 123, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3074 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 785, 559 N.Y.S.2d 990, 559 N.E.2d 684, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 2615 (N.Y. 1990).

Defense of justification is not limited to any particular crime involving use of force or to any particular mens rea; thus, defense was available in regard to charge of second degree assault. People v Dare, 175 A.D.2d 586, 572 N.Y.S.2d 251, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10095 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 78 N.Y.2d 1127, 578 N.Y.S.2d 884, 586 N.E.2d 67, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 5475 (N.Y. 1991).

People disproved defendant's justification defense to second degree assault where defendant, striking worker, threatened victim, temporary worker, at work site, followed him after work, and struck him without provocation. People v Thomas, 224 A.D.2d 335, 638 N.Y.S.2d 311, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1460 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 854, 644 N.Y.S.2d 701, 667 N.E.2d 351, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 2041 (N.Y. 1996).

Defendant's guilty plea to second degree assault was not rendered unknowing or involuntary by court's failure to inform him at plea hearing that defense of self-defense would be available to him if he chose to go to trial where court engaged in extended colloquy with defendant, who was represented by counsel, prior to accepting plea, asking him "Do you have any defense to the charge against you that you wanted to present at trial?," to which he responded "No"; court was not obligated to proceed further, having already obtained defendant's assurances that he had discussed ramifications of his plea with defense counsel. People v Ladd, 232 A.D.2d 687, 648 N.Y.S.2d 713, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10056 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

In prosecution for second degree assault, trial court's jury charge properly limited application of justification defense to circumstances in which use of deadly force would be justified where jury could not reasonably have found that defendant used merely ordinary physical force, as opposed to deadly physical force, in stabbing victim in back. People v Hyc, 240 A.D.2d 431, 658 N.Y.S.2d 1005, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5739 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 874, 668 N.Y.S.2d 573, 691 N.E.2d 645, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4585 (N.Y. 1997).

Evidence was sufficient to negate defense of justification in prosecution for first and second degree assault, and fourth degree weapon possession, where victim and 2 eyewitnesses testified that victim was unarmed when defendant stabbed him, and defendant testified that he did not know whether victim had weapon. People v Rosil, 240 A.D.2d 439, 659 N.Y.S.2d 289, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5743 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 910, 663 N.Y.S.2d 522, 686 N.E.2d 234, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3500 (N.Y. 1997).

Jury's verdict, rejecting defense of justification to charge of second degree assault, was not against weight of credible evidence, although defendant testified that he walked away from fellow jail inmate after knocking him down and that inmate resumed fight by pursuing and striking defendant from behind, where witnesses described inmate's blow as mere hit or "whack," not amounting to sufficient physical force to justify defendant picking up inmate and throwing him head first onto cement floor. People v Lane, 241 A.D.2d 763, 660 N.Y.S.2d 890, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8077 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 875, 668 N.Y.S.2d 574, 691 N.E.2d 646, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4608 (N.Y. 1997).

In prosecution for attempted second degree murder and second degree assault, involving repeated blows to victim's head and body with baseball bat, it was sound strategy for counsel to refrain from raising weak justification defense in order to concentrate on other defenses. People v Vukel, 263 A.D.2d 416, 695 N.Y.S.2d 73, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8241 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 830, 702 N.Y.S.2d 601, 724 N.E.2d 393, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 4350 (N.Y. 1999), app. denied sub. nom., People v Vokel, 94 N.Y.2d 830, 702 N.Y.S.2d 601, 724 N.E.2d 393, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 4779 (N.Y. 1999), overruled in part, People v Wells, 24 N.Y.3d 971, 996 N.Y.S.2d 569, 21 N.E.3d 198, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 2820 (N.Y. 2014).

In prosecution for first degree manslaughter and second degree assault, court properly excluded defense witness' testimony concerning drug-selling activities of victim where there was no indication that witness had communicated his knowledge to defendant. People v Velez, 265 A.D.2d 162, 697 N.Y.S.2d 3, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9708 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 830, 702 N.Y.S.2d 601, 724 N.E.2d 393, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 4348 (N.Y. 1999).

In prosecution for second degree manslaughter and second degree assault, defense of justification was disproved where defendant was initial aggressor, and victim was unarmed. People v Ortiz, 275 A.D.2d 752, 713 N.Y.S.2d 484, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9250 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 907, 716 N.Y.S.2d 648, 739 N.E.2d 1153, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3688 (N.Y. 2000).

People disproved defense of justification where it was undisputed that, during fight, defendant used knife against unarmed individual, witnesses testified that defendant threatened to stab both victim and his cousin before actual altercation, and victim testified that defendant started altercation by punching him in stomach. People v Mothon, 284 A.D.2d 568, 729 N.Y.S.2d 541, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5984 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 865, 730 N.Y.S.2d 40, 754 N.E.2d 1123, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2593 (N.Y. 2001).

Court erred in refusing to charge the jury on the justifiable use of deadly physical force to prevent or terminate a burglary pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 35.20(3) since there was a reasonable view of the evidence that the victim entered and remained inside defendant's house with the intent to commit a crime, i.e., an assault, where the victim initially chased defendant with a hatchet and returned swinging a two-by-four prior to defendant repeatedly slashing the victim with a hatchet. People v Fagan, 24 A.D.3d 1185, 807 N.Y.S.2d 239, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14609 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2005).

In defendant's prosecution for, inter alia, assault in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(4), defendant was not entitled to a justification charge as the justification defense was not available under N.Y. Penal Law § 35.15(1)(b), (2)(a) because defendant was the initial aggressor, used deadly physical force by stabbing the victim, and knew he could safely retreat to his girlfriend's car. People v Ryan, 55 A.D.3d 960, 865 N.Y.S.2d 146, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7753 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

Defendant was not entitled to a justification instruction under Penal Law § 35.15(1) in a trial for second degree assault because testimony showed that the other inmate was already subdued and was cooperating with officers by the time the victim intervened, and that defendant continued to struggle with the victim even after the other inmate was handcuffed; there was no evidence supporting a reasonable belief that, after the victim intervened, force was needed to avert a threat posed by the other inmate to defendant. People v Johnson, 91 A.D.3d 1121, 936 N.Y.S.2d 748, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 267 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 18 N.Y.3d 959, 944 N.Y.S.2d 487, 967 N.E.2d 712, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 1052 (N.Y. 2012).

Trial court erred in determining that defendant was not entitled to a justification charge based on defendant's own testimony that defendant stumbled into the victim when the victim began choking defendant, and thus that the victim's injuries were the result of an accident, because defendant testified that the victim was choking defendant. People v Liggins, 2 A.D.3d 1325, 770 N.Y.S.2d 263, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14284 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2003).

Trial court properly declined to charge the jury on the defense of justification because no reasonable view of the evidence supported such a charge where defendant used deadly physical force when he struck the complainant in the face with the glass bottle, and his conviction for second-degree assault necessarily determined that he used deadly physical force. People v Mason, 132 A.D.3d 777, 17 N.Y.S.3d 768, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7583 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2015).

Defendant was properly convicted of assault in the second degree, as he undisputedly stabbed the victim with either a stick or a fire poker and caused injuries, and the jury instructions on the justification defense were not erroneous. People v Daggett, 150 A.D.3d 1680, 54 N.Y.S.3d 803, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3611 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 29 N.Y.3d 1125, 86 N.E.3d 567, 64 N.Y.S.3d 675, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 2992 (N.Y. 2017).

Where a verdict finding defendant guilty of assault in the second degree was supported by the weight of the evidence, defendant's justification defense failed because he did not reasonably believe that the victim was using or about to use deadly physical force against him so as to justify his actions since no weapons were displayed or used by the victim, and although defendant was later observed to have minor redness and abrasions, his own medical expert acknowledged were not clear indications of forcible choking. People v Signor, 173 A.D.3d 1264, 102 N.Y.S.3d 329, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4526 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2019).

Debtor's defense that he stabbed the creditor in self-defense was tantamount to an admission that he willfully caused the creditor's injury under 11 U.S.C.S. § 523(a)(6) and his self-defense argument was without merit under N.Y. Penal Law § 35.15 because the debtor could not have reasonably believed that the unarmed creditor, who made every reasonable effort to avoid the debtor, was being stalked by the debtor through deserted streets for a half hour, and punched the debtor only after great provocation, was using or about to use deadly, physical force. Hernandez v Greene (In re Greene), 397 B.R. 688, 2008 Bankr. LEXIS 3379 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2008).

5. —"Duty to retreat"

"Duty to retreat" element of justification defense applies to prosecution for assault. People v Macklowe, 131 A.D.2d 785, 517 N.Y.S.2d 73, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 48231 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 705, 519 N.Y.S.2d 1040, 513 N.E.2d 717, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 18102 (N.Y. 1987).

6. Separate and lesser offenses, generally

Failure of trial court to inform counsel, prior to summation, that it intended to consider assault in the second degree as a lesser included offense was reversible error necessitating a new trial as to that charge. People v Moody, 52 A.D.2d 959, 383 N.Y.S.2d 626, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12824 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1976).

The motion of defendant charged with six counts of assault in the second degree, menacing and harassment, for severance and separate trials should have been granted pursuant to CPL § 200.20 where the first three counts and last three counts of the indictment covered two separate and unrelated incidents in which defendant allegedly engaged in assaultive and threatening behavior with a knife, and where there was therefore a strong possibility of a conviction by reason of the cumulative effect of the evidence rather than by its separate and distinct relevance to each incident. People v Stanley, 81 A.D.2d 842, 438 N.Y.S.2d 848, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11518 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 54 N.Y.2d 838, 1981 N.Y. LEXIS 5399 (N.Y. 1981).

In bench trial on charge of second degree assault arising from altercation with 2 correction officers, court's failure to inform counsel before summations that it would consider lesser included offenses in rendering its verdict, although error, was harmless where defendant testified that he threw items at correction officers in self-defense, and defense counsel in summation argued that defendant's use of force was justified under circumstances, so that such argument applied equally to offenses of second degree assault and attempted second degree assault. People v Harvey, 249 A.D.2d 951, 673 N.Y.S.2d 274, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5064 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

Because driving while ability impaired and second-degree assault under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 1192(4-a) and N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(4) were not inclusory concurrent counts of aggravated vehicular assault and had different elements, they were not dismissed by defendant's conviction for aggravated vehicular assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.04-a(4). People v Joseph, 75 A.D.3d 1080, 903 N.Y.S.2d 651, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5797 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 15 N.Y.3d 853, 909 N.Y.S.2d 30, 935 N.E.2d 822, 2010 N.Y. LEXIS 3161 (N.Y. 2010).

Conviction of second degree assault, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(1), was reversed because defendant was also convicted of first degree gang assault, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.07, and assault was a lesser included offense of gang assault. People v Cordato, 85 A.D.3d 1304, 924 N.Y.S.2d 649, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4819 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 17 N.Y.3d 815, 929 N.Y.S.2d 803, 954 N.E.2d 94, 2011 N.Y. LEXIS 2789 (N.Y. 2011).

Defendant's conviction of the higher count, first degree gang assault, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.07, foreclosed her challenge to the trial court's refusal to charge the more remote lesser included offense of second degree assault, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(1). People v Cordato, 85 A.D.3d 1304, 924 N.Y.S.2d 649, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4819 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 17 N.Y.3d 815, 929 N.Y.S.2d 803, 954 N.E.2d 94, 2011 N.Y. LEXIS 2789 (N.Y. 2011).

Defendant's convictions for kidnapping in the second degree, robbery in the first degree, two counts of robbery in the second degree and assault in the second degree were inclusory concurrent counts of the corresponding convictions for sexually motivated felony; thus, the conviction for assault in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(6), the corresponding sexually motivated felony, and the convictions for kidnapping in the second degree, robbery in the first degree, and two counts of robbery in the second degree had to be reversed and these counts of the indictment dismissed. People v Perez, 93 A.D.3d 1032, 942 N.Y.S.2d 227, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2132 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 1000, 951 N.Y.S.2d 476, 975 N.E.2d 922, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 3099 (N.Y. 2012), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 1000, 951 N.Y.S.2d 476, 975 N.E.2d 922, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 3440 (N.Y. 2012), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 1000, 951 N.Y.S.2d 476, 975 N.E.2d 922, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 3441 (N.Y. 2012).

Defendant's conviction for aggravated criminal contempt for violating an order of protection could not serve as a predicate for a conviction of second degree assault on the theory that an assault was committed in the course of and in furtherance of the aggravated criminal contempt because otherwise every aggravated criminal contempt would also be a second degree assault, and the legislature, when elevating third degree reckless or intentional assault from a class A misdemeanor to a class D felony when committed in violation of an order of protection against the person for whose protection the order was issued, did not intend to elevate the assault to a class D violent felony, such as second degree assault. People v Huck, 1 A.D.3d 935, 767 N.Y.S.2d 555, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12269 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2003).

7. —Separate and lesser assault offenses

It was error to refuse to charge assault in the second degree under subd 4 of Penal Law § 120.05, defined as recklessly causing serious physical injury by means of a deadly weapon or dangerous instrument, as a lesser included offense of assault in the first degree under subd 1 of Penal Law § 120.10, defined as intentionally causing such injury by the same means, where there was a reasonable view of the evidence from which the jury could have concluded that defendant committed the lesser but not the greater offense, and a new trial would be ordered; the error could not be considered harmless where the jury convicted defendant of attempted murder and assault in the first degree, since they were the only charges submitted and both involved intentional conduct, thus presenting no choice on the question of defendant's intent. People v Green, 56 N.Y.2d 427, 452 N.Y.S.2d 389, 437 N.E.2d 1146, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3451 (N.Y.), reh'g denied, 57 N.Y.2d 775, 454 N.Y.S.2d 1033, 440 N.E.2d 1343, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 4368 (N.Y. 1982).

The crime of assault in the third degree (Penal Law § 120.00(1)) is not a lesser included offense of an assault in the second degree (Penal Law § 120.05(5)) in that it is possible to commit the latter without possessing the intent to injure, which is the gravamen of the former. People ex rel. Gray v Tekben, 57 N.Y.2d 651, 454 N.Y.S.2d 66, 439 N.E.2d 875, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3599 (N.Y. 1982).

In an assault, reckless endangerment, and criminal possession of a weapon prosecution of a 32-year-old man who fired a rifle at a tree on a warm late spring afternoon, knowing that beyond the tree was a school ball field, and who missed the tree and seriously injured an 11-year-old girl who had been watching a ball game, the trial court improperly dismissed the indictment, notwithstanding that the evidence presented to the grand jury was insufficient to support the offenses charged in that there was a lack of proof that the defendant intended to cause serious injury, to use the weapon unlawfully against another or, as he was not aware of the actual presence of people at the ball field that his conduct evinced a depraved indifference to human life, where the evidence did support the lesser included offenses of assault in the second degree, Penal Law, § 120.05(4), assault in the third degree, Penal Law, § 120.00(2) and (3), and reckless endangerment in the second degree, Penal Law, § 120.120, in that a jury could conclude that the defendant was aware of the risk inherent in his act and that he consciously disregarded that risk. People v Leonardo, 60 N.Y.2d 683, 468 N.Y.S.2d 466, 455 N.E.2d 1261, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 3388 (N.Y. 1983).

Two counts in the indictment involving offenses of assault in the third and second degree upon a proprietor of a parking lot and a police officer were undeniably similar and happened at very nearly the same time, and thus were not improperly joined. People v McDowell, 35 A.D.2d 611, 312 N.Y.S.2d 477, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4111 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970), modified, 28 N.Y.2d 373, 321 N.Y.S.2d 894, 270 N.E.2d 716, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 1297 (N.Y. 1971).

Where the indictment charged the defendant with assault in the second degree committed in the course of and in the furtherance of the commission of a felony, to wit, rape, and since rape is a felony defined under Article 130 of the Penal Law, the indictment improperly charged defendant with the crime of assault in the second degree and the court could not find the defendant guilty of that crime nor any lesser included crime such as assault in the third degree. People v McEaddy, 36 A.D.2d 908, 320 N.Y.S.2d 645, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4154 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1971), modified, 30 N.Y.2d 519, 330 N.Y.S.2d 65, 280 N.E.2d 891, 1972 N.Y. LEXIS 1506 (N.Y. 1972).

Where proof in record did not support conviction for second-degree assault, but was sufficient to sustain a verdict of guilty of lesser included offense of third-degree assault, conviction would be modified and case would be remanded to trial court for resentencing. People v Klosis, 48 A.D.2d 705, 368 N.Y.S.2d 58, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9759 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1975).

Where charge of assault in third degree required proof of intent to cause physical injury, while greater offense charged, assault in second degree, did not require proof of any intent to cause physical injury, defendant could not be convicted of assault in third degree as lesser included offense of assault in second degree. People v Baglieri, 51 A.D.2d 587, 378 N.Y.S.2d 772, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10884 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1976).

Despite fact that jury returned verdict of guilty of assault in the second degree but did not specify which subdivision of second-degree assault statute served as basis of its verdict and despite fact that, under facts of case, verdict of not guilty of assault in first degree precluded finding of guilty of violation of one subdivision of second-degree assault statute, where defendant agreed to charge that verdict of guilty of assault in the first, second, or third degrees was proper and where defendant did not object to verdict at time it was announced and could have been clarified, issue was not preserved as a question of law for appellate review because of defendant's failure to object. People v Incherchera, 56 A.D.2d 852, 392 N.Y.S.2d 62, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11198 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 41 N.Y.2d 1014, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 3550 (N.Y. 1977).

Where evidence established that injuries were inflicted by means of a dangerous instrument and where trial judge submitted to jury crimes of assault in the first, second, or third degrees, verdict of not guilty of assault in the first degree precluded finding of guilty of violation of assault in the second degree based on subdivision of second-degree assault statute requiring intent to cause serious physical injury. People v Incherchera, 56 A.D.2d 852, 392 N.Y.S.2d 62, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11198 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 41 N.Y.2d 1014, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 3550 (N.Y. 1977).

Where defendant was convicted of attempted assault in second degree, and lesser included crime of attempted assault in third degree was charged, objection that crime of menacing should have been charged was not available to her. People v Wallace, 57 A.D.2d 561, 393 N.Y.S.2d 87, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11522 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1977).

A petition for a writ of habeas corpus would be sustained without prejudice to the commencement of appropriate proceedings to involuntarily commit petitioner to a mental institution pursuant to the provisions of the Mental Hygiene Law, where petitioner's detention in a psychiatric institution, following a hearing at which the court found him to be suffering from a dangerous mental disorder, was unlawful in that the court acted without subject matter jurisdiction when it rendered a verdict based on the crime of assault in the third degree as a lesser included offense of assault in the second degree (on which petitioner had been indicted), as it is possible to commit second-degree assault without possessing the intent to injure that is required for third-degree assault. People ex rel. Gray v Tekben, 86 A.D.2d 176, 449 N.Y.S.2d 276, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15382 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), aff'd, 57 N.Y.2d 651, 454 N.Y.S.2d 66, 439 N.E.2d 875, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3599 (N.Y. 1982).

By failing to raise the issue prior to the discharge of the jury, defendant's lawyer did not preserve for appellate review the question of whether defendant's conviction of assault, second degree, was repugnant to his acquittal of assault, third degree, with respect to the same victim, submitted as a lesser included offense of assault, second degree, under another count of the indictment. People v Johnson, 86 A.D.2d 755, 447 N.Y.S.2d 785, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15328 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 56 N.Y.2d 597, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 5560 (N.Y. 1982).

In the prosecution of defendant for assault in the second degree, the trial court did not commit reversible error in refusing to charge assault in the third degree as a lesser included offense, where a reasonable view of the evidence could not support a finding that the victim had sustained "physical injury," under Penal Law § 120.00(1), requiring a showing of "impairment of physical condition or substantial pain," rather than "serious physical injury," under Penal Law § 120.05(1), requiring a showing of "a substantial risk of death or causing death of serious or protracted disfigurement, protracted impairment of health or protracted loss or impairment of the function of any bodily organ," inasmuch as the victim had sustained two wounds, one of which required 120 stitches and resulted in a substantial keloid scar on his neck. People v Greene, 111 A.D.2d 183, 488 N.Y.S.2d 812, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 51319 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 65 N.Y.2d 981, 494 N.Y.S.2d 1049, 484 N.E.2d 679, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 16418 (N.Y. 1985).

Court will modify conviction from assault in second degree to assault in third degree, with consequent reduction in sentence, where, despite fact that there was vicious attack justifying severe sentence, there was no "serious physical injury" within meaning of CLS Penal Law § 10.00 in that, although complainant suffered bruises, swollen eyes, and multiple contusions and pain lasting for 2 days, there was no substantial risk of death or serious and protracted disfigurement or impairment of health. People v Snipes, 112 A.D.2d 810, 492 N.Y.S.2d 401, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52071 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1985).

Contemporaneous acquittal of attempted assault in second degree does not require finding that conviction of criminal possession of weapon in third degree is repugnant; to be found guilty of attempted assault, defendant must be shown to have had intent to cause physical injury, while in order to convict him of criminal possession of weapon, it need only be shown that defendant had intent to use weapon unlawfullly against another; thus, verdict of guilty on criminal possession charge is not necessarily negated by failure to find that defendant had requisite intent under assault charge. People v Martino, 112 A.D.2d 1049, 493 N.Y.S.2d 36, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52252 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 66 N.Y.2d 616, 494 N.Y.S.2d 1039, 485 N.E.2d 243, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 17080 (N.Y. 1985).

Assault in third degree, as defined in Penal Law § 120.00, is not lesser included offense of felony assault under Penal Law § 120.05. People v Springer, 115 A.D.2d 915, 496 N.Y.S.2d 811, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 55275 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1985).

Defendant, guard in movie theater, who had struck theater patron on head with flashlight in altercation resulting from patron's refusal to remove his feet from theater seat, and who had been convicted of assault in second degree and criminal possession of weapon in fourth degree, was entitled to new trial since factual issue was presented for jury as to whether flashlight constituted dangerous instrument under circumstances in which it was used, and thus trial court erred in refusing defendant's request to submit lesser included offense of assault in third degree; such error also clearly affected defendant's conviction for possession of dangerous instrument. People v Colon, 121 A.D.2d 181, 503 N.Y.S.2d 8, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 58201 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1986).

Conviction of assault in third degree would be vacated where defendant was also convicted of assault in second degree for causing physical injury to victim with dangerous instrument, since assault in third degree is lesser included offense of assault in second degree. People v Claramunt, 121 A.D.2d 237, 503 N.Y.S.2d 275, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 58227 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 68 N.Y.2d 756, 506 N.Y.S.2d 1043, 497 N.E.2d 713, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 19574 (N.Y. 1986).

Trial Court properly refused to instruct jury that defendant could be found guilty of third-degree assault as lesser included offense of second-degree assault, since only difference in crimes is use of dangerous instrument, where all evidence showed use of dangerous instrument: medical testimony was that wounds were caused by sharp instrument, prosecution's witness testified defendant struck victim with sharp metal object, and defendant's own witness testified victim was stabbed (albeit by someone other than defendant) with metal shank. People v Berry, 123 A.D.2d 477, 506 N.Y.S.2d 487, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 60231 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

It would appear extremely doubtful that third degree assault can be regarded as lesser included offense to charge under felony assault statute (CLS Penal § 120.05), since assault in third degree (class A misdemeanor) specifically requires as element defendant's intent to cause physical injury to another person, which element is entirely absent from felony assault. People v Sanchez, 128 A.D.2d 377, 512 N.Y.S.2d 389, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 44095 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1987).

Second degree assault conviction would be reduced to third degree assault conviction where defendant struck victim with her hand after dropping aluminum chair she was swinging, and People failed to prove that victim's injury was caused by chair; use by average layperson of hand to strike blow is insufficient to sustain conviction of second degree assault, which involves causing physical injury by use of dangerous instrument. People v Austin, 131 A.D.2d 490, 516 N.Y.S.2d 248, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 47940 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Second degree assault conviction would be reversed where defendant was also convicted of first degree assault, since first and second degree assault charges constituted inclusory concurrent counts under CLS CPL § 300.30, and evidence supported conviction of first degree offense. People v Beatty, 134 A.D.2d 602, 521 N.Y.S.2d 500, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50810 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 892, 527 N.Y.S.2d 1002, 523 N.E.2d 309, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 1315 (N.Y. 1988).

Trial court properly refused to charge third degree assault as lesser included offense of second degree assault where (1) defendant's own testimony negated element of intent and thus if jury had chosen to believe him, it would have found him not guilty of both offenses, and (2) there was no rational basis on which jury could have selectively rejected portions of People's case to conclude that defendant committed lesser but not greater offense. People v Zayas, 140 A.D.2d 395, 527 N.Y.S.2d 571, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4679 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 72 N.Y.2d 869, 532 N.Y.S.2d 519, 528 N.E.2d 909, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 3975 (N.Y. 1988).

Court properly denied motion to dismiss indictment for assault in second degree on defendant's assertion that state failed to present prima facie evidence of physical injury where evidence that defendant was confined in correctional facility and that he struck and kicked victim was legally sufficient to establish lesser included offense of attempted assault in second degree since jury could reasonably conclude that defendant intended to cause victim physical injury. People v Bouyea, 142 A.D.2d 757, 531 N.Y.S.2d 129, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7251 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

On defendant's conviction of first degree assault, count of second degree assault should have been dismissed as lesser included concurrent count. People v Allen, 147 A.D.2d 352, 537 N.Y.S.2d 174, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 942 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), amended, 148 A.D.2d 394, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4129 (N.Y. Court did not err in refusing to charge reckless assault in third degree as lesser included offense of assault in second degree where defendant testified that complainant stabbed him in arm with knife, that he struggled with her in attempt to protect himself from serious injury or death, and that she suffered cuts to arm and wound to chest in course of struggle, since evidence, viewed favorably to defendant, supported his claim of justifiable conduct, but negated any claim of reckless conduct as much as it negated claim of intentional conduct. People v Walker, 151 A.D.2d 980, 542 N.Y.S.2d 69, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8295 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 853, 546 N.Y.S.2d 1018, 546 N.E.2d 201, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 4008 (N.Y. 1989).

Court properly refused to charge second degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.05(2) as lesser included offense of first degree assault since there was no reasonable view of evidence to support finding that defendant intended to cause only physical injury to victim, rather than serious physical injury, where he stabbed victim 12 times with knife, striking her heart, neck, throat and chest. People v Cuba, 154 A.D.2d 703, 546 N.Y.S.2d 684, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13755 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 811, 552 N.Y.S.2d 562, 551 N.E.2d 1240, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 543 (N.Y. 1990).

Defendant in second degree assault trial was not entitled to charge on third degree assault since there was no reasonable view of evidence that would support finding that he committed lesser offense but not greater offense since (1) he admitted stabbing or poking victim with knife, and (2) there was nothing in record to controvert that knife was dangerous instrument. People v Johnson, 158 A.D.2d 939, 551 N.Y.S.2d 102, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1454 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 967, 556 N.Y.S.2d 252, 555 N.E.2d 624, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 1838 (N.Y. 1990).

In prosecution for second degree assault arising from stabbing in street fight, trial court properly refused jury charge on lesser included offense of third degree assault where no reasonable view of evidence would support jury finding that defendant acted with criminal negligence as opposed to having acted with intent to cause physical injury, since defense witness testified that defendant obtained knife and went after victim, chased him down, and stabbed him in leg. People v Winbush, 165 A.D.2d 909, 560 N.Y.S.2d 520, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11083 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1990), app. denied, 77 N.Y.2d 845, 567 N.Y.S.2d 214, 568 N.E.2d 663, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 3903 (N.Y. 1991).

Defendant was not entitled to charge of third degree assault as lesser included offense of second degree assault on evidence that he had argued with long-time acquaintance, chased her into hallway of apartment building, carefully aimed loaded revolver at her, and shot once from distance of 5 to 6 feet, and that bullet entered her left leg, lodged in her right knee, and was still imbedded at time of trial, causing scarring and continuing pain. People v Caban, 181 A.D.2d 536, 581 N.Y.S.2d 42, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3698 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 79 N.Y.2d 1047, 584 N.Y.S.2d 1014, 596 N.E.2d 412, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 2535 (N.Y. 1992).

Court properly refused to charge third degree assault as lesser included offense to second degree assault where there was evidence that defendant attacked complainant with shopping bag filled with bricks, defendant denied attack, and there was no reasonable view of evidence that attack was reckless or negligent. People v David, 187 A.D.2d 396, 590 N.Y.S.2d 208, 590 N.Y.S.2d 210, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13349 (N.Y. In prosecution for second degree assault based on defendant's acting in concert with 5 other persons, defendant was not entitled to have jury instructed with regard to third degree assault as lesser included offense since there was no reasonable view of evidence to support conclusion that defendant intended to cause only "physical injury" and not "serious physical injury" where defendant may not have beaten victim severely, but he acted in concert with others who administered more serious beating. People v Johnson, 193 A.D.2d 1116, 598 N.Y.S.2d 641, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5762 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 82 N.Y.2d 721, 602 N.Y.S.2d 818, 622 N.E.2d 319, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 3556 (N.Y. 1993).

Court properly declined to charge third degree assault as lesser included offense of second degree assault as there was no reasonable view of evidence that braided belt used to pummel victim was not "dangerous instrument" within meaning of CLS Penal § 10.00(13) or that defendant did not use belt in repeatedly striking victim. People v Curtis, 222 A.D.2d 237, 635 N.Y.S.2d 186, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12720 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1995), aff'd, 89 N.Y.2d 1003, 657 N.Y.S.2d 395, 679 N.E.2d 634, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 314 (N.Y. 1997).

Court properly refused to submit third degree assault as lesser included offense of second degree assault where relevant count in indictment alleged that defendant caused physical injury to victim by means of dangerous instrument, and evidence of physical injury consisted of victim's testimony that defendant and his accomplices stabbed him in his feet with knife while he was bound and gagged. People v Flanagan, 224 A.D.2d 633, 639 N.Y.S.2d 395, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1361 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 878, 645 N.Y.S.2d 453, 668 N.E.2d 424, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 2145 (N.Y. 1996).

Trial court (as fact finder) properly considered third degree assault as lesser included offense of second degree assault where reasonable view of evidence supported finding that defendant intended to aid his accomplice in assault but may not have known, prior to assault, that accomplice was armed with brass knuckles or was going to use them to attack victim. People v Hanley, 227 A.D.2d 144, 642 N.Y.S.2d 22, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4857 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

Defendant's conviction of 2 counts of second degree assault would be set aside, and those counts would be dismissed as lesser-included offenses, where defendant was also convicted of first degree assault, and he could not have committed first degree assault without also committing second degree assault. People v Seaman, 238 A.D.2d 449, 656 N.Y.S.2d 350, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3787 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 863, 661 N.Y.S.2d 190, 683 N.E.2d 1064, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 2598 (N.Y. 1997).

Court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to charge third degree assault as lesser included offense of second degree assault where injuries inflicted on victim were numerous and serious. People v Lane, 241 A.D.2d 763, 660 N.Y.S.2d 890, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8077 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 875, 668 N.Y.S.2d 574, 691 N.E.2d 646, 1997 N.Y. Court properly refused to charge third degree assault as lesser offense to second degree assault where there was evidence that defendant repeatedly struck prone victim, and there was no evidence of retreat by defendant. People v Carello, 241 A.D.2d 903, 660 N.Y.S.2d 515, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8159 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 938, 664 N.Y.S.2d 757, 687 N.E.2d 654, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3745 (N.Y. 1997).

Defendant was not entitled to dismissal of counts charging him with third degree assault and fourth degree grand larceny where those offenses were not inclusory concurrent counts of any other crimes charged—second degree robbery, second degree assault, and resisting arrest. People v Ross, 246 A.D.2d 561, 667 N.Y.S.2d 434, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 118 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 1012, 676 N.Y.S.2d 140, 698 N.E.2d 969, 1998 N.Y. Court properly declined to charge third degree assault as lesser included offense of second degree assault where no fair view of evidence would have supported finding of third degree assault. People v Smith, 246 A.D.2d 852, 668 N.Y.S.2d 281, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 552 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 977, 672 N.Y.S.2d 857, 695 N.E.2d 726, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 1681 (N.Y. 1998).

Appellate Division would not consider whether remote lesser included offense of third degree assault should have been submitted to jury where defendant was convicted of first degree assault, and jury never reached lesser included offense of second degree assault. People v Plumey, 255 A.D.2d 462, 680 N.Y.S.2d 861, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11978 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 1037, 684 N.Y.S.2d 502, 707 N.E.2d 457, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4746 (N.Y. 1998).

Third degree assault is not lesser included offense of second degree (felony) assault. People v Williams, 255 A.D.2d 610, 682 N.Y.S.2d 60, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12828 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 880, 689 N.Y.S.2d 442, 711 N.E.2d 656, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1121 (N.Y. 1999).

Defendant was not entitled to jury charge on third degree assault as lesser included offense of second degree assault where there was no evidence of intoxication, no other evidence tending to disprove intent, and thus there was no reasonable view of evidence under which defendant acted recklessly rather than intentionally. People v Hill, 255 A.D.2d 969, 681 N.Y.S.2d 919, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12235 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 1050, 685 N.Y.S.2d 428, 708 N.E.2d 185, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 303 (N.Y. 1999).

Although attempted second degree assault is lesser included offense of second degree assault, defendant was not entitled to jury charge on attempt where he engaged in physical altercation with victim, claimed self-defense, and thus could not have committed lesser without greater offense. People v Brewer, 266 A.D.2d 577, 697 N.Y.S.2d 758, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11197 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Defendant's conviction of second degree assault would be reversed, and that count of indictment would be dismissed, where he was also convicted of first degree assault, and he could not have committed first degree assault without also committing second degree assault. People v Walker, 275 A.D.2d 1009, 713 N.Y.S.2d 590, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9652 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 739, 722 N.Y.S.2d 807, 745 N.E.2d 1030, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 496 (N.Y. 2001).

Count of indictment charging second degree assault was not inclusory concurrent count of count charging first degree assault where assault second charge required that victim be "less than seven years old" (CLS Penal § 120.0(9)), element not required by first degree assault charge (CLS Penal § 120.10). People v Scavone, 284 A.D.2d 928, 728 N.Y.S.2d 615, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5866 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 942, 733 N.Y.S.2d 382, 759 N.E.2d 381, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 3579 (N.Y. 2001).

Defendant was entitled to jury charge on second degree assault as lesser included offense of first degree assault where there was reasonable view of evidence under which victim suffered physical injury only, rather than serious physical injury; thus, judgment would be modified by reversing defendant's conviction on those counts of first degree assault and granting new trial on those counts. People v Fuller, 286 A.D.2d 910, 731 N.Y.S.2d 132, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9157 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 682, 738 N.Y.S.2d 297, 764 N.E.2d 401, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4382 (N.Y. 2001).

Trial court erred in convicting defendant of first degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.10(1) and second degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2), because second degree assault was a lesser included offense of first degree assault and should have been presented only in the alternative as an inclusory concurrent count of first degree assault. People v Fort, 292 A.D.2d 821, 739 N.Y.S.2d 319, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2636 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 98 N.Y.2d 710, 749 N.Y.S.2d 7, 778 N.E.2d 558, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 3229 (N.Y. 2002).

While evidence that during an altercation with defendant, a corrections officer suffered a blow to the check that caused pain and some swelling was insufficient to sustain defendant's conviction for assault in the second degree, it showed defendant's intent to cause injury to the officer, which supported a conviction of attempted assault in the second degree. People v Williams, 46 A.D.3d 1115, 847 N.Y.S.2d 717, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13153 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 818, 857 N.Y.S.2d 51, 886 N.E.2d 816, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 1292 (N.Y. 2008).

There was no error in denying defendant's request to charge the jury on third degree assault as a lesser-included offense of first and second degree assault; there was no reasonable view of the evidence that would have supported a jury finding that defendant acted with negligence rather than intent to cause serious physical injury or physical injury under circumstances in which, after the complainant banged on defendant's door for 10 minutes, defendant lunged at the complainant with a machete, striking him four times. People v Beckford, 49 A.D.3d 547, 853 N.Y.S.2d 582, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1956 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 859, 860 N.Y.S.2d 485, 890 N.E.2d 248, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 2099 (N.Y. 2008).

No reasonable view of the evidence allowed submission of assault in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2) as a lesser included offense of assault in the first degree as defendant's deliberate action of forcefully stabbing the victim in the head could not be viewed as based on an intent to cause a nonserious physical injury. People v Prince, 51 A.D.3d 1052, 857 N.Y.S.2d 320, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3770 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 938, 862 N.Y.S.2d 345, 892 N.E.2d 411, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 2407 (N.Y. 2008).

Defendant was improperly denied a request to charge reckless assault in the third degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.00(2) as a lesser included offense of assault in the first degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.10(1); the elements of reckless assault in the third degree, i.e., recklessness and physical injury, were present in other lesser included charges to be submitted at the People's request under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2), (4). People v Ryan, 55 A.D.3d 960, 865 N.Y.S.2d 146, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7753 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

Because defendant's conviction for assault in the first degree pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 120.10(2) was upheld, her conviction of assault in the second degree pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2) should have been vacated and that count of the indictment dismissed because it was an inclusory concurrent count. People v Davis, 91 A.D.3d 567, 938 N.Y.S.2d 8, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 556 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 863, 947 N.Y.S.2d 412, 970 N.E.2d 435, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 1924 (N.Y. 2012).

Conviction of assault in the second degree was reversed because it was an inclusory concurrent count of the robbery in the second degree conviction. People v Perez, 93 A.D.3d 1032, 942 N.Y.S.2d 227, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2132 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 1000, 951 N.Y.S.2d 476, 975 N.E.2d 922, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 3099 (N.Y. 2012), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 1000, 951 N.Y.S.2d 476, 975 N.E.2d 922, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 3440 (N.Y. 2012), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 1000, 951 N.Y.S.2d 476, 975 N.E.2d 922, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 3441 (N.Y. 2012).

At defendant's trial for assault in the second degree, the trial court erred because it failed to give a charge for the lesser included offense of assault in the third degree as requested by defense counsel. There was a reasonable view of the evidence to support a finding that defendant committed the crime of assault in the third degree, as the jury could find that defendant caused physical injury to the victim, but that he did not do so by means of a dangerous instrument. People v Brown, 117 A.D.3d 1536, 985 N.Y.S.2d 375, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3312 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2014).

When defendant was charged with first-degree assault, the trial court did not err in refusing to consider the lesser included offense of second-degree assault, as the severity of the victim's injuries, including at least 20 stab wounds to the chest, a collapsed lung, a lacerated liver, and multiple fractures to her hand, did not support a finding that defendant intended to cause physical injury but not serious physical injury to the victim. People v Spencer, 183 A.D.3d 1258, 123 N.Y.S.3d 369, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2602 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 35 N.Y.3d 1070, 152 N.E.3d 1181, 129 N.Y.S.3d 380, 2020 N.Y. LEXIS 2034 (N.Y. 2020).

Charges were properly reduced pursuant to CLS CPL § 180.50 from felony second degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.05(3) to misdemeanor third degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.00(1), since criminal intent required to support new charge (that defendant intended to cause harm to another), while different from intent required to support original charge (that defendant intended to prevent peace officer from performing lawful duty), could be inferred from factual allegations that defendant struck and bit police officer. People v Harris, 148 Misc. 2d 408, 560 N.Y.S.2d 926, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 468 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1990).

County court was justified in considering attempted assault in the second degree as a lesser included offense of assault in the second degree in defendant's trial on stipulated facts where it was clear from the colloquy between defendant and the court that defendant was advised that, if defendant entered into the stipulation agreement, then the court would find defendant guilty of attempted assault in the second degree, and defendant then entered into the stipulation with full knowledge of the court's intention. People v Kitchings, 301 A.D.2d 749, 753 N.Y.S.2d 237, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 116 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 99 N.Y.2d 629, 760 N.Y.S.2d 111, 790 N.E.2d 285, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 1145 (N.Y. 2003).

Defendant's claim that his conviction of assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05 was improper as he also pleaded guilty to vehicular assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.04, a more specific statute that he argued was the exclusive means of punishing his conduct, was rejected as in the absence of a legislative mandate directing the People to try such cases solely under § 120.04, the prosecutor had the discretion to choose the statue under which to proceed. People v Mahy, 305 A.D.2d 856, 761 N.Y.S.2d 122, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5781 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 622, 767 N.Y.S.2d 405, 799 N.E.2d 628, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 3812 (N.Y. 2003).

Plea negotiations between the state and defendant, convicted of a violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05, had a starting point of statutorily known components: a "D" violent felony which would confer, upon conviction, a "predicate felon" status, and a concomitant statutorily directed component of consecutive sentencing pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 70.25(5)(a) and both sides accepted and benefitted from the negotiated disposition agreed to and approved by and in the discretion of the court; defendant's motion pursuant to N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 440.20(1) to set aside his sentence was denied. People v Pena, 196 Misc. 2d 489, 764 N.Y.S.2d 501, 2003 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 828 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), aff'd, 309 A.D.2d 687, 766 N.Y.S.2d 196, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11275 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2003).

Count of assault in the second degree constitutes a concurrent inclusory count of a conviction of assault in the first degree; thus, defendant's conviction of assault in the second degree was vacated where defendant was also convicted of assault in the first degree. People v Carew, 2 A.D.3d 742, 768 N.Y.S.2d 658, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13889 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 625, 777 N.Y.S.2d 24, 808 N.E.2d 1283, 2004 N.Y. Where defendant, a juvenile, was found to have committed attempted assault in the second degree in violation of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 120.05 and menacing in the second degree in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.14, the charges that defendant committed attempted assault in the third degree in violation of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 120.00 and menacing in the third degree in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.15 should have been dismissed as lesser included offenses of the second degree offenses. In re Jonathan M., 4 A.D.3d 154, 772 N.Y.S.2d 42, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1657 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2004).

Jury's verdict acquitting defendant of assault in the second degree and convicting defendant of reckless endangerment was not inconsistent because the crimes required two different mental states. People v De Fayette, 16 A.D.3d 708, 790 N.Y.S.2d 301, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2147 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 4 N.Y.3d 885, 798 N.Y.S.2d 730, 831 N.E.2d 975, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 1671 (N.Y. 2005).

Trial court improperly exercised its discretion in considering attempted assault in the second degree as a lesser-included offense of first-degree attempted assault; it was not until after summations that the court indicated it would consider attempted second-degree assault, a significant departure from the prosecution's theory of the case against defendant, requiring reversal. People v Garcia, 29 A.D.3d 255, 812 N.Y.S.2d 66, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3714 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.3d 789, 821 N.Y.S.2d 818, 854 N.E.2d 1283, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 2782 (N.Y. 2006).

Defendant's convictions of assault in the second degree were erroneous as those offenses were merely inclusory concurrent counts of robbery in the second degree. People v Nadal, 57 A.D.3d 574, 868 N.Y.S.2d 719, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9252 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2008), app. denied, 12 N.Y.3d 786, 879 N.Y.S.2d 63, 906 N.E.2d 1097, 2009 N.Y. LEXIS 1521 (N.Y. 2009).

Because a jury could have believed from the complainant's testimony that defendant's objective was not to seriously injure the complainant, but to shake the complainant off a vehicle by operating it in a reckless manner, which ultimately injured the complainant, the trial court properly submitted the lesser-included offense of second-degree reckless assault under N.Y. Penal

Law § 120.05(4) to the jury. People v Moore, 66 A.D.3d 707, 886 N.Y.S.2d 468, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7083 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2009), aff'd, 15 N.Y.3d 811, 908 N.Y.S.2d 146, 934 N.E.2d 879, 2010 N.Y. LEXIS 2222 (N.Y. 2010).

Attempted assault in the second degree pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 120.05(2), was not a lesser included offense of attempted murder in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 125.25(1), because § 120.05(2) required an injury caused by means of a deadly weapon or a dangerous instrument, which was not an element of attempted murder in the second degree; although attempted assault in the second degree pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 120.05(1), was a lesser included offense of attempted murder in the second degree, the trial court properly determined that there was no reasonable view of the evidence that would have supported a finding that defendant committed the lesser offense but not the greater. Indeed, the evidence established that the police recovered shell casings and spent bullets demonstrating that at least 26 shots were fired at the victim and his vehicle, in which his 10-year-old nephew was seated. People v Hymes, 70 A.D.3d 1371, 895 N.Y.S.2d 273, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1209 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 15 N.Y.3d 774, 907 N.Y.S.2d 463, 933 N.E.2d 1056, 2010 N.Y. LEXIS 2366 (N.Y. 2010).

Inmate was denied 28 U.S.C.S. § 2254 relief on his claim that his appellate counsel was ineffective for failing to argue that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to request that the court charge lesser-included offenses because no reasonable view of the evidence supported a finding that the inmate committed any lesser-included offenses; a factfinder could not reasonably view the evidence concerning the deli robbery and find that the inmate was guilty of second-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05 or third-degree assault under § 120.00, but not first-degree assault under § 120.10. The evidence showed that the inmate and his co-defendant beat the victim with their hands, kicked him, and hit with a stick, a dangerous instrument and potentially deadly weapon, causing the victim to suffer a broken arm and great pain. Lee v Ricks, 388 F. Supp. 2d 141, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 29705 (W.D.N.Y. 2005).

8. —Separate and lesser non-assault offense

Attempted second degree assault is lesser included offense of each attempted first and second degree murder. People v Cabassa, 79 N.Y.2d 722, 586 N.Y.S.2d 234, 598 N.E.2d 1, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 1607 (N.Y.), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1011, 113 S. Ct. 633, 121 L. Ed. 2d 563, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 7648 (U.S. 1992).

In prosecution of driver and passenger of automobile for first and second degree attempted murder based on their conduct during high-speed chase, it was reversible error to refuse to submit second degree attempted assault as lesser included offense where passenger was shooting at moving police vehicle approximately 50 feet away while traveling at high speeds and while both vehicles were frequently changing lanes, so that jury could have reasonably concluded that passenger was aiming and shooting at police and their vehicle (1) in order to distract operator of police vehicle in hope that he would lose control, (2) in order to hit some portion of car to cause serious accident, or (3) to hit officers, but only to seriously injure and incapacitate them so that they would abort pursuit; moreover, jury could find that, even if passenger intended to kill, driver did not share in that intent. People v Cabassa, 79 N.Y.2d 722, 586 N.Y.S.2d 234, 598 N.E.2d 1, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 1607 (N.Y.), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1011, 113 S. Ct. 633, 121 L. Ed. 2d 563, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 7648 (U.S. 1992).

Menacing (Penal Law § 120.15) is a lesser included offense of second degree assault (Penal Law § 120.05). People v Cionek, 43 A.D.2d 256, 351 N.Y.S.2d 177, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5990 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), aff'd, 35 N.Y.2d 924, 365 N.Y.S.2d 161, 324 N.E.2d 544, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1083 (N.Y. 1974).

Charge of kidnapping, which arose out of defendant's actions in grabbing victim around the neck and dragging her a distance of 70 feet into a garage where he assaulted her, merged with charges of assault in the second degree and attempted sexual abuse in the first degree, where any detention of the victim was incidental to the commission of the crimes of assault and attempted sexual assault. People v Cassidy, 50 A.D.2d 803, 375 N.Y.S.2d 403, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11621 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1975), aff'd, 40 N.Y.2d 763, 390 N.Y.S.2d 45, 358 N.E.2d 870, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 3106 (N.Y. 1976).

In a criminal prosecution defendant was improperly convicted of reckless endangerment in the second degree as a lesser included offense of the charged crime of felony assault, since reckless endangerment in the second degree requires proof of reckless conduct that creates a substantial risk of serious physical injury and neither of these elements is an element of the felony assault statute. People v Bryant, 85 A.D.2d 575, 445 N.Y.S.2d 711, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16371 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1981).

In a rape and robbery prosecution defendant's acquittal of assault in the second degree did not render his conviction of attempted rape in the first degree an inconsistent verdict, since all that the acquittal of the assualt count showed was that defendant did not act with intent to cause a complaint of physical injury, while the conviction of attempted rape showed his intent to engage in sexual intercourse with her. People v Pereau, 99 A.D.2d 591, 471 N.Y.S.2d 416, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16826 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1984), aff'd, 64 N.Y.2d 1055, 489 N.Y.S.2d 872, 479 N.E.2d 217, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 14219 (N.Y. 1985).

Assault in second degree is not lesser included offense of attempted murder in second degree and therefore defendant's conviction for assault in second degree must be reversed. People v Weibke, 119 A.D.2d 890, 501 N.Y.S.2d 189, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 55835 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

It was error to submit to jury charges of first degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.10(1) and second degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.05(4) as lesser included offenses under count charging attempted second degree murder, since those subsections of assault statutes require use of deadly weapon or dangerous instrument, which is not element of attempted second degree murder and thus it is theoretically possible to commit attempted second degree murder without committing first or second degree assault. People v Maldonado, 123 A.D.2d 788, 507 N.Y.S.2d 415, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 60926 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Court properly refused to dismiss second degree assault conviction on basis of defendant's contention that it was lesser included offense of his first degree burglary conviction since "intent to cause injury" is element of assault but not element of burglary and it is thus theoretically possible to commit burglary without also committing assault. People v Graham, 127 A.D.2d 443, 515 N.Y.S.2d 126, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 42573 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987).

Defendant was not entitled to dismissal of second degree attempted assault charge in connection with his use of knife after raping victim since victim's testimony that defendant cut her leg while threatening to kill her unless she engaged in further sexual contact demonstrated requisite intent to inflict physical injury; merger doctrine (which precludes separate conviction for acts that comprise essential part of another substantive crime) was inapplicable. People v Hauver, 129 A.D.2d 889, 514 N.Y.S.2d 814, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 45572 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987).

Court did not err in refusing to charge jury that first degree assault was lesser included offense of attempted second degree murder since it is theoretically possible to commit attempted second degree murder without at same time committing first degree assault or second degree assault. People v Sims, 135 A.D.2d 591, 522 N.Y.S.2d 170, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52531 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987), app. denied, 72 N.Y.2d 1050, 534 N.Y.S.2d 949, 531 N.E.2d 669, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 6003 (N.Y. 1988).

Defendant's second degree assault conviction would be reversed as improper lesser included offense of second degree murder where court instructed jury to consider assault only in "relation to shooting of [victim] in the foot, which was not and did not cause death," for in light of undisputed medical testimony that victim was killed by shot to back, jury's acquittal of murder necessarily translated into rejection of prosecution's theory that defendant acted in concert with one or more shooters in shooting victim in back, and having been acquitted of act complained of in indictment, which indisputably occurred in manner alleged in indictment, defendant could not, under theory of lesser included offense, be charged with assault to foot, which, given jury's verdict, was act not found to have been component part of nor was concomitantly committed by same conduct which formed basis for offense charged in indictment. People v Nieves, 136 A.D.2d 250, 526 N.Y.S.2d 954, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3731 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1988).

Second degree kidnapping count could not be merged with second degree assault count where assault occurred only when victim attempted to flee. People v De Meo, 139 A.D.2d 758, 527 N.Y.S.2d 507, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4503 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 72 N.Y.2d 858, 532 N.Y.S.2d 508, 528 N.E.2d 898, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 3688 (N.Y. 1988).

Court erred by dismissing those counts of indictment charging defendant with attempted second degree murder and first and second degree assault on ground of insufficiency of grand jury evidence since there was sufficient evidence before grand jury to support lessor included offense of third degree assault. People v Mandel, 141 A.D.2d 852, 530 N.Y.S.2d 194, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7106 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Defendant was not entitled to dismissal of counts charging him with third degree assault and fourth degree grand larceny where those offenses were not inclusory concurrent counts of any other crimes charged—second degree robbery, second degree assault, and resisting arrest. People v Ross, 246 A.D.2d 561, 667 N.Y.S.2d 434, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 118 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 1012, 676 N.Y.S.2d 140, 698 N.E.2d 969, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 2089 (N.Y. 1998), app. dismissed, 92 N.Y.2d 985, 683 N.Y.S.2d 766, 706 N.E.2d 754, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4486 (N.Y. 1998).

Court properly charged attempted second degree assault as lesser included offense of attempted second degree murder where reasonable view of evidence supported conclusion that defendant committed lesser but not greater offense. People v Johnson, 263 A.D.2d 515, 691 N.Y.S.2d 922, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8095 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 824, 702 N.Y.S.2d 594, 724 N.E.2d 386, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 4187 (N.Y. 1999).

Charge of assault in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(9) against defendant, whose act of slamming her disabled child into the wooden portion of a couch resulted in the child's death, was dismissed as a lesser included offense under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 1.20(37) as defendant was also convicted of manslaughter in the first degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 125.20(4) People v Griffin, 48 A.D.3d 1233, 851 N.Y.S.2d 808, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1165 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 840, 859 N.Y.S.2d 399, 889 N.E.2d 86, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 1676 (N.Y. 2008).

Because the victim's restraint and asportation were so much the part of defendant's attempted robbery and assault of the victim under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 120.05(2), 110.00, 160.15(3) that those crimes could not have been committed without the acts comprising the kidnapping under N.Y. Penal Law § 135.20, the kidnapping conviction was precluded by the merger doctrine. People v Jacobs, 52 A.D.3d 1182, 859 N.Y.S.2d 541, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5216 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2008), app. denied, 11 N.Y.3d 926, 874 N.Y.S.2d 11, 2009 N.Y. LEXIS 445 (N.Y. 2009).

Conviction of second degree assault, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3), was reversed because the trial court refused to charge the lesser included offense of third degree obstructing governmental administration; the record contained evidence that a police officer who was kicked in the groin by defendant responded to another call after the incident, did not seek medical attention until he was directed to do so, declined medication, indicated that his pain was subsiding by the time he was discharged from the hospital a few hours after the incident, and that his discomfort over the next several days was vague. Under these circumstances, the jury could have found that defendant did not sustain a physical injury for purposes of second degree assault, and, thus, defendant was entitled to the requested charge down. People v Nisselbeck, 85 A.D.3d 1206, 923 N.Y.S.2d 801, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4510 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2011).

Defendant's conviction for unlawful imprisonment should have been dismissed pursuant to the doctrine of judicial merger because his brief "abduction" of the victim when defendant grabbed him and pulled him outside the dwelling at issue was merely a preliminary, preparatory, or concurrent action in relation to the ultimate crime of assault. People v James, 114 A.D.3d 1202, 980 N.Y.S.2d 645, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 751 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 22 N.Y.3d 1199, 986 N.Y.S.2d 420, 9 N.E.3d 915, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 1181 (N.Y. 2014).

Offenses of driving with a revoked license and second-degree assault have substantially different elements and statutory provisions defining such offenses are designed to prevent different kinds of evil. People v Durant, 88 Misc. 2d 731, 389 N.Y.S.2d 533, 1976 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2736 (N.Y. County Ct. 1976).

Offenses of failing to dim headlights, driving with revoked license, resisting arrest, second-degree assault and attempted murder, offenses arising out of incident that occurred when police officers stopped automobile in which defendant was riding, words were exchanged and scuffle between defendant and police officers ensued, were part of single criminal transaction and therefore joinable in a single prosecution. People v Durant, 88 Misc. 2d 731, 389 N.Y.S.2d 533, 1976 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2736 (N.Y. County Ct. 1976).

Defendant's second degree assault conviction under N.Y. Penal Law § 140.30(2) was not a lesser-included offense of first degree burglary under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(6), because the assault required proof of infliction of physical injury in furtherance of the underlying felony, which was not required for the burglary. People v Curella, 296 A.D.2d 578, 746 N.Y.S.2d 30, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7751 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2002).

An unlawful imprisonment count should have been dismissed because it merged with the second- and third-degree assault charges against a defendant, as: (1) the evidence showed that any restriction of the victim's movements was wholly incidental to the simultaneous commission of an assault; and, (2) the assault was not committed to further the unlawful imprisonment, as required by N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(6), but, any unlawful imprisonment was committed in furtherance of the assault; thus, because the county court should have dismissed the unlawful imprisonment count under the merger doctrine, there was no underlying felony to serve as the basis for a felony assault. People v Swansbrough, 22 A.D.3d 877, 802 N.Y.S.2d 777, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11164 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2005).

9. —Resisting arrest

The crime of resisting arrest, in violation of Penal Law § 205.30, is not a lesser included offense within the meaning of CPL § 1.20(37) of the crime of attempted assault in the second degree, Penal Law § 120.05(3), since the element of intentionally preventing an authorized arrest, which is necessary to establish the crime of resisting arrest, is not necessary to establish the crime of attempted assault in the second degree. People v Roberts, 99 A.D.2d 761, 471 N.Y.S.2d 680, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17136 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1984).

In a prosecution for second-degree assault, it was error to add a second count of resisting arrest as a lesser included offense but as a separate crime, where defendant was entitled to have the jury consider only the crimes for which he was indicted and lesser included offenses properly contained in the indictment, and where the second count of resisting arrest was not charged in the indictment; defendant's conviction for assault would not be reversed, however, even though the court did not charge resisting arrest as a lesser included offense of assault, since on the facts of the case resisting arrest was not a lesser included offense of second-degree assault. People v Starling, 101 A.D.2d 704, 475 N.Y.S.2d 689, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18266 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 63 N.Y.2d 680, 1984 N.Y. LEXIS 5617 (N.Y. 1984).

Resisting arrest is not lesser included offense of second degree assault as defined by CLS Penal § 120.05(3) since it is theoretically possible to commit such assault without at same time committing resisting arrest. People v Sargent, 136 A.D.2d 869, 524 N.Y.S.2d 528, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 537 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

Resisting arrest is not lesser included offense of second degree assault. People v Ranieri, 144 A.D.2d 1006, 534 N.Y.S.2d 287, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14553 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1988), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 895, 538 N.Y.S.2d 807, 535 N.E.2d 1347, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 1209 (N.Y. 1989), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 895,

538 N.Y.S.2d 807, 535 N.E.2d 1347, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 1211 (N.Y. 1989).

10. —Robbery

Second degree assault (Penal Law § 120.05, subd 2) is not a lesser included offense of second degree attempted robbery (Penal Law § 160.10, subd 2(a)) or within the meaning of CPL § 1.20, subd 37. People v Flores, 42 A.D.2d 431, 348 N.Y.S.2d 425, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3281 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1973).

Where it appeared that incident in back room of store where accomplice assaulted victims and appropriated a necklace was spontaneous and not related to original robbery plan, requisite mental culpability necessary to support defendant's conviction on additional counts of robbery in the second degree and of assault in the second degree was not established. People v Gwynn, 53 A.D.2d 565, 384 N.Y.S.2d 823, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13188 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1976).

Assault in the second degree was not a lesser included offense of robbery where defendant used gratuitous violence during the robbery. People v Reynolds, 53 A.D.2d 877, 385 N.Y.S.2d 337, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13707 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1976).

A conviction of assault in the second degree should not be dismissed as an inclusory concurrent count charging attempted robbery in the second degree pursuant to Penal Law § 160.10(2)(a), since, although when a verdict is comprised of conclusory concurrent counts a verdict of guilt on the greater count is deemed dismissal of every lesser count, assault in the second degree is not a lesser included offense of attempted robbery in the second degree in that both are class D felonies. People v Campbell, 86 A.D.2d 403, 450 N.Y.S.2d 210, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15728 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 57 N.Y.2d 684, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 4146 (N.Y. 1982).

In a prosecution for attempted robbery in the first degree, a conviction for second-degree assault would be reversed since second-degree assault is not a lesser included offense of first-degree robbery in that it is possible to commit first-degree robbery without having the intent to injure, which is the gravamen of second-degree assault. People v Camilloni, 92 A.D.2d 745, 461 N.Y.S.2d 80, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17069 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1983).

Assault in the second degree is an inclusory concurrent count of robbery in the second degree, and a guilty verdict of the greater offense required dismissal of the lesser offense. People v Wiley, 101 A.D.2d 818, 475 N.Y.S.2d 351, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18479 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 62 N.Y.2d 994, 1984 N.Y. LEXIS 8988 (N.Y. 1984).

Assault in second degree is not lesser included offense of attempted robbery in second degree. People v Walter R., 116 A.D.2d 673, 497 N.Y.S.2d 741, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 48175 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Charge of second degree assault was inclusory concurrent count of charge of second degree robbery, and guilty verdict on greater offense required dismissal of lesser offense. People v Dantzler, 123 A.D.2d 327, 506 N.Y.S.2d 220, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 60102 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Conviction of second degree assault would be reversed and count dismissed where defendant had also been convicted of second degree robbery since former is lesser included offense of latter. People v McGlynn, 129 A.D.2d 740, 514 N.Y.S.2d 500, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 45427 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 801, 522 N.Y.S.2d 119, 516 N.E.2d 1232, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19499 (N.Y. 1987).

Defendant's acquittal on second and third degree robbery charges did not negate any essential element of his second degree assault conviction, and thus verdicts were not repugnant. People v Fasano, 129 A.D.2d 1004, 514 N.Y.S.2d 306, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 45701 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 799, 522 N.Y.S.2d 117, 516 N.E.2d 1230, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19436 (N.Y. 1987).

Defendant charged with, inter alia, second degree robbery was improperly convicted of second degree assault allegedly committed during robbery, for once jury found him not guilty of second degree robbery, he could not be convicted of assault during robbery. People v Gillens, 138 A.D.2d 335, 526 N.Y.S.2d 460, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3295 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 72 N.Y.2d 859, 532 N.Y.S.2d 509, 528 N.E.2d 899, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 3729 (N.Y. 1988).

Count charging defendant with second degree assault was inclusory concurrent count of second degree robbery; thus, guilty verdict on greater offense required dismissal of lesser offense. People v Rogers, 139 A.D.2d 782, 527 N.Y.S.2d 528, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4509 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Defendant's second degree assault conviction under CLS Penal § 120.05(6) was not subject to dismissal as inclusory concurrent count of his first degree robbery conviction under CLS Penal § 160.15(3) since it is theoretically possible to use or threaten immediate use of dangerous instrument without also causing physical injury. People v Solomon, 141 A.D.2d 579, 529 N.Y.S.2d 188, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6331 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 72 N.Y.2d 913, 532 N.Y.S.2d 762, 528 N.E.2d 1235, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 2891 (N.Y. 1988).

Defendant's acquittal on first degree robbery counts under CLS Penal §§ 160.10(2) and 160.15(3) did not require his acquittal on second degree assault count under CLS Penal § 120.05(2) since elements of such offenses do not overlap. People v Brooks, 154 A.D.2d 940, 546 N.Y.S.2d 69, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13060 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 768, 551 N.Y.S.2d 910, 551 N.E.2d 111, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 4652 (N.Y. 1989).

Defendant's convictions of second degree assault would be reversed where he was also convicted of second degree robbery, of which second degree assault is lesser inclusory concurrent count. People v Brinson, 216 A.D.2d 900, 629 N.Y.S.2d 555, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7222 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 87 N.Y.2d 844, 638 N.Y.S.2d 603, 661 N.E.2d 1384, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 5083 (N.Y. 1995).

Defendant's conviction of lesser included offense of second degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.05(6) would be reversed and that count dismissed since he was convicted of second degree robbery under CLS Penal § 160.10(2)(a). People v Tucker, 221 A.D.2d 670, 634 N.Y.S.2d 218, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12421 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1995), app. denied, 87 N.Y.2d 978, 642 N.Y.S.2d 207, 664 N.E.2d 1270, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 997 (N.Y. 1996).

Defendant's conviction of second degree assault would be reversed, and that count of indictment would be dismissed, where that offense was inclusory concurrent count of crime of second degree robbery, of which defendant was also convicted. People v Ross, 246 A.D.2d 561, 667 N.Y.S.2d 434, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 118 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 1012, 676 N.Y.S.2d 140, 698 N.E.2d 969, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 2089 (N.Y. 1998), app. dismissed, 92 N.Y.2d 985, 683 N.Y.S.2d 766, 706 N.E.2d 754, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4486 (N.Y. 1998).

Because the count of the indictment charging defendant with second-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(6) was an inclusory, concurrent count of the second-degree robbery charge under N.Y. Penal Law § 160.10(2)(a) in the third count of the indictment, that assault count should have been dismissed. People v Maldonado, 46 A.D.3d 842, 847 N.Y.S.2d 649, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12878 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2007), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 842, 859 N.Y.S.2d 400, 889 N.E.2d 87, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 1730 (N.Y. 2008).

Defendant's conviction for assault in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(6) was vacated as that offense was an inclusory concurrent count under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 300.40(3)(b) of the crime of robbery in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 160.10(2)(a) of which defendant was also convicted. People v Bailey, 54 A.D.3d 419, 862 N.Y.S.2d 296, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6485 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 11 N.Y.3d 853, 872 N.Y.S.2d 76, 900 N.E.2d 559, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 4037 (N.Y. 2008).

Conviction of assault in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(6) had to be vacated as that count was an inclusory concurrent count of defendant's conviction of second degree robbery, N.Y. Penal Law § 160.10(2)(a). People v Mitchell, 59 A.D.3d 739, 874 N.Y.S.2d 226, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1415 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 12 N.Y.3d 918, 884 N.Y.S.2d 699, 912 N.E.2d 1080, 2009 N.Y. LEXIS 3086 (N.Y. 2009).

Defendant's conviction for second-degree assault had to be vacated and that count of the indictment dismissed because it was an inclusory concurrent count of second-degree robbery. People v Robinson, 117 A.D.3d 1099, 984 N.Y.S.2d 479, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2913 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 23 N.Y.3d 1059, 994 N.Y.S.2d 318, 18 N.E.3d 1139, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 2565 (N.Y. 2014), app. denied, 23 N.Y.3d 1066, 994 N.Y.S.2d 325, 18 N.E.3d 1146, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 2683 (N.Y. 2014).

Trial court properly denied defendant's motion to vacate his convictions for first- and second-degree robbery and second-degree assault because the victim testified to his account of the incident and the injuries he sustained when trying to retrieve his wallet from defendant, the police officers related how they apprehended defendant and found the victim's wallet and a box cutter in the same area, the assault conviction was not an inclusory concurrent count of the robbery convictions. People v Cruz, 152 A.D.3d 822, 57 N.Y.S.3d 753, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5313 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 30 N.Y.3d 1018, 93 N.E.3d 1215, 70 N.Y.S.3d 451, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 3852 (N.Y. 2017).

In a prosecution for second-degree assault in which a prima facie case of assault in the second degree was proved under Penal Law § 120.05(2), but in which the prosecutor in arguing a motion to dismiss the assault charge made reference to Penal Law § 120.05(6) and to assaults committed in the course of the commission of the felony, the assault charge would be dismissed in light of the court's dismissal for failure to prove a prima facie case of the underlying felonies of attempted robbery and attempted grand larceny, since the policy considerations behind confining the prosecutor to proving what he sets forth in his response to a demand for a bill of particulars are equally present when he makes a statement under oath in response to a pretrial motion, and both the court and the respondent in a juvenile delinquency proceeding may rely on such a response, not only as an argument on the motion, but as a truthful statement of the prosecutor's position; there was nothing in either the bill of particulars or the petition to lead the respondent or any reasonable person to believe that the prosecution intended to prove anything other than what was stated in the prosecutor's oral argument. In re Elliton J., 120 Misc. 2d 392, 466 N.Y.S.2d 214, 1983 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3724 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. 1983).

11. —Possession of weapon

Possession of weapon by defendant who chased another person through streets of the city and shot at him several times, wounding him in the left leg and right shoulder, constituted a crime separate and independent from the crime of assault, with which defendant was also charged and of which he was also convicted. People v Hubbard, 48 A.D.2d 941, 369 N.Y.S.2d 34, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10233 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

A weapons possession count is not a lesser included offense of an attempted assault in the first degree count; each crime constitutes a separable and statutorily prescribed wrong. People v Fournier, 70 A.D.2d 491, 421 N.Y.S.2d 368, 1979 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13075 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 48 N.Y.2d 1030, 425 N.Y.S.2d 1049, 402 N.E.2d 150 (N.Y. 1979).

A jury's verdict finding defendant guilty of assault in the second degree is not repugnant to its verdict acquitting him of criminal possession of a weapon in the second degree, since the elements of these crimes are not identical, nor are said verdicts inconsistent, since the jury may have concluded that the defendant possessed the weapon initially without any intent to use it unlawfully, but that in the course of the altercation, he decided to and did use the weapon offensively, that is, beyond the lawful bounds of self-defense; in any event, verdicts which are inconsistent but not repugnant are valid. People v Garcia, 72 A.D.2d 356, 424 N.Y.S.2d 697, 1980 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9690 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), aff'd, 52 N.Y.2d 716, 436 N.Y.S.2d 273, 417 N.E.2d 567, 1980 N.Y. LEXIS 2833 (N.Y. 1980).

Jury's verdict of guilty of criminal possession of weapon in second degree was not repugnant to its acquittal of charge of assault in second degree where (1) elements of criminal possession of weapon were described in jury instructions as requiring only that jury find that defendant possessed loaded firearm with intent to use it unlawfully against another, and (2) elements of assault in second degree were described as requiring finding of intent on part of defendant to cause physical injury to victim, that defendant in fact caused such injury, and that such injury was caused by means of deadly weapon; jury could have concluded that defendant possessed weapon with intent to use it unlawfully against another, yet jury might not have been sufficiently convinced that defendant did actual shooting, or it might have entertained doubts as to whether defendant fired gun accidentally, or with intent only to frighten victim. People v Harris, 128 A.D.2d 432, 512 N.Y.S.2d 823, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 44139 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1987).

People were not collaterally estopped from reprosecuting defendant for third degree weapon possession following his acquittal of second degree assault since issue of defendant's possession of weapon was not fully and finally litigated inasmuch as jury could have rationally based its acquittal on assault count on finding that victim failed to sustain physical injury and not on its conclusion that defendant did not possess weapon. People v Marmorato, 138 A.D.2d 410, 525 N.Y.S.2d 693, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2173 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 970, 529 N.Y.S.2d 82, 524 N.E.2d 436, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 1998 (N.Y. 1988).

In prosecution for second degree assault, evidence was sufficient to establish that complainant suffered physical injury within meaning of CLS Penal § 10.00(9) where he testified that he was beaten about his head and jaw, that his jaw was severely swollen, that he had lump on his head, and that he had blurred vision and headaches for several weeks after incident. People v Pike, 173 A.D.2d 649, 570 N.Y.S.2d 324, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7670 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 78 N.Y.2d 972, 574 N.Y.S.2d 952, 580 N.E.2d 424, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 4520 (N.Y. 1991).

Criminal possession of weapon is not lesser included offense of assault; possession of weapon constitutes offense separate and distinct from its use. People v Mitchell, 216 A.D.2d 863, 628 N.Y.S.2d 914, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7167 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 86 N.Y.2d 798, 632 N.Y.S.2d 512, 656 N.E.2d 611, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 4018 (N.Y. 1995).

12. Juveniles offenders

Child was properly adjudicated in Family Court to be juvenile delinquent where she responded to police officer's attempt to detain her on investigation of truancy with acts of resistance, including striking officer both before and after arrest, since, had acts been committed by adult, they would have constituted crimes of obstructing governmental administration, attempted second degree assault, and resisting arrest. In re Shannon B., 70 N.Y.2d 458, 522 N.Y.S.2d 488, 517 N.E.2d 203, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 18970 (N.Y. 1987).

Evidence supported finding that juvenile committed acts which, if committed by adult, would constitute second degree robbery and second degree assault where complainant testified that he was "hurting badly" as result of juvenile's attack and was confined to bed for one month, and hospital records established that complainant suffered soft-tissue damage on his abdominal walls, thus satisfying element of "physical injury" as defined by CLS Penal § 10.00. In re Sean C., 124 A.D.2d 583, 507 N.Y.S.2d 729, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 61892 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Evidence supported determination that juvenile committed act which, if committed by adult, would have constituted attempted second degree assault where evidence showed that complainant viewed juvenile's face at close range under good lighting conditions when juvenile hit complainant with baseball bat, and that juvenile was previously known to complainant, who had seen him many times before incident. In re Sherwin S., 143 A.D.2d 756, 533 N.Y.S.2d 466, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10070 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Evidence in juvenile delinquency proceeding was sufficient to support finding that juvenile committed act which, if committed by adult, would have constituted second degree assault where (1) juvenile testified that he struck fellow student during schoolroom argument after victim first hit him, (2) juvenile's own witness testified that, although victim made stabbing motion with pen toward juvenile, she did not touch him before he struck her, (3) both victim and teacher testified that victim did not strike juvenile, and (4) as result of juvenile's punch, victim suffered serious physical injury, including loss of tooth. In re Patrick W.,

Evidence supported finding that juvenile had committed acts which, if committed by adult, would have constituted second degree assault and fourth degree weapon possession, despite juvenile's contention that victim's description of occurrence revealed that she had no opportunity to observe identity of her assailant, where victim unequivocally testified that she observed juvenile shake open blade of box cutter and slash her arm. In re Judah J., 182 A.D.2d 621, 582 N.Y.S.2d 224, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5634 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1992).

Evidence was insufficient to show that 13-year-old juvenile engaged in conduct which, if he were adult, would constitute second degree assault based merely on facts that he punched complainant once in jaw with unspecified amount of force and caused complainant substantial pain for one week, and temporary slight displacement of jaw and clicking of jaw, especially since displacement and clicking were expected to be resolved by conservative treatment in 2-6 months; however, evidence was sufficient to show that juvenile engaged in conduct which, if he were adult, would constitute third degree assault. In re Andre D., 182 A.D.2d 1108, 582 N.Y.S.2d 890, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6989 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1992).

In juvenile delinquency proceeding based on acts that, if committed by adult, would be first, second, and third degree assault and second and third degree menacing, prompt hospital showup was not suggestive where juvenile did not prove that police officer told victim that he would be viewing individuals who had cut him. In re Lamar P., 255 A.D.2d 150, 682 N.Y.S.2d 127, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11746 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Evidence supported adjudication of delinquency based on juvenile's commission of acts that would be crimes of attempted second degree assault, fourth degree weapon possession, and weapon possession by person under 16, and his defense of justification was disproved, where he sought out victim, initiated altercation with her, struck her, and stabbed her several times with scissors. In re Altagracia L., 266 A.D.2d 51, 698 N.Y.S.2d 457, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11601 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 759, 706 N.Y.S.2d 80, 727 N.E.2d 577, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 103 (N.Y. 2000).

Finding of juvenile delinquency would be upheld, despite discrepancies in testimony of school safety officers and inconsistency between their testimony and that of defense witness, where resolution of credibility issues was province of Family Court as finder of fact, and evidence supported juvenile's commission of acts that, if committed by adult, would be second degree assault and resisting arrest. In re Lamarr C., 273 A.D.2d 379, 711 N.Y.S.2d 729, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7086 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2000).

Evidence supported finding of juvenile's delinquency where it could be reasonably inferred that she intended to cause physical injury when she hit victim repeatedly with chair leg, and thus she committed act that would be attempted second degree assault if committed by adult. In re Kyra C., 275 A.D.2d 678, 713 N.Y.S.2d 688, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9937 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

Juvenile was properly adjudicated delinquent where he committed acts that, if committed by adult, would be second degree assault, second degree menacing, and fourth degree weapon possession, and there was no reason to disturb court's decision to credit inculpatory part of victim's testimony. In re Nygee T., 281 A.D.2d 192, 721 N.Y.S.2d 528, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2212 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 716, 730 N.Y.S.2d 31, 754 N.E.2d 1114, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1906 (N.Y. 2001).

In juvenile delinquency proceedings in which it was alleged that the juvenile had committed acts which, if committed by an adult would have constituted assault in the first degree, assault in the second degree, and criminal possession of a weapon in the fourth degree, the District Attorney was not required to provide the juvenile with written notice of the fact that his identity was known to the complainant at the time of the crimes he allegedly committed or of the fact that the arresting officer was advised of the complainant's acquaintance with the juvenile, and therefore the juvenile's motion to preclude the identification testimony was denied. In re Darrold D., 111 Misc. 2d 189, 443 N.Y.S.2d 811, 1981 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3247 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. 1981).

Truant teenager may properly be charged with assault in second degree for his conduct in resisting officer's attempts to return him to school even though teenager's conduct, if directed against an attendance teacher trying to return him to school, would only constitute third degree assault. In re Julio R., 129 Misc. 2d 171, 492 N.Y.S.2d 912, 1985 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2733 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. 1985).

Where the family court found that defendant, a juvenile, committed acts that, if committed by an adult, would have constituted assault in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05, criminal possession of a weapon in the fourth degree in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 265.01, and menacing in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.14, the family court did not err in adjudicating defendant a juvenile delinquent; a preponderance of the evidence supported the family court's determination that defendant required supervision, treatment, or confinement pursuant to N.Y. Fam. Ct. Act § 352.1(1). In re Janay P., 11 A.D.3d 697, 783 N.Y.S.2d 293, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12495 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2004).

Because the complainant sustained a "physical injury" within the meaning of N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(9), the evidence was sufficient, beyond a reasonable doubt, to adjudicate a juvenile delinquent for committing the crimes of second- and third-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 120.05(3), 120.00(1). Matter of Ashley M., 35 A.D.3d 612, 825 N.Y.S.2d 748, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15013 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

13. "Physical injury" established, generally

Whether the element of substantial pain necessary to establish a charge of assault in the second degree has been proved is generally a question for the trier of fact, and where there was testimony that a bullet fired by defendant caused a 1.5 inch laceration of the victim's back, the result of which was still visible at the time of trial and that the victim returned to the hospital the day following the assault to have the wound redressed because it was oozing, and where the doctor testified that the injury could have caused pain, the jury could infer that the pain was substantial even though the victim gave no testimony concerning the degree of pain he felt, the subjective reaction of the victim being but one factor for the jury to consider. People v Rojas, 61 N.Y.2d 726, 472 N.Y.S.2d 615, 460 N.E.2d 1100, 1984 N.Y. LEXIS 4024 (N.Y. 1984).

Evidence was sufficient for jury to find that victim of second degree assault suffered "physical injury" within meaning of CLS Penal § 10.00 where defendant tripped victim, sat on him, kicked him in ribs, and cut him over eye and on hand with knife, victim testified that he was "in terrible pains" and had "a lot" of pain, victim did not go to hospital but bled "all over" and had to wear bandages on lacerations for 3 weeks, and at time of trial victim had "permanent spots" on his hand as result of cuts. People v Greene, 70 N.Y.2d 860, 523 N.Y.S.2d 458, 517 N.E.2d 1344, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19069 (N.Y. 1987).

Proof was sufficient to establish physical injury by "impairment of physical condition" in prosecution for second degree assault, and first and second degree robbery, where complainant testified that victim hit him on forehead with barrel of pistol, causing wound that bled profusely, photographs taken 2 weeks later showed ½ -inch scar over complainant's right eye, and scar was still visible at time of trial more than 4 months later. People v Tejeda, 78 N.Y.2d 936, 573 N.Y.S.2d 633, 578 N.E.2d 431, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 1007 (N.Y. 1991).

Jury at second degree assault trial was entitled to credit victim's testimony, regarding his sustaining "physical injury" or "substantial pain," that he lost sensation in his arm, that it became discolored and swollen, and that he suffered substantial pain as result of being struck with baseball bat; also, jury was entitled to believe victim's testimony that absence of medical intervention was due to his subjective ability to withstand pain and his lack of medical insurance. People v Guidice, 83 N.Y.2d 630, 612 N.Y.S.2d 350, 634 N.E.2d 951, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 1065 (N.Y. 1994).

In prosecution for second degree assault, allegation in amended bill of particulars that defendant's acts caused victim substantial head and shoulder pain did not preclude People from proving that defendant struck and damaged victim's eye. People v Wideman, 195 A.D.2d 582, 600 N.Y.S.2d 496, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7396 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 82 N.Y.2d 728, 602 N.Y.S.2d 826, 622 N.E.2d 327, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 3750 (N.Y. 1993).

Defendant's convictions for four counts of assault in the second degree in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2), (7), were supported by legally sufficient evidence; head injuries to inmate and correction officer were sufficient to establish that each victim sustained a physical injury to support two of the assault counts. People v Conseillant, 289 A.D.2d 1048, 735 N.Y.S.2d 298, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12808 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2001), app. denied, 98 N.Y.2d 674, 746 N.Y.S.2d 463, 774 N.E.2d 228, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 2450 (N.Y. 2002).

Plaintiff's § 1983 and common-law false arrest claims must fail, where it is undisputed that plaintiff grabbed off-duty police officer and threw him so that he fell to ground, and then struck officer in face so hard that he suffered black eye and headaches for 6 months, even though plaintiff was acquitted of assault charges at trial, because testimony and grand jury findings show presence of probable cause to arrest plaintiff for assault in violation of CLS Penal Law § 120.05. Campanaro v City of Rome, 999 F. Supp. 277, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4690 (N.D.N.Y. 1998).

Victim was whipped repeatedly all over his naked body with electrical extension cords and bound his arms and legs tightly, for long periods of time, with phone cable and speaker wire—the prosecutor, in describing the photographs of the victim taken at the time of the incident, noted that there were hundreds of marks all over his body—and when he evaluated and treated the child for his injuries at the hospital, the prosecution's medical doctor testified that he expected the scarring from the cuts and lacerations to be permanent, given the depth of the wounds. In light of this, it could not be said that the jury acted irrationally in concluding that the prosecutor had submitted sufficient evidence to prove, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the victim's injuries, caused by the inmate and his codefendant, caused serious and protracted disfigurement and therefore constituted serious physical injury as defined by N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(9). Howard v McGinnis, 632 F. Supp. 2d 253, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 59768 (W.D.N.Y. 2009).

14. —First Department

Sufficient evidence was presented of the "physical injury" element, N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(9), of second degree burglary, N.Y. Penal Law § 140.25, and second degree assault, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(6), because defendant's bite on the victim's finger had broken the fingernail and caused bleeding, the victim had testified that he suffered moderate pain, and the victim had sought medical treatment; defendant's motive was to escape the victim's hold and, thus, to cause as much pain as possible. People v Chiddick, 8 N.Y.3d 445, 834 N.Y.S.2d 710, 866 N.E.2d 1039, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 895 (N.Y. 2007).

Victim of second degree assault suffered "protracted impairment of health" within meaning of CLS Penal § 10.00 based on evidence that she suffered fractured humerus requiring several weeks of immobilization. People v Mohammed, 162 A.D.2d 367, 557 N.Y.S.2d 35, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7747 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 861, 560 N.Y.S.2d 1001, 561 N.E.2d 901, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 4005 (N.Y. 1990).

In trial for second degree robbery and second degree assault, jury's finding that victim sustained "physical injury" within meaning of CLS Penal § 10.00(9) was supported by evidence that defendant struck victim on forehead with pistol, resulting in wishbone-shaped scar about ½ inch in diameter. People v Tejeda, 165 A.D.2d 683, 560 N.Y.S.2d 142, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11015 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1990), aff'd, 78 N.Y.2d 936, 573 N.Y.S.2d 633, 578 N.E.2d 431, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 1007 (N.Y. 1991).

There was sufficient evidence of physical injury as defined in CLS Penal § 10.00(9) to support second degree assault conviction where (1) shot fired by defendant entered victim's body and exited within one inch of victim's spine causing 2 wounds, and (2) although physician testified that wounds were classified as superficial, victim testified that he was in great pain and suffered substantial discomfort such that, at time of trial, he still experienced pain in bending and certain movements. People v Ramos, 168 A.D.2d 352, 562 N.Y.S.2d 676, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15485 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1990), app. denied, 77 N.Y.2d 910, 569 N.Y.S.2d 942, 572 N.E.2d 625, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 1812 (N.Y. 1991).

Evidence of physical injury was sufficient to sustain conviction for second degree assault where victim suffered pain in neck, back, and leg for several days after she was dragged by defendant's automobile, she required medication, and she missed several days of work because she was unable to turn her head completely. People v Usman, 181 A.D.2d 628, 582 N.Y.S.2d 105, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5189 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 79 N.Y.2d 1055, 584 N.Y.S.2d 1023, 596 N.E.2d 421, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 2949 (N.Y. 1992).

In trial for second degree assault in which defendant admitted that he attacked victim with broken glass bottle, proof established that victim sustained physical injury within meaning of CLS Penal § 10.00(9) where victim sustained pair of 2-inch lacerations to his face which caused him to bleed profusely and required 22 stitches. People v John, 186 A.D.2d 442, 589 N.Y.S.2d 24, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12057 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1992), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 790, 594 N.Y.S.2d 736, 610 N.E.2d 409, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 455 (N.Y. 1993).

Evidence was sufficient to establish physical injury element of second degree burglary and second degree assault where victim testified that, as result of being punched in chest, he coughed blood for 3 weeks and was in pain and unable to work, and that even at time of trial he was unable to resume heavy work and occasionally suffered chest pains. People v Rivera, 187 A.D.2d 379, 590 N.Y.S.2d 197, 590 N.Y.S.2d 99, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13131 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1992), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 793, 594 N.Y.S.2d 740, 610 N.E.2d 413, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 535 (N.Y. 1993).

Evidence of substantial pain was sufficient to support conviction for second degree assault where (1) defendant was apprehended after she stole wallet from victim's shoulder bag in store, (2) during struggle with security guard, she bit him in hand and scratched his arm, (3) security guard testified to his substantial pain, that he was transported to hospital by ambulance, that tetanus shot was required, and that his use of arm was restricted for 2 weeks, and (4) responding police officer testified to his observation that bite mark was bleeding and that security guard was visibly upset about his injuries. People v Durant, 190 A.D.2d 615, 593 N.Y.S.2d 819, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1651 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 1013, 600 N.Y.S.2d 201, 616 N.E.2d 858, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 2427 (N.Y. 1993).

Evidence established physical injury in trial for second and third degree assault where victims, who were police officers, sustained partial shoulder separation and broken bone in hand. People v Lasanta, 203 A.D.2d 64, 609 N.Y.S.2d 606, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3591 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1994).

In trial for second degree assault and second degree robbery, proof established that victim suffered "physical injury" under CLS Penal § 10.00(9) where victim testified that scuffle with defendant resulted in his sustaining "split lip" and "swollen" mouth, lasting almost one week, and causing him "sharp" pain that made it difficult for him to eat, and that he also received cut over his eye which had moderate swelling and caused him "pain like a headache" which was "sharp." People v Dailey, 222 A.D.2d 278, 650 N.Y.S.2d 637, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12866 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1995), app. denied, 87 N.Y.2d 971, 642 N.Y.S.2d 201, 664 N.E.2d 1264, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 841 (N.Y. 1996).

"Physical injury" was sufficiently established in prosecution for second degree assault by evidence that victim was struck twice in head with stick, causing bruises and cut on his forehead that required 3 stitches and resulted in permanent scar. People v Rivera, 223 A.D.2d 514, 637 N.Y.S.2d 377, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 712 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 884, 645 N.Y.S.2d 458, 668 N.E.2d 429, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 2283 (N.Y. 1996).

Physical injury element was shown by victim's testimony, corroborated by 2 police witnesses, that she sustained red mark under her eye and suffered permanent hair loss as result of incident, and that she temporarily lost consciousness and felt "a lot of pain" in her back for over one week. People v Ganz, 224

A.D.2d 190, 637 N.Y.S.2d 136, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 817 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 878, 645 N.Y.S.2d 453, 668 N.E.2d 424, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 2153 (N.Y. 1996).

Serious physical injury element of second degree assault was shown by facts that victim's jaw was fractured in 2 places, left side of his jaw was shattered, and he lost 2 teeth, necessitating 2 separate surgical procedures, causing his jaw to be closed for at least 3 months. People v Martinez, 224 A.D.2d 254, 637 N.Y.S.2d 698, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1019 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 989, 649 N.Y.S.2d 396, 672 N.E.2d 622, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3635 (N.Y. 1996).

Legally sufficient proof of "physical injury" was adduced by second degree robbery and assault victim's testimony that, as result of incident, he sustained scrapes to his hip, knee, hand and arm, throbbing pain in his head and neck, pain in his foot, dizziness, and rise in blood pressure, and that he continued to have pain in his hip, leg and knee for 2 or 3 days. People v Kim, 225 A.D.2d 496, 639 N.Y.S.2d 813, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3281 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 987, 649 N.Y.S.2d 394, 672 N.E.2d 620, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3559 (N.Y. 1996).

Physical injury element of second degree assault was shown by fact that victim suffered inch-deep stab wound near kidneys, resulting in, inter alia, overnight hospitalization with use of catheter and intravenous fluids to relieve difficult urination. People v Amon-Ra, 239 A.D.2d 200, 657 N.Y.S.2d 409, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5159 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 901, 663 N.Y.S.2d 513, 686 N.E.2d 225, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3280 (N.Y. 1997).

Evidence that victim suffered razor-induced injuries that necessitated medical treatment, including suturing, was sufficient to demonstrate physical injury as element of second degree assault. People v Carter, 265 A.D.2d 211, 696 N.Y.S.2d 808, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10372 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 861, 704 N.Y.S.2d 536, 725 N.E.2d 1098, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 4402 (N.Y. 1999).

Evidence showed that victim sustained serious physical injury where he had multiple lacerations to his face and head that required sutures, including 2 large lacerations to his back that required more than dozen sutures each and that left permanent disfiguring scars. People v Edmonds, 267 A.D.2d 19, 699 N.Y.S.2d 54, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12404 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 862, 704 N.Y.S.2d 537, 725 N.E.2d 1099, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 4432 (N.Y. 1999).

Element of physical injury required for conviction of second degree robbery and second degree assault was proved by testimony that officer was punched hard in face, causing swelling and tearing of eyes and requiring application of ice packs, and that, for about one week, officer had difficulty reading and sleeping and needed pain medication. People v Rollins, 273 A.D.2d 159, 712 N.Y.S.2d 7, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7502 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 938, 721 N.Y.S.2d 614, 744 N.E.2d 150, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 4097 (N.Y. 2000).

In prosecution for second degree assault, element of physical injury was proved where jury could have reasonably concluded that victim's bloody stab wounds, which required stitching and produced scars, caused both impairment of physical condition and substantial pain. People v Rivers, 281 A.D.2d 342, 722 N.Y.S.2d 520, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3201 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 906, 730 N.Y.S.2d 804, 756 N.E.2d 92, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2919 (N.Y. 2001).

There was sufficient evidence to conclude that a victim suffered "physical injury" within the meaning of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2) because (1) the victim testified that when defendant struck him on the head with a revolver, he temporarily lost consciousness and awoke bleeding and in pain; (2) the physician and hospital records established that the victim's head was cut and that staples were used to close the wound; and (3) the victim further testified that when he woke the next morning, his jaw was swollen, his face was numb, and he had difficulty eating. People v Samba, 97 A.D.3d 411, 948 N.Y.S.2d 58, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5242 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2012), app. denied, 20 N.Y.3d 1065, 962 N.Y.S.2d 616, 985 N.E.2d 926, 2013 N.Y. Defendant was properly convicted of second-degree assault because the victim suffered "physical injury," defendant's request for a charge on justification was properly denied inasmuch as there was nothing in the record to suggest that he was surrounded and/or that the victim brandished a knife, defendant's absence from the midtrial discussion of the facts underlying his prior conviction did not deprive him of an "opportunity for meaningful input" since the information imparted to the court and counsel, in defendant's absence, was specifically ruled on by the court in defendant's presence, and after defendant was informed of the information in an off-the-record conversation with his attorney, he did not testify. 15. —Second Department Evidence sustained second degree assault conviction although victim did not describe his pain since his testimony that pain lasted 2-3 weeks established its severity; furthermore, fact that he was dragged by his legs down flight of stairs while being punched provided basis for inference that pain was substantial. People v Hope, 128 A.D.2d 638, 512 N.Y.S.2d 885, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 44331 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Victim who was struck in face by defendant suffered "physical injury" within meaning of CLS Penal § 10.00 where he sustained swelling below his eye, was diagnosed as suffering from myalgia, required 5 days' bed rest and application of warm compresses and muscle relaxant, experienced throbbing pain for 2 to 3 days, and missed 4 days of work; thus, second degree assault conviction was proper. People v Sherrod, 132 A.D.2d 683, 518 N.Y.S.2d 53, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49225 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Evidence of 72-year-old victim's physical injury was sufficient to sustain second degree assault charge where victim testified that she still felt pain in her arm 6 weeks after incident. In re Jaja E., 134 A.D.2d 588, 521 N.Y.S.2d 490, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50796 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Evidence was sufficient to show that complainant sustained "physical injury," and to support conviction of second degree assault, where it was shown that defendant punched and kicked complainant in shoulder, ribs and legs, complainant received medical treatment immediately after attack, complainant's face was swollen, he had black eye and experienced pain, and he missed work for 3 weeks. People v Singleton, 140 A.D.2d 388, 527 N.Y.S.2d 867, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4678 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Evidence was sufficient to establish that victim suffered "physical injury" in prosecution for second degree robbery and second degree assault where (1) victim testified, inter alia, that defendant had cut him in shoulder and he did not go to work next day, (2) police officer stated that he saw cut "possibly two inches maybe two and a half inches, long" on victim's right shoulder 3 days after crime, and (3) second police officer stated that he saw cut on victim's right shoulder 5 days after crime. People v Ball, 140 A.D.2d 447, 528 N.Y.S.2d 149, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5052 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 72 N.Y.2d 954, 534 N.Y.S.2d 668, 531 N.E.2d 300, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 4011 (N.Y. 1988).

Evidence was sufficient to establish that police officer attacked by defendant suffered physical injury within meaning of CLS Penal §§ 10.00(9) and 120.05(3) where officer testified (1) that, as result of defendant punching him, his nose became reddened and bloody and caused him to be absent from work for 2 days, (2) that pain persisted for few days, and (3) that he sought medical treatment at local hospital where his nose was X-rayed. People v Lundquist, 151 A.D.2d 505, 542 N.Y.S.2d 295, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7393 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 849, 546 N.Y.S.2d 1014, 546 N.E.2d 197, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 3910 (N.Y. 1989).

In trial for second degree assault and second degree robbery, victim's testimony was sufficient to establish physical injury where she stated that she suffered physical pain for few days after incident as result of swollen glands from being choked and having chains pulled from around her neck, and from being seized by her neck and thrown down stairs. People v Vaughn, 155 A.D.2d 566, 547 N.Y.S.2d 587, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14224 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Proof established that victim sustained physical injury as defined in CLS Penal § 10.00(9) so as to support second degree assault conviction where (1) defendant hit victim with his fist on side of her face and around her eye, (2) victim testified that whole side of her head was "killing" her and that pain continued for about one week, and (3) eyewitness testified that, after assault, victim was crying and had bruises on her face. People v Nix, 156 A.D.2d 722, 549 N.Y.S.2d 476, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16450 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 870, 553 N.Y.S.2d 302, 552 N.E.2d 881, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 856 (N.Y. 1990).

Second degree assault conviction for closing car window on arresting officer's arm would be affirmed where officer's testimony regarding extent and duration of pain, as well as his testimony concerning limitation of use and discoloration of arm, sufficed to show that he suffered "physical injury" as contemplated by CLS Penal § 10.00(9). People v Campbell, 157 A.D.2d 738, 550 N.Y.S.2d 33, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 493 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1990).

Police officer sustained physical injury within meaning of CLS Penal § 10.00(9) in assault by defendant where (1) officer testified that defendant choked him until he felt dizzy and scratched his neck and face, (2) officer further testified that he suffered very bad sore throat and sought emergency room treatment, he radioed station house to report incident and had to repeat himself several times to be heard, he lost his voice several times over next few days, and he could not eat solid foods for several days, and (3) another officer testified that injured officer still could not eat solid foods 3 days after assault. People v Daniels, 159 A.D.2d 631, 553 N.Y.S.2d 30, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2971 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 786, 559 N.Y.S.2d 992, 559 N.E.2d 686, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 2660 (N.Y. 1990).

Evidence at trial for first degree burglary and second degree assault that defendant threw 10-inch-long knife at victim, striking her in hand, forearm and chest, and requiring 7 stitches, supported finding by jury that pain suffered by her was substantial, and that she suffered "physical injury" under CLS Penal § 10.00. People v Sutton, 161 A.D.2d 612, 555 N.Y.S.2d 187, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5360 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 866, 560 N.Y.S.2d 1006, 561 N.E.2d 906, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 4125 (N.Y. 1990).

In trial for second degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.05(2), evidence supported jury's finding that victim suffered "physical injury" within meaning of CLS Penal § 10.00(9), since victim's vision in his left eye was impaired as result of assault. People v Goode, 179 A.D.2d 676, 578 N.Y.S.2d 611, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 246 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 79 N.Y.2d 1001, 584 N.Y.S.2d 456, 594 N.E.2d 950, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 2700 (N.Y. 1992).

In prosecution for, inter alia, second degree assault, evidence was sufficient to establish that victim suffered "physical injury" within meaning of CLS Penal § 10.00(9) where, as result of beating with metal handle of cane on head and face, victim bled profusely from head and face, sustained abrasion and swelling on right rear portion of skull, sustained large swelling and was diagnosed as having possible fracture near left eye, was given ice pack and medication, and subsequently had to wear corrective lenses as result of incident. People v Branch, 181 A.D.2d 902, 582 N.Y.S.2d 26, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5237 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 80 N.Y.2d 828, 587 N.Y.S.2d 913, 600 N.E.2d 640, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 1971 (N.Y. 1992).

Evidence was sufficient to establish that 2 court officers suffered "physical injury" within meaning of CLS Penal § 10.00(9) so as to support convictions for 2 counts of second degree assault where first officer testified that both of his elbows were swollen, that he had one-inch laceration on left elbow, that both of his knees were swollen and discolored, that he had bruise on left shin that was bleeding, that he was treated at hospital emergency room and by orthopedic doctor for injuries to his knees, that he missed 3 days of work, and that he suffered from pain for 3 weeks, and second officer testified that he suffered scratches on his hands, bruises on his arms and shin, and swollen ankle, that he was treated by emergency medical technician, and that his ankle remained swollen and tender for 3 to 4 days after incident. People v Soto, 184 A.D.2d 673, 584 N.Y.S.2d 877, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8075 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 80 N.Y.2d 910, 588 N.Y.S.2d 835, 602 N.E.2d 243, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 3741 (N.Y. 1992).

Evidence was sufficient to establish "physical injury" element of second degree assault in support of delinquency adjudication stemming from juvenile's participation in stealing car and endangering life of police officer, who was hit by car, propelled onto hood, carried on hood as vehicle proceeded at high speed, and eventually thrown to pavement when vehicle swerved, where (1) officer testified that he experienced extreme pain and was admitted to hospital for 3 days, (2) hospital records documented complaints of pain and noted swelling of ankles, cerebral hemorrhage, multiple contusions, concussion, dizziness and back pain, and (3) officer also testified that he continued to experience back problems necessitating bi-weekly visits to chiropractor. In re Effrin G., 185 A.D.2d 812, 586 N.Y.S.2d 313, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9829 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1992), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 705, 595 N.Y.S.2d 399, 611 N.E.2d 300, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 265 (N.Y. 1993).

Physical injury element of second degree assault was established where complainant testified that as result of beating administered by defendant, she continued to suffer pain in her left arm at time of trial, nearly 2 years after crime. People v Machado, 188 A.D.2d 665, 591 N.Y.S.2d 509, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14595 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1992), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 888, 597 N.Y.S.2d 950, 613 N.E.2d 982, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 1474 (N.Y. 1993).

In second degree assault trial, evidence established that officer struck by defendant suffered physical injury where officer testified (1) that he became dizzy from blow and was unable to drive his vehicle for 20 minutes, and that he was prescribed pain medication for throbbing in his head, (2) that he missed work and suffered stiffness in his neck and pounding in his head for 2 to 3 weeks, and (3) that bump on his head swelled from size of golfball to size of half of softball. People v Coker, 190 A.D.2d 814, 593 N.Y.S.2d 857, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1452 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 1012, 600 N.Y.S.2d 200, 616 N.E.2d 857, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 2405 (N.Y. 1993).

Evidence was sufficient to establish physical injury element of second degree assault where (1) victim testified that she received multiple knife wounds and that she suffered "a lot of pain," (2) People submitted hospital records regarding injuries, and (3) victim exhibited scars from attack to jury. People v Easterling, 191 A.D.2d 579, 594 N.Y.S.2d 805, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2294 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1993).

Evidence was sufficient to establish that police officers suffered physical injuries within meaning of CLS Penal § 10.00(9) during assaults by defendant where each officer missed several days of work as result of injuries sustained, each received medical attention for injuries, and each suffered pain. People v Morgan, 191 A.D.2d 649, 595 N.Y.S.2d 237, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2650 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 1077, 601 N.Y.S.2d 597, 619 N.E.2d 675, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 2869 (N.Y. 1993).

Evidence of physical injury to victim was sufficient to support defendant's convictions of second degree robbery and second and third degree assault where (1) defendant and 2 others accosted slightly built, 63-year-old victim from behind, knocked and punched him to ground and proceeded to swing him around by his belt, slamming him into ground and hitting and kicking him about face and chest, and (2) victim's eyes were blackened and swollen, he was bleeding and complained of chest pain when admitted to hospital, and one eyewitness described victim as looking like "Rocky." People v Butler, 192 A.D.2d 543, 596 N.Y.S.2d 93, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3405 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 82 N.Y.2d 715, 602 N.Y.S.2d 812, 622 N.E.2d 313, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 3418 (N.Y. 1993).

Evidence was sufficient to establish physical injury element of second degree assault where victim, who was police officer, suffered sharp burning pain in knee, had difficulty on walking, missed 3 days of work, and was advised to keep knee elevated and to take medication to relieve pain. People v Piersa, 196 A.D.2d 896, 602 N.Y.S.2d 155, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8753 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 82 N.Y.2d 901, 610 N.Y.S.2d 168, 632 N.E.2d 478, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 5078 (N.Y. 1993).

Evidence was sufficient to establish physical injury element of second degree assault where (1) defendant struck victim, who was parole officer, on chin, wrist, hand, elbow and forearm, (2) officer suffered from extreme pain, and his forearm was bruised, (3) officer's range of motion was limited in his forearm and neck, he could not hold weapon and he missed one week of work, and (4) officer sought medical treatment and was given medication and neck brace. People v Simmons, 196 A.D.2d 900, 602 N.Y.S.2d 154, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8757 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1993), app. denied, 82 N.Y.2d 931, 610 N.Y.S.2d 183, 632 N.E.2d 493, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 5343 (N.Y. 1994).

Evidence sustained jury's finding that police officer victim suffered "physical injury" within purview of CLS Penal § 10.00(9), and thus supported second degree assault conviction under CLS Penal § 120.05, where (1) at time of his arrest, defendant kicked officer, knocking him to ground, (2) officer landed on his knees, which became bruised and swollen and required immediate medical attention, (3) officer took prescribed pain medication and missed 9 days of work, and (4) at time of trial (14 months after incident), officer still experienced pain in knees. People v Daniels, 199 A.D.2d 332, 605 N.Y.S.2d 106, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11862 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1993), app. denied, 83 N.Y.2d 804, 611 N.Y.S.2d 140, 633 N.E.2d 495, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 487 (N.Y. 1994).

Evidence of victim's physical injury was sufficient to sustain defendant's conviction of second degree assault where victim (police officer) testified that he went to hospital to have injuries treated, that he missed 2 days of work because of injuries, and that he still had problems with his hand at time of trial 10 months after defendant resisted arrest. People v Curry, 199 A.D.2d 528, 605 N.Y.S.2d 410, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12268 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1993), app. denied, 83 N.Y.2d 870, 613 N.Y.S.2d 131, 635 N.E.2d 300, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 1918 (N.Y. 1994).

Evidence was sufficient to establish "physical injury" element of second degree assault by virtue of injury to officer's hand in course of struggle with defendant where (1) hand was swollen, black and blue, and stiff, (2) officer sought medical treatment, (3) injury was painful, and (4) officer was not able to return to work until 4 days after incident. People v Sheppard, 202 A.D.2d 701, 609 N.Y.S.2d 318, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2932 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 83 N.Y.2d 1007, 616 N.Y.S.2d 488, 640 N.E.2d 156, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 3265 (N.Y. 1994).

In trial for second degree burglary and second and third degree assault, evidence established element of physical injury where supervising nurse who was attacked by defendant testified that she suffered substantial pain and that pain lasted over several months. People v Ayuso, 204 A.D.2d 472, 614 N.Y.S.2d 162, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4780 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 83 N.Y.2d 964, 616 N.Y.S.2d 16, 639 N.E.2d 756, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 2351 (N.Y. 1994).

Indeterminate sentence of imprisonment of 5 to 15 years imposed for second degree assault was illegal since maximum sentence for that offense committed before October 1, 1995 was $2^1/_3$ to 7 years. People v Bates, 233 A.D.2d 937, 649 N.Y.S.2d 878, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13479 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1996).

In second degree assault trial, jury could reasonably have inferred that police officer suffered substantial pain and impairment of his physical condition when kicked in chest by defendant where officer had black and blue marks and required medical treatment including application of ice packs and use of pain relievers. People v Belk, 241 A.D.2d 552, 661 N.Y.S.2d 239, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8146 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 938, 664 N.Y.S.2d 756, 687 N.E.2d 653, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3736 (N.Y. 1997).

Sufficient evidence of a physical injury to support a conviction for assault in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05 was presented because the victim testified that she sustained a cut to her ear which caused bleeding as well as bruising on her face after defendant struck her head with a television remote control; "substantial pain" under N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(9) was demonstrated by testimony that the victim experienced pain for two weeks. People v Krotoszynski, 43 A.D.3d 450, 840 N.Y.S.2d 627, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9065 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 9 N.Y.3d 962, 848 N.Y.S.2d 31, 878 N.E.2d 615, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 3664 (N.Y. 2007).

Because defendant caused physical injury to a police officer with the intent to prevent the officer from performing a lawful duty, and because defendant also caused serious physical injury to a bystander in the course of and in furtherance of the commission of a felony or immediate flight therefrom, defendant was properly convicted of first- and second-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 120.05(3), 120.10(4). People v Jenkins, 49 A.D.3d 780, 853 N.Y.S.2d 629, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2590 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 935, 862 N.Y.S.2d 342, 892 N.E.2d 408, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 2421 (N.Y. 2008).

Legally insufficient evidence was presented to show that a victim suffered a physical injury due to substantial pain as defined by N.Y. Penal Law §§ 10.00(9), 160.10(2), 120.05(6) based on evidence that defendant repeatedly banged the victim's head on her car door, causing her to sustain a black eye and bruising on her face, neck, and shoulders and to experience pain for almost a week; defendant was properly convicted of robbery in the second degree and assault in the second degree. People v Valencia, 50 A.D.3d 1163, 856 N.Y.S.2d 250, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3907 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 11 N.Y.3d 795, 866 N.Y.S.2d 622, 896 N.E.2d 108, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 3803 (N.Y. 2008).

Where the victim was directed by defendant to get back into the car, threatened and told to obtain money for the defendant and then driven to his grandfather's house and to get money for the defendant, and these acts were committed after an assault was completed, they constituted a separate crime and the merger doctrine was inapplicable. People v Howard, 305 A.D.2d 869, 761 N.Y.S.2d 115, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5782 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 583, 764 N.Y.S.2d 393, 796 N.E.2d 485, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 3091 (N.Y. 2003).

Defendant cut the complainant's hand with a butcher knife and the complainant suffered substantial pain and thus sustained a physical injury; the treating physician testified that the complainant was diagnosed with a laceration of the hand that was deep enough to penetrate into muscle of the hand, and as the People established substantial pain, they were not required to present evidence of impairment. People v Jaber, 172 A.D.3d 1227, 101 N.Y.S.3d 371, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4001 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 34 N.Y.3d 933, 133 N.E.3d 403, 109 N.Y.S.3d 703, 2019 N.Y. LEXIS 2812 (N.Y. 2019).

Verdict convicting defendant of assault in the first and second degree, Penal Law §§ 120.10(3), 120.05(4), for dropping bricks into traffic from an overpass, causing the victim's windshield to shatter and glass to enter her eye, was against the weight of the evidence because there was a lack of medical testimony to explain the seriousness of the eye injury; the convictions of were reduced to a conviction of assault in the third degree under Penal Law § 10.00(9). People v Palant, 176 A.D.3d 872, 111 N.Y.S.3d 361, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7249 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2019).

16. —Third Department

In a prosecution for two counts of assault and one count of unlawful imprisonment, defendant's motion to dismiss the entire indictment for failure to prove that the victim suffered a serious physical injury was properly denied since the victim's loss of two front teeth was a permanent and serious injury within the meaning of Penal Law § 120.05. People v Howard, 79 A.D.2d

1064, 435 N.Y.S.2d 399, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9987 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981).

Evidence supported jury finding that defendant inflicted "physical injury" with his boots, within meaning of CLS Penal § 10.00, where testimony elicited from 2 nurses (including victim) and 2 physicians provided basis for concluding, inter alia, that victim suffered painful bruising of abdomen, back, thighs, and hips due to being kicked, that she passed blood in her urine as result of mauling, and that she needed emergency treatment and was unable to return to work, all because of battering received, of which kicking was integral part. People v O'Hara, 124 A.D.2d 895, 508 N.Y.S.2d 348, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 62223 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

Physical injury element of second degree assault was established by victim's testimony as to sharp pain he suffered for months and by hospital records revealing that 11 stitches were necessary to close various stab wounds inflicted by defendant. People v Robinson, 141 A.D.2d 979, 530 N.Y.S.2d 857, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7225 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 789, 536 N.Y.S.2d 749, 533 N.E.2d 679 (N.Y. 1988), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 925, 539 N.Y.S.2d 310, 536 N.E.2d 639, 1989 N.Y. Court properly denied motion to dismiss indictment for assault in second degree on defendant's assertion that state failed to present prima facie evidence of physical injury where victim testified that he was in great deal of pain, was nauseated, had headache, and took analgesic medication for number of days, and doctor testified that injuries sustained by victim could cause pain and that victim's physical condition was impaired. People v Bouyea, 142 A.D.2d 757, 531 N.Y.S.2d 129, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7251 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

Physical injury element of second degree assault was established by proof that victim (police officer) experienced "substantial pain" for which he sought medical attention, received medication, and as a result of which he lost time from work. People v Douglas, 143 A.D.2d 452, 532 N.Y.S.2d 446, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9138 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

Evidence was sufficient to prove that victim sustained physical injury within meaning of CLS Penal § 120.05(7) where victim testified that he received 2 puncture wounds to his back, one to his abdomen, and 2 to his arm, for which he sought medical treatment at hospital and which caused him pain thereafter, and disabled him from certain activities. People v O'Quinn, 147 A.D.2d 736, 537 N.Y.S.2d 626, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 759 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Evidence of physical injury was sufficient to support defendant's conviction of second degree assault where (1) trial testimony contained explicit description of effects of victim's injuries which included tooth aches, pain on chewing, sore and swollen jaw, pain when talking, excruciating pain on moving his head, and sharp pain down middle of his back, and (2) victim was treated at hospital, and then by physician, took Tylenol with codeine for pain, and missed about 2 weeks' work. People v Shepard, 165 A.D.2d 932, 561 N.Y.S.2d 96, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11275 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 1024, 565 N.Y.S.2d 774, 566 N.E.2d 1179, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 4896 (N.Y. 1990).

Evidence was sufficient to establish that victim suffered substantial pain or impairment of physical condition constituting physical injury within meaning of CLS Penal § 10.00(9) as required for conviction of assault in second degree under CLS Penal § 120.05(2) where victim bled from his neck, felt pain for couple of days, required medical attention, and was scarred by puncture wound. People v McEachin, 166 A.D.2d 814, 562 N.Y.S.2d 816, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12804 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 1023, 565 N.Y.S.2d 773, 566 N.E.2d 1178, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 4863 (N.Y. 1990).

Evidence was sufficient to establish physical injury element of second degree assault where victim, police officer, sustained injury to his thumb necessitating medical treatment and subsequent immobilization resulting in temporary loss of use, and officer testified that he experienced throbbing pain for several days and tenderness for several weeks. People v Fortuna, 188 A.D.2d 683, 591 N.Y.S.2d 212, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13548 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 839, 595 N.Y.S.2d 738, 611 N.E.2d 777, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 854 (N.Y. 1993).

Second degree robbery and second degree assault convictions were sustained by evidence that victim suffered physical injury within meaning of CLS Penal § 10.00(9) where (1) victim testified that he was struck on head, that he felt sharp pain and was rendered unconscious, and that he endured throbbing in his head which became worse over time, and (2) victim sustained cuts, swelling, and scarring, as well as cyst-like knot over ear, which was clotted with blood and had to be lanced and drained. People v Jacobs, 188 A.D.2d 897, 592 N.Y.S.2d 802, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14632 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 887, 597 N.Y.S.2d 949, 613 N.E.2d 981, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 1448 (N.Y. 1993), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 890, 597 N.Y.S.2d 952, 613 N.E.2d 984 (N.Y. 1993).

Physical injury element of second degree assault was established where (1) victim received cuts to face, and his glasses were broken, (2) he was taken to emergency room where he received shots, x-rays were taken, and he was treated by several physicians, (3) he testified that he was still suffering from back and neck pain and numbness in his leg, for which he was taking medication, more than one year after incident, and (4) he stated that he was having difficulty sleeping and could not sit or drive car for long period of time without difficulty. People v Abrams, 203 A.D.2d 723, 611 N.Y.S.2d 313, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4108 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 83 N.Y.2d 963, 616 N.Y.S.2d 16, 639 N.E.2d 756, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 2335 (N.Y. 1994).

Physical injury element of second degree assault was established where (1) victim suffered contusions to his shoulder and elbow with swelling and substantial pain, (2) he immediately sought medical attentions, (3) his physician directed him to ice-pack area, ordered use of sling to immobilize arm and shoulder, prescribed narcotic pain killer, and excused him from work for several days, (4) victim testified that pain necessitated use of prescription medication, particularly at night, and required use of sling for 4 ½ days, (5) he missed several days of work, and (6) pain continued in significant manner for 2 weeks during which time he did not have full use of his arms. People v Judkins, 210 A.D.2d 523, 620 N.Y.S.2d 503, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11877 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1994), app. denied, 85 N.Y.2d 939, 627 N.Y.S.2d 1001, 651 N.E.2d 926, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 1923 (N.Y. 1995).

Physical injury element of second degree assault was shown by police officer's testimony that as result of altercation he received cut lip, abrasions, "choke marks" around his throat, scraped knee, and severe back pain from being bent backward during attack, and that he suffered substantial pain and muscle tightness for 7 days as result thereof, requiring him to take pain relievers and hot baths. People v Cancer, 232 A.D.2d 875, 649 N.Y.S.2d 492, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11267 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 984, 656 N.Y.S.2d 742, 678 N.E.2d 1358, 1997 N.Y. Evidence showed that, using dangerous instrument (scissors), defendant intentionally caused physical injury to victim consisting of physical impairment to her finger where victim testified that, after becoming upset with her, defendant through scissors at her causing laceration to finger on her hand which she was using to shield herself, he thereafter chased her and stabbed her in leg with scissors, cut on finger resulted in visible scar and she lost feeling to tip portion of finger which persisted as of time of trial, 2 years and 8 months later, and her family physician testified that he treated her about 4 days later and opined that she had sustained some nerve damage to finger and that injury was consistent with injury inflicted by scissors. People v West, 271 A.D.2d 806, 708 N.Y.S.2d 478, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4438 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 893, 715 N.Y.S.2d 386, 738 N.E.2d 790, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3392 (N.Y. 2000).

Victim suffered physical injury sufficient to support conviction of second degree assault where (1) he testified that he chipped 2 teeth as result of being kicked in mouth, sprained ankle from slipping while trying to run away from defendant, and received lacerations on his head and back inflicted by box cutter and requiring sutures in hospital emergency room, (2) witness and investigating officer each saw victim bleeding from back of his head, (3) officer described head wound as being 2 to 3 inches long and deep, and (4) officer also saw lacerations on victim's back, abrasions on his mouth, and cracked teeth. People v Shannon, 273 A.D.2d 505, 708 N.Y.S.2d 199, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6446 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 892, 715 N.Y.S.2d 385, 738 N.E.2d 789, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3269 (N.Y. 2000).

In prosecution for second degree assault of parole officer, evidence was legally sufficient to establish physical injury where parole officer testified that defendant repeatedly struck him with steel rod, at one point jabbing it into his eye socket such that he almost lost his eyeball, and that he sustained painful blows and bruises to his chest and shoulder. People v Colantonio, 277 A.D.2d 498, 715 N.Y.S.2d 764, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11134 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 781, 725 N.Y.S.2d 645, 749 N.E.2d 214, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1154 (N.Y. 2001).

Finding of physical injury in second degree assault case was supported by victim's testimony that punch to head caused abrasion-type cut on his cheek and deep bone bruise that was extremely sore for more than 10 days, and that he had headaches and required Advil daily for more than one week, and by medical testimony confirming his subjective complaints. People v Bernier, 279 A.D.2d 701, 719 N.Y.S.2d 186, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 287 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 797, 726 N.Y.S.2d 375, 750 N.E.2d 77, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1536 (N.Y. 2001).

In trial for second degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.05(7), People established that victim, who was stabbed 6 times in fight with defendant, sustained requisite "personal injury" where correction officer testified that victim was bleeding from his wounds after fight and was sent to infirmary for medical attention, photographs of victim's wounds were introduced as evidence, and victim testified that his injuries left him stiff and sore for nearly one month. People v Reynolds, 283 A.D.2d 771, 728 N.Y.S.2d 503, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5189 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 866, 730 N.Y.S.2d 41, 754 N.E.2d 1124, 2001 N.Y. Proof that defendant's victim suffered serious physical injury when he cut her neck with a knife was sufficient to support his conviction for second-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(4); the record contained photographs of the wounds taken shortly after the attack which were fairly characterized as seriously disfiguring under N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(10), and as to whether the condition was protracted, the appellate court deferred to the county court because, in addition to hearing testimony that the cuts were 13 centimeters in length and severed both nerves and muscles, it had the opportunity to view the scars. People v Coon, 34 A.D.3d 869, 823 N.Y.S.2d 566, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12984 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

Trier of fact's finding that a victim suffered a physical injury under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 160.10(2)(a), 120.05(6), and 10.00(9) was supported by evidence that: (1) the victim's back was injured when the vehicle operated by defendant pulled and twisted the victim, (2) later in the day, when the victim was interviewed by police, the victim stated that the victim's back condition was very uncomfortable and recalled having difficulty sitting in the chair during the interview, (3) the victim described a strained and twisted back, and sought medical care for the condition the next day, and (4) the victim described continuing pain for several days to such a degree that during that time the victim had difficulty caring for the victim's three-year-old child, stopped the victim's regular exercise routine, and experienced problems trying to sleep because of the discomfort. People v Rivera, 42 A.D.3d 587, 838 N.Y.S.2d 727, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8151 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 9 N.Y.3d 880, 842 N.Y.S.2d 792, 874 N.E.2d 759, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 2937 (N.Y. 2007).

Evidence that corrections officer one suffered torn tendons in his arm during an altercation with defendant and that in the same altercation, officer two suffered a blow to the head that left a contusion that was tender for about 10 days, was sufficient to support defendant's convictions for assault in the second degree. People v Williams, 46 A.D.3d 1115, 847 N.Y.S.2d 717, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13153 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 818, 857 N.Y.S.2d 51, 886 N.E.2d 816, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 1292 (N.Y. 2008).

Evidence was legally sufficient to prove assault in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(4) as the laceration to the victim's abdomen, which caused his small intestine to protrude and which required surgery, was a serious physical injury under N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(10). People v Ryan, 55 A.D.3d 960, 865 N.Y.S.2d 146, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7753 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

Evidence at defendant's trial for second degree assault, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2), sufficiently established that the victim suffered the requisite injury to sustain the assault conviction under circumstances in which the testimony of the victim and the medical examiner, a forensic pathologist, established that the victim sustained a very painful 29 centimeter cut which required 35 stitches. People v Gragnano, 63 A.D.3d 1437, 885 N.Y.S.2d 369, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5184 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2009), app. denied, 13 N.Y.3d 939, 895 N.Y.S.2d 329, 922 N.E.2d 918, 2010 N.Y. LEXIS 539 (N.Y. 2010).

There was sufficient evidence to support defendant's convictions of first degree assault, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.10, and second degree assault, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05; the victim's testimony that during the altercation defendant beat him with a gun and bit off a large piece of his ear, defendant's oral statement to police that he did what he needed to and bit the victim's ear off, and the medical evidence regarding the extensive damage to the victim's ear resulting in permanent disfigurement supported the convictions. People v Carter, 74 A.D.3d 1375, 903 N.Y.S.2d 172, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4579 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 15 N.Y.3d 772, 907 N.Y.S.2d 461, 933 N.E.2d 1054, 2010 N.Y. LEXIS 2348 (N.Y. 2010).

Sufficient evidence supported conviction of second degree assault, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3), because the People presented evidence that a police officer suffered a physical injury when defendant kicked him in the groin; the officer described defendant kicking him with the force of someone kicking a football for a field goal, was seen to double over in pain, described the pain as substantial, sought medical attention, and was diagnosed with a scrotal contusion, which continued to cause pain and discomfort for several days. However, the conviction had to be reversed due to the trial court's refusal to charge the lesser included offense of third degree obstructing governmental administration. People v Nisselbeck, 85 A.D.3d 1206, 923 N.Y.S.2d 801, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4510 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2011).

Where a physician's assistant testified that the victim, who was repeatedly stabbed about the head with a Plexiglas shank, sustained 2 puncture wounds and 8 lacerations to the head, requiring 14 sutures, and that the wounds would have been painful, such evidence would have allowed a jury to reasonably conclude that the wounds resulted in substantial pain within the meaning of N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(9), and, thus, allowed a rational trier of fact to find that the "physical injury" element of the crime of assault in the second degree in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(7) was proven beyond a reasonable doubt. People v Walley, 296 A.D.2d 717, 745 N.Y.S.2d 283, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7490 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2002).

Evidence was sufficient to establish the elements of defendant's convictions for second degree assault and third degree assault where her testimony was not incredible as a matter of law, the resulting credibility question was within the jury's province, and the record supported its verdict, despite a lack of testimony showing the degree of the victim's pain, where the testimony showed the duration of her pain, her medical treatment, and the prescribed course, requiring her to wear a sling for almost two weeks. People v Black, 304 A.D.2d 905, 757 N.Y.S.2d 635, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3854 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 578, 764 N.Y.S.2d 388, 796 N.E.2d 480, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 2989 (N.Y. 2003).

Evidence was legally sufficient (and conviction was not against the weight of the evidence) in the case of a prisoner accused of knocking over and kicking a guard who had come to move the prisoner and convicted of second-degree assault, based on the testimony of the guard, the treating nurse, and various bystanders. People v Porter, 305 A.D.2d 933, 761 N.Y.S.2d 691, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6082 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 100

Pain, bruising, swelling, and soreness in the victim's hand, which caused the victim to wear a supportive brace for three days and work light duty for one week, was legally sufficient evidence of physical injury under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05. People v Ellis, 8 A.D.3d 826, 778 N.Y.S.2d 555, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8587 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 3 N.Y.3d 673, 784 N.Y.S.2d 12, 817 N.E.2d 830, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 3697 (N.Y. 2004).

Second degree assault conviction was supported by sufficient evidence and was affirmed where the evidence showed, inter alia, that after the baby was left alone in defendant's care, the mother observed black and blue marks on the child's cheeks, nose, and lip, and under the child's eyes, and where the treating physician testified that the child had bruising around both eyes, a linear bruise down her right cheek, and a laceration on her lip, injuries that were consistent with child abuse; the treating physician also indicated that the child could not have sustained her injuries through her own actions and that, in his opinion, the injuries would have caused her substantial pain at the time of infliction. People v Tompkins, 8 A.D.3d 901, 780 N.Y.S.2d 387, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8816 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2004).

Proof established that defendant knowingly entered (or remained unlawfully in) a victim's dwelling with the intent to commit a crime therein, by forcing himself into the victim's apartment and raping her, and that he intentionally caused her physical injury, using a dangerous instrument (a door), under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 120.05(2) and 140.30(2), when he slammed her head against the door when she tried to leave. People v Smith, 27 A.D.3d 894, 811 N.Y.S.2d 488, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2870 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 6 N.Y.3d 898, 817 N.Y.S.2d 633, 850 N.E.2d 680, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 2009 (N.Y. 2006).

Because defendant's assault victim suffered, inter alia, a broken clavicle, bruised ribs, four broken facial bones, and extensive neck and facial bruises and lacerations, was in pain for more than one year, and would require plastic surgery, the victim sustained a "serious physical injury" as defined by N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(10); therefore, defendant was properly found guilty of second-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(1). People v Coy, 45 A.D.3d 1050, 845 N.Y.S.2d 854, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11707 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

Evidence was sufficient to support a conviction of assault in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(1), under circumstances in which the testimony of the victim, coupled with medical records introduced at trial, established that he lost consciousness after the attack, was hospitalized and treated for a laceration to his face requiring 15 sutures and sustained skull, facial, and jaw fractures and a closed head injury, resulting in a subdural hematoma; upon discharge, he was prescribed pain medication and advised not to engage in strenuous activity, drive or return to work pending follow-up examinations, and, moreover, although a year passed since the assault, he had not yet been cleared to return to work and continued to suffer dizzy spells, bleeding from his ear, and memory difficulty. Such evidence, when viewed most favorably to the People, established a protracted impairment of health for purposes proving a serious physical injury. People v Casey, 61 A.D.3d 1011, 876 N.Y.S.2d 532, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2487 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 12 N.Y.3d 913, 884 N.Y.S.2d 694, 912 N.E.2d 1075, 2009 N.Y. LEXIS 2906 (N.Y. 2009).

Evidence at trial demonstrated beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant physically injured the victim because defendant attacked the victim by striking him with a wooden bar stool. People v Boddie, 126 A.D.3d 1129, 6 N.Y.S.3d 165, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1964 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 26 N.Y.3d 1085, 44 N.E.3d 940, 23 N.Y.S.3d 642, 2015 N.Y. LEXIS 4109 (N.Y. 2015).

Weight of the evidence supported the finding that the victim suffered a "serious physical injury" as a result of defendant's assault because, inter alia, defendant struck the victim on the face with a bar glass that shattered, and the victim received 150 stitches to close his facial wounds, was on prescription pain medication for approximately one week following the attack, missed three or four weeks of work, and had a scar on the left side of his face that was a few inches long. People v Jones, 136 A.D.3d 1153, 26 N.Y.S.3d 363, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1225 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2016).

There was sufficient evidence of physical injury to support defendant's second-degree assault conviction, given testimony that the victim's face was bruised and he was unable to sleep normally due to pain. People v Fields, 160 A.D.3d 1116, 75 N.Y.S.3d 617, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2529 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 31 N.Y.3d 1120, 106 N.E.3d 762, 81 N.Y.S.3d 379, 2018 N.Y. There was sufficient evidence to establish the element of physical injury required for assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05, as defined in N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(9), when defendant stabbed the victim in the left temple and left abdomen and the victim had headaches, neck pain, and nightmares afterward. People v Diaz, 163 A.D.3d 110, 78 N.Y.S.3d 792, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4359 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 32 N.Y.3d 1110, 115 N.E.3d 634, 91 N.Y.S.3d 362, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 3582 (N.Y. 2018).

Verdict was not against the weight of evidence due to the severity of infant victim's injuries and defendant's admission that he became agitated due to victim's crying and he aggressively picked up victim. The jury could infer from the circumstances that he had the intent to cause physical injury to the victim. People v Ash, 162 A.D.3d 1318, 80 N.Y.S.3d 495, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4570 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 32 N.Y.3d 1002, 111 N.E.3d 1116, 86 N.Y.S.3d 760, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 3154 (N.Y. 2018).

Sufficient evidence supported defendant's conviction for assault in the second degree because during the struggle with defendant, a police officer felt sharp pains in his knee and ankle, and afterward, the officer limped away from the incident, sought treatment at a hospital, missed two days of work and, during that time, continued to experience pain and had difficulty walking. People v Oshintayo, 163 A.D.3d 1352, 82 N.Y.S.3d 223, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5453 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 32 N.Y.3d 1006, 111 N.E.3d 1121, 86 N.Y.S.3d 765, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 3130 (N.Y. 2018).

17. —Fourth Department

In a prosecution for second-degree assault, a modification of the verdict to third-degree assault would be reversed where serious physical injury, as necessary to a verdict of second-degree assault, had been established in that more than a year after the incident the victim had pain in his jaw and had been unable to open his mouth more than one inch, and inasmuch as defendant had kicked the victim several times about his face and body while he was on the ground. People v Hall, 89 A.D.2d 788, 453 N.Y.S.2d 960, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17905 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1982).

Defendant's conviction for second-degree assault based on his infliction of physical injury on a police officer was proper, where the officer's testimony and a photograph established that the blow inflicted on the officer resulted in a bleeding laceration approximately one inch long under his eye requiring medical attention, which stunned the officer and caused him substantial pain, resulting in his missing five days of work. People v Starling, 101 A.D.2d 704, 475 N.Y.S.2d 689, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18266 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 63 N.Y.2d 680, 1984 N.Y. LEXIS 5617 (N.Y. 1984).

Evidence of bruises on victim's neck and arm, brutal nature of assault, and victim's testimony of pain suffered from attack was sufficient proof that she suffered "physical injury" to support second degree assault conviction under CLS Penal § 120.05(6). People v Roberts, 140 A.D.2d 961, 529 N.Y.S.2d 636, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5918 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1988).

Inmate was properly convicted of second degree assault arising from altercation with 2 correction officers where (1) he bit one officer on thumb, causing ½ -inch-long ¼ -inch-deep cut which was treated at hospital emergency room and later became infected, requiring antibiotics, (2) other officer suffered sprained knee, which also required hospital treatment and caused "heavy" and "throbbing" pain and swelling, and (3) both officers were prevented from performing their regular duties for several days; proof of "physical injury" supported jury's verdict. People v Williams, 147 A.D.2d 920, 147 A.D.2d 960, 538 N.Y.S.2d 732, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1189 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 1023, 541 N.Y.S.2d 778, 539 N.E.2d 606, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 2052 (N.Y. 1989).

Testimony of victim regarding degree and duration of pain resulting from injury to his hand, as well as impairment of its use, was sufficient to satisfy statutory threshold of "physical injury" for purposes of second degree assault conviction where defendant attempted to strike victim with his vehicle and victim was hit in hand as he tried to evade its path. People v Guerrero, 150 A.D.2d 489, 541 N.Y.S.2d 90, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6489 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Defendant was properly found to have inflicted physical injury on victim "in course of" robbery, and thus was properly convicted of second degree robbery, first degree assault, second degree assault, and fourth degree weapon possession, where defendant and his companions removed foodstuffs from victim's grocery store, victim chastised them as they left, defendant and companions returned, still in possession of stolen property, carrying knives, they grabbed more foodstuffs from shelves, and when victim attempted to call police, defendant stabbed him over his eye and kicked him in face, breaking his nose; jury was entitled to find that initial entry, and subsequent return culminating in attack, was continuous act. People v Rios, 150 A.D.2d 620, 541 N.Y.S.2d 489, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7048 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 899, 548 N.Y.S.2d 432, 547 N.E.2d 959, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 4340 (N.Y. 1989), disapproved, People v Rodriguez, 76 N.Y.2d 918, 563 N.Y.S.2d 48, 564 N.E.2d 658, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 3308 (N.Y. 1990).

Evidence of "physical injury" as defined by CLS Penal § 10.00(9) was sufficient to support conviction of second degree assault where 2 victims of defendant's assaults with metal wrench sustained cuts to head requiring stitches and were in pain for a few days, and third victim suffered puncture wound and bruise to arm and was out of work for 2 weeks. People v Benton, 152 A.D.2d 992, 544 N.Y.S.2d 766, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9920 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 845, 546 N.Y.S.2d 1010, 546 N.E.2d 193, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 3814 (N.Y. 1989).

Defendant's claim that evidence did not establish sufficient physical injury to sustain his conviction for second degree assault lacked merit, since each victim testified that injuries received caused pain and it thus became question for trier of fact whether pain was substantial. People v Felipe, 155 A.D.2d 900, 547 N.Y.S.2d 730, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14739 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1989), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 868, 553 N.Y.S.2d 299, 552 N.E.2d 878, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 799 (N.Y. 1990).

Evidence of physical injury was sufficient to support defendant's conviction of second degree assault where complainant (police officer) testified that (1) he suffered scrapes and bruises on his legs and bruises on his knees in scuffle with defendant, as well as bite wounds to left shoulder which broke skin and caused him "nagging pain" for several days, (2) he was given oxygen at scene and transported to hospital emergency room where he reported that he hurt "all over," and (3) he was given tetanus shot and pain medication and missed following 2 days of work. People v Block, 168 A.D.2d 940, 565 N.Y.S.2d 341, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16483 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1990), app. denied, 77 N.Y.2d 875, 568 N.Y.S.2d 918, 571 N.E.2d 88, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 1042 (N.Y. 1991).

Proof of "physical injury" was sufficient to support conviction for second degree assault where it was shown that defendant pushed one correction officer into wall, causing contusion and pain for approximately 2 weeks, and that defendant bit another correction officer's finger, severing fingernail, cutting finger pad, and causing severe pain for one week and absence from work for 8 weeks. People v Mallard, 207 A.D.2d 1018, 617 N.Y.S.2d 73, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10295 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 84 N.Y.2d 1013, 622 N.Y.S.2d 924, 647 N.E.2d 130, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 5036 (N.Y. 1994).

Although defendant shot victim in foot, assault conviction would be reduced, in interest of justice, from second to third degree where prosecution failed to prove that injury created substantial risk of death or caused serious and disfigurement, protracted impairment of health, or impairment of function of any bodily organ. People v Bodford, 238 A.D.2d 928, 661 N.Y.S.2d 158, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4741 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 938, 664 N.Y.S.2d 756, 687 N.E.2d 653, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3738 (N.Y. 1997).

Physical injuries necessary to sustain conviction of second and third degree assault were proved by victim's testimony that (1) during one attack, she sustained cut on her arm, resulting in scar that was visible at trial, (2) during another attack, with pair of pliers, she sustained puncture wound on her shoulder, resulting in scar that was visible at trial, and (3) she suffered considerable pain from those wounds. People v Yeldon, 251 A.D.2d 1047, 675 N.Y.S.2d 262, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7125 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 908, 680 N.Y.S.2d 72, 702 N.E.2d 857, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 3656 (N.Y. 1998).

Evidence of physical injury supported conviction of second degree assault where victim testified that, after blow to back with baseball bat, he felt severe pain, pain continued for several days, he took aspirin to relieve pain, there was red mark on his skin, and he knew "something was just not right" every time he moved his arm. People v Wiggins, 265 A.D.2d 905, 696 N.Y.S.2d 604, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10029 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 908, 707 N.Y.S.2d 393, 728 N.E.2d 992, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 815 (N.Y. 2000).

Victim's comminuted nose fracture, which required surgery, constituted serious physical injury. People v Willson, 272 A.D.2d 959, 708 N.Y.S.2d 668, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8729 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 873, 715 N.Y.S.2d 228, 738 N.E.2d 376, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3190 (N.Y. 2000).

In prosecution for second degree assault, evidence supported finding that victim sustained physical injury, defined in CLS Penal § 10.00(9) as "impairment of physical condition or substantial pain," where (1) he fell to ground and bled profusely after being struck on side of head with handgun, (2) he regained consciousness as he was being placed on stretcher and was transported to emergency room, (3) his treating physician testified that victim suffered jagged partial thickness laceration to side of head, (4) CT scan revealed swelling of soft tissue in area of wound, (5) physician cleaned wound, treated it with antiseptic solution, and recommended that victim take Tylenol for pain, and (6) victim took pain medication, remained out of work for one week, and continued to experience headaches after incident. People v Wooden, 275 A.D.2d 935, 713 N.Y.S.2d 415, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9703 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 740, 722 N.Y.S.2d 807, 745 N.E.2d 1030, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 506 (N.Y. 2001).

Physical injury element of second degree assault was shown by police officer's testimony that he sustained "soft tissue injury" resulting in "severe pain" in his ankle and shin, which caused pain and difficulty in walking for 2 days, and fact that officer was treated at hospital and was released from duty for 1 ½ days. People v Sullivan, 284 A.D.2d 917, 728 N.Y.S.2d 320, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5935 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 942, 733 N.Y.S.2d 382, 759 N.E.2d 381, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 3590 (N.Y. 2001), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 658, 737 N.Y.S.2d 59, 762 N.E.2d 937, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4269 (N.Y. 2001).

Evidence was legally sufficient to sustain defendant's convictions for assault in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3), and assault in the third degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.00(1), because she struck a police officer in the head, causing him to see "stars" and suffer great pain, which fell within the definition of physical injury in N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(9); the failure of the officer to seek medical treatment or to take off any time from work was not dispositive in determining whether he sustained a physical injury, People v Gerecke, 34 A.D.3d 1260, 823 N.Y.S.2d 797, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15975 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.3d 925, 827 N.Y.S.2d 694, 860 N.E.2d 996, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 4101 (N.Y. 2006).

Evidence was sufficient to support defendant's conviction for assault in the second degree, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2), where he hit his wife in the head with a glass liquor bottle, knocking her to the ground and causing a hematoma on her head which required stitches; there was sufficient proof of a "physical injury" pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(9). People v Myers, 87 A.D.3d 826, 928 N.Y.S.2d 407, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6191 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2011).

Because defendant struck a homeless panhandler in the head with a brick, which rendered the victim unconscious, fractured the victim's right lateral orbital wall fracture and left temporal bone transverse, and caused a subdural hematoma and a subarachnoid hemorrhage, the victim's injuries rose to the level of physical injury under N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(9); therefore, defendant was properly convicted of second-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2). People v Noguel, 93 A.D.3d 1319, 940 N.Y.S.2d 756, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2188 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 965, 950 N.Y.S.2d 117, 973 N.E.2d 215, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 2360 (N.Y. 2012).

Testimony that a cut to the victim's ear was "severe" and "terrible"; that part of the victim's ear was "hanging off"; and that the injury hurt "for a long time," was sufficient to convict defendant of second degree assault, under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2). People v Coleman, 305 A.D.2d 1031, 758 N.Y.S.2d 878, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4727 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 579, 764 N.Y.S.2d 389, 796 N.E.2d 481, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 3016 (N.Y. 2003).

After noting that defendant failed to preserve for appellate review his contention that his conviction for assault in the second degree was not supported by legally sufficient evidence, the appellate court held that the contention lacked merit because the testimony of an officer who was injured established that the officer sustained an impairment of his physical condition or substantial pain. People v Kelly, 309 A.D.2d 1149, 765 N.Y.S.2d 115, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10229 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 575, 775 N.Y.S.2d 791, 807 N.E.2d 904, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 4617 (N.Y. 2003).

Sufficient evidence supported defendant's conviction for assault in the second degree because while an officer was hanging onto the door handle of defendant's vehicle, defendant accelerated quickly and drove away, sending the officer into the air and then onto the ground, and, as a result, the officer sustained injuries to his hip, knee, hamstring, back, and neck and was out of work for two weeks. People v Funk, 166 A.D.3d 1487, 87 N.Y.S.3d 419, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7610 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2018), app. denied, 32 N.Y.3d 1172, 121 N.E.3d 264, 97 N.Y.S.3d 636, 2019 N.Y. LEXIS 537 (N.Y. 2019).

18. "Physical injury" not established, generally

Given that N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 470.15(2)(a) authorized the appellate division to modify a judgment by reducing a conviction to a lesser included offense if the evidence did not support defendant's conviction on the greater charge but was sufficient to establish the lesser offense, the appellate division correctly affirmed defendant's conviction of attempted assault in the second degree, which was a lesser included offense of assault in the second degree, upon concluding that the evidence of physical injury was insufficient to support defendant's conviction on the greater charge but was sufficient to establish defendant's guilt on the lesser included offense. People v Hawkins, 99 N.Y.2d 592, 757 N.Y.S.2d 810, 787 N.E.2d 1156, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 144 (N.Y. 2003).

People failed to establish that complainant suffered physical injury in order to sustain second degree assault charge, even though complainant testified she was struck several times prior to rape, since she did not elaborate on her injuries and never testified as to duration of pain, and although she was examined at hospital, her records were lost by hospital and thus never received in evidence. People v Holden, 148 A.D.2d 635, 539 N.Y.S.2d 95, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3851 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 848, 546 N.Y.S.2d 1013, 546 N.E.2d 196, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 3887 (N.Y. 1989).

Where there was no serious physical injury inflicted upon the victim as the result of the defendant's acts, no violations of subds 1 or 4 of § 120.05 of the Penal Law were established. In re Taylor, 62 Misc. 2d 529, 309 N.Y.S.2d 368, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1927 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. 1970).

19. —First Department

Evidence was not sufficient to sustain finding of physical injury, and thus did not support convictions for first degree burglary, second degree robbery, and second degree assault, where 80-year-old victim had merely bumped her head during struggle with defendant, and although her body was sore for about 3 weeks and her head was swollen, she did not see doctor or go to hospital. People v Brown, 145 A.D.2d 301, 535 N.Y.S.2d 366, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12319 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1988), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 1012, 541 N.Y.S.2d 766, 539 N.E.2d 594, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 1774 (N.Y. 1989).

20. —Second Department

In a prosecution for robbery in the second degree and assault in the second degree the evidence was insufficient for conviction where the victim testified that he had received blows to the side of the head and to the bridge of his nose resulting in bruises a headache and minor pain since physical injury, for purposes of proof of the crimes charged, must be impairment of physical condition or substantial pain. People v Reed, 83 A.D.2d 566, 441 N.Y.S.2d 10, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14857 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1981).

In a prosecution for attempted rape and second-degree assault, defendant's conviction for second-degree assault would be vacated, where there was no evidence of physical impairment of the victim, where the issue of physical injury was submitted to the jury solely upon the basis of the victim's testimony that she suffered a very sore neck from the attack, and where such subjective testimony, without more, was insufficient to establish beyond a reasonable doubt that the victim suffered the requisite physical injury within the meaning of Penal Law §§ 120.05 and 10.00. People v Hargrove, 95 A.D.2d 864, 464 N.Y.S.2d 224, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18815 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 60 N.Y.2d 616, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 6096 (N.Y. 1983).

In absence of evidence that injury would cause pain or was capable of causing pain, jury would be required to speculate in order to reach conclusion that victim in fact suffered pain; bullet wound per se is not "physical injury" where there is no evidence upon which to establish that injury caused pain; wound characterized as "deep scratch" which was treated by victim with large gauze bandages and for which victim did not seek professional medical assistance is not "physical injury" as matter of law. People v Francis, 112 A.D.2d 167, 490 N.Y.S.2d 850, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 56453 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1985).

Charges of burglary in first degree and assault in second degree were not supported by sufficient evidence that victims had suffered requisite "physical injury" where (1) testimony of minor victims and their minor siblings showed only that defendant had punched or slapped one victim in mouth, causing her lip to bleed, and slapped other victim hard enough to make her fall and cause her to cry, (2) neither victim requested nor received medical treatment after prompt arrival of police, and (3) no evidence was adduced as to resulting physical impairment or "substantial pain." People v Wainwright, 123 A.D.2d 894, 507 N.Y.S.2d 669, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 61012 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Evidence was insufficient to establish that police officer suffered "physical injury" as result of altercation with defendant, and to sustain defendant's conviction for second degree assault, even though officer testified that he received bruises which produced swelling and tenderness, experienced headaches for 2 or 3 days thereafter, and missed day of work, since officer did not testify that pain suffered from injuries was substantial, nor could pain of which officer complained be deemed to have reached objective level required to be substantial; moreover, there was no evidence to support conclusion that officer's physical condition was impaired as result of injuries. People v Goins, 129 A.D.2d 733, 514 N.Y.S.2d 494, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 45416 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 704, 519 N.Y.S.2d 1039, 513 N.E.2d 716, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 18083 (N.Y. 1987).

Court would reverse defendant's second degree assault conviction where complainant never stated that she had experienced any substantial pain, nor was there any evidence to support conclusion that complainant's physical condition was impaired from injuries sustained in incident. People v Jackson, 139 A.D.2d

766, 527 N.Y.S.2d 514, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4464 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Evidence was legally insufficient to support conviction for assault in second degree since it did not show impairment of physical condition or substantial pain where (1) complainant testified that, when defendant struck her on right side of head, she fell to floor and that she had "great deal of pain" in her head and "pain around the eyes," but (2) complainant waited 2 days before seeking medical treatment, and when she finally went to hospital it was for treatment of preexisting eye condition. People v Anderson, 143 A.D.2d 760, 533 N.Y.S.2d 469, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10045 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 852, 537 N.Y.S.2d 499, 534 N.E.2d 337, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 6446 (N.Y. 1988), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 919, 539 N.Y.S.2d 304, 536 N.E.2d 633, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 1283 (N.Y. 1989).

Evidence that victim of alleged second degree assault was "slightly bruised" and "bleeding a little bit" and that he felt "a little sore, that's all" was insufficient to establish required "physical injury," defined by CLS Penal § 10.00(9) as "impairment of physical condition or substantial pain." People v Thomas, 160 A.D.2d 968, 554 N.Y.S.2d 691, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4791 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 796, 559 N.Y.S.2d 1002, 559 N.E.2d 696, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 2910 (N.Y. 1990).

Defendant's conviction of second degree assault would be reversed for lack of sufficient evidence of physical injury involving substantial pain where complainant police officer merely sustained several cuts to his nose when defendant, handcuffed from behind, snapped at officer's face and struck his teeth into officer's nose, officer received medical attention shortly thereafter, including tetanus shot and penicillin, but was not prevented from working, and although officer testified that there were lacerations on his nose and he had headache next day, there was no scar, nor did he require stitches. People v Foster, 162 A.D.2d 703, 557 N.Y.S.2d 122, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8158 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 856, 560 N.Y.S.2d 996, 561 N.E.2d 896, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 3880 (N.Y. 1990).

Evidence was insufficient to establish that juvenile committed act which, if committed by adult, would have constituted second degree assault where complainant testified merely that, after incident, "everything was sore on me," and that his leg, arm, upper back, and neck were "swollen." In re Robert C., 185 A.D.2d 845, 586 N.Y.S.2d 992, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9884 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1992).

Evidence was insufficient to support conviction of third degree assault, even though victim went to hospital complaining of severe headache as result of being thrown against wall and punched in head by defendant, where prosecution failed to present any evidence as to physical impairment or extent of pain suffered by victim, so as to prove "physical injury" under CLS Penal § 10.00(9). People v Thorpe, 245 A.D.2d 472, 666 N.Y.S.2d 664, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14150 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 945, 671 N.Y.S.2d 725, 694 N.E.2d 894, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 1227 (N.Y. 1998).

Evidence was legally insufficient to support defendant's conviction of assault in the second degree in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3), as the People failed to establish that the complainant suffered physical injury pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(9) as a result of the alleged kicks to the complainant's arm and leg inflicted by defendant during the body cavity search. People v Manley, 13 A.D.3d 653, 789 N.Y.S.2d 502, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15721 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2004), app. denied, 4 N.Y.3d 833, 796 N.Y.S.2d 588, 829 N.E.2d 681, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 937 (N.Y. 2005).

Defendant's convictions for robbery in the second degree, pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 160.10(2)(a), assault in the second degree, pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(6), were vacated, along with the sentences imposed, because the prosecution failed to present legally sufficient evidence that the complainant sustained physical injury, as defined in N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(9), to sustain the convictions. People v Almonte, 23 A.D.3d 392, 806 N.Y.S.2d 95, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12296 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2005), app. denied, 6 N.Y.3d 831, 814 N.Y.S.2d 79, 847 N.E.2d 376, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 968 (N.Y. 2006).

Assault conviction under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2) was not supported by sufficient evidence as, although there was sufficient evidence that defendant was the assailant, neither victim two nor victim three suffered a physical injury under N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(9) since neither of them experienced substantial pain or sought medical attention; victim two's upper back was bruised, and victim three suffered a small cut on victim three's head that did not require suturing. People v Baksh, 43 A.D.3d 1072, 845 N.Y.S.2d 343, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9780 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 9 N.Y.3d 989, 848 N.Y.S.2d 607, 878 N.E.2d 1023, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 3820 (N.Y. 2007).

Appeals court reduced conviction of assault in the second degree to attempted assault in the second degree since there was insufficient evidence that complainant suffered substantial pain or impairment of his physical condition as defined in N.Y. Penal Law §§ 10.00(9) and require by N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2). There was no expert medical testimony and complainant cleaned and bandaged the injury himself and testified to only limited restrictions. People v Baez, 13 A.D.3d 463, 785 N.Y.S.2d 749, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15204 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2004), app. denied, 4 N.Y.3d 851, 797 N.Y.S.2d 425, 830 N.E.2d 324, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 1269 (N.Y. 2005).

Appellant was improperly adjudicated a juvenile delinquent based on a finding that she committed acts, which, if committed by an adult, would constitute assault in the second degree charged as a hate crime under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 485.05 and 120.05(1) because the complainant only suffered a cut above her eye and a cut on her ear, which did not establish a serious physical injury as defined in § 120.05(1). Matter of Anisha McG., 27 A.D.3d 749, 810 N.Y.S.2d 918, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3746 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

Trial court erred in convicting defendant of second-degree assault because the evidence was legally insufficient to establish that the victim suffered a physical injury by means of a dangerous instrument as a result of defendant's use of a bat. 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 331.

21. —Third Department

Evidence was insufficient to establish that victim suffered "physical injury" within meaning of CLS Penal § 10.00(9), and thus second degree assault charge could not stand, where victim testified that defendant struck him several times on head and neck with handgun, that he bled and felt pain and that he went to hospital by ambulance, but victim also testified that his injuries were "just small cuts and abrasions" and did not need stitches. People v Brown, 187 A.D.2d 872, 590 N.Y.S.2d 309, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13443 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 785, 594 N.Y.S.2d 732, 610 N.E.2d 405, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 342 (N.Y. 1993).

Factual allegations in depositions were insufficient to establish physical injury within meaning of CLS Penal § 10.00(9) where victim stated that his finger was cut while trying to take knife away from respondent, and that his finger bled and had puss oozing out of it with resulting pain of one week's duration. In re Kurt EE., 199 A.D.2d 945, 606 N.Y.S.2d 371, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12418 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1993).

Defendant's conviction of 2 counts of first degree burglary, 2 counts of first degree assault, and 3 counts of second degree assault, on jury's finding that victim suffered "serious physical injury" under CLS Penal § 10.00(10), was supported by evidence, including victim's testimony, that was awakened in bed by intruder who was beating her on head with brick, that when she attempted to crawl out of bed, intruder grabbed her, pulled her back, and repeatedly struck her on head, that as struggle continued she recognized defendant—nephew of her former husband—as intruder, that she suffered, among other injuries, head laceration requiring sutures, broken hand, and bruises on her shoulders, upper arms, left leg, and feet, and that personal items were missing from her home. People v Quesnel, 238 A.D.2d 725, 656 N.Y.S.2d 772, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3930 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 896, 662 N.Y.S.2d 439, 685 N.E.2d 220, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 2861 (N.Y. 1997).

Victim of cuts with razor-blade knife did not suffer "impairment of physical condition or substantial pain" under CLS Penal § 10.00(9), so as to support charge of second degree assault, where (1) victim received "two very clean lacerations of the tips of two fingers," (2) physician treated cuts with bandaids, which victim wore for 4 or 5 days, (3) although there was some bleeding, sutures were not required to close wounds, (4) no scars or disability resulted, and (5) no testimony was offered as to pain. In re Shawnell UU, 240 A.D.2d 947, 659 N.Y.S.2d 531, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6991 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

There was sufficient basis for jury to conclude that correction officer sustained "physical injury" within meaning of CLS Penal § 120.05(3) where he was diagnosed with crepitus in his arm and shoulder which prompted prescription for painkillers, and he suffered from substantial pain in his arm and shoulder for months after incident. People v Holloway, 261 A.D.2d 658, 691 N.Y.S.2d 583, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4679 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 972, 695 N.Y.S.2d 58, 716 N.E.2d 1103, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 2524 (N.Y. 1999).

Evidence supported conviction of second degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.05(7), and of attempt to commit that crime, where (1) defendant, while incarcerated in correctional facility, intended to physically injure correction officer and did so by striking him in eye with compressed ball of wet toilet paper, (2) element of intent was proved by, inter alia, defendant's earlier threats against victim, and (3) element of physical injury was proved by, inter alia, victim's testimony that his eye pain lasted 1 ½ to 2 days and that his sight was impaired for about one week, and emergency room physician's assistant's testimony that victim sustained "pretty obvious" abrasion across cornea, which would impair vision and cause pain. People v Travis, 273 A.D.2d 544, 711 N.Y.S.2d 514, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6697 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

People failed to show physical injury element of second degree assault where victim only sought medical attention at direction of police and described his injury as being red, swollen, and stiff neck, he admitted that, although his neck was sore and tender, "it wasn't that bad," he had no trouble driving after incident, lost no time from work, and none of his activities were curtailed, and he acknowledged that, with exception of being "somewhat sore," injury did not affect his life. People v Thomas, 274 A.D.2d 761, 711 N.Y.S.2d 563, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8095 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 939, 721 N.Y.S.2d 615, 744 N.E.2d 151, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 4122 (N.Y. 2000).

Defendant's conviction of second degree assault of parole officer was reduced to attempted second degree assault, and matter was remitted for resentencing, as evidence did not sufficiently establish physical injury where parole officer testified that he received "very substantial" blow to chest which "hurt a lot" and caused him to lose his balance but, admittedly, any bruising he sustained did not interfere with his immediate efforts to apprehend defendant. People v Colantonio, 277 A.D.2d 498, 715 N.Y.S.2d 764, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11134 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 781, 725 N.Y.S.2d 645, 749 N.E.2d 214, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1154 (N.Y. 2001).

Evidence that a corrections officer suffered a blow to his check that caused pain and some swelling was insufficient to support defendant's conviction for assault in the second degree as it did not show the necessary physical condition or substantial pain. People v Williams, 46 A.D.3d 1115, 847 N.Y.S.2d 717, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13153 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 818, 857 N.Y.S.2d 51, 886 N.E.2d 816, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 1292 (N.Y. 2008).

Conviction for N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3) second degree assault was reduced to lesser-included offense of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 120.05 attempted second degree assault since there was not sufficient evidence that the bite that broke the officer's skin was a "physical injury" based on the officer's about one hour of pain and the officer not taking medication. People v Winchester, 14 A.D.3d 939, 790 N.Y.S.2d 238, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 620 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 5 N.Y.3d 796, 801 N.Y.S.2d 817, 835 N.E.2d 677, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 2462 (N.Y. 2005).

22. —Fourth Department

Evidence that victim sustained abrasions on neck, suffered slight pain, and had hoarseness of voice did not support second degree assault conviction where record did not show whether hoarseness was of such degree as to constitute impairment of physical condition as defined in CLS Penal § 10.00. People v Prosser, 130 A.D.2d 972, 516 N.Y.S.2d 559, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 46958 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1987).

Evidence did not support second degree assault conviction under CLS Penal § 120.05(6) since pain suffered by victim was not "substantial" and thus did not satisfy element of physical injury as defined by CLS Penal § 10.00, where victim was thrown to ground during scuffle and suffered scrape on his face and shoulder, there was some bleeding and victim felt "stinging" but no pain, victim did not seek medical attention, and scrapes healed in "a few days." People v Green, 145 A.D.2d 929, 536 N.Y.S.2d 611, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13954 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1988).

Evidence was legally insufficient to establish "physical injury" in support of conviction of second degree assault, although victim testified that his face bled and "it hurt a little bit" when defendant pushed him to ground, where he did not testify regarding extent of pain suffered, nor that pain was substantial, and record lacked evidentiary support for conclusion that victim's physical condition was impaired because of injuries sustained in incident. People v Rankin, 155 A.D.2d 977, 547 N.Y.S.2d 783, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14862 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1989), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 816, 552 N.Y.S.2d 566, 551 N.E.2d 1244, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 394 (N.Y. 1990).

Evidence of physical injury, as defined in CLS Penal § 10.00(9), was insufficient to support defendant's conviction of second degree robbery and second degree assault where, as result of altercation with defendant, victim suffered minor cuts and bruises, and transient pain; victim's testimony that altercation caused "emotional upset" resulting in "flare up" of arthritis in his knee was insufficient without competent supporting medical proof to establish that defendant's conduct was proximate cause of arthritis recurrence. People v Patterson, 192 A.D.2d 1083, 596 N.Y.S.2d 234, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4094 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1993).

Physical injury element of second degree assault was established by victim's testimony that he was stabbed in back of thigh, that he called for ambulance immediately after arriving at his residence, that he was in substantial pain at time, and that he received hospital treatment for stab wound. People v Owens, 256 A.D.2d 1220, 685 N.Y.S.2d 145, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14392 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 877, 689 N.Y.S.2d 439, 711 N.E.2d 653, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1039 (N.Y. 1999), app. denied sub. nom., People v O. V., 93 N.Y.2d 877, 689 N.Y.S.2d 439, 711 N.E.2d 653 (N.Y. 1999), app. denied sub. nom., People v V. O., 93 N.Y.2d 880, 689 N.Y.S.2d 442, 711 N.E.2d 656, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 4663 (N.Y. 1999).

Proof that victim sustained broken finger was insufficient to establish serious physical injury within meaning of CLS Penal § 120.05(1) but supported conviction of lesser included offense of third degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.00(1). People v White, 283 A.D.2d 964, 725 N.Y.S.2d 499, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4635 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2001).

Defendant's convictions for felony assault and strangulation were not supported by legally sufficient evidence with respect to the element of physical injury, as the People failed to establish either physical impairment or substantial pain by evidence of the victim's minor pain, one-centimeter bruise, and swollen neck. People v Case, 150 A.D.3d 1634, 54 N.Y.S.3d 475, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3610 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2017).

23. Deadly weapons or dangerous instruments, generally

A conviction for criminal possession of a weapon in the fourth degree was not repugnant to acquittals on robbery and assault counts, since a finding that defendant did not actually use the dangerous instrument in his possession does not ipso facto negate an intent to use the dangerous instrument in furtherance of the commission of crimes for which he was convicted had the need to use said instrument materialized, in that intent to use a dangerous instrument unlawfully is an essential element of the former count but not the latter two. People v Campbell, 86 A.D.2d 403, 450 N.Y.S.2d 210, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15728 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 57 N.Y.2d 684, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 4146 (N.Y. 1982).

Contemporaneous acquittal of attempted assault in second degree does not require finding that conviction of criminal possession of weapon in third degree is repugnant; to be found guilty of attempted assault, defendant must be shown to have had intent to cause physical injury, while in order to convict him of criminal possession of weapon, it need only be shown that defendant had intent to use weapon unlawfullly against another; thus, verdict of guilty on criminal possession charge is not necessarily negated by failure to find that defendant had requisite intent under assault charge. People v Martino, 112 A.D.2d 1049, 493 N.Y.S.2d 36, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52252 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 66 N.Y.2d 616, 494 N.Y.S.2d 1039, 485 N.E.2d 243, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 17080 (N.Y. 1985).

In second degree assault trial, evidence established that defendant used dangerous instrument to assault victim even though instrument was never recovered where witness testified that he saw object in defendant's hand during course of assault, and photograph of victim showed that he sustained deep laceration in his head. People v Pagan, 163 A.D.2d 681, 558 N.Y.S.2d 289, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8383 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1990).

In prosecution for second degree assault, evidence was sufficient to show defendant's complicity in use of dangerous weapon where (1) as complainant was being pummeled by defendant and 2 others in unprovoked assault, defendant yelled "go get ," last word of which complainant could not make out, and (2) one of defendant's companions then left and, when he returned, complainant felt blows of heavy object he could not identify; this sufficed to show that defendant acted in concert in that he intended use of dangerous instrument and requested that his accomplice fetch weapon. People v Carey, 180 A.D.2d 431, 580 N.Y.S.2d 10, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1172 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 79 N.Y.2d 998, 584 N.Y.S.2d 453, 594 N.E.2d 947, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 2562 (N.Y. 1992).

In prosecution for first and second degree assault, there was sufficient circumstantial evidence to prove that defendant used dangerous instrument to inflict injuries on victim where (1) defendant, while walking from shower to his prison cell, stopped in front of victim's cell, reached into cell through feed tray, made 2 lunging movements, and returned to his cell, (2) no one else was in vicinity of victim's cell immediately before or after incident, (3) within moments, correction officers went to victim's cell and found him bleeding profusely, and (4) victim's treating physician found large laceration in victim's neck and 10-inch laceration in his chest that penetrated to his sternum. People v Wilson, 240 A.D.2d 774, 658 N.Y.S.2d 524, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6046 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 899, 662 N.Y.S.2d 442, 685 N.E.2d 223, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 2921 (N.Y. 1997).

Expert medical testimony may be used to show that injury was caused by dangerous instrument; thus, defendant's use of dangerous instrument was shown where emergency room nurse testified that nature of lacerations to victim were "clear-cut" with "no jagged edges" and concluded that they were caused by sharp instrument such as knife, blade, piece of glass, or scalpel. People v Santiago, 274 A.D.2d 438, 711 N.Y.S.2d 776, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7700 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 870, 715 N.Y.S.2d 225, 738 N.E.2d 373, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3138 (N.Y. 2000), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 738, 722 N.Y.S.2d 805, 745 N.E.2d 1028, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 467 (N.Y. 2001).

Defendant's hitting of his victim on the back with an 18-inch board was his use of a dangerous instrument sufficient for an assault in the second conviction under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2). People v Tedesco, 30 A.D.3d 1075, 816 N.Y.S.2d 269, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7586 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.3d 818, 822 N.Y.S.2d 493, 855 N.E.2d 809, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 3157 (N.Y. 2006).

Petitioner alien's 2nd-degree assault conviction under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2) was a "crime of violence" and "aggravated felony" under 18 U.S.C.S. § 16(b), 8 U.S.C.S. § 1101(a)(43)(F), as it required intentionally causing physical injury by using a deadly weapon or dangerous instrument, necessarily involving use of physical force. Morris v Holder, 676 F.3d 309, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 8166 (2d Cir. 2012).

24. —Firearms

Trier of fact could reasonably conclude that defendant was aware of and consciously disregarded substantial and unjustifiable risk that his action in firing rifle inside residential dwelling would result in injury to victim, and thus defendant was properly found guilty of second degree assault, where (1) defendant, while intoxicated, loaded weapon himself, and slid bolt of rifle back several times prior to firing it, (2) he laughed prior to firing second shot into rug, stating that his purpose in firing was to see if he had used correct bullets, and (3) he fired third shot which struck and seriously injured victim. People v Harley, 150 A.D.2d 606, 541 N.Y.S.2d 475, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6866 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Evidence at trial on charges of second degree weapon possession and second degree assault was legally sufficient to establish that weapon possessed and employed by defendant in course of assault was "firearm" within meaning of CLS Penal § 265.00(3), even though victim was unable to describe weapon (which went unrecovered) with which defendant shot him, where his detailed account of shooting, and reenactment in which he demonstrated defendant's stance and manner in which defendant held weapon, together with bullet recovered at hospital, supported reasonable inference that defendant employed firearm in shooting victim. People v McGrew, 150 A.D.2d 729, 541 N.Y.S.2d 597, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6994 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Defendant was entitled to reversal of conviction and new trial on charges of second degree weapon possession and second degree assault where court failed to provide jury with applicable definition of "firearm" but instead charged jury on statutory definition which focused on subjective element of "concealability" rather than specific dimensions of weapon, which undermined key defense argument that hinged existence of reasonable doubt on absence of proof of nature or dimensions of weapon used. People v McGrew, 150 A.D.2d 729, 541 N.Y.S.2d 597, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6994 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Defendant was properly convicted of second degree assault, despite his claim that handgun used to strike victim on side of head was not dangerous instrument; gun used as bludgeon is readily capable of causing death or other serious physical injury. People v Wooden, 275 A.D.2d 935, 713 N.Y.S.2d 415, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9703 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 740, 722 N.Y.S.2d 807, 745 N.E.2d 1030, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 506 (N.Y. 2001).

25. —Knives

Evidence, which failed to show that illegal juvenile delinquent either possessed knife or exercised dominion and control over it, and which also failed to show that juvenile, with requisite mental culpability, solicited, requested, commanded, importuned or intentionally aided another in possession of the knife, was insufficient to support finding that juvenile possessed the knife. In re Isaac F., 45 A.D.2d 705, 357 N.Y.S.2d 92, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4572 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1974).

In trial for second degree assault, evidence supported finding that defendant used knife, although only one of several witnesses testified to seeing knife, where (1) waitress testified that she removed knife from defendant's hand during altercation and placed it on table, and (2) doctor who examined victim after altercation testified that his wounds could have been caused by knife; fact that no other witnesses saw knife did not render waitress' testimony unreliable since failure to see knife could be explained by vantage points from which other witnesses saw altercation. People v Kranz, 155 A.D.2d 555, 547 N.Y.S.2d 411, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14296 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 859, 560 N.Y.S.2d 999, 561 N.E.2d 899, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 3957 (N.Y. 1990).

Trial court properly convicted defendant of attempted assault in the first degree, assault in the second degree, criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree, and endangering the welfare of a child with regard to defendant's actions in attacking to males at a day-care center as the testimony revealed that the two male victims were not armed and that defendant pulled out a knife and repeatedly stabbed the pair as they wrestled defendant down. The fact that blood from the assault splashed on the hallway windows so that the children in the day-care saw the same was sufficient evidence to support defendant's conviction for endangering the welfare of a child. People v Lewis, 46 A.D.3d 943, 846

N.Y.S.2d 766, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12425 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

Based on appellant's use of a knife in an altercation with the complainant, the evidence was sufficient in a juvenile delinquency case to establish that appellant committed acts which, if committed by an adult, would have constituted the crimes of assault in the second degree, menacing in the second degree, and criminal possession of a weapon in the fourth degree. Matter of Robert C., 67 A.D.3d 790, 888 N.Y.S.2d 192, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8068 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2009).

Jury's verdict convicting defendant of assault in the second degree and criminal possession of a weapon in the fourth degree were supported by the weight of the evidence. The victim's testimony and the testimony of the nurse who treated him at the hospital showed that the injury was consistent with a razor blade cut. A police officer who responded to the scene testified that a search of defendant's body revealed a box cutter in his right pocket with a reddish-brown stain. People v Wright, 160 A.D.3d 1110, 75 N.Y.S.3d 320, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2514 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 31 N.Y.3d 1154, 108 N.E.3d 510, 83 N.Y.S.3d 436, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 2260 (N.Y. 2018).

26. —Motor vehicles

Motor vehicle constitutes dangerous instrument where it is operated by intoxicated driver who pulls out to pass car in front of him while in no-passing zone. People v Bell, 112 A.D.2d 27, 490 N.Y.S.2d 402, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50662 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1985).

27. —Hands and feet

In view of evidence of use of defendant's boots to inflict serious physical injury upon complainant, they could be found to be a "dangerous instrument" within second-degree assault statute. People v Rumaner, 45 A.D.2d 290, 357 N.Y.S.2d 735, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4329 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

It was error to instruct jury that it could, under circumstances in which used, find defendant's hands, thumbs and body to be "dangerous instrument" in support of charge of assault in second degree where defendant wrapped his hands and thumbs around chest of nine month old child and pushed on his chest, fracturing child's ribs; as matter of law, uncovered parts of human body cannot be considered dangerous instruments. People v Johnson, 122 A.D.2d 341, 504 N.Y.S.2d 311, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 59675 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

Jury justifiably concluded that defendant's leather, round-toed, mid-calf boots, with which he repeatedly kicked victim, constituted dangerous instruments within meaning of CLS Penal § 10.00, justifying his conviction of second-degree assault. People v O'Hara, 124 A.D.2d 895, 508 N.Y.S.2d 348, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 62223 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

Shoe, sneaker, or boot with which juvenile allegedly kicked complainant during course of gang attack constituted "dangerous instrument" within meaning of CLS Penal § 10.00(13), and thus satisfied requirements of CLS Family Ct Act § 311.2(3) in petition alleging acts which, if committed by adult, would have constituted second degree assault. In re Jason J., 187 A.D.2d 652, 590 N.Y.S.2d 893, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13081 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1992), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 706, 597 N.Y.S.2d 936, 613 N.E.2d 968, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 746 (N.Y. 1993).

People failed to prove that victim's injury was caused by dangerous instrument where evidence merely indicated that cause of injury was single blow to face from defendant's hand. People v Nealy, 254 A.D.2d 505, 681 N.Y.S.2d 33, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11218 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

28. —Miscellaneous

In prosecution for second degree assault, rational factfinder could conclude that wad of paper towels used by defendant to gag his 10-year-old victim during assault was "dangerous instrument" within meaning of CLS Penal § 10.00(13), since this "ordinarily innocuous household item" had been wadded up with rubber bands to create dense ball that was shoved into victim's mouth with sufficient force to break tooth, and presumably to prevent victim (whose hands were bound) from spitting it out; used in such manner, wad of paper towels was capable of causing serious physical injury to young victim. People v Vasquez, 88 N.Y.2d 561, 647 N.Y.S.2d 697, 670 N.E.2d 1328, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 1516 (N.Y. 1996).

Defendant's teeth did not constitute "dangerous instrument" under CLS Penal § 10.00(3) although he bit victim's finger so hard that nerves were severed, and Supreme Court correctly dismissed first degree burglary and first and second degree assault counts, and correctly reduced second degree burglary count to third degree burglary; in determining that teeth can be dangerous instruments, Appellate Division improperly applied "use-oriented approach." People v Owusu, 93 N.Y.2d 398, 690 N.Y.S.2d 863, 712 N.E.2d 1228, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1135 (N.Y. 1999).

In a prosecution for two counts of assault in the second degree arising from attacks on two victims with the same metal pipe, verdicts acquitting defendant of assault in the second degree but convicting him of assault in the third degree on the first count, and convicting him of assault in the second degree on the second count were repugnant since the verdict on the first count had required a finding that the metal pipe was not a dangerous weapon, while the verdict on the second count had required a finding that it was. The conviction on the second count would, accordingly, be reduced to assault in the third degree. People v Wimms, 80 A.D.2d 837, 436 N.Y.S.2d 332, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10663 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1981).

Defendant's conviction for assault using a dangerous instrument was proper where she used cloth ankle and wrist restraints to immobilize her victim, in that such restraints could cause permanent contracture of the joints. People v Marshall, 105 A.D.2d 849, 482 N.Y.S.2d 45, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 20979 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1984).

Pool cue is dangerous instrument, and 2-inch head laceration victim receives when struck on head with cue is physical injury, within meaning of second degree assault statute (CLS Penal § 120.05). People v Naylor, 120 A.D.2d 940, 502 N.Y.S.2d 856, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 57027 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1986).

Pool cue is dangerous instrument, and 2-inch head laceration victim receives when struck on head with cue is physical injury, within meaning of second degree assault statute (CLS Penal § 120.05). People v Naylor, 120 A.D.2d 940, 502 N.Y.S.2d 856, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 57027 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1986).

In second degree assault trial, stick used in assault was properly found to be "dangerous instrument" within meaning of CLS Penal § 10.00(13) where there was ample evidence to support finding that defendant used stick in manner readily capable of causing serious physical injury. People v Ludwig, 155 A.D.2d 558, 547 N.Y.S.2d 414, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14229 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 814, 552 N.Y.S.2d 565, 551 N.E.2d 1243, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 353 (N.Y. 1990).

In prosecution of police officer for second degree assault involving incident which occurred while complainant was under arrest and in custody at police station, officer's use of dangerous instrument was sufficiently demonstrated by evidence that he used stun gun, and that stun gun could cause serious or protracted disfigurement, substantial pain and burns to body and, if applied to eye, could cause loss or impairment of functioning of eye. People v MacCary, 173 A.D.2d 646, 570 N.Y.S.2d 322, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7646 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 78 N.Y.2d 969, 574 N.Y.S.2d 949, 580 N.E.2d 421, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 4454 (N.Y. 1991).

Defendant's conviction of second degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.05(2) was supported by victim's testimony that, immediately after defendant punched him, he saw that defendant was holding "printer's guide" inside his fist, since jury could properly conclude that printer's guide (solid metal cylindrical object measuring 2 inches in length and weighing about one and one-half pounds), which was used to reinforce impact of fist blow, was readily capable of causing serious physical injury and thus constituted "dangerous instrument" pursuant to CLS Penal § 10.00(13). People v Goode, 179 A.D.2d 676, 578 N.Y.S.2d 611, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 246 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 79 N.Y.2d 1001, 584 N.Y.S.2d 456, 594 N.E.2d 950, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 2700 (N.Y. 1992).

Wrench was "dangerous instrument" within meaning of CLS Penal § 120.05(2) where defendant struck victim in head with wrench and caused 2-inch laceration, and physician testified that blow could have caused fractured skull, although it did not. People v White, 185 A.D.2d 460, 586 N.Y.S.2d 337, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8963 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 80 N.Y.2d 935, 589 N.Y.S.2d 863, 603 N.E.2d 968, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 4203 (N.Y. 1992).

Defendant was properly convicted of first degree robbery and second degree assault since evidence established that bottle used to strike victim was dangerous instrument where victim sustained cuts, swelling, and scarring, as well as cyst-like knot over ear, which was clotted with blood and had to be lanced and drained. People v Jacobs, 188 A.D.2d 897, 592 N.Y.S.2d 802, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14632 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 887, 597 N.Y.S.2d 949, 613 N.E.2d 981, 1993 N.Y. Defendant was properly convicted of second degree assault where, using child's toy baseball bat, he hit victim on head twice and on arm once, causing contusions, headaches, and pain to arm, which restricted her use of arm for significant period of time and resulted in her absence from work for several days; as used, bat was capable of causing serious physical injury, and thus constituted "dangerous instrument." People v Torres, 211 A.D.2d 509, 621 N.Y.S.2d 340, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 390 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 86 N.Y.2d 742, 631 N.Y.S.2d 622, 655 N.E.2d 719, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 3311 (N.Y. 1995).

Court erred in dismissing those counts of indictment charging second degree assault for failure to show that, in manner in which they were used, belt and wall constituted dangerous instruments where there was testimony that defendant struck his 12-year-old son 6 or 7 times, and perhaps up to 10 times, in whipping motion with leather belt he usually wore with his police uniform, and that defendant struck back of son's head against wall in family home several times with sufficient force to crack wall. People v Prue, 219 A.D.2d 873, 632 N.Y.S.2d 347, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11044 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1995).

Use of "dangerous instrument" was sufficiently established in prosecution for second degree assault by complainant's testimony that he saw "brown stick" approximately 15 to 16 inches long, and eyewitnesses' testimony describing foot-long dark object with strap hanging from it like "billy stick" or "black, long object." People v Rivera, 223 A.D.2d 514, 637 N.Y.S.2d 377, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 712 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 884, 645 N.Y.S.2d 458, 668 N.E.2d 429, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 2283 (N.Y. 1996).

Pen and pencil constituted dangerous instruments under CLS Penal § 120.05(2) where defendant used them in menacing manner and tried to stab police officer with pen. People v Molnar, 234 A.D.2d 988, 652 N.Y.S.2d 186, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13764 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1996), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 1038, 659 N.Y.S.2d 869, 681 N.E.2d 1316, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 1696 (N.Y. 1997).

Family Court properly found that juvenile committed acts which, if committed by adult, would constitute second degree menacing, fourth degree weapon possession and second degree attempted assault, where victim unequivocally testified that juvenile chased and struck him in back with baseball bat. In re Anthony D., 237 A.D.2d 706, 654 N.Y.S.2d 855, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2261 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Conviction for second degree assault would be reduced to third degree assault where defendant was charged with causing physical injury to fellow jail inmate by means of dangerous instrument (his sneakers) but there was no proof that he was wearing sneakers or any other footwear; admission by defendant's attorney in his opening statement did not constitute evidence and did not relieve People of their burden of proof. People v Johnson, 241 A.D.2d 954, 661 N.Y.S.2d 326, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7904 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1997).

Evidence showed that, using dangerous instrument (scissors), defendant intentionally caused physical injury to victim consisting of physical impairment to her finger where victim testified that, after becoming upset with her, defendant through scissors at her causing laceration to finger on her hand which she was using to shield herself, he thereafter chased her and stabbed her in leg with scissors, cut on finger resulted in visible scar and she lost feeling to tip portion of finger which persisted as of time of trial, 2 years and 8 months later, and her family physician testified that he treated her about 4 days later and opined that she had sustained some nerve damage to finger and that injury was consistent with injury inflicted by scissors. People v West, 271 A.D.2d 806, 708 N.Y.S.2d 478, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4438 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 893, 715 N.Y.S.2d 386, 738 N.E.2d 790, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3392 (N.Y. 2000).

Assault conviction would be reduced from second to third degree where teeth are not "dangerous instrument" under Penal Law. People v Silva, 273 A.D.2d 417, 709 N.Y.S.2d 612, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7032 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 857, 714 N.Y.S.2d 9, 736 N.E.2d 870, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 2762 (N.Y. 2000).

Defendant could not be convicted of second degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.05(2), or of attempt to commit that crime, where compressed balls of wet toilet paper that he threw at correction officer in jail from distance of 12 to 15 feet were not "readily capable of causing death or other serious physical injury" under CLS Penal § 10.00(13) and thus were not dangerous instruments under § 120.05(2). People v Travis, 273 A.D.2d 544, 711 N.Y.S.2d 514, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6697 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Defendant's work boots were dangerous instrument so as to support conviction of attempted second degree assault where 28-year-old defendant used them to kick 15-year-old victim in head, chest, stomach, and legs, and thus boots were used in manner readily capable of causing serious physical injury. People v Ray, 273 A.D.2d 611, 710 N.Y.S.2d 138, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7226 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

In second degree assault trial, evidence that defendant was wearing work boots when he kicked victim and when he was subsequently arrested was sufficient for jury to find that he employed dangerous instrument during assault. People v Taylor, 276 A.D.2d 933, 714 N.Y.S.2d 785, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10825 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 788, 725 N.Y.S.2d 653, 749 N.E.2d 222, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1323 (N.Y. 2001).

Defendant was properly convicted of attempted second degree assault on evidence that he used umbrella in manner that rendered it dangerous instrument. People v Dones, 279 A.D.2d 366, 720 N.Y.S.2d 101, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 671 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 799, 726 N.Y.S.2d 377, 750 N.E.2d 79, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1583 (N.Y. 2001).

Evidence was legally sufficient to support defendant's conviction of assault in the second degree, a violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2), where (1) even though a broom was not inherently dangerous, the evidence established that at least some of the multiple injuries sustained by defendant's wife were caused by means of a "dangerous instrument" within the meaning of N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(13) where defendant used a broom as an instrument readily capable of causing serious physical injury under the facts of the case by striking his wife with the broom numerous times about the head, arms, and back, and (2) viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the People, the evidence was legally sufficient to establish that the victim sustained physical injury within the meaning of N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(9). People v Becker, 298 A.D.2d 986, 748 N.Y.S.2d 299, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9156 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 99 N.Y.2d 555, 754 N.Y.S.2d 207, 784 N.E.2d 80, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 4258 (N.Y. 2002).

Defendant was properly convicted of assault in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05 after striking his girlfriend in the head with a television remote control because even an otherwise innocuous item such as a remote control could become a "dangerous instrument" depending on the manner in which it was used. People v Krotoszynski, 43 A.D.3d 450, 840 N.Y.S.2d 627, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9065 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 9 N.Y.3d 962, 848 N.Y.S.2d 31, 878 N.E.2d 615, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 3664 (N.Y. 2007).

Legally sufficient evidence was presented to support defendant's conviction of assault in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2) by establishing defendant injured the victim by using a dangerous instrument as the nature of the victim's wounds supported an inference that defendant used a sharp, dangerous instrument to inflict those wounds. People v Brown, 52 A.D.3d 1237, 859 N.Y.S.2d 548, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5219 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 956, 863 N.Y.S.2d 140, 893 N.E.2d 446, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 2922 (N.Y. 2008).

Sufficient evidence was presented to the grand jury to support an indictment for second degree assault, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2), based on the complainant's allegation that defendant threw her down a flight of stairs to a concrete landing below; based on the temporary use of the concrete landing, it satisfied the element of "dangerous instrument" for purposes of a charge of second degree assault. Any instrument, article or substance, no matter how innocuous it was when used for its legitimate purpose, became a dangerous instrument when used in a manner which rendered it readily capable of causing serious physical injury and, given the procedural posture of the case, the People were entitled to the favorable inference that defendant intended to injure the victim on the concrete landing. People v Warren, 98 A.D.3d 634, 949 N.Y.S.2d 496, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5912 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2012).

Trial court properly granted defendant's motion to reduce his conviction of second-degree assault to third-degree assault because, while a sidewalk or concrete surface could, in certain circumstances, be "used" as a dangerous instrument and the victim's injuries were undoubtedly caused by his head striking a sidewalk, it could not be said that defendant, in the act of punching the victim, "used" the sidewalk such that he was "aware of and consciously disregarded a substantial and unjustified risk" that the sidewalk was "readily capable of causing serious physical injury." People v McElroy, 139 A.D.3d 980, 31 N.Y.S.3d 593, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3762 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2016).

Trial court properly convicted defendant of attempted second-degree murder, first- and second-degree strangulation, and second-degree assault because he threatened to kill his 65-year-old mother after she accidentally woke him up and then brutally beat, kicked, and choked her to the point where she lost consciousness, the absence of a long-term serious injury to the mother did not preclude the finding of life-threatening actions by defendant, and the way that defendant used headphones—hitting the mother in the mouth and trying to shove them down her throat—qualified them as a dangerous instrument. People v Ryder, 146 A.D.3d 1022, 44 N.Y.S.3d 598, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 59 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 29 N.Y.3d 1086, 86 N.E.3d 263, 64 N.Y.S.3d 176, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 2285 (N.Y. 2017).

Rocks are not "deadly weapons" or "dangerous instrumentalities" within the meaning of the statute. In re Taylor, 62 Misc. 2d 529, 309 N.Y.S.2d 368, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1927 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. 1970).

Evidence was legally sufficient to establish beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant used a portion of a cement sidewalk as a dangerous instrument for purposes of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 10.00(13), 120.05(2), where (1) the testimony witnesses indicated that defendant stomped upon the victim's head and face as the victim lay prone upon a cement sidewalk; (2) the victim's injuries included straight abrasions on the victim's temple, indicating that the victim's head was in contact with a straight edge consistent with a curb; and (3) the medical testimony reflected that the fractures on the victim's jaw were consistent with being stomped upon. People v Melville, 298 A.D.2d 601, 749 N.Y.S.2d 65, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10274 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2002), app. denied, 99 N.Y.2d 617, 757 N.Y.S.2d 828, 787 N.E.2d 1174, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 587 (N.Y. 2003).

Conviction of second degree assault was based on legally sufficient evidence and was not against the weight of the evidence under circumstances in which, during the course of an argument with his girlfriend, the victim, defendant kicked her in the head with his steel-toed boot; steel-toed boots, worn while kicking someone in the head, could have constituted a dangerous instrument under the assault statute. The boots, together with the testimony of the victim, her treating medical provider and the arresting officer, constituted sufficient evidence that defendant was guilty of assault in the second degree, and the verdict was not against the weight of the evidence. People v Roblee, 70 A.D.3d 225, 890 N.Y.S.2d 166, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8719 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2009).

Conviction of assault in the second degree was supported by sufficient evidence under circumstances in which, while attacking the victim, defendant used the kitchen floor and countertop as a dangerous instrument by repeatedly forcing the victim's head against each surface intending to cause her physical injury; although defendant argued that neither the floor nor the countertop were used as dangerous instruments, an expert called by defendant did not deny, under the facts presented, that the victim's head could have been forced against the countertop and floor during the encounter and that such contact could have caused her physical injury. People v Bonney, 69 A.D.3d 1116, 894 N.Y.S.2d 192, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 401 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 14 N.Y.3d 838, 901 N.Y.S.2d 145, 927 N.E.2d 566, 2010 N.Y. LEXIS 1457 (N.Y. 2010).

In a case involving assault in the second degree, the grievous injuries suffered by a victim did not substitute for the absence of evidence that defendant was aware of and used a sidewalk as a dangerous instrument where the victim hit his head on the sidewalk after being punched by defendant; however, defendant's actions, especially in an intoxicated condition, in punching the unsuspecting victim about the head disregarded the risk that he would fall and be injured and showed recklessness. Therefore, the charge was reduced to third degree assault. People v McElroy, 981 N.Y.S.2d 298, 43 Misc. 3d 558, 2014 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 711 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2014), aff'd, 139 A.D.3d 980, 31 N.Y.S.3d 593, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3762 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2016).

29. Prevention of officer's performance of duty, generally

While § 120.05, subd 3 of the Penal Law requires no particular degree of physical impairment or substantial pain, under the definition of physical injury in the Penal Law, to sustain a conviction, there must be evidence establishing the one or the other. People v McDowell, 28 N.Y.2d 373, 321 N.Y.S.2d 894, 270 N.E.2d 716, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 1297 (N.Y. 1971).

One is guilty of assault, second degree, if he causes physical injury to a peace officer with intent to prevent the officer from performing his duty. People v Moore, 47 A.D.2d 980, 367 N.Y.S.2d 123, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9464 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

Attempted second degree assault on peace officer is not fictitious crime. In re Belinda B., 133 A.D.2d 225, 519 N.Y.S.2d 28, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49726 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

CLS Penal § 120.05(3) does not violate equal protection by raising degree of assault where victim is peace officer, firefighter or paramedic; crime victim's status as peace officer performing his regular duties may properly be regarded as aggravating circumstance. People v Cortez, 143 A.D.2d 464, 532 N.Y.S.2d 585, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9229 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

Deputy's testimony that defendant interfered with investigation of domestic dispute call by refusing to get into patrol car, making scene and yelling, and not cooperating, was legally insufficient to establish "intent to prevent police offer from performing lawful duty," and thus did not support second degree assault convictions, where defendant, having been specifically told that he was not under arrest, merely did what he was entitled to do, and he became agitated and "disorderly" only when deputy remained adamant that he get into patrol car. People v William "EE" 276 A.D.2d 918, 714 N.Y.S.2d 590 (3d Dept 2000).

To establish defendant's guilt of resisting arrest, second degree assault, and second degree obstructing governmental administration, People were required to prove that officer had probable cause to arrest him for disorderly conduct, but were not required to prove that he actually committed disorderly conduct. People v McDermott, 279 A.D.2d 361, 719 N.Y.S.2d 76, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 415 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 803, 726 N.Y.S.2d 381, 750 N.E.2d 83, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1677 (N.Y. 2001).

Where the verdict was based on legally sufficient evidence showing that defendant acted for purposes of sexual gratification, in violation of N.Y Penal Law § 130.00(3) and that defendant physically injured a police officer while intending to prevent the officer from performing a lawful duty, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3), the trial court properly denied defendant's N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 440.10 motion to vacate the judgment. People v Johnson, 6 A.D.3d 226, 774 N.Y.S.2d 532, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4068 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 3 N.Y.3d 642, 782 N.Y.S.2d 413, 816 N.E.2d 203, 2004 N.Y. 30. —Police officers

Eyewitness testimony that defendant kneed officer in groin, that codefendant joined in the assault, that police officer drew his revolver and told defendants they were under arrest, that both defendants continued to resist arrest and got away and that in the course and in furtherance of escape defendant shot and killed officer was sufficient to establish beyond a reasonable doubt the crimes of second degree assault (Penal Law § 120.05, subd 3), second degree escape (Penal Law § 205.10), and felony murder (Penal Law § 125.25, subd 3). People v Bornholdt, 33 N.Y.2d 75, 350 N.Y.S.2d 369, 305 N.E.2d 461, 1973 N.Y. LEXIS 985 (N.Y. 1973), cert. denied, 416 U.S. 905, 94 S. Ct. 1609, 40 L. Ed. 2d 109, 1974 U.S. LEXIS 687 (U.S. 1974).

It was reversible error to introduce into evidence a butcher knife taken from defendant during a scuffle with police, where defendant was not charged with possession of the knife and there was no testimony he had attempted to reach for or use the knife in any manner while resisting lawful apprehension in violation of former Penal Law § 242(5). People v Henry, 31 A.D.2d 943, 298 N.Y.S.2d 879, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4453 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1969).

While there was no direct testimony by police officer as to his experiencing substantial pain and inference that a six-foot man weighing between 210 and 215 pounds, who struck him with a closed fist in the right eye knocking him to the ground, was sufficient to support a conviction for assault in the second degree. People v McDowell, 35 A.D.2d 611, 312 N.Y.S.2d 477, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4111 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970), modified, 28 N.Y.2d 373, 321 N.Y.S.2d 894, 270 N.E.2d 716, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 1297 (N.Y. 1971).

At his trial on charges of obstructing governmental administration and assaulting several sheriff's deputies, it was not objectionable hearsay for the defendant, his brother and mother to testify that a justice of the peace had instructed the defendant and his brother that they would not be photographed or fingerprinted, where this evidence was offered to establish the reasonable belief by the defendant that the police officers were acting outside their lawful authority in processing him and his brother for commitment to the county jail on unrelated charges. People v Stewart, 37 A.D.2d 908, 325 N.Y.S.2d 533, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3137 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1971).

In prosecution for, inter alia, assaulting two police officers, trial court's midtrial denial of defendant's request for continuance to enable him to subpoena witness whose statement had just been revealed to defendant by prosecution was prejudicial error, in view of fact that defendant asserted that he resisted plainclothes police officers because he did not know they were police officers and witness' statement asserted that defendant yelled "get the cops" during the struggle. People v Smith, 50 A.D.2d 670, 375 N.Y.S.2d 194, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12508 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

In a prosecution for second-degree assault, conviction would be reversed where a police officer's back pains, after being kicked and punched by defendant, had failed to rise to the level required in order to constitute physical injury absent impairment of the officer's physical condition. People v Marrero, 88 A.D.2d 998, 451 N.Y.S.2d 836, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17402 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1982).

In a prosecution for assault on a police officer under Pen Law § 120.05(3), the six-foot-four-inch-tall, two-hundred-and-forty-five-pound officer sustained a "physical injury" within the meaning of the statute, where the officer testified that defendant's punch was a "hard blow" which drove him back a step or two, caused his face to go numb, induced bleeding from the nose, which recurred over the next three or four days, and generated a cut on the inside of his mouth, and further testified that his nose and lip "hurt quite well" during a three or four day period after the incident. People v Chesebro, 94 A.D.2d 897, 463 N.Y.S.2d 711, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18351 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1983).

In a prosecution for second degree assault under Penal Law § 120.05(3), the evidence of "physical injury" under Penal Law § 10.00(9), inflicted on the complainant police officer, was sufficient to support defendant's conviction where the testimony and a photograph admitted into evidence established that the blow inflicted on the officer resulted in a bleeding laceration approximately one inch long under his eye that required medical attention, and where the officer testified that the blow "stunned" him, caused him to experience "substantial pain," and resulted in his missing five days of work. People v Starling, 104 A.D.2d 742 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1984).

In trial for assault in second degree for inflicting of physical injury on police officer when officer was in course of performing his duties, photographs depicting injuries inflicted by defendant are probative of element of physical injury and may be properly admitted. People v Cuffee, 112 A.D.2d 545, 491 N.Y.S.2d 483, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 55904 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1985).

Grand jury evidence was sufficient to establish prima facie case, based on accessorial liability, for reckless endangerment in first degree and assault in second degree where police officer testified that while holding onto limousine in attempt to stop vehicle from leaving scene he heard passenger (defendant) yell to driver "get out of here, go, go, go," whereupon driver accelerated vehicle and collided with bus, injuring officer; evidence, if unexplained, would tend to establish that defendant was cognizant of grave risk of death to officer if driver accelerated and, despite this awareness, instructed driver to accelerate in order to avoid apprehension. People v Fraser, 126 A.D.2d 740, 511 N.Y.S.2d 326, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 41891 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Police officer had probable cause to arrest defendant for criminal trespass where, during course of informing remaining tenants that they had to vacate condemned building, officer discovered defendant, who was not listed as tenant, inside apartment whose lock had been broken; thus, defendant was not entitled to dismissal of indictment charging him with second degree assault on ground that police officers, whom defendant attacked while being escorted to cellblock following his arrest, were not performing their lawful duties. People v Kent, 143 A.D.2d 278, 532 N.Y.S.2d 152, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8900 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 856, 537 N.Y.S.2d 503, 534 N.E.2d 341 (N.Y. 1988).

In prosecution for second degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.05(3), mere fact that police officers failed to inform defendant of charges contained in outstanding arrest warrant did not render their actions unlawful in attempting to arrest defendant. People v Douglas, 143 A.D.2d 452, 532 N.Y.S.2d 446, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9138 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

Police officer's statements that defendant injured officers by kicking, punching and biting them while they were making arrest, and scattering newspapers at nearby newsstand, if found to be true, would establish that defendant committed each element of crimes of second degree assault, menacing, resisting arrest, second degree obstruction of governmental administration, and fourth degree criminal mischief. In re Jeremy B., 151 A.D.2d 314, 542 N.Y.S.2d 582, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7904 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1989).

Evidence supported convictions for second degree assault and resisting arrest where (1) officer had pursued defendant with lights and sirens activated in attempt to execute arrest warrant, (2) defendant finally stopped in front of his brother's house, (3) as officer attempted to execute warrant, defendant punched, kicked, and threatened him, and (4) as result of attack officer sustained large bruises, several cuts, and severe headache; defendant's testimony that officer initially attacked him without first telling him of arrest warrant merely raised credibility question for jury. People v Winslow, 153 A.D.2d 965, 545 N.Y.S.2d 405, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11512 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Defendant's arrest for assaulting police officer and resisting arrest was not rendered illegal by arresting officer's failure to inform him of his authority and purpose and of reason for arrest, as required by CLS CPL § 140.15(2), even assuming that notice requirement is element of proof in assault and resisting arrest prosecution, since officer's noncompliance with statute was excusable given that defendant's conduct, in refusing to stop and walking away from officer and then assaulting him, rendered compliance with statute impracticable. People v Battest, 168 A.D.2d 958, 564 N.Y.S.2d 910, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16514 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1990), app. denied, 77 N.Y.2d 958, 570 N.Y.S.2d 491, 573 N.E.2d 579, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 1362 (N.Y. 1991).

County Court properly refused to charge justification as defense to second degree assault where prosecution witnesses testified thatdefendant violently resisted arrest resulting in injuries to himself as well as police officers (which led to assault charge), and defense witness (defendant's wife) instead testified that defendant was victim of unprovoked police attack and did nothing to cause injury to himself or police. People v Fiacco, 172 A.D.2d 994, 569 N.Y.S.2d 219, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4912 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 78 N.Y.2d 965, 574 N.Y.S.2d 945, 580 N.E.2d 417, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 4365 (N.Y. 1991).

Defendant was entitled to vacation of convictions for second degree assault where (1) at about 3:00 a.m., officers decided to approach automobile solely because surrounding location was high crime area and automobile was near house which was hangout for drugs and prostitution, (2) officer driving patrol car maneuvered it into position next to defendant's automobile and other officer asked driver to produce license and registration, (3) defendant gave officer finger and began to drive away, (4) officer maneuvered patrol car to block path of defendant's automobile, got of his car with revolver and flashlight, and approached passenger side of defendant's automobile, while other officer approached driver's side, (5) defendant ignored commands to exit his automobile and began to drive away, striking one officer, and (6) while officers began to shoot at him, defendant continued to drive away, hitting other officer; officers had no right to demand license and registration and had no right to arrest or detain defendant when he refused to comply, and thus officers were not performing lawful duty within meaning of CLS Penal § 120.05(3) at time they were injured. People v Voliton, 190 A.D.2d 764, 593 N.Y.S.2d 822, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1011 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1993), aff'd, 83 N.Y.2d 192, 608 N.Y.S.2d 945, 630 N.E.2d 641, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 163 (N.Y. 1994).

Second degree assault conviction was supported by evidence that, in attempt to arrest defendant, officer and defendant struggled until second officer arrived and defendant was restrained, and that during struggle, officer's finger was sprained. People v Pacheco, 204 A.D.2d 577, 612 N.Y.S.2d 179, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5268 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 83 N.Y.2d 970, 616 N.Y.S.2d 23, 639 N.E.2d 763, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 2505 (N.Y. 1994).

Charged violations of CLS Penal §§ 120.05(3) and 205.30(a) and CLS Veh & Tr §§ 1225-a and 1102 could properly serve as predicate for action under CLS Gen Mun § 205-e where complaint alleged that (1) while on duty as police officer, plaintiff saw defendant drive vehicle onto sidewalk, (2) defendant refused plaintiff's continuing directions to stop and then jumped out of car and "came up at" him, and (3) defendant refused to be handcuffed and struggled with plaintiff, causing him to fall on ground and be injured. Healy v Moeller, 242 A.D.2d 366, 661 N.Y.S.2d 279, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8466 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

Police officers properly approached defendant in response to emergency call of shots fired minutes earlier at location where he was found, fact that he fled in his car on their approach gave them reasonable suspicion to stop and detain him, and thus they were engaged in lawful activity when they were injured by defendant during chase, for purpose of upholding his second degree assault convictions. People v Sawyer, 270 A.D.2d 293, 704 N.Y.S.2d 604, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2473 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 803, 711 N.Y.S.2d 172, 733 N.E.2d 244, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 2153 (N.Y. 2000).

With regard to a second-degree assault conviction under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3), the People had proven the legality of the police conduct in that there was probable cause to believe that an order of protection regarding defendant's girlfriend, which was the predicate for an arrest attempt during which an officer was injured, had been violated. Defendant's aggressive actions in the presence of the officers, the distraught condition of the girlfriend, and the disheveled condition of the apartment amounted to probable cause to believe that defendant had harassed, menaced, intimidated, or otherwise threatened her; moreover, her warning that defendant might grab a knife when he ran into the kitchen presented a safety situation for the officers, and they acted lawfully in attempting to restrain defendant. People v Rivera, 46 A.D.3d 349, 847 N.Y.S.2d 556, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12715 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2007), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 815, 857 N.Y.S.2d 49, 886 N.E.2d 814, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 1322 (N.Y. 2008).

Convictions for assault in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3), resisting arrest, N.Y. Penal Law § 205.30, and obstructing governmental administration in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 195.05, were improper because there was insufficient evidence to establish that the arrest was lawful; officers lacked reasonable cause to believe that defendant committed offense in their presence, and defendant was not required to respond to the officers' request for identification or to open his door to the officers. Further, the officers were aware that defendant initially provided a fictitious name to them, and thus they lacked reasonable cause to believe that defendant had committed the crime of criminal impersonation. People v Perez, 47 A.D.3d 1192, 851 N.Y.S.2d 747, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2857 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 814, 857 N.Y.S.2d 48, 886 N.E.2d 813, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 1266 (N.Y. 2008).

Defendant's conviction for assault in the second degree was not against the weight of the evidence because defendant, inter alia, refused to speak with the police, walked away, hit an officer in the face with a lemon wedge, broke free of an officer's grasp and bit him on the hand, punched and head butted a second officer, and refused repeated orders to stop struggling; defendant acknowledged that the occupants of the vehicle that approached her were in uniform. People v McLean, 128 A.D.3d 1106, 8 N.Y.S.3d 696, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3842 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 25 N.Y.3d 1204, 37 N.E.3d 1169, 16 N.Y.S.3d 526, 2015 N.Y. LEXIS 2402 (N.Y. 2015).

A petition to declare a girl a juvenile delinquent who bit a police officer on the arm as he was trying to put her into a police car, does not provide sufficient proof to adjudicate her guilty of conduct which would constitute assault in the second degree, i.e., causing injury to a peace officer with intent to prevent him from performing a lawful duty (Penal Law, § 120.05, subd 3), where the officer testified that she was not being arrested for alleged acts of criminal mischief, but, rather, was going to be taken home; even if she were intoxicated, as the officer suspected, such condition would not constitute a crime for which an arrest could be made; therefore, the attempt to put her in the police car was not a duty of the type authorized under the Family Court Act. In re Musso, 102 Misc. 2d 934, 424 N.Y.S.2d 855, 1980 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2039 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. 1980).

Defendant was properly charged with assault in the second degree (Pen Law § 120.05[3]) for causing physical injury to a police officer with intent to prevent the officer from performing a lawful duty, where the officer, who, while struggling with defendant to place him under arrest during a drug bust, cut his hand on a serrated kitchen knife in defendant's pocket. People v Rakusz, 127 Misc. 2d 1, 484 N.Y.S.2d 784, 1985 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2533 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1985).

31. —Correctional officers

In trial for second degree assault of prison guard arising from scuffle which occurred when guards entered defendant's cell to supervise his reassignment to segregated custody following his alleged attempted assault on another inmate, whether defendant was convicted of attempting to assault inmate or only charged with that crime was irrelevant to propriety of court's ruling during trial that defendant opened door to proof of attempted assault by suggesting to jury that there was no legitimate basis for his confinement, as allegation of attempted assault on inmate gave jail authorities valid basis to confine him as they did. People v Rojas, 97 N.Y.2d 32, 735 N.Y.S.2d 470, 760 N.E.2d 1265, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 3373 (N.Y. 2001).

Defendant's conviction for second-degree assault upon a corrections officer would be affirmed, even though defendant testified that he merely acted in self-defense to the officer's unprovoked attack, where the officer testified that defendant struck him during a pat-down search and had to be wrestled to the floor, causing the officer to sustain a neck injury, dizziness, blurred vision and a headache, and where the conflict in testimony presented questions of fact and credibility that the jury implicitly resolved against defendant. People v Roberts, 91 A.D.2d 1099, 458 N.Y.S.2d 355, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16442 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1983).

In a prosecution for second-degree assault by a prisoner on a corrections officer, the court properly permitted an amendment to the indictment to delete a phrase describing what the prisoner was doing while he was being guarded, where the theory of the indictment was not altered by the deletion, in that the indictment still alleged that the defendant intended to prevent a peace officer from performing his lawful duty. People v La Boy, 91 A.D.2d 1102, 458 N.Y.S.2d 361, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16445 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1983).

Testimony of 2 correctional officers that defendant and other inmates repeatedly attacked several officers during prison riot was sufficient to establish element of specific intent necessary for conviction under CLS Penal § 120.05; it was readily inferable that defendant and other inmates not only intended to inflict injury on guards, but also shared common purpose to prolong uprising and forestall its suppression through their indiscriminate assaults against officers, thereby establishing requisite intent to prevent guards from performing their lawful duties. People v Allah, 126 A.D.2d 778, 510 N.Y.S.2d 725, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 41938 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987).

In prosecution of inmate for assault in second degree on prison guard, County Court did not abuse its discretion in permitting prosecution to show that inmate was subject to "cuff order" while imprisoned which required handcuffing and frisk before accompanying him to exercise facilities, since evidence was highly relevant to inmate's justification defense and question of whether guard was performing lawful duty in cuffing inmate when assault occurred. People v Sanders, 127 A.D.2d 937, 512 N.Y.S.2d 528, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 43426 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), rev'd, 70 N.Y.2d 837, 523 N.Y.S.2d 444, 517 N.E.2d 1330, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19059 (N.Y. 1987).

Proof was sufficient to establish that inmate caused physical injury to correction officer within meaning of second degree assault statute (CLS Penal § 120.05) where, during struggle initiated by inmate as he was being escorted by officer to recreation yard, officer fell and landed on mop pail, resulting in 3 broken ribs and loss of 64 duty days. People v Wandell, 136 A.D.2d 771, 523 N.Y.S.2d 228, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 46 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 974, 529 N.Y.S.2d 85, 524 N.E.2d 439, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 2089 (N.Y. 1988).

Correction officers at county jail were "peace officers" within meaning of CLS Penal § 120.05(3). People v Velasquez, 202 A.D.2d 1037, 609 N.Y.S.2d 717, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3419 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 83 N.Y.2d 1008, 616 N.Y.S.2d 489, 640 N.E.2d 157, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 3287 (N.Y. 1994), app. denied, 84 N.Y.2d 940, 621 N.Y.S.2d 537, 645 N.E.2d 1237, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 4792 (N.Y. 1994).

Term "penal correctional institution" is sufficiently broad to include county jails, and therefore correction officer at Schenectady County Jail was "peace officer" within meaning of CLS Penal § 120.05(3). People v Holloway, 261 A.D.2d 658, 691 N.Y.S.2d 583, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4679 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 972, 695 N.Y.S.2d 58, 716 N.E.2d 1103, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 2524 (N.Y. 1999).

32. —Miscellaneous officers

Evidence before grand jury was sufficient to establish that defendant intended to prevent campus public safety officer from performing lawful duty and caused her to sustain serious physical injuries, and thus charge of second degree assault was properly reinstated by Appellate Division, where officer had effected lawful arrest for larceny, defendant bolted from officer and ran under bridge, officer caught him by ankle on steep slope, and defendant rolled over and dragged her down slope until she hit concrete abutment, smashing her face and breaking her teeth. People v Jensen, 86 N.Y.2d 248, 630 N.Y.S.2d 989, 654 N.E.2d 1237, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 2230 (N.Y. 1995).

Because it was not apparent whether a response to a request for medical assistance by an emergency medical technician (EMT) was "finished," the evidence was sufficient to conclude that when defendant attacked the EMT as the EMT entered an ambulance, defendant had the intent to prevent the EMT from performing a lawful duty in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3). People v Bueno, 18 N.Y.3d 160, 936 N.Y.S.2d 636, 960 N.E.2d 405, 2011 N.Y. LEXIS 3281 (N.Y. 2011).

Prosecution was properly allowed to reopen its case to present additional evidence that assault victim was peace officer under CLS Penal § 120.05(3) where (1) on direct examination, victim offered competent evidence that he qualified as peace officer under 2 categories in CLS CPL § 2.10 (uniformed court officer of Unified Court System and special patrolman of political subdivision appointed under CLS Gen Mun § 209-v), (2) defense counsel, instead of cross-examining victim on such status, made tactical decision to await close of prosecution's case and then move to dismiss indictment for failure to prove prima facie case, (3) prosecution, when first alerted to claim that its evidence was deficient, offered to submit additional evidence on status issue, and (4) defendant's sole claim of prejudice was that prosecution's additional evidence compelled finding that victim was peace officer. People v Hollis, 255 A.D.2d 615, 680 N.Y.S.2d 678, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11691 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 1033, 684 N.Y.S.2d 498, 707 N.E.2d 453, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4648 (N.Y. 1998).

In prosecution for second degree assault on peace officer, defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel by counsel's failure to raise issue of whether victim qualified as peace officer until after prosecution had rested where (1) counsel used plausible tactic of awaiting close of prosecution's case and then moving to dismiss indictment for failure to prove prima facie case, and (2) regardless of whether alleged weakness in prosecution's evidence were "exposed" during its direct case or after it, result would have been same because of overwhelming evidence that victim qualified as peace officer. People v Hollis, 255 A.D.2d 615, 680 N.Y.S.2d 678, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11691 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 1033, 684 N.Y.S.2d 498, 707 N.E.2d 453, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4648 (N.Y. 1998).

Defendant's conviction for assault in the second degree was against the manifest weight of the evidence because while the trial evidence established that his brother was yelling profanities at the female officer and displaying irate behavior, the evidence was factually insufficient to prove that the female officer was engaged in a lawful duty, as that term was defined to the jury by the supreme court, at the time of the assault by him. People v Truluck, 173 A.D.3d 1070, 102 N.Y.S.3d 671, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4897 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2019).

33. Physical impairment through administration of drugs

Defendant who injected her mother (who had Alzheimer's disease) with overdose of insulin, producing hypoglycemic coma, was not entitled to vacatur of second degree attempted assault conviction on ground that her plea allocution was insufficient because she had denied intent to kill or harm her mother, since deliberate injection substantiated her conviction regardless of her motive; CLS Penal § 120.05(5) is satisfied on proof of intent to cause stupor or unconsciousness, regardless of whether defendant views such results as harmful. People v Hibbard, 150 A.D.2d 929, 541 N.Y.S.2d 272, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6544 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 848, 546 N.Y.S.2d 1012, 546 N.E.2d 195, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 3884 (N.Y. 1989).

Partnership, which operated proprietary hospital, could be charged, as an entity, in an indictment, which charged, in effect, that partnership had permitted unauthorized person to participate in a surgical procedure on an uninformed, nonconsenting patient and falsified records so as to conceal that crime, even if there was no showing of culpability on part of each of the 42 partners. People v Smithtown General Hospital, 92 Misc. 2d 144, 399 N.Y.S.2d 993, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2516 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1977).

Although a salesman of prosthetic devices unlawfully engaged in the practice of medicine without the informed consent of the patient (Education Law, § 6512) under circumstances which did not constitute an emergency (Education Law, § 6527, subd 4) when he participated in a total hip arthroplasty surgical operation after the patient's hip joint became dislocated during the operation, defendants, two orthopedic surgeons, an anesthesiologist and a registered nurse, by unlawfully permitting the salesman to participate in a meaningful way in the surgical procedure, did not act in concert with each other in the commission of an assault within the meaning of subdivision 5 of section 120.05 of the Penal Law, which proscribes the unlawful administration of an anesthetic agent or other stupor producing drug upon a nonconsenting person for a "purpose other than lawful medical or therapeutic treatment" since the conduct of defendants, however ill-advised, was designed in good faith to improve the condition of the patient by the implantation of a total hip and was not by its nature or intent a criminal assault upon the patient within the meaning of the statute. People v Smithtown General Hospital, 93 Misc. 2d 736, 402 N.Y.S.2d 318, 1978 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2128 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1978).

34. Felony assault

Felony assault statute is unambiguous and demonstrates no intent to preclude its application where the underlying felony is nondangerous. People v Fonseca, 36 N.Y.2d 133, 365 N.Y.S.2d 818, 325 N.E.2d 143, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 1722 (N.Y. 1975).

Due process does not preclude a legislative policy determination that a felon who proximately causes injury to another, irrespective of the nature of the underlying felonious act, may be held criminally accountable. People v Fonseca, 36 N.Y.2d 133, 365 N.Y.S.2d 818, 325 N.E.2d 143, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 1722 (N.Y. 1975).

Felony assault statute does not unconstitutionally provide conclusive presumption that felon intends to cause or foresees a possibility of physical injuries resulting from his act but rather ascribes constructive malice to the felon who injures in the course and furtherance of the commission or attempted commission of a felony. People v Fonseca, 36 N.Y.2d 133, 365 N.Y.S.2d 818, 325 N.E.2d 143, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 1722 (N.Y. 1975).

Criminal possession of a stolen vehicle could serve as felony predicate for application of criminal assault statute where defendant, while driving a stolen vehicle and being pursued by police, struck a taxicab and injured two of its occupants. People v Fonseca, 36 N.Y.2d 133, 365 N.Y.S.2d 818, 325 N.E.2d 143, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 1722 (N.Y. 1975).

Felony assault statute, which ascribes constructive malice to felon who injures in the course of his felony, is not unconstitutional. People v Fonseca, 36 N.Y.2d 133, 365 N.Y.S.2d 818, 325 N.E.2d 143, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 1722 (N.Y. 1975).

In a prosecution for rape and assault, defendants' convictions for assault would be dismissed where the People failed to prove that the victim of the alleged assault suffered physical injury within the meaning of Pen Law § 120.05(6) and § 10.00(9), in that the testimony that the victim suffered a one centimeter cut above her lip without more was inadequate to prove that the victim suffered either "substantial pain" or "impairment of physical condition." People v Jimenez, 55 N.Y.2d 895, 449 N.Y.S.2d 22, 433 N.E.2d 1270, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3097 (N.Y. 1982).

Issue of whether second degree assault (felony assault) occurred during immediate flight from predicate felony is question of fact to be decided by jury. People v Spivey, 81 N.Y.2d 356, 599 N.Y.S.2d 477, 615 N.E.2d 961, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 1737 (N.Y. 1993).

Defendant need not be physically present at scene of second degree assault (felony assault) in order to be convicted of crime; it is sufficient that assault is made on nonparticipant of predicate felony "in furtherance of the commission or attempted commission of [the] felony...or of immediate flight therefrom." People v Spivey, 81 N.Y.2d 356, 599 N.Y.S.2d 477, 615 N.E.2d 961, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 1737 (N.Y. 1993).

A conviction for second-degree assault under PenaL Law § 120.05(6) would be changed to a conviction for attempt to commit second-degree assault under Penal Law §§ 110.00 and 120.05(6), where the evidence that the complainant suffered a physical injury within the meaning of Penal Law § 10.00(9) was too insubstantial to permit any conviction of which physical injury was an essential element to stand. People v Hernandez, 91 A.D.2d 227, 458 N.Y.S.2d 227, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16118 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), rev'd, 59 N.Y.2d 881, 465 N.Y.S.2d 932, 452 N.E.2d 1260, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 3211 (N.Y. 1983).

Defendant's conviction for first-degree robbery would be reversed and charge would be dismissed, and his conviction for second-degree assault would be reduced to conviction for third-degree assault pursuant to CLS CPL § 470.15, where victim got into argument with one of several codefendants about someone sitting on victim's car, defendant was one of several men who brutally beat victim after escalation of verbal altercation, and some unknown person robbed victim during incident; robbery conviction could not stand without proof of specific intent to steal, and although whichever person took victim's money clearly intended to do so, that unidentified person's intent could not be imputed to defendant, and second-degree assault conviction could not stand since there was no proof defendant committed or attempted to commit any underlying felony. People v De Jesus, 123 A.D.2d 563, 507 N.Y.S.2d 144, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 60699 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1986).

In prosecution for robbery, burglary, attempted rape, and felony assault, defendant's acquittal of all underlying crimes required vacatur of verdict convicting him of felony assault, since jury's determination on assault count was inconsistent with and repugnant to their finding of defendant's nonguilt on underlying counts given rule that conviction for either underlying felony or its attempted commission is essential element of crime of felony assault. People v Sanchez, 128 A.D.2d 377, 512 N.Y.S.2d 389, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 44095 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1987).

In reversing defendant's first degree robbery conviction for insufficient evidence, court would reduce defendant's second degree assault conviction to lesser included offense of third degree assault since no felony or attempted felony was proven, but there was sufficient evidence to support lesser charge. People v Morales, 130 A.D.2d 366, 515 N.Y.S.2d 27, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 46375 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1987).

In delinquency proceeding, juvenile could not be found guilty of attempting acts which, if committed by adult, would constitute second degree felony assault, since there is no such crime as attempted felony assault. In re Maldonado, 131 A.D.2d 367, 516 N.Y.S.2d 673, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 47848 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 608, 521 N.Y.S.2d 224, 515 N.E.2d 909, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 18931 (N.Y. 1987).

The intent necessary to sustain a conviction for felony assault may be inferred from the intent to commit the underlying felony, and the issue of whether the assault occurred during the immediate flight from a predicate felony is a question of fact to be decided by a jury; a defendant need not be physically present at the scene of an assault. People v Spivey, 177 A.D.2d 216, 581 N.Y.S.2d 739, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3473 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1992), modified, aff'd, 81 N.Y.2d 356, 599 N.Y.S.2d 477, 615 N.E.2d 961, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 1737 (N.Y. 1993).

There is no requirement that defendant be found guilty of completed robbery to sustain conviction for second degree assault. People v Butler, 187 A.D.2d 439, 589 N.Y.S.2d 542, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12485 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1992), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 786, 594 N.Y.S.2d 732, 610 N.E.2d 405, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 349 (N.Y. 1993).

Defendant's guilty plea to felony driving while intoxicated in violation of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law §§ 1192(2), (3), 1193(1)(c)(ii) could not serve as the underlying felonies for purposes of liability for assault in the second degree under an "in the course of and in furtherance of" provision in N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(6), the court reversed defendant's assault conviction. However, it affirmed his convictions and sentences on the driving while intoxicated felony convictions. People v Rucinski, 24 A.D.3d 1171, 808 N.Y.S.2d 511, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13914 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2005).

Conviction for a felony driving while intoxicated crime may not serve as the underlying felony for assault in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(6). People v Rucinski, 24 A.D.3d 1171, 808 N.Y.S.2d 511, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13914 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2005).

Evidence was legally insufficient to show that defendant violated N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(7) because the evidence was insufficient to establish that the facility where the assault took place was a correctional facility within the meaning of former N.Y. Correct. Law § 40(3); the plain language of former N.Y. Correct. Law § 40(3) supported the interpretation that the reference to a secure facility operated by the state division for youth in the statute's definition of a correctional facility applied only to N.Y. Correct. Law art. 3 and not to § 120.05(7). People v Skinner, 94 A.D.3d 1516, 943 N.Y.S.2d 338, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3288 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2012).

Defendant's convictions for robbery in the first degree, criminal possession of a weapon in the second degree, and assault in the second degree were not against the manifest weight of the evidence because the victim's initial reluctance to cooperate with the police investigation and to testify at trial was adequately explained, and his testimony was corroborated by other evidence. People v Thomas, 176 A.D.3d 1639, 111 N.Y.S.3d 155, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7199 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 34 N.Y.3d 1082, 139 N.E.3d 824, 116 N.Y.S.3d 166, 2019 N.Y. LEXIS 3894 (N.Y. 2019), app. denied, 34 N.Y.3d 1080, 139 N.E.3d 824, 116 N.Y.S.3d 166, 2019 N.Y. LEXIS 3900 (N.Y. 2019).

Defendant's convictions for criminal possession of a weapon in the second degree and assault in the second degree were not against the manifest weight of the evidence because the jury could have reasonably inferred that he was aiming his gun at the victim with intent to cause him physical injury based on the evidence that he had been arguing with the victim prior to the shooting, and that witnesses testified that he fired multiple shots from close range in the victim's direction. People v Tripp, 177 A.D.3d 1409, 113 N.Y.S.3d 432, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8354 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2019), app. denied, 34 N.Y.3d 1133, 141 N.E.3d 490, 118 N.Y.S.3d 534, 2020 N.Y. LEXIS 345 (N.Y. 2020).

Defendant may not be charged with felony assault when underlying felony is same assault, as statute requires felony independent of assault leading to injuries. People v Donahue, 130 Misc. 2d 1080, 498 N.Y.S.2d 988, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2470 (N.Y. County Ct. 1986).

Indictment for felony assault under CLS Penal § 120.05 need not specify underlying felony of which defendant is accused. People v Baker, 133 Misc. 2d 31, 505 N.Y.S.2d 995, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2961 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1986).

Exception contained in N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 20.30(1) to New York jurisdiction under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 20.20 did not apply to a defendant's assaults of police officers who pursued him into New Jersey and attempted to effect his arrest there because defendant's conduct would have been an offense under New Jersey law, and the law in New York, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3), and the law in New Jersey, N.J. Ct. R. 2C:12-1(b)(5)(a), were substantially the same. People v Muhammad, 13 A.D.3d 120, 787 N.Y.S.2d 8, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15019 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2004), app. denied, 4 N.Y.3d 801, 795 N.Y.S.2d 176, 828 N.E.2d 92, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 615 (N.Y. 2005), app. denied sub. nom., People v Brooks, 4 N.Y.3d 828, 796 N.Y.S.2d 583, 829 N.E.2d 676, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 836 (N.Y. 2005).

In revoking defendant's supervised release for violating a mandatory condition, the district court did not violate defendant's right under the Confrontation Clause of the Sixth Amendment in admitting hearsay evidence from the victim because the district court did not abuse its discretion in balancing the interests under Fed. R. Crim. P. 32.1 and finding good cause to allow the admission of the hearsay evidence; the evidence presented at the violation of supervised release hearing was sufficient to support the district court's finding that defendant committed attempted felony assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2). United States v Carthen, 681 F.3d 94, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 10428 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2012), cert. denied, 568 U.S. 1092, 133 S. Ct. 837, 184 L. Ed. 2d 664, 2013 U.S. LEXIS 589 (U.S. 2013).

35. Intent, generally

In a prosecution of two defendants for assault in the second degree, petit larceny, and criminal mischief in the fourth degree, the court erred in refusing to charge the jury on the lesser included offense of assault in the third degree where defendants did not concede that serious physical injury was the consequence that defendants had intended. People v Hall, 56 N.Y.2d 547, 449 N.Y.S.2d 960, 434 N.E.2d 1338, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3226 (N.Y. 1982).

There can be no attempt to commit second degree assault, since one cannot have specific intent to cause unintended injury. People v Campbell, 72 N.Y.2d 602, 535 N.Y.S.2d 580, 532 N.E.2d 86, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 3363 (N.Y. 1988).

Intent necessary to sustain conviction of second degree assault (felony assault) is inferred from intent to commit underlying felony. People v Spivey, 81 N.Y.2d 356, 599 N.Y.S.2d 477, 615 N.E.2d 961, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 1737 (N.Y. 1993).

Person who seeks to prevent police officer from performing lawful duty is criminally answerable under CLS Penal § 120.05(3) for injuring officer, even when there is no intent to injure; thus, in trial for second degree assault of prison guard arising from scuffle which occurred when guards entered defendant's cell to supervise his reassignment to segregated custody following his attempted assault on another inmate, defendant opened door to proof of his attempted assault on other inmate to disabuse jury of his contention that there was no legitimate reason for his confinement, notwithstanding argument that he was merely seeking to show that he lacked intent to injure guard. People v Rojas, 97 N.Y.2d 32, 735 N.Y.S.2d 470, 760 N.E.2d 1265, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 3373 (N.Y. 2001).

The required intent of subdivision 3 of § 120.05 of the Penal Law is that the defendant intends to prevent a peace officer from performing a lawful duty. People v Wheeler, 36 A.D.2d 549, 317 N.Y.S.2d 111, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4937 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1971).

Evidence that defendant, with a loaded handgun, chased complainant about the streets of the city of Albany and shot at him several times, wounding him in the left leg and right shoulder, and that, as a result, complainant was rendered unconscious and later underwent surgery would not have supported finding that defendant's actions were not intentional and not carried out by means of a deadly weapon so that trial court properly refused to instruct jury, which was considering charge of assault in the second degree, on assault in the third degree. People v Hubbard, 48 A.D.2d 941, 369 N.Y.S.2d 34, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10233 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

In an assault prosecution, the requisite intent to cause physical injury may be inferred by the trier of fact from the conduct of the accused. People v Danaher, 49 A.D.2d 984, 374 N.Y.S.2d 729, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11303 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

With respect to a charge dealing with first and second degree attempted assault, to which no objection was made, the trial court properly instructed the jury that the difference between the two crimes is one of intent in that defendant must have intended to cause serious physical injury to be guilty of the first degree attempted assault, and, if he only intended to cause physical injury, he could only be convicted of attempted assault in the second degree, and that they had to be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant intended to cause serious physical injury before they could find him guilty of the crime of attempted assault in the first degree. People v Fournier, 70 A.D.2d 491, 421 N.Y.S.2d 368, 1979 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13075 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 48 N.Y.2d 1030, 425 N.Y.S.2d 1049, 402 N.E.2d 150 (N.Y. 1979).

For a prisoner to commit second-degree assault on a corrections officer under Penal Law § 120.05, it is necessary that defendant intend to prevent a peace officer from performing a lawful duty. People v La Boy, 91 A.D.2d 1102, 458 N.Y.S.2d 361, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16445 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1983).

In a prosecution of defendant for murder, assault in and criminal possession of a weapon arising out of the shooting of the deceased and a bystander during a confrontation between the deceased and defendant, where the court charged justification as a defense to the murder count, and defendant was acquitted thereon, it was error not to so charge with respect to the assault count; the jury's determination that defendant was justified in killing the deceased precluded his conviction of assault in the second degree, and in the absence of any evidence supporting a finding that defendant was guilty of reckless or criminally negligent assault, the assault count would be dismissed; justification should also have been charged as a defense to the weapon possession count, and defendant's conviction on that count would be reversed and remitted for a new trial, since the jury could have found that defendant did or did not have the required degree of intent. People v Morris, 109 A.D.2d 413, 491 N.Y.S.2d 860, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 48206 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1985), app. dismissed, 68 N.Y.2d 799, 506 N.Y.S.2d 859, 498 N.E.2d 423, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 20110 (N.Y. 1986).

Jury verdicts finding defendant innocent of second-degree assault but guilty of first-degree rape were not inconsistent since intent to cause injury is necessary element of assault, but not of rape; also, jury's logic was supported by evidence that before entering bedroom where rape took place victim grabbed knife from defendant and was cut during ensuing struggle. People v Benson, 123 A.D.2d 470, 506 N.Y.S.2d 480, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 60227 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

In trial for second degree assault, defendant did not waive his right to contend that he was incapable of forming requisite intent to commit crime because of intoxication by testifying that he was not intoxicated on morning of incident. People v Gordon, 156 A.D.2d 464, 548 N.Y.S.2d 914, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15736 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 868, 553 N.Y.S.2d 300, 552 N.E.2d 879, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 809 (N.Y. 1990).

In second degree assault trial, defendant's prior acts of violence against victim were relevant to issues of intent and absence of mistake or accident, and on issue of justification. People v Spotford, 217 A.D.2d 901, 629 N.Y.S.2d 601, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8311 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1995).

In prosecution for attempted second degree murder, second degree assault, and fourth degree weapon possession, defendant was properly precluded from testifying that, at time of crimes, his state of mind was affected by his use of interferon prescribed to him for liver trouble where (1) he did not give prosecution timely written notice of such testimony as required by CLS CPL § 250.10, (2) although he argued that offered testimony was evidence of "intoxication" relevant to negate intent element of second degree crimes charged, any intoxication claim would have depended on assumption that interferon produced "intoxication" by affecting his mental condition, and (3) such claim came within purview of § 250.10. People v Rivers, 281 A.D.2d 348, 723 N.Y.S.2d 14, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3132 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 923, 732 N.Y.S.2d 641, 758 N.E.2d 667, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4008 (N.Y. 2001).

Reckless assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(4) does not require proof of intent. People v Covington, 298 A.D.2d 930, 748 N.Y.S.2d 94, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9142 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 99 N.Y.2d 557, 754 N.Y.S.2d 209, 784 N.E.2d 82, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 4296 (N.Y. 2002).

Defendant's conviction for depraved indifference assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.10(3) for cutting his victim's neck with a knife was reduced to second-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law 120.05(4) because, although defendant's voluntary cocaine intoxication did not negate recklessness under N.Y. Penal Law § 15.05(3), reckless conduct, alone, did not prove depraved indifference, and the evidence did not establish wanton cruelty, brutality, or callousness; moreover, a finding that he could not form specific criminal intent because of cocaine intoxication delirium caused by his voluntary use of crack cocaine meant that he was incapable of depraved indifference. People v Coon, 34 A.D.3d 869, 823 N.Y.S.2d 566, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12984 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

Because the evidence supported findings that the victim suffered a physical injury and that defendant intended to inflict a serious physical injury, the count for assault in the first degree was to be reduced to attempted assault in the first degree, pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00 and 120.10(4), and the count for assault in the second degree was to be reduced to attempted assault in the second degree, pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00 and 120.05(1). People v Alvarez, 38 A.D.3d 930, 830 N.Y.S.2d 848, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2402 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 8 N.Y.3d 981, 838 N.Y.S.2d 484, 869 N.E.2d 660, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 1815 (N.Y. 2007).

The defendant, who accidentally injured a deputy sheriff in an attempt to escape from custody, was guilty of an assault upon a peace officer, since the only statutory intent required was that defendant intended to prevent a peace officer from performing a lawful duty. People v Wheeler, 59 Misc. 2d 825, 300 N.Y.S.2d 362, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1506 (N.Y. County Ct. 1969), aff'd, 36 A.D.2d 549, 317 N.Y.S.2d 111, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4937 (N.Y. Assault 2d requires a felonious intent to cause serious physical injury. In re Taylor, 62 Misc. 2d 529, 309 N.Y.S.2d 368, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1927 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. 1970).

Specific intent is not required by subd 2 of § 120.05 of the Penal Law. In re Taylor, 62 Misc. 2d 529, 309 N.Y.S.2d 368, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1927 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. 1970).

Alien's order of removal was reversed because the alien's crime of conviction for attempted second degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(4) did not constitute a crime involving moral turpitude under 8 U.S.C.S. § 1227(a)(2)(A)(i) because it lacked the requisite mental state. Gill v INS, 420 F.3d 82, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 17525 (2d Cir. 2005).

36. —Intent found

Juvenile's continued participation in beating, which involved repeated use of chain by one assailant over extended period, was sufficient to support conclusion in juvenile delinquency proceeding that he intentionally aided in assault with dangerous instrument. In re Juan J., 81 N.Y.2d 739, 593 N.Y.S.2d 768, 609 N.E.2d 121, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 4228 (N.Y. 1992).

Although there was no testimony that defendant personally struck the state trooper, there was adequate evidence that he acted "with the mental culpability required for the commission" of the assault by his co-defendant, where the trooper's revolver had been removed from the rear while the co-defendant held a gun on him; where defendant had been seen immediately before behind the trooper, but no one else was observed at the scene; and where the co-defendant later possessed the trooper's revolver; as well as where the co-defendant promptly returned to the patrol car after he and defendant had driven off in a car operated by the defendant. People v Elfe, 37 A.D.2d 208, 323 N.Y.S.2d 114, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3527 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1971).

Evidence that defendant wearing boots "stomped" complainant's face 10 to 12 times was sufficient to establish intent requisite for conviction for assault in the second degree. People v Rumaner, 45 A.D.2d 290, 357 N.Y.S.2d 735, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4329 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

Where it was established by direct proof that defendant, during the course of an argument and ensuing struggle, struck victim over the head with a baseball bat, and where the force of the blow necessary to produce the observed injuries was derived from medical testimony, the jury, in prosecution for second-degree assault, was free to infer and find that defendant intended to physically injure the victim. People v Danaher, 49 A.D.2d 984, 374 N.Y.S.2d 729, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11303 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

Convictions of attempted second degree murder, second degree assault, and second degree reckless endangerment were not against weight of evidence, although defendant adduced expert testimony that he suffered from "episodic dyscontrol paroxysm" preventing him from formulating requisite specific intent, and People did not adduce any scientific testimony to rebut this assertion, since jury was free to disbelieve testimony of defense experts, and trial court properly charged jury that defendant's ability to form necessary intent was element to be proved beyond reasonable doubt. People v Roudabush, 123 A.D.2d 649, 506 N.Y.S.2d 914, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 60798 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

In prosecution for assault in second degree, testimony of various prosecution witnesses who attributed to defendant various threats was sufficient to establish that laceration of victim's finger was intentionally caused by defendant as he wielded machete. People v Smith, 125 A.D.2d 509, 509 N.Y.S.2d 421, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 62814 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

In second degree assault trial arising from incident in which defendant hit victim with beer bottle in apparent belief that his wife and victim were leaving bar together, People proved intent beyond reasonable doubt where (1) defendant testified that he had punched 2 other people earlier that evening because he saw them with his wife, (2) defendant left bar in pursuit of victim, yelling, "Hey, where the hell are you going with my wife?" and (3) defendant was seen striking victim. People v Sweet, 132 A.D.2d 795, 517 N.Y.S.2d 604, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49299 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987).

Evidence was sufficient to hold defendant accessorily liable for second degree attempted murder, first degree use of firearm, second degree assault, and second degree weapon possession where he participated in physical assault of victim prior to shooting, knew that one other participant was armed, chased victim during shooting, and fled with other participants after potentially fatal shots were fired. People v McClary, 138 A.D.2d 413, 525 N.Y.S.2d 697, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2145 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Evidence supported finding that second degree assault defendant did not reasonably believe that victim had either used or threatened use of deadly physical force during initial confrontation where victim tapped his shoe twice against defendant's thigh as defendant lay working beneath his automobile, defendant told victim that no assistance was needed, victim walked away, and defendant nonetheless stopped work, obtained machete and pursued victim; defendant became aggressor when he actively pursued victim with machete and initiated second conflict, which ended when he knocked baseball bat from victim's grasp which victim had grabbed to defend himself, and struck blow to victim's head. People v White, 162 A.D.2d 297, 556 N.Y.S.2d 883, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7415 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1990), app. denied, 77 N.Y.2d 883, 568 N.Y.S.2d 926, 571 N.E.2d 96, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 1236 (N.Y. 1991).

Victim's testimony that defendant struck her with karate chop in course of violent struggle constituted adequate predicate from which jury could conclude that defendant intended to cause injury, and thus conviction of second degree assault would be affirmed. People v Mohammed, 162 A.D.2d 367, 557 N.Y.S.2d 35, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7747 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 861, 560 N.Y.S.2d 1001, 561 N.E.2d 901, 1990 N.Y. In prosecution of juvenile for commission of acts which, if committed by adult, would constitute second degree assault, inter alia, arising from participation of juvenile with 3 other perpetrators in fight during which victim was beaten with chain and his wallet taken by other perpetrators, evidence clearly established that juvenile shared necessary intent to use dangerous weapon since chain was used on victim openly and vigorously virtually from outset of attack, and juvenile's willing participation in attack, despite use of chain by another, was more than adequate to support inference that he shared intent to use chain. In re Juan J., 180 A.D.2d 495, 580 N.Y.S.2d 243, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1617 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), aff'd, 81 N.Y.2d 739, 593 N.Y.S.2d 768, 609 N.E.2d 121, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 4228 (N.Y. 1992).

In prosecution for first degree manslaughter, attempted first degree manslaughter, and second degree assault, evidence was sufficient to establish that defendant acted with intent to kill his girlfriend and to seriously injure her mother, despite his intoxication, where he took large butcher knife from kitchen and began stabbing his girlfriend, first in leg and then in various other parts of her body, inflicting 8 stab wounds in all, and then stabbed mother 3 times. People v Angel, 185 A.D.2d 356, 586 N.Y.S.2d 622, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9353 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 80 N.Y.2d 1025, 592 N.Y.S.2d 674, 607 N.E.2d 821, 1992 N.Y. In prosecution for second degree assault, there was legally sufficient proof of defendant's intention to cause serious physical injury based on defendant's conduct in pushing victim while stabbing him with sharp pointed tool. People v Soriano, 188 A.D.2d 420, 591 N.Y.S.2d 1008, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14507 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1992), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 847, 595 N.Y.S.2d 747, 611 N.E.2d 786, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 1060 (N.Y. 1993).

Juvenile's intent to cause victim serious physical injury, to support determination finding that he committed acts constituting second and third degree assault, was shown by fact that he threw victim to ground with such force as to break his arm, requiring surgery and 5 casts, and causing pain, reduced use of arm, and continuing scarring and disfigurement. In re Sterling L., 224 A.D.2d 252, 638 N.Y.S.2d 299, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1000 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

Defendant's intent to cause serious physical injury was shown by facts that he punched victim in jaw, causing him to lose consciousness and fall to ground, and thereafter he punched victim 4 or 5 times "with all his might." People v Martinez, 224 A.D.2d 254, 637 N.Y.S.2d 698, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1019 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 989, 649 N.Y.S.2d 396, 672 N.E.2d 622, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3635 (N.Y. 1996).

In juvenile delinquency proceeding charging acts which, if committed by adult, would constitute attempted second degree assault and fourth degree weapon possession, evidence established that juvenile intended to cause physical injury to security guard when he threw aerosol can at him from 10 feet away, and that, when so used, aerosol can was readily capable of causing "serious physical injury" under CLS Penal § 10.00(1) and thus was "dangerous instrument" under CLS Penal § 10.00(13). In re Nehial W., 227 A.D.2d 101, 642 N.Y.S.2d 2, 642 N.Y.S.2d 3, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4745 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

In prosecution for attempted second degree murder, second degree weapon possession, and second degree assault, evidence that defendant's associate told victim, on occasion before victim was shot, "[t]hat he was going to have to pay for what he did"—that is, allow persons other than defendant's associates to sell cocaine from victim's apartment—was properly admitted to prove defendant's motive for shooting victim. People v Douglas, 238 A.D.2d 733, 656 N.Y.S.2d 500, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3933 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 892, 662 N.Y.S.2d 435, 685 N.E.2d 216, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 2758 (N.Y. 1997).

Fact that defendant threw scalding water on victim after argument established intent to cause physical injury in prosecution for second degree assault. People v Cruz, 257 A.D.2d 664, 684 N.Y.S.2d 576, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 587 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

Defendant's intent to cause serious physical injury were shown by evidence that he initially punched victim, causing him to fall to ground, whereupon victim got up and went to nearby fire alarm box to try to summon help, and when victim returned, defendant repeatedly punched him in face, despite fact that victim was bleeding from ears, nose, and mouth. People v Cruz, 267 A.D.2d 319, 699 N.Y.S.2d 889, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12845 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 918, 708 N.Y.S.2d 357, 729 N.E.2d 1156, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 1124 (N.Y. 2000).

Evidence showed that defendant intended to inflict serious physical injury on victim (his long-term girlfriend) where she testified that he repeatedly punched her in head, placed his hands around her neck and choked her, dragged her by hair, and threatened to kill her, thereby causing bruises and cuts to her face, head, neck, and arms; further, such protracted assaultive behavior toward victim while child was being held by her or in close proximity was sufficient to support charge of endangering welfare of child. People v West, 271 A.D.2d 806, 708 N.Y.S.2d 478, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4438 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 893, 715 N.Y.S.2d 386, 738 N.E.2d 790, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3392 (N.Y. 2000).

Evidence showed that defendant specifically intended to harm victim, rather than accidentally injuring him in effort to injure his girlfriend, with whom he was arguing immediately before stabbing, where, as girlfriend was moving out of defendant's way, he was moving around her, not toward her, and he then had to go past 2 man sitting on stoop in order to reach man he stabbed. People v Caldwell, 272 A.D.2d 87, 708 N.Y.S.2d 370, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4934 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 933, 721 N.Y.S.2d 609, 744 N.E.2d 145, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3967 (N.Y. 2000).

Evidence supported conviction of second degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.05(7), and of attempt to commit that crime, where (1) defendant, while incarcerated in correctional facility, intended to physically injure correction officer and did so by striking him in eye with compressed ball of wet toilet paper, (2) element of intent was proved by, inter alia, defendant's earlier threats against victim, and (3) element of physical injury was proved by, inter alia, victim's testimony that his eye pain lasted 1 ½ to 2 days and that his sight was impaired for about one week, and emergency room physician's assistant's testimony that victim sustained "pretty obvious" abrasion across cornea, which would impair vision and cause pain. People v Travis, 273 A.D.2d 544, 711 N.Y.S.2d 514, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6697 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

In prosecution for attempted second degree murder, first degree firearm use, second degree assault, and fourth degree weapon possession, court's error in ruling, at Sandoval hearing, that prosecution could cross-examine defendant, who was HIV positive, as to whether he had life-threatening disease was harmless where (1) there was ample testimony, by victim and 2 witnesses, that defendant had previously said that he was going to kill victim, and (2) such evidence was sufficient to prove requisite intent independent of defendant's medical condition. People v Felix-Torres, 281 A.D.2d 649, 721 N.Y.S.2d 415, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2018 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 681, 738 N.Y.S.2d 296, 764 N.E.2d 400, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4373 (N.Y. 2001).

It could be inferred that defendant's purpose in touching victim was sexual gratification, and thus evidence supported his conviction of first and second degree sexual abuse and second degree assault, where (1) defendant, who was not related to 13-year-old victim, ordered her family members to leave their house, forced her to remove her clothes and lie face-down on her bed, repeatedly hit her buttocks with electrical cord, removed her underwear, rubbed oil into her buttocks wounds, and reminded her that he "owned" her and that there was nothing that she could do about it, and (2) he did not offer innocent explanation or justification for touching but, rather, denied it entirely. People v Watson, 281 A.D.2d 691, 721 N.Y.S.2d 700, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2311 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 925, 732 N.Y.S.2d 643, 758 N.E.2d 669, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4065 (N.Y. 2001).

In prosecution for first and second degree assault and resisting arrest, jury was free to reject defendant's theory that his intoxication, from excessive use of cocaine and PCP, rendered him incapable of forming requisite intent to commit those crimes where jury was properly instructed, there was no procedural error in submission of that theory to jury, and evidence of intent was sufficient. People v Gillis, 281 A.D.2d 698, 721 N.Y.S.2d 690, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2316 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 918, 732 N.Y.S.2d 635, 758 N.E.2d 661, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4106 (N.Y. 2001).

Evidence that defendant choked the victim until she went numb, could not speak or breathe, and suffered from impaired vision, as well as threatened to kill her, supported a finding of intent to cause serious physical injury under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00 and 120.05(1); thus, legally sufficient evidence was presented to support defendant's conviction of attempted assault in the second degree. People v Bruno, 47 A.D.3d 1064, 849 N.Y.S.2d 701, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 297 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 809, 857 N.Y.S.2d 42, 886 N.E.2d 807, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 1213 (N.Y. 2008).

Trial court properly denied defendant's request for the lesser charge of reckless assault because defendant readily admitted that he shot the victim intentionally, which was consistent with his statements after the shooting. Thus, there was no reasonable view of the evidence to support a finding that, in shooting the victim, defendant acted recklessly and not intentionally. People v Simmons, 111 A.D.3d 975, 974 N.Y.S.2d 185, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7196 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2013), app. denied, 22 N.Y.3d 1203, 986 N.Y.S.2d 423, 9 N.E.3d 918, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 1253 (N.Y. 2014).

Despite his intoxication, because defendant created a risk of harm to his wife when he punched and kicked her, and because he attempted to prevent police officers from effectuating his arrest, pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 15.05(3), defendant acted both recklessly and intentionally; accordingly, defendant was properly convicted of second-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(4), and resisting arrest. People v Heier, 90 A.D.3d 1336, 935 N.Y.S.2d 208, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9042 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2011), app. denied, 18 N.Y.3d 994, 945 N.Y.S.2d 649, 968 N.E.2d 1005, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 1455 (N.Y. 2012).

Defendant's felony assault conviction was not against the weight of the evidence because defendant acknowledged that he was attempting to flee the scene and, as such, the jury could reasonably conclude that defendant intended to prevent the officer from effecting an arrest when he accelerated the vehicle and struck the officer. People v Hicks, 128 A.D.3d 1221, 9 N.Y.S.3d 474, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4294 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 26 N.Y.3d 930, 38 N.E.3d 839, 17 N.Y.S.3d 93, 2015 N.Y. LEXIS 3117 (N.Y. 2015).

Evidence was sufficient to support defendant's conviction for assault in the second degree; after being informed by the officer that he was conducting an investigation, defendant continued to swear at the officer and told him to leave, and while the officer walked away, defendant approached from behind and threatened to kill him, and thus he intended to prevent the officer from investigating. As the officer sustained injuries during the fight to subdue defendant, the officer sustained physical injury as defined in the statute. People v Metales, 171 A.D.3d 1562, 99 N.Y.S.3d 559, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3233 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 33 N.Y.3d 1107, 130 N.E.3d 1287, 106 N.Y.S.3d 677, 2019 N.Y. LEXIS 2338 (N.Y. 2019).

Defendant cut the complainant's hand with a butcher knife, and witnesses' testimony seeing defendant grab a large butcher knife, jump over the counter with it, and land only a few feet from the complainant while holding the knife over defendant's head, together with the recording of the complainant's 911 calls and the severity of the wound, entitled the jury to reasonably infer defendant's intent to cause physical injury to the complainant. People v Jaber, 172 A.D.3d 1227, 101 N.Y.S.3d 371, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4001 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 34 N.Y.3d 933, 133 N.E.3d 403, 109 N.Y.S.3d 703, 2019 N.Y. LEXIS 2812 (N.Y. 2019).

Evidence was legally sufficient to establish that defendant intended to cause serious physical injury to the victim because eyewitnesses to the altercation testified that defendant repeatedly punched the victim while he was lying unconscious on the sidewalk. People v Desius, 188 A.D.3d 1626, 135 N.Y.S.3d 214, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6860 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2020).

37. —Intent not found

In view of defendant's testimony that on the day of the crimes charged, second-degree assault and disorderly conduct, he had consumed nine bottles of beer and was "fairly intoxicated," the jury could have found that, at the time in question, he was too intoxicated to intend to prevent a peace officer from performing his lawful duty and, accordingly, the trial court erred in not charging the jury in that regard. People v Piranian, 47 A.D.2d 668, 364 N.Y.S.2d 542, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8876 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1975).

In light of the uncontested evidence that defendant had, shortly before shooting, consumed large quantities of alcohol and injected himself with heroin, jury could have found that he lacked the requisite intent to commit the crime of second-degree assault and possibly even the crime of weapons possession; at the very least, it was a question for the jury to determine, and an instruction as to intoxication was required in the interest of justice, there having been no request for such an instruction. People v Trisvan, 49 A.D.2d 913, 373 N.Y.S.2d 405, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11169 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1975).

Defendant would be found guilty of assault in the third degree, rather than in the second degree, where he became involved in a fist fight between his codefendant and the complainant without knowing that the codefendant possessed a knife. People v Kane, 87 A.D.2d 578, 447 N.Y.S.2d 737, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15844 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1982).

Conviction of defendant for assault in second degree would be reversed, despite her admission that she had been present in vehicle outside residence while it was burglarized by her alleged accomplices, where proof failed to show that she had acted with necessary mental culpability or that she had solicited or otherwise aided others to commit crimes, her mere presence at scene did not establish her intent to commit them, and proof did not negate reasonable possibility that defendant had accompanied others without foreknowledge of scheme to commit burglary.

People v Burke, 126 A.D.2d 938, 511 N.Y.S.2d 713, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 42039 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1987).

Defendant's intoxication did not warrant reversal of second degree assault conviction, which was based not on intent but upon her reckless conduct, which encompassed risks created by her drinking. People v Faison, 154 A.D.2d 923, 546 N.Y.S.2d 67, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12963 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 770, 551 N.Y.S.2d 912, 551 N.E.2d 113, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 4706 (N.Y. 1989).

Evidence failed to establish the requisite mens rea of assault in the second degree and endangerment in the first degree. People v Peloso, 176 A.D.3d 1107, 113 N.Y.S.3d 87, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7584 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. dismissed, 176 A.D.3d 1110, 108 N.Y.S.3d 890, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7613 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2019).

Defendant (16-year-old high school student) was not properly chargeable with second degree assault on grand jury evidence that he hit 66-year-old school aide, who then chased after him, kicked him, and collapsed shortly thereafter, dying 17 hours later as result of cardiac arrest due to cardiovascular arteriosclerosis, because lack of intent to cause serious physical injury was apparent where there was no evidence that defendant struck particularly forceful blows or persisted in attack when he was caught running away. People v Hiraldo, 177 Misc. 2d 33, 676 N.Y.S.2d 775, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 255 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1998).

38. —Transferred intent

Even assuming that defendant swung cue stick at victim's brother and accidentally struck victim as she intervened, court would affirm defendant's second degree assault conviction since intent to cause injury may be transferred from intended victim to unintended third person under CLS Penal § 120.05, and there was sufficient evidence of manner in which defendant swung cue stick to permit jury to infer requisite intent to cause physical injury. People v Knox, 134 A.D.2d 704, 521 N.Y.S.2d 544, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50902 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 1007, 526 N.Y.S.2d 942, 521 N.E.2d 1085, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 875 (N.Y. 1988).

Defendant was properly convicted of second degree assault in connection with his shooting of bystander during incident in which he shot and killed another man, in view of provision for transferred intent under CLS Penal § 120.05(2). People v Fernandez, 135 A.D.2d 867, 522 N.Y.S.2d 264, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52804 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 895, 527 N.Y.S.2d 1005, 523 N.E.2d 312, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 1393 (N.Y. 1988).

Evidence was sufficient to establish that defendant had intent to injure victim, and thus he was properly convicted of second degree assault, even though it was accomplice who shot victim during robbery, where defendant was inside video arcade when robbery and shooting occurred, he had threatened victim, he gave some orders to accomplice while in arcade, and he left arcade with accomplice after shooting. People v Moore, 172 A.D.2d 855, 569 N.Y.S.2d 214, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5368 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 78 N.Y.2d 970, 574 N.Y.S.2d 950, 580 N.E.2d 422, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 4484 (N.Y. 1991).

39. Conspiracy

Where defendants made concerted effort to start fight while armed with bats, court was entitled to decide that each defendant formed specific intent to do serious physical injury necessary for conviction, based on conspiracy theory, of assault in second degree, even though only one of defendants actually struck blows. People v Ozarowski, 38 N.Y.2d 481, 381 N.Y.S.2d 438, 344 N.E.2d 370, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 2253 (N.Y. 1976).

Fact that one of defendants charged with conspiracy in third degree and assault in second degree, among other crimes, after arriving at shopping center, wandered off in search of candy store did not establish affirmative defense of renunciation of conspiracy. People v Ozarowski, 38 N.Y.2d 481, 381 N.Y.S.2d 438, 344 N.E.2d 370, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 2253 (N.Y. 1976).

In order to uphold, on a conspiracy theory, convictions on charges of assault in second degree, court below was required to find from evidence of conspiracy itself that each defendant had specific intent to do serious physical injury as well as intent to do physical injury by means of a dangerous instrument. People v Ozarowski, 38 N.Y.2d 481, 381 N.Y.S.2d 438, 344 N.E.2d 370, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 2253 (N.Y. 1976).

In prosecution of defendants for conspiracy in third degree and assault in second degree, among other crimes, corroboration of accomplice was not required to extend to every detail of such testimony; it was sufficient in that it tended to connect each defendant with crime. People v Ozarowski, 38 N.Y.2d 481, 381 N.Y.S.2d 438, 344 N.E.2d 370, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 2253 (N.Y. 1976).

In prosecution for second degree manslaughter, second degree assault, and first degree reckless endangerment, evidence was sufficient to establish that defendant operated his snowmobile in reckless manner where (1) victims were struck by snowmobile at 7:15 p.m. along dark country road during major blizzard which curtailed visibility, and (2) at time of accident, defendant operated snowmobile along public road at excessive rate of speed and while under influence of cocaine and marijuana. People v Davis, 178 A.D.2d 714, 576 N.Y.S.2d 947, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16011 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1991), app. denied, 79 N.Y.2d 946, 583 N.Y.S.2d 200, 592 N.E.2d 808, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 2237 (N.Y. 1992).

40. Evidence, generally

Fact that evidence in prosecution for second degree assault revealed that defendant may also have been guilty of uncharged offense of sexual abuse in the first degree imposed no additional burden on people to corroborate the testimony of victim. People v Colclough, 32 N.Y.2d 227, 344 N.Y.S.2d 880, 298 N.E.2d 64, 1973 N.Y. LEXIS 1304 (N.Y. 1973).

Evidence concerning scratch on complainant's face, recovery from defendant's person of knife and cigarette lighter which complainant testified defendant had used to threaten her and complainant's immediate disclosure of alleged rape to police constituted ample corroboration of complainant's testimony that defendant had threatened her with knife and cigarette lighter and had raped her and sustained conviction of rape and related offenses. People v Johnson, 46 A.D.2d 55, 361 N.Y.S.2d 161, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3594 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1974), aff'd, 38 N.Y.2d 956, 384 N.Y.S.2d 151, 348 N.E.2d 608, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 2595 (N.Y. 1976).

In prosecutions of three defendants for second-degree assault, judgment of conviction of one defendant would be reversed, and the indictment against him dismissed, where witnesses had not identified the one defendant as an assailant, and where a codefendant had testified that the one defendant in question had only grabbed the third codefendant in an attempt to break up the fight. People v Hutchinson, 88 A.D.2d 921, 450 N.Y.S.2d 559, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17257 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 57 N.Y.2d 780, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 4465 (N.Y. 1982).

Evidence of physical injury is sufficient to raise question of fact for jury's determination where assault victim testified that hand and face was bruised and swollen, that there was pain, and that she was treated at hospital at which X-rays were taken and that she took mild medication for pain. People v Fasano, 112 A.D.2d 791, 492 N.Y.S.2d 290, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 56036 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 65 N.Y.2d 979, 494 N.Y.S.2d 1048, 484 N.E.2d 678, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 16384 (N.Y. 1985).

Guilt was "overwhelmingly" established on charges of first and second degree robbery and second degree assault where police were driving victim of knife attack to hospital when, without prompting, victim identified defendant as his assailant on street near scene of attack and, on arresting defendant, police recovered from his person bloody knife and some items that had been stolen from victim. People v Evans, 123 A.D.2d 328, 506 N.Y.S.2d 221, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 60103 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Evidence was sufficient to convict second brother of assault in second degree where witness testified that she saw second brother take broken vodka bottle from first brother after first blow was struck and then strike second blow with bottle. People v Coelho, 124 A.D.2d 1007, 508 N.Y.S.2d 959, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 62343 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1986).

Evidence supported conviction of attempted robbery in second degree and assault in second degree despite fact that only one of 5 complaining witnesses was able to make positive identification of defendant as assailant. People v Burrell, 127 A.D.2d 675, 511

N.Y.S.2d 672, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 43163 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Convictions of second and third degree assault and fourth degree weapon possession were supported by (1) videotape made by defendant depicting him beating his wife and holding knife close to her, (2) photographs and medical evidence establishing physical injury, and (3) defendant's admissions, coupled with jury's rejection of his assertion that he was insane when he concededly committed acts with which he was charged. People v Weiss, 128 A.D.2d 743, 513 N.Y.S.2d 238, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 44427 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

In trial for second degree assault, witness' testimony that she saw defendant hit victim with beer bottle was not incredible as matter of law, although incident took place in parking lot of bar at night while witness was inside bar, since witness testified that she was sitting 10 to 12 feet from plate glass front door of bar, that there were picture windows near door, and that parking lot was lit by street lights. People v Sweet, 132 A.D.2d 795, 517 N.Y.S.2d 604, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49299 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987).

In trial for second degree assault arising from incident in which prison inmate was burned as result of flammable liquid being thrown on him and ignited, defendant did not waive nurse-patient privilege on ground that he placed his physical condition in issue by telling police investigator that he scalded his hand while mishandling pot used to heat water in his cell, and thus it was error to admit in evidence nurse's testimony describing burns on defendant's hands and opining that they were not caused by scalding water. People v Fitzroy, 132 A.D.2d 810, 517 N.Y.S.2d 805, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49309 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 874, 523 N.Y.S.2d 501, 518 N.E.2d 12, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19141 (N.Y. 1987).

Verdicts convicting defendants of second degree assault were sufficiently supported by evidence that one defendant shot victim at close range several times while victim was being restrained by codefendant, and that assault had been premeditated. People v Marcus, 133 A.D.2d 708, 519 N.Y.S.2d 875, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 51751 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 934, 524 N.Y.S.2d 686, 519 N.E.2d 632, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19735 (N.Y. 1987), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 970, 529 N.Y.S.2d 81, 524 N.E.2d 435, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 1988 (N.Y. 1988).

Evidence sustained convictions of second degree robbery, third degree grand larceny, first degree burglary and second degree assault, although victims were unable to provide identification testimony, since defendant's involvement in commission of crimes was established by his statements, police testimony placing him and his accomplice in close proximity to crime scene shortly after crime occurred, and physical evidence linking him to one victim. People v Brown, 134 A.D.2d 439, 521 N.Y.S.2d 61, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50625 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 953, 525 N.Y.S.2d 837, 520 N.E.2d 555, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 311 (N.Y. 1988).

In trial for second degree assault, court committed harmless error in admitting testimony from 2 prosecution witnesses that improperly bolstered victim's identification of defendant, in light of victim's strong and unequivocal identification of defendant, who was victim's downstairs neighbor. People v Marks, 182 A.D.2d 1122, 583 N.Y.S.2d 331, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7012 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1992).

Justification defense to second degree assault prosecution was disproved beyond reasonable doubt where complainant testified that following fist fight defendant ran after him and plunged knife into his chest; such testimony clearly established (1) that defendant could not have had reasonable belief that deadly physical force was about to be used on him, and (2) that he had every opportunity to retreat safely. People v King, 186 A.D.2d 683, 588 N.Y.S.2d 429, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11271 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1992), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 842, 595 N.Y.S.2d 741, 611 N.E.2d 780, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 926 (N.Y. 1993).

In prosecution for second degree assault based on incident which occurred while defendant was confined in special housing unit of correctional facility, defendant was not entitled to mistrial based on prosecutor's reference to defendant's confinement in correctional facility pursuant to conviction of crime where defendant refused opportunity to admit prior conviction and that he was confined in correctional facility thereunder, and there was no reference to nature of that crime. People v Gaddy, 191 A.D.2d 735, 594 N.Y.S.2d 407, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2128 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 82 N.Y.2d 718, 602 N.Y.S.2d 815, 622 N.E.2d 316, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 3490 (N.Y. 1993).

In prosecution for second degree assault, second degree reckless endangerment, and endangering welfare of child, defendant was deprived of fair trial where 2 attending physicians testified that child's account of what had happened was different from account given by defendant, and prosecutor argued on summation that defendant was unwilling to leave child alone with health care workers out of fear that child would blurt out truth of what had occurred in her absence. People v Montesa, 211 A.D.2d 648, 621 N.Y.S.2d 359, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 119 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1995).

In prosecution for second degree assault, inter alia, defendant was not entitled to mistrial on basis of victim's single reference, which was elicited on defense counsel's cross-examination, to defendant's having been asked in past by judge to leave his apartment since defense counsel was allowing narrative responses from witnesses, and reference by victim, who was defendant's long-term girlfriend, was responsive. People v West, 271 A.D.2d 806, 708 N.Y.S.2d 478, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4438 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 893, 715 N.Y.S.2d 386, 738 N.E.2d 790, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3392 (N.Y. 2000).

In prosecution for second degree assault and attempted second degree assault, defendant was not denied fair trial by prosecution's failure to timely provide him with exculpatory medical reports resulting from examinations of victim's injured eye by 2 optometrists where defendant received those reports about one week before trial, obtained 2-day adjournment of trial in order to prepare, used those reports effectively in cross-examining victim, called both optometrists as defense witnesses, and offered into evidence 2 photographs included in those reports. People v Travis, 273 A.D.2d 544, 711 N.Y.S.2d 514, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6697 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

In prosecution for second degree assault and attempted second degree assault, both committed against correction officer, court properly denied defendant's motion to compel production of allegedly potential Brady material, consisting of statements that defendant and others made in connection with administrative jail grievance for unfair treatment that defendant filed against assault victim, where statements at issue concerned events that occurred 6 months after assault and thus were not relevant, exculpatory, or discoverable. People v Travis, 273 A.D.2d 544, 711 N.Y.S.2d 514, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6697 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Defendant's conviction for assault in the first degree, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.10(1), could not withstand challenge, as it was not supported by legally sufficient evidence on the element of serious physical injury; accordingly, a reduction to assault in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2) was warranted, based on the evidence presented by the prosecution. People v Wright, 107 A.D.3d 1398, 967 N.Y.S.2d 296, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4051 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2013), app. denied, 23 N.Y.3d 1026, 992 N.Y.S.2d 809, 16 N.E.3d 1289, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 1967 (N.Y. 2014).

Pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3), and (7), defendant's conviction for assault in the second degree was not against the sufficiency of the evidence because the jury viewed the videotape of the attack where defendant, an inmate, kicked the injured correction officer, who had no previous contact with defendant, and testified that he almost passed out after being struck in the testicles, the injury caused him excruciating pain, and resulted in soreness, a swollen testicle and bruising which caused him to miss several days of work; the physician assistant who examined the correction officer shortly after the attack confirmed the existence of the injury, and opined that it would cause substantial pain. People v Porter, 304 A.D.2d 845, 759 N.Y.S.2d 773, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3521 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 565, 763 N.Y.S.2d 822, 795 N.E.2d 48, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 2178 (N.Y. 2003).

State prisoner seeking federal habeas relief did not meet his burden of proving a Brady violation because he did not demonstrate that the testimony resulting from the evidence allegedly withheld by the prosecution had a reasonable probability of producing a different verdict. The evidence was of no relevance to the charges against the prisoner for possessing narcotics and resisting arrest, and the assertion that the prisoner did not kick or punch failed to undermine detailed testimony that he struggled with officers for five minutes while they tried to handcuff him; the prisoner did not have to attack the officer to be found guilty of assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3) since he resisted arrest and his actions injured an officer, and so the statement about punching or kicking was not dispositive regarding the assault charge. Moore v Warden, 380 F. Supp. 2d 321, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16230 (S.D.N.Y. 2005).

41. —Evidence properly suppressed or excluded

In prosecutions under Penal Law §§ 125.10, 125.15, 125.05 allegedly resulting from defendants' operation of motor vehicles, the results of tests performed on blood samples taken from defendants following the incidents without their consent and without court orders pursuant to CPL § 240.40 were properly suppressed. People v Moselle, 57 N.Y.2d 97, 454 N.Y.S.2d 292, 439 N.E.2d 1235, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3618 (N.Y. 1982).

In trial for second degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.05(2), court properly precluded portion of defendant's psychiatric evidence related to lack of assaultive intent where, despite court's warning and ongoing prosecution requests, defendant refused to identify whether he intended to rely on CLS CPL § 250.10(1)(a) or (1)(c) until 3 weeks before trial, he merely furnished written notice stating that he was diagnosed as suffering from "acute stress disorder" at time of alleged assault, and he did not reveal enough information to identify paragraph on which he intended to rely until eve of trial. People v Almonor, 93 N.Y.2d 571, 693 N.Y.S.2d 861, 715 N.E.2d 1054, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1420 (N.Y. 1999).

In trial for assault and related offenses involving defendants' alleged use of stun gun on victim, court properly refused to allow defense to present testimony that search was conducted of defendants' lockers 2 days after alleged incident and no stun gun was found since such evidence was too remote and was not probative of any issues in case. People v Pike, 131 A.D.2d 890, 517 N.Y.S.2d 246, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 48323 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to allow defense attorney to introduce evidence, as prior inconsistent statement, that first degree robbery and second degree assault complainant had told friend that he knew defendant was not guilty, but that he had to blame someone, where there was evidence that complainant recognized defendant during knifepoint robbery after having pulled his mask off in struggle; moreover, in light of overwhelming evidence of guilt, any error in refusing to admit statement was harmless. People v Auricchio, 141 A.D.2d 552, 529 N.Y.S.2d 163, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6294 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 72 N.Y.2d 954, 534 N.Y.S.2d 668, 531 N.E.2d 300, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 4009 (N.Y. 1988).

Court did not improperly limit cross-examination of victim as to, inter alia, his perception of violence in neighborhood and whether he had ever used and carried box cutter since those questions were not relevant, and defense counsel was otherwise afforded sufficient scope to prove justification defense in prosecution for second degree assault. People v Williams, 216 A.D.2d 201, 628 N.Y.S.2d 660, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6959 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 86 N.Y.2d 848, 634 N.Y.S.2d 457, 658 N.E.2d 235, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 4723 (N.Y. 1995), app. denied, 86 N.Y.2d 848, 634 N.Y.S.2d 457, 658 N.E.2d 235, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 4725 (N.Y. 1995).

Court properly excluded testimony concerning threats victim had purportedly made toward defendant prior to college fraternity house altercation where no reasonable view of evidence would support finding that victim was initial aggressor. People v Carello, 241 A.D.2d 903, 660 N.Y.S.2d 515, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8159 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 938, 664 N.Y.S.2d 757, 687 N.E.2d 654, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3745 (N.Y. 1997).

In trial arising from incident in which defendant attacked correction officer who was assisting another officer move him to cell on third floor, court did not err in denying defense request to call third-floor inmate whose statements allegedly convinced first correctional officer to move defendant to fourth floor rather than third floor, in order to show that alleged statements were never made and hence officers were not engaged in "lawful duty" within meaning of CLS Penal § 120.05(3) when charged incident occurred, as third-floor inmate's testimony would be "collateral" where (1) defendant did not challenge initial decision to move him to third floor, and (2) even if first officer's decision to move him to fourth floor instead of third floor was unjustified, second officer was merely assisting first officer in directing him to cell, which was clearly lawful. People v Holloway, 261 A.D.2d 658, 691 N.Y.S.2d 583, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4679 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 972, 695 N.Y.S.2d 58, 716 N.E.2d 1103, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 2524 (N.Y. 1999).

In trial for second degree assault and first degree sexual abuse, court properly determined that presence of foreign semen on victim's underwear was irrelevant in absence of any evidence showing when and how it was deposited, where defendant's sperm was also found in victim's underwear and only his sperm was found in her vagina, and there was no indication that she had suffered any facial injuries prior to her contact with defendant. People v Mount, 285 A.D.2d 899, 727 N.Y.S.2d 819, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7623 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 642, 735 N.Y.S.2d 499, 761 N.E.2d 4, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 3689 (N.Y. 2001).

In second degree attempted assault prosecution stemming from incident wherein defendant struck correction officer who was trying to remove him from special housing unit cell for recreation, court's "prospective ruling," in course of discussion regarding potential defense witnesses, indicating that defendant would be precluded from adducing evidence of his past conflicts with other correction officers on relevancy grounds, was not error where defendant was initial aggressor in instant case and had no prior contact whatsoever with correction officer in question. People v Thompson, 287 A.D.2d 794, 731 N.Y.S.2d 261, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9727 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 688, 738 N.Y.S.2d 304, 764 N.E.2d 408, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4554 (N.Y. 2001).

In a prosecution for driving while intoxicated and for second-degree assault stemming from an automobile accident, although the results of a blood test taken within two hours of defendant's arrest at a hospital to which he had been taken after the accident would be admissible on the driving-while-intoxicated charges, the results would be inadmissible on the assault charge, where the state failed to obtain a court order for the blood sample and failed to establish that defendant had been in the physical or mental condition necessary to knowingly and voluntarily consent to the withdrawal of the sample; at trial, defendant would be entitled to have the court instruct the jury that they could not consider the results in arriving at their determination of whether defendant acted recklessly as charged in the assault count. People v Wade, 118 Misc. 2d 330, 460 N.Y.S.2d 870, 1983 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3316 (N.Y. County Ct. 1983), disapproved, People v Dixon, 149 A.D.2d 75, 543 N.Y.S.2d 993, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10464 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

42. —Evidence improperly suppressed or excluded

Refusal, in second-degree assault prosecution of defendant who bit off part of victim's ear during altercation in front of tavern, to admit evidence of victim's prior specific acts of violence of which defendant had knowledge constituted reversible error. People v Dingley, 42 N.Y.2d 888, 397 N.Y.S.2d 789, 366 N.E.2d 877, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 2226 (N.Y. 1977).

In prosecution for assault in the second degree and criminal possession of a weapon in the second degree, error in preventing defense from fully presenting to jury question of whether shooting victim was testifying against defendant in order to retain his freedom because of possibility that his activities on day of shooting might have violated his probation warranted reversal and new trial, particularly in view of fact that people's case depended entirely on shooting victim's credibility. People v Buchanan, 57 A.D.2d 686, 393 N.Y.S.2d 810, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11720 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

It was error for the trial court in a prosecution for assault in the second degree to have denied pretrial disclosure of a prior written statement by a defense witness where the statement contained exculpatory evidence regarding the first three counts of defendant's six-count indictment. People v Stanley, 81 A.D.2d 842, 438 N.Y.S.2d 848, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11518 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 54 N.Y.2d 838, 1981 N.Y. LEXIS 5399 (N.Y. 1981).

County Court erred in suppressing results of blood-alcohol test on ground that test had been administered more than 2 hours after defendant's arrest in case where defendant was charged with vehicular assault, assault in second and third degrees, and driving while under influence of alcohol, where first officer arrived at scene of traffic accident at approximately 4:30 and determined that defendant was intoxicated and should be arrested, but did not communicate that determination to defendant because of officer's need to help those injured and to direct traffic, second officer arrived and placed defendant under arrest at 5:19, and blood test was administered at 7:06; point at which defendant was in custody should have been determined by what reasonable and innocent person would have thought in circumstances, not police officer's subjective, unstated intent. People v Crocker, 125 A.D.2d 132, 512 N.Y.S.2d 589, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 40750 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987).

Court erred in restricting defendant's testimony as to her state of mind at time of alleged second degree assault where she asserted defense of justification; however, error was harmless since defendant was permitted to testify that complainant approached her in threatening manner, and that she lifted her arms to block complainant, so that precluded testimony was cumulative to that heard by jury, and jury was nonetheless able to consider justification defense with knowledge of defendant's state of mind at pertinent time. People v Felton, 133 A.D.2d 232, 519 N.Y.S.2d 35, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49733 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 874, 523 N.Y.S.2d 501, 518 N.E.2d 12, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19136 (N.Y. 1987).

It was reversible error in second degree assault prosecution for court, in mistaken belief that victim's threats were admissible only if communicated to defendant, to refuse to allow defendant's girlfriend to testify concerning threats made by victim against defendant, especially given closeness of fact questions on defense of justification. People v Dixon, 138 A.D.2d 929, 526 N.Y.S.2d 269, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14924 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1988).

Defendant was not entitled to reversal of second degree assault conviction on ground that his ballistics expert was improperly excluded from testifying that bullet lodged in victim's leg, as depicted in certain X-rays, was deformed in manner consistent with it having ricocheted up from ground (which was offered in support of defendant's claim that he did not intentionally aim his gun as victim) as ballistics expert was not qualified in reading X-rays, he was permitted to testify that bullet depicted in X-rays was deformed, and defendant was permitted to call witnesses who testified that he aimed gun at ground and not at victim, and to argue his theory of shooting in summation. People v Omar, 220 A.D.2d 239, 632 N.Y.S.2d 70, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9823 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1995), modified, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13162 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't).

In second degree assault trial, statement allegedly made by victim during prior altercation between her and defendant, which defendant offered to prove victim's potential to be aggressor and show he had reason to fear her, thus supporting his justification defense, was improperly excluded as hearsay; such statement was admissible as out-of-court statement to show state of mind of victim and defendant, and was not offered for its truth. People v Bruner, 222 A.D.2d 738, 634 N.Y.S.2d 862, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12637 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1995), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 981, 649 N.Y.S.2d 387, 672 N.E.2d 613, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3394 (N.Y. 1996).

43. —Evidence properly allowed

In trial for second degree assault and fourth degree criminal mischief arising from fight between defendant and complainant wherein defense counsel elicited testimony that police officer handcuffed both men when he arrived at scene, officer was properly permitted to testify that he uncuffed complainant and arrested defendant after speaking with 2 bystanders, and reversal was not required on ground that reference to out-of-court statements of bystanders (who were unavailable to testify) inferentially bolstered complainant's testimony that defendant started fight, where court did not admit substance of officer's conversation with bystanders and promptly issued limiting instructions; furthermore, defendant himself invited admission of such testimony by eliciting that officer had handcuffed both men, which created material gap in narrative that People were entitled to explain. People v Rivera, 96 N.Y.2d 749, 725 N.Y.S.2d 264, 748 N.E.2d 1060, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 232 (N.Y. 2001).

In trial for second degree assault of prison guard arising from scuffle which occurred when guards entered defendant's cell to supervise his reassignment to segregated custody following his alleged attempted assault on another inmate, court did not err in revisiting its pretrial order precluding People from introducing proof of alleged attempted assault on other inmate and, in its discretion, allowing such proof where (1) defense counsel, in his opening statement, suggested that jury should acquit defendant because he did nothing wrong but was abused by guards, culminating in scuffle in his cell, and (2) in cross-examinations, defense counsel attempted to further misleading impression that guards were not performing lawful duty. People v Rojas, 97 N.Y.2d 32, 735 N.Y.S.2d 470, 760 N.E.2d 1265, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 3373 (N.Y. 2001).

In proceeding in which accused was convicted of robbery in first and second degrees and assault in second degree, evidence supported determinations that accused's incriminatory prearrest statement and his written confession were voluntary rather than the product of police brutality and coercion. People v McMillian, 56 A.D.2d 662, 391 N.Y.S.2d 911, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10805 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1977).

In a prosecution for four counts of murder in the second degree and two counts of assault in the second degree, the testimony adduced at the suppression hearing from two detectives and from the 16-year-old defendant himself fully supported the trial court's determination that notwithstanding his age, defendant, before giving inculpatory statements, had interposed a knowing, intentional and voluntary waiver of his right to counsel where defendant was familiar with the criminal justice system, where he admitted he was not coerced into giving incriminatory statements to law enforcement officers and where he indicated he understood the meaning and significance of his pre-interrogation rights. Moreover, the trial court was warranted in holding that a parent or the parents of defendant were not denied access to him or to information regarding his whereabouts where defendant testified that he did not ask to speak to his parents and a detective testified that defendant did in fact speak to his mother. Furthermore, defendant was properly sentenced to consecutive sentences of 20 years to life on his convictions of murder with respect to each victim under the law applicable at the time of his sentencing in 1977. People v Boykins, 81 A.D.2d 922, 439 N.Y.S.2d 181, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11647 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 54 N.Y.2d 761, 1981 N.Y. LEXIS 5082 (N.Y. 1981).

In a prosecution for four counts of murder in the second degree and two counts of assault in the second degree, the trial court properly refused to suppress the weapons used and the money stolen during the two robberies where defendant's mother voluntarily gave permission to a police officer to retrieve such items from her apartment, in which they had been secreted by defendant, and where the mother's consent was not induced by promise, trick, cajolery or other improper method. People v Boykins, 81 A.D.2d 922, 439 N.Y.S.2d 181, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11647 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 54 N.Y.2d 761, 1981 N.Y. LEXIS 5082 (N.Y. 1981).

In prosecution for assault, trial court properly permitted use, on cross-examination, of a suppressed statement given by defendant to investigator and in permitting investigator to testify to statement on rebuttal, where defendant in his direct testimony testified to a version of the incident which differed materially from the statement he had given to the investigator and where on cross-examination defendant denied having made the admission to the investigator. People v Guidice, 83 A.D.2d 756, 443 N.Y.S.2d 498, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15074 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1981).

Defendant's conviction of assault in the second degree and reckless endangerment in the first degree would be affirmed where the trial court did not err in receiving testimony concerning the facts of a prior assault of the victim by defendant where, in light of the fact that defendant had presented alibi witnesses, the questioned testimony was properly received to demonstrate motive on the part of defendant for the crimes charged. People v Bink, 93 A.D.2d 920, 462 N.Y.S.2d 300, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17812 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1983).

In trial on charges of first degree rape and second degree assault, codefendant was properly permitted to testify that, while he and defendant were seated in patrol car after their arrest, codefendant said "you better tell the police I had nothing to do with it," and defendant responded that he would do so; defendant's statement was properly admitted in evidence since it constituted admission. People v Harris, 122 A.D.2d 891, 506 N.Y.S.2d 2, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 59377 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in receiving into evidence 8 color photographs depicting injuries inflicted upon 71-year-old complainant during armed robbery of her home, since photographs were probative on issue of whether defendant caused physical injury to victim as requisite element of second degree assault, first degree burglary, and second degree robbery, particularly in view of complainant's inability to describe how or when her injuries were inflicted. People v Shaw, 124 A.D.2d 686, 507 N.Y.S.2d 918, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 61989 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

In prosecution of inmate for assault in second degree on prison guard, People were properly permitted to introduce letter written by inmate to his counselor approximately one week before incident which included statement, "I feel like assaulting one of the (correctional officers)" since letter was probative of inmate's state of mind during relevant time period even though it was not directly related to subject assault. People v Sanders, 127 A.D.2d 937, 512 N.Y.S.2d 528, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 43426 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), rev'd, 70 N.Y.2d 837, 523 N.Y.S.2d 444, 517 N.E.2d 1330, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19059 (N.Y. 1987).

In trial for second degree assault arising from incident in which prison inmate was burned as result of flammable liquid being thrown on him and ignited, admission in evidence of testimony concerning burns on defendant's hands, in violation of defendant's nurse-patient privilege, constituted harmless error in view of testimony of fellow inmate who saw defendant commit crime and testimony of vocational instructor who observed defendant's efforts to hide his burned hand, and who testified that gasoline was available to inmates such as defendant who were enrolled in his class. People v Fitzroy, 132 A.D.2d 810, 517 N.Y.S.2d 805, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49309 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 874, 523 N.Y.S.2d 501, 518 N.E.2d 12, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19141 (N.Y. 1987).

Letters indicating consciousness of guilt written by defendant to assault victim were properly admitted in evidence on People's rebuttal, to counter defendant's testimony that he accidentally stabbed victim, where court had previously ruled that it would admit letters in evidence if defendant took stand and placed his state of mind in issue. People v Oglesby, 133 A.D.2d 284, 519 N.Y.S.2d 153, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49772 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 802, 522 N.Y.S.2d 120, 516 N.E.2d 1233, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19517 (N.Y. 1987).

Trial court did not err in admitting in evidence complainant's unredacted hospital records in second degree assault prosecution, pursuant to business records exception to hearsay rule; records, including portion which indicated that complainant had been "hit in face," were relevant to diagnosis and treatment of complainant's injuries. People v Singleton, 140 A.D.2d 388, 527 N.Y.S.2d 867, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4678 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

In prosecution for first degree rape, first degree sodomy, first degree sexual abuse, second degree assault, and endangering welfare of child, inter alia, it was proper exercise of discretion to allow in evidence photographs of victim taken just after attack, showing that she sustained brutal beating, as well as victim's ripped and bloodied nightgown, since such evidence tended to prove material issues and was corroborative of previous trial testimony. People v Harris, 140 A.D.2d 457, 528 N.Y.S.2d 156, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4906 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 72 N.Y.2d 957, 534 N.Y.S.2d 671, 531 N.E.2d 303 (N.Y. 1988).

Court properly admitted in evidence redacted videotape of defendant's attack on police officers where proper foundation was laid, prejudicial portions of tape were redacted, and jury was instructed not to speculate as to inaudible portions thereof. People v Kent, 143 A.D.2d 278, 532 N.Y.S.2d 152, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8900 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 856, 537 N.Y.S.2d 503, 534 N.E.2d 341 (N.Y. 1988).

In trial for second degree assault, court did not abuse its discretion in allowing police officer to testify that defendant pointed gun at him while fleeing from crime scene, since testimony was relevant to defendant's state of mind in possessing weapon and was integral part of narrative of events, and court promptly instructed jury that defendant was not being charged with shooting at police. People v Felipe, 155 A.D.2d 900, 547 N.Y.S.2d 730, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14739 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1989), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 868, 553 N.Y.S.2d 299, 552 N.E.2d 878, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 799 (N.Y. 1990).

Photographs of victim taken one day after second degree assault were admissible as tending to prove seriousness of her injuries sustained in attack where sole purpose of photographs was not to inflame jury. People v Burris, 160 A.D.2d 809, 553 N.Y.S.2d 846, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4192 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 785, 559 N.Y.S.2d 990, 559 N.E.2d 684, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 2629 (N.Y. 1990).

In prosecution for second degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.05(2), wherein it was alleged that defendant punched victim with fist containing "printer's guide," court did not err in admitting, under business records exception to hearsay rule, portion of victim's hospital records indicating that victim had claimed he was hit with fist in which there was metal object, since such statement was relevant to diagnosis and treatment of victim's injuries. People v Goode, 179 A.D.2d 676, 578 N.Y.S.2d 611, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 246 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 79 N.Y.2d 1001, 584 N.Y.S.2d 456, 594 N.E.2d 950, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 2700 (N.Y. 1992).

In second degree assault prosecution, court properly allowed victim to show to jury scars on his chest and stomach to demonstrate seriousness of injuries inflicted on victim by defendant. People v Dananel, 183 A.D.2d 778, 584 N.Y.S.2d 485, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6824 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 80 N.Y.2d 902, 588 N.Y.S.2d 828, 602 N.E.2d 236, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 3549 (N.Y. 1992).

In prosecution for second degree assault and resisting arrest, court properly admitted testimony concerning defendant's post-arrest threats to arresting officers to show intent in committing assaultive acts, as well as his consciousness of guilt. People v Smith, 211 A.D.2d 650, 621 N.Y.S.2d 99, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 121 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 85 N.Y.2d 974, 629 N.Y.S.2d 734, 653 N.E.2d 630, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 2537 (N.Y. 1995).

In prosecution for second degree assault, fourth degree weapon possession, and second degree reckless endangerment, evidence of defendant's prior and contemporaneous drug transactions was properly admitted to facilitate jurors' understanding of relationship among parties and to assist in their comprehension of crime. People v DeFina, 213 A.D.2d 665, 624 N.Y.S.2d 236, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3168 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 85 N.Y.2d 971, 629 N.Y.S.2d 731, 653 N.E.2d 627, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 2319 (N.Y. 1995).

In prosecution for second degree assault and other crimes, evidence of prior incident in which defendant set one of his dogs on victim and called it off before serious injury was inflicted was properly introduced for its probative value on issue of intent. People v DeFina, 213 A.D.2d 665, 624 N.Y.S.2d 236, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3168 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 85

In trial of defendant for second degree assault of her 2-month-old son, causing multiple fractures to his ribs and arms, where defendant claimed that baby was injured when she rolled over him while they were sleeping, it was not error for court to permit introduction of defendant's prior convictions arising from child abuse; in domestic violence cases, evidence of prior bad acts is especially probative in overcoming defense based on mistake. People v Davis, 216 A.D.2d 485, 628 N.Y.S.2d 551, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6426 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1995).

In prosecution for first degree burglary and attempted second degree assault, inter alia, court properly admitted in evidence portion of 911 tapes in which victims described their assailant. People v Sutherland, 219 A.D.2d 523, 645 N.Y.S.2d 466, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9528 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 87 N.Y.2d 908, 641 N.Y.S.2d 238, 663 N.E.2d 1268, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 5587 (N.Y. 1995), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 886, 645 N.Y.S.2d 461, 668 N.E.2d 432, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 2339 (N.Y. 1996).

In second degree assault trial wherein defendant contended that he acted defensively when accosted by store security personnel for no apparent reason, court properly allowed People to establish that defendant had entered store premises on various occasions during month prior to incident and had engaged in antisocial acts; such evidence was relevant background information, explaining actions of security personnel that led eventually to charged assault. People v Kellogg, 222 A.D.2d 309, 636 N.Y.S.2d 7, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13017 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1995), app. denied, 87 N.Y.2d 974, 642 N.Y.S.2d 204, 664 N.E.2d 1267, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 912 (N.Y. 1996).

In prosecution for second degree assault and attempted third degree burglary, wire pole and meat cleaver were properly admitted in evidence where they were found in close proximity to doors or locks of premises that appeared to have been tampered with, and defendant's fingerprints were on cleaver. People v Greene, 223 A.D.2d 474, 637 N.Y.S.2d 79, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 540 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 879, 645 N.Y.S.2d 453, 668 N.E.2d 424, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 2163 (N.Y. 1996).

Evidence of uncharged drug sales was properly admitted to show that defendant's motive for stabbing victim was to punish him for not turning over money owed for prior drug sales. People v Terry, 224 A.D.2d 202, 637 N.Y.S.2d 694, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 968 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 943, 647 N.Y.S.2d 176, 670 N.E.2d 460, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 2657 (N.Y. 1996).

In prosecution for second degree assault, court properly allowed prosecution to inquire into defendant's 15-year-old second degree burglary conviction, including its underpinnings, as well as his 6-year-old conviction for driving while intoxicated, both as to issue of defendant's credibility. People v Trichilo, 230 A.D.2d 926, 646 N.Y.S.2d 898, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8345 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 931, 654 N.Y.S.2d 733, 677 N.E.2d 305, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 4957 (N.Y. 1996), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 930, 654 N.Y.S.2d 732, 677 N.E.2d 304, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 4940 (N.Y. 1996), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 925, 654 N.Y.S.2d 727, 677 N.E.2d 299, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 5320 (N.Y. 1996).

Fact that shooting victim and another prosecution witness were admitted drug dealers who were serving sentences at time of defendant's trial for second degree assault did not alone render their testimony incredible. People v Hubert, 238 A.D.2d 745, 656 N.Y.S.2d 493, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3931 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 859, 661 N.Y.S.2d 186, 683 N.E.2d 1060, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 2488 (N.Y. 1997), app. denied sub. nom., People v King, 90 N.Y.2d 860, 661 N.Y.S.2d 186, 683 N.E.2d 1060, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4991 (N.Y. 1997).

In prosecution for second degree assault, prosecution was properly allowed to introduce evidence that defendant had sold drugs and that victim at one time sold drugs for defendant where that evidence tended to prove motive in light of victim's testimony that defendant had questioned him about invading defendant's "turf," and relationship between defendant and victim before and after day of shooting was inextricably interwoven with crime charged and provided narrative explaining defendant's conduct; thus, potential for unfair prejudice did not outweigh probative value of evidence. People v Hubert, 238 A.D.2d 745, 656 N.Y.S.2d 493, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3931 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 859, 661 N.Y.S.2d 186, 683 N.E.2d 1060, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 2488 (N.Y. 1997), app. denied sub. nom., People v King, 90 N.Y.2d 860, 661 N.Y.S.2d 186, 683 N.E.2d 1060, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4991 (N.Y. 1997).

In second degree assault prosecution, prosecution was justified in asking defendant whether he had ever hit 2 women in past since his direct testimony tended to give jury misleading impression that he had no violent or abusive behavior in his background, thereby "opening the door" to examination on subject. People v Wilkens, 239 A.D.2d 105, 657 N.Y.S.2d 599, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4472 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 899, 662 N.Y.S.2d 442, 685 N.E.2d 223, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 2916 (N.Y. 1997).

Probative value of assault victim's testimony, on redirect examination, that defendants were members of Hell's Angels motorcycle gang outweighed its potential for prejudice where that testimony was probative on issue of victim's credibility, which defendants had challenged on cross-examination, it was sole reference to Hell's Angels at trial, and prosecution did not take advantage of it. People v Vecchio, 240 A.D.2d 854, 658 N.Y.S.2d 720, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6716 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Court properly admitted testimony concerning prior altercation between complainant and defendant in second degree assault prosecution where prior incident was not unduly remote and was highly relevant to motive, and court gave adequate limiting instructions when testimony was introduced. People v Maniram, 242 A.D.2d 472, 662 N.Y.S.2d 119, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9032 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1997), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 894, 669 N.Y.S.2d 8, 691 N.E.2d 1034, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 458 (N.Y. 1998).

In prosecution for first degree rape, second degree assault, and first degree sexual abuse, defendant was prevented from asserting adequate defense by court's Sandoval ruling that prosecutor could inquire into dates and charges of 8 prior misdemeanors, including attempted assault that defendant alleged was too similar to present allegations. People v Sager, 251 A.D.2d 433, 673 N.Y.S.2d 325, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6561 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 905, 680 N.Y.S.2d 69, 702 N.E.2d 854, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 3573 (N.Y. 1998).

In prosecution for second and third degree assault and third degree weapon possession, court did not deprive defendant of fair trial by allowing prosecution to introduce evidence relating to defendant's prior assaults against victim where that evidence was admissible to prove his motive and intent and to refute his assertion of accidental injury. People v Underwood, 255 A.D.2d 405, 680 N.Y.S.2d 555, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11758 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 879, 689 N.Y.S.2d 441, 711 N.E.2d 655, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1097 (N.Y. 1999).

In prosecution for first degree rape, attempted first degree rape, first degree sodomy, first degree sexual abuse, first and second degree assault, first, second, and third degree robbery, first and second degree burglary, and fifth degree possession of stolen property, defendant was not entitled to suppression of polymerase chain reaction (PCR) DNA evidence where (1) all 4 experts testified at pretrial hearing that PCR DNA testing produces results that are generally relied on by scientific community, (2) testing laboratory's geneticist/vice-president testified extensively as to controls, protocols, and procedures used in such testing, and (3) laboratory's senior forensic scientist, who performed subject tests, testified that he had previously performed such tests 10 to 20 times and that he followed proper protocol. People v Hamilton, 255 A.D.2d 693, 681 N.Y.S.2d 117, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11925 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 1032, 684 N.Y.S.2d 497, 707 N.E.2d 452, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4633 (N.Y. 1998).

Even if photo array were unduly suggestive, court properly allowed 2 assault victims to make in-court identifications of defendant where prosecution proved independent basis for those identifications. People v Saulters, 255 A.D.2d 896, 682 N.Y.S.2d 740, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12085 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't),

app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 1038, 684 N.Y.S.2d 503, 707 N.E.2d 458, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4768 (N.Y. 1998).

Court properly found that pediatrician with 16 years experience possessed requisite skill and experience to be considered medical expert on subject of causation of burns since he had treated children with burns of same nature as those received by victim, and his professional instruction to medical students included how to determine cause of burns. People v Cadell, 256 A.D.2d 134, 683 N.Y.S.2d 222, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13758 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 871, 689 N.Y.S.2d 433, 711 N.E.2d 647, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 891 (N.Y. 1999).

Evidence of defendant's prior sexual and physical abuse of victim was admissible where (1) it was probative of defendant's state of mind and relevant to prove "forcible compulsion" element of first degree sodomy, of which he was acquitted, (2) he was convicted of first degree burglary, second and third degree assault, and second degree menacing, and (3) probative value of evidence outweighed any prejudice to defendant. People v Wright, 266 A.D.2d 414, 701 N.Y.S.2d 61, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11470 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999), app. denied sub. nom., People v Freeman, 94 N.Y.2d 880, 705 N.Y.S.2d 12, 726 N.E.2d 489 (N.Y. 2000), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 886, 705 N.Y.S.2d 19, 726 N.E.2d 496, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 497 (N.Y. 2000).

In prosecution for second degree assault, victim was properly allowed to testify that attack was precipitated by his failure to pay defendant $400 that he owed him for drugs where (1) defendant had demanded money minutes before and during assault, and thus unpaid drug transactions were inextricably interwoven with victim's recitation of events leading up to and during attack, (2) those transactions were especially relevant to defendant's motive for attack, and (3) probative value of testimony outweighed its potential for unfair prejudice, particularly in light of court's proper limiting instructions to jury. People v Shannon, 273 A.D.2d 505, 708 N.Y.S.2d 199, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6446 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 892, 715 N.Y.S.2d 385, 738 N.E.2d 789, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3269 (N.Y. 2000).

In prosecution for second degree assault and attempted second degree assault, both committed against correction officer, victim was properly allowed to testify that, on day of assault, defendant had lost privilege of making phone calls as result of jail disciplinary proceeding, that victim then blocked defendant's attempt to make phone call, and that defendant retorted, "when I get off key block tomorrow you better watch the fk out," where (1) CLS CPL § 240.43 is expressly limited to evidence of defendant's prior conduct that "prosecutor intends to use at trial for purposes of impeaching the credibility of the defendant," and (2) prosecution elicited testimony at issue during its case-in-chief as evidence of defendant's intent and not to impeach his testimony. People v Travis, 273 A.D.2d 544, 711 N.Y.S.2d 514, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6697 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

In prosecution for second degree assault and attempted second degree assault, both arising from incident in which defendant jail inmate threw balls of wet toilet paper at correction officer, one of which hit officer in eye and injured cornea, court properly admitted bag containing toilet paper and banana peel where (1) another correction officer who witnessed incident and gathered contents of evidence bag testified that exhibit contained all material thrown by defendant, some of which hit victim and some of which did not, and (2) court instructed jury that "there has been no testimony that the object that struck [victim], if that's what you believe, had any debris in it." People v Travis, 273 A.D.2d 544, 711 N.Y.S.2d 514, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6697 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

In prosecution for attempted second assault, third degree assault, and child endangerment, court properly allowed prosecution to introduce evidence of 2 prior incidents of defendant's behavior toward victim, who was 28-year-old defendant's 15-year-old stepbrother, where (1) in first incident 2 days before present assault, defendant threw victim against wall and threatened to kill him, (2) in second incident 7 months earlier, defendant kicked victim after placing himself in dispute between victim and their mother, (3) court precluded evidence of third incident that occurred years earlier, and (4) court properly instructed jury to consider prior incidents solely on issue of whether defendant's present acts of violence toward victim were intentional or resulted from mistake or accident. People v Ray, 273 A.D.2d 611, 710 N.Y.S.2d 138, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7226 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

In prosecution for second degree assault, second degree criminal contempt, and second degree aggravated harassment, uncharged crimes evidence concerning defendant's pattern of abuse of victim was admissible where (1) it provided complete picture of subject events and was necessary to explain that certain conduct by victim was product of fear, (2) its probative value outweighed its prejudicial effect, which was minimized by court's thorough limiting instructions, and (3) defendant was not prejudiced by court's failure to make advance Ventimiglia ruling, as requested by prosecution at outset of trial. People v Castillo, 275 A.D.2d 682, 713 N.Y.S.2d 526, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10000 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 733, 722 N.Y.S.2d 799, 745 N.E.2d 1022, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 323 (N.Y. 2001).

Police officer was properly permitted to testify in trial for second degree assault that, based on his experience, box cutter recovered from defendant was type in which blade is altered to facilitate its use as weapon. People v Stewart, 279 A.D.2d 335, 718 N.Y.S.2d 843, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 434 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2001).

Evidence of prior assaults was properly admitted in second degree assault trial where it was probative of defendant's motive and intent, provided background events explaining relationship among defendant, his former girlfriend and her new boyfriend, including defendant's jealousy and anger, and refuted defendant's justification defense. People v Mehmeti, 279 A.D.2d 420, 719 N.Y.S.2d 574, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 891 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 832, 729 N.Y.S.2d 452, 754 N.E.2d 212, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2236 (N.Y. 2001).

In prosecution for second degree assault and fourth degree weapon possession, victim's treating doctor was properly allowed to testify as expert on subject of whether cut on defendant's forehead was caused by box cutter where doctor was first-year resident in emergency medicine with 10 months of experience in that field. People v Edmondson, 281 A.D.2d 184, 721 N.Y.S.2d 522, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2197 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2001).

In prosecution for second degree assault and fourth degree weapon possession, court properly allowed prosecution to introduce evidence that rebutted defendant's claim that victim's injury resulted from blunt trauma rather than from sharp instrument where, to extent that such evidence could have been introduced on prosecution's direct case, court had discretion under CLS CPL § 260.30(7) to allow it to be introduced in rebuttal. People v Edmondson, 281 A.D.2d 184, 721 N.Y.S.2d 522, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2197 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2001).

In prosecution for second degree robbery, second degree assault, and first degree reckless endangerment, defendant was not entitled to suppression of identification evidence where he met description that was sufficiently specific under geographic and temporal circumstances, and thus officer had reasonable suspicion to stop and detain defendant for investigative purposes and was entitled to pat down and handcuff him as safety precaution. People v Jennings, 281 A.D.2d 285, 722 N.Y.S.2d 141, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2978 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 903, 730 N.Y.S.2d 800, 756 N.E.2d 88, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2831 (N.Y. 2001).

In prosecution for second degree robbery, second degree assault, and first degree reckless endangerment, hospital showup was justified where it served purpose of procuring trustworthy identification while victims' memories were fresh. People v Jennings, 281 A.D.2d 285, 722 N.Y.S.2d 141, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2978 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 903, 730 N.Y.S.2d 800, 756 N.E.2d 88, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2831 (N.Y. 2001).

In prosecution for second degree robbery, second degree assault, and first degree reckless endangerment, hospital showup was not unduly suggestive where victims viewed defendant separately and without conferring. People v Jennings, 281 A.D.2d 285, 722 N.Y.S.2d 141, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2978 (N.Y. App.

Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 903, 730 N.Y.S.2d 800, 756 N.E.2d 88, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2831 (N.Y. 2001).

In prosecution for first and third degree rape, first and third degree sodomy, first, second, and third degree sexual abuse, second and third degree assault, child endangerment, and second degree criminal contempt, committed against 2 sisters with whom defendant was residing, court's Ventimiglia ruling properly allowed introduction of evidence of defendant's prior uncharged crimes and other bad acts against victims' immediate family members for purpose of showing defendant's intent, motive, forcible compulsion, and absence of mistake where (1) that testimony primarily described defendant's physical abuse and control of 4 other members of victims' household, including threats, hitting of mother in front of children, and control of money, keys, activities, and household rules, (2) such information was explanatory of victims' behavior in that it completed narrative of abusive and controlling setting in which criminal acts occurred and defendant's motives and opportunity for perpetrating those acts, (3) in light of defendant's alibi that he was with his wife and not in victims' house at time of some crimes, such evidence also tended to prove defendant's identify as perpetrator, and (4) court repeatedly offered proper limiting instructions. People v Watson, 281 A.D.2d 691, 721 N.Y.S.2d 700, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2311 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 925, 732 N.Y.S.2d 643, 758 N.E.2d 669, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4065 (N.Y. 2001).

In prosecution for second degree assault, second degree weapon possession, and first degree reckless endangerment, evidence of defendant's prior and subsequent possession of firearm resembling that used in present crimes was admissible to identify defendant as perpetrator, and court properly instructed jury to consider that evidence only on issue of identity. People v Rivera, 281 A.D.2d 702, 721 N.Y.S.2d 429, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2294 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 805, 726 N.Y.S.2d 383, 750 N.E.2d 85, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1735 (N.Y. 2001).

In prosecution for second degree assault and third degree weapon possession, identification procedure was not unduly suggestive, even though each witness was present while the other viewed photo array, where police officer took steps to prevent consultation between witnesses and to preclude them from seeing which photo the other selected, each witness had ample time to observe defendant during events in question, and thus their identification of him had independent basis that alone rendered their testimony admissible. People v Burns, 281 A.D.2d 704, 722 N.Y.S.2d 76, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2313 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 826, 729 N.Y.S.2d 446, 754 N.E.2d 206, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2094 (N.Y. 2001).

In trial for second degree assault and first degree promoting prison contraband, evidence of defendant's status as gang member was properly admitted because it was relevant to establish motive and explain his connection with codefendant, and its probative value outweighed potential prejudice. People v Reynolds, 283 A.D.2d 771, 728 N.Y.S.2d 503, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5189 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 866, 730 N.Y.S.2d 41, 754 N.E.2d 1124, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2617 (N.Y. 2001), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 923, 732 N.Y.S.2d 640, 758 N.E.2d 666, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4003 (N.Y. 2001).

Photographs of child victim in assault prosecutions were properly allowed to show nature of injuries and thus to prove that defendant acted with requisite intent. People v Scavone, 284 A.D.2d 928, 728 N.Y.S.2d 615, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5866 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 942, 733 N.Y.S.2d 382, 759 N.E.2d 381, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 3579 (N.Y. 2001).

Defendant convicted of second degree assault was not entitled to suppression of showup identification testimony where (1) victim's description was sufficient to provide reasonable suspicion to detain defendant for identification procedure, (2) although showup occurred in front of police station, crime had occurred about 35 minutes earlier a few blocks away, (3) victim, who had not been alerted that he was going to be given opportunity to make identification, identified defendant, who was not in handcuffs, without any prompting, (4) thus, circumstances were not unduly suggestive, and (5) exigent circumstances were present in that victim needed medical treatment. People v Smith, 286 A.D.2d 636, 730 N.Y.S.2d 495, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8811 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 688, 738 N.Y.S.2d 304, 764 N.E.2d 408, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4540 (N.Y. 2001).

In prosecution for second degree assault and second degree impersonation, evidence that defendant threatened to kill police officer involved in his arrest was admissible, despite lack of CLS CPL § 710.30 notice to defendant of that evidence, where defendant moved for suppression of that evidence, thus excusing notice requirement. People v Laws, 286 A.D.2d 991, 730 N.Y.S.2d 911, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9010 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2001), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 706, 739 N.Y.S.2d 107, 765 N.E.2d 310, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 355 (N.Y. 2002).

In defendant's appeal from trial court's judgment convicting defendant of first degree assault, second degree assault, criminal contempt, and five counts of endangering the welfare of a child, the appellate court held that (1) a reasonable person would not have believed he or she was in custody when a police officer asked for his or her name and date of birth with respect to the issuance of a warrant on a separate matter, and defendant's rights were not violated because the officer asked a subsequent, single investigatory question without reading defendant's Miranda rights; (2) the trial court properly exercised its discretion in permitting the prosecutor to ask defendant's son leading questions when defendant's son testified as a prosecution witness and to impeach defendant's son; (3) the trial court abused its discretion by permitting the prosecutor to question defendant about prior convictions for endangering the welfare of a child and assault in the second degree, but the error was harmless; and (4) the trial court had a reasonable basis for placing defendant in physical restraints in the courtroom. People v Jacobs, 298 A.D.2d 954, 748 N.Y.S.2d 110, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9031 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 99 N.Y.2d 559, 754 N.Y.S.2d 212, 784 N.E.2d 85, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 4368 (N.Y. 2002).

Where, during the commission of an unrelated crime, defendant admitted to police, who had no knowledge of an assault case, that defendant shot a girl, there was no question of voluntariness requiring N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 710.30(1)(a) notice or a suppression hearing. People v Garcia-Lopez, 308 A.D.2d 366, 764 N.Y.S.2d 264, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9385 (N.Y. Ed. 2d 991, 2004 U.S. LEXIS 3936 (U.S. 2004).

That a victim suffered from dementia and was declared to be incompetent to testify at trial did not preclude the admission of her out-of-court statements implicating defendant in the crimes, because 1) witnesses' testimony established that she was alert and oriented when she made the statements and she made them while she was under the stress caused by an assault and attempted robbery, and they were thus admissible under the excited utterance exception to the hearsay rule; and 2) there was other corroborative evidence tending to establish both the commission of the underlying crimes and defendant's connection thereto. People v Cole, 150 A.D.3d 1476, 52 N.Y.S.3d 744, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3921 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2017), app. denied, 31 N.Y.3d 1146, 108 N.E.3d 502, 83 N.Y.S.3d 428, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 2234 (N.Y. 2018).

In connection with defendant's conviction of assault in the second degree, complainant's 911 calls were properly admitted into evidence as excited utterances; the nature of defendant's attack on the complainant with a butcher knife was the type of startling event that would cause physical shock, plus the 911 calls were made only approximately five minutes after the event, and in those intervening minutes, the complainant ran to his apartment to bandage his wound. People v Jaber, 172 A.D.3d 1227, 101 N.Y.S.3d 371, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4001 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 34 N.Y.3d 933, 133 N.E.3d 403, 109 N.Y.S.3d 703, 2019 N.Y. 44. —Evidence improperly allowed

In trial for second degree assault on nine month old child, it was reversible error to allow testimony concerning prior, uncharged incident in which defendant had twisted same child's leg causing swelling and preventing child from putting weight on leg for several days, even though X-rays taken later showed leg had been fractured at some point, since defendant had been playing with child at time of first incident and there was no evidence of intent to cause injury, nor could fracture be ascribed to that incident with certainty; therefore, probative value of incident on defendant's intention in connection with current crime was outweighed by potential for prejudice. People v Johnson, 122 A.D.2d 341, 504 N.Y.S.2d 311, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 59675 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

At trial for second degree assault, prosecutor's reference in summation to contents of radio transmission and police report which allegedly indicated that gunshots had been fired, and which were not in evidence, was highly prejudicial where reference was improper attempt to corroborate complainant's testimony that he had been pistol-whipped and shot at by defendants, and defendants claimed they had no guns; prejudice resulted since element of offense requires physical injury to be caused by use of deadly weapon or dangerous instrument. People v Scoon, 130 A.D.2d 597, 515 N.Y.S.2d 306, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 46611 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

In prosecution for second degree assault, inter alia, it was error to allow People to present evidence of defendant's prior convictions involving criminal behavior towards same complainant in order to prove intent; whether or not defendant previously assaulted complainant had greater prejudicial impact than probative value on issue of defendant's intention to seriously injure her on this occasion, and only served to establish defendant's criminal propensities. People v Carr, 208 A.D.2d 855, 618 N.Y.S.2d 379, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10014 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994), overruled, People v Johnson, 95 N.Y.2d 368, 718 N.Y.S.2d 1, 740 N.E.2d 1075, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 2930 (N.Y. 2000).

In prosecution for attempted first and second degree robbery, second degree assault, and second and third degree weapon possession, lineup was unduly suggestive, and identification testimony of witnesses who viewed tainted lineup was inadmissible in absence of showing of independent source, where (1) witnesses had described one perpetrator as wearing dreadlocks and striped shirt, and (2) when defendant was shown to certain of those witnesses at lineup, he and 5 fillers wore baseball caps concealing their hair, but defendant was sole person wearing striped shirt. People v Riddick, 251 A.D.2d 517, 674 N.Y.S.2d 703, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6814 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 951, 681 N.Y.S.2d 481, 704 N.E.2d 234, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4232 (N.Y. 1998).

In prosecution for attempted second degree murder, first degree firearm use, second degree assault, and fourth degree weapon possession, court erroneously ruled, at Sandoval hearing, that prosecution could cross-examine defendant, who was HIV positive, as to whether he had life-threatening disease where there was no evidence that defendant was despondent, hostile, or vengeful as result of his disease or that he had reason to believe that he would not live long enough to be punished for his actions, and thus there was no basis for inference that defendant knew that he had nothing to lose and that he acted on that knowledge in committing crimes. People v Felix-Torres, 281 A.D.2d 649, 721 N.Y.S.2d 415, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2018 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 681, 738 N.Y.S.2d 296, 764 N.E.2d 400, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4373 (N.Y. 2001).

Trial court erred by permitting testimony regarding a series of prior bad acts and/or uncharged crimes that occurred in the two weeks preceding the incident because, even if they fell within one or more of the recognized Molineux exceptions, and indeed constituted relevant and probative evidence, the record failed to reflect that the trial court balanced the probative value of such evidence against its prejudicial effect. People v Elmy, 117 A.D.3d 1183, 984 N.Y.S.2d 672, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3246 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2014).

45. Sufficient evidence to uphold conviction, generally

Evidence supported defendant's conviction for assault in the second degree because there was sufficient proof that defendant acted recklessly, pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 15.05, in operating a motor vehicle on a public road at an excessive rate of speed before crossing a double line on a curve and colliding with an oncoming vehicle. People v Asaro, 21 N.Y.3d 677, 976 N.Y.S.2d 10, 998 N.E.2d 810, 2013 N.Y. LEXIS 2909 (N.Y. 2013).

In prosecution for second degree assault and fourth degree weapon possession, People disproved justification defense by showing that (1) defendant had threatened to kill complainant when complainant intervened in fight between her and another, and (2) when defendant lunged at complainant with knife, cutting his arm, complainant had already put down dumbbells he had earlier picked up to defend himself after defendant's threat. People v Jackson, 157 A.D.2d 801, 550 N.Y.S.2d 403, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 690 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 967, 556 N.Y.S.2d 252, 555 N.E.2d 624, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 1835 (N.Y. 1990).

Defense of justification to charge of second degree assault was disproved beyond reasonable doubt where evidence showed that, after exposing himself to 10-year-old girl, defendant was confronted and chased by 3 unarmed youths who grabbed him and pushed him against car, and defendant, shouting "in the name of God I'm going to kill you," drew knife from back pocket and swung it, cutting one youth across his face and stabbing another in his forearm despite their efforts to back away. People v Varela, 164 A.D.2d 924, 559 N.Y.S.2d 756, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10613 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 1025, 565 N.Y.S.2d 775, 566 N.E.2d 1180, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 4913 (N.Y. 1990).

Court properly denied defendant's motion for trial order of dismissal in prosection for first and second degree assault and first degree promoting prison contraband where (1) defendant and victim were alone in area separated from all other inmates and were fighting, (2) victim testified that he could not see who slashed him during fight, but that he knew defendant fought with him, (3) correction officers testified that they witnessed fight, that victim was badly cut, and that defendant had cuts on his hands consistent with razor cuts, and (4) razor was found on ground next to defendant. People v Davis, 208 A.D.2d 1062, 617 N.Y.S.2d 571, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9844 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 84 N.Y.2d 1010, 622 N.Y.S.2d 922, 647 N.E.2d 128, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 5051 (N.Y. 1994).

In second degree assault trial, witness' testimony that she saw defendant pick something up and throw it in direction of police officers, offered in direct contradiction to defendant's assertion that he did not throw any objects, was rebuttal evidence admissible at close of defendant's case, not identification testimony that had to be offered on People's case-in-chief. People v Barker, 223 A.D.2d 899, 636 N.Y.S.2d 482, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 393 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 964, 647 N.Y.S.2d 718, 670 N.E.2d 1350, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 2776 (N.Y. 1996).

Testimony of two eyewitnesses as well as the victim was legally sufficient to establish that defendant, a juvenile, committed acts that if committed by an adult would have constituted assault in the second degree and criminal possession of a weapon in the second degree in violation of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 120.05(4) and 265.03. Matter of Marcus C., 46 A.D.3d 816, 848 N.Y.S.2d 317, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12844 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2007).

There was sufficient evidence to support a defendant's convictions for assault in the second degree and criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree as it was within the province of the jury to believe the victim's version of the events, which was corroborated by the testifying detective who stated he observed a bloody knife at the scene and that he observed the bedroom door, which appeared to have been punctured or stabbed, which was consistent with the victim's testimony that the defendant attempted to break down the door to get to him. Further, a police officer testified that when he arrived on the scene, the defendant was walking in front of the apartment, there was blood on his clothing, and he was sweating, despite the cold temperature and, in addition, the knife that the defendant used to inflict the injuries constituted a deadly weapon or dangerous instrument and the defendant's intent to cause physical injury was inferable from his conduct and the surrounding circumstances. People v Gonzalez, 64 A.D.3d 1038, 882 N.Y.S.2d 598, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5762 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 13 N.Y.3d 796, 887 N.Y.S.2d 545, 916 N.E.2d 440, 2009 N.Y. LEXIS 4370 (N.Y. 2009).

In a case in which a jury convicted defendant of two counts of criminal possession of a weapon in the second degree and assault in the second degree, the appellate division was satisfied that the jury's guilty verdict was supported by the weight of the evidence. While defendant premised his weight of the evidence argument on the lack of credibility of the victim and the victim's girlfriend, such matters were explored on cross-examination and presented an issue for the jury's resolution. People v Gunn, 144 A.D.3d 1193, 40 N.Y.S.3d 634, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7120 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2016), app. denied, 28 N.Y.3d 1145, 74 N.E.3d 682, 52 N.Y.S.3d 297, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 257 (N.Y. 2017).

Jury's verdict as to the defendant's conviction of assault in second degree was not against the weight of evidence because defendant struck the victim and evidence supported the conclusion that the victim's deep wound constituted a physical injury; the jury could have inferred that defendant intended to cause such injury. It was possible that the jury believed that the victim had no weapons and that defendant cut the victim with a knife rather than injury being caused by the broken glass face of cell phone. People v Williams, 161 A.D.3d 1296, 77 N.Y.S.3d 216, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3367 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 32 N.Y.3d 942, 109 N.E.3d 1169, 84 N.Y.S.3d 869, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 2670 (N.Y. 2018).

Defendant's convictions for assault in second degree and attempted assault in second degree were proper because he pistol whipped one victim with the realized intent of causing physical injury and viciously stomped another victim in the head with the unrealized intent of causing serious physical injury. People v King, 162 A.D.3d 1228, 78 N.Y.S.3d 780, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4333 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2018).

Defendant's claim that his convictions were not supported by legally sufficient evidence was without merit because the testimony that defendant struck the victim in the head with a hammer established that defendant intended to cause serious harm and the testimony that the victim sustained injuries that resulted in bleeding, swelling and substantial pain as a result of being struck by defendant established the elements of assault in the second degree. People v Gill, 168 A.D.3d 1140, 90 N.Y.S.3d 392, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 44 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2019).

Defendant's convictions for attempted assault in the first degree and assault in the second degree were proper because the medical evidence established that the victim had sustained several life-threatening stab wounds to his abdomen and arm from a slender sharp instrument and forensic evidence established that the blood found on the victim's jeans was also found under defendant's fingernails; a police officer also testified that he had known defendant for more than 20 years and recognized him as the assailant. People v Watson, 174 A.D.3d 1138, 105 N.Y.S.3d 199, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5724 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 34 N.Y.3d 955, 134 N.E.3d 657, 110 N.Y.S.3d 658, 2019 N.Y. LEXIS 3197 (N.Y. 2019).

In a case in which defendant was convicted of assault in the second degree, assault in the third degree, and resisting arrest, defendant failed to preserve for appellate review his contention that his convictions of assault in the second degree and assault in the third degree were not supported by legally sufficient evidence. In any event, viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the prosecution, the appellate division found that the evidence was legally sufficient to establish defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt as to all convictions. People v Janvier, 186 A.D.3d 1247, 130 N.Y.S.3d 486, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4976 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 36 N.Y.3d 929, 2020 N.Y. LEXIS 3006 (N.Y. 2020).

In trial for second degree assault, third degree intimidating witness and second degree menacing, People met their burden of laying proper foundation for introduction of expert testimony concerning battered woman's syndrome (BWS) with regard to complainant wife's trial testimony recanting or minimizing her grand jury testimony, where they presented evidence of characteristics of 3 stages in cycle of violence associated with BWS ("tension building," "explosion" and "honeymoon"), as well as other factors characteristic of BWS behavior, including evidence that complainant blamed herself for causing incidents, and minimized or denied severity of violence. People v Ellis, 170 Misc. 2d 945, 650 N.Y.S.2d 503, 1996 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 420 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1996).

The evidence was legally sufficient to support defendant's conviction of assault in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2), as the People presented evidence that defendant hit one victim with a paddle and struck her head with a cane, and that she smashed the other victim's hand with a cane, fracturing two fingers, and ordered the dog owned by that victim to bite her leg, and that defendant's conduct caused fractures, bruises, or lacerations, and thus the evidence was legally sufficient with respect to the physical injury element of the statute. People v Dennee, 295 A.D.2d 1012, 743 N.Y.S.2d 798, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6258 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 99 N.Y.2d 534, 752 N.Y.S.2d 595, 782 N.E.2d 573, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 4074 (N.Y. 2002).

Defendant's conviction of assault in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2), was supported by legally sufficient evidence because (1) the testimony of the victim that the victim had passed a group of teenagers, one of whom was holding a stick, that the victim heard a whipping sound in the air and was struck immediately thereafter, and that the victim then turned around and saw defendant in proximity to the victim with a stick in defendant's hand supported the inference that defendant struck the victim, (2) the testimony of a doctor established that the fracture of the victim's jaw was caused by the blow to the victim's face, (3) the testimony of the victim and the doctor established that the victim suffered a physical injury as defined in N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(9), and (4) it did not appear that the trier of fact failed to give the evidence the weight it should have been accorded. People v Thomas, 300 A.D.2d 1034, 752 N.Y.S.2d 482, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12934 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2002), app. denied, 99 N.Y.2d 633, 760 N.Y.S.2d 114, 790 N.E.2d 288, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 1232 (N.Y. 2003).

Defendant's conviction of assault in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05, was supported by sufficient evidence; he trial evidence showed that defendant became embroiled in an argument with a New York City bus driver, grabbed the bus driver by the neck, and, holding a knife to the bus driver's neck, threatened to slash him, and that the bus driver was cut during the ensuing struggle, and the trier of fact could reasonably have conclude from this evidence that defendant intended to cause physical injury by means of a dangerous instrument, and did, in fact, cause such an injury. Where defendant entered a subway carrying an incendiary devise that was in imminent peril of exploding, the verdict with respect to the convictions for second-degree attempted murder, first- and second-degree assault, and third-degree criminal possession of a weapon was based on legally sufficient evidence. Defendant, a juvenile, engaged in reckless behavior that, if defendant had been an adult, would have been sufficient to support convictions of second degree assault in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05 and second degree reckless endangerment in violation of N.Y. LEXIS 1684 (N.Y. 2003).

Defendant's conviction for assault in the second degree was not against the weight of the evidence. People v Gadsden, 303 A.D.2d

764, 760 N.Y.S.2d 180, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3494 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003).

Although the evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of second-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3) and to allow a jury to determine that the police officers sustained a physical injury within the meaning of N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(9), the circumstances of defendant's criminal conduct did not warrant a persistent felony offender sentence under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 400.20(1). People v Goico, 306 A.D.2d 828, 761 N.Y.S.2d 562, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6857 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2003).

Defendant's conviction of assault in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05, was affirmed, because defendant's guilty plea was knowing, voluntary, and intelligent, and the conviction was supported by sufficient evidence, as defendant admitted to the reckless conduct as charged in the fourth count of the indictment, and this resulted in a skull fracture to the victim, which could be considered a serious injury. People v Wehrle, 308 A.D.2d 660, 764 N.Y.S.2d 668, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9764 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

Where the testimony of several witnesses established that defendant, while armed with a loaded firearm, unlawfully entered a home with the intent to commit armed robbery, that defendant forcibly stole property, and that defendant, in the course of the robbery, intentionally shot the victim, who was not a participant in the crime, there was sufficient evidence to convict defendant of first degree robbery in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 160.15, two counts of first degree burglary in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 140.30, two counts of second degree robbery in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 160.10, second degree assault in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05, first degree criminal use of a firearm in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 265.09, second degree criminal possession of a weapon in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 265.03, second degree criminal use of a firearm in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 265.08, and third degree criminal possession of a weapon in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 265.02. People v Wright, 1 A.D.3d 707, 766 N.Y.S.2d 730, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11733 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 636, 777 N.Y.S.2d 34, 808 N.E.2d 1293, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 924 (N.Y. 2004).

Defendants' convictions of rape in the first degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 130.35(1), and assault in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2), (6), were affirmed; the convictions were not against the weight of the evidence, based on defendant's confession to the crimes and compelling DNA evidence presented by the People. People v Van Kuren, 1 A.D.3d 960, 767 N.Y.S.2d 323, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12205 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2003), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 635, 777 N.Y.S.2d 34, 808 N.E.2d 1293, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 911 (N.Y. 2004).

Where defendant allegedly bit a deputy sheriff on the finger and punched the deputy sheriff several times, there was sufficient evidence to convict defendant of assault in the second degree in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3) and resisting arrest in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 205.30. People v Endresz, 1 A.D.3d 888, 767 N.Y.S.2d 732, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12406 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2003).

Hiking boots worn by defendant during an assault in which he repeatedly kicked his victim in the head could have been a dangerous weapon for purposes of a second-degree assault charge; defendant's conviction of second degree assault was supported by sufficient evidence and was not against weight of evidence where medical testimony concluded that the victim's brain injuries were likely caused by repeated blows to the head and witnesses testified as to defendant's kicking motion to the victim's head. People v Deperna, 2 A.D.3d 900, 768 N.Y.S.2d 238, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12795 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

Defendant's conviction for second degree assault was not against the manifest weight of the evidence based upon the testimony of the sergeant who was struck and a correction officer who was present; their testimony established that defendant turned around suddenly while being escorted and, with a closed fist, struck the sergeant in the face, knocking off his glasses and causing a bruise on his face. People v Chasey, 5 A.D.3d 815, 772 N.Y.S.2d 629, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2219 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 2 N.Y.3d 797, 781 N.Y.S.2d 296, 814 N.E.2d 468, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 1811 (N.Y. 2004).

Defendant's conviction for assault in the first degree was not against the weight of the evidence where the evidence showed that, as to the ability of the first victim to identify defendant, a police officer, who questioned that victim, described the victim as very coherent and able to give the officer a detailed description of the person who had assaulted him; additionally, the evidence showed that defendant employed a razor supported the conclusion that he formed the requisite intent to commit the crimes of which he was convicted. People v Perkins, 5 A.D.3d 801, 772 N.Y.S.2d 750, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2216 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 3 N.Y.3d 741, 786 N.Y.S.2d 821, 820 N.E.2d 300, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 3659 (N.Y. 2004).

In an assault case where defendant used a stun gun to shock the victim twice on her abdomen, causing welts, and shot her with a BB gun, the evidence permitted the jury to find that the victim suffered physical injury as defined in N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(9). Furthermore, it was not unreasonable for the jury to find that the stun gun was a dangerous instrument. People v Richard, 30 A.D.3d 750, 817 N.Y.S.2d 698, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7939 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.3d 869, 824 N.Y.S.2d 614, 857 N.E.2d 1145, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 3847 (N.Y. 2006).

Ample evidence supported defendant's conviction as an accomplice to second degree assault where it showed that defendant told her codefendant to "beat" and "get" one of two victims. People v Lazaro, 955 N.Y.S.2d 495, 38 Misc. 3d 697, 2012 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 5531 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2012), aff'd, in part, 125 A.D.3d 1008, 4 N.Y.S.3d 300, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1653 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2015).

Inmate's convictions for first degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.10(1) and second degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05 were supported by sufficient evidence where since the inmate was under a porch at the time he fired his rifle, and he therefore could have only injured someone if he aimed his rifle low, that evidence strongly suggested intentional conduct on the part of the inmate. Moreover, the inmate's conduct cause serious physical injury to the victims. Gillis v Edwards, 445 F. Supp. 2d 221, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 57764 (N.D.N.Y. 2006).

46. —First Department

Evidence was legally sufficient to support defendant's conviction of first degree robbery, second degree burglary and second degree assault where it was shown that defendant and his accomplice were promptly and properly identified as perpetrators within several minutes after breaking and entering into theater where they beat and robbed porter, that watch stolen from porter was recovered from defendant, and that blue bag which accomplice had been carrying was found at arrest scene. People v Weeks, 156 A.D.2d 133, 548 N.Y.S.2d 179, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15218 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1989), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 819, 552 N.Y.S.2d 569, 551 N.E.2d 1247, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 337 (N.Y. 1990).

Evidence was sufficient to support conviction of second degree burglary, attempted first degree rape, first degree sexual abuse and second degree assault arising from incident in which defendant allegedly forced his way into apartment of his estranged wife, beat her, attempted to rape her, and beat female friend of wife over head with hammer, where (1) during incident, wife persistently asked friend to call police, (2) neighbor called police after having seen defendant prowling around outside with flashlight and beating friend in hallway, (3) responding police observed wife crying hysterically and also saw bloody lump on friend's head, and (4) medical evidence corroborated testimony concerning assaults, even though defendant asserted that wife permitted him to enter apartment, that she consented to his sexual advances, that they ended up in argument in which friend intervened with hammer, and that he accidentally hit friend with hammer while trying to disarm her. People v DeLarosa, 172 A.D.2d 156, 568 N.Y.S.2d 47, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4115 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 78 N.Y.2d 965, 574 N.Y.S.2d 944, 580 N.E.2d 416, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 4345 (N.Y. 1991).

Evidence supported conviction for second degree assault on fellow inmate, despite fact that correction officer had perjured himself to extent that he attempted to protect fellow officer who was required to be present in prisoner dormitory but had left without authorization to use bathroom, since there was no reason to believe that witness had not actually observed defendant participate in assault. People v Hernandez, 173 A.D.2d 382, 570 N.Y.S.2d 12, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7597 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 78 N.Y.2d 967, 574 N.Y.S.2d 947, 580 N.E.2d 419, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 4403 (N.Y. 1991).

Defendant's guilt of second degree assault on acting in concert theory was established by evidence that (1) defendant and codefendants were principal participants in group attack on 3 young men, (2) as result of blows administered to face and body with wooden board one victim suffered broken jaw and nose, and fractured bones and lacerations so severe that bone was exposed, (3) defendant was observed by police officer in act of dragging victim along ground, and (4) both victims identified defendant as one attacker at on-scene show-up procedure. People v Calia, 184 A.D.2d 400, 585 N.Y.S.2d 356, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8519 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 80 N.Y.2d 973, 591 N.Y.S.2d 142, 605 N.E.2d 878, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 4259 (N.Y. 1992).

Evidence was sufficient to support conviction for second degree assault, notwithstanding contention that People failed to prove that defendant intended to cause physical harm to correction officer, where there was evidence that defendant, during argument with officers, picked up chair, swung it over his head, lunged toward officer, and in fact hit and injured her. People v Rodriguez, 187 A.D.2d 401, 590 N.Y.S.2d 206, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13326 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1992).

Evidence supported convictions for second degree assault and obstruction of governmental administration where (1) defendant was arrested and transported to precinct, (2) when handcuffs were thereafter removed, she became verbally and physically abusive, (3) before she could be subdued, she severely scratched face of officer standing by officer who removed handcuffs, and (4) injured officer was on duty standing by to assist officer assigned to process defendant. People v Lane, 190 A.D.2d 604, 593 N.Y.S.2d 802, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1545 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 1015, 600 N.Y.S.2d 203, 616 N.E.2d 860, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 2486 (N.Y. 1993).

Juvenile's guilt of acts constituting attempted second and third degree assault and second degree menacing was shown by victim's testimony that juvenile twice hit him in face with his fist and 3 times in neck and back with metal pipe, while he was surrounded by several individuals, one of whom also hit him. In re Peter L., 233 A.D.2d 257, 650 N.Y.S.2d 543, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12150 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1996).

In juvenile delinquency proceeding based on attempted second degree robbery and attempted second degree assault, defendant's intent to obtain victim's property by force was proved by testimony that after victim indicated that he did not have cigarette requested by defendant, defendant's cohorts surrounded victim, defendant began to strike victim with tree limb, defendant's cohorts joined in this attack, during which assailants tried to grab at victim's ring, watch, and pocket, and attack had no apparent motive other than robbery. In re Horatio B., 240 A.D.2d 197, 658 N.Y.S.2d 294, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6168 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1997).

Evidence supported conviction of second degree assault and endangering welfare of child where there was conflicting expert testimony and ample evidence from which defendant's intent to cause serious physical injury could be inferred, including defendant's own statements. People v Turner, 251 A.D.2d 127, 672 N.Y.S.2d 737, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6932 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 907, 680 N.Y.S.2d 71, 702 N.E.2d 856, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 3631 (N.Y. 1998).

Evidence supported conviction of second degree assault, even though no witness conclusively identified defendant as assailant who initially hit victim, knocking him to ground, where defendant's guilt was based on acting-in-concert theory, and all 3 participants shared requisite intent by collectively beating victim with wooden planks. People v Hill, 251 A.D.2d 129, 675 N.Y.S.2d 338, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6959 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 899, 680 N.Y.S.2d 63, 702 N.E.2d 848, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 3420 (N.Y. 1998), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 899, 680 N.Y.S.2d 63, 702 N.E.2d 848 (N.Y. 1998).

Evidence supported conviction of second degree assault and fourth degree weapon possession where eyewitnesses testified that defendant cut victim's forehead with box cutter, and there was no reason to disturb jury's credibility determinations. People v Edmondson, 281 A.D.2d 184, 721 N.Y.S.2d 522, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2197 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2001).

Jury verdict convicting defendant of second degree assault was not against weight of evidence where victim's physical injuries included bruised knee that caused him to walk with limp for 6 days, cuts on his arm, and stiff shoulder. People v Battle, 286 A.D.2d 625, 730 N.Y.S.2d 109, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8598 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 678, 738 N.Y.S.2d 293, 764 N.E.2d 397, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4303 (N.Y. 2001).

Jury verdict convicting defendant of second degree burglary and second degree assault was not against weight of evidence, and assault conviction was not tainted by burglary conviction, where (1) defendant's larcenous intent could be readily inferred from circumstances, including his behavior when confronted by victim, and (2) criminal act underlying assault conviction was both separate and overwhelming. People v Linares, 286 A.D.2d 629, 730 N.Y.S.2d 107, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8589 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 657, 737 N.Y.S.2d 58, 762 N.E.2d 936, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4230 (N.Y. 2001).

Convictions of obstructing governmental administration in the second degree and resisting arrest were supported by sufficient evidence where, when police accompanied defendant's mother to her apartment to serve defendant with a protective order, defendant responded belligerently and, ignoring an officer's suggestion that he calm down, repeatedly and aggressively sought to push past the officers and confront his mother; this provided probable cause for his arrest, and he violently resisted that lawful arrest, resulting in injuries to officers. People v Sowell, 25 A.D.3d 386, 808 N.Y.S.2d 46, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 150 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.3d 763, 819 N.Y.S.2d 889, 853 N.E.2d 260, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 2378 (N.Y. 2006).

Because defendant was the "boss" of a well-organized gang, he actually handed an assailant one of the dangerous instruments used in an assault, and he gave the order for the attack to begin, there was ample evidence establishing defendant's accessorial liability with respect to second-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2) and criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree. People v Vaughn, 36 A.D.3d 434, 831 N.Y.S.2d 27, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 97 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 9 N.Y.3d 870, 840 N.Y.S.2d 899, 872 N.E.2d 1205, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 2544 (N.Y. 2007), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 1284, 128 S. Ct. 1711, 170 L. Ed. 2d 520, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 2878 (U.S. 2008).

Juvenile adjudication of assault in the second degree, attempted assault in the second degree, menacing in the second degree, criminal possession of a weapon, and reckless endangerment based on accessory liability under N.Y. Penal Law § 20.00 was proper because appellant's actions supported the inference that she knew of her companion's possession of and intent to use a knife during an assault on his victims and that she shared the state of mind required for the commission of the offenses based on the knife, intentionally aiding him in such conduct and sharing a "community of purpose" with him; while the companion attacked one of the victims with the knife, appellant was present, shouting threats and throwing punches, and she continued to participate in the attack after the companion began using the knife. Appellant's taking part in chasing, surrounding, threatening, and attacking the victims, after the companion attacked with the knife, justified the conclusion that she and the companion were working together to menace and attack the victims, which involved the use of the knife, and that she shared in the companion's intent to use the knife as part of the attack. Matter of Tatiana N., 73 A.D.3d 186, 899 N.Y.S.2d 21, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2820 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2010).

Although it was alleged that defendant swung a knife, described as a dangerous instrument, at the victim's ribs, without a further description of the knife, there was sufficient evidence to convict defendant of attempted assault in the second degree in violation of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 120.05 and menacing in the second degree in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.14, as the factual allegations supported an inference that defendant attempted to cause impairment of physical condition or substantial pain and that defendant placed or attempted to place the victim in reasonable fear of an imminent injury, and defendant's intent to cause physical injury to the victim and to place the victim in fear of physical injury could be inferred from the fact that defendant displayed and swung a knife at the victim, causing the victim to wrestle with defendant in self-defense. In re Jonathan M., 4 A.D.3d 154, 772 N.Y.S.2d 42, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1657 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2004).

47. —Second Department

In prosecution for assault in second degree, evidence supported conclusion that laceration on victim's finger was caused by defendant as he wielded machete, despite evidence that there was broken glass in room from smashed mirror, where medical evidence indicated that laceration was "clearly incised" and would not have been caused by jagged edge of broken mirror glass. People v Smith, 125 A.D.2d 509, 509 N.Y.S.2d 421, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 62814 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Evidence sustained second degree assault conviction where defendant placed infant entrusted to his care into water he knew to be too hot and ignored infant's screams and attempts to extricate himself, in conscious disregard of risk that infant would be seriously burned, and where infant sustained second-degree burns over 23 percent of his body, endured substantial pain, and was scarred for life. People v Durkin, 132 A.D.2d 668, 518 N.Y.S.2d 38, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49214 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 799, 522 N.Y.S.2d 116, 516 N.E.2d 1229, 1987 N.Y. Defendant's guilt of first degree manslaughter, second degree assault, and second degree weapon possession was overwhelmingly proven beyond reasonable doubt where (1) 3 prosecution witnesses saw defendant take gun from his waistband, point it at one witness, and shoot him in chest, and (2) as they ran from scene, witnesses heard defendant fire 3 more shots, killing second victim. People v Blankumsee, 133 A.D.2d 640, 519 N.Y.S.2d 749, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 51679 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 1004, 526 N.Y.S.2d 939, 521 N.E.2d 1082, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 783 (N.Y. 1988).

Evidence identifying defendant as assailant was sufficient to support convictions of sodomy, robbery, burglary, unlawful imprisonment, and assault where (1) victim recognized attacker's voice as that of defendant with whom she had been speaking only hours before attack, (2) victim's description of attacker fit defendant, and (3) photograph of defendant taken soon after his arrest showed him in clothing similar to that of attacker. People v Alston, 134 A.D.2d 433, 521 N.Y.S.2d 56, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50619 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987), app. dismissed, 71 N.Y.2d 966, 529 N.Y.S.2d 77, 524 N.E.2d 431, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 1870 (N.Y. 1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 832, 109 S. Ct. 90, 102 L. Ed. 2d 66, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 3716 (U.S. 1988).

Evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of second degree assault and second degree weapon possession where (1) victim and defendant were only people in victim's locked apartment at least 5 minutes before incident, (2) victim's last recollection, prior to losing consciousness, was going from living room couch to kitchen while passing in front of defendant, who was pacing back and forth, (3) on regaining consciousness approximately one hour later, victim was lying in front of couch with bullet wound to his head, and (4) inside dead bolt lock had been disengaged, but snap lock, which locked when door was closed, was engaged. People v Leitzey, 138 A.D.2d 409, 525 N.Y.S.2d 692, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2098 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 72 N.Y.2d 862, 532 N.Y.S.2d 512, 528 N.E.2d 902, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 3799 (N.Y. 1988).

In prosecution for first degree rape, first degree sexual abuse, and second degree assault, inter alia, defendant's identity as assailant was sufficiently established by evidence that victim had viewed assailant at close range for most of 20-minute attack which occurred in sufficiently illuminated location, and by victim's unequivocal identification of defendant as her assailant at local park 6 days after crime, and again at trial. People v Morales, 141 A.D.2d 567, 529 N.Y.S.2d 175, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6268 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 72 N.Y.2d 922, 532 N.Y.S.2d 856, 529 N.E.2d 186, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 3167 (N.Y. 1988).

Unwavering identification testimony of woman who had escaped from assailant after he had slashed her face with razor, dragged her into woods, threatened to kill her, and partially stripped off her clothing, was itself sufficient to support convictions for first degree robbery, first and second degree assault, and first degree coercion; jury was entitled to give victim's testimony great weight and to reject testimony of alibi witnesses. People v Solomon, 141 A.D.2d 579, 529 N.Y.S.2d 188, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6331 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 72 N.Y.2d 913, 532 N.Y.S.2d 762, 528 N.E.2d 1235, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 2891 (N.Y. 1988).

Evidence was sufficient to support convictions for second degree assault and resisting arrest where defendant attempted to evade arrest by struggling with police during pat down while officers were attempting to handcuff him, and one officer sustained injury as result of struggle. People v Cotton, 143 A.D.2d 680, 532 N.Y.S.2d 911, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9500 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Evidence was legally sufficient to support verdicts of attempted first degree assault, second degree assault, second degree criminal mischief and third degree weapon possession where victim intervened in fight between defendant and another individual in front of victim's store, defendant slapped or punched victim and threatened him, defendant then got into his vehicle and attempted to strike victim with vehicle, injuring victim's hand, and defendant then drove vehicle directly into store where several people had assembled. People v Guerrero, 150 A.D.2d 489, 541 N.Y.S.2d 90, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6489 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Evidence supported second degree assault conviction based on defendant's having caused physical injury to victim by use of dangerous instrument where witnesses testified that defendant plunged stick into victim's eye after being asked to leave victim's premises, notwithstanding testimony of defendant that he threw stick at victim during altercation in which victim accosted him and that he did not intend to cause injury. People v Ludwig, 155 A.D.2d 558, 547 N.Y.S.2d 414, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14229 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 814, 552 N.Y.S.2d 565, 551 N.E.2d 1243, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 353 (N.Y. 1990).

Conviction of second degree murder and second degree assault was supported by evidence that (1) defendant came to witness' apartment and asked if he and codefendant wanted "to do this with him," (2) witness declined but codefendant agreed, (3) defendant returned with shotgun several minutes later and asked witness again if he "was down with it," (4) witness heard shotgun blasts short time later, (5) defendant admitted to witness on following morning that he had participated in shooting, and (6) eyewitness who was also shot saw barrel of shotgun, though he was unable to see shooter. People v Beaudovin, 181 A.D.2d 736, 581 N.Y.S.2d 68, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3255 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1992).

Evidence was sufficient to identify defendant as perpetrator of first and second degree robbery, second degree assault, and first degree burglary where (1) 2 men broke into victim's house, beat her, and robbed her, (2) victim testified that she saw defendant in well-lit hallway outside her bedroom door, and that their eyes briefly locked, (3) victim's neighbor testified that he saw defendant, face-to-face, in front of victim's house shortly before crime, and that he saw defendant jump over back fence shortly after crime, and (4) victim and neighbor picked defendant out of lineup 3 months later, and identified him at trial. People v Williams, 184 A.D.2d 606, 584 N.Y.S.2d 632, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7945 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 80 N.Y.2d 978, 591 N.Y.S.2d 147, 605 N.E.2d 883, 1992 N.Y. Evidence supported defendant's convictions for second degree assault, first degree rape, and first degree sodomy where (1) he handcuffed and taped victim to pole, (2) he tore off her clothes and inserted his penis into her vagina and anus, and (3) he whipped victim with electrical cord, struck straight pins into her legs, and burned her with lighted paper bag and cigarette. People v

Stapleton, 204 A.D.2d 580, 612 N.Y.S.2d 178, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5272 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 84 N.Y.2d 872, 618 N.Y.S.2d 18, 642 N.E.2d 337, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 4066 (N.Y. 1994).

Evidence supported conclusion that defendant acted in concert with codefendant and that he had mental culpability required for commission of attempted first and second degree murder, second degree assault, and second degree weapon possession in assault on off-duty police officer where (1) defendant and codefendant approached officer's motorcycle, displayed weapons, and attempted to steal motorcycle, (2) officer displayed his shield and yelled "police," after which codefendant fired shots at officer, and (3) gun fight ensued in which officer was shot in thigh. People v Smith, 210 A.D.2d 267, 620 N.Y.S.2d 67, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12316 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994), app. denied, 85 N.Y.2d 914, 627 N.Y.S.2d 337, 650 N.E.2d 1339, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 1740 (N.Y. 1995).

Evidence supported conviction of second degree murder, first and second degree robbery, second degree assault, petit larceny, fourth degree weapon possession, and fifth degree possession of stolen property where defendant made oral and written confessions that were independently corroborated, and undisputed medical testimony proved causal link between defendant's acts and victim's fatal heart attack about one hour after he was beaten, bound, and gagged. People v Cowen, 255 A.D.2d 596, 682 N.Y.S.2d 59, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12823 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 872, 689 N.Y.S.2d 434, 711 N.E.2d 648, 1999 N.Y. Evidence was insufficient to support conviction of second degree (felony) assault under CLS Penal § 120.05(6) where prosecution failed to prove that assault was committed in furtherance of underlying felonies of second or third degree weapon possession. People v Williams, 255 A.D.2d 610, 682 N.Y.S.2d 60, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12828 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 880, 689 N.Y.S.2d 442, 711 N.E.2d 656, 1999 N.Y. Arresting officer's testimony that defendant injured him in course of chase, after officer told defendant that he was going to be arrested for disorderly conduct, supported People v Coulanges, 264 A.D.2d 853, 696 N.Y.S.2d 466, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9353 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 878, 705 N.Y.S.2d 10, 726 N.E.2d 487, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 288 (N.Y. 2000).

In prosecution for second degree assault, resisting arrest, and third degree unauthorized use of motor vehicle, court properly summarily denied defendant's oral motion to set aside jury's verdict of guilt on ground of newly discovered evidence where (1) defendant did not comply with requirements that motion be in writing, on reasonable notice, and supported by sworn allegations of fact, (2) defendant failed to prove that proposed evidence "could not have been produced by the defendant at the trial," and (3) proposed evidence, blood-stained tee-shirt, would not have contradicted prosecution witnesses' testimony that defendant sustained trauma to his nose. People v Fisher, 266 A.D.2d 308, 699 N.Y.S.2d 58, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11302 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 880, 705 N.Y.S.2d 12, 726 N.E.2d 489, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 321 (N.Y. 2000).

Defendant's guilt of criminally negligent homicide and second degree assault, inter alia, was supported by evidence showing that, having been drinking alcohol and smoking marijuana, he drove his vehicle at 65 to 75 miles per hour on winding and hilly road which posted speed limit of 30 miles per hour, his vehicle crossed over double yellow lines, went through 2 stop signs at high rate of speed without stopping, and then collided with another vehicle, which had right of way, in intersection, and collision resulted in death of one of defendant's passengers and serious physical injury to another. People v Owens, 271 A.D.2d 621, 707 N.Y.S.2d 180, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4267 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 856, 714 N.Y.S.2d 7, 736 N.E.2d 868, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 2716 (N.Y. 2000).

Testimony of 5 eyewitnesses that defendant smashed victim's head with barstool many times while victim lay helpless on ground, and evidence that victim's face was covered with blood and that 60 sutures and 12 staples were needed to close gash in his head, sufficiently established defendant's guilt of second degree assault. People v Smalls, 282 A.D.2d 694, 723 N.Y.S.2d 701, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4019 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 868, 730 N.Y.S.2d 43, 754 N.E.2d 1126, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2652 (N.Y. 2001).

Evidence was legally sufficient to prove, beyond a reasonable doubt, that defendant was guilty of assault in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(1) under circumstances in which the evidence established that the defendant bit off a mass of the victim's cheek near her left eye, causing permanent scarring, numbness, pain, and partial vision impairment, and which condition, even after what a plastic surgeon characterized as "successful" surgery, may have required additional procedures both to protect the victim's eye and to improve the appearance of her scarring; thus, the People proved that defendant caused the victim to suffer serious and protracted disfigurement. People v Whyte, 47 A.D.3d 852, 850 N.Y.S.2d 184, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1363 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2008).

Convictions of assault in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3), assault in the third degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.00, and resisting arrest, N.Y. Penal Law § 205.30, were supported by sufficient evidence, including an officer's testimony that he observed defendant throw a bag of narcotics into an elevator and then enter the elevator, and that, after struggling to prevent defendant from closing the doors, he guided defendant to another officer, recovered a bag of narcotics from the elevator, and advised the other officers that defendant should be placed under arrest, and another officer's testimony that defendant did not succumb to the arrest, shouted that he was not going back to jail, flailed his arms, and charged toward the front door; in the ensuing struggle, two police officers were injured. However, the convictions for second degree assault and resisting arrest were against the weight of the evidence. People v Lindsey, 52 A.D.3d 527, 859 N.Y.S.2d 486, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4972 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2008), app. denied, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 3031 (N.Y. Aug. 18, 2008), app. denied, 11 N.Y.3d 738, 864 N.Y.S.2d 397, 894 N.E.2d 661, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 3072 (N.Y. 2008).

Although defendant's argument that the evidence was legally insufficient to convict defendant of second degree assault pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2) was unpreserved pursuant to N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 470.05(2), the trial court determined that, had the argument been preserved, it would have failed; there was sufficient evidence that was not against the manifest weight of the evidence pursuant to N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 470.15(5) to convict defendant where defendant allegedly restrained the victim while defendant's accomplices inflicted serious wounds upon the victim with blades and where defendant allegedly cut the victim with a sharp object. People v Fluker, 2 A.D.3d 648, 768 N.Y.S.2d 345, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13379 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 627, 777 N.Y.S.2d 26, 808 N.E.2d 1285, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 741 (N.Y. 2004).

There was sufficient evidence to find appellant, a juvenile, to have committed an act that would have constituted assault in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2); the complainant suffered physical injury under N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(9), and appellant used a dangerous instrument by the manner in which appellant used boots to stomp on the complainant's face. Matter of Patricia A., 33 A.D.3d 699, 821 N.Y.S.2d 901, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12290 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

Evidence showing that juvenile appellant struck and broke the complainant's jaw, requiring it to be wired shut for six weeks, was sufficient to establish a "serious physical injury" within the meaning of Penal Law § 10.00(10) to uphold juvenile delinquency findings relating to robbery in the first degree and assault in the second degree. Matter of Tirell R., 33 A.D.3d 804, 822 N.Y.S.2d 615, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12397 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

Evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of assault in the second degree under Penal Law § 120.05(3) because the victim, an off-duty detective, had yelled "police" when defendant initially charged toward him, and that defendant, after briefly hesitating, continued his charge, which supported the jury's conclusion that defendant heard what the victim had yelled; the lawful duty that the victim was performing involved his continuing efforts to safeguard, and to later turn in, the fake gun he initially seized from a juvenile as evidence of that separate crime; and the victim received a painful shoulder injury in the altercation, which required surgery and several months of physical therapy. People v Torres, 130 A.D.3d 1082, 14 N.Y.S.3d 151, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6241 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 26 N.Y.3d 1093, 44 N.E.3d 948, 23 N.Y.S.3d 650, 2015 N.Y. LEXIS 4219 (N.Y. 2015).

Where defendant was convicted of assault in the second degree and criminal possession of a weapon, sufficient evidence established that he used a sharp instrument to inflict lacerations on the complainant's cheek and finger because the complainant testified that defendant was holding a silver box cutter, about five inches long, with a sharp-edged razor blade. People v Braithwaite, 126 A.D.3d 993, 6 N.Y.S.3d 128, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2522 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 25 N.Y.3d 1198, 37 N.E.3d 1164, 16 N.Y.S.3d 521, 2015 N.Y. LEXIS 2310 (N.Y. 2015).

Sufficient evidence supported defendant's conviction for assault in the second degree because defendant and the 75-year-old victim, who suffered from dementia, were patients sharing a hospital room, the victim sustained an injury to his face, which included a laceration and fractures, a witness saw only the injured victim and defendant in the room, and defendant made inculpatory statements, inter alia, to the effect that he hit the victim because the victim hit him first. People v Warden, 166 A.D.3d 817, 87 N.Y.S.3d 307, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7744 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2018), app. denied, 32 N.Y.3d 1210, 122 N.E.3d 1138, 99 N.Y.S.3d 225, 2019 N.Y. LEXIS 713 (N.Y. 2019).

Evidence was legally sufficient to sustain defendant's convictions of assault in the second degree and assault in the third degree where physical injury had been established by evidence that the complainant experienced substantial pain, a rational trier of fact could have concluded that defendant used a dangerous instrument against one of the complainants, both alone and in concert with others. Nonetheless, the assault in the third degree conviction had to be vacated as it was inclusive of the assault in the second degree conviction. People v Taylor, 185 A.D.3d 724, 127 N.Y.S.3d 555, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3851 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2020).

Considered in the light most favorable to the prosecution, both the direct and circumstantial evidence presented at trial was sufficient for a rational jury to conclude that petitioner, acting in concert with others, forcibly stole property from a car service driver at gunpoint, and intentionally caused severe injuries to the victim using dangerous instrumentalities. Morales v Greiner, 273 F. Supp. 2d 236, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12756 (E.D.N.Y. 2003), app. dismissed, 381 F.3d 47, 2004 U.S. App. LEXIS 17435 (2d Cir. 2004).

48. —Third Department

Where trial court charged jury that to find defendant guilty of assaulting two police officers there had to be "intent to prevent a police officer from performing a lawful duty," court's failure to give jury statement of law whereby jury could have determined whether police officers were or were not performing lawful duty when they initially attempted to restrain defendant was prejudicially erroneous; and defendant's submission to court that there was no evidence indicating that at time in question officers had been performing lawful duty could reasonably be construed as objection to charge as given. People v Smith, 50 A.D.2d 670, 375 N.Y.S.2d 194, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12508 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

Evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of vehicular assault, second degree assault, and drunk driving where (1) driver who was following defendant's vehicle testified that just prior to accident he observed defendant's car being driven in erratic manner, swerving from lane to lane, and that defendant's car struck victim's vehicle head on while defendant was operating his car in wrong lane, (2) driver, police officer, and emergency medical technician all testified as to their observations of defendant following accident and each concluded that he was intoxicated, and (3) doctor unequivocally testified that defendant's injuries could not have produced odor of alcohol on his breath, bloodshot eyes or slurred speech. People v Reynolds, 133 A.D.2d 499, 519 N.Y.S.2d 425, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49962 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 803, 522 N.Y.S.2d 121, 516 N.E.2d 1234, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19535 (N.Y. 1987).

Each element of second degree assault on correctional officer was established beyond reasonable doubt by evidence that inmate suddenly pulled officer's arm down and through hatch in cell door as officer was attempting to undo inmate's handcuff, which caused officer's arm to scrape against hatch and his body to be propelled against door, and which resulted in multiple abrasions, swelling, and numbness of his arm and fingers. People v Hilliard, 142 A.D.2d 885, 531 N.Y.S.2d 386, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8026 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988), rev'd, 73 N.Y.2d 584, 542 N.Y.S.2d 507, 540 N.E.2d 702, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 658 (N.Y. 1989).

Evidence was sufficient to show recklessness and thus support conviction for assault in second degree where (1) defendant left bar after being refused further alcohol because he appeared intoxicated, but shortly returned and slapped woman who had refused to leave bar with him, (2) several of bar patrons then followed defendant outside to prevent further trouble, (3) defendant backed his vehicle into station wagon being driven past bar, (4) driver of station wagon then parked across rear exit of parking lot to prevent defendant's escape, (5) bar patron threw beer bottle at defendant's vehicle when it appeared that he would not stop, and defendant then stopped his vehicle, (6) while occupants of station wagon were in or exiting vehicle, defendant struck station wagon head on and pushed it 25 to 40 feet, and (7) as result, passenger in station wagon was knocked to ground and run over. People v Acton, 149 A.D.2d 839, 540 N.Y.S.2d 544, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4872 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Evidence supported convictions of second degree assault, second degree manslaughter, and child endangerment in connection with death of 17-month-old child where (1) child was killed by blow to abdomen, (2) autopsy revealed prior physical injuries consistent with child abuse, (3) defendant was only person present when child died, (4) child's mother testified that child was fine when she left him, (5) defendant's testimony as to child's previously sustained physical injuries was false and conflicting, and (6) defendant delayed medical treatment for child and then obtained insufficient treatment. People v Engler, 150 A.D.2d 827, 540 N.Y.S.2d 591, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5478 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 770, 551 N.Y.S.2d 912, 551 N.E.2d 113, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 4703 (N.Y. 1989).

In trial for second degree manslaughter, child endangerment, and second degree assault arising from death of 17-month-old child, where autopsy revealed that child had been physically abused and defendant claimed that child's previously sustained physical injuries resulted from accidents, evidence of defendant's physical abuse of his stepdaughter was admissible to show absence of mistake or accident since (1) issues of identity and mistake were significant, and (2) jury was instructed to consider such evidence only if it was clear and convincing, and then only on issues of identity and absence of accident or mistake, thus minimizing its prejudicial effect. People v Engler, 150 A.D.2d 827, 540 N.Y.S.2d 591, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5478 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 770, 551 N.Y.S.2d 912, 551 N.E.2d 113, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 4703 (N.Y. 1989).

Defendant was not entitled to dismissal of indictment charging him with causing physical injury by kicking victim with shoes, following People's case in which shoes were presented as dangerous instrument required under CLS Penal § 120.05(2), although defendant contended that there was no proof that he was wearing shoes or that he kicked victim with them, since victim testified that he was kicked hard and evidence showed that incident occurred at end of December, weather was cold, and victim required 70 stitches to repair injuries; thus, jury could have concluded on facts presented that kicking was done while defendant was wearing shoes. People v Bidwell, 153 A.D.2d 960, 545 N.Y.S.2d 402, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11528 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Convictions for second degree assault and first degree reckless endangerment were supported by victim's testimony that (1) he and defendant were co-workers, and that he had rented room to defendant, (2) relationship deteriorated over living arrangement and defendant's alleged failure to pay rent, (3) defendant was fired from his job after he and defendant engaged in shouting match at their place of employment, (4) while he was asleep, defendant entered his bedroom with flaming papers in one hand and baseball bat in other hand, stated that he had made defendant lose his job, and hit him with bat, (5) he fell, and defendant placed burning papers on his back, (6) he awoke with room in flames, (7) he tried to leave house through front door, but defendant was there with baseball bat and stated that he would not be permitted to leave, and (8) he escaped house through second floor window and alerted downstairs tenants to fire; such testimony was corroborated by facts that police found baseball bat down street from house and on direct route to location where defendant was found and, during booking, defendant stated that owner of house had threatened his life in past and asked "doesn't that count?" People v Hameed, 163 A.D.2d 750, 558 N.Y.S.2d 330, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8608 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 986, 563 N.Y.S.2d 775, 565 N.E.2d 524, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 4610 (N.Y. 1990).

Verdict convicting defendant of second degree assault was not against weight of evidence where victim testified that when he left saloon he was confronted by defendant, who pushed him down and stabbed him, and general surgeon testified that he treated victim on evening in question for stab wounds along rib cage and in lower abdomen; defendant's denial of crime and testimony of others as to his peaceful and truthful character merely created issue of credibility. People v June, 183 A.D.2d 960, 583 N.Y.S.2d 566, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6738 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 80 N.Y.2d 905, 588 N.Y.S.2d 830, 602 N.E.2d 238, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 3614 (N.Y. 1992).

In trial for second degree aggravated unlicensed operation of motor vehicle, leaving scene of accident, and second degree assault arising from collision involving pink van registered to defendant's wife, defendant's identity as driver of van was established by circumstantial evidence, although witness was unable to identify defendant as driver who fled from scene, where it was shown that (1) defendant had been operating van several hours before accident, (2) witness' description of driver who fled was similar to that of defendant, (3) defendant had motive to flee accident scene because operation of vehicle violated condition of his parole, (4) defendant made efforts to remain out of public eye after accident and attempted to have his wife withdraw funds from his bank account on pretext that he had left town, and (5) neither defendant nor his wife had reported $36,000 van as stolen. People v Wells, 186 A.D.2d 867, 588 N.Y.S.2d 938, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12128 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992).

In second degree assault trial, evidence established use of dangerous instrument and recklessness in connection with incident in which defendant made his girlfriend's 7 ½ -year-old son sit in bathtub with scalding water, where (1) child testified that steam came up from bath water turned on by defendant, (2) defendant admitted that he knew water was too hot and that child was directed to sit in it while he added cold water, (3) girlfriend testified that water would steam when hot water faucet was turned on, and (4) treating pediatrician offered opinion that pattern of burns on child indicated that child sat in water, rather than reflecting accidental immersion, and suggested that child must have been in scalding water "a lot longer than he wanted to." People v Holden, 188 A.D.2d 757, 590 N.Y.S.2d 939, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13892 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 887, 597 N.Y.S.2d 948, 613 N.E.2d 980, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 1441 (N.Y. 1993).

Evidence supported convictions for first and second degree robbery and second degree assault arising from incident in which defendant and companion entered victim's apartment, hit him over head with bottle, and stole cash and other items from his person and apartment where (1) victim testified that defendant and companion were only people in his apartment at time of attack and that defendant was behind him at time he was struck on back of head with hard object, (2) beer bottle, which was not in apartment before attack, was found near victim's head when he awoke, and (3) physician testified that victim's wounds were consistent with being hit on head with bottle. People v Miller, 189 A.D.2d 1001, 592 N.Y.S.2d 805, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 419 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 889, 597 N.Y.S.2d 951, 613 N.E.2d 983, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 1502 (N.Y. 1993).

Evidence sustained assault conviction under CLS Penal § 120.05(4) (recklessly causing serious physical injury by means of deadly weapon or dangerous instrument) despite conflicting testimony proffered by defense witness, where police officer who was personally familiar with defendant identified him as having thrown rock that injured fellow officer, and defendant's friend admitted that she saw defendant bend down, pick something up, and throw it in direction of police officers. People v Barker, 223 A.D.2d 899, 636 N.Y.S.2d 482, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 393 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 964, 647 N.Y.S.2d 718, 670 N.E.2d 1350, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 2776 (N.Y. 1996).

Evidence supported defendant's second degree assault conviction where she was only person having access to her 22-month-old daughter at time child was scalded with hot water, scalding burns did not occur accidentally but were inflicted on child by another person, defendant gave misleading, inconsistent, and false accounts and explanations, and position of bathroom sink made it impossible for child to climb up on it, turn on hot water, and cause burns to her body. People v Mattison, 226 A.D.2d 924, 641 N.Y.S.2d 182, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3909 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 989, 649 N.Y.S.2d 396, 672 N.E.2d 622, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3639 (N.Y. 1996).

Defendant's second degree assault conviction was supported by evidence that victim and defendant agreed to "fair fight," that on night of fight defendant jumped victim from behind, and with help from 2 others beat victim with hammers and blackjack, and that assault left victim with black and blue marks all over his arms, back, and head, together with massive hemorrhage, headache, dizziness, and bleeding in several places, requiring 15 staples for one laceration. People v Trichilo, 230 A.D.2d 926, 646 N.Y.S.2d 898, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8345 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 931, 654 N.Y.S.2d 733, 677 N.E.2d 305, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 5320 (N.Y. 1996).

In prosecution for second degree assault, evidence was sufficient to prove that defendant intended to, and did, cause "physical injury" to victim by shooting him where (1) victim testified that defendant shot him in arm, (2) friend of both defendant and victim testified that defendant admitted shooting victim over money because victim was selling drugs out of defendant's neighborhood, (3) physician who initially treated victim testified that he suffered from gunshot wound to his arm, that there existed both entrance and exit wounds, and that X-rays revealed bullet fragment in arm, and (4) photographs of victim's wounds were admitted into evidence. People v Hubert, 238 A.D.2d 745, 656 N.Y.S.2d 493, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3931 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 859, 661 N.Y.S.2d 186, 683 N.E.2d 1060, 1997 N.Y. Second degree assault conviction was supported by evidence that defendant, while incarcerated in county jail, stole gold chain and medallion from fellow inmate and then, to prevent him from retrieving medallion, hit him repeatedly, fracturing his jaw, nasal bone and maxillary sinus area. People v Lane, 241 A.D.2d 763, 660 N.Y.S.2d 890, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8077 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 875, 668 N.Y.S.2d 574, 691 N.E.2d 646, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4608 (N.Y. 1997).

Defendant's conduct was reckless within meaning of CLS Penal § 120.05(4), even though it appeared that her companion unloaded rifle after defendant fired it first time, since rifle had automatic chambering mechanism, one round remained in chamber, defendant thereafter picked up rifle stating "stop, I'll shoot," and police investigator testified that defendant stated "I wanted to hurt (victim). If I wanted to kill her, I'd have shot her in the head." People v Kise, 248 A.D.2d 818, 670 N.Y.S.2d 238, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2506 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Second and third degree reckless assault convictions were supported by evidence that defendant, after drinking as many as 7 cans of beer and volunteering to leave party to purchase more beer, exposed his passengers to danger by driving at excessive speed on hilly unlit road although he could have take more direct route, resulting in crash wherein one passenger was seriously injured. People v Grenier, 250 A.D.2d 874, 672 N.Y.S.2d 499, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5339 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 898, 680 N.Y.S.2d 62, 702 N.E.2d 847, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 3400 (N.Y. 1998).

In prosecution for second degree manslaughter and second degree assault, evidence supported finding that defendant was driving while impaired by drugs at time of 12:35 a.m. accident, even though he denied having used marijuana after he smoked it in late afternoon, where (1) forensic toxicologist concluded, from THC levels in defendant's blood 2 hours after crash, that he used marijuana shortly before accident, and (2) sheriff's deputy, who qualified as expert capable of recognizing symptoms of drug and alcohol intoxication, testified that defendant exhibited several signs of marihuana intoxication, including bloodshot and glassy eyes, eye tremors, enlarged pupils, and decreased concentration, immediately after crash. People v Crandall, 255 A.D.2d 617, 681 N.Y.S.2d 99, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11708 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

In prosecution for second degree manslaughter and second degree assault, evidence supported finding that defendant knew serious risk posed by his actions, and thus acted recklessly in disregarding that risk, where (1) he was aware that he was driving between 70 and 78 miles per hour, that he was passing in no-passing lane, and that marihuana use affects one's concentration and reflexes, and (2) he heard, but elected not to heed, his passengers' entreaties to pull over, because he "thought [he] could make it" to Vermont border about one mile away before following police officer could catch him. People v Crandall, 255 A.D.2d 617, 681 N.Y.S.2d 99, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11708 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel where (1) counsel made cogent opening and closing statements, aggressively cross-examined prosecution's witnesses, raised proper objections, and called several defense witnesses, (2) counsel's efforts resulted in acquittal of first degree burglary, although defendant was convicted of second degree assault, (3) counsel's decision not to have forensic tests conducted on baseball bat was explained by his presentation of evidence that defendant did not have bat and used only his fists in altercation, and (4) counsel's failure to object to introduction of photograph of victim's injuries and part of court's charge relating thereto did not change result, because there was eyewitness testimony that defendant struck victim in head with bat. People v Terwilliger, 255 A.D.2d 762, 682 N.Y.S.2d 109, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12487 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 902, 689 N.Y.S.2d 715, 711 N.E.2d 991, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1574 (N.Y. 1999).

In prosecution for second degree assault, court properly denied defendant's trial order of dismissal where victim and eyewitness both testified that defendant purposely struck victim in back of legs with his car, causing him to land on hood of vehicle, and that defendant thereafter accelerated speed of his vehicle and applied his breaks in such fashion as to cause victim to fall to ground and sustain broken collar bone; such evidence was sufficient to show at least lesser included offense of third degree assault, which required only that defendant caused physical injury to victim by use of dangerous instrument (CLS Penal § 120.00(3)). People v Phillips, 256 A.D.2d 733, 682 N.Y.S.2d 685, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13323 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Evidence supported conviction of second degree assault and third degree weapon possession, and verdict was not against weight of evidence, where (1) defendant admitted chasing victim and victim's friend into and around grocery store with baseball bat but denied intent to beat victim and testified that victim was injured outside store during struggle among the 3 men, (2) victim's friend and store owner both testified that defendant left store first and hit victim in back of head with bat when victim left, (3) victim did not see who hit him when he left store, and (4) although defendant's version of events was corroborated by his jail mate, who had extensive criminal history and claimed that he was outside store on day in question, jury was entitled to disbelieve defendant and jail mate. People v Coffin, 263 A.D.2d 780, 695 N.Y.S.2d 157, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8275 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Evidence supported convictions of second degree assault and aggravated criminal contempt where (1) defendant admitted existence of order of protection and his presence at scene when his girlfriend was injured, (2) he insisted that she was intoxicated and was injured in fall on sidewalk as she jumped from his car, and (3) she testified that when she resisted his demand for money, he began to beat her in car, that she exited car as it slowed, and that he pursued and caught her, striking her repeatedly in face. People v Al-Shimari, 266 A.D.2d 586, 698 N.Y.S.2d 338, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11216 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 916, 708 N.Y.S.2d 355, 729 N.E.2d 1154, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 1070 (N.Y. 2000).

Evidence supported conviction of second degree assault where (1) according to victim's testimony, defendant slashed victim's head and back with box cutter and kicked him in mouth while repeatedly asking him about location of money owed to defendant for previously supplied drugs, (2) victim's testimony was corroborated in significant respects by friend who witnessed attack, and (3) although victim and friend at times testified in contradiction of their own previous testimony and each other, those inconsistencies were explored in detail during cross-examination and during defense counsel's summation, as was each witness's prior criminal history. People v Shannon, 273 A.D.2d 505, 708 N.Y.S.2d 199, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6446 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 892, 715 N.Y.S.2d 385, 738 N.E.2d 789, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3269 (N.Y. 2000).

Evidence supported conviction of second degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.05(7), and of attempt to commit that crime, where (1) defendant, while incarcerated in correctional facility, intended to physically injure correction officer and did so by striking him in eye with compressed ball of wet toilet paper, (2) element of intent was proved by, inter alia, defendant's earlier threats against victim, and (3) element of physical injury was proved by, inter alia, victim's testimony that his eye pain lasted 1 ½ to 2 days and that his sight was impaired for about one week, and emergency room physician's assistant's testimony that victim sustained "pretty obvious" abrasion across cornea, which would impair vision and cause pain. People v Travis, 273 A.D.2d 544, 711 N.Y.S.2d 514, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6697 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Evidence supported conviction of second degree assault where 7 witnesses testified that they saw defendant hit victim with bat, causing injury to her head, even though defendant denied ever having bat or hitting victim. People v Thomas, 273 A.D.2d 606, 712 N.Y.S.2d 640, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7199 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 872, 715 N.Y.S.2d 227, 738 N.E.2d 375, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3230 (N.Y. 2000).

It could be inferred that defendant's purpose in touching victim was sexual gratification, and thus evidence supported his conviction of first and second degree sexual abuse and second degree assault, where (1) defendant, who was not related to 13-year-old victim, ordered her family members to leave their house, forced her to remove her clothes and lie face-down on her bed, repeatedly hit her buttocks with electrical cord, removed her underwear, rubbed oil into her buttocks wounds, and reminded her that he "owned" her and that there was nothing that she could do about it, and (2) he did not offer innocent explanation or justification for touching but, rather, denied it entirely. People v Watson, 281 A.D.2d 691, 721 N.Y.S.2d 700, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2311 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 925, 732 N.Y.S.2d 643, 758 N.E.2d 669, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4065 (N.Y. 2001).

Evidence supported conviction of second degree assault and third degree weapon possession, and verdict of guilty was not against weight of evidence, where (1) defendant swung at victim, who immediately suffered cut that bled profusely, (2) defendant fled scene, (3) razor blade was found at location of defendant's arrest, (4) defendant made inculpatory statement at police station regarding his finger having been cut by razor during bar fight, and (5) witness testified that after she saw blood streaming down victim's face, she watched defendant retrieve razor blade and try to swing at victim second time. People v Burns, 281

A.D.2d 704, 722 N.Y.S.2d 76, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2313 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 826, 729 N.Y.S.2d 446, 754 N.E.2d 206, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2094 (N.Y. 2001).

Gap of 2 days between fight and retrieval of some of victim's clothing did not render clothing inadmissible since delay or deficiencies in chain of custody went to weight of evidence and not its admissibility. People v Mothon, 284 A.D.2d 568, 729 N.Y.S.2d 541, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5984 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 865, 730 N.Y.S.2d 40, 754 N.E.2d 1123, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2593 (N.Y. 2001).

Evidence was sufficient to find defendant guilty of assault in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05, as a friend of a victim who accompanied that victim to the hospital testified that he saw defendant pull the victim's arm and stab the victim, and another witness testified that he saw defendant stab both victims. People v Moore, 29 A.D.3d 1077, 814 N.Y.S.2d 405, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6067 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

Sufficient evidence supported defendant's convictions for assault in the second degree and endangering the welfare of a child. The testimony of the assault victim and the physician's assistant who treated the victim, and the statements of defendant testified to by the investigating officers adequately demonstrated the sufficiency of the evidence. People v Betters, 41 A.D.3d 1040, 838 N.Y.S.2d 254, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7595 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

Conviction of assault in the second degree was supported by sufficient evidence, and was not against the manifest weight of the evidence under circumstances in which, inter alia, the victim testified that when he entered a trailer after hearing the sound of something breaking, defendant immediately approached him at close range and demanded that he leave, the victim stated that he brushed defendant back and told him to get out of his face, the victim stated that defendant responded by thrusting a knife into his abdomen and continuing to stab him elsewhere, the victim testified that a struggle ensued which ended with the two men lying on the floor and defendant finally surrendering the knife and leaving the scene, and the victim's version of the manner in which the altercation started was corroborated by the only eyewitness, an acquaintance who had accompanied him to the trailer; although defendant claimed that the victim was the aggressor and that defendant used the knife only in self-defense, a neighbor who saw defendant immediately after he fled the scene claimed that defendant proclaimed that he had stabbed the victim twice. Defendant's intent to injure the victim was established by the victim's testimony and that of the acquaintance, as well as defendant's actions before, during and after the incident. People v Zindle, 48 A.D.3d 971, 852 N.Y.S.2d 443, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1649 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 846, 859 N.Y.S.2d 405, 889 N.E.2d 92, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 1780 (N.Y. 2008).

Because defendant dragged defendant's mother down the stairs and repeatedly kicked her, and was aware of the police officers' law enforcement status when he sought to prevent them from performing their lawful duties, pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law §§ 120.05(3), 10.00(9), 15.05(1), (3), the evidence was sufficient to convict him of second- and third-degree assault. People v Foster, 52 A.D.3d 957, 860 N.Y.S.2d 273, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5310 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 11 N.Y.3d 788, 866 N.Y.S.2d 614, 896 N.E.2d 100, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 3726 (N.Y. 2008).

Because defendant was in the vicinity where the first victim was assaulted, and shot a gun in the vicinity where the second victim was shot, the evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of attempted first-degree gang assault, second-degree assault, second-degree criminal use of a firearm, and second-degree criminal possession of a weapon. People v Dixon, 62 A.D.3d 1036, 878 N.Y.S.2d 495, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3544 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 12 N.Y.3d 914, 884 N.Y.S.2d 695, 912 N.E.2d 1076, 2009 N.Y. LEXIS 2882 (N.Y. 2009), app. denied, 12 N.Y.3d 912, 884 N.Y.S.2d 693, 912 N.E.2d 1074, 2009 N.Y. LEXIS 2969 (N.Y. 2009).

Evidence at defendant's trial for second degree assault, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2), sufficiently established that defendant inflicted the victim's injury by a deadly weapon or a dangerous instrument because, inter alia, the victim testified that defendant cut his arm, admitted that he had cut the victim, and then asked about his blade; the owner of the bar where the assault took place responded that he had kicked it out the door. Further, the medical examiner testified that the victim's cut was consistent with a sharp edged weapon or tool. People v Gragnano, 63 A.D.3d 1437, 885 N.Y.S.2d 369, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5184 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2009), app. denied, 13 N.Y.3d 939, 895 N.Y.S.2d 329, 922 N.E.2d 918, 2010 N.Y. LEXIS 539 (N.Y. 2010).

Defendant's assault in the second degree convictions were supported by legally sufficient evidence and were against the weight of the evidence because, inter alia, from evidence that defendant engaged in a physical altercation involving several correction officers during which he threw chairs through glass windows and caused injuries to two correction officers, a rational person could have concluded that defendant intended to injure those correction officers. People v Tafari, 68 A.D.3d 1540, 891 N.Y.S.2d 711, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9810 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2009).

Convictions of assault in the second degree and resisting arrest were supported by sufficient evidence where, when the officers arrived in response to a domestic violence complaint, witnesses pointed out defendant who was running along the driveway and whose hands, at that point, could not be seen, and, thus the officers had the right and duty, as part of their investigation of the complaint, to order defendant to stop; defendant's response, in forcefully throwing an officer to the ground and causing an injury to his arm, provided ample evidence of his intent to interfere with the officer's lawful duty and, thus, to support the assault second conviction. As the police had probable cause at that point to arrest defendant for assault, his continued resistance supported his resisting arrest conviction. People v Somerville, 72 A.D.3d 1285, 900 N.Y.S.2d 468, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2985 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2010).

Because telephone records revealed an ongoing communication between defendant and a codefendant during the time immediately preceding and right after the codefendant's attack on the victim, the evidence was sufficient to find defendant guilty as an accomplice of second-degree assault. People v Thompson, 79 A.D.3d 1269, 912 N.Y.S.2d 326, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9178 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2010).

Sufficient evidence supported convictions of attempted murder in the second degree, attempted assault in the first degree, assault in the second degree and criminal use of a firearm in the first degree under circumstances in which trial testimony established that, while defendant and the victim, her estranged husband, were living apart and going through a divorce, defendant went to the marital residence to search for personal property, and after a confrontation, defendant shot at the victim seven time, finally hitting him in the back; defendant admitted to a police investigator that she attempted to kill the victim. Shell casings were found scattered around the outside of the home. People v Rabideau, 82 A.D.3d 1283, 918 N.Y.S.2d 247, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1516 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 17 N.Y.3d 799, 929 N.Y.S.2d 107, 952 N.E.2d 1102, 2011 N.Y. LEXIS 2639 (N.Y. 2011).

Convictions of second degree assault, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05, and third degree criminal possession of a weapon, N.Y. Penal Law §§ 265.01(2), 265.02(1), were supported by sufficient evidence because the People established that when defendant wielded his knife during a fight, he intended to use it against, or cause injury to, another person; the victims' injuries and other testimony established defendant's intent to harm the victims. The victims were not armed, there was evidence that defendant sustained only minor injuries, and several witnesses testified that the fight periodically abated such that defendant could have retreated to his car, which negated the justification defense under N.Y. Penal Law § 35.15(2)(a). People v Newland, 83 A.D.3d 1202, 921 N.Y.S.2d 396, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2912 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 17 N.Y.3d 798, 929 N.Y.S.2d 107, 952 N.E.2d 1102, 2011 N.Y. LEXIS 2564 (N.Y. 2011).

Where defendant confronted the victim about a handwritten list in which the victim had reportedly explicitly documented his sexual abuse of many children, defendant punched the victim in the face several times prior to escorting the victim down the street to an apartment, and the victim was then severely beaten and died a week later due to blunt force trauma to the head, with others present, there was sufficient evidence to convict defendant for gang assault in the second degree and assault in the second degree. People v Smith, 89 A.D.3d 1126, 933 N.Y.S.2d 413, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7575 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2011), app. denied, 18 N.Y.3d 962, 944 N.Y.S.2d 491, 967 N.E.2d 716, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 1155 (N.Y. 2012).

Evidence was sufficient to support a conviction for second-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(1) because defendant's intent to cause serious physical injury to the victim could be inferred from defendant's conduct in hitting and kicking the victim who was lying helpless on the ground, and the victim's extensive surgery established a protracted impairment of health under N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(10). People v Nicholson, 97 A.D.3d 968, 948 N.Y.S.2d 465, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5586 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 1104, 955 N.Y.S.2d 560, 979 N.E.2d 821, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 3788 (N.Y. 2012).

Evidence was sufficient to find defendant guilty of second-degree assault, either as a principal or an accessory, under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 120.05(1), 20.00, because witnesses identified defendant as being part of a group of individuals who were kicking the victim while the victim lay on the ground and was seriously injured. People v Baugh, 101 A.D.3d 1359, 956 N.Y.S.2d 313, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8786 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2012), app. denied, 21 N.Y.3d 911, 966 N.Y.S.2d 362, 988 N.E.2d 891, 2013 N.Y. LEXIS 1242 (N.Y. 2013).

Conviction of assault in the second degree was supported by sufficient evidence that the victim saw a confrontation between defendant and a drunken patron, approached them and intervened by pushing defendant away, a group of patrons then gathered at the scene and various witnesses testified that, as defendant began to walk away and had gotten no more than five feet or so from the group, he turned and threw his plastic cup at them, hitting the victim in the forehead with such force that the cup shattered; the medical evidence established that the victim sustained fractured bones in her face and a four-inch laceration running down her forehead from her hairline to her nose and a plastic surgeon was called to suture the wound due to its depth and complexity. Pictures of the victim soon after the injury were entered into evidence and the jury was able to observe the victim's facial scar as it appeared at the time of trial. People v Powell, 101 A.D.3d 1369, 956 N.Y.S.2d 294, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8773 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2012), app. denied, 21 N.Y.3d 1019, 971 N.Y.S.2d 501, 994 N.E.2d 397, 2013 N.Y. LEXIS 1955 (N.Y. 2013).

Evidence that defendant allowed former boyfriend to use defendant's mother's car earlier in the evening and that defendant drove the boyfriend to another person's residence later that same night, waited in the car while the boyfriend relit a fire the boyfriend had set at the residence, and drove the boyfriend to defendant's house after he restarted the fire was sufficient to corroborate the boyfriend's testimony that defendant knew the boyfriend was going to set the fire and assisted the boyfriend in doing so, and the appellate court sustained defendant's convictions on charges of burglary in the second degree, arson in the third degree, assault in the second degree, and criminal mischief in the second degree. People v Wood, 299 A.D.2d 739, 751 N.Y.S.2d 106, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11391 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2002), app. denied, 99 N.Y.2d 621, 757 N.Y.S.2d 833, 787 N.E.2d 1179, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 693 (N.Y. 2003).

Testimony of two correction officers who saw defendant punch another inmate was sufficient evidence that defendant intended to cause physical injury to another inmate and engaged in conduct tending to effect commission of that crime, which was sufficient to support defendant's conviction of attempted assault in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 120.05(7). People v Gannon, 301 A.D.2d 873, 754 N.Y.S.2d 107, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 380 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

Evidence was sufficient to establish the elements of defendant's convictions for first degree rape, first degree sodomy, first degree sexual abuse, second degree assault and third degree assault where inconsistencies in the victim's descriptions and a lack of medical evidence did not render her testimony incredible as a matter of law, and the resulting credibility question was within the jury's province, and the record supported its verdict. People v Black, 304 A.D.2d 905, 757 N.Y.S.2d 635, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3854 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 578, 764 N.Y.S.2d 388, 796 N.E.2d 480, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 2989 (N.Y. 2003).

Second-degree assault conviction was upheld, under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05, where sufficient evidence through the testimony of the officer-victim and fellow officers established that after defendant punched him with a closed fist five or six times in the face and head, his left eye was swollen and it remained bruised for three weeks, a blood vessel in the corner of his eye ruptured, and he had scrapes, cuts, a welt or bruise under his left eye and a lump on the left side of his head. People v Brodus, 307 A.D.2d 643, 763 N.Y.S.2d 363, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8537 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 618, 767 N.Y.S.2d 401, 799 N.E.2d 624, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 3708 (N.Y. 2003).

Evidence that defendant injured an estranged spouse by beating the spouse with a metal tool and throwing a space heater at the spouse was sufficient to support assault conviction. People v Amato, 1 A.D.3d 713, 766 N.Y.S.2d 735, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11713 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 594, 776 N.Y.S.2d 226, 808 N.E.2d 362, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 276 (N.Y. 2004).

Evidence that defendant's violent acts toward the victim left the victim unable to talk or breath normally, and unable to swallow food, for a period of six weeks could not be said to have been legally insufficient to support defendant's multiple convictions of attempted assault. People v Koufomichalis, 2 A.D.3d 987, 768 N.Y.S.2d 246, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13158 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003), app. denied, 2 N.Y.3d 742, 778 N.Y.S.2d 467, 810 N.E.2d 920, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 1183 (N.Y. 2004).

There was sufficient evidence to support defendant's conviction for assault in the second degree in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05 where he was seen being hostile to the victim and his family in assorted instances throughout the day of the incident and just before physically fighting with the victim, evidencing his intention to harm the victim, and although the police did not recover a knife and defendant testified that he did not have one, other testimony indicated that defendant was observed with a knife and the victim's injury was consistent with a knife wound; accordingly, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's post-conviction motion to set aside the verdict pursuant to N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 330.30. People v Abera, 2 A.D.3d 1155, 768 N.Y.S.2d 702, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13921 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 624, 777 N.Y.S.2d 23, 808 N.E.2d 1282, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 669 (N.Y. 2004).

Despite defendant's claims that there was insufficient evidence that a metal rod he used as a makeshift weapon was a "dangerous instrument" under N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(13), the court found that defendant's acts of repeatedly swinging the rod at the other inmate and striking him several times showed that the rod was readily capable of causing serious physical injury and thereby satisfied the statutory definition; there was sufficient evidence that defendant used a dangerous instrument with intent to cause physical injury to support defendant's conviction for attempted assault under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 120.05(2). A correction officer who sew the entire incident testified that defendant emerged from his cell already holding the makeshift weapon and a shield, that defendant immediately ran towards the other inmate, and that defendant struck the other inmate several times; sufficient evidence support defendant's conviction and the convictions were not against the weight of the evidence where the reasonable inferences to be drawn from the evidence sufficiently supported the jury's verdict. People v Griffin, 24 A.D.3d 972, 805 N.Y.S.2d 482, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14108 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2005), app. denied, 6 N.Y.3d 834, 814 N.Y.S.2d 82, 847 N.E.2d 379, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 1035 (N.Y. 2006).

Where a hearsay statement was improperly admitted at trial, the error was harmless given the overwhelming evidence of defendant's guilt; the testimony of eyewitnesses provided ample independent evidence that defendant, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2), intentionally caused physical injury to the victim by kicking the victim in the face while wearing work boots, and the slamming of the victim's head into the pavement numerous times and kicking the victim in the face were unjustified under N.Y. Penal Law § 35.15(1). People v Ortiz, 33 A.D.3d 1044, 822 N.Y.S.2d 327, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12447 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

Conviction of assault in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(1), was not against the weight of the credible evidence under circumstances in which the victim identified defendant as one of his assailants within days of the attack and provided a sworn statement to police which recounted defendant's participation in the assault and, at trial, the victim testified similarly to the events leading up to the assault, although he could not recall the details of the attack; the inconsistencies and shortcomings in the victim's testimony were fully explored at trial and his testimony was so inconsistent or at variance with his written statement as to be unworthy of belief or incredible as a matter of law. The jury had ample first-hand opportunity to observe his demeanor and assess his credibility and the jury gave the evidence the weight it deserved. People v Casey, 61 A.D.3d 1011, 876 N.Y.S.2d 532, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2487 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 12 N.Y.3d 913, 884 N.Y.S.2d 694, 912 N.E.2d 1075, 2009 N.Y. LEXIS 2906 (N.Y. 2009).

Conviction of second degree assault was supported by sufficient evidence where the combined testimony of the victim and three eyewitnesses established that defendant was with his codefendants when one codefendant aggressively confronted the victim, and that defendant stepped forward and actively joined in the attack after the codefendants assaulted the victim, and after the victim tried to fight back; this was sufficient to support the jury's conclusion that defendant acted in concert with his codefendants, intentionally aiding the attack, and the victim's ex-girlfriend testified that defendant was not initially within reach of the victim, and no one saw the victim hit defendant. The testimony established that defendant shared a community of purpose with the codefendants, and defendant's intent to injure the victim was easily inferable from his conduct. People v Francis, 83 A.D.3d 1119, 922 N.Y.S.2d 581, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2686 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 17 N.Y.3d 806, 929 N.Y.S.2d 565, 953 N.E.2d 803, 2011 N.Y. LEXIS 2401 (N.Y. 2011).

Conviction of attempted assault in the second degree, Penal Law § 120.05(1), was supported by sufficient evidence because the unrefuted testimony showed, inter alia, that defendant-unprovoked-repeatedly punched the victim in the head, kicked him in the ribs, and choked him, causing the victim extreme pain and difficulty breathing; defendant's intent to cause serious physical injury was readily inferable. The fact that the victim, a sizeable man with martial arts experience, was able to subdue defendant-who continued to try to further harm the victim-did not undermine the compelling inference that defendant intended to cause serious physical injury and engaged in conduct attempting to achieve that objective as this attempt crime did not require defendant's actual success in causing serious physical injury, only that he intended the injury and engaged in conduct directed at accomplishing that objective. People v Audi, 88 A.D.3d 1070, 931 N.Y.S.2d 418, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7208 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 18 N.Y.3d 856, 938 N.Y.S.2d 864, 962 N.E.2d 289, 2011 N.Y. LEXIS 3815 (N.Y. 2011).

Where a baby sustained bruises, a cut to his pallet, and three broken leg bones, as defendant was the only one who could have inflicted these injuries if they were intentionally caused, that there was only circumstantial evidence of his guilt did not preclude the jury from finding him guilty of first- and second-degree assault and endangering the welfare of a child. People v Ciccone, 90 A.D.3d 1141, 934 N.Y.S.2d 563, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8676 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2011), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 863, 947 N.Y.S.2d 411, 970 N.E.2d 434, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 1727 (N.Y. 2012).

Defendant's conviction under Penal Law §§ 110.00 and 120.05(2) was not against the weight of the evidence where the jury was free to disbelieve portions of defendant's testimony, accept the direct evidence proving that defendant possessed the blade, and reasonably infer that defendant was the only person who could have cut the victim with that blade and that he did so with the intention to inflict physical injury. People v Davis, 105 A.D.3d 1095, 962 N.Y.S.2d 739, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2225 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 21 N.Y.3d 1003, 971 N.Y.S.2d 255, 993 N.E.2d 1277, 2013 N.Y. LEXIS 2206 (N.Y. 2013).

Defendant's conviction for alcohol-based assault was supported by legally sufficient evidence and was not against the weight of the evidence because defendant admitted that he mixed vodka with juice and a water drink and provided them to the victim. Also, although he knew that the victim, his wife, was an alcoholic and had a preexisting liver condition, he admittedly continued to provide the victim with alcohol resulting in what a doctor stated was more than just drunk. People v Elmy, 117 A.D.3d 1183, 984 N.Y.S.2d 672, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3246 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2014).

Verdict convicting defendant of attempted first degree assault and second degree assault was not against the manifest weight of the evidence because defendant repeatedly stabbed the alleged victim with the knife, striking her in the head, neck, back and chest. People v Pine, 126 A.D.3d 1112, 4 N.Y.S.3d 746, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1969 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2015), app. denied, 27 N.Y.3d 1004, 59 N.E.3d 1225, 38 N.Y.S.3d 113, 2016 N.Y. LEXIS 1438 (N.Y. 2016).

Defendant's conviction for attempted assault in the second degree was supported by sufficient evidence and not against the weight of the evidence because defendant, an inmate in a correctional facility, engaged in a fight with another inmate, defendant was observed wielding a weapon that resembled an ice pick during the fight, and the victim sustained multiple puncture wounds that were consistent with the weapon that looked like an ice pick. People v Alexander, 127 A.D.3d 1429, 8 N.Y.S.3d 674, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3149 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 25 N.Y.3d 1197, 37 N.E.3d 1163, 16 N.Y.S.3d 520, 2015 N.Y. LEXIS 2267 (N.Y. 2015).

Trial court properly convicted defendant of second-degree assault because he attacked and stabbed a taxicab driver, the driver testified that the wound "was the worst pain I ever had," a medical doctor confirmed the severity of the injury, the medical description of the victim's injury gave the jury a basis to estimate the knife's size, penetrating power where it was sharp enough to penetrate the victim's wrist and cut a tendon, defendant's intent to cause injury could be inferred such from his conduct and the circumstances of the assault. People v Pigford, 148 A.D.3d 1299, 48 N.Y.S.3d 837, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1715 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 29 N.Y.3d 1085, 86 N.E.3d 262, 64 N.Y.S.3d 175, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 2244 (N.Y. 2017).

Evidence was sufficient to support defendant's convictions of attempted robbery in the second-degree and assault in the second-degree, as eyewitnesses testified that they saw him drag the 92-year-old victim down a sidewalk, surveillance videos showed him stalking the victim, her properly admitted hearsay statements accused him of assaulting her and trying to steal her purse, and her physician testified as to the injuries that she sustained as a result of the assault, which included a fractured finger. People v Cole, 150 A.D.3d 1476, 52 N.Y.S.3d 744, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3921 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2017), app. denied, 31 N.Y.3d 1146, 108 N.E.3d 502, 83 N.Y.S.3d 428, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 2234 (N.Y. 2018).

Sufficient evidence supported defendant's conviction for assault in the second degree because, inter alia, after the officers identified themselves, defendant fled on foot, refused orders to stop, and struggled with officers once he was on the ground, wherein one officer discovered that he fractured and dislocated his finger and ruptured a tendon in the struggle to handcuff defendant. People v Dorsey, 151 A.D.3d 1391, 58 N.Y.S.3d 636, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5070 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 30 N.Y.3d 949, 89 N.E.3d 522, 67 N.Y.S.3d 132, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 3414 (N.Y. 2017).

Defendant's convictions for second degree manslaughter, second and third degree assault, and reckless driving were not against the weight of the evidence, which included eyewitness testimony that four miles south of the accident defendant was seen speeding and passing other cases unsafely and recklessly. People v Crosby, 151 A.D.3d 1184, 56 N.Y.S.3d 376, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4422 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2017).

Defendant was properly convicted of second-degree assault because a rational person could reach the conclusion reached by the jury, that a police officer was engaged in a lawful duty—responding to a noise complaint at defendant's residence—and that defendant acted with intent to prevent her from performing that lawful duty—spraying the officer with a canister of pepper spray—and the trial court properly allowed a photograph of the intubated officer into evidence and gave a limiting instruction inasmuch as it was probative of the officer's physical injury, a disputed and material issue, and also illustrated and corroborated the medical testimony. People v Molineaux, 156 A.D.3d 1250, 68 N.Y.S.3d 558, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9281 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2017), app. denied, 31 N.Y.3d 1085, 103 N.E.3d 1253, 79 N.Y.S.3d 106, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 1829 (N.Y. 2018).

Sufficient evidence supported defendant's assault convictions because (1) the victim's serious physical injury was shown, given the victim's symptoms at trial, (2) the jury resolved any testimonial discrepancies, (3) it was proper to let defendant be impeached with prior convictions and bad acts, (4) defendant's incidents with the victim on the same day and another correction officer 15 days earlier were admissible background information and evidence of motive and intent that was more probative than prejudicial, and (5) limiting instructions were given. People v Ford, 156 A.D.3d 1242, 68 N.Y.S.3d 566, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9263 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2017), app. denied, 31 N.Y.3d 1013, 102 N.E.3d 1064, 78 N.Y.S.3d 283, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 1288 (N.Y. 2018).

Sufficient evidence supported defendant's conviction for assault in the second degree because defendant grabbed the victim's chest and uniform, and shoved him against the door, the victim, a corrections officer, gave defendant an order to stop resisting, but defendant rammed him again, and defendant grabbed the victim's throat; the victim subsequently underwent shoulder surgery. People v Sands, 157 A.D.3d 1136, 69 N.Y.S.3d 745, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 373 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 31 N.Y.3d 986, 102 N.E.3d 441, 77 N.Y.S.3d 664, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 881 (N.Y. 2018).

Verdict finding defendant guilty of assault in the second degree was supported by the weight of the evidence because defendant's use of a knife caused deep wounds that required dozens of sutures to close and caused the victim to lose range of motion in one of his fingers. People v Signor, 173 A.D.3d 1264, 102 N.Y.S.3d 329, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4526 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2019).

Defendant's convictions for attempted assault in the first degree and assault in the second degree were not against the weight of the evidence because, inter alia, defendant struck the victim in the head from behind with a bat and hit the victim a total of four to six times, including in the back, side of his head, shoulder and left forearm, and the victim received staples to close the wound on his head and underwent surgery for a broken left ulna in his forearm. Jury's verdict convicting defendant of the crimes of criminal use of a firearm in the first degree, assault in the second degree and assault in the third degree, was not against the weight of the evidence because the circumstances supported the inference that he assaulted victim B; victim B observed defendant come toward him with a gun, the bartender witnessed the assault, and the bartender's brother, as well as the bar patron, saw defendant standing over and pointing a gun at victim B. People v Demellier, 174 A.D.3d 1120, 105 N.Y.S.3d 218, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5718 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 34 N.Y.3d 980, 137 N.E.3d 27, 113 N.Y.S.3d 657, 2019 N.Y. LEXIS 3361 (N.Y. 2019).

Defendant's convictions for burglary, robbery, murder, and assault as an accomplice under Penal Law §§ 20.00, 140.30[2], 160.15[1], 125.25[1], [3], and 120.05[6] were supported by evidence that he sought revenge against two former roommates for making a complaint against him and, with another man, entered their apartment, stole money and drugs, and the other man killed one roommate and raped and stabbed the other. People v Saunders, 176 A.D.3d 1384, 111 N.Y.S.3d 445, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7660 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2019), app. denied, 35 N.Y.3d 973, 148 N.E.3d 476, 125 N.Y.S.3d 12, 2020 N.Y. LEXIS 1184 (N.Y. 2020).

Defendant's conviction was not against the weight of the evidence, as the jury's credibility determinations would allow the jury to justifiably conclude that defendant's ability to drive was impaired by alcohol, that he disregarded warnings to slow down and that he lost control while driving at an excessive speed without braking. People v Cole, 177 A.D.3d 1096, 114 N.Y.S.3d 132, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8517 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2019).

Defendant's convictions for assault in the second degree and strangulation were not against the weight of the evidence because based upon the victim's testimony and the medical evidence, the jury could reasonably have concluded that defendant strangled the victim, threw a motel room telephone at the victim, causing an orbital fracture, and the telephone was a "dangerous instrument."People v Baber, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2363 (April 16, 2020).

When defendant brandished a knife in a melee with the stated intent to "kill," charged at the first victim and then the second victim, and stabbed the second victim while they struggled on the ground, the proof legally sufficient for the jury to find that he intentionally injured the second victim by repeatedly stabbing him with the knife. People v Green, 2021 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 212 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2021).

49. —Fourth Department

Defendant was properly convicted of second degree assault where (1) he hit victim in face with staple gun, knocking out several teeth and causing facial injuries, (2) staple gun with teeth embedded in it was found near victim, (3) he admitted to his friend that he hit victim, and (4) witness observed him kick victim in head and hit victim in face with staple gun. People v Blyden, 142 A.D.2d 959, 531 N.Y.S.2d 72, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14988 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 72 N.Y.2d 955, 534 N.Y.S.2d 668, 531 N.E.2d 300, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 5665 (N.Y. 1988).

Evidence that defendant struck victim numerous times with baseball bat and metal pipe, breaking his wrists and ankle, supported jury finding that it was defendant's conscious objective to impair victim's physical condition or cause him substantial pain, warranting affirmance of conviction for second degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.05(2), and proof that attack was motivated by desire for revenge or to recover money lost in scam did not refute such evidence. People v Brooks, 154 A.D.2d 940, 546 N.Y.S.2d 69, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13060 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 768, 551 N.Y.S.2d 910, 551 N.E.2d 111, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 4652 (N.Y. 1989).

Evidence supported conviction of mother for second degree assault and endangering welfare of child arising from beating of newborn infant where (1) mother admitted that she was infant's primary caretaker and that infant, who was born on March 19, was never out of her care prior to April 9, (2) mother denied noticing any injury on April 9 following single brief period during which infant was not in her care, (3) medical testimony established that injuries to infant's ribs occurred prior to April 9, (4) number and severity of injuries and medical testimony ruled out accidental injury, (5) mother gave numerous contradictory statements in attempts to explain injuries, and (6) mother told her mother and caseworker that she might as well take blame and that she could not put blame on her husband. People v Goble, 166 A.D.2d 894, 560 N.Y.S.2d 553, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12140 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 1021, 565 N.Y.S.2d 771, 566 N.E.2d 1176, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 4822 (N.Y. 1990).

Evidence was sufficient to support conviction for second degree assault arising from stabbing at shelter for homeless men where defendant was initial aggressor, and he stabbed unarmed victim in back while he was sitting on bed drinking beer. People v Tolbert, 203 A.D.2d 901, 611 N.Y.S.2d 384, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4880 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 83 N.Y.2d 972, 616 N.Y.S.2d 25, 639 N.E.2d 765, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 2561 (N.Y. 1994).

Conviction of second degree assault was supported by evidence that defendant hit victim several times with extension cord or belt, stating that she would "feel it this time," and by whip marks on victim's arms and back that were observed and photographed by her teacher. People v Rozanski, 209 A.D.2d 1018, 619 N.Y.S.2d 441, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12053 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1994), app. denied, 84 N.Y.2d 1038, 623 N.Y.S.2d 194, 647 N.E.2d 466, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 602 (N.Y. 1995).

In second degree assault trial, element that victim suffered "substantial pain" was established by evidence that defendant and 3 or 4 other men viciously attacked and beat victim, who died from stab wound inflicted during beating, and that defendant repeatedly hit victim with pipe or stick, resulting in blunt force bruises and abrasions to victim's face, back and legs. People v Young, 236 A.D.2d 808, 653 N.Y.S.2d 879, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1735 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1997).

Evidence of defendant's identity supported conviction of second degree assault where store security specialist recognized defendant from prior encounter and identified him from photo array, although victim and other customers on scene were unable to identify defendant from photo array. People v Wiggins, 265 A.D.2d 905, 696 N.Y.S.2d 604, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10029 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 908, 707 N.Y.S.2d 393, 728 N.E.2d 992, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 815 (N.Y. 2000).

Accomplice testimony was sufficiently corroborated to support conviction of first degree burglary and second degree assault where victims' neighbor testified that defendant approached her and told her not to tell police anything if they arrived, she saw defendant and 2 other men walk past her down street and down driveway toward door of victims' house, she heard defendant's voice from vicinity of victims' house, and she saw his accomplices walk past her several minutes later carrying stereo. People v Martinez, 266 A.D.2d 847, 698 N.Y.S.2d 806, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11930 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 904, 707 N.Y.S.2d 389, 728 N.E.2d 988, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 729 (N.Y. 2000).

Defendant's plea allocution was sufficient with respect to charges of attempted first degree robbery and second degree assault, and her guilty plea was properly accepted, where her admissions showed that she was accomplice, and there is no legal distinction between liability as principal and criminal culpability as accomplice. People v Webb, 286 A.D.2d 899, 730 N.Y.S.2d 926, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9164 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 659, 737 N.Y.S.2d 60, 762 N.E.2d 938, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4283 (N.Y. 2001).

Pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2), defendant's conviction was not against the weight of the evidence where the jury was entitled to credit the testimony of both the victim and an eyewitness that defendant assaulted the victim with a metal pipe and, upon appellate review of the record, the appellate court could not conclude that the jury failed to give the evidence the weight it should be accorded. People v Henry, 294 A.D.2d 929, 741 N.Y.S.2d 774, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4532 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 98 N.Y.2d 676, 746 N.Y.S.2d 465, 774 N.E.2d 230, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 2508 (N.Y. 2002).

Sufficient evidence supported defendant's convictions of two counts of burglary in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 140.25(1)(b), and one count each of assault in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(6), and criminal mischief in the fourth degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 145.00. People v Diefenbacher, 21 A.D.3d 1293, 801 N.Y.S.2d 466, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10010 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2005), app. denied, 6 N.Y.3d 775, 811 N.Y.S.2d 342, 844 N.E.2d 797, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 342 (N.Y. 2006).

Evidence was legally sufficient to support defendant's conviction of assault in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(1), (2). A two-inch-wide belt and two-inch-thick hardcover book with which he repeatedly struck the victim, as well as the sneakers with which he repeatedly kicked the victim, all constituted dangerous instruments under the circumstances in which they were used (N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(13)). People v Still, 26 A.D.3d 816, 810 N.Y.S.2d 271, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1260 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 6 N.Y.3d 853, 816 N.Y.S.2d 759, 849 N.E.2d 982, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 1719 (N.Y. 2006).

Evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of assault in the second degree, as defendant's sole contention for the weight of the evidence being insufficient was that defendant was not the individual responsible; however, several witnesses testified that they had known defendant for significant periods of time and that defendant was the culprit, and it was up to the jury as the fact-finder to weigh the evidence and assess who was telling the truth. People v Austin, 38 A.D.3d 1246, 833 N.Y.S.2d 325, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3318 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 8 N.Y.3d 981, 838 N.Y.S.2d 484, 869 N.E.2d 660, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 1854 (N.Y. 2007).

Not only did defendant fail to preserve defendant's claims for appellate review, the evidence was legally sufficient with respect the convictions for second-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3); contrary to defendant's further contention, the verdict was not against the weight of the evidence. People v Townsley, 50 A.D.3d 1610, 856 N.Y.S.2d 424, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3628 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 11 N.Y.3d 742, 864 N.Y.S.2d 400, 894 N.E.2d 664, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 3115 (N.Y. 2008).

Because a juvenile defendant was not justified in striking the victim with a stick, and because the evidence was legally sufficient to establish that the victim sustained a physical injury, pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law §§ 35.15(1)(b), 10.00(13), the stick constituted a dangerous instrument capable of causing serious physical injury or death; therefore, the juvenile was properly convicted of second-degree assault and second-degree reckless endangerment under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 120.05(2), 120.20. Matter of Shakiea B., 53 A.D.3d 1057, 860 N.Y.S.2d 777, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5926 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2008).

Defendant's conviction for assault in the second degree and criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 120.05(2) and 265.02(1), was not against the weight of the evidence, as the testimony of the two main prosecution witnesses was not incredible as a matter of law. People v Myers, 87 A.D.3d 826, 928 N.Y.S.2d 407, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6191 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2011).

Because the People proved that defendant intended to prevent the arresting officer from performing a lawful duty when the officer injured a knee while attempting to frisk defendant, there was sufficient evidence to convict defendant of second-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3). People v Stepney, 93 A.D.3d 1297, 940 N.Y.S.2d 752, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2169 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 968, 950 N.Y.S.2d 120, 973 N.E.2d 218, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 2442 (N.Y. 2012).

Causation element of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3) was satisfied when defendant's flight induced a police officer to engage in pursuit on foot and the officer was injury in the course of that pursuit. People v Cipollina, 94 A.D.3d 1549, 943 N.Y.S.2d 710, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3311 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 971, 950 N.Y.S.2d 354, 973 N.E.2d 764, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 2520 (N.Y. 2012).

Convictions of second degree robbery, N.Y. Penal Law § 160.10(1), (2)(a), and second degree assault, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(6), were supported by sufficient evidence which showed that two passengers in a vehicle, one of whom was defendant, exited the vehicle, approached the victim, a pedestrian, knocked her cell phone from her hand and forcibly ripped her purse from her arm, injuring her; the victim saw her two assailants struggle to re-enter the backseat of the vehicle, saw three other individuals in the vehicle, memorized the license plate, and within minutes, called the police and described the vehicle and its occupants. Within an hour, the police stopped the vehicle and conducted a showup identification procedure and the victim identified defendant and another person as the individuals who stole her purse, and also identified the driver of the vehicle. People v Robinson, 104 A.D.3d 1312, 961 N.Y.S.2d 699, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1891 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 21 N.Y.3d 1008, 971 N.Y.S.2d 260, 993 N.E.2d 1283, 2013 N.Y. LEXIS 2351 (N.Y. 2013).

Evidence that defendants approached an undercover officers' vehicle, someone mentioned cutting the officers' throats, one defendant then punched the officer in the driver's seat in the side of head, causing a black eye, bloody lip and nose, and pain and swelling still present five days later, and that a $10 bill was missing from the officers, created a legally sufficient inference that defendants tried to steal the money and/or the vehicle from the officers, and the pain and swelling, and the length of time it continued, was enough to show physical injury, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05. People v Golden, 309 A.D.2d 1204, 764 N.Y.S.2d 761, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10070 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2003).

Sufficient evidence existed to convict a defendant of assault in the second degree N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3), reckless endangerment in the first degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.25, and criminal mischief in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 145.10 since the jury could best resolve credibility and N.Y. Penal Law § 40.15 insanity defense fact issues; he had the ability to understand that firing 59 shots at police and neighbors was wrong even though his expert psychiatrist testified he had a delusional disorder (paranoid schizophrenia) for years and was delusional the night of the shooting. People v Stoffel, 17 A.D.3d 992, 794 N.Y.S.2d 230, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4520 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 5 N.Y.3d 795, 801 N.Y.S.2d 816, 835 N.E.2d 676, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 2431 (N.Y. 2005).

Because, pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(9), the victims experienced substantial pain in connection with the injuries inflicted by defendant, the trial court properly convicted defendant, inter alia, of second-degree assault and endangering the welfare of a child under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 120.05(2), 260.10(1). People v Sommerville, 30 A.D.3d 1093, 816 N.Y.S.2d 651, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7704 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.3d 818, 822 N.Y.S.2d 493, 855 N.E.2d 809, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 3150 (N.Y. 2006).

Weight and sufficiency of the evidence supported defendant's convictions for assault, criminal possession of a weapon, and attempted robbery because he was identified by one of the victims, he admitted his involvement in the home invasion/shooting in a notarized letter, and the circumstances supported the element of intent for purposes of the assault. People v Linder, 114 A.D.3d 1200, 979 N.Y.S.2d 754, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 749 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 23 N.Y.3d 1022, 992 N.Y.S.2d 805, 16 N.E.3d 1285, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 1880 (N.Y. 2014).

Defendant's conviction for assault in the second degree was not against the weight of the evidence because there was significant evidence, including video recordings, that the victim was beaten and humiliated in defendant's house, and testimony indicating that, in the recordings, defendant was directing the victim to stop resisting during the beating, and expert scientific evidence established that the victim's blood was found in numerous places in defendant's house. People v Woods, 142 A.D.3d 1356, 38 N.Y.S.3d 337, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6222 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2016).

Evidence was sufficient to support defendant's conviction for assault in the second degree because defendant's two-month-old child sustained broken arms, legs, and ribs that were in various stages of healing and a recently inflicted fracture of the skull, while the child's mother testified to having observed defendant repeatedly strike the child with a closed fist the night before the child was treated at a hospital. People v Smith, 145 A.D.3d 1628, 44 N.Y.S.3d 658, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8564 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2016), app. denied, 31 N.Y.3d 1017, 102 N.E.3d 1068, 78 N.Y.S.3d 287, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 1335 (N.Y. 2018).

Sufficient evidence supported defendant's conviction for criminal possession of a weapon in the second degree and assault in the second degree because two eyewitnesses identified defendant as the shooter and described the gun, two cartridge cases were found at the scene, the People's expert testified that the cases came from one firearm, and the victim sustained a physical injury and experienced "substantial pain" from the gunshot. People v Butler, 140 A.D.3d 1610, 33 N.Y.S.3d 602, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4400 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 28 N.Y.3d 969, 66 N.E.3d 3, 43 N.Y.S.3d 257, 2016 N.Y. Evidence was legally sufficient to establish defendant's identity as one of the people who opened fire on a crowded street, killing one person and injuring two others because defendant and a codefendant were driven to the scene of the shooting by defendant's sister, who testified that she heard gunshots moments after the two men exited the vehicle, the sister observed defendant in possession of a firearm, and ammunition matching that at the scene was found at the home of defendant's mother. People v Flowers, 166 A.D.3d 1492, 87 N.Y.S.3d 425, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7534 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 32 N.Y.3d 1125, 117 N.E.3d 822, 93 N.Y.S.3d 263, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 3811 (N.Y. 2018).

Fourth Department held that nothing in N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(12) requires that the actor know the age of the injured person; rather, by providing that the defendant must act with intent to cause physical injury to a person who is 65 years of age or older and must cause such injury to such person, the statute simply requires that the person whom the actor intentionally injures be, as a matter of fact, 65 years of age or older. People v Burman, 173 A.D.3d 1727, 102 N.Y.S.3d 849, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4824 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2019).

Evidence was sufficient to support defendant's conviction for robbery in the first degree, criminal possession of a weapon in the second degree, and assault in the second degree because the victim's description of the incident and the perpetrator's clothing was consistent with street surveillance video that captured a portion of the incident including the shooting, and the evidence established that the perpetrator's clothing matched that worn by him in a photo on his social media account. People v Thomas, 176 A.D.3d 1639, 111 N.Y.S.3d 155, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7199 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 34 N.Y.3d 1082, 139 N.E.3d 824, 116 N.Y.S.3d 166, 2019 N.Y. 50. Insufficient evidence to uphold conviction

Evidence was not legally sufficient to support conviction for assault in second degree where uncontroverted evidence showed that defendant was out of door of restaurant when coperpetrator, who was standing in restaurant approximately 20 feet from door, suddenly turned around and fired his gun at complaining witness, since record did not support finding that defendant possessed intent to cause physical injury to complaining witness. People v Padgett, 145 A.D.2d 443, 535 N.Y.S.2d 414, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12929 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 894, 538 N.Y.S.2d 807, 535 N.E.2d 1347, 1989 N.Y. Verdict of guilty on counts of attempted first degree rape, first degree sexual abuse and second degree assault was against weight of evidence where (1) complainant testified that she did not hear front door of apartment building close behind defendant, who allegedly attacked her after she reached second floor apartment, even though defendant could not have entered building except with key or by permission of someone inside building, and door made very loud noise when it automatically shut, and (2) defendant testified that complainant had invited him inside. People v Pugh, 150 A.D.2d 734, 541 N.Y.S.2d 603, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6937 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Evidence at trial for second degree assault was insufficient as matter of law to prove that blow defendant allegedly struck with ceramic lamp on victim's head caused "physical injury" where proof demonstrated that victim sustained only bump or bruise as result of being hit with lamp, and there was no evidence that blow from lamp caused any degree of pain to victim or that his physical condition was even minimally impaired as result. People v Powell, 153 A.D.2d 54, 549 N.Y.S.2d 276, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16167 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1989), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 969, 556 N.Y.S.2d 254, 555 N.E.2d 626, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 1880 (N.Y. 1990).

Second degree assault conviction would be reversed where victim testified that she did not know whether she had been stabbed by defendant, only witness to alleged stabbing gave account of incident that was both self-contradictory and contradictory to victim's testimony, and reasonable doubt existed as to whether victim's injuries were caused by defendant or by being dragged by bus. People v Roman, 160 A.D.2d 961, 554 N.Y.S.2d 684, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4771 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 795, 559 N.Y.S.2d 1000, 559 N.E.2d 694, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 2875 (N.Y. 1990).

Evidence did not support Family Court's finding that juvenile had kicked prostrate victim in head with booted foot and thus committed act which, if committed by adult, would have constituted second degree assault where victim never stated that juvenile had kicked him, and juvenile's testimony that he was wearing sneakers on day of incident stood uncontradicted. In re James H., 164 A.D.2d 765, 558 N.Y.S.2d 954, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9072 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1990), app. dismissed, 77 N.Y.2d 873, 568 N.Y.S.2d 915, 571 N.E.2d 85, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 160 (N.Y. 1991).

Court would reverse order of disposition, deny petition charging juvenile with acts constituting second and third degree assault, and dismiss proceeding where juvenile's failure to flee to train station was objectively reasonable, in that (1) she was lying on ground with complainant on top of her at time she stabbed complainant, (2) they were surrounded by crowd encouraging complainant's acts and punching and kicking juvenile, and (3) it was undisputed that juvenile was blameless target of vicious attack by hostile group; under circumstances, juvenile's attempt to defend herself could not form basis on which to hold her responsible for consequences of unprovoked onslaught. In re Y. K., 213 A.D.2d 638, 624 N.Y.S.2d 243, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3139 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1995), aff'd, 87 N.Y.2d 430, 639 N.Y.S.2d 1001, 663 N.E.2d 313, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 72 (N.Y. 1996).

Evidence was insufficient to show that juvenile committed acts constituting second degree assault and second degree reckless endangerment where, inter alia, victim testified that she did not see anyone throw bottle, had not seen its flight, and only believed that it had come from direction of juvenile and his companions, and there was no evidence that juvenile or his companions ever possessed glass bottle or that they threw one. In re Paris M., 218 A.D.2d 554, 630 N.Y.S.2d 732, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8737 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1995).

Evidence did not support defendant's second degree assault conviction under CLS Penal § 120.05(4) where he shot one victim in foot, causing him to endure substantial pain, but People failed to show that gunshot wound created substantial risk of death or that it caused serious and protracted disfigurement, protracted impairment of health, or protracted loss or impairment of function of any bodily organ. People v Bodford, 224 A.D.2d 927, 638 N.Y.S.2d 259, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1559 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1996), reh'g denied, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3039 (N.Y. Convictions of second degree assault and fourth degree weapon possession were not supported by evidence that defendant and victim had words, and that defendant may have punched victim in neck or pushed him, where there was no evidence identifying defendant as individual, among 3 assailants, who inflicted blows on victim with piece of wood. People v King, 265 A.D.2d 678, 697 N.Y.S.2d 371, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10725 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 904, 707 N.Y.S.2d 389, 728 N.E.2d 988, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 717 (N.Y. 2000).

Conviction for assault in the second degree, under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3) was reversed where evidence did not sufficiently establish the required element that defendant caused physical injury to a police officer, in that the evidence did not establish that an officer suffered an impairment of physical condition or substantial pain. N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(9). People v McFarlane, 288 A.D.2d 493, 733 N.Y.S.2d 879, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11425 (N.Y. Although there was ample evidence that a juvenile defendant was a participant in the crimes and not a bystander, the findings as to felony assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(6) and third-degree assault were vacated as there was no underlying felony other than the assault itself, and as a lesser-included offense under the remaining second-degree assault count. Matter of Joshua S., 49 A.D.3d 469, 853 N.Y.S.2d 877, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2668 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2008).

Although convictions of second degree assault, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3), and resisting arrest, N.Y. Penal Law § 205.30, were supported by sufficient evidence, the convictions were against the weight of the evidence; a second degree assault conviction required that the People establish that the injured police officer was engaged in a lawful duty at the time of the assault, and, similarly, a resisting arrest conviction required the People to establish that the police were engaged in authorized conduct. Probable cause for defendant's arrest was predicated almost entirely on an officer's testimony that he saw a bag of narcotics actually leave defendant's hand as he tossed it into an elevator, but defendant's acquittal on a drug possession charge indicated that jury did not find officer's testimony credible, and the jury thus failed to give its credibility finding the weight it was due with respect to the second degree assault and resisting arrest charges. People v Lindsey, 52 A.D.3d 527, 859 N.Y.S.2d 486, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4972 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2008), app. denied, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 3031 (N.Y. Aug. 18, 2008), app. denied, 11 N.Y.3d 738, 864 N.Y.S.2d 397, 894 N.E.2d 661, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 3072 (N.Y. 2008).

Evidence was legally insufficient to establish felony assault in the second degree pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(6) because the presentment agency did not establish that the appellant, or another participant in the incident, caused serious physical injury to the complainant in the course of and in furtherance of a robbery, or in the immediate flight therefrom. Matter of Robert C., 67 A.D.3d 790, 888 N.Y.S.2d 192, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8068 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2009).

Evidence was insufficient to convict defendant of assault in the second degree under count six of the indictment because defendant's convictions of robbery were vacated; and the conviction for assault in the second degree under count six of the indictment required a conviction of an underlying felony contained in the indictment or its attempted commission as an essential element of the crime. People v Torres, 130 A.D.3d 1082, 14 N.Y.S.3d 151, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6241 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 26 N.Y.3d 1093, 44 N.E.3d 948, 23 N.Y.S.3d 650, 2015 N.Y. LEXIS 4219 (N.Y. 2015).

As the evidence was insufficient to convict defendant of second-degree robbery, his conviction of second-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(6) was reversed as well because a conviction of the underlying felony contained in the indictment or its attempted commission was an essential element of that crime. People v Caraballo, 136 A.D.3d 937, 26 N.Y.S.3d 148, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1189 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 27 N.Y.3d 1067, 60 N.E.3d 1203, 38 N.Y.S.3d 837, 2016 N.Y. LEXIS 1855 (N.Y. 2016).

County court erred in accepting defendant's Alford plea because the record lacked strong evidence that defendant caused injury to a person in the course of and in furtherance of the commission or attempted commission of that crime or during the immediate flight therefrom under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05 (6). People v Johnson, 167 A.D.3d 1512, 89 N.Y.S.3d 505, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8767 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2018), app. denied, 33 N.Y.3d 949, 123 N.E.3d 824, 100 N.Y.S.3d 165, 2019 N.Y. LEXIS 1163 (N.Y. 2019).

Family court erred, inter alia, in finding that a juvenile committed acts which, if committed by an adult, would constitute the crimes of second-degree robbery and second-degree assault because the complainant testified that the juvenile was not one of the persons who took his belt and watch, and as the presentment agency failed to proffer legally sufficient evidence to establish that the juvenile participated in the alleged robbery or in the "immediate flight therefrom," the evidence was legally insufficient to support the assault charge. Matter of Raees T.B., 172 A.D.3d 707, 100 N.Y.S.3d 271, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3365 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2019).

51. Jury instructions, generally

Where defendant threw girl into canal in effort to cause death by drowning, trial court erred in charging attempted manslaughter second degree, and in failing to charge attempted assault second degree, in that one may not intentionally attempt to cause death of another human being by reckless act. People v Zimmerman, 46 A.D.2d 725, 360 N.Y.S.2d 127, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3878 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1974).

Following acquittal on all 4 counts of underlying felonies of robbery, burglary, and attempted rape, and inconsistent conviction for felony assault (which required at least one underlying felony conviction), defendant could not be deemed to have waived his objection to verdict's repugnancy by his failure to object prior to discharge of jury, where court had instructed that jury deliberate on each count seriatim, ending with felony assault, and that if it convicted on any count it should report that conviction as its verdict without proceeding to consider any following count; it would be unrealistic to expect defendant's counsel to object so as to call for resubmission of entire case to jury for logical reconciliation of inconsistent verdict, which would put defendant's acquittal on more serious charges at risk of adverse reconsideration, as well as expose him to double jeopardy. People v Sanchez, 128 A.D.2d 377, 512 N.Y.S.2d 389, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 44095 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1987).

Court erred in instructing jury that it was necessary for prosecution to prove that defendant injured victim by way of his fists and blunt object to establish second degree assault, but error was harmless since any confusion from charge inured to benefit of defendant, and evidence amply established that defendant struck victim with some sort of stick or pipe, causing cut that required several stitches to his head. People v Davis, 208 A.D.2d 430, 617 N.Y.S.2d 180, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9760 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1994).

Defendant was entitled to reversal of conviction for first degree assault and related crimes based on court's error in denying his request for adverse inference charge as to police report concerning his prior assault on same victim, which had been lost or destroyed prior to trial, where report related to victim's direct testimony and there was sufficient showing of prejudice. People v Lineszy, 222 A.D.2d 527, 635 N.Y.S.2d 537, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12759 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1995).

In second degree assault prosecution, court's charge did not diminish People's burden of proof and mitigate seriousness of crime by omitting from definition of serious physical injury that it is "injury which creates a substantial risk of death, or which causes death"; such instruction actually limited jury to finding that defendant had inflicted serious physical injury under one of 3, rather than 4, of disjunctive definitions contained in statute. People v Martinez, 224 A.D.2d 254, 637 N.Y.S.2d 698, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1019 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 989, 649 N.Y.S.2d 396, 672 N.E.2d 622, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3635 (N.Y. 1996).

Error in instrucing jury that a fist could have been considered a dangerous weapon was harmless because the jury acquitted defendant of the charge of assault in the second degree pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2), which requires the use of a deadly weapon or a dangerous instrument to cause physical injury and was premised on the People's theory that he struck the victim in the head with the BB gun; defendant was instead convicted of the lesser included offense of assault in the third degree, which did not require the use of a dangerous instrument N.Y. Penal Law § 120.00(1), and, given the victim's testimony that she did not know what defendant struck her with and defendant's claim that he used his fist, the acquittal indicated that the jury correctly determined that a fist is not a "dangerous instrument" despite the erroneous instruction, and found that the People did not prove beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant used anything but his fist. Defendant's other convictions involving dangerous instruments or dangerous weapons, N.Y. Penal Law §§ 160.15(3), 265.01(2)(5), were premised on his use, threatened use or possession of a BB gun rather than his fist and, given the overwhelming evidence supporting these convictions, there was no significant probability that he would have been acquitted if not for the erroneous instruction. People v Perez, 93 A.D.3d 1032, 942 N.Y.S.2d 227, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2132 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 1000, 951 N.Y.S.2d 476, 975 N.E.2d 922, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 3099 (N.Y. 2012), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 1000, 951 N.Y.S.2d 476, 975 N.E.2d 922, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 3440 (N.Y. 2012), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 1000, 951 N.Y.S.2d 476, 975 N.E.2d 922, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 3441 (N.Y. 2012).

Jury's finding of guilt on the count charging him with robbery in the first degree was not irreconcilable with its acquittal of the defendant on the count charging him with assault in the second degree because as charged to the jury, the acquittal of menacing in the second degree did not negate any essential element of criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree. People v Colon, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7429 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2020).

In prosecution in which defendant was charged with assault, robbery, and reckless endangerment, court properly instructed jury that it could find defendant guilty of felony assault if it found that he caused physical injury in course of, or in immediate flight from, commission of either robbery or grand larceny, despite fact that indictment mentioned only robbery as underlying felony to assault charge, since indictment was not required to specify underlying felony, jury instruction did not alter People's theory of case, defendant was not surprised because he was on notice of specific wrongful taking of property of which he was accused, and he denied any knowledge of property or its taking. People v Baker, 133 Misc. 2d 31, 505 N.Y.S.2d 995, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2961 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1986).

Defense counsel's theory of the case was that the inmate did not have the requisite intent to do serious harm to the victim; here, the inmate was contemporaneously saying that he did not have the requisite intent to do harm and that the jury should have been given a charge that included a required element of intent to do harm. Counsel's decision not to pursue such lesser included offense was not objectively unreasonable as seeking a second degree assault charge could have undermined the inmate's defense that he did not have intent to cause harm; based on the Strickland analysis, the inmate did not show that counsel operated outside professional norms and the claim was dismissed for lack of cause. Nunez v Conway, 473 F. Supp. 2d 465, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11355 (S.D.N.Y. 2007).

52. —Separate and lesser offenses

In trial arising from second degree assault in which victim was beaten with belt, court's unchallenged instruction to jury concerning its fact-finding responsibility with respect to dangerous instrumentality element did not, by itself, create defense entitled to charge-down to third degree assault. People v Curtis, 89 N.Y.2d 1003, 657 N.Y.S.2d 395, 679 N.E.2d 634, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 314 (N.Y. 1997).

Failure to charge on "serious physical injury" as an element of assault in the second degree, particularly where the seriousness of the injuries was disputed and where assault in the third degree was an includible crime, constituted fundamental and prejudicial error. People v Wrench, 34 A.D.2d 1055, 312 N.Y.S.2d 561, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4355 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

The court's charge was deficient in not marshaling or referring to the evidence to an extent that it was necessary to explain the application of the law to the facts as such a summary would have aided the jury in differentiating assault in the second and third degrees, which from the jury's request was a cause of concern, and in evaluating the defense of justification. People v Wrench, 34 A.D.2d 1055, 312 N.Y.S.2d 561, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4355 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

Under CPL § 470.55, defendant who was acquitted of second degree attempted robbery (Penal Law § 160.10, subd 2(a)) could not be retried for that offense or for offense of second degree assault (Penal Law § 120.05, subd 2) where court had erroneously charged second degree assault as lesser included offense of second degree attempted robbery. People v Flores, 42 A.D.2d 431, 348 N.Y.S.2d 425, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3281 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1973).

Trial court did not err in instructing jury that they could find defendant, who was charged with assault in the first degree, guilty of assault in the second degree. People v Zimmer, 49 A.D.2d 792, 372 N.Y.S.2d 747, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10840 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

Court's charge, instructing jurors that they could find defendant guilty of first or second degree assault if they found that injury was caused by deadly weapon "or a dangerous instrument," did not improperly amend indictment, which charged defendant with first degree assault in that he intentionally caused serious physical injury by means of deadly weapon, since (1) defendant was given fair notice of charges against him by fact that CLS Penal § 120.10(1), under which he was indicted, included language "by means of a deadly weapon or a dangerous instrument," (2) indictment referred to actual weapon used (knife), (3) weapon involved was characterized as dangerous instrument in separate indictment arising from same incident for which defendant was jointly tried, and (4) court merely tracked statutory language and did not change prosecution's theory of crime. People v Felton, 141 A.D.2d 839, 530 N.Y.S.2d 179, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7194 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Court erred in refusing to charge assault in third degree as lesser included offense of assault in second degree, since court charged, with respect to assault in second degree, that whether baseball bat was dangerous instrument was factual issue for jury to decide, and therefore court necessarily concluded that there was reasonable view of evidence that bat was not dangerous instrument. People v Dickerson, 148 A.D.2d 970, 546 N.Y.S.2d 908, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2626 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 739, 545 N.Y.S.2d 113, 543 N.E.2d 756, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 2445 (N.Y. 1989).

In prosecution for second degree assault, defendant was not entitled to instruction on lesser included offense of attempted second degree assault where correction officer testified that defendant struck him with sharpened 6-inch nail in right elbow when officer stepped in to stop fight between defendant and another inmate. People v Freeman, 184 A.D.2d 864, 585 N.Y.S.2d 113, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8162 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 80 N.Y.2d 903, 588 N.Y.S.2d 829, 602 N.E.2d 237, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 3568 (N.Y. 1992).

Court properly denied defendant's request to charge attempted second degree assault as lesser included offense of second degree assault where defendant steadfastly denied any assault on victim, and thus by his own testimony negated element of intent. People v Abrams, 203 A.D.2d 723, 611 N.Y.S.2d 313, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4108 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 83 N.Y.2d 963, 616 N.Y.S.2d 16, 639 N.E.2d 756, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 2335 (N.Y. 1994).

It was reversible error to deny defendant's request to charge third degree reckless assault as lesser included offense of second degree intentional assault where investigating officer testified that defendant made oral statement to effect that he had had too much to drink when he entered victim's apartment and assaulted her, and victim was impeached by prior statements she made to effect that defendant was drunk at time of assault. People v Williams, 212 A.D.2d 1065, 623 N.Y.S.2d 31, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2049 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 85 N.Y.2d 916, 627 N.Y.S.2d 339, 650 N.E.2d 1341, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 1788 (N.Y. 1995).

Defendant's current claim that third degree assault should have been submitted to jury because defendant recklessly caused physical injury, under CLS Penal § 120.00(2), was not preserved for appellate review in accordance with CLS CPL § 300.50(2) where defendant's request that trial court charge jury on third degree assault as lesser included offense of second degree assault, under CLS Penal § 120.05(2), was based on entirely different theory, under CLS Penal § 120.00(1), than that of his current claim. People v Ramos, 242 A.D.2d 510, 663 N.Y.S.2d 828, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9134 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1997), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 896, 669 N.Y.S.2d 10, 691 N.E.2d 1036, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 507 (N.Y. 1998).

In prosecution for 2 counts of second degree assault, defendant was not entitled to have third degree assault submitted to jury as lesser included offense as to one victim where there was no reasonable view of evidence to support finding that defendant injured that victim without use of dangerous instrument, which was baseball bat. People v Valentin, 255 A.D.2d 126, 678 N.Y.S.2d 900, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11641 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Court properly refused to charge third degree assault as lesser included offense of second degree assault given force of defendant's blow delivered suddenly and directly to victim's eye. People v Franco, 271 A.D.2d 383, 708 N.Y.S.2d 62, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4637 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 865, 715 N.Y.S.2d 220, 738 N.E.2d 368, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3029 (N.Y. 2000).

In prosecution for first degree robbery, attempted first degree robbery, second degree assault, fourth degree weapon possession, and fifth degree possession of stolen property, all arising from 2 separate incidents in which defendant grabbed taxi driver from behind, held knife to his throat, and demanded money, defendant was not entitled to have jury charged that it should consider evidence of each crime separately where that claim was unpreserved for appellate review, defendant was positively identified by each victim shortly after each incident, proof of each crime was presented separately and clearly and was easily separable and discernible in minds of jurors, and there was no "substantial likelihood that the jury would be unable to consider separately the proof as it relates to each offense" under CLS CPL § 200.20(3)(a). People v Jackson, 273 A.D.2d 253, 709 N.Y.S.2d 569, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6207 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 906, 716 N.Y.S.2d 646, 739 N.E.2d 1151, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3660 (N.Y. 2000).

Defendant waived his claim that court erred in charging third degree assault as lesser included offense of second degree assault where he requested such charge. People v Harris, 273 A.D.2d 807, 711 N.Y.S.2d 370, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6791 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 964, 722 N.Y.S.2d 481, 745 N.E.2d 401, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 4271 (N.Y. 2000).

Court did not err in charging third degree assault as lesser included offense of second degree assault where, under view of evidence most favorable to defendant, he could have committed lesser offense without committing greater offense. People v Harris, 273 A.D.2d 807, 711 N.Y.S.2d 370, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6791 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 964, 722 N.Y.S.2d 481, 745 N.E.2d 401, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 4271 (N.Y. 2000).

It was reversible error to refuse defendant's request to charge second degree obstructing governmental administration as lesser included offense of second degree assault. People v Sullivan, 284 A.D.2d 917, 728 N.Y.S.2d 320, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5935 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 942, 733 N.Y.S.2d 382, 759 N.E.2d 381, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 3590 (N.Y. 2001), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 658, 737 N.Y.S.2d 59, 762 N.E.2d 937, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4269 (N.Y. 2001).

Trial court did not err in granting the People's request to charge the jury on third degree assault (reckless assault), a violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.00(2), as a lesser included offense of second degree assault (intentional assault), a violation of former N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(9), as the testimony in the case revealed that the four-year-old victim's injuries may have resulted from the victim and defendant engaging in "slap-boxing," such that a reasonable view of the evidence allowed a finding that defendant committed the lesser offense but not the greater offense. People v Fenske, 298 A.D.2d 951, 748 N.Y.S.2d 106, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9002 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 98 N.Y.2d 768, 752 N.Y.S.2d 8, 781 N.E.2d 920, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 3894 (N.Y. 2002).

Because it was possible to commit attempted first-degree murder under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00 and 120.05(2) without committing attempted second-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00 and 125.27(1)(a), the trial court properly denied defendant's request for a lesser-included offense charge. People v Carter, 38 A.D.3d 1291, 833 N.Y.S.2d 323, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3511 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2007).

Trial court properly denied defendant's request to charge third degree assault as a lesser-included offense of second degree assault because, even when viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to defendant, no reasonable view of the evidence supported a finding that defendant assaulted the complaining witness but did not use a deadly weapon or dangerous instrument. People v Hercules, 47 A.D.3d 835, 850 N.Y.S.2d 535, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1368 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 766, 854 N.Y.S.2d 327, 883 N.E.2d 1262, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 896 (N.Y. 2008).

When defendant was charged with second-degree assault for using a stun gun to shock the victim twice on her abdomen, causing welts, and for shooting her with a BB gun, it was proper to deny an instruction on third-degree assault as to the BB gun count, because the BB gun was a loaded weapon which discharged a shot that was readily capable of producing serious physical injury, making it a deadly weapon. It was error to deny the instruction as to the stun gun count, however, because a reasonable view of the evidence could support a finding that the stun gun was not readily capable of causing serious physical injury under the circumstances in which it was used and thus was not a dangerous instrument under N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00. People v Richard, 30 A.D.3d 750, 817 N.Y.S.2d 698, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7939 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.3d 869, 824 N.Y.S.2d 614, 857 N.E.2d 1145, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 3847 (N.Y. 2006).

Trial court properly denied defendant's request to charge assault in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2), as a lesser-included offense of assault in the first degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.10(1); the evidence at trial established that defendant shot at the victim seven times, striking him four times. Viewed in the light most favorable to defendant, there was no reasonable view of the evidence that would have supported a finding that he intended to cause the victim physical injury, but did not intend to cause him serious physical injury. People v Christiani, 96 A.D.3d 870, 946 N.Y.S.2d 235, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4689 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 1101, 955 N.Y.S.2d 557, 979 N.E.2d 818, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 3677 (N.Y. 2012), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 1105, 955 N.Y.S.2d 561, 979 N.E.2d 822, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 3714 (N.Y. 2012).

Trial court properly denied defendant's request to charge reckless assault in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(4), as a lesser-included offense of assault in the first degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.10(1); the evidence at trial established that defendant shot at the victim seven times, striking him four times. Under the circumstances, there was no reasonable view of the evidence that defendant acted recklessly, as opposed to intentionally. People v Christiani, 96 A.D.3d 870, 946 N.Y.S.2d 235, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4689 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 1101, 955 N.Y.S.2d 557, 979 N.E.2d 818, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 3677 (N.Y. 2012), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 1105, 955 N.Y.S.2d 561, 979 N.E.2d 822, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 3714 (N.Y. 2012).

Since competent, conflicting evidence was presented regarding whether the victim's pertinent injury was caused by a fist or knife, defendant's request for the lesser included charge of assault in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(1) as to count 3 should have been granted. People v Daniels, 97 A.D.3d 845, 948 N.Y.S.2d 431, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5247 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 20 N.Y.3d 931, 957 N.Y.S.2d 691, 981 N.E.2d 288, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 3948 (N.Y. 2012).

Counsel was not ineffective for failing to request a lesser included charge of second degree assault, based on recklessness, because there was no reasonable view of the evidence that would support a finding that defendant acted recklessly in stabbing the victim as defendant testified that he intentionally stabbed the victim in self-defense; and because a jury charge on reckless assault as a lesser included offense would have had little or no chance of success. People v Henley, 145 A.D.3d 1578, 45 N.Y.S.3d 739, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8497 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2016), app. denied, 29 N.Y.3d 998, 80 N.E.3d 412, 57 N.Y.S.3d 719, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 1592 (N.Y. 2017).

Although first-degree attempted assault was not a lesser included offense of first-degree attempted murder, defendant failed to object to the jury instructions, and defendant's conviction of first-degree attempted murder when the jury had before it the purported lesser included offense of first-degree attempted assault foreclosed his challenge to the court's refusal to charge second-degree attempted assault as a lesser included offense; even though first-degree attempted assault was not an actual lesser included offense of attempted murder, the failure to submit lesser degrees of attempted assault could not have affected the jury's deliberations in this case. People v Vangorden, 147 A.D.3d 1436, 46 N.Y.S.3d 730, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 805 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 29 N.Y.3d 1037, 84 N.E.3d 978, 62 N.Y.S.3d 306, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 1977 (N.Y. 2017).

Counsel's decision to not request that the crime of third degree assault be submitted to the jury as a lesser included offense of second degree assault was properly raised by defendant in his motion to vacate judgment because that strategic decision by counsel was not discernable from the face of the record. People v Taylor, 156 A.D.3d 86, 64 N.Y.S.3d 714, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7753 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2017), app. denied, 30 N.Y.3d 1120, 101 N.E.3d 986, 77 N.Y.S.3d 345, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 645 (N.Y. 2018).

Defendant was not entitled to an instruction on assault in the second degree as a lesser included offense of assault in the first degree because the victim suffered eight knife wounds, including two "significant" wounds to the side of the chest and the back, lost a liter of blood, and would have died without medical treatment, and the evidence was inconsistent with a finding that defendant acted with mere recklessness. People v Farley, 164 A.D.3d 1633, 84 N.Y.S.3d 638, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6411 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2018).

There was no way of knowing if the jurors acquitted defendant of the greater counts on the basis of justification so as to mandate acquittal on the lesser count because the verdict sheet did not mention justification, and the court did not instruct the jurors that if they were to find defendant not guilty of the greater counts of assault in the second degree on the basis of justification, they were not to consider the lesser count of obstructing governmental administration in the second degree. People v Gunther, 181 A.D.3d 712, 121 N.Y.S.3d 279, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1633 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2020).

In trial arising from assault of victim who was shot in left leg and right knee during dispute with defendant, court correctly declined to charge third degree assault as lesser included offense of second degree assault because there was no reasonable view of evidence that would allow jury to find that defendant acted without weapon. Caban v Mitchell, 897 F. Supp. 759, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16972 (S.D.N.Y. 1995).

53. —"Justification" defense

Defendant who was convicted, inter alia, of second degree manslaughter and second degree assault was entitled to new trial where he raised justification defense and jury was never instructed that (1) they should assess reasonableness of defendant's belief that he was in deadly peril by judging situation from point of view of defendant as though they were actually in his place, and (2) in deciding question of reasonableness, they must consider circumstances that defendant found himself in as well as defendant's background and other characteristics and attributes of other persons involved; trial judge's repetition of word "reasonable" and phrase "reasonably believed" was not sufficient to inform jurors that they should assess defendant's circumstances from defendant's position. People v Wesley, 76 N.Y.2d 555, 561 N.Y.S.2d 707, 563 N.E.2d 21, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 3367 (N.Y. 1990).

Where defendant was convicted of second-degree assault, the trial court properly refused to instruct the jury on the defense of justification because there was no reasonable view of the evidence that would have permitted the jury to conclude that defendant was in danger of being physically harmed by the victim at the time defendant used force against him. People v Sparks, 29 N.Y.3d 932, 73 N.E.3d 354, 51 N.Y.S.3d 14, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 720 (N.Y. 2017).

In a prosecution of defendant for murder, assault in and criminal possession of a weapon arising out of the shooting of the deceased and a bystander during a confrontation between the deceased and defendant, where the court charged justification as a defense to the murder count, and defendant was acquitted thereon, it was error not to so charge with respect to the assault count; the jury's determination that defendant was justified in killing the deceased precluded his conviction of assault in the second degree, and in the absence of any evidence supporting a finding that defendant was guilty of reckless or criminally negligent assault, the assault count would be dismissed; justification should also have been charged as a defense to the weapon possession count, and defendant's conviction on that count would be reversed and remitted for a new trial, since the jury could have found that defendant did or did not have the required degree of intent. People v Morris, 109 A.D.2d 413, 491 N.Y.S.2d 860, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 48206 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1985), app. dismissed, 68 N.Y.2d 799, 506 N.Y.S.2d 859, 498 N.E.2d 423, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 20110 (N.Y. 1986).

In prosecution of defendant convicted of crime of assault in second degree, trial court committed reversible error in failing to specifically instruct that People had burden to disprove defendant's justification defense, and there is no merit to contention that defendant waived alleged error by failing to timely object to initial justification charge, since, at time request was made, trial court could have alleviated alleged error. People v Vasquez, 114 A.D.2d 589, 494 N.Y.S.2d 198, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 53289 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1985).

In prosecution for second degree assault, defendant was not entitled to instruction that he was justified in his assault on officers because their use of force was excessive in effecting arrest where defendant had assaulted officers without provocation. People v Rison, 130 A.D.2d 596, 515 N.Y.S.2d 304, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 46609 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Defendant on trial for second degree assault on correctional officer was not entitled to charge of justification, despite testimony of defense witnesses that, when officer removed defendant's handcuffs, officer pressed down and tightened cuffs, causing injury to defendant, where defendant did not testify and evidence showed that defendant suddenly pulled officer's arm down and through hatch in cell door as officer was attempting to undo handcuff, causing officer's arm to scrape against hatch and his body to be propelled against door; moreover, court properly instructed jury that, if it found defendant's conduct involuntary or reflex action resulting from stimuli applied to his wrist by officer, they should find defendant not guilty. People v Hilliard, 142 A.D.2d 885, 531 N.Y.S.2d 386, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8026 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988), rev'd, 73 N.Y.2d 584, 542 N.Y.S.2d 507, 540 N.E.2d 702, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 658 (N.Y. 1989).

In trial for first degree promoting prison contraband and attempted second degree assault arising from incident in which defendant prison inmate ran after another inmate with board, court did not err in failing to charge justification defense, since first degree promoting prison contraband does not involve use of physical force and thus justification under CLS Penal § 35.15 was no defense, and justification defense under CLS Penal § 35.05 was not available because defendant admitted that he could have retreated from his alleged attacker. People v Diaz, 145 A.D.2d 833, 535 N.Y.S.2d 819, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13455 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 1014, 541 N.Y.S.2d 768, 539 N.E.2d 596, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 1821 (N.Y. 1989).

Defendant was entitled to reversal of conviction for second degree assault, submitted to jury as lesser included offense of first degree assault, since court erred as matter of law by denying defense request for justification charge under CLS Penal § 35.15(1), and by charging jury only as to circumstances under which deadly physical force could be used, pursuant to § 35.35(2), where People's evidence showed that defendant hit complainant on head with bottle without provocation, while defendant's evidence showed that he hit complainant in self-defense after complainant pushed him to the ground and was about to hit him again; whether physical force used by defendant was "deadly" was fact question for jury to decide. People v Jones, 148 A.D.2d 547, 538 N.Y.S.2d 876, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2736 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

In trial for second degree murder, second degree attempted murder and first degree assault, court erred in failing to charge justification as defense to lesser included offenses of second degree manslaughter and second degree assault since justification defense should not be limited to any particular mens rea or any particular crime involving use of force. People v Prather, 154 A.D.2d 561, 546 N.Y.S.2d 402, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12728 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 951, 550 N.Y.S.2d 285, 549 N.E.2d 487, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 4568 (N.Y. 1989).

Defendant's second degree assault conviction would be reversed where court's charge on justification failed to instruct jurors that they should assess reasonableness of defendant's beliefs by judging situation from his point of view as though they were actually in his place. People v Spittler, 168 A.D.2d 919, 564 N.Y.S.2d 885, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16448 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1990), app. denied, 77 N.Y.2d 882, 568 N.Y.S.2d 925, 571 N.E.2d 95, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 1217 (N.Y. 1991).

Court improperly refused to charge jury on defense of justification in prosecution for second degree assault where defendant asserted that it was correction officers who were aggressors and that he used physical force only to defend himself from their use of excessive or unlawful force. People v Dare, 175 A.D.2d 586, 572 N.Y.S.2d 251, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10095 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 78 N.Y.2d 1127, 578 N.Y.S.2d 884, 586 N.E.2d 67, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 5475 (N.Y. 1991).

Defendant was not entitled to justification charge in prosecution for second degree assault and resisting arrest involving attack on police officers, even accepting his testimony that he never heard plainclothed police officers identify themselves, since he admitted that officers had handcuffs and walkie-talkies visible, and officers testified that their badges were displayed. People v Angus, 192 A.D.2d 665, 597 N.Y.S.2d 87, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3881 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 1069, 601 N.Y.S.2d 588, 619 N.E.2d 666, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 2670 (N.Y. 1993).

Court in second degree assault trial did not improperly charge justification defense only under theory of "deadly physical force," rather than under theory of mere "physical force," where record showed that defendant pulled screwdriver from his back pocket during altercation and hit victim in face with it, breaking his jaw, since it could not be said that defendant exercised only nondeadly force. People v Samuels, 198 A.D.2d 384, 603 N.Y.S.2d 344, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10681 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1993), app. denied, 82 N.Y.2d 930, 610 N.Y.S.2d 182, 632 N.E.2d 492, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 5344 (N.Y. 1994).

Defendant's testimony that wound to victim's chin was unintended result of struggle over broken plate did not defeat his entitlement to justification charge in second degree assault prosecution. People v Scott, 224 A.D.2d 926, 637 N.Y.S.2d 586, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1558 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1996).

Court did not err in charging jury, over defendant's objection, on justified use of deadly physical force in addition to charge on justified use of physical force where evidence showed that assault victim sustained serious physical injuries when defendant beat him over head with cutting board. People v Brunson, 226 A.D.2d 1093, 641 N.Y.S.2d 935, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5566 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. dismissed, 88 N.Y.2d 981, 649 N.Y.S.2d 387, 672 N.E.2d 613, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3395 (N.Y. 1996).

Defendant was not entitled to justification charge where victim punched him in face and knocked him to ground after defendant twice pushed victim's daughter as she attempted to break up argument between defendant and another guest at daughter's party, defendant then ran outside toward shed followed by guest, who then became involved in fight with defendant, victim tried to break up that fight and swung plastic pipe at defendant, fight broke up and defendant went into house, and as victim was being escorted into house through back door, defendant appeared with knife that he had retrieved from kitchen and stabbed victim in face. People v Cleveland, 235 A.D.2d 929, 653 N.Y.S.2d 425, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 762 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 1090, 660 N.Y.S.2d 384, 682 N.E.2d 985, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 1872 (N.Y. 1997).

In trial for second and third degree assault and resisting arrest arising from altercation with village police officer who was dressed in civilian clothing and driving his own car, justification charge was warranted where officer had approached defendant in his driveway, and defendant testified that he was unaware that officer was police, that officer did not identify himself as police, and that he struck officer in self-defense after officer grabbed him. People v Cain, 236 A.D.2d 788, 653 N.Y.S.2d 739, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1706 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1997).

In prosecution for second degree assault, jury charge on defense of justification was properly denied where defendant's use of dangerous instrument against unarmed victim could not be viewed as anything other than excessive use of force. People v Vecchio, 240 A.D.2d 854, 658 N.Y.S.2d 720, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6716 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Where no reasonable view of eyewitness testimony, victim's testimony or defendant's confession, taken together, could support conclusion that victim, rather than defendant, was initial aggressor in college fraternity house altercation, court properly refused to give justification charge in second degree assault case. People v Carello, 241 A.D.2d 903, 660 N.Y.S.2d 515, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8159 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 938, 664 N.Y.S.2d 757, 687 N.E.2d 654, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3745 (N.Y. 1997).

Court properly denied defendant's request to charge justification where no version of evidence showed that any officers used excessive force in effecting arrest of third person so as to justify force used by defendant against officer who was not even involved in arrest. People v Lucena, 243 A.D.2d 269, 662 N.Y.S.2d 320, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9297 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 876, 668 N.Y.S.2d 574, 691 N.E.2d 646, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4623 (N.Y. 1997).

In second degree assault prosecution, it was reversible error to deny defense request to charge jury on justification under CLS § 35.20(2) where defendant, who was taking care of his children at his estranged wife's rented home, heard noise and saw ladder positioned outside second-floor window, he then ran downstairs and opened door, and he claimed that person on ladder (landlord) fell off ladder when he opened door, although there was other evidence that landlord fell when defendant deliberately pushed ladder. People v Daniels, 248 A.D.2d 723, 670 N.Y.S.2d 566, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3400 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

Defendant was not denied effective assistance by counsel's failure to request justification charge in second degree assault prosecution since defense witness had testified that it was he and not defendant who kicked victim, and there was no testimony as to identity of initial aggressor. People v Fernandez, 248 A.D.2d 801, 670 N.Y.S.2d 251, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2493 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

It was reversible error in second degree assault prosecution for court to deny defendant's request for charge on defense of justification, even though he testified that injury to victim was unintended, since jury, based on defendant's version of events, could have reasonably found that victim and his brother were initial aggressors and that defendant's actions were justified. People v Neal, 254 A.D.2d 752, 678 N.Y.S.2d 556, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10448 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

In prosecution for attempted second degree murder and second degree assault, involving repeated blows to victim's head and body with baseball bat, court properly refrained from giving justification charge sua sponte where such action would have unlawfully interfered with defense strategy of not raising weak justification defense in order to concentrate on other defenses. People v Vukel, 263 A.D.2d 416, 695 N.Y.S.2d 73, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8241 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 830, 702 N.Y.S.2d 601, 724 N.E.2d 393, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 4350 (N.Y. 1999), app. denied sub. nom., People v Vokel, 94 N.Y.2d 830, 702 N.Y.S.2d 601, 724 N.E.2d 393, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 4779 (N.Y. 1999), overruled in part, People v Wells, 24 N.Y.3d 971, 996 N.Y.S.2d 569, 21 N.E.3d 198, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 2820 (N.Y. 2014).

Defendant's use of knife constituted use of deadly physical force as matter of law, and thus court properly denied his request to charge justification through use of ordinary physical force, notwithstanding his assertion that he did not intend to use knife in deadly manner. People v Mothon, 284 A.D.2d 568, 729 N.Y.S.2d 541, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5984 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 865, 730 N.Y.S.2d 40, 754 N.E.2d 1123, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2593 (N.Y. 2001).

Denial of defendant's request for a justification charge under N.Y. Penal Law § 35.15(1) was error because testimony by defendant and his girlfriend that a crowd was following them and threatening to beat him up as he sought to leave an area supported a conclusion that he believed physical force was necessary to defend against the imminent use of physical force. and that a reasonable person would have the same belief under the circumstances; moreover, even if defendant was the initial aggressor in a prior confrontation, he withdrew from that encounter before his subsequent use of force against his pursuers. The jury could have concluded that defendant used no more than ordinary physical force and was justified in doing so. People v Powell, 101 A.D.3d 1369, 956 N.Y.S.2d 294, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8773 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2012), app. denied, 21 N.Y.3d 1019, 971 N.Y.S.2d 501, 994 N.E.2d 397, 2013 N.Y. LEXIS 1955 (N.Y. 2013).

Intoxication defense was inconsistent with proffered defense of justification, based on defendant's own statements that he had bitten the police officer to defend himself against an unprovoked beating. People v Gary, 299 A.D.2d 960, 750 N.Y.S.2d 714, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11064 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2002), app. denied, 99 N.Y.2d 582, 755 N.Y.S.2d 718, 785 N.E.2d 740, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 767 (N.Y. 2003).

Defendant's conviction on lesser included offense of assault in the second degree was reversed where the trial court instructed the jury on justification but failed to instruct the jury that an acquittal on the greater offenses of attempted murder and/or assault in the first degree, based on a finding of justification, precluded a conviction for assault in the second degree. People v Ross, 2 A.D.3d 465, 767 N.Y.S.2d 819, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12905 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003), app. denied, 2 N.Y.3d 745, 778 N.Y.S.2d 471, 810 N.E.2d 924, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 1255 (N.Y. 2004).

In defendant's trial on a charge of, inter alia, assault in the second degree, the jury instructions on the justification defense were proper, as any error in charging the jury in the conjunctive rather than the disjunctive by noting that the jury had to find that the victim "and others" rather than "or others" was harmless because defendant repeatedly contended that the victim and two others had threatened to attack him. People v Daggett, 150 A.D.3d 1680, 54 N.Y.S.3d 803, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3611 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 29 N.Y.3d 1125, 86 N.E.3d 567, 64 N.Y.S.3d 675, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 2992 (N.Y. 2017).

In defendant's trial on a charge of, inter alia, assault in the second degree, the jury instructions on the justification defense were proper, as there was no basis to instruct the jury that defendant had no duty to retreat in his dwelling because there was no reasonable view of the evidence that he was in his dwelling at the time. People v Daggett, 150 A.D.3d 1680, 54 N.Y.S.3d 803, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3611 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 29 N.Y.3d 1125, 86 N.E.3d 567, 64 N.Y.S.3d 675, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 2992 (N.Y. 2017).

54. —Miscellaneous instructions

Although at the trial of a defendant convicted of criminally negligent homicide, based upon an incident in which several men pulled the victim from his car and beat him, the court erroneously suggested in its instructions to the jury with respect to the section of the charge dealing with assault in the second degree, that all of the defendants should be treated as accessories, it was rendered harmless by eight other instructions on accessorial liability which occurred in the lengthy charge which was well balanced and fair; the evidence overwhelmingly demonstrated that defendant was an accessory and due to the evidence of concerted action, there was no significant probability that the jury would have found that defendant was acting independently and not as an accessory. People v Gramaglia, 71 A.D.2d 441, 423 N.Y.S.2d 78, 1979 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13497 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1979).

Defendant charged with second degree assault was not entitled to jury charge of duress on basis of his testimony that correction officers found drugs planted in his prison cell, then promised him that he would not be punished for drug possession if he attacked fellow inmate, since there was no testimony concerning coercion of defendant by physical force. People v Robinson, 141 A.D.2d 979, 530 N.Y.S.2d 857, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7225 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 789, 536 N.Y.S.2d 749, 533 N.E.2d 679 (N.Y. 1988), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 925, 539 N.Y.S.2d 310, 536 N.E.2d 639, 1989 N.Y. In trial for second degree assault, fifth degree conspiracy, second degree tampering with sports contest, and fourth degree weapon possession arising out of boxing match in which defendant fight manager conspired with codefendant fighter to remove padding from codefendant's boxing gloves, resulting in serious injury to other fighter, court did not err (1) in charging jury that person may not use physical force in combat by agreement if combat is not specifically authorized by law, and that violation of rules of State Athletic Commission deprives combat of its legality,

(2) in defining assault in terms of fighter punching another with knowledge that padding has been removed, with intent to cause physical injury to that other person, and with physical injury resulting, and (3) in further charging that fighter lost his legal right to strike his opponent, as matter of law, if such proof was established beyond reasonable doubt. People v Lewis, 166 A.D.2d 238, 560 N.Y.S.2d 630, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11741 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1990).

Court did not err in charging jury on accessorial liability in second degree assault trial against 2 defendants, although single-count indictment did not contain words "acting in concert," since defendants were charged with committing same assault on same victim at same time, they were tried for crime for which they were indicted, and court's charge did not change theory of case as it was presented and tried. People v Grim, 166 A.D.2d 264, 560 N.Y.S.2d 639, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11899 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 986, 563 N.Y.S.2d 774, 565 N.E.2d 523, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 4603 (N.Y. 1990), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 986, 563 N.Y.S.2d 775, 565 N.E.2d 524, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 4606 (N.Y. 1990), cert. denied, 499 U.S. 976, 111 S. Ct. 1622, 113 L. Ed. 2d 719, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 2263 (U.S. 1991).

In second degree assault trial, court properly instructed jury regarding defendant's accomplice liability where (1) after victim and person named "Mike" had argument, Mike returned with 3 other individuals, including defendant, (2) Mike told defendant to shoot victim in leg and, although gun did not fire, defendant pulled trigger, and (3) victim was shot in hand as he ran from scene, and testified that all 3 individuals, including defendant, were shooting at him; evidence supported conclusion that defendant and 2 other individuals shared common purpose to injure victim. People v Floyd, 173 A.D.2d 211, 569 N.Y.S.2d 92, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5524 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 78 N.Y.2d 966, 574 N.Y.S.2d 945, 580 N.E.2d 417, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 4367 (N.Y. 1991).

Trial court improperly instructed jury that they could not convict defendant, who was charged with assault while inmate of correctional facility, unless they found that he was incarcerated at time in question, where defendant had admitted prior conviction, and thus prosecution could not prove fact of prior conviction as part of its direct case; however, error was harmless where jury had already received evidence of defendant's confinement without objection. People v Richardson, 180 A.D.2d 902, 580 N.Y.S.2d 521, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2664 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992).

Defendant in second degree assault trial was properly denied intoxication instruction under CLS Penal § 15.25, although he testified that he may have lost control and hit victim because he had "had a couple of drinks" and "just got ripped off," and one arresting officer testified that defendant had glassy eyes and smelled of alcohol, since (1) defendant's testimony was, at best, equivocal, attributing assault in part to his anger at being "ripped off," (2) there was no evidence as to type or size of drinks defendant consumed or when he consumed them, and (3) defendant was able to give detailed testimony of events which occurred before, during, and after assault. People v Gaines, 195 A.D.2d 383, 600 N.Y.S.2d 232, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7260 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1993), aff'd, 83 N.Y.2d 925, 615 N.Y.S.2d 309, 638 N.E.2d 954, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 1279 (N.Y. 1994).

In prosecution for second degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.05(3), it was reversible error to instruct jury, inter alia, that if it found that officer in question was attempting to arrest defendant, then as matter of law "he was performing a lawful duty"; court's charge effectively removed from jury's consideration lawfulness of police conduct, and whether their actions were authorized under circumstances presented. People v Greene, 221 A.D.2d 559, 634 N.Y.S.2d 144, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11928 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1995).

Court properly charged jury on theory that defendant was acting in concert with another individual in attack on victim where, inter alia, defendant admitted that he entered melee to aid that person. People v Weiner, 226 A.D.2d 757, 640 N.Y.S.2d 332, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3492 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

Defendant was not prejudiced by court's jury charge indicating that gun entered in evidence was loaded gun since defendant conceded that he possessed and fired gun admitted in evidence. People v Gordon, 235 A.D.2d 274, 653 N.Y.S.2d 297, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 287 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 1035, 659 N.Y.S.2d 866, 681 N.E.2d 1313, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 1502 (N.Y. 1997).

It was reversible error in second degree assault prosecution to instruct jury that court's prior ruling at pretrial suppression hearing that officer had probable cause to arrest meant that legality of officer's initial approach to defendant was "not an issue" for jury and that as matter of law officer was performing his "lawful duty" for purposes of CLS Penal § 120.05(3); by removing "lawful duty" element from jury's consideration, court usurped jury's role as ultimate arbiters of credibility. People v Milhouse, 246 A.D.2d 119, 676 N.Y.S.2d 555, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8816 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

In prosecution for second degree assault on peace officer, court properly charged jury that it could find defendant guilty only if it found that victim was court security officer and was acting in that capacity when assaulted where sole trial evidence on issue proved that if victim qualified as peace officer, it was as court security officer under either CLS CPL § 2.10(21)(a) or CLS CPL § 2.10(37) and CLS Gen Mun § 209-v(1), and court chose to tailor its instructions to evidence rather than remove "peace officer" element from crime. People v Hollis, 255 A.D.2d 615, 680 N.Y.S.2d 678, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11691 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 1033, 684 N.Y.S.2d 498, 707 N.E.2d 453, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4648 (N.Y. 1998).

In prosecution for second degree assault and fourth degree weapon possession, defendant was not entitled to jury charge on defense of intoxication, absent evidence as to number of drinks consumed by defendant, period during which he might have consumed them, whether drinks contained alcohol, or physical effects that consumption of alcohol might have had on defendant's behavior or mental state; witness's impression that defendant appeared to be "passed out" in rear of patrol car while being transported to crime scene for showup was insufficient to warrant intoxication charge. People v Hill, 255 A.D.2d 969, 681 N.Y.S.2d 919, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12235 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 1050, 685 N.Y.S.2d 428, 708 N.E.2d 185, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 303 (N.Y. 1999).

In prosecution for attempted second assault, third degree assault, and child endangerment, court properly allowed prosecution to introduce evidence of 2 prior incidents of defendant's behavior toward victim, who was 28-year-old defendant's 15-year-old stepbrother, where (1) in first incident 2 days before present assault, defendant threw victim against wall and threatened to kill him, (2) in second incident 7 months earlier, defendant kicked victim after placing himself in dispute between victim and their mother, (3) court precluded evidence of third incident that occurred years earlier, and (4) court properly instructed jury to consider prior incidents solely on issue of whether defendant's present acts of violence toward victim were intentional or resulted from mistake or accident. People v Ray, 273 A.D.2d 611, 710 N.Y.S.2d 138, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7226 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Court's charge to jury on second and third degree assault was proper, even though it did not include words "by punching him," where it did not alter theory of crimes charged in indictment. People v Harris, 273 A.D.2d 807, 711 N.Y.S.2d 370, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6791 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 964, 722 N.Y.S.2d 481, 745 N.E.2d 401, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 4271 (N.Y. 2000).

Court properly refused to instruct jury that "physical injury" of assault victim was to be measured by objective standard; jury could consider whether victim's reaction to and perception of pain qualified as physical injury, since pain is subjective and different persons tolerate it differently. People v Bernier, 279 A.D.2d 701, 719 N.Y.S.2d 186, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 287 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 797, 726 N.Y.S.2d 375, 750 N.E.2d 77, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1536 (N.Y. 2001).

Under circumstances in which defendant was charged with assault in the second degree using the doctrine of transferred intent, in that, with intent to cause physical injury to the decedent, defendant caused physical injury to the complainant by means of a handgun, instructions that the jury could find defendant guilty of that charge if it found that defendant's intent was to injure either the decedent or the complainant were proper; the identity of the intended target was not an essential element of the crime. People v Jones, 41 A.D.3d 507, 838 N.Y.S.2d 126, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6863 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 9 N.Y.3d 877, 842 N.Y.S.2d 789, 874 N.E.2d 756, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 3053 (N.Y. 2007).

Record did not support the contention that defendant conceded the element that an arresting officer was engaged in a lawful duty at the time of defendant's alleged assault, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3), and because the court's charge removed that element from the jury's consideration, defendant was entitled to a new trial. People v Martin, 36 A.D.3d 717, 826 N.Y.S.2d 747, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 431 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2007).

Defendant's conviction of second degree assault was reversed as the trial court's response to the jury's note incorrectly signaled that the accidental firing of a gun could support a conviction, which erroneously allowed the jury to find defendant guilty of intentional assault without finding the intent element of that crime. People v Lee, 116 A.D.3d 493, 983 N.Y.S.2d 524, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2446 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 23 N.Y.3d 1064, 994 N.Y.S.2d 323, 18 N.E.3d 1144, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 2634 (N.Y. 2014).

There was a possibility that defendant was convicted of assault in the second degree on a different theory than that charged since the court instructed the jurors that they could consider any injuries that the victim sustained when she threw herself from the moving vehicle, but the indictment only cited the injuries defendant caused by striking the victim. People v Barber, 155 A.D.3d 1543, 64 N.Y.S.3d 430, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7997 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2017).

55. Verdicts

Jury verdicts convicting two defendants of different degrees of assault under Penal Law §§ 120.10(1), 05(2), but acquitting them of different degrees of criminal possession of a weapon under Penal Law §§ 265.03(1)(b), 02(1), were not legally repugnant, based on the instructions that were given to the juries and viewed from a theoretical perspective without regard to the evidence presented at the trials, because the latter crime contained an essential element that the former did not: possession. People v Muhammad, 17 N.Y.3d 532, 935 N.Y.S.2d 526, 959 N.E.2d 463, 2011 N.Y. LEXIS 3130 (N.Y. 2011).

In a prosecution for assault in the second degree, predicated upon an allegation that defendant had caused physical injury to the complainant in the course of the crime of sexual abuse, first degree, the trial court erred in denying defendant's motion to withdraw his guilty plea when he appeared for sentencing on the asserted ground that defendant had pleaded guilty only to assault and not to a sex crime, where in denying that he had subjected complainant to the forcible sexual contact, defendant was negating an element of assaut in the second degree to which he had pleaded guilty. People v Pastrana, 90 A.D.2d 558, 455 N.Y.S.2d 140, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18620 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1982).

In rape and robbery prosecution, defendant's acquittal of second degree assault did not render his conviction of attempted first degree rape inconsistent verdict, since all that acquittal of assault count showed was that defendant did not act with intent to cause complaint of physical injury, while conviction of attempted rape showed his intent to engage in sexual intercourse with her. People v Pereau, 99 A.D.2d 591, 471 N.Y.S.2d 416, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16826 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1984), aff'd, 64 N.Y.2d 1055, 489 N.Y.S.2d 872, 479 N.E.2d 217, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 14219 (N.Y. 1985).

Contemporaneous acquittal of attempted second degree assault does not require finding that conviction of third degree weapon possession is repugnant; to be found guilty of attempted assault, defendant must be shown to have had intent to cause physical injury, while in order to convict him of weapon possession, it need only be shown that defendant had intent to use weapon unlawfully against another; thus, verdict of guilty on possession charge is not necessarily negated by failure to find that defendant had requisite intent under assault charge. People v Martino, 112 A.D.2d 1049, 493 N.Y.S.2d 36, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52252 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 66 N.Y.2d 616, 494 N.Y.S.2d 1039, 485 N.E.2d 243, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 17080 (N.Y. 1985).

Jury's verdict of guilty of second degree weapon possession was not repugnant to its acquittal of charge of second degree assault where (1) elements of weapon possession were described in jury instructions as requiring only that jury find that defendant possessed loaded firearm with intent to use it unlawfully against another, and (2) elements of second degree assault were described as requiring finding of intent on part of defendant to cause physical injury to victim, that defendant in fact caused such injury, and that such injury was caused by means of deadly weapon; jury could have concluded that defendant possessed weapon with intent to use it unlawfully against another, yet jury might not have been sufficiently convinced that defendant did actual shooting, or it might have entertained doubts as to whether defendant fired gun accidentally, or with intent only to frighten victim. People v Harris, 128 A.D.2d 432, 512 N.Y.S.2d 823, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 44139 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1987).

Defendant's acquittal on second and third degree robbery charges did not negate any essential element of his second degree assault conviction, and thus verdicts were not repugnant. People v Fasano, 129 A.D.2d 1004, 514 N.Y.S.2d 306, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 45701 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 799, 522 N.Y.S.2d 117, 516 N.E.2d 1230, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19436 (N.Y. 1987).

Jury verdict convicting defendant of third degree weapon possession while acquitting him of second degree assault was not repugnant where evidence was presented by which jury could conclude that defendant intentionally stored ax handle in his vehicle's trunk for unlawful purpose without finding intent to injure someone. People v Green, 135 A.D.2d 565, 522 N.Y.S.2d 164, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52509 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 897, 527 N.Y.S.2d 1006, 523 N.E.2d 313, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 1428 (N.Y. 1988).

Defendant was properly convicted of fourth degree weapon possession and acquitted of assault, after nonjury trial, where court found that he had possessed dangerous instrumentality and intended to use it unlawfully but did not cause physical injury to victim; verdict was not repugnant or inconsistent, since weapons possession charge required possession and unlawful intent but did not require that intended crime be carried out, and fact that court found that People did not prove assault charge beyond reasonable doubt did not negate any element of weapons possession charge. People v Gonzalez, 138 A.D.2d 623, 526 N.Y.S.2d 209, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3121 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Acquittal of defendant on charge of attempted second degree assault was not repugnant to conviction of third degree weapon possession since acquittal did not necessarily negate finding that weapon was possessed with intent to use it unlawfully against another. People v McDonald, 156 A.D.2d 591, 549 N.Y.S.2d 99, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15954 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 921, 555 N.Y.S.2d 40, 554 N.E.2d 77, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 1613 (N.Y. 1990).

Jury's acquittal of defendant on second degree robbery charge was not repugnant to defendant's conviction of second degree assault. People v Wilson, 156 A.D.2d 1037, 156 A.D.2d 743, 548 N.Y.S.2d 836, 549 N.Y.S.2d 494, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16521 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Defendant's acquittal of first degree burglary was not repugnant to convictions for second degree assault and attempted second degree robbery since jury could have found that People established overlapping elements of all 3 offenses, but could have entertained doubt as to whether defendant "knowingly entered unlawfully" at victim's dwelling, which was charged as element of burglary but not other offenses. People v Fitzpatrick, 171 A.D.2d 972, 567 N.Y.S.2d 915, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3971 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 78 N.Y.2d 1075, 577 N.Y.S.2d 239, 583 N.E.2d 951, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 5257 (N.Y. 1991).

Verdict convicting defendant of second degree assault, but acquitting him of all other felonies charged in indictment, was not repugnant since there is no requirement that defendant be found guilty of completed felony in order to sustain second degree assault conviction under CLS Penal § 120.05(6). People v Ladson, 209 A.D.2d 640, 619 N.Y.S.2d 133, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11494 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994), amended, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12620 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't Dec. 6, 1994), app. denied, 85 N.Y.2d 911, 627 N.Y.S.2d 334, 650 N.E.2d 1336, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 1656 (N.Y. 1995).

In prosecution for second degree assault and third degree weapon possession arising from incident in which defendant attempted to stab victim with butcher's knife and then attempted to beat him with handle of knife after blade broke, verdict convicting defendant of attempted second degree assault and acquitting him of third degree weapon possession as to knife handle was not inconsistent since conviction was based on his use of knife, not knife handle. People v McCain, 211 A.D.2d 646, 620 N.Y.S.2d 489, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 117 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 85 N.Y.2d 911, 627 N.Y.S.2d 334, 650 N.E.2d 1336, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 1673 (N.Y. 1995).

Verdict finding defendant guilty of second degree assault and not guilty of fourth degree weapon possession was not repugnant where jury could have found that defendant initially possessed weapon without any intent to use it unlawfully prior to stabbing victim during struggle over defendant's refusal to pay commuter van fare. People v Holloway, 253 A.D.2d 767, 677 N.Y.S.2d 489, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9451 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 1033, 684 N.Y.S.2d 498, 707 N.E.2d 453, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4649 (N.Y. 1998).

Jury's verdict of guilt of second degree assault was not inconsistent with acquittal of first degree assault where jury reasonably could have found that defendant intended to use gun unlawfully and that he did so by recklessly, but not intentionally, causing injury to another. People v Hart, 266 A.D.2d 584, 698 N.Y.S.2d 72, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11214 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 903, 707 N.Y.S.2d 388, 728 N.E.2d 987, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 697 (N.Y. 2000).

While the crimes of which defendant was acquitted required the use of a weapon or dangerous instrument, defendant was convicted of violating N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(1), which had no such element; thus, the acquittals did not negate any element of the crime of which defendant was convicted. People v Arroyo, 38 A.D.3d 383, 833 N.Y.S.2d 18, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3686 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 8 N.Y.3d 981, 838 N.Y.S.2d 484, 869 N.E.2d 660, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 1800 (N.Y. 2007).

Jury verdict was not inconsistent because although the counts of assault in the second degree and gang assault in the second degree required different culpable mental states, reckless for assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(4) as opposed to intentional conduct for gang assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.06, each count involved a different result; defendant could have intended to cause physical injury to the victim by participating in a gang assault and could have, at the same time, recklessly created a grave risk that the victim would sustain a serious injury at the hands of a codefendant whom defendant knew to be armed with a knife. People v Williams, 45 A.D.3d 1466, 845 N.Y.S.2d 674, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12044 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2007), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 818, 857 N.Y.S.2d 51, 886 N.E.2d 816, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 1328 (N.Y. 2008).

56. Sentencing, generally

Because assault in the second degree may be "punishable" by imprisonment in a state prison, it is a felony, even though the offense may also be punishable by imprisonment in a penitentiary. People v Rytel, 284 N.Y. 242, 30 N.E.2d 578, 284 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 242, 1940 N.Y. LEXIS 851 (N.Y. 1940).

Where defendants convicted of conspiracy in third degree and assault in second degree among other crimes, were punished as youthful offenders in less severe manner than if they had been sentenced as adults for same felonies of which they were found guilty, such sentencing was not violative of defendants' constitutional rights. People v Ozarowski, 38 N.Y.2d 481, 381 N.Y.S.2d 438, 344 N.E.2d 370, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 2253 (N.Y. 1976).

Where respondent was convicted of several violent sex offenses, pleaded guilty to rape and assault, and continued to commit offenses while incarcerated, an expert testified that based on his review of respondent's criminal, prison, and mental health records, respondent suffered from a mental abnormality that predisposed him to commit sex offenses and caused him serious difficulty controlling that conduct. The court held that respondent was a dangerous sex offender in need of confinement. Matter of State of New York v Charada T., 23 N.Y.3d 355, 991 N.Y.S.2d 9, 14 N.E.3d 362, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 1000 (N.Y. 2014).

Court did not err in denying defendant youthful offender status despite her lack of prior criminal record where crime she committed (second degree assault) was premeditated, senseless and violent, and resulted in permanent injuries to unresisting victim. People v Vera, 206 A.D.2d 494, 614 N.Y.S.2d 547, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7472 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994).

Defendant was improperly adjudicated as second violent felony offender based on his conviction of attempted second degree assault; such crime is not violent felony offense. People v McManus, 228 A.D.2d 453, 643 N.Y.S.2d 413, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6209 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

Judgment imposing sentence of 3 to 6 years for second degree assault would be affirmed where County Court had resolved discrepancy between court reporter's minutes and court clerk's minutes to reflect sentence actually imposed, and there was no contention that term of 3 to 6 years was excessive under circumstances of case. People v Banks, 242 A.D.2d 726, 663 N.Y.S.2d 46, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9156 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 868, 668 N.Y.S.2d 567, 691 N.E.2d 639, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4439 (N.Y. 1997).

Sentence for attempted second degree assault would be vacated, and matter would be remitted for resentencing on that count, where there was discrepancy between sentencing minutes, which indicated determinate sentence of 2 years, and certificate of conviction, which indicated indeterminate sentence of $1^1/_3$ to 3 years. People v Ingram, 263 A.D.2d 959, 695 N.Y.S.2d 453, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7931 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1999).

Sentencing court did not err when it imposed order of protection on defendant convicted of second degree assault, but it erred in setting order's expiration date 12 years after conviction, where defendant received determinate sentence of 7 years in prison; maximum duration of order of protection was 10 years. People v Wheeler, 268 A.D.2d 448, 701 N.Y.S.2d 442, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 165 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 926, 708 N.Y.S.2d 366, 729 N.E.2d 1165, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 1346 (N.Y. 2000).

On remission of case for resentencing, defendant convicted of second degree assault was entitled to hearing on amount of restitution where there was no evidence in plea agreement or in minutes of plea allocution to support amount of restitution ordered. People v Austin, 275 A.D.2d 913, 715 N.Y.S.2d 173, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9697 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000).

Sentence of 2 to 6 years for second degree assault was illegal where sentencing statute in effect at time of crime required minimum sentence for class D violent felony of ½, rather than ⅓, of maximum term. People v Carter, 286 A.D.2d 773, 730 N.Y.S.2d 733, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8692 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 655, 737 N.Y.S.2d 56, 762 N.E.2d 934, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4198 (N.Y. 2001).

Although aggregate sentence of 10 to 20 years was not unduly harsh, sentence of 7 ½ to 15 years on each conviction of second degree assault was illegal where that crime is class "D" violent felony offense, which at time of crime was punishable by indeterminate sentence with maximum term of 7 years and minimum term of ½ of maximum; thus, judgment of conviction would be modified by vacating sentences imposed on those counts and remitting case for resentencing on those counts. People v Fuller, 286 A.D.2d 910, 731 N.Y.S.2d 132, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9157 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 682, 738 N.Y.S.2d 297, 764 N.E.2d 401, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4382 (N.Y. 2001).

Because defendant waived the right to appeal before being advised of the potential periods of imprisonment that could be imposed under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(4), the valid waiver did not encompass defendant's contention with respect to the severity of the sentence; nevertheless, the sentence was not unduly harsh or severe. People v Mingo, 38 A.D.3d 1270, 832 N.Y.S.2d 721, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3541 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2007).

After convicting defendant of assault in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05, the trial court erred in imposing a five-year period of post-release supervision for a class D violent felony offense under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 70.02(1)(c), 70.45(2)(e) and, thus, reduced the period of post-release supervision to three years, which was the maximum allowed. People v Brown, 52 A.D.3d 1237, 859 N.Y.S.2d 548, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5219 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 956, 863 N.Y.S.2d 140, 893 N.E.2d 446, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 2922 (N.Y. 2008).

Trial court erred in sentencing defendant to 10 years of post-release supervision because the only permissible term of such supervision under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.45(2) was five years where defendant was found guilty of second-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(7) and sentenced to a determinate term of six years in prison under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.06(6)(c). People v Boyd, 97 A.D.3d 898, 948 N.Y.S.2d 450, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5478 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2012), app. denied, 20 N.Y.3d 1009, 960 N.Y.S.2d 352, 984 N.E.2d 327, 2013 N.Y. LEXIS 648 (N.Y. 2013).

Trial court erred in sentencing defendant to 10 years of post-release supervision because the only permissible term of such supervision under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.45(2) was five years where defendant was found guilty of second-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(7) and sentenced to a determinate term of six years in prison under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.06(6)(c). People v Boyd, 97 A.D.3d 898, 948 N.Y.S.2d 450, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5478 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2012), app. denied, 20 N.Y.3d 1009, 960 N.Y.S.2d 352, 984 N.E.2d 327, 2013 N.Y. LEXIS 648 (N.Y. 2013).

Because the maximum period of postrelease supervision that could be imposed upon defendant's conviction of assault in the second degree was three years, not three and a half years, the period of postrelease supervision imposed upon the conviction was illegal. People v Jones, 146 A.D.3d 1078, 45 N.Y.S.3d 261, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 217 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 29 N.Y.3d 999, 80 N.E.3d 413, 57 N.Y.S.3d 720, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 1562 (N.Y. 2017), app. dismissed, 172 A.D.3d 1774, 100 N.Y.S.3d 799, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4045 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2019).

Upon defendant's plea of guilty to assault second degree, a class D violent felony offense, the defendant would be sentenced as a persistent violent felony offender where the prosecutor proved three prior separate felony convictions in federal court for bank robbery, two of which included charges of putting lives in jeopardy. The fact that two of the convictions were entered in the same federal court on the same day and that the sentences in all three were ordered to run concurrently did not render the persistent violent felony offender statute, Penal Law § 70.08, inapplicable. People v Ayala, 107 Misc. 2d 874, 436 N.Y.S.2d 161, 1981 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2106 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1981).

Appellate court could not consider defendant's challenge to an enhanced sentence imposed following his guilty plea to assault in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05, and criminal mischief in the third degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 145.05 (2003); as part of the plea agreement, defendant knowingly, intelligently, and voluntarily waived his right to appeal the sentence. People v Schryver, 306 A.D.2d 626, 759 N.Y.S.2d 904, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6635 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 598, 766 N.Y.S.2d 174, 798 N.E.2d 358, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 3621 (N.Y. 2003).

Trial court properly vacated defendant's sentence pursuant to N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 440.40(1) to a determinate five-year prison term followed by two years of postrelease supervision upon defendant's conviction of second degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2); the original sentence was illegal, because N.Y. Penal Law § 70.45(2) mandated that a determinate sentence imposed upon conviction of a class D felony had to include five years of postrelease supervision. People v Matthews, 306 A.D.2d 863, 763 N.Y.S.2d 385, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6870 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2003).

Defendant had to be allowed to withdraw his guilty plea to charges of assault in the second degree and attempted assault the second degree pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law §§ 120.05, 110.00 (2003), because the trial court failed to inform defendant that a sentence imposed would be followed by postrelease supervision. People v Hazen, 308 A.D.2d 637, 764 N.Y.S.2d 289, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9535 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

Where defendant was convicted of second degree assault in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3), the trial court erroneously sentenced defendant to a determinate term of imprisonment based upon its misapprehension that such a sentence was mandatory for second degree assault; while a determinate term of imprisonment was authorized under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02(2)(b), (3)(c), it was not required, and although some imprisonment was mandatory, N.Y. Penal Law § 60.05(5), a definite term of imprisonment of one year or less under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.00(4) or an intermittent term of imprisonment under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 60.05(5), 85.00 were also authorized, as was a split sentence of imprisonment and probation, N.Y. Penal Law § 60.01(2)(d). People v Endresz, 1 A.D.3d 888, 767 N.Y.S.2d 732, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12406 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2003).

Where defendant, a juvenile, was found to have committed acts that constituted attempted second degree assault, N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 120.05(2), and fourth degree criminal possession of a weapon, N.Y. Penal Law § 265.01(2), the trial court, placing defendant in a limited secure facility for 18 months, carefully considered, pursuant to N.Y. Fam. Ct. Act § 352.2(2), the less restrictive alternatives to defendant's placement and properly balanced the needs of defendant and the need for the protection of the community, and its dispositional order was entitled to deference under N.Y. Fam. Ct. Act § 141. Matter of Carliph T., 26 A.D.3d 440, 808 N.Y.S.2d 909, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2125 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

Because the trial court erred in sentencing defendant to a five-year period of postrelease supervision under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.45(2) for second-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2), and in fixing the duration of an order of protection without taking into account the jail time credit to which defendant was entitled, defendant had to be resentenced. People v Clinkscales, 35 A.D.3d 1266, 825 N.Y.S.2d 395, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15655 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2006).

57. —Consecutive sentences

Sentencing court had authority to impose consecutive sentences on defendant's conviction of 3 counts of second degree assault where each assault was separate act against different victim. People v Mullgrav, 137 A.D.2d 839, 525 N.Y.S.2d 302, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2005 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 1030, 530 N.Y.S.2d 566, 526 N.E.2d 58, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 2325 (N.Y. 1988).

Court properly imposed consecutive sentences on defendant's' convictions for second degree murder and second degree assault arising out of incident in which defendant, to avoid police and while under influence of cocaine, drove at 70 to 100 miles per hour through narrow aperture between 2 rows of cars stopped at red light, hitting one or more cars, running over and killing pedestrian, and striking another car and injuring its driver, since there were 2 separate victims and there was no overlap in elements of crimes; although defendant hit both victims with car he was driving, there were nevertheless 2 separate "acts" for purposes of CLS Penal § 70.25(2), resulting in separate injuries. People v Shabaz, 173 A.D.2d 498, 569 N.Y.S.2d 971, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7074 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1991), app. denied, 79 N.Y.2d 923, 582 N.Y.S.2d 83, 590 N.E.2d 1211 (N.Y. 1992).

It was improper to order that sentence for second degree weapon possession run consecutively to sentence imposed for second degree assault since possession of weapon was material element of assault charge. People v Crespo, 188 A.D.2d 483, 591 N.Y.S.2d 57, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13597 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1992), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 883, 597 N.Y.S.2d 944, 613 N.E.2d 976, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 1356 (N.Y. 1993).

Imposition of consecutive sentences for 2 second degree assault convictions was proper, even though assaults occurred during course of single extended transaction, since they were separate and distinct acts, in that defendant initially attacked police officer reading protective order, and attack on second officer occurred shortly thereafter as he attempted to effect defendant's arrest for attack on first officer. People v Fortuna, 188 A.D.2d 683, 591 N.Y.S.2d 212, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13548 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d

It was not improper to impose consecutive prison sentences on defendant's second degree assault convictions, even if there was continuous course of activity, where he was charged in count 3 with, and admitted to, intermittently assaulting his wife and causing her physical injury by striking, kicking, and biting her between May 13, 1994 and May 16, 1994, and as to count 4 he admitted on May 14, 1994 he also assaulted his wife with dangerous instrument causing her physical injury. People v Harris, 235 A.D.2d 941, 653 N.Y.S.2d 403, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 777 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Imposition of consecutive sentences of 7 years and 1 ½ to 3 years for second degree robbery and attempted second degree assault was not excessive where convictions arose out of 2 separate incidents, and sentences were imposed in accordance with plea agreement under which defendant was permitted to plead to lesser crimes and separate charge against him was dropped. People v Cross, 242 A.D.2d 803, 661 N.Y.S.2d 877, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8659 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 833, 667 N.Y.S.2d 687, 690 N.E.2d 496, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4314 (N.Y. 1997).

Imposition of consecutive indeterminate prison terms for 2 counts of attempted aggravated assault on police officer was improper and would be modified to make terms run concurrently. People v Morales, 245 A.D.2d 530, 666 N.Y.S.2d 34, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13230 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 943, 671 N.Y.S.2d 723, 694 N.E.2d 892, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 1183 (N.Y. 1998).

Defendant was properly sentenced to consecutive terms for first and second degree assault where he fired several shots into car, and there was no claim that same shot injured both victims. People v Saulters, 255 A.D.2d 896, 682 N.Y.S.2d 740, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12085 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 1038, 684 N.Y.S.2d 503, 707 N.E.2d 458, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4768 (N.Y. 1998).

Court lawfully imposed consecutive sentences for defendant's separate and distinct acts of assault, rape, and sodomy where his assault on victim by cutting her face with broken bottle as she tried to evade him, causing permanent disfigurement, was completed before subsequent rape and sodomy, which were perpetrated by means of other acts of forcible compulsion, and original assault was not material element of those crimes. People v Williams, 262 A.D.2d 19, 690 N.Y.S.2d 594, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6135 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 831, 702 N.Y.S.2d 602, 724 N.E.2d 394, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 4359 (N.Y. 1999).

Article 78 proceeding to amend inmate's correctional records to reflect that his 1983 sentence for attempted second degree assault had expired and that he was currently serving only his 1965 sentence for second degree murder was properly dismissed for failure to state cause of action where (1) defendant's 2 sentences ran consecutively, and thus, under CLS Penal § 70.25(2-a), he was still subject to 1983 conviction, (2) sentencing court's calculation of defendant's term was consistent with CLS Penal § 70.30(1)(b), and (3) § 70.30(1)(b) was in effect before defendant's 1983 conviction and thus did not violate ex post facto clause. Cook v Goord, 275 A.D.2d 819, 713 N.Y.S.2d 507, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9189 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 769, 722 N.Y.S.2d 472, 745 N.E.2d 392, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3837 (N.Y. 2000).

Sentence for second degree murder was properly ordered to run consecutively to sentence for attempted murder and second degree assault on evidence that defendant's first shot killed first victim and slightly wounded second, and that defendant then moved closer and shot second victim again, causing serious injury. People v Figueroa, 279 A.D.2d 357, 719 N.Y.S.2d 249, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 413 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 783, 725 N.Y.S.2d 647, 749 N.E.2d 216, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1195 (N.Y. 2001).

It was not illegal to impose consecutive sentences on defendant's convictions of third degree weapon possession and second degree assault where weapon charge was complete when defendant drew knife in apparent attempt to intimidate and threaten victim, and only after defendant chased victim and struggled with him over knife did defendant stab victim, causing serious physical injury. People v Porter, 284 A.D.2d 931, 725 N.Y.S.2d 909, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5882 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 906, 730 N.Y.S.2d 804, 756 N.E.2d 92, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2905 (N.Y. 2001).

Sentence to consecutive prison terms of 8 to 16 years for first degree manslaughter and 2 to 6 years for second degree assault where not excessive where those crimes involved separate and distinct acts and were violent, resulting in death of one victim and injury to the other. People v Carter, 286 A.D.2d 773, 730 N.Y.S.2d 733, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8692 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 655, 737 N.Y.S.2d 56, 762 N.E.2d 934, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4198 (N.Y. 2001).

Imposition of consecutive sentences on convictions of second degree assault and first degree attempted escape was error; the jury convicted defendant of assault for causing physical injury to a police officer with intent to prevent her from performing a lawful duty, and defendant was found guilty of attempted escape for, after having been arrested for a class B felony, attempting escape from custody. Inasmuch as the "attempt to escape from custody" and the "intent to prevent a police officer from performing a lawful duty" described essentially the same act, the charges necessarily involved the same material element. People v Johnson, 33 A.D.3d 939, 826 N.Y.S.2d 295, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12737 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.3d 925, 827 N.Y.S.2d 694, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 4099 (N.Y. 2006).

Consecutive prison terms were improper for second degree murder and second degree assault convictions under circumstances in which the decedent was shot five times, five shell casings were found at the scene, there was no evidence that the decedent and the complainant were hit by different bullets, and nothing indicated that more than five bullets were involved; thus, defendant's acts were not separate and distinct. People v Jones, 41 A.D.3d 507, 838 N.Y.S.2d 126, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6863 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 9 N.Y.3d 877, 842 N.Y.S.2d 789, 874 N.E.2d 756, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 3053 (N.Y. 2007).

Defendant convicted of second degree assault committed inside prison facility under CLS Penal § 120.05(7) could be given sentence to run consecutive to sentence not yet imposed for previously committed crime of attempted first degree rape. People v Smith, 171 Misc. 2d 804, 655 N.Y.S.2d 819, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 70 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

Conviction under CLS Penal § 120.05(7) for assault committed inside prison facility presumptively requires imposition of consecutive sentence. People v Smith, 171 Misc. 2d 804, 655 N.Y.S.2d 819, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 70 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

Plea negotiations between the state and defendant, convicted of a violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05, had a starting point of statutorily known components: a "D" violent felony which would confer, upon conviction, a "predicate felon" status, and a concomitant statutorily directed component of consecutive sentencing pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 70.25(5)(a) and both sides accepted and benefitted from the negotiated disposition agreed to and approved by and in the discretion of the court; defendant's motion pursuant to N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 440.20(1) to set aside his sentence was denied. People v Pena, 196 Misc. 2d 489, 764 N.Y.S.2d 501, 2003 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 828 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), aff'd, 309 A.D.2d 687, 766 N.Y.S.2d 196, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11275 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2003).

Kidnapping in the second degree involves abducting another person, while assault in the second degree involves causing physical injury by means of a deadly weapon or dangerous instrument with the intent to cause such injury. Thus, the trial court legally imposed consecutive sentences because the crimes involved separate and distinct actions. People v Richard, 30 A.D.3d 750, 817 N.Y.S.2d 698, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7939 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.3d 869, 824 N.Y.S.2d 614, 857 N.E.2d 1145, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 3847 (N.Y. 2006).

Consecutive sentences were authorized and justified for convictions of attempted assault in the second degree and criminal contempt in the first degree given that defendant's crimes were distinct and arose from separate acts; notably, defendant was not so intoxicated as to be unable to form the requisite intent and, after the assault, had ample opportunity to reflect on the consequences of his violent actions and to decide not to engage in further criminal behavior but, instead, embarked on a separate criminal course. People v Audi, 88 A.D.3d 1070, 931 N.Y.S.2d 418, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7208 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 18 N.Y.3d 856, 938 N.Y.S.2d 864, 962 N.E.2d 289, 2011 N.Y. LEXIS 3815 (N.Y. 2011).

As defendant's second-degree assault conviction was based on his forcing a baby wipe into a child's mouth—the same act that led to defendant's first-degree assault conviction—his sentence had to be modified because these convictions did not involve separate and distinct acts allowing imposition of consecutive sentences. People v Ciccone, 90 A.D.3d 1141, 934 N.Y.S.2d 563, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8676 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2011), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 863, 947 N.Y.S.2d 411, 970 N.E.2d 434, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 1727 (N.Y. 2012).

58. —Concurrent sentences

Sentence of concurrent prison terms of 12 ½ to 25 years on first degree rape and first degree sodomy convictions and 3 ½ to 7 years on second degree assault conviction was not excessive, in view of defendant's outrageous conduct, where defendant struck victim on head with hammer and then forcibly raped and repeatedly sodomized her. People v Butler, 132 A.D.2d 771, 517 N.Y.S.2d 580, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49285 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 873, 523 N.Y.S.2d 500, 518 N.E.2d 11, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19112 (N.Y. 1987).

It was not excessive to impose concurrent sentences of $8^1/_3$ to 25 years on each of defendant's convictions for first degree burglary and robbery and $2^1/_3$ to 7 years on his second degree assault conviction in light of defendant's lengthy criminal history and violent nature of crimes. People v Collins, 136 A.D.2d 720, 523 N.Y.S.2d 1018, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 883 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 894, 527 N.Y.S.2d 1003, 523 N.E.2d 310, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 1358 (N.Y. 1988).

Sentences of one year imprisonment for second degree criminal trespass, 3 to 6 years each for second degree assault and attempted first degree assault, and 10 to 20 years for first degree burglary, all running concurrently, were not excessive considering defendant's previous felony conviction and circumstances of crimes, in which defendant broke down locked door of his former girlfriend's apartment, threw her to floor, choked her, and stabbed her. People v Neer, 136 A.D.2d 801, 523 N.Y.S.2d 630, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 305 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

It was neither harsh nor excessive to sentence defendant to 6 months' imprisonment, to run concurrently with and as condition of 5 years' probation, conditioned upon performance of 400 hours of community service, notwithstanding his cooperative efforts with law enforcement officials, his remorsefulness, and his limited role in attack, where defendant's conviction on his guilty plea to second degree assault arose from his involvement in brutal, racially-motivated attack on 3 black men, one of whom died while attempting to flee. People v Riley, 152 A.D.2d 757, 545 N.Y.S.2d 37, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10642 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Defendant's sentence for second degree assault should have been made to run concurrently with his sentences for rape and sodomy since his conviction on assault charge was predicated on same acts which gave rise to his convictions for rape and sodomy. People v Cropper, 202 A.D.2d 603, 609 N.Y.S.2d 288, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2623 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 84 N.Y.2d 824, 617 N.Y.S.2d 144, 641 N.E.2d 165, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 3562 (N.Y. 1994).

It was error to impose consecutive sentences on defendant's convictions for second degree assault and first degree burglary where same conduct which resulted in conviction for assaults established that he used dangerous instrument to commit burglary. People v Plater, 235 A.D.2d 597, 652 N.Y.S.2d 636, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 1039, 659 N.Y.S.2d 870, 681 N.E.2d 1317, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 1716 (N.Y. 1997).

Court should have made prison terms imposed on second degree assault conviction run concurrently with prison terms imposed on first degree kidnapping convictions where convictions were based on offenses committed through single act. People v Jian Hong Lin, 267 A.D.2d 249, 701 N.Y.S.2d 77, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12626 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 949, 710 N.Y.S.2d 5, 731 N.E.2d 622, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 1527 (N.Y. 2000).

Court improperly denied defendant's motion under CLS CPL § 440.20 to modify sentence to provide that consecutive prison term imposed on conviction of aggravated criminal contempt should run concurrently with prison terms imposed on convictions of attempted second degree assault and third degree weapon possession where intent to cause physical injury was material element of aggravated criminal contempt and attempted second degree assault, those crimes arose out of single incident, and court imposed concurrent prison terms on convictions of third degree weapon possession and attempted second degree assault. People v Dickens, 269 A.D.2d 463, 702 N.Y.S.2d 925, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1398 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 852, 714 N.Y.S.2d 3, 736 N.E.2d 864, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 2614 (N.Y. 2000).

Judgment would be modified by providing that prison terms run concurrently where there was no evidence that first degree burglary offense involved disparate or separate acts from first and second degree assault offenses. People v Gabbidon, 272 A.D.2d 411, 707 N.Y.S.2d 901, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5041 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 835, 713 N.Y.S.2d 141, 735 N.E.2d 421, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 2431 (N.Y. 2000).

Judgment would be modified to provide that sentence for second degree assault would run concurrently, rather than consecutively, with concurrent sentences for second degree murder and third degree weapon possession where murder was underlying felony for assault count. People v Williams, 275 A.D.2d 967, 713 N.Y.S.2d 422, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9645 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000).

59. —Predicate felony

The trial court improperly sentenced defendant who had been convicted of assault in the second degree, as a predicate felon where the predicate felony was a federal conviction for a crime which would not have constituted a felony in New York. In determining whether an out-of-state conviction is cognizable as a felony in New York, the statute upon which the indictment was drawn necessarily defines and measures the crime. People v Martin, 81 A.D.2d 765, 439 N.Y.S.2d 111, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11401 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1981).

Sentence of 3 ½ to 7 years for second degree assault would be reduced, in interest of justice, to $2^1/_3$ to 7 years where Appellate Division vacated defendant's adjudication as second felony offender. People v Robles, 251 A.D.2d 20, 673 N.Y.S.2d 654, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6397 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 904, 680 N.Y.S.2d 68, 702 N.E.2d 853, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 3562 (N.Y. 1998).

In prosecution for attempted second degree murder, first degree rape, first degree sodomy, and first and second degree assault, defendant was entitled to hearing on his motion to set aside his sentence where (1) he was sentenced as second felony offender based on Vermont conviction of sexual assault, (2) he asserted that he was only 19 and that victim was only 15 at time of that offense, (3) his acts in Vermont would have been misdemeanor of sexual misconduct in New York and thus could not be predicate felony under CLS Penal § 70.06, (4) although Vermont plea sheet did not contain age of victim, prosecution did not offer any evidence to refute defendant's claim, and (5) defendant's trial counsel neither investigated issue nor contested defendant's status as second felony offender. People v Perron, 273 A.D.2d 549, 710 N.Y.S.2d 134, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6669 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Defendant was properly sentenced for attempted assault in the second degree, a violation of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 120.05(7), as a second felony offender because, excluding defendant's intervening periods of incarceration, defendant's 1989 conviction of assault in the second degree occurred within the 10-year period preceding the September 2000, commission of the attempted assault, and, thus, the prior assault was properly considered as a predicate felony under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.06(1)(b)(iv). People v

Gannon, 301 A.D.2d 873, 754 N.Y.S.2d 107, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 380 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

60. —Sentence found excessive

Defendant's sentence of 2 to 4 years' imprisonment for attempted second degree assault should be reduced to 1 ½ to 3 years where court was incorrectly informed that offense was violent felony offense and it was clear that greater sentence was imposed only due to such misinformation. People v King, 148 A.D.2d 382, 540 N.Y.S.2d 168, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3853 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 742, 545 N.Y.S.2d 116, 543 N.E.2d 759, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 2529 (N.Y. 1989).

Sentence of 3 to 9 years for class D felony of second degree assault was unlawful and would be reduced to $2^1/_3$ to 7 years. People v Vukel, 263 A.D.2d 416, 695 N.Y.S.2d 73, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8241 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 830, 702 N.Y.S.2d 601, 724 N.E.2d 393, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 4350 (N.Y. 1999), app. denied sub. nom., People v Vokel, 94 N.Y.2d 830, 702 N.Y.S.2d 601, 724 N.E.2d 393, 1999 N.Y. Where defendant was convicted of 6 counts of second degree assault and one count of second degree attempted assault for causing injury to 4 correction officers as they were attempting to move him from keeplock cell, 14- to 28-year prison sentence resulting from imposition of consecutive sentences, while not illegal, would be modified to impose concurrent terms on 3 counts, yielding cumulative total sentence of 7 to 14 years, where melee at issue was resolved within minutes and no correction officer sustained injuries more serious that bruises and contusions. People v Harmon, 264 A.D.2d 941, 695 N.Y.S.2d 758, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9553 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Defendant's sentence would be vacated, and case would be remitted for either imposition of promised sentence or opportunity for defendant to withdraw his plea, where he pleaded guilty to second degree assault with understanding that he would be sentenced as second felony offender to incarceration for 3 years, and court imposed that sentence but further ordered him to pay restitution of $1,664.52. People v Austin, 275 A.D.2d 913, 715 N.Y.S.2d 173, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9697 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000).

Sentence for second degree assault would be modified from determinate term of 7 years to indeterminate term of 3 ½ to 7 years where original sentence was illegal under CLS Penal § 70.00(2) and (3)(b), and it was clear that sentencing court had intended to impose maximum sentence for that offense. People v Santiago, 281 A.D.2d 566, 721 N.Y.S.2d 832, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2604 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 867, 730 N.Y.S.2d 42, 754 N.E.2d 1125, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2637 (N.Y. 2001).

Sentence of 5 years in prison with mandatory 1 ½ years of postrelease supervision for second degree assault was unduly severe and would be reduced to statutory minimum term of 2 years where defendant had virtually no criminal record and no history of violent conduct, and he was hard-working person who was extensively involved in his community. People v Coleman, 281 A.D.2d 653, 721 N.Y.S.2d 160, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2024 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

61. —Sentence found not excessive

Sentence of two years and four months to seven years' imprisonment imposed upon conviction for crime of assault in the second degree arising out of a knife attack was not excessive. People v Zimmer, 49 A.D.2d 792, 372 N.Y.S.2d 747, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10840 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

Indefinite sentence of imprisonment for a maximum term of five years for second-degree assault offense involving biting off of an ear was not excessive. People v Dingley, 50 A.D.2d 361, 378 N.Y.S.2d 90, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10629 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976), rev'd, 42 N.Y.2d 888, 397 N.Y.S.2d 789, 366 N.E.2d 877, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 2226 (N.Y. 1977).

Sentence to an indeterminate term of not more than three years, for assault in the second degree, was not excessive. People v Dean, 51 A.D.2d 612, 378 N.Y.S.2d 115, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10937 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 39 N.Y.2d 748, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 3623 (N.Y. 1976).

It was not abuse of discretion to impose maximum sentence for second degree assault where defendant had criminal record and particularly heinous crime was involved; fact that sentence imposed was greater than that offered as part of plea bargain did not automatically establish that court improperly increased defendant's punishment solely for asserting his right to trial. People v Durkin, 132 A.D.2d 668, 518 N.Y.S.2d 38, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49214 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 799, 522 N.Y.S.2d 116, 516 N.E.2d 1229, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19429 (N.Y. 1987), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 799, 522 N.Y.S.2d 116, 516 N.E.2d 1230, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19433 (N.Y. 1987).

Sentencing of defendant to maximum prison sentence for burglary in second degree, attempted assault in second degree, and criminal possession of weapon in fourth degree was not abuse of discretion, notwithstanding defendant's contention that sentence was exacerbated because of factual misstatements and intemperate comments by prosecution, in light of (1) fact that defendant's claims were unsupported by record, and (2) seriousness of crimes, which involved burglarizing home of elderly woman and attempted assault upon police officer. People v Shaffer, 144 A.D.2d 182, 534 N.Y.S.2d 500, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10329 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

Sentence of 3 to 6 years' imprisonment on defendant's guilty plea to second degree assault was not harsh and excessive where, on pleading guilty, he was informed that he could receive maximum term of 7 years, crime stemmed from incident in which he pushed his girlfriend off porch railing, causing her to break her spinal column and to injure her spinal cord, and he had extensive criminal record including another assault conviction. People v Cummings, 172 A.D.2d 886, 568 N.Y.S.2d 185, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4214 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 78 N.Y.2d 1075, 577 N.Y.S.2d 238, 583 N.E.2d 950, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 5239 (N.Y. 1991).

It was not excessive to impose prison term of 1 ½ to 4 ½ years on defendant's conviction of second degree assault where he had lengthy criminal history, and incident involved violent act against his wife in presence of his 3 young children. People v Soares, 224 A.D.2d 830, 638 N.Y.S.2d 366, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1265 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

Determinate prison term of 5 ½ years was not excessive on conviction based on guilty plea to second degree assault where charges resulted from incident in which victim lost eye after defendant hit him with broken glass, and defendant had lengthy criminal history. People v Beha, 241 A.D.2d 572, 659 N.Y.S.2d 558, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7235 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Court properly imposed harshest permissible aggregate sentence of 10 ½ to 21 years for first and second degree assault and first degree reckless endangerment where those crimes involved multiple, brutal assaults on helpless newborn infant. People v Persons, 245 A.D.2d 845, 666 N.Y.S.2d 773, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13196 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Sentence of 3 ½ to 7 years for second degree assault as second felony offender was not excessive where defendant stabbed victim with knife, causing 4-inch laceration to victim's abdomen, defendant had extensive criminal history, he committed present crime while on parole, sentence was in accordance with plea agreement and statutory parameters, and there were no extraordinary circumstances warranting reduction in interest of justice. People v Lamica, 245 A.D.2d 897, 666 N.Y.S.2d 52, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13603 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 942, 671 N.Y.S.2d 722, 694 N.E.2d 891, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 1150 (N.Y. 1998).

Sentence of 2 to 4 years for second degree assault was not excessive, and would not be reduced in interest of justice, where defendant pleaded guilty to that charge in full satisfaction of 3-count indictment, thus significantly reducing his sentence exposure. People v Hicks, 245 A.D.2d 979, 667 N.Y.S.2d 130, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13568 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Sentence to 2 concurrent prison terms of $1^1/_3$ to 4 years for attempted second degree assault and attempted third degree weapon possession was not excessive where defendant had long criminal history, and sentence was agreed to and was not harshest one possible. People v Green, 255 A.D.2d 833, 681 N.Y.S.2d 795, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12766 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 971, 695 N.Y.S.2d 57, 716 N.E.2d 1102, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 2500 (N.Y. 1999).

It was not excessive to sentence defendant to negotiated concurrent terms of one to 3 years for second degree assault and 2 to 6 years for fifth degree possession of controlled substance in light of his prior criminal history and nature of crimes. People v Whittaker, 257 A.D.2d 854, 685 N.Y.S.2d 130, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 527 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 880, 689 N.Y.S.2d 442, 711 N.E.2d 656, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1118 (N.Y. 1999).

Three year sentence was not excessive for inmate who pleaded guilty to second degree assault in connection with altercation involving 2 correction officers considering seriousness of crime and fact that he was sentenced in accordance with plea agreement to lightest sentence allowed by statute. People v Depta, 257 A.D.2d 916, 682 N.Y.S.2d 648, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 762 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 923, 693 N.Y.S.2d 507, 715 N.E.2d 510, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1639 (N.Y. 1999).

Sentence to concurrent prison terms of 3 to 6 years for second degree assault, 3 ½ to 7 years for second degree weapon possession, and one year for fourth degree possession of marijuana was not excessive where sentence was less than harshest allowed, and there was no manifestation that court abused its discretion or that extraordinary circumstances warranted modification. People v Hart, 266 A.D.2d 584, 698 N.Y.S.2d 72, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11214 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 903, 707 N.Y.S.2d 388, 728 N.E.2d 987, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 697 (N.Y. 2000).

Sentence of 7 years for second degree assault was not excessive, even though it was maximum sentence for second felony offender, where plea agreement included prosecution's dropping of first degree reckless endangerment count and not pursuing persistent felony offender status. People v Williams, 266 A.D.2d 647, 698 N.Y.S.2d 347, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11410 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 886, 705 N.Y.S.2d 19, 726 N.E.2d 496, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 490 (N.Y. 2000).

Sentences of 7 years in prison and fine of $5,000 for second degree assault and one year in jail and fine of $1,000 for child endangerment were not excessive where they were in accordance with favorable plea bargain, defendant had criminal history, and there were no extraordinary circumstances warranting modification. People v Schultz, 273 A.D.2d 508, 709 N.Y.S.2d 456, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6431 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Seven-year sentence on second degree assault conviction of inmate who attacked prison disciplinary hearing officer was not harsh or excessive since in fell within statutory limits for second violent felony offender, and defendant had extensive criminal record with propensity for violent behavior while incarcerated. People v Bernier, 279 A.D.2d 701, 719 N.Y.S.2d 186, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 287 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 797, 726 N.Y.S.2d 375, 750 N.E.2d 77, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1536 (N.Y. 2001).

Concurrent prison sentences of 7 years for second degree assault, 12 years for second degree weapon possession, and 3 ½ to 7 years for reckless endangerment would not be disturbed where defendant, who had prior criminal record, shot victim in foot and failed to identify any extraordinary circumstances warranting modification. People v Rivera, 281 A.D.2d 702, 721 N.Y.S.2d 429, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2294 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 805, 726 N.Y.S.2d 383, 750 N.E.2d 85, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1735 (N.Y. 2001).

Sentence to consecutive prison terms of 8 to 16 years for first degree manslaughter and 2 to 6 years for second degree assault where not excessive where those crimes involved separate and distinct acts and were violent, resulting in death of one victim and injury to the other. People v Carter, 286 A.D.2d 773, 730 N.Y.S.2d 733, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8692 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 655, 737 N.Y.S.2d 56, 762 N.E.2d 934, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4198 (N.Y. 2001).

Appellate court was not persuaded to exercise its interest of justice jurisdiction to reduce defendant's sentence of 15 years for gang assault in the second degree and assault in the second degree in association with the beating death of someone accused of sexually assaulting children. While defendant received the maximum aggregate sentence as a second felony offender, and he only had one predicate felony, a low level drug possession, the evidence demonstrated that he initiated the highly-charged and ultimately fatal group confrontation of the victim. People v Smith, 89 A.D.3d 1126, 933 N.Y.S.2d 413, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7575 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2011), app. denied, 18 N.Y.3d 962, 944 N.Y.S.2d 491, 967 N.E.2d 716, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 1155 (N.Y. 2012).

Sentence of an aggregate prison term of 10 ½ years with 6 years of postrelease supervision was neither harsh nor excessive for two counts of assault in the second degree; defendant's claim that the sentence was imposed in retaliation for his rejection of a plea offer was both unpreserved and unsupported. In view of the brutal nature of defendant's conduct and his failure to express remorse for its devastating consequences to the victim, there was no abuse of discretion or extraordinary circumstances warranting reduction. People v Ingram, 95 A.D.3d 1376, 943 N.Y.S.2d 311, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3483 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 974, 950 N.Y.S.2d 357, 973 N.E.2d 767, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 2539 (N.Y. 2012).

Defendant's conviction of assault in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05, was affirmed; defendant failed to preserve for review a claim that his guilty plea was involuntary, and the trial court thoroughly explained the plea and defendant acknowledged the abandonment of his rights, and based on defendant's extensive criminal record, there was no basis to disturb the sentence imposed. People v Urbina, 1 A.D.3d 717, 766 N.Y.S.2d 640, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11712 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 602, 776 N.Y.S.2d 233, 808 N.E.2d 369, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 450 (N.Y. 2004).

Defendant's three-year sentence for assault in the second degree was not unconstitutionally disproportionate to the crimes committed. People v Ellis, 8 A.D.3d 826, 778 N.Y.S.2d 555, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8587 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 3 N.Y.3d 673, 784 N.Y.S.2d 12, 817 N.E.2d 830, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 3697 (N.Y. 2004).

Where defendant was convicted of attempted robbery in the second-degree and assault in the second-degree, a sentence of concurrent prison terms of seven years followed by three years of postrelease supervision was not harsh or excessive, as he attacked an elderly woman suffering from dementia and expressed no remorse, and he had an extensive criminal history; there were no extraordinary circumstances or an abuse of discretion that would warrant a reduction of the sentence in the interest of justice. People v Cole, 150 A.D.3d 1476, 52 N.Y.S.3d 744, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3921 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2017), app. denied, 31 N.Y.3d 1146, 108 N.E.3d 502, 83 N.Y.S.3d 428, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 2234 (N.Y. 2018).

II. Former law

62. Under former § 2

Because assault in the second degree may be "punishable" by imprisonment in a state prison, it is a felony, even though the offense may also be punishable by imprisonment in a penitentiary. People v Field, 15 N.Y.S.2d 561, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2431 (N.Y. City Ct. 1939).

63. Under former § 242

The common-law distinction between aggravated assaults and simple assaults is carried out by the article, §§ 240 and 242 dealing aggravated assaults which require a felonious intent, and § 244 dealing with simple assault. People v Katz, 290 N.Y. 361, 49 N.E.2d 482, 290 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 361, 1943 N.Y. LEXIS 1089 (N.Y. 1943).

Under subd. 3 of this section, guilt is attached to willful and wrongful wounding or infliction of grievous bodily harm upon the person of another, with or without a weapon. People v Alexander, 42 Misc. 2d 927, 249 N.Y.S.2d 275, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1822 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1964), aff'd, 24 A.D.2d 934, 264 N.Y.S.2d 1010, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6346 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1965).

64. —Intent

Where defendant, under arrest for drunkenness, obtained possession of the holstered pistol of an officer while being taken to a magistrate, and the officer was shot in attempting to recover the pistol, the defendant was improperly found guilty of assault in the second degree since the intent to inflict bodily harm was lacking. People v Osinski, 281 N.Y. 129, 22 N.E.2d 311, 281 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 129, 1939 N.Y. LEXIS 989 (N.Y. 1939).

That part of § 242 which declares guilty of assault in second degree a person who "3. Wilfully and wrongfully wounds or inflicts grievous bodily harm upon another," requires specific intent to inflict grievous bodily harm and failure of trial judge to reiterate its necessity constitutes reversible error. People v Katz, 290 N.Y. 361, 49 N.E.2d 482, 290 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 361, 1943 N.Y. LEXIS 1089 (N.Y. 1943).

Where a defendant is charged with assault in the second degree and admits that he severely injured the complaining witness but insists that he was acting in self-defense, he can properly be convicted of the lesser offense of third-degree assault if the jury finds that, although he committed an assault, it was not intended to cause the degree of injury actually inflicted. People v Lindsey, 12 N.Y.2d 421, 240 N.Y.S.2d 441, 190 N.E.2d 904, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 1213 (N.Y. 1963).

To make out a prima facie case of "grievous bodily harm" under subdivision 3 by proof of injuries inflicted by defendant's fist, the injuries must be attributable to such blows, must be serious enough in themselves to constitute such harm apart from the subsequent drowning of the person assaulted, which is isolated from the assault, and must have been inflicted with the intent to cause such harm. People v Finn, 275 A.D. 65, 87 N.Y.S.2d 798, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3707 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

Criminal intent, united with an overt act concurring in point of time, is a necessary ingredient of the crime of assault in the second degree. People v Walrath, 279 A.D. 56, 108 N.Y.S.2d 54, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2862 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

Where the proof showed that a shot gun was discharged into the ground, the jury might have found that the element of intent referred to in this section was not present but that there was guilt of third degree assault nevertheless. A request to charge different degrees of the crime should have been granted to the extent of charging with respect to assault in the third degree. There was no error in refusing to grant the request to charge that there must be an intent to both wound and inflict grievous bodily harm. People v Hunter, 282 A.D. 722, 122 N.Y.S.2d 210, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4796 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

In a prosecution for assault in the second degree, the indictment charged in two counts: (1) assault with a sharp instrument and (2) felonious assault which inflicted grievous bodily harm. The charge arose out of an incident in a tavern where the defendant swung a glass of beer, missed one patron who received the contents of the glass, and struck plaintiff in face. Jury found defendant not guilty of first count. In its charge, the trial court touched on the element of intent but did not tell the jury that to convict for a second count it must find the defendant had intent to inflict grievous bodily harm. The trial court also failed to charge assault in the third degree. The conviction was reversed and a new trial was ordered. People v Ball, 283 A.D. 285, 127 N.Y.S.2d 371, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4666 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Conviction of an assault in the second degree under an indictment charging such assault by aiming a shotgun at complainants, with a threat to shoot, was reversed and a new trial ordered where the uncontradicted testimony of defendant indicated that the gun was unloaded and the court failed to charge that intent to commit an assault was a necessary element, as the jury would be entitled to find defendant guilty of assault in the third degree. People v Wood, 10 A.D.2d 231, 199 N.Y.S.2d 342, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10859 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

It was error for the trial court not to give a charge on third-degree assault where there was evidence that defendant was in an intoxicated condition at the time, although the indictment was for second-degree assault and defendant's assigned counsel did not request such an instruction, as the jury, under the circumstances, could have found that the element of intent was not present. People v Kent, 10 A.D.2d 662, 196 N.Y.S.2d 154, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11868 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1960).

Evidence that defendant kicked the deceased in the abdomen with such force as to rupture her liver, resulting in her death, is not sufficient to sustain a conviction under subd. 3 of this section without evidence that he intended to inflict "grievous bodily harm" on decedent, intent being an essential element of the crime of assault in the second degree. People v Hull, 12 A.D.2d 815, 209 N.Y.S.2d 917, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13124 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1961).

There was no basis for reversing a conviction of assault in the second degree where the verdict was not against the weight of the evidence and there were no exceptions to the judge's charge nor any request to add to the charge concerning the element of intent, notwithstanding criticism of the instructions to the jury by dissenting justices. People v Carter, 14 A.D.2d 492, 217 N.Y.S.2d 165, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9709 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1961), cert. denied, 368 U.S. 994, 82 S. Ct. 613, 7 L. Ed. 2d 531, 1962 U.S. LEXIS 1862 (U.S. 1962).

There is no such crime as an "attempt to commit manslaughter", as the crime of manslaughter involves no intent whereas an essential element of an attempt is intention to commit a specific crime. People v Brown, 21 A.D.2d 738, 249 N.Y.S.2d 922, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3824 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1964).

A charge of disorderly conduct based on cutting an officer's ear with a razor blade is not the same offense as a charge of felonious assault, as the latter requires proof of the additional fact of specific intent to inflict grievous bodily harm, and accordingly neither can be raised as involving jeopardy of the other. Covington v Supreme Court, 21 A.D.2d 822, 251 N.Y.S.2d 529, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3489 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1964), aff'd, 15 N.Y.2d 855, 257 N.Y.S.2d 962, 205 N.E.2d 880, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1540 (N.Y. 1965).

In a prosecution for first degree assault which resulted in a verdict of guilty of assault in the second degree, the evidence showed was that the defendant, operating a motor vehicle and accompanied by his 14-year-old son, pursued another vehicle operated by a man who had been keeping company with defendant's estranged wife, that the son had a firearm, and that the defendant said to him: "If you are going to shoot, fire now". The son testified that he then fired at the trunk of the other car, having no intention of killing but only meaning to scare the person driving it. On this evidence the conviction was reversed, the court saying that where the defendant fires the shot or otherwise commits an assault the necessary intent may be established by inference from the act itself but where the intent can be established only by inference from another fact which is not shown by direct evidence but must itself be derived from the existence of another event, the testimony is ordinarily too slight to permit the question to be submitted to the jury. And the court held that the finding of the jury that the defendant possessed the intent to kill or to do bodily harm would be no more than a surmise on the evidence presented, further stating that in the event of a new trial the court should charge the jury as to the crime of third degree assault. People v Walls, 24 A.D.2d 529, 261 N.Y.S.2d 447, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3836 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1965).

Where the defendant had been convicted under the above statute of assaulting a police officer engaged in the process of lawfully apprehending him, it was held that the requisite criminal intent was established. People v Gavin, 24 A.D.2d 656, 261 N.Y.S.2d 98, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3634 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Where defendant had been convicted under the above statute of assaulting a police officer engaged in the process of lawfully apprehending him, it was held that the case was submitted to the jury with a proper charge as to the burden on the People to prove both the commission of the assault and the existence of the necessary general and specific criminal intents involved in the crime charged. People v Gavin, 24 A.D.2d 656, 261 N.Y.S.2d 98, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3634 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Under subd 5 of the above statute it is not necessary to establish an intent to inflict grievous bodily harm but merely one to prevent a lawful arrest. People v Gavin, 24 A.D.2d 656, 261 N.Y.S.2d 98, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3634 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Assault may be committed within the meaning of §§ 242 and 244, notwithstanding the absence of intent to injure the person assaulted. People ex rel. Starvis v Rogers, 10 N.Y.S.2d 722, 170 Misc. 609, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1627 (N.Y. City Ct. 1939).

65. —What constitutes instrument or thing likely to produce bodily harm

A blackjack is an "instrument or thing likely to produce grievous bodily harm." People v Wagner, 245 N.Y. 143, 156 N.E. 644, 245 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 143, 1927 N.Y. LEXIS 601 (N.Y. 1927).

Evidence that a club with which the defendant struck his victim was a "weapon or other instrument or thing likely to produce grievous bodily harm" within subd. 4 and that it was used with the intention to inflict such harm, sustained a finding that the defendant was guilty of assault in the second degree. People v Rytel, 284 N.Y. 242, 30 N.E.2d 578, 284 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 242, 1940 N.Y. LEXIS 851 (N.Y. 1940).

An indictment is sufficient to charge an offense under subd. 3 of this section where it charges that defendant assaulted another by willfully and wrongfully wounding and inflicting grievous bodily harm upon him with a dangerous weapon, to wit: "A post hole digger," as, whether or not a post hole digger is a "weapon", use of a weapon is not necessary to constitute the crime charged. People v Polsinelli, 14 A.D.2d 470, 217 N.Y.S.2d 362, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9788 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Under statute making it an assault second degree to wilfully and wrongfully assault another by the use of a weapon, or other instrument or thing likely to produce grievous bodily harm, court held that hands are not such "instruments". People v Moody, 129 N.Y.S.2d 722, 205 Misc. 514, 1954 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3214 (N.Y. County Ct. 1954).

66. —Resisting arrest

An order which dismissed a charge brought under § 242(5) of the Penal Law was reversed, where the arrest warrants were valid on their face, although later proven to be based upon insufficient evidence. People v Briggs, 19 N.Y.2d 37, 277 N.Y.S.2d 662, 224 N.E.2d 93, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 886 (N.Y. 1966).

In the trial of an indictment for assault upon police officers allegedly made to prevent arrest, the court erred when it failed to charge the jury that an officer had no right to make an arrest without a warrant for a misdemeanor unless the person arrested had actually committed the offense charged in the officer's presence and that it was the arresting officer's duty to inform the person arrested of the "cause of the arrest". People v Dority, 282 A.D. 995, 125 N.Y.S.2d 526, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5644 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

A resistance to an unlawful arrest is not assault in any degree. Thus, where officer attempted to arrest defendant without informing him of the cause of the arrest and without a warrant defendant's resistance did not constitute an assault in any degree. People v Daniels, 285 A.D. 619, 139 N.Y.S.2d 597, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5553 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

Where an assault charge was based on resisting arrest by a state trooper for disorderly conduct at a dance hall, and the evidence showed that the disorderly conduct, if any, was not committed in the officer's presence and that he had no warrant for arrest, it was insufficient to sustain a conviction of second-degree assault and the court likewise committed reversible error in refusing to charge the jury, as requested, that the officer could not legally make an arrest for such an offense without a warrant unless it was committed in his presence. People v Pitcher, 9 A.D.2d 1016, 194 N.Y.S.2d 337, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5427 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1959).

A conviction of assault, second degree, under subd 5 of this section, could not be sustained where it merely appeared that the assault took place when patrolmen were attempting to arrest defendant for addressing vile and insulting language to one of them, as such conduct by defendant did not constitute ground for arrest. People v Vest, 11 A.D.2d 1080, 206 N.Y.S.2d 471, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7620 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1960).

Conviction of defendants for assault in the second degree with intent to prevent and resist lawful apprehension could not be sustained where the court charged that the officer's right to make the arrest depended upon a finding that defendants had committed a "breach of the peace," and the evidence did not establish beyond a reasonable doubt that their conduct was such that a breach of the peace was imminent, intended, or might reasonably be expected. People v Lewis, 13 A.D.2d 714, 213 N.Y.S.2d 861, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11574 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1961).

Conviction of defendant for assault second degree required reversal and a new trial where there was a serious question as to whether arrest of defendant by a police officer, which defendant resisted and out of which the assault charge grew, was lawful and authorized, but the judge failed to instruct the jury concerning lawful and unlawful arrests and the right to resist unlawful arrest, failed to instruct concerning the elements of assault except for bare reading of the statute, gave misleading and harmful instructions by reading subds. 2 and 3 of § 244 to the jury, having no proper application to the charge, and there were likewise certain other defects in the charge and circumstances rendering some of the prosecution's testimony incredible. People v McCutcheon, 14 A.D.2d 482, 217 N.Y.S.2d 973, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9864 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1961).

In a prosecution for assault second degree, the assault consisting of resisting arrest by a police officer, wherein the arresting officer claimed that the right to arrest arose from the manner in which defendant drove a stolen car, subds. 2 and 3 of § 244 had no possible bearing upon the crime charged and conduct of the trial judge in reading them to the jury was particularly harmful and misleading. People v McCutcheon, 14 A.D.2d 482, 217 N.Y.S.2d 973, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9864 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1961).

The evidence was sufficient to sustain a charge of second degree assault under subd. 5 of this section where it clearly appeared that defendant ran through a road block set up by police after they saw him in the act of driving across a double white line on the pavement, tried to arrest him, but he evaded them because of fear of another arrest for driving without a driver's license and deliberately ran through the road block, notwithstanding flashing signals, causing an officer at that point to jump out of his way to avoid injury. People v Knapp, 17 A.D.2d 65, 231 N.Y.S.2d 341, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8464 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

67. —Indictments, lesser offenses and the like

Defendants were indicted by a grand jury in a long-form indictment for the single account of assault 2nd. But during the course of their trial, new count of assault 3rd was added by the trial court on its own order. And the court directed a verdict of not guilty on the assault 2nd count. But defendants were convicted of assault 3rd. Held: the trial court did not have the inherent or statutory authority to amend the long-form indictment. Judgment of conviction reversed and indictment dismissed. People v Kuehn, 5 A.D.2d 516, 173 N.Y.S.2d 366, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6034 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1958).

Where an indictment for assault did not charge that defendants had inflicted grievous bodily harm on an officer attempting to arrest them for breach of the peace, or had used a weapon likely to cause such harm, their use of excessive force in self defense would have at most warranted conviction for assault in the third, not the second, degree. People v Lewis, 13 A.D.2d 714, 213 N.Y.S.2d 861, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11574 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1961).

An indictment is insufficient to charge an offense under subd. 4 of this section where it fails to allege that defendant "willfully and wrongfully" assaulted the person in question. People v Polsinelli, 14 A.D.2d 470, 217 N.Y.S.2d 362, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9788 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Although the evidence is insufficient to establish specific intent to commit a felony and will not sustain a conviction for assault second degree, it may be sufficient to sustain conviction for third degree assault. People v Kay, 17 A.D.2d 773, 232 N.Y.S.2d 293, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7934 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1962).

Where a defendant has been indicted for criminal negligence in the operation of a motor vehicle resulting in death under former Penal Law § 1053-a a court does not have jurisdiction to accept his plea of guilty to assault in the second degree under the above statute since such assault is not a crime of lesser degree than that charged in the indictment, the punishment prescribed for it in Penal Law § 243 is not less than that prescribed for such negligence by Criminal Law § 1053-b, and the only authority to accept such a plea is Criminal Code § 342-a authorizing such action where the plea is to a crime for a lesser degree or one for which a lesser punishment is prescribed than the crime or offense charged. People v Maxwell, 23 A.D.2d 700, 258 N.Y.S.2d 220, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4589 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1965).

Where grand jury had jurisdiction in first instance of defendant, charged with assault in second degree under this section, which crime is felony, grand jury had right to indict defendant for assault in third degree, misdemeanor if in its wisdom there was insufficient evidence to hold defendant for assault in second degree. People v Cooper, 286 N.Y.S. 961, 158 Misc. 419, 1936 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1054 (N.Y. County Ct. 1936).

Where an indictment contained no statement of previous conviction, and sentence imposed increased punishment, the conviction was not void but the accused was entitled only to be resentenced. People ex rel. Donato v Foster, 57 N.Y.S.2d 737, 1945 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2330 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1945).

68. —Assault as involving moral turpitude

Record of conviction under this section without specification of the offense committed was not sufficient to warrant deportation since not all of offenses under that section involve moral turpitude. United States ex rel. Zaffarano v Corsi, 63 F.2d 757, 1933 U.S. App. LEXIS 3552, 1933 U.S. App. LEXIS 3553 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1933).

Provisions of this section do not necessarily involve crime of moral turpitude. United States ex rel. Valenti v Karmuth, 1 F. Supp. 370, 1932 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1741 (D.N.Y. 1932).

69. —Effect of laws of other jurisdictions

Relator was properly sentenced as a second felony offender where he was previously convicted by a United States Military court martial of a violation of the 93rd Article of War, the specifications under such charge being assault with intent to do bodily harm accomplished by cutting his victim on the head with a dangerous instrument, to wit, a knife. People ex rel. Fajen v Fay, 8 A.D.2d 745, 187 N.Y.S.2d 430, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8468 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1959).

An information reciting that defendant had previously been convicted in Pennsylvania of the crime of aggravated assault and battery by automobile does not charge a felony in New York, within the requirements of § 1941. People v Stovali, 15 N.Y.S.2d 498, 172 Misc. 469, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2419 (N.Y. County Ct. 1939).

An act which gave rise to a court-martial and which consisted of an assault by the defendant upon his jail keeper, tying and binding him and escaping lawful confinement, constituted an assault with intent to avoid legal detention and was a felony under this section, but where the Navy statute defining the crime provided punishment for a person who "quarrels with, strikes, or assaults, or uses provoking or reproachful words, gestures, or menaces toward, any person in the Navy," such section would not constitute a felony under New York law but simply the misdemeanor of assault in the third degree and the defendant was improperly sentenced as a second felony offender. People v McDowell, 105 N.Y.S.2d 971, 200 Misc. 46, 1951 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1986 (N.Y. Gen. Sess. 1951).

Conviction of defendant in Virginia upon a plea of guilty to shooting, stabbing, or wounding another person with intent to maim or disfigure him, but without malice, was for an offense comparable to subd. 4 of this section and accordingly for felony, subjecting him to sentence as a multiple felony offender. People v Burnette, 38 Misc. 2d 572, 235 N.Y.S.2d 948, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2096 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

Both a North Carolina conviction for assault with a dangerous weapon with intent to kill, and a Pennsylvania conviction for aggravated assault would, under the statutes of those states defining the offense in question, constitute felonies under New York law. People v Bryant, 226 N.Y.S.2d 78 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

70. —Family Court jurisdiction

Second degree assault case wherein wife lived in Ohio and husband in Pennsylvania was not for Family Court whose jurisdiction extends only within boundaries of New York and conciliation procedures contemplated under Family Court Act could not be utilized because of distances involved and lack of jurisdiction. Parrett v Parrett, 46 Misc. 2d 573, 260 N.Y.S.2d 382, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1812 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. 1965).

The application of a defendant charged with felonious assault to transfer the matter to the Family Court was properly granted, where the defendant and prosecuting witness shared the same apartment and held themselves out to be man and wife, although they had never legally been married. People v Johnson, 48 Misc. 2d 536, 265 N.Y.S.2d 260, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1423 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1965).

71. —Other applications

A defendant who is pointing a rifle at another in a threatening manner, with intent to injure him if he fails to comply with the defendant's demands, is guilty of assault in the second degree, and, if a third person is killed while the assault is continuing, the defendant is guilty of murder in the first degree. People v Luscomb, 292 N.Y. 390, 55 N.E.2d 469, 292 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 390, 1944 N.Y. LEXIS 1354 (N.Y. 1944).

Evidence that complainant had suffered a number of "lacerated, jagged, and bleeding" wounds which confined him to his room for several weeks as the result of an attack by three persons acting in concert is sufficient to sustain a conviction under this section. People v Potskowski, 298 N.Y. 299, 83 N.E.2d 125, 298 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 299, 1948 N.Y. LEXIS 787 (N.Y. 1948).

Defendant cannot be convicted of assault in second degree, under subd. 3 of this section where proof is that, having no weapon, he merely struck complainant without wounding him, or causing blood to flow, or breaking skin, or causing any injury, or that severe pain was inflicted. People v Fein, 162 A.D. 765, 147 N.Y.S. 966, 1914 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9328 (N.Y. App. Div. 1914).

The mere presence of the defendant near the scene of the crime is not enough to sustain a conviction of assault in the second degree. People v Millet, 275 A.D. 1060, 92 N.Y.S.2d 153, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5807 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

As the assaults for which the defendant was sentenced were punishable as second degree assaults only because of the use of the revolver, he could not be punished for possession of the revolver by the imposition of sentence to run consecutively with the assault sentences. People v Romero, 41 A.D.2d 744, 341 N.Y.S.2d 245, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4982 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1973).

Evidence of conviction of defendant's employees of third degree assault in violation of former Penal L § 244 in connection with incident out of which wrongful death action occurred was not conclusive of defendant employer's liability for unlawfully causing decedent's death. Brereton v McEvoy, 44 A.D.2d 594, 353 N.Y.S.2d 512, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5381 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1974).

One who threatens with a loaded revolver an officer seeking to serve process, who was not attempting a forcible entry, was guilty of an assault. People ex rel. Paul v Warden of City Prison, 74 N.Y.S.2d 438, 190 Misc. 528, 1947 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3257 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1947).

Evidence, though circumstantial, convincingly established beyond reasonable doubt that each of the alleged victims was calculatedly wounded by intentional discharge of a firearm held in defendant's hands and deliberately aimed at them, although no one actually saw the gun and could identify it as a sawed-off rifle, as alleged. People v Alexander, 42 Misc. 2d 927, 249 N.Y.S.2d 275, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1822 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1964), aff'd, 24 A.D.2d 934, 264 N.Y.S.2d 1010, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6346 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1965).

72. Under former § 243

Within the limits fixed by former §§ 243 and 245 the appellate division has plenary discretion as to the punishment that should be meted out and the exercise of that discretion is not subject to review by the court of appeals, except that where that court finds error in the classification of the crime it may remit the case to the appellate division for a reconsideration of the appropriate sentence. People v Rytel, 284 N.Y. 242, 30 N.E.2d 578, 284 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 242, 1940 N.Y. LEXIS 851 (N.Y. 1940).

Assault in the second degree is a felony. People v Katz, 290 N.Y. 361, 49 N.E.2d 482, 290 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 361, 1943 N.Y. LEXIS 1089 (N.Y. 1943).

While the offense of assault second degree may be punished by imprisonment in the state prison under this section, and former § 2182 sub 2 of the Penal Law provides that should imprisonment in state prison be ordered the minimum term of such imprisonment shall be one year, no minimum term is set forth in this section so that the Appellate Division on appeal may reduce a sentence of one year and three months to two and a half years imposed by the trial court to not less than one year. People v Potskowski, 298 N.Y. 299, 83 N.E.2d 125, 298 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 299, 1948 N.Y. LEXIS 787 (N.Y. 1948).

The provision of this section as to the term of imprisonment applies only to the term of absolute imprisonment, which the defendant must necessarily undergo, and not to imprisonment, to which he is subjected as a means to compel him to pay the fine. People ex rel. Gately v Sage, 13 A.D. 135, 43 N.Y.S. 372, 1897 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 41 (N.Y. App. Div. 1897).

The punishment provided determines whether the offense is a felony. People v Stacy, 119 A.D. 743, 104 N.Y.S. 615, 1907 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3239 (N.Y. App. Div. 1907), aff'd, 192 N.Y. 577, 85 N.E. 1114, 192 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 577, 1908 N.Y. LEXIS 995 (N.Y. 1908).

Where law, at time relator committed assault, made maximum sentence five years and minimum three and one-half years, including all commutation to which he would have been entitled, he cannot complain, when he was subsequently sentenced, after suspended sentence, under Parole Commission Law, that latter was ex post facto as to him, for maximum sentence under latter act is three years, and there is no limit to minimum which rests in discretion of commissioners. People ex rel. Liebowitz Warden, 186 A.D. 730, 174 N.Y.S. 823, 1919 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5906 (N.Y. App. Div. 1919).

Defendant convicted on both counts of an indictment, one for assault in second degree and other for carrying dangerous weapon cannot be punished as second offender under second count where only record of previous offense was his conviction on first count. People ex rel. Smith v Martin, 264 A.D. 976, 37 N.Y.S.2d 236, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5596 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

Where a defendant has been indicted for criminal negligence in the operation of a motor vehicle resulting in death under former Penal Law § 1053-a, a court does not have jurisdiction to accept his plea of guilty to assault in the second degree under Penal Law § 242 since such assault is not a crime of lesser degree than that charged in the indictment, the punishment prescribed for it in the above statute is not less than that prescribed for such negligence by Criminal Law § 1053-b, and the only authority to accept such a plea is Criminal Code § 342-a authorizing such action where the plea is to a crime of a lesser degree or one for which a lesser punishment is prescribed than the crime or offense charged. People v Maxwell, 23 A.D.2d 700, 258 N.Y.S.2d 220, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4589 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1965).

The absence of any provision for a hearing prior to the imposition of a one day to life sentence under former Penal Law § 243 does not violate the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment of the United States Constitution. People ex rel. Smith v La Vallee, 29 A.D.2d 248, 287 N.Y.S.2d 601, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4661 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1968).

Where an indictment contained no statement of previous conviction, and sentence imposed increased punishment, the conviction was not void but the accused was entitled only to be resentenced. People ex rel. Donato v Foster, 57 N.Y.S.2d 737, 1945 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2330 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1945).

Testimony of 2 psychiatrists, based upon a single 45-minute interview, that defendant had committed two sex offenses separated by an interval of 10 years, that he was less likely to commit sex offenses of a heterosexual character if he were kept away from females than if he were not, and that there was a possibility that he might benefit from treatment of an undescribed sort was not the type of clear, unequivocal, and convincing evidence necessary to support a court's determination that the defendant was a danger to society or was capable of being benefitted by the indeterminate one day to life sentence envisaged under former Penal Law § 243. Hollis v Smith, 571 F.2d 685, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 13021, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 13215 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1978).

Defendant convicted of assault in the second degree with intent to commit rape was neither entitled to representation by counsel nor to a jury trial at a post-conviction examination by psychiatrists required by statute prior to the imposition of an indeterminate one day to life sentence. Hollis v Smith, 571 F.2d 685, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 13021, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 13215 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1978).

Psychiatric examination of defendant convicted of assault in the second degree with intent to commit rape did not violate defendant's right against self-incrimination. Hollis v Smith, 571 F.2d 685, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 13021, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 13215 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1978).

As a second felony offender, petitioner was required to receive a minimum mandatory sentence; although if sentenced as a first felony offender, he would not have been required to receive a minimum mandatory sentence. Therefore, petitioner's application for a writ of habeas corpus in connection with a prior prison sentence which he had already served was properly before the Federal District Court. United States ex rel. Williams v Warden of Sing Sing Prison, 274 F. Supp. 597, 1967 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8141 (S.D.N.Y. 1967), aff'd, 389 F.2d 1002, 1968 U.S. App. LEXIS 8398 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1968).

73. Under former § 1752

An information that defendant illegally possessed "a narcotic drug" without alleging what drug, is sufficient. People v Lee Foon, 275 N.Y. 229, 9 N.E.2d 847, 275 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 229, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1420 (N.Y. 1937).

A court was without jurisdiction to impose sentence under this section for an offense committed under former repealed § 1746. People v Quartararo, 133 N.Y.S. 985, 76 Misc. 55, 1912 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 755 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1912).

I. In General

1. Felony assault

Unpublished decision: Because, at sentencing, appellant did not object to the presentence investigation report's statement of fact that he pulled out a handgun and shot the victim in the foot, the district court did not clearly err in finding that appellant shot the victim and thus committed a second-degree felony assault under N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(2). United States v Anderson, 339 Fed. Appx. 906, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 16951 (11th Cir. 2009).

HOMICIDE AND RELATED OFFENSES

HISTORY:

Add, L 1965, ch 1030, eff Sept 1, 1967; L 2019, ch 1, § 5, effective January 22, 2019.

§ 125.26. Aggravated murder

A person is guilty of aggravated murder when:

1. With intent to cause the death of another person, he or she causes the death of such person, or of a third person who was a person described in subparagraph (i), (ii), (ii-a) or (iii) of paragraph (a) of this subdivision engaged at the time of the killing in the course of performing his or her official duties; and

(a) Either:

(i) the intended victim was a police officer as defined in subdivision thirty-four of section 1.20 of the criminal procedure law who was at the time of the killing engaged in the course of performing his or her official duties, and the defendant knew or reasonably should have known that the victim was a police officer; or

(ii) the intended victim was a peace officer as defined in paragraph a of subdivision twenty-one, subdivision twenty-three, twenty-four or sixty-two (employees of the division for youth) of section 2.10 of the criminal procedure law who was at the time of the killing engaged in the course of performing his or her official duties, and the defendant knew or reasonably should have known that the victim was such a uniformed court officer, parole officer, probation officer, or employee of the division for youth; or

(ii-a) the intended victim was a firefighter, emergency medical technician, ambulance driver, paramedic, physician or registered nurse involved in a first response team, or any other individual who, in the course of official duties, performs emergency response activities and was engaged in such activities at the time of killing and the defendant knew or reasonably should have known that the intended victim was such firefighter, emergency medical technician, ambulance driver, paramedic, physician or registered nurse; or

(iii) the intended victim was an employee of a state correctional institution or was an employee of a local correctional facility as defined in subdivision two of section forty of the correction law, who was at the time of the killing engaged in the course of performing his or her official duties, and the defendant knew or reasonably should have known that the victim was an employee of a state correctional institution or a local correctional facility; and

(b) The defendant was more than eighteen years old at the time of the commission of the crime; or

2. (a) With intent to cause the death of a person less than fourteen years old, he or she causes the death of such person, and the defendant acted in an especially cruel and wanton manner pursuant to a course of conduct intended to inflict and inflicting torture upon the victim prior to the victim's death.

As used in this subdivision, "torture" means the intentional and depraved infliction of extreme physical pain that is separate and apart from the pain which otherwise would have been associated with such cause of death; and

(b) The defendant was more than eighteen years old at the time of the commission of the crime.

3. In any prosecution under subdivision one or two of this section, it is an affirmative defense that:

(a)

(i) The defendant acted under the influence of extreme emotional disturbance for which there was a reasonable explanation or excuse, the reasonableness of which is to be determined from the viewpoint of a person in the defendant's situation under the circumstances as the defendant believed them to be. Nothing contained in this paragraph shall constitute a defense to a prosecution for, or preclude a conviction of, aggravated manslaughter in the first degree, manslaughter in the first degree or any other crime except murder in the second degree. (ii) It shall not be a "reasonable explanation or excuse" pursuant to subparagraph (i) of this paragraph when the defendant's conduct resulted from the discovery, knowledge or disclosure of the victim's sexual orientation, sex, gender, gender identity, gender expression or sex assigned at birth; or

(b) The defendant's conduct consisted of causing or aiding, without the use of duress or deception, another person to commit suicide. Nothing contained in this paragraph shall constitute a defense to a prosecution for, or preclude a conviction of, aggravated manslaughter in the second degree, manslaughter in the second degree or any other crime except murder in the second degree.

Aggravated murder is a class A-I felony.

§ 125.27. Murder in the first degree

A person is guilty of murder in the first degree when:

1. With intent to cause the death of another person, he causes the death of such person or of a third person; and

(a) Either:

(i) the intended victim was a police officer as defined in subdivision 34 of section 1.20 of the criminal procedure law who was at the time of the killing engaged in the course of performing his official duties, and the defendant knew or reasonably should have known that the intended victim was a police officer; or

(ii) the intended victim was a peace officer as defined in paragraph a of subdivision twenty-one, subdivision twenty-three, twenty-four or sixty-two (employees of the division for youth) of section 2.10 of the criminal procedure law who was at the time of the killing engaged in the course of performing his official duties, and the defendant knew or reasonably should have known that the intended victim was such a uniformed court officer, parole officer, probation officer, or employee of the division for youth; or

(ii-a) the intended victim was a firefighter, emergency medical technician, ambulance driver, paramedic, physician or registered nurse involved in a first response team, or any other individual who, in the course of official duties, performs emergency response activities and was engaged in such activities at the time of killing and the defendant knew or reasonably should have known that the intended victim was such firefighter, emergency medical technician, ambulance driver, paramedic, physician or registered nurse; or

(iii) the intended victim was an employee of a state correctional institution or was an employee of a local correctional facility as defined in subdivision two of section forty of the correction law, who was at the time of the killing engaged in the course of performing his official duties, and the defendant knew or reasonably should have known that the intended victim was an employee of a state correctional institution or a local correctional facility; or

(iv) at the time of the commission of the killing, the defendant was confined in a state correctional institution or was otherwise in custody upon a sentence for the term of his natural life, or upon a sentence commuted to one of natural life, or upon a sentence for an indeterminate term the minimum of which was at least fifteen years and the maximum of which was natural life, or at the time of the commission of the killing, the defendant had escaped from such confinement or custody while serving such a sentence and had not yet been returned to such confinement or custody; or

(v) the intended victim was a witness to a crime committed on a prior occasion and the death was caused for the purpose of preventing the intended victim's testimony in any criminal action or proceeding whether or not such action or proceeding had been commenced, or the intended victim had previously testified in a criminal action or proceeding and the killing was committed for the purpose of exacting retribution for such prior testimony, or the intended victim was an immediate family member of a witness to a crime committed on a prior occasion and the killing was committed for the purpose of preventing or influencing the testimony of such witness, or the intended victim was an immediate family member of a witness who had previously testified in a criminal action or proceeding and the killing was committed for the purpose of exacting retribution upon such witness for such prior testimony. As used in this subparagraph "immediate family member" means a husband, wife, father, mother, daughter, son, brother, sister, stepparent, grandparent, stepchild or grandchild; or

(vi) the defendant committed the killing or procured commission of the killing pursuant to an agreement with a person other than the intended victim to commit the same for the receipt, or in expectation of the receipt, of anything of pecuniary value from a party to the agreement or from a person other than the intended victim acting at the direction of a party to such agreement; or

(vii) the victim was killed while the defendant was in the course of committing or attempting to commit and in furtherance of robbery, burglary in the first degree or second degree, kidnapping in the first degree, arson in the first degree or second degree, rape in the first degree, criminal sexual act in the first degree, sexual abuse in the first degree, aggravated sexual abuse in the first degree or escape in the first degree, or in the course of and furtherance of immediate flight after committing or attempting to commit any such crime or in the course of and furtherance of immediate flight after attempting to commit the crime of murder in the second degree; provided however, the victim is not a participant in one of the aforementioned crimes and, provided further that, unless the defendant's criminal liability under this subparagraph is based upon the defendant having commanded another person to cause the death of the victim or intended victim pursuant to section 20.00 of this chapter, this subparagraph shall not apply where the defendant's criminal liability is based upon the conduct of another pursuant to section 20.00 of this chapter; or

(viii) as part of the same criminal transaction, the defendant, with intent to cause serious physical injury to or the death of an additional person or persons, causes the death of an additional person or persons; provided, however, the victim is not a participant in the criminal transaction; or

(ix) prior to committing the killing, the defendant had been convicted of murder as defined in this section or section 125.25 of this article, or had been convicted in another jurisdiction of an offense which, if committed in this state, would constitute a violation of either of such sections; or

(x) the defendant acted in an especially cruel and wanton manner pursuant to a course of conduct intended to inflict and inflicting torture upon the victim prior to the victim's death. As used in this subparagraph, "torture" means the intentional and depraved infliction of extreme physical pain; "depraved" means the defendant relished the infliction of extreme physical pain upon the victim evidencing debasement or perversion or that the defendant evidenced a sense of pleasure in the infliction of extreme physical pain; or

(xi) the defendant intentionally caused the death of two or more additional persons within the state in separate criminal transactions within a period of twenty-four months when committed in a similar fashion or pursuant to a common scheme or plan; or

(xii) the intended victim was a judge as defined in subdivision twenty-three of section 1.20 of the criminal procedure law and the defendant killed such victim because such victim was, at the time of the killing, a judge; or

(xiii) the victim was killed in furtherance of an act of terrorism, as defined in paragraph (b) of subdivision one of section 490.05 of this chapter; and

(b) The defendant was more than eighteen years old at the time of the commission of the crime.

2. In any prosecution under subdivision one, it is an affirmative defense that:

(a) (i) The defendant acted under the influence of extreme emotional disturbance for which there was a reasonable explanation or excuse, the reasonableness of which is to be determined from the viewpoint of a person in the defendant's situation under the circumstances as the defendant believed them to be. Nothing contained in this paragraph shall constitute a defense to a prosecution for, or preclude a conviction of, manslaughter in the first degree or any other crime except murder in the second degree. (ii) It shall not be a "reasonable explanation or excuse" pursuant to subparagraph (i) of this paragraph when the defendant's conduct resulted from the discovery, knowledge or disclosure of the victim's sexual orientation, sex, gender, gender identity, gender expression or sex assigned at birth; or

(b) The defendant's conduct consisted of causing or aiding, without the use of duress or deception, another person to commit suicide. Nothing contained in this paragraph shall constitute a defense to a prosecution for, or preclude a conviction of, manslaughter in the second degree or any other crime except murder in the second degree.

1. In general

While the facts support a conviction of the crime of murder in the second degree, proof of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt as to all of the elements of the crime of murder in the first degree is not made out by a showing that defendant killed a policeman who asserted that he was an officer when restrained by defendant from leaving a supermarket on his way to report for duty, since there continues to be doubt concerning whether the victim was acting in the line of duty when he was killed, which is one of the elements of murder in the first degree as specified by the Legislature. People v Davis, 43 N.Y.2d 17, 400 N.Y.S.2d 735, 371 N.E.2d 456, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 2434 (N.Y. 1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 998, 98 S. Ct. 1653, 56 L. Ed. 2d 88, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 1645 (U.S. 1978), cert. denied, 438 U.S. 914, 98 S. Ct. 3143, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1160, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2435 (U.S. 1978).

There is proof beyond a reasonable doubt of guilt of murder in the first degree by a defendant who, while attempting to escape custody, shot a corrections officer, and defendant, accordingly, comes within New York's death penalty statute which provides a mandatory death sentence for all persons over 18 years of age found to have intentionally caused the death of a police officer or a State or local corrections facility officer in the line of duty, where defendant knew or had reason to know the victim was such an officer or employee, or caused the death of anyone if defendant was confined or in custody for a life term or upon an indeterminate sentence with a maximum of life and a minimum of at least 15 years or if defendant had escaped from such confinement or custody and had not yet been returned. People v Davis, 43 N.Y.2d 17, 400 N.Y.S.2d 735, 371 N.E.2d 456, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 2434 (N.Y. 1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 998, 98 S. Ct. 1653, 56 L. Ed. 2d 88, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 1645 (U.S. 1978), cert. denied, 438 U.S. 914, 98 S. Ct. 3143, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1160, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2435 (U.S. 1978).

Defendant's conviction for first degree murder under Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(iii), based on his killing of a corrections officer while he was serving an indeterminate sentence of from 25 years to life, was supported by proof beyond a reasonable doubt where the evidence linked defendant to a bite mark on the correction officer's body, and the remaining circumstantial evidence established that defendant had had both the opportunity, and access to the materials, for killing the corrections officer and disposing of her body. People v Smith, 63 N.Y.2d 41, 479 N.Y.S.2d 706, 468 N.E.2d 879, 1984 N.Y. LEXIS 4533 (N.Y. 1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1227, 105 S. Ct. 1226, 84 L. Ed. 2d 364, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 1107 (U.S. 1985).

Second prong of exception under CLS CPL § 40.20(2)(b) did not prohibit prosecution of defendants for attempted murder under CLS Penal §§ 110.00 and 125.27(1)(A)(i) and knowing possession of defaced firearms under CLS Penal § 265.02(3) following federal prosecution arising from same criminal transaction, because kinds of harm or evil sought to be regulated under federal and state statutes were "very different" in that purpose of federal crimes for which defendants were charged (bank robbery under 18 USCS §§ 2113(a) and (d), using and possessing firearms under 18 USCS § 924(c), and conspiracy under 18 USCS § 371) was protection of financial institutions in which government has interest and deterrence of use of weapons in connection with crimes against such institutions, while state weapons offense committed by defendants was intended to curtail availability of defaced firearms which prevent detection of crime, and state homicide offense focused exclusively on prevention of killing police officers. People v Bryant, 92 N.Y.2d 216, 677 N.Y.S.2d 286, 699 N.E.2d 910, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 2151 (N.Y. 1998).

Phrase "committed in a similar fashion" pursuant to CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(xi) does not have well-settled legal meaning in New York jurisprudence, and thus Court of Appeals could not provide more definite resolution of nature of "similarity" beyond determination of facts presented in defendant's particular case. People v Mateo, 93 N.Y.2d 327, 690 N.Y.S.2d 527, 712 N.E.2d 692, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1140 (N.Y. 1999).

In context of accomplice-liability aggravating factor which can elevate murder to first degree rank, word "command" has commonly accepted meaning (i.e., to direct authoritatively) and is not impermissibly vague. People v Couser, 94 N.Y.2d 631, 709 N.Y.S.2d 155, 730 N.E.2d 953, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 887 (N.Y. 2000).

Capital defendant does not have unqualified right to plead guilty to entire indictment until deliberative process has been completed, either by filing of death penalty notice, announcement of intention not to seek death penalty, or expiration of statutory period for district attorney to deliberate on that decision under CLS CPL § 250.40; to extent that CLS CPL §§ 220.10(2) and 220.60(2) conflict with § 250.40, § 250.40 prevails. Francois v Dolan, 95 N.Y.2d 33, 709 N.Y.S.2d 898, 731 N.E.2d 614, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 908 (N.Y. 2000).

Invalidation of plea provisions of death penalty statute (CLS CPL § 220.10(5)(e) and CLS CPL § 220.30(3)(b)(vii)) did not eliminate statutory authorization to sentence defendant to life in prison without possibility of parole, where defendant pleaded guilty to first degree murder on last day for People to file CLS CPL § 250.40 notice of intent to seek death penalty, without ever facing death penalty, and thus court's sentencing authority was derived from CLS CPL § 400.27(1), not from invalidated plea provisions. People v Mower, 97 N.Y.2d 239, 739 N.Y.S.2d 343, 765 N.E.2d 839, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 183 (N.Y. 2002).

Statutory term of art "criminal transaction" in N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(viii) should be construed as incorporating the technical definition given the phrase in N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 40.10(2) and, as a result, the definition of "criminal transaction" means that first-degree murder liability attaches when a defendant intends to kill one person but kills another contemporaneously. People v Duggins, 3 N.Y.3d 522, 788 N.Y.S.2d 638, 821 N.E.2d 942, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 3730 (N.Y. 2004).

Defendant's sentences for two counts of first degree murder had to be served concurrently under Penal Law § 70.25(2) where the actus reus under Penal Law § 125.27(a)(a)(viii) and (b) was that the defendant intentionally murdered one victim and caused the death of another, with the intent of causing either death or serious physical injury to the second victim, it was the same murder that formed the basis for each offense, and thus, both offenses were committed through a single actus reus. People v Rosas, 8 N.Y.3d 493, 836 N.Y.S.2d 518, 868 N.E.2d 199, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 991 (N.Y. 2007).

Consecutive sentences for defendant's convictions of first degree murder N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(viii), and second degree criminal possession of a weapon, N.Y. Penal Law § 265.03(2), were prohibited by N.Y. Penal Law § 70.25(2) because the offense of possessing a gun with unlawful intent was only completed upon defendant's commission of the ensuing substantive crime of shooting the victims; in weapons possession cases, to determine whether a single act constituted both offenses under prong one of § 70.25(2), courts look to when the crime of possession-necessarily encompassing both actus reus and mens rea elements-was completed. Only where the act of possession is accomplished before the commission of the ensuing crime and with a mental state that both satisfies the statutory mens rea element and is discrete from that of the underlying crime may consecutive sentences be imposed. People v Wright, 19 N.Y.3d 359, 948 N.Y.S.2d 228, 971 N.E.2d 358, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 1284 (N.Y. 2012).

Where defendant was indicted for murder in the first degree on charges involving separate, unrelated homicides, and pleaded guilty to manslaughter in first degree in each case, and court thereafter refused to accept pleas on ground that there was no admission to murder, it would have been appropriate for court to have afforded defendant option of withdrawing pleas, in view of possible defense of self-defense or, if court on basis of original and supplemental probation report concluded that "promised" sentence of three to nine years incarceration was inadequate, to have given defendant alternative of either withdrawing his pleas and standing trial or allowing pleas to remain if he was willing to accept sentence other than "promised." Fernandez v Silbowitz, 59 A.D.2d 837, 398 N.Y.S.2d 896, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13979 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1977).

Because the first degree murder statute under which defendant was convicted is invalid, his conviction on such charge would be modified to one of murder in the second degree, and the case would be remitted for resentencing on that count pursuant to CPL § 470.20(4). People v Alston, 104 A.D.2d 653, 480 N.Y.S.2d 115, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 20069 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1984).

Defendant charged with first degree murder had absolute right to nonjury trial under CLS NY Const Art I § 2, despite language of CLS CPL § 320.10 purporting to preclude waiver of jury trial where indictment charges first degree murder; language in question was added in 1974 to comport with newly-enacted mandatory death penalty statute (CLS Penal § 60.06), and was no longer controlling in light of Court of Appeals' intervening holding that death penalty statute was unconstitutional. People v Swan, 130 A.D.2d 6, 519 N.Y.S.2d 581, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 45059 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 804, 522 N.Y.S.2d 122, 516 N.E.2d 1235, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19561 (N.Y. 1987), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 878, 523 N.Y.S.2d 505, 518 N.E.2d 16, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19232 (N.Y. 1987).

First degree murder conviction did not require vacation merely because death penalty statute (CLS Penal § 60.06) was declared unconstitutional, since crime of first degree murder has not been so declared. People v Edgehill, 130 A.D.2d 761, 516 N.Y.S.2d 55, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 46780 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Consecutive sentences were properly imposed for each of 3 counts of attempted first degree murder where, during confrontation with police, defendant pointed his gun at each of 3 officers and either fired or misfired his gun; evidence established that defendant committed separate acts against separate victims, and consecutive sentences were within discretion of court. People v Danielson, 184 A.D.2d 723, 585 N.Y.S.2d 78, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8540 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 80 N.Y.2d 928, 589 N.Y.S.2d 856, 603 N.E.2d 961, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 4030 (N.Y. 1992).

Court erred in directing that sentence for attempted second degree murder run consecutively to sentences for first degree burglary and first degree robbery where conduct resulting in defendant's conviction for murder also constituted physical injury element of burglary and serious physical injury element of robbery. People v Pringle, 216 A.D.2d 863, 629 N.Y.S.2d 364, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7168 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 86 N.Y.2d 845, 634 N.Y.S.2d 455, 658 N.E.2d 233, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 4669 (N.Y. 1995).

Jury's deliberative process was not unfairly skewed by placement of names of 5 alleged victims of attempted first degree murder and attempted aggravated assault on police officer beneath respective counts to be considered and beside possible verdicts, where form was entirely neutral and did not contain parenthetical references to prejudicial facts. People v Collins, 238 A.D.2d 435, 656 N.Y.S.2d 356, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3780 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 903, 663 N.Y.S.2d 515, 686 N.E.2d 227, 1997 N.Y. Inclusion of dates of crimes on verdict form could only have clarified, rather than skewed, jury's deliberations on counts of attempted first degree murder and attempted aggravated assault on police officer where trial involved 2 separate indictments, for crimes committed on 2 different dates, and cases were joined because of common evidence. People v Collins, 238 A.D.2d 435, 656 N.Y.S.2d 356, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3780 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 903, 663 N.Y.S.2d 515, 686 N.E.2d 227, 1997 N.Y. Jury instructions on attempted first degree murder did not unfairly marshal evidence against defendant where charge benefited defendant by applying term "a police officer" to one specific officer, rather than to group of 3 officers at which defendant shot, even though prosecution was not required to link intent element to specific officer. People v Perry, 266 A.D.2d 151, 700 N.Y.S.2d 107, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12351 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1999), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 856, 714 N.Y.S.2d 7, 736 N.E.2d 868, 2000 N.Y. County Court properly refused to accept petitioner's guilty plea to indictment charging him with, inter alia, first degree murder where 120-day period within which People could file notice of intention to seek death penalty (CLS CPL § 250.40(2)) had not yet expired. Schroedel v LaBuda, 264 A.D.2d 136, 707 N.Y.S.2d 252, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4205 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 754, 711 N.Y.S.2d 156, 733 N.E.2d 228, 2000 N.Y. Term "pending" in CLS CPL § 250.40(2) should be interpreted as meaning both after notice of intent is filed and served and during 120 days in which People may file notice. Schroedel v LaBuda, 264 A.D.2d 136, 707 N.Y.S.2d 252, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4205 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 754, 711 N.Y.S.2d 156, 733 N.E.2d 228, 2000 N.Y. Court would dismiss proceeding seeking to compel County Judge to entertain petitioner's unconditional guilty plea to indictment charging him with, inter alia, first degree murder since there is no constitutional right that proffered guilty plea be accepted, and County Court correctly concluded that, since 120-day period within which People could file notice of intention to seek death penalty (CLS CPL § 250.40(2)) had not expired, legal bar existed to acceptance of plea. Aggregating factor of multiple killings necessary to elevate offense to first degree murder (CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(viii)) may be met by evidence of accessorial liability; fact that statute refers to single actors does not preclude interpretation applying law to multiple actors. People v Reed, 265 A.D.2d 56, 705 N.Y.S.2d 592, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2802 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 832, 713 N.Y.S.2d 138, 735 N.E.2d 418, 2000 N.Y. Fact that legislature expressly limited accessorial liability in first degree felony murder cases so that nonshooter can be convicted of crime only if, during perpetration of designated felony, nonshooter expressly "commanded" shooter to kill (CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(vii)) does not give rise to inference that legislature intended to limit normal rules of accessorial liability in multiple killings paragraph of first degree murder statute; legislature did not intend to alter ordinary rules of accomplice liability as applied to multiple killers. People v Reed, 265 A.D.2d 56, 705 N.Y.S.2d 592, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2802 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 832, 713 N.Y.S.2d 138, 735 N.E.2d 418, 2000 N.Y. In first degree murder prosecution involving murder of police officer during shootout resulting from botched drug sale to undercover officer, potential juror's statements about close friendship with police captain assigned to narcotics squad did not warrant dismissal for cause, even though juror testified at reconstruction hearing that he would presently feel uncomfortable sitting on jury in case in which police officer was involved, since he also stated that he did not recall if he had expressed such concern 4 years earlier, at time of voir dire, lead prosecutor testified at reconstruction hearing that his regular jury selection practice involved specific inquiry of every juror whether he or she could be fair and impartial, and defense counsel confirmed that he thought juror at issue was asked such question, juror in question also testified at reconstruction hearing that he was "pretty sure" that he was asked if he could be fair and impartial juror, and "probably" said he could be, and assistant prosecutor's notes and lead prosecutor's notation on jury selection sheet supported conclusion that juror had retreated from his original positioned, indicating that his friendships would not affect his ability to be fair and impartial. Defendant's challenge to validity of his guilty plea entered under statutory provisions struck from state's death penalty law by Court of Appeals prior to his sentencing fell within category of claims that could not be waived. People v Edwards, 274 A.D.2d 754, 712 N.Y.S.2d 71, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8060 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000), rev'd, 96 N.Y.2d 445, 729 N.Y.S.2d 410, 754 N.E.2d 169, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2015 (N.Y. 2001).

There was no merit in defendant's claim that his plea of guilty to first degree murder was result of mistake of law, based on provisions of CLS Penal § 70.00(5) and CLS CPL § 400.27, where prosecution did not seek death penalty, prohibition against pleas and plea negotiations during pendency of death penalty notice thus was not implicated, and Supreme Court had statutory authority to sentence defendant to life imprisonment without parole. People v Mower, 280 A.D.2d 25, 719 N.Y.S.2d 780, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 983 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001), aff'd, 97 N.Y.2d 239, 739 N.Y.S.2d 343, 765 N.E.2d 839, 2002 N.Y. Defendant's allegation that he was improperly charged, under N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(ix), with having committed a murder after being previously convicted of murder in another state, because the previous conviction was for second degree murder, was waived when he pled guilty. People v Williamson, 301 A.D.2d 860, 755 N.Y.S.2d 443, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 343 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 567, 763 N.Y.S.2d 824, 795 N.E.2d 50, 2003 N.Y. N.Y. Penal Law § 60.06 allowed the trial court to sentence defendant who was convicted of murder in the first degree, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27, to life imprisonment with a minimum period of incarceration ranging from 20 to 25 years, and the trial court erred by concluding that it had to sentence defendant to life imprisonment without the possibility of parole. People v Wiggins, 304 A.D.2d 322, 758 N.Y.S.2d 26, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3488 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 625, 767 N.Y.S.2d 409, 799 N.E.2d 632, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 3898 (N.Y. 2003).

Trial court erred in its accomplice liability charge as it related to defendant's first-degree felony murder count, as the trial court only gave the N.Y. Penal Law § 20.00 definition of accomplice liability without any adjustment for the first-degree murder count; N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(l)(a)(vii) provides that N.Y. Penal Law § 20.00 is not applicable to first-degree felony murder unless defendant's criminal liability is based upon defendant having commanded another person to cause the death of the victim or intended victim pursuant to § 20.00. People v Taylor, 1 A.D.3d 619, 767 N.Y.S.2d 640, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12472 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 635, 777 N.Y.S.2d 33, 808 N.E.2d 1292, 2004 N.Y. Where defendant argued that, because attempted robbery was an element of murder in the first degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(vii), the trial court erred in directing that the 15-year determinate sentences of imprisonment imposed for the two counts of attempted robbery in the first degree in violation of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 160.15(2) were to run consecutively to the sentences of life imprisonment without parole, which were indeterminate sentences pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 70.00(5), imposed for the two counts of first degree murder under N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(vii), the argument failed; the trial court imposed the attempted robbery sentences consecutive to each other, not consecutive to the murder sentences, and this was proper in light of the act that there were two robbery victims. Where defendant was convicted of murder in the first degree in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(vii), (viii) and murder in the second degree in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 125.25(3), the verdict was not against the weight of the evidence, as the jury was permitted to infer defendant's intent to kill from defendant's conduct and the surrounding circumstances. People v Switzer, 15 A.D.3d 913, 788 N.Y.S.2d 760, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1104 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 5 N.Y.3d 770, 801 N.Y.S.2d 264, 834 N.E.2d 1274, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 2154 (N.Y. 2005).

Defendant's consecutive life sentences for first-degree murder violated N.Y. Penal Law § 70.25(1) and (2) and were modified to be concurrent sentences as defendant was convicted of violating N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(viii) and, although two separate shots were fired, the murder of the wife was a material element of the offense as to the husband and vice-versa. People v Rosas, 30 A.D.3d 545, 818 N.Y.S.2d 126, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8042 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.3d 762, 819 N.Y.S.2d 888, 853 N.E.2d 259, 2006 N.Y. Defendant engaged in conduct constituting the crime of attempted robbery and this same conduct was a material element of the crime of felony murder, N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(vii); therefore, consecutive sentences based on defendant's guilty pleas to felony murder and attempted robbery were improper. The fact that defendant pleaded guilty to the subsection of attempted robbery which involved being "aided by another person actually present" rather than the subsection which involved causing physical injury was inconsequential. People v Middleton, 32 A.D.3d 557, 818 N.Y.S.2d 873, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9828 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

Adjudication of defendant as a level three sex offender under the Sex Offender Registration Act, N.Y. Correct. Law art. 6-C, was proper because defendant, who was 20 years and 9 months old at the time of the offense at issue, was properly assessed points for the risk factor that assessed 10 points if offender's first sex crime occurred at age 20 or less; the board's construction and interpretation of its own regulations and of the statute under which it functioned was entitled to the greatest weight, and, moreover, a person who was between his or her twentieth and twenty-first birthdays would normally have been regarded as being age 20. Cases interpreting the phrase "more than eighteen years old" contained in N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(b) were inapplicable because of the difference between the phrases "age [x] or less," and "more than [x] years old." People v Faison, 46 A.D.3d 316, 847 N.Y.S.2d 527, 2007 N.Y. While there was evidence that defendant refused to get medical assistance for the victim out of concern that he would go to the police, the victim was not a witness to a crime committed on a prior occasion as contemplated by N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(v) where the victim was beaten and tortured throughout the day until he died. People v Adamson, 47 A.D.3d 318, 849 N.Y.S.2d 674, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13179 (N.Y. Trial court properly refused to sever counts charging first degree murder, N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a), from counts charging first degree rape, N.Y. Penal Law § 130.35(1), because first degree rape was the underlying felony for each count of felony murder, and the People thus had to establish defendant's rape of the felony murder victims; the counts were properly joined inasmuch as the offenses were "similar in law" and defendant failed to establish good cause for severance. People v Owens, 51 A.D.3d 1369, 856 N.Y.S.2d 793, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3918 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 11 N.Y.3d 740, 864 N.Y.S.2d 398, 894 N.E.2d 662, 2008 N.Y. Life sentence without parole was not unduly harsh or severe for convictions of murder in the first degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(viii), (b), murder in the second degree N.Y. Penal Law § 125.25(1), and attempted murder in the second degree, N.Y. After being convicted of two counts of first degree murder and criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree, the trial court acted within its discretion in sentencing defendant to an aggregate term of life in prison without the possibility of parole because, inter alia, the sentence was within the permissible statutory range, defendant acted with a shocking and profound level of violence when he took the victims' lives, and defendant lacked remorse. People v Ramos, 133 A.D.3d 904, 20 N.Y.S.3d 183, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8103 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2015), app. denied, 26 N.Y.3d 1149, 51 N.E.3d 574, 32 N.Y.S.3d 63, 2016 N.Y. CLS Penal § 125.27(1) covers persons who have reached their eighteenth birthday at time of offense; term "more than eighteen years old" must be deemed to be synonymous with term "eighteen years old or more." People v Carr, 159 Misc. 2d 1093, 608 N.Y.S.2d 48, 1994 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 24 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1994).

Defendant, charged in felony complaint with first degree murder, was not entitled to order compelling District Attorney's office to turn over statements he made and other materials constituting discovery prior to defendant testifying before grand jury, notwithstanding that crime of first degree murder carries with it potential for death penalty. People v Bastien, 170 Misc. 2d 103, 649 N.Y.S.2d 979, 1996 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 402 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1996).

New York State Legislature, in authorizing imposition of death penalty for first degree murder, did not create "heightened due process" standard for death penalty cases. People v Gordon, 175 Misc. 2d 67, 667 N.Y.S.2d 626, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 598 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(vii) requires that defendant intentionally cause death of another individual in course of and in furtherance of felony, while CLS Penal § 125.25(3) does not require intentional conduct; element of intent distinguishes cases in which death penalty may be imposed from those in which it may not. People v Mateo, 175 Misc. 2d 192, 664 N.Y.S.2d 981, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 469 (N.Y. County Ct. 1997), aff'd, 249 A.D.2d 894, 672 N.Y.S.2d 594, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4973 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

Indictment charging first degree murder in violation of CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(xi) did not constitute impermissible retroactive application of statute, and would not be dismissed, although indictment was based partially on acts (other homicides) allegedly committed prior to effective date of statute, since earlier homicides were merely antecedent events that were elements of later homicide allegedly committed by defendant after statute's effective date. People v Mateo, 175 Misc. 2d 192, 664 N.Y.S.2d 981, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 469 (N.Y. County Ct. 1997), aff'd, 249 A.D.2d 894, 672 N.Y.S.2d 594, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4973 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

Ex Post Facto Clause of United States Constitution was not violated by indictment charging first degree murder under CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(xi), although statute enhanced punishment for later homicide based on commission of additional prior homicides that occurred before enactment of statute, since statute did not bestow additional penalty for predicate homicides but merely provided stiffened penalty for later crime. People v Mateo, 175 Misc. 2d 192, 664 N.Y.S.2d 981, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 469 (N.Y. County Ct. 1997), aff'd, 249 A.D.2d 894, 672 N.Y.S.2d 594, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4973 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

Where "serial killer" provision of CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(xi) did not apply to link earlier homicides with later homicides, court would sever counts of indictment charging former crimes from those charging later crimes. People v Mateo, 175 Misc. 2d 192, 664 N.Y.S.2d 981, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 469 (N.Y. County Ct. 1997), aff'd, 249 A.D.2d 894, 672 N.Y.S.2d 594, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4973 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

Court accepted defendant's plea of guilty to first degree murder after prosecutor withdrew People's intent to seek death penalty, where defendant sought to end case, admit his guilt, waive his right to appeal and receive sentence of life imprisonment without parole. People v Van Dyne, 179 Misc. 2d 467, 685 N.Y.S.2d 591, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 11 (N.Y. County Ct. 1999), rev'd, 12 A.D.3d 120, 784 N.Y.S.2d 795, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13945 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2004).

Defendant charged with capital murder was not allowed to withdraw plea of guilty to first degree murder which called for her to testify against codefendant in exchange for sentence of 25 years to life, on ground that plea was product of duress of facing death penalty, where she offered no claim of innocence, fraud or mistake in inducement of plea, and her claim that she was unable to think rationally when she entered plea was refuted by record of conference and plea proceedings. People v Arroyo, 180 Misc. 2d 558, 691 N.Y.S.2d 734, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 177 (N.Y. County Ct. 1999), aff'd, 42 A.D.3d 818, 838 N.Y.S.2d 920, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8794 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

Defendant charged with capital murder was not entitled to withdraw his plea of guilty to first degree murder based solely on Court of Appeals' subsequent invalidation of plea provisions of CLS CPL § 220.10(5)(e) and CLS CPL § 220.30(3)(b)(vii), where his plea was entered either after notice of intent to seek death penalty was withdrawn or in conjunction with withdrawal of notice of intent. People v Edwards, 180 Misc. 2d 564, 690 N.Y.S.2d 404, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 176 (N.Y. County Ct. 1999), rev'd, 274

A.D.2d 754, 712 N.Y.S.2d 71, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8060 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Criminal defendant's motion to enjoin state from seeking death penalty was not ripe for judicial review where he was arraigned on indictment charging him with second degree murder and other crimes, and People reserved right to file capital murder indictment should evidence become available supporting such charges; harm to defendant was contingent on filing first degree murder indictment against him and filing notice of intent to seek death penalty, both of which events might never occur. People v Attawwab, 182 Misc. 2d 824, 700 N.Y.S.2d 395, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 530 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1999).

County Court lacked jurisdiction in potential death penalty case to grant defendant's request that records of any jail visits be sealed and their confidentiality maintained, on ground that People's access to such records would inform them of defense strategy and preparation; even if court were vested with such authority, defendant would ultimately be required to disclose names of his experts (CLS CPL § 240.30(2)), and other safeguards were in place, including sanctions and remedies at trial, to ensure that prosecution did not misuse such information in interim. People v Owens, 182 Misc. 2d 828, 701 N.Y.S.2d 604, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 523 (N.Y. County Ct. 1999).

In death penalty case, defendant was granted 10-week adjournment, rather than requested 3-month adjournment, for further pretrial preparation following Capital Defender Office's appointment as exclusive lead counsel following completion of individual voir dire, due to serious illness of original defense counsel, where Capital Defender Office was aware from time it was appointed as co-lead counsel 10 weeks earlier that it might be required to assume role as sole lead counsel, during that period it had access to defendant's entire file, and defendant's associate counsel who worked on case with former lead counsel for more than 15 months worked diligently with Capital Defender Officer to prepare for trial. People v Owens, 186 Misc. 2d 767, 720 N.Y.S.2d 764, 2001 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 6 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2001).

2. Constitutional issues

State statutes imposing the death penalty for first degree murder (Penal Law, §§ 60.06, 125.27) carry with them a strong presumption of constitutionality and should be stricken as unconstitutional only as a last resort without substitution of the judgment of the courts for that of the Legislature as to the wisdom and expendiency of the legislation. People v Davis, 43 N.Y.2d 17, 400 N.Y.S.2d 735, 371 N.E.2d 456, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 2434 (N.Y. 1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 998, 98 S. Ct. 1653, 56 L. Ed. 2d 88, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 1645 (U.S. 1978), cert. denied, 438 U.S. 914, 98 S. Ct. 3143, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1160, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2435 (U.S. 1978).

Unconstitutionality of New York's death penalty statute for murder of a corrections officer (Penal Law, §§ 60.06, 125.27, subd 1, par [a], cl [ii]) is indicated by the fact that the statute provides neither for the furnishing of information, without which there can be no consideration of the individual offender and the circumstances of a particular offense, nor standards to guide the sentencing authority in the use of that information had it been furnished. People v Davis, 43 N.Y.2d 17, 400 N.Y.S.2d 735, 371 N.E.2d 456, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 2434 (N.Y. 1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 998, 98 S. Ct. 1653, 56 L. Ed. 2d 88, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 1645 (U.S. 1978), cert. denied, 438 U.S. 914, 98 S. Ct. 3143, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1160, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2435 (U.S. 1978).

Although the statutory framework of New York's death penalty statute for murder of a corrections officer (Penal Law, §§ 60.06, 125.27, subd 1, par [a], cl [ii]) may in some manner reflect various mitigating factors as defenses, that is not enough to save New York's death penalty statute from constitutional infirmity, since similar defenses are found in other jurisdictions, including those whose death penalty statute has been held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, and such limitations do not afford individualized consideration of the offender because defenses relate to guilt or innocence, whereas a mitigating factor may be of no significance to a determination of criminal culpability and will not rise to the level of a defense. People v Davis, 43 N.Y.2d 17, 400 N.Y.S.2d 735, 371 N.E.2d 456, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 2434 (N.Y. 1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 998, 98 S. Ct. 1653, 56 L. Ed. 2d 88, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 1645 (U.S. 1978), cert. denied, 438 U.S. 914, 98 S. Ct. 3143, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1160, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2435 (U.S. 1978).

Since the New York death penalty statute for murder of a corrections officer (Penal Law, §§ 60.06, 125.27, subd 1, par [a], cl [ii]) "does not allow consideration of particularized mitigating factors" for purposes of "the capital sentencing decision" as to "the particular offender", it is unconstitutional. People v Davis, 43 N.Y.2d 17, 400 N.Y.S.2d 735, 371 N.E.2d 456, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 2434 (N.Y. 1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 998, 98 S. Ct. 1653, 56 L. Ed. 2d 88, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 1645 (U.S. 1978), cert. denied, 438 U.S. 914, 98 S. Ct. 3143, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1160, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2435 (U.S. 1978).

CLS Penal § 125.27 remains viable as substantive basis for charge of attempted murder in first degree; first degree murder did not become nonexistent crime by virtue of case People v Smith (1984) 63 NY2d 41, 479 NYS2d 706, 468 NE2d 879, cert den 469 US 1227, 84 L Ed 2d 364, 105 S Ct 1226, reh den 471 US 1049, 85 L Ed 2d 340, 105 S Ct 2042. invalidating mandatory capital sentence imposed by CLS Penal § 60.06. People v Silva, 69 N.Y.2d 858, 514 N.Y.S.2d 710, 507 N.E.2d 303, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 15905 (N.Y. 1987).

Pursuant to severability clause of death penalty statute (L 1995, ch 1 § 37), constitutional infirmity of plea provisions set forth in CLS CPL §§ 220.10(5)(e) and 220.30(3)(b)(vii) did not invalidate entire statute, as plea provisions were discrete and their removal would not affect either classification of capital offenses, or conduct of trial or penalty phase of capital cases. Hynes v Tomei, 92 N.Y.2d 613, 684 N.Y.S.2d 177, 706 N.E.2d 1201, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4140 (N.Y. 1998), cert. denied, 527 U.S. 1015, 119 S. Ct. 2359, 144 L. Ed. 2d 254, 1999 U.S. LEXIS 4184 (U.S. 1999).

Defendant who was charged with first degree felony murder had standing to assert that word "command" as used in CLS Penal § 125.27(1) was unconstitutionally vague, although he was not yet convicted of anything and was not subject to death sentence. People v Couser, 94 N.Y.2d 631, 709 N.Y.S.2d 155, 730 N.E.2d 953, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 887 (N.Y. 2000).

Defendant's guilty plea to first degree murder while People's CLS CPL § 250.40 notice was still pending did not, standing alone, violate his Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination or his Sixth Amendment right to trial by jury, even if it was exclusive means by which he avoided exposure to risk of imposition of death penalty. People v Edwards, 96 N.Y.2d 445, 729 N.Y.S.2d 410, 754 N.E.2d 169, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2015 (N.Y. 2001).

First degree murder charge under CLS Penal § 125.27 is viable although death sentence has been held to be unconstitutional. People v Swan, 130 A.D.2d 6, 519 N.Y.S.2d 581, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 45059 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 804, 522 N.Y.S.2d 122, 516 N.E.2d 1235, 1987 N.Y. Court did not err in accepting defendant's guilty plea to first degree murder, even though CLS CPL § 220.10(5)(e) prohibits defendant from entering such plea, since statute's provision was enacted as part of legislative scheme to enact mandatory death penalty, death penalty was subsequently declared unconstitutional, and thus rationale behind provision is no longer applicable. People v Edgehill, 130 A.D.2d 761, 516 N.Y.S.2d 55, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 46780 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Petition for mandamus, prohibition, injunctive relief and declaratory judgment with respect to implementation of Executive Order No. 27 (9 NYCRR § 5.27), which required Attorney-General to appear and supersede Bronx District Attorney in potential death penalty case because of district attorney's previously expressed intention not to utilize death penalty provisions of CLS Penal § 125.27, was properly dismissed for lack of justiciability, as petitioners failed to show that governor acted without constitutional or statutory authority; governor's apparent objective was to assure that state laws were applied in uniform fashion throughout state's 62 counties, and emergent nature of his intervention was justified by possibility that Bronx District Attorney might take action foreclosing appropriate consideration of death penalty pursuant to CLS CPL § 250.40. Johnson v Pataki, 229 A.D.2d 242, 655 N.Y.S.2d 463, 1997 N.Y.

App. Div. LEXIS 5952 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 900, 662 N.Y.S.2d 430, 685 N.E.2d 211, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 2686 (N.Y. 1997), aff'd, 91 N.Y.2d 214, 668 N.Y.S.2d 978, 691 N.E.2d 1002, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3703 (N.Y. 1997).

Plea bargain provisions of death penalty statute, which enable defendant charged with capital murder to avoid any possibility of death sentence by entering into plea bargain agreement with People (CLS CPL §§ 220.10(5)(e), 220.30(3)(b)(vii), 220.60(2)(a)), do not unconstitutionally penalize capital defendant's right to jury trial by exposing such defendant to risk of death only when exercising that right; thus, justice erred in declaring those provisions to be unconstitutional in reliance on decision in United States v Jackson, 390 U.S. 570, 88 S. Ct. 1209, 20 L. Ed. 2d 138, 1968 U.S. LEXIS 2002 (U.S. 1968).Hynes v Tomei, 237 A.D.2d 52, 666 N.Y.S.2d 687, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13300 (N.Y. Provisions of CLS CPL §§ 220.10(5)(e), 220.30(3)(b)(vii), and 220.60(2)(a), governing pleas in capital cases, did not violate defendant's constitutional right to jury trial by needlessly encouraging guilty pleas. Limitation on accomplice liability set forth in statutory definition of first degree felony murder was not unconstitutionally vague under due process clauses of federal or state constitution, as applied to defendant in noncapital murder case who, while incarcerated, allegedly directed member of his gang to kill intended victim where evidence, if believed, established that defendant acted as "boss-accomplice" to order member of his gang to commit crime. People v Couser, 258 A.D.2d 74, 695 N.Y.S.2d 781, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7903 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1999), aff'd, 94 N.Y.2d 631, 709 N.Y.S.2d 155, 730 N.E.2d 953, 2000 N.Y. There was no Brady violation, in prosecution for attempted first degree murder, first and second degree robbery, first degree use of firearm, attempted aggravated assault on police officer, and second degree weapon possession, where prosecution disclosed potential witness's address and telephone number during jury selection, as directed by court on defense counsel's claim that witness's statement contained potentially exculpatory information, and although witness ultimately could not be located by either party, defendant did not show that earlier disclosure would have resulted in witness's availability or that witness's testimony would have been exculpatory. There is no constitutional impediment to predicating charge of first degree murder on accessorial liability; accessories who are major participants in intentional killings can be subjected to capital prosecution for their accessorial conduct without violating Eighth Amendment's proscription against cruel and unusual punishment. People v Reed, 265 A.D.2d 56, 705 N.Y.S.2d 592, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2802 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 832, 713 N.Y.S.2d 138, 735 N.E.2d 418, 2000 N.Y. Life sentences without parole did not violate eighth Amendment where defendants, who could have been sentenced to death, were convicted of noncapital first degree murder for having perpetrated multiple killings by each shooting one rival drug dealer in concerted effort to kill off 2 competitors. First degree murder statute is not unconstitutionally vague and overly broad insofar as it purports to punish multiple killings that are perpetrated as part of "same criminal transaction" (CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(viii)) without supplying definition of "same criminal transaction"; statutory definition of "criminal transaction" used for double jeopardy purposes (CLS CPL § 40.10)) may be properly borrowed for application in first degree murder statute. In first degree murder prosecution, defendant was not denied his right to present witnesses when court denied his request for 1-day adjournment to secure presence of his expert pathologist, who would have provided testimony contradictory to that of medical examiner as to undercover's positioning during shooting, where there was no evidence that witness had been subpoenaed, or had previously been present in court, and there was no indication as to any discussion between counsel and potential witness as to timing of his testimony, or any possible scheduling conflicts. People v Degondea, 269 A.D.2d 243, 705 N.Y.S.2d 20, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1565 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 834, 713 N.Y.S.2d 140, 735 N.E.2d 420, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 2403 (N.Y. 2000).

Mere offer of plea bargain to first degree murder while death notice is pending presents capital defendant with same unconstitutional choice of either exercising Fifth and Sixth Amendment rights and risk death, or abandon those rights and avoid possibility of death; thus, it is constitutionally impermissible for prosecutors to negotiate guilty pleas to first degree murder while notice of intent to seek death penalty is pending. People v Edwards, 274 A.D.2d 754, 712 N.Y.S.2d 71, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8060 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000), rev'd, 96 N.Y.2d 445, 729 N.Y.S.2d 410, 754 N.E.2d 169, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2015 (N.Y. 2001).

In prosecution for first degree murder of defendant's parents, failure of CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(viii) to define "same criminal transaction" did not render that statute unconstitutionally vague where statute unambiguously proscribes multiple killings, which is specific conduct easily comprehended and avoided by innocent-minded persons. People v Mower, 280 A.D.2d 25, 719 N.Y.S.2d 780, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 983 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001), aff'd, 97 N.Y.2d 239, 739 N.Y.S.2d 343, 765 N.E.2d 839, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 183 (N.Y. 2002).

Failure of CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(b) to define "more than eighteen years old" did not render that statute unconstitutionally vague where defendant was born on April 25, 1997, turned 18 on April 25, 1995, committed first degree murder on March 26, 1996, and thus was 18 years and 11 months old at time of murder; person concludes first 18 years of life on his or her 18th birthday and begins 19th year of life on that day. People v Mower, 280 A.D.2d 25, 719 N.Y.S.2d 780, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 983 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001), aff'd, 97 N.Y.2d 239, 739 N.Y.S.2d 343, 765 N.E.2d 839, 2002 N.Y. Defendant was not entitled to heightened due process analysis during guilt phase of prosecution for first degree murder where he had not yet been convicted and exposed to death penalty, and thus he was entitled to only standard due process under Fourteenth Amendment rather than review under Eighth Amendment. Where defendant was convicted of robbery and attempted murder, to the extent he was subjected to custodial interrogation, as his unwarned answer to such questioning, i.e., that he did not know his gun-discarding companion, was of minimal impact in demonstrating defendant's guilt of the charged crimes, any error by the trial court in refusing to suppress that single statement was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. Defendants who are charged with capital offenses are not entitled to heightened due process at every stage of proceeding, and thus first degree murder indictment would not be dismissed on ground that defendants were not afforded meaningful opportunity to testify before grand jury because they were not granted indefinite open-ended adjournment to complete their investigation; defendants were not prejudiced where they never suggested what, if anything, they believed they would discover if additional time were granted to them. People v Rodriguez, 168 Misc. 2d 219, 647 N.Y.S.2d 350, 1996 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 23 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1996), aff'd, People v Sanchez, 268 A.D.2d 364, 702 N.Y.S.2d 261, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 735 (N.Y. In potential death penalty case, defendant was not entitled to court order requiring preservation and nonexhaustion of all evidence and permitting defense experts to be present during and to observe all testing of evidence by prosecution and government experts; discovery which in unavailable pursuant to statute may not be ordered based on principles of due process since there is no general constitutional right to discovery in criminal cases. Phrases "in the course of," "in furtherance of," "in the same criminal transaction," and "especially cruel and wanton" as used in statutes defining first and second degree murder were not unconstitutionally vague and overbroad, and thus indictment charging such crimes was not subject to dismissal pursuant to CLS CPL §§ 210.20(1)(a) and 210.25(3). People v Gordon, 175 Misc. 2d 67, 667 N.Y.S.2d 626, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 598 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

Murder defendant lacked standing to claim that CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(vii) was unconstitutionally vague on its face, since statute involved no First Amendment concerns. Murder defendant lacked standing to claim that CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(vii) was overbroad on its face and as applied to him, since statute affected conduct and did not involve or affect speech. Phrase "in the course of and in furtherance of" is not unconstitutionally vague as used in CLS Penal § 125.25(3) and CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(vii). People v Mateo, 175 Misc. 2d 192, 664 N.Y.S.2d 981, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 469 (N.Y. County Ct. 1997), aff'd, 249 A.D.2d 894, 672 N.Y.S.2d 594, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4973 (N.Y. Phrase "commanded another person" is not unconstitutionally vague as used in CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(vii). People v Mateo, 175 Misc. 2d 192, 664 N.Y.S.2d 981, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 469 (N.Y. Word "commanded," as used in CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(vii), establishing criminal liability for having commanded another person to cause death of victim, is not unconstitutionally vague. People v Mateo, 175 Misc. 2d 192, 664 N.Y.S.2d 981, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 469 (N.Y. County Ct. 1997), aff'd, 249 A.D.2d 894, 672 N.Y.S.2d 594, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4973 (N.Y. Eighth Amendment requires that higher level of scrutiny be applied at any stage of capital case that directly affects sentencing determination, i.e., whenever fact-finding process as to appropriateness of death penalty is affected, and such higher procedural standards "are not cabined strictly within the capital sentencing process authorized by CLS CPL § 400.27. People v Arthur, 175 Misc. 2d 742, 673 N.Y.S.2d 486, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 673 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

Higher level of scrutiny applies to defendant's constitutional right to discovery incorporated in CLS CPL § 240.20(1)(h) when it affects sentencing determination in capital case. People v Arthur, 175 Misc. 2d 742, 673 N.Y.S.2d 486, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 673 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

In potential death penalty case, court allowed defendant to present ex parte application for judicial subpoenas duces tecum, and would rule whether notice to prosecutor's office should be required consistent with law and defendant's due process right to fair opportunity to prepare defense, where stated basis for request was that defendant wished to obtain mitigating evidence for penalty phase of trial and decide whether to present information to prosecutor's office before prosecutor's office determined whether to seek death penalty, without having to reveal aspects of defense strategy and preparation to prosecution. People v Van Dyne, 175 Misc. 2d 558, 669 N.Y.S.2d 199, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 17 (N.Y. County Ct. 1998).

Failure to define what constitutes "command" under either CLS Penal § 20.00 or CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(vii) renders § 125.27(1)(a)(vii) unconstitutionally vague. People v Couser, 176 Misc. 2d 86, 674 N.Y.S.2d 887, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 120 (N.Y. County Ct. 1998), rev'd, 258 A.D.2d 74, 695 N.Y.S.2d 781, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7903 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1999).

New York's statutory scheme for selecting candidates for death penalty does not violate due process or constitutional prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment on ground that it provides no guidelines or procedures for prosecution to follow in selecting cases in which to seek death penalty, as prosecutors have wide latitude to charge offenses, charging decisions are generally beyond judicial review, and prosecutors in capital cases are not held to higher standard of accountability. People v Harris, 177 Misc. 2d 102, 675 N.Y.S.2d 743, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 237 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1998).

Supreme Court did not have jurisdiction over capital defendant's claim that legislature's failure to designate maximum number of Supreme Court judges permitted by state constitution for election in Second Judicial District, and practice of assigning judges of Court of Claims and New York City Civil and Criminal Courts to serve as acting Supreme Court justices in Kings County, illegally diluted voting strength of minority community in Kings County, thereby violating his rights under Fifteenth Amendment and federal Voting Rights Act (42 USCS § 1973) and precluding People from seeking death penalty in his case, as United States District Courts have jurisdiction of proceedings instituted under Voting Rights Act. People v Harris, 177 Misc. 2d 154, 675 N.Y.S.2d 746, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 257 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1998).

Practice of assigning judges of Court of Claims and New York City Civil and Criminal Courts to serve as acting Supreme Court judges did not violate first degree murder defendant's right under CLS NY Const Art II § 1 to vote for all officers elected by people, although CLS NY Const Art VI § 6 provides that Supreme Court judges are to be chosen by electors of judicial district in which they serve, as CLS NY Const Art VI § 26 provides for temporary assignment of Court of Claims and New York City Civil and Criminal Courts judges to Supreme Court in any judicial district. People v Harris, 177 Misc. 2d 154, 675 N.Y.S.2d 746, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 257 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1998).

In capital murder case, constitutional motions challenging legality of death penalty as applied to defendants would (except for issue related to lethal injection) be decided prior to jury selection, because critical trial strategies would necessarily come into play as early as jury selection. People v Arroyo, 178 Misc. 2d 653, 683 N.Y.S.2d 788, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 528 (N.Y. County Ct. 1998).

No discriminatory enforcement was shown by white defendant's claim that prosecutor needed white conviction statistics to balance number of black convictions, and female defendant's claim that prosecutor needed conviction statistics for women to balance those for men, where there was no specific abuse on part of prosecutor in electing to seek death penalty, and defendants' alleged conduct satisfied statutory criteria of CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(vi). People v Arroyo, 178 Misc. 2d 653, 683 N.Y.S.2d 788, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 528 (N.Y. County Ct. 1998).

Trial court rejected defendants' arguments that death penalty runs counter to prevailing societal standards of decency, in view of United States Supreme Court's acceptance of capital punishment and New York's significant and persistent history of death penalty legislation. People v Arroyo, 178 Misc. 2d 653, 683 N.Y.S.2d 788, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 528 (N.Y. County Ct. 1998).

Capital defendant was not entitled to actively participate with her attorneys beyond conferring and consulting with them and making recommendations and suggestions to them, where she did not seek to assert her right to self-representation or even "hybrid" representation, and thus court denied her request for permission to be involved in voir dire and opening and closing statements, and to give "short unsworn statement" to jury at sentencing; both defendant's and People's interests would be best served by disallowing defendant's participation, to assure that she received optimum benefit of assistance of counsel, and to assure most efficient and unprejudiced disposition of her case. People v Arroyo, 178 Misc. 2d 658, 682 N.Y.S.2d 545, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 532 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1998).

In capital murder case, defendant had constitutional and statutory right to proceed pro se at trial, where he was award of exactly what he was doing, what choices he was exercising, and risks he was shouldering; counsel representing defendant at time of his application to proceed pro se was directed to remain on case as "advisory counsel." People v Gordon, 179 Misc. 2d 940, 688 N.Y.S.2d 380, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 91 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1999).

Holding in Matter of Hynes v Tomei, 92 NY2d 613, that "a defendant may not plead guilty to first degree murder while a notice of intent to seek the death penalty is pending" was not violated where (1) defendant offered to so plead if district attorney (DA) withdrew notice of intent, (2) DA expressed willingness to do so if agreed sentence would be imposed and defendant would give full and truthful allocution, (3) defendant gave full allocution, (4) DA consented to plea, withdrew notice, and joined in defendant's motion that plea be accepted, and (5) court granted motion, accepted plea, and ordered it entered. People v Smelefsky, 182 Misc. 2d 11, 695 N.Y.S.2d 689, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 396 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1999).

Defendant charged with first degree murder and other offenses could not plead to entire indictment and thus avoid possibility of death penalty verdict without consent of prosecutor or court, even though notice of intent to seek death penalty had not been filed, where 120-day period for such filing under CLS CPL § 250.40 had not expired, clear legislative intent was to give prosecutor sufficient time to decide tough and troubling question of whether to seek death penalty, and defendant was attempting to usurp prosecutor's statutory right to seek death penalty. People v Schroedel, 182 Misc. 2d 154, 697 N.Y.S.2d 904, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 450 (N.Y. County Ct. 1999).

First degree murder defendant's constitutional challenge to CLS CPL § 320.10(1), and to portion of NY Const Art I § 2 which prohibits nonjury trials in guilt phase of death penalty cases, was not ripe for determination where defendant had yet to request bench trial. People v Owens, 184 Misc. 2d 600, 710 N.Y.S.2d 790, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 228 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2000).

Phrases "in the course of" and "in furtherance of" in first degree murder statute, CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(vii), were not unconstitutionally vague, and indictment would not be dismissed on that ground. People v Owens, 185 Misc. 2d 490, 713 N.Y.S.2d 256, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 358 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2000).

First degree murder statute, CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(vii), was not irrationally underinclusive in rendering "death eligible" murder committed during certain felonies but not others; nor was statute unconstitutional for its exclusion of premeditated murders, and thus indictment would not be dismissed on such grounds. People v Owens, 185 Misc. 2d 490, 713 N.Y.S.2d 256, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 358 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2000).

Defendant's guilty plea to first degree murder was not rendered invalid by the fact that the prosecution had not, in writing, withdrawn notice of its intent to seek the death penalty, where the prosecution had orally withdrawn the notice and the appellate decision holding that a defendant could not plead guilty to first degree murder while a notice of intent to seek the death penalty was pending had not yet been issued. People v Williamson, 301 A.D.2d 860, 755 N.Y.S.2d 443, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 343 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 567, 763 N.Y.S.2d 824, 795 N.E.2d 50, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 2230 (N.Y. 2003).

Eighth Amendment does not require that sentencing jury in capital case be instructed about consequence of jury deadlock concerning what sentence to impose (i.e., either death or life imprisonment without possibility of release). Jones v United States, 527 U.S. 373, 119 S. Ct. 2090, 144 L. Ed. 2d 370, 1999 U.S. LEXIS 4201 (U.S.), reh'g denied, 527 U.S. 1058, 120 S. Ct. 22, 144 L. Ed. 2d 826, 1999 U.S. LEXIS 4645 (U.S. 1999).

Petitioner's argument that a trial court violated his constitutional right against double jeopardy when it convicted petitioner of both first-degree murder under the felony provision, under N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(vii), and of the lesser-included counts of intentional and felony second-degree murder, under N.Y. Penal Law § 125.25(1), (3), because (1) the trial judge sentenced petitioner to life imprisonment without parole on the first-degree murder conviction, so the convictions and sentences on the lesser-included crimes were superfluous; (2) there was nothing to suggest that the trial judge imposed a greater sentence on the first-degree murder count because of petitioner's convictions on the second-degree murder counts; (3) a dismissal of the lesser-included charges would have had no effect on petitioner's ultimate sentence; and (4) petitioner had not shown that he suffered punishment above what the legislature intended from his concurrent sentences. Rodriguez v Smith, 485 F. Supp. 2d 368, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 29376 (S.D.N.Y. 2007).

Inmate was unsuccessful in challenging his two convictions for committing first degree murder, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(viii), in a federal habeas corpus proceeding on grounds that his appellate attorney was ineffective, in violation of U.S. Const. amend. VI, in failing to raise on appeal a claim that one of the inmate's trial attorneys should have been disqualified; it was not unreasonable for appellate counsel to omit the argument because it was wholly without merit. Hall v Conway, 630 F. Supp. 2d 283, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 55603 (W.D.N.Y. 2009).

Inmate's two convictions for committing first degree murder, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(viii), and two convictions for committing second degree murder, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 125.25(1), in connection with the killing of two individuals could not be challenged on double jeopardy grounds in the inmate's federal habeas corpus proceeding because the double jeopardy claim was procedurally defaulted where federal constitutional claims were waived as part of the inmate's valid guilty plea. Hall v Conway, 630 F. Supp. 2d 283, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 55603 (W.D.N.Y. 2009).

Inmate's plea of guilty to two charges of first degree murder under N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(viii) was valid where it was entered while notice of intent to seek the death penalty was not pending, no such notice was ever filed, the inmate was sentenced to life imprisonment, not the death penalty, and the plea was entered knowingly and voluntarily. Hall v Conway, 630 F. Supp. 2d 283, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 55603 (W.D.N.Y. 2009).

Inmate was unsuccessful in challenging his two convictions for committing first degree murder, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(viii), in a federal habeas corpus proceeding on grounds that one of the attorneys appointed to him under N.Y. Jud. Ct. Acts Law § 35-b(2) should have been disqualified as having a conflict of interest because the claim was procedurally barred due to the inmate's failure to raise it on direct appeal. Hall

v Conway, 630 F. Supp. 2d 283, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 55603 (W.D.N.Y. 2009).

3. Indictment and grand jury proceedings

Grand jury evidence was legally insufficient to establish "committed in a similar fashion" element of CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(xi) in shooting deaths of 4 young men, where victims were of different ethnic and racial backgrounds, they ranged in age from 16 to 20 years old, various guns were used, motive for each shooting was different, wounds inflicted on each victim differed, and locations of killings were different. People v Mateo, 93 N.Y.2d 327, 690 N.Y.S.2d 527, 712 N.E.2d 692, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1140 (N.Y. 1999).

Grand jury evidence supported first degree felony murder on theory that defendant "commanded" members of his gang to kill certain individuals which resulted in death of unintended victim, where gang associate testified that actual killer told him that defendant ordered murders from his jail cell, that he himself ultimately participated in shooting knowing that plan was directed by defendant, and that when he was subsequently incarcerated in same jail as defendant, defendant asked him about details of shooting and was upset that intended victim had not been killed. People v Couser, 94 N.Y.2d 631, 709 N.Y.S.2d 155, 730 N.E.2d 953, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 887 (N.Y. 2000).

Indictment charging defendant with first degree murder, N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(vii), and first degree kidnapping, N.Y. Penal Law § 135.25(3), was legally sufficient under circumstances in which the indictment alleged that defendant intentionally killed the victim in the course of kidnapping the victim, that defendant abducted the victim, and that the victim died during the abduction; there was no "double counting" defect because the murder and the predicate kidnapping that served as an aggravation arose from two distinct intents-the intent to kill the victim and the intent to abduct him. It was irrelevant that a factual circumstance other than defendant's intent-the victim's death-was an element of both the murder and the predicate kidnapping. People v Lucas, 11 N.Y.3d 218, 868 N.Y.S.2d 570, 897 N.E.2d 1052, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 3250 (N.Y. 2008).

Court properly dismissed those counts of indictment charging defendant with first-degree murder where evidence before grand jury was insufficient to show that defendant's motive and method in each of four murders were similar and that circumstances surrounding each of murders were similar. People v Mateo, 249 A.D.2d 894, 672 N.Y.S.2d 594, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4973 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998), aff'd, 93 N.Y.2d 327, 690 N.Y.S.2d 527, 712 N.E.2d 692, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1140 (N.Y. 1999).

People were not obligated to present evidence regarding defendant's inebriation, nor to charge grand jury with respect thereto, where even if grand jury had been presented with and had credited such evidence, thereby negating element of intent in first degree murder charge, evidence would have warranted depraved indifference murder charge. People v Johnson, 277 A.D.2d 702, 717 N.Y.S.2d 668, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12253 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 831, 729 N.Y.S.2d 451, 754 N.E.2d 211, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2208 (N.Y. 2001).

Three counts charging defendant with murder in the first degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(viii) were not duplicitous as each of the counts charged defendant with a single crime as required by N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 200.30(1) and were not multiplicitous as the same crime was not charged in more than one of the counts. People v Timmons, 54 A.D.3d 883, 864 N.Y.S.2d 111, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6840 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2008).

Defendant's convictions for murder in the second degree had to be reversed because they were inclusory concurrent counts of the convictions for murder in the first degree, as they arose from the same two deaths. People v Ashline, 124 A.D.3d 1258, 3 N.Y.S.3d 469, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 170 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2015), app. denied, 27 N.Y.3d 1128, 61 N.E.3d 508, 39 N.Y.S.3d 109, 2016 N.Y. LEXIS 2102 (N.Y. 2016).

First-degree attempted murder counts were not jurisdictionally defective as by alleging that defendant committed that crime, those counts adopted the title of the first-degree murder statute and incorporated all of the elements of that crime, including the age element, thereby affording defendant fair notice of the charges against him. People v Vangorden, 147 A.D.3d 1436, 46 N.Y.S.3d 730, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 805 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 29 N.Y.3d 1037, 84 N.E.3d 978, 62 N.Y.S.3d 306, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 1977 (N.Y. 2017).

Indictment was not jurisdictionally defective because the murder counts did not allege that defendant was more than 18 years old as by alleging that defendant committed first-degree murder, those counts adopted the title of the first-degree murder statute and incorporated all of the elements of that crime, including the age element, thereby affording defendant fair notice of the charges against him. People v Taylor, 158 A.D.3d 1095, 72 N.Y.S.3d 256, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 782 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), reh'g denied, 160 A.D.3d 1506, 72 N.Y.S.3d 918, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2995 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2018), app. denied, 32 N.Y.3d 941, 109 N.E.3d 1168, 84 N.Y.S.3d 868, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 2808 (N.Y. 2018), cert. denied, 140 S. Ct. 482, 205 L. Ed. 2d 269, 2019 U.S. LEXIS 6738 (U.S. 2019).

First degree murder indictment would not be dismissed on ground that refusal to stay grand jury proceeding deprived defendant of opportunity to present mitigating evidence on issue of whether he should be charged with first degree murder, because question of mitigation of punishment is not issue that may properly be presented to grand jury, and defendant was not entitled to heightened due process merely because he was charged with capital offense. People v Rodriguez, 168 Misc. 2d 219, 647 N.Y.S.2d 350, 1996 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 23 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1996), aff'd, People v Sanchez, 268 A.D.2d 364, 702 N.Y.S.2d 261, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 735 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

Defendants were not entitled to dismissal of first degree murder indictment on ground that they were denied due process by denial of their request for stay of grand jury proceedings in order to conduct extra legal research necessitated by complexity of capital cases and fact that their case was first prosecution in county under new capital offense law; mere fact that time frame shorter than defendants would have preferred impacted on their ability to formulate optimal strategy, or hastened their decision whether to testify, did not rise to level of deprivation of due process. People v Rodriguez, 168 Misc. 2d 219, 647 N.Y.S.2d 350, 1996 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 23 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1996), aff'd, People v Sanchez, 268 A.D.2d 364, 702 N.Y.S.2d 261, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 735 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

Defendants were not entitled to dismissal of first degree murder indictment on ground that they were denied due process because People failed to turn over Brady material, including their statements to police, prior to indictment; in addition to fact that defendants' statements were inculpatory, not exculpatory, Criminal Procedure Law does not require People to turn over defendant's statements until after indictment. People v Rodriguez, 168 Misc. 2d 219, 647 N.Y.S.2d 350, 1996 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 23 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1996), aff'd, People v Sanchez, 268 A.D.2d 364, 702 N.Y.S.2d 261, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 735 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

Defendants were not entitled to dismissal of first degree murder indictment based on People's failure to inform them of specific acts that formed basis of charges against them and theory on which prosecution before grand jury was proceeding; defendants were not entitled to heightened due process merely because they were charged with capital offenses. People v Rodriguez, 168 Misc. 2d 219, 647 N.Y.S.2d 350, 1996 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 23 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1996), aff'd, People v Sanchez, 268 A.D.2d 364, 702 N.Y.S.2d 261, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 735 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

There was no requirement that grand jury be instructed that matter before it was potential capital case, that grand jury be informed of "specific methods for an execution," or that there be individualized voir dire of jurors to determine their review on capital punishment. People v Bastien, 170 Misc. 2d 103, 649 N.Y.S.2d 979, 1996 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 402 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1996).

Defendant was not entitled to grand jury instruction as to mitigating factors relevant to first degree murder charges, including full recital of all mitigating circumstances as defined in CLS CPL § 400.27(8). People v Bastien, 170 Misc. 2d 103, 649 N.Y.S.2d 979, 1996 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 402 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1996).

If defendant offered evidence of extreme emotional disturbance for which there was reasonable explanation or cause, instruction to grand jury on impact of such evidence would be appropriate. People v Bastien, 170 Misc. 2d 103, 649 N.Y.S.2d 979, 1996 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 402 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1996).

In potential capital offense case where defendant offers evidence of extreme emotional disturbance for which there is reasonable explanation or cause, prosecutor must instruct grand jury as to impact of such evidence, in view of stringent statutorily imposed plea bargaining limitations, and in interest of avoiding unnecessary first degree murder prosecution. People v Prater, 170 Misc. 2d 327, 648 N.Y.S.2d 228, 1996 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 366 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1996), overruled in part, People v Harris, 98 N.Y.2d 452, 749 N.Y.S.2d 766, 779 N.E.2d 705, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 1993 (N.Y. 2002).

Grand jury appropriately charged defendant with first degree murder attempt where he tried to kill 4 people in same transaction; killing many people in one incident is worse than killing people in separate incidents. People v Fernandez, 173 Misc. 2d 938, 662 N.Y.S.2d 349, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 349 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

Defendant's attempts to kill his wife and children by first shooting his wife in chest, then shooting his 3 children, and then shooting his wife again, constituted one continuing crime (first degree attempted murder); thus, 3 counts of first degree attempted murder in indictment, each including defendant's wife and one child, were multiplicitous. People v Fernandez, 173 Misc. 2d 938, 662 N.Y.S.2d 349, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 349 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

Failure to apprise defendant of possibility of his being indicted for first degree murder did not deprive him of adequate notice of his opportunity to testify before grand jury on scheduled date because defendant is not entitled to notice of actual offenses to be presented to grand jury. People v Cajigas, 174 Misc. 2d 472, 665 N.Y.S.2d 789, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 510 (N.Y. County Ct. 1997).

In potential death penalty case, People were not obligated to reply to defense application for advance evidentiary rulings, or indicate in writing what instructions would be given to grand jurors respecting accessorial liability or voluntariness of any alleged statements which were to be introduced before grand jury. People v Cajigas, 174 Misc. 2d 472, 665 N.Y.S.2d 789, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 510 (N.Y. County Ct. 1997).

In potential death penalty case, defendant was not entitled to present mitigating evidence before grand jury, nor was he entitled to adjournment or delay in grand jury process for him to accumulate mitigating evidence. People v Cajigas, 174 Misc. 2d 472, 665 N.Y.S.2d 789, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 510 (N.Y. County Ct. 1997).

In potential death penalty case, defendant was not entitled to delay grand jury proceedings to allow him more time to prepare his possible testimony, on basis that "heightened due process" should apply. People v Cajigas, 174 Misc. 2d 472, 665 N.Y.S.2d 789, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 510 (N.Y. County Ct. 1997).

Defendant was not entitled to dismissal of first degree murder indictment on ground that grand jury presentation was defective because his statement to police concerning his ingestion of drugs and alcohol prior to participating in robbery warranted instruction on intoxication but none was given, where his statement described (at most) felony murder accidentally caused during course of robbery, and his intoxication claim, taken in context of his version of incident, bore no relationship to murder charge; moreover, intoxication is mitigating factor rather than complete defense and therefore need not be charged to grand jury. People v Harris, 174 Misc. 2d 654, 666 N.Y.S.2d 876, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 545 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

Counts charging first degree murder were not duplicitous in violation of federal and state constitutions where counts charged felony murder of same individuals during commission of different underlying felonies; fact that legislature chose to list series of felonies together within subparagraph vii of CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a) could not be taken to mean that it intended to allow only one count of intentional murder during course of felony to be charged where killing was committed in furtherance of multiple felonies. People v Gordon, 175 Misc. 2d 67, 667 N.Y.S.2d 626, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 598 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

Counts charging felony murder during commission of burglary were not duplicitous where counts involved different victims or different residences. People v Gordon, 175 Misc. 2d 67, 667 N.Y.S.2d 626, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 598 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

Two counts charging felony murder during commission of sodomy were not duplicitous where 2 different acts formed basis of 2 sodomies; similarly, 2 counts charging felony murder during commission of sexual abuse were not duplicitous where 2 different acts formed basis of 2 different sexual abuse conducts. People v Gordon, 175 Misc. 2d 67, 667 N.Y.S.2d 626, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 598 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

Court would not dismiss indictment for felony murder during commission of burglary on ground that People failed to allege what particular crime defendant intended to commit as part of burglary. People v Gordon, 175 Misc. 2d 67, 667 N.Y.S.2d 626, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 598 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

In charging felony murder, indictment did not impermissibly "double count" defendant's use of weapon to establish both means for committing murder and element of underlying felony of first degree burglary; nor did indictment "double count" defendant's intent to kill as both element of murder and basis of criminal intent at time of entry. People v Gordon, 175 Misc. 2d 67, 667 N.Y.S.2d 626, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 598 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

Court would not dismiss, as duplicitous, count of indictment charging that defendant committed first degree murder under CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(vii) by shooting victim and by commanding another person to kill him, since People were not required to specify whether defendant was shooter or commander, and indictment and bill of particulars clearly set forth single theory of prosecution—that defendant intentionally caused death in course of kidnapping, or that he acted with intent to cause death by commanding another person to kill victim. People v Mateo, 175 Misc. 2d 192, 664 N.Y.S.2d 981, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 469 (N.Y. County Ct. 1997), aff'd, 249 A.D.2d 894, 672 N.Y.S.2d 594, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4973 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

Court would not dismiss indictment charging defendant with first degree murder under CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(vii) on ground that indictment charged defendant as both principal and accomplice and there was no guarantee that 12 grand jurors concurred as to defendant's status, since there is no legal distinction between liability as principal and as accomplice, and it was irrelevant whether some grand jurors voted to indict defendant as principal and others voted to indict him as accomplice. People v Mateo, 175 Misc. 2d 192, 664 N.Y.S.2d 981, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 469 (N.Y. County Ct. 1997), aff'd, 249 A.D.2d 894, 672 N.Y.S.2d 594, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4973 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

Court would not dismiss indictment charging defendant with first degree murder under CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(xi) on ground that no distinction had been made between defendant's acts as principal and as accomplice, and that prior homicides charged were thus not committed in "similar fashion" as required by statute, since there is no legal distinction between criminal liability as principal and as accomplice, and thus integrity of grand jury was not impaired. People v Mateo, 175 Misc. 2d 192, 664 N.Y.S.2d 981, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 469 (N.Y. County Ct. 1997), aff'd, 249 A.D.2d 894, 672 N.Y.S.2d 594, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4973 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

Indictment charging defendant with commission of homicides "in similar fashion" in violation of CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(xi) was not supported by legally sufficient grand jury evidence, and would be dismissed, where it was shown only that 4 homicides committed by defendant all involved young men, shot with firearms to left side of head, on west side of City of Rochester, in cold-blooded fashion, but there was nothing unique, ritualistic, or signature-like about homicides to support indictment. People v Mateo, 175 Misc. 2d 192, 664 N.Y.S.2d 981, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 469 (N.Y. County Ct. 1997), aff'd, 249 A.D.2d 894, 672 N.Y.S.2d 594, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4973 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

In potential death penalty case, Fourteenth Amendment did not support defendant's request to stay ongoing grand jury proceeding while he considered whether or not to testify or present mitigating evidence; Fourteenth Amendment does not mandate that states prosecute any felony by indictment, much less impose criteria suggested by defendant. People v Leftenant, 175 Misc. 2d 605, 671 N.Y.S.2d 917, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 22 (N.Y. County Ct. 1998).

In potential death penalty case, defendant was not entitled to stay of ongoing grand jury proceeding to further investigate case and consider whether to present evidence or testify, because there is no common law right to discovery prior to indictment, and legislature has not provided right to discovery based on filing of felony complaint. People v Leftenant, 175 Misc. 2d 605, 671 N.Y.S.2d 917, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 22 (N.Y. County Ct. 1998).

Defendant was not denied reasonable and meaningful opportunity to testify before grand jury in potential death penalty case when People presented case against him before responding to letter that he faxed to prosecutor one day before CLS CPL § 180.80 deadline, asking that prosecutor disclose exculpatory evidence and present mitigating evidence to grand jury, as (1) defendant was not statutorily entitled to discovery at point of grand jury presentations, and (2) by refusing to waive § 180.80, withdraw his CLS CPL § 190.50 notice or testify before receiving requested information, he forced prosecutor to act. People v Campos, 176 Misc. 2d 637, 672 N.Y.S.2d 1001, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 159 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1998).

Counts of indictment, charging defendant with killing 2 victims in different sequences and with attempted murder of surviving victim followed by one of 3 intentional murders, were not multiplicitous because (1) it was crucial, under first degree murder statute, that prosecution frame indictment to cover every possible chronology, (2) mere existence in indictment of 6 counts did not mean that each would be submitted to jury, (3) even if more than one first degree murder count was submitted to jury and defendant was convicted on all counts submitted, instructions to jury at sentencing stage of trial could clarify number of aggravating factors to be considered, and (4) in any event, it was logically impossible for defendant to receive multiple punishments no matter how many first degree murder counts were before jury for sentence. People v Harris, 177 Misc. 2d 259, 676 N.Y.S.2d 798, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 270 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1998).

Counts of indictment charging first degree intentional felony murder and first degree attempted felony murder, which alleged that victim "was killed while the defendant was in the course of...and in furtherance of" committing robbery, were sufficiently clear to satisfy requirements of CLS CPL § 200.50 even though they did not also allege that victim was killed "in furtherance of" robbery pursuant to CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(vii). People v Harris, 177 Misc. 2d 259, 676 N.Y.S.2d 798, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 270 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1998).

Counts of indictment charging first degree murder, read in conjunction with People's bill of particulars specifying that defendant was charged as principal and not accessory, satisfied specificity requirements for indictment under CLS CPL § 200.50(7)(a). People v Rivera, 182 Misc. 2d 235, 697 N.Y.S.2d 831, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 444 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1999).

Court would grant People's motion to amend 2 counts of indictment charging first degree murder under CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(vii) so as to delete words "acting in concert with another" therefrom since proposed amendment would not add charge nor change named and cited statute, counts at issue were legally sufficient, and proposed amendment would not in any way change theory of prosecution nor prejudice defendant. People v Rivera, 182 Misc. 2d 235, 697 N.Y.S.2d 831, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 444 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1999).

In death penalty case involving defendant who was charged with first degree murder of 2 victims in separate incidents but not indicted as serial murderer, court denied defense motion to release grand jury minutes where in camera inspection revealed that there was sufficient evidence to support indictment, charges mirrored well-established noncapital crimes and posed no novel concepts, grand jury proceeding was not defective, and there was no Brady material in minutes. People v Owens, 184 Misc. 2d 597, 711 N.Y.S.2d 884, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 234 (N.Y. County Ct. 2000).

Although the statutory scheme seemingly permits an indictment to take several offenses and combine them into one indictment, it does not require it, and a defendant's due process rights are not necessarily violated by the multiplicity of the charges. People v Taylor, 190 Misc. 2d 124, 738 N.Y.S.2d 497, 2002 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2002).

The relevant definition of first-degree murder necessarily contemplates the possibility that the crime will be committed, not through a single and continuing offense, but through the commission, as part of the same criminal transaction, of two or more separate and distinct offenses, each constituting an intentional murder, and therefore requiring separate indictments for each element of the crime. People v Taylor, 190 Misc. 2d 124, 738 N.Y.S.2d 497, 2002 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2002).

Indictment charging defendant with first degree murder based on the aggravating factor of a previous murder conviction, under N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(ix), was not rendered jurisdictionally defective by the fact that the charge was based on a conviction for second degree murder in another state, as the indictment fully informed defendant of the charge against him, and an accompanying special information gave him notice of the specific prior conviction being relied on. People v Williamson, 301 A.D.2d 860, 755 N.Y.S.2d 443, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 343 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 567, 763 N.Y.S.2d 824, 795 N.E.2d 50, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 2230 (N.Y. 2003).

4. Separate and lesser offenses

Attempted second degree assault is lesser included offense of each attempted first and second degree murder. People v Cabassa, 79 N.Y.2d 722, 586 N.Y.S.2d 234, 598 N.E.2d 1, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 1607 (N.Y.), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1011, 113 S. Ct. 633, 121 L. Ed. 2d 563, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 7648 (U.S. 1992).

In prosecution of driver and passenger of automobile for first and second degree attempted murder based on their conduct during high-speed chase, it was reversible error to refuse to submit second degree attempted assault as lesser included offense where passenger was shooting at moving police vehicle approximately 50 feet away while traveling at high speeds and while both vehicles were frequently changing lanes, so that jury could have reasonably concluded that passenger was aiming and shooting at police and their vehicle (1) in order to distract operator of police vehicle in hope that he would lose control, (2) in order to hit some portion of car to cause serious accident, or (3) to hit officers, but only to seriously injure and incapacitate them so that they would abort pursuit; moreover, jury could find that, even if passenger intended to kill, driver did not share in that intent. People v Cabassa, 79 N.Y.2d 722, 586 N.Y.S.2d 234, 598 N.E.2d 1, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 1607 (N.Y.), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1011, 113 S. Ct. 633, 121 L. Ed. 2d 563, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 7648 (U.S. 1992).

Where defendants were initially prosecuted for weapon possession, bank robbery and criminal conspiracy under federal indictment alleging that they "assaulted" persons, "put in jeopardy" lives of persons, and (as overt act of criminal conspiracy) "fired numerous shots at police officers" who pursued them as they fled from robbery, CLS CPL § 40.20(2)(b) did not prohibit subsequent state prosecution of same defendants for attempted murder of police officer under CLS Penal §§ 110.00 and 125.27(1)(A)(i) arising from same criminal transaction, nor did it prohibit conviction of one defendant of second degree assault under CLS Penal § 120.05(1) as lesser included offense. People v Bryant, 92 N.Y.2d 216, 677 N.Y.S.2d 286, 699 N.E.2d 910, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 2151 (N.Y. 1998).

Because defendant did not object to a jury charge where the jury was not told to consider the counts in any particular sequence, and defense counsel did not object to the continuation of deliberations after a partial verdict was rendered, defendant was properly found guilty of both first- and second-degree murder under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 125.27(1)(a)(viii), 125.25(1). People v Echevarria, 6 N.Y.3d 89, 809 N.Y.S.2d 509, 843 N.E.2d 149, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 3430 (N.Y. 2005).

Where defendants were convicted of first degree murders that were committed during a robbery and during a burglary, it was appropriate to modify their convictions on appeal by dismissing, pursuant to N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 300.40(3)(b), two second degree murder counts as inclusory concurrent counts; the second degree murder counts were lesser included, within the meaning of N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 300.30(4), under the first degree murder convictions, and felony murder is a lesser-included crime under intentional felony murder for purposes of N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 1.20(37), although the felonies predicating intentional felony murder under N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(vii) are not identical to those underlying ordinary felony murder under N.Y. Penal Law § 125.25(3). People v Miller, 6 N.Y.3d 295, 812 N.Y.S.2d 20, 845 N.E.2d 451, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 156 (N.Y. 2006).

Felony murder is a lesser-included crime under intentional felony murder. People v Miller, 6 N.Y.3d 295, 812 N.Y.S.2d 20, 845 N.E.2d 451, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 156 (N.Y. 2006).

In a prosecution of the defendant for intentional murder, the trial court properly submitted the charge of criminally negligent homicide to the jury as a lesser included offense where the defendant expressly requested that the charge be submitted over the objection of the district attorney, and where the evidence could have supported the finding that the defendant committed the lesser offense but did not commit the greater. People v Lewis, 84 A.D.2d 715, 444 N.Y.S.2d 450, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15871 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1981).

Court properly refused to instruct jury on second degree attempted assault as lesser included offense of attempted murder in first and second degrees, since element of deadly weapon or dangerous instrument is not element of attempted murder charges, and thus it would be possible to commit greater crimes without concomitantly, by same conduct, committing lesser offense. People v Martinez, 134 A.D.2d 458, 521 N.Y.S.2d 80, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50646 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 957, 525 N.Y.S.2d 841, 520 N.E.2d 559, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 429 (N.Y. 1988).

In prosecution for first degree attempted murder, defendant was not denied effective assistance by counsel's failure to request submission of second degree attempted assault as lesser included offense where ballistics expert testified that shell from sawed off shotgun which defendant fired from distance of 30 to 40 feet from his intended victim contained hundreds of pellets emitted with each round and that weapon was designed to spread those shots as they travelled further from barrel, so that shotgun was not capable of pinpoint wound-but-not-kill accuracy claimed by defendant. People v Smith, 198 A.D.2d 187, 604 N.Y.S.2d 86, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11135 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1993), app. denied, 83 N.Y.2d 810, 611 N.Y.S.2d 146, 633 N.E.2d 501, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 645 (N.Y. 1994).

Defendant was not entitled to jury charge of attempted aggravated assault on police officer as lesser-included offense of attempted first degree murder where, under statute in force at time of trial, aggravated assault on police officer required firearm, whereas first degree murder did not. People v Van Buren, 213 A.D.2d 504, 623 N.Y.S.2d 906, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2689 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 86 N.Y.2d 847, 634 N.Y.S.2d 457, 658 N.E.2d 235, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 4714 (N.Y. 1995).

Because it was possible to commit attempted first-degree murder under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00 and 120.05(2) without committing attempted second-degree assault under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00 and 125.27(1)(a), the trial court properly denied defendant's request for a lesser-included offense charge. People v Carter, 38 A.D.3d 1291, 833 N.Y.S.2d 323, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3511 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2007).

Defendant's conviction of a murder in the second degree count under N.Y. Penal Law § 125.25(3) and a robbery in the third degree count under N.Y. Penal Law § 160.05 had to be reversed and dismissed under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 300.40(3)(b) because defendant had been convicted of the inclusory concurrent counts of murder in the first degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(vii), (b) and robbery in the first degree (two counts) under N.Y. Penal Law § 160.15(1), (2). People v Horton, 46 A.D.3d 1225, 850 N.Y.S.2d 650, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13247 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 766, 854 N.Y.S.2d 328, 883 N.E.2d 1263, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 897 (N.Y. 2008).

Defendant's convictions of murder in the second degree under counts two and three of the indictment were reversed and dismissed because he was convicted of murder in the first degree upon a count of intentional felony murder pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(vii) and (1)(b) as a verdict of guilty upon the greatest count submitted is deemed a dismissal of every lesser count submitted, but not an acquittal thereon. People v Jeremiah, 147 A.D.3d 1199, 47 N.Y.S.3d 490, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1390 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 29 N.Y.3d 1033, 84 N.E.3d 974, 62 N.Y.S.3d 302, 2017 N.Y. Trial court erred when it did not instruct the jury to consider counts one and two in the alternative because count two, which charged defendant with murder in the second degree, was a lesser included offense of murder in the first degree, the offense charged in count one of the indictment; the court should have instructed the jury to consider count two only in the alternative as an inclusory concurrent count of count one. People v Smith, 186 A.D.3d 1106, 129 N.Y.S.3d 234, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4795 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2020).

Prosecution witness who participated with defendant and others in chain of burglaries at 3 grocery stores might have been accomplice, as matter of fact, to felony murder which allegedly occurred when defendant shot employee of fourth store in attempt to enter store while witness was on street outside, but witness was not accomplice on charge of intentional murder since, as matter of law, he could not reasonably be considered to have participated in "offense charged" on that count nor "offense based upon the same or some of the same facts or conduct which constitute the offense charged," in that any other offense that witness might reasonably have been found to participate in, such as attempted burglary or attempted robbery, was not "based upon" shooting of victim. People v Sledge, 136 Misc. 2d 705, 519 N.Y.S.2d 195, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2486 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1987), aff'd, 162 A.D.2d 481, 556 N.Y.S.2d 688, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7008 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1990).

Defendant was properly denied a jury charge on criminal facilitation in the fourth degree because that offense was not a lesser included offense of first-degree murder under the provision for hired killings. People v Powell, 304 A.D.2d 410, 757 N.Y.S.2d 297, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4110 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 578, 775 N.Y.S.2d 794, 807 N.E.2d 907, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 4684 (N.Y. 2003).

N.Y. Penal Law 125.27(1)(a)(vii), (viii) define the different ways in which murder can be committed, i.e., a person is guilty of murder when, with intent to cause the death of another, he or she does so in the course of the attempted commission of a robbery, N.Y. Penal Law 125.27(1)(a)(vii), or, when, with intent to cause the death of another, he or she does so and, as part of the same criminal transaction, with the intent to cause the death of an additional person, he or she causes the death of such additional person, N.Y. Penal Law 125.27(1)(a)(viii); because the New York Legislature has provided different ways in which murder in the first degree can occur, each of the cited subsections constitutes a separate and distinct offense, and, therefore, those counts of an indictment charging defendant with murder under two different subsections of the New York Penal Law constitute noninclusory counts, because neither count contains all of the elements of the other and conviction on each is permissible, N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 300.30(4). People v Lebron, 305 A.D.2d 799, 759 N.Y.S.2d 575, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5525 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 581, 764 N.Y.S.2d 391, 796 N.E.2d 486, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 3112 (N.Y. 2003).

With respect to N.Y. Penal Law 125.27(1)(a)(vii), (viii), the New York Legislature contemplates multiple convictions on noninclusory concurrent counts when it provides for separate but concurrent sentences on each such count, N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 300.30(3); N.Y. Penal Law § 70.25(2). People v Lebron, 305 A.D.2d 799, 759 N.Y.S.2d 575, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5525 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 581, 764 N.Y.S.2d 391, 796 N.E.2d 486, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 3112 (N.Y. 2003).

Appeals court affirmed defendant's conviction of two counts of murder each for killing each of two persons, under N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(vii), (viii); double jeopardy was not violated since killing while attempting robbery had elements separate from killing when another person was present. People v Lebron, 305 A.D.2d 799, 759 N.Y.S.2d 575, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5525 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 581, 764 N.Y.S.2d 391, 796 N.E.2d 486, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 3112 (N.Y. 2003).

Defendant's conviction for murder in the first degree contained the lesser included offense of murder in the second degree and defendant's conviction on the greatest of several concurrent counts was a dismissal of all lesser counts, so defendant's convictions for murder in the second degree had to be vacated. People v Rodriguez, 7 A.D.3d 545, 776 N.Y.S.2d 79, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6439 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 3 N.Y.3d 646, 782 N.Y.S.2d 418, 816 N.E.2d 208, 2004 N.Y. Defendant who fired shots at two officers who stopped his vehicle should not have been convicted of attempted murder in the first degree and reckless endangerment in the first degree arising out of the same act and causing the same result, and the appellate court exercised its power to review defendant's convictions as a matter of discretion, pursuant to N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 470.15(6)(a), and ordered a new trial on those charges. People v Robinson, 8 A.D.3d 1028, 778 N.Y.S.2d 808, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8241 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2004), aff'd sub. nom., People v Daniels, 5 N.Y.3d 738, 800 N.Y.S.2d 369, 833 N.E.2d 704, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 1252 (N.Y. 2005).

After a defendant drove a stolen truck into a policeman in an unmarked police car, N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 125.27(1)(a)(i) attempted murder in the first degree and one of the N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 120.10 attempted assault in the first degree charges were not "duplicitous" so as to constitute just one offense; they were noninclusory concurrent counts, N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 300.30(4) and it was within trial court's discretion to consider both in rendering its verdict, N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 300.40(3)(a) even though the sentences had to be concurrent, N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 300.30(3), N.Y. Penal Law § 70.25(2). That was because each crime required proof of an additional fact that the other did not. People v Thomson, 13 A.D.3d 805, 786 N.Y.S.2d 262, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15344 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2004), app. denied, 4 N.Y.3d 836, 796 N.Y.S.2d 591, 829 N.E.2d 684, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 1002 (N.Y. 2005).

Defendant's second-degree murder convictions and their sentences were vacated and they were dismissed from the indictment as they were inclusory concurrent counts of defendant's first-degree murder convictions. People v Rosas, 30 A.D.3d 545, 818 N.Y.S.2d 126, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8042 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.3d 762, 819 N.Y.S.2d 888, 853 N.E.2d 259, 2006 N.Y. Defendant's conviction for assault in the first degree was not a lesser included offense of attempted murder in the first degree because it was theoretically possible to attempt to murder a person without using a dangerous instrument or deadly weapon and without causing serious physical injury. People v Faulkner, 36 A.D.3d 1009, 826 N.Y.S.2d 526, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 230 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 8 N.Y.3d 944, 836 N.Y.S.2d 554, 868 N.E.2d 237, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 1311 (N.Y. 2007).

As defendant committed separate acts with the requisite criminal intent, and there was no overlap of statutory elements in his convictions for murder in the first degree and criminal possession of a weapon in the second degree, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 125.27(1)(a)(viii) and 265.03(1)(b), the imposition of consecutive terms of imprisonment on him was proper and lawful under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.25(2). People v Wright, 87 A.D.3d 229, 926 N.Y.S.2d 43, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5250 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2011), aff'd in part, modified, 19 N.Y.3d 359, 948 N.Y.S.2d 228, 971 N.E.2d 358, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 1284 (N.Y. 2012).

5. Attempts

Evidence was insufficient to show that defendant shared intent of his codefendant and aided him in commission of attempted murder since defendant's mere presence at scene was not sufficient to establish his guilt, and defendant's other conduct at scene—ducking down in front seat of car before codefendant drew gun and initiated shoot-out with police—was equivocal. People v Yarrell, 75 N.Y.2d 828, 552 N.Y.S.2d 557, 551 N.E.2d 1235, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 138 (N.Y. 1990).

Evidence was sufficient to support convictions for first and second degree attempted murder where defendants, driver and passenger of vehicle, ignored police officers' direction to pull over, proceeded to drive at high rate of speed through city streets to avoid arrest, during which driver continually changed lanes, moving from right lane to left and back to right, thereby enabling passenger to obtain direct line of fire toward pursuing police vehicle, and then proceeded to drive vehicle directly toward roadblock, where 2 uniformed officers stood next to patrol car, permitting passenger to aim and fire his weapon at one officer; under circumstances, jury could find that passenger's actions in firing at officers was not "spontaneous" or unanticipated by driver. People v Cabassa, 79 N.Y.2d 722, 586 N.Y.S.2d 234, 598 N.E.2d 1, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 1607 (N.Y.), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1011, 113 S. Ct. 633, 121 L. Ed. 2d 563, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 7648 (U.S. 1992).

In determining whether New York's statutory double jeopardy provision permits sequential federal and state prosecutions for offenses arising from same criminal transaction, first prong of exception under CLS CPL § 40.20(2)(b) requires comparison of charges to determine whether each federal offense contains element that is not element of any state offense charged, and vice versa; thus, state prosecution of defendants for attempted murder under CLS Penal §§ 110.00 and 125.27(1)(A)(i) and knowing possession of defaced firearms under CLS Penal § 265.02(3) was not barred by prior federal prosecution for bank robbery under 18 USCS §§ 2113(a) and (d), using and possessing firearms under 18 USCS § 924(c), and conspiracy under 18 USCS § 371. People v Bryant, 92 N.Y.2d 216, 677 N.Y.S.2d 286, 699 N.E.2d 910, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 2151 (N.Y. 1998).

Where the evidence showed that defendant fired a gun in the direction of two detectives but did not definitively establish the identity of his intended victim, a single charge of attempted intentional murder was not duplicitous under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law art. 200.30(1); as actual death was not an element of attempted murder, the identity of the intended victim was not relevant in determining whether the crime was committed. Thus, the trial court was not obliged to instruct the jury to unanimously determine which person was the intended victim. People v Wells, 7 N.Y.3d 51, 817 N.Y.S.2d 590, 850 N.E.2d 637, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 1307 (N.Y. 2006).

Sentence imposed on defendant convicted of attempted murder of policeman and possession of weapon as felony of some 21 years to life and seven years respectively was excessive, and sentence for attempted murder would be modified, in exercise of discretion, to 15 years to life. People v Kenyatta, 52 A.D.2d 783, 383 N.Y.S.2d 20, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12565 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1976).

Notwithstanding that New York's death penalty statute for murder in the first degree has been held to be unconstitutional, defendant was properly convicted by a jury of attempted murder in the first degree as a result of an incident in which he shot a police officer in the back with a rifle, since, to the extent Penal Law § 125.27 may provide a substantive basis for a charge of attempted murder in the first degree, its vitality continues to exist for the reason that there was no similar interdependence between Penal Law § 60.06 (the death penalty statute) and the crime of attempted murder in the first degree, and a conviction for that offense does not require the decision of the death penalty, and since the crime of attempted murder in the first degree has its own sentencing provision. People v Carr, 87 A.D.2d 969, 450 N.Y.S.2d 94, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16501 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 56 N.Y.2d 809, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 6014 (N.Y. 1982).

Evidence was insufficient to sustain those counts of indictment charging passenger and driver of limousine with first and second degree attempted murder after police officer was injured while hanging onto driver's arm in attempt to stop vehicle from leaving scene, since it could not be inferred that limousine was deliberately driven to cause death of officer but only that driver accelerated to dislodge officer's grip in order to avoid apprehension.

People v Fraser, 126 A.D.2d 740, 511 N.Y.S.2d 326, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 41891 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Statutory provision of CLS CPL § 30.30 excluding certain crimes from limitation periods uses unambiguous language and does not extend to offenses involving attempt to commit enumerated crimes; accordingly, indictment charging defendant with attempted murder in first degree was subject to 6-month speedy trial limitation. People v Quinones, 126 A.D.2d 757, 511 N.Y.S.2d 341, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 41913 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain defendant's conviction for attempted first degree murder of 2 police officers who, after identifying themselves to occupant of apartment, saw defendant holding shotgun pointed to floor as door swung open, whereupon defendant, before officers could draw their own weapons or take cover, raised gun and aimed it at officers' heads, pulled trigger hard enough so that officers and defendant's companion heard click, jumped up and back in anticipation of force of discharge, then fled when gun failed to fire. People v Deresky, 137 A.D.2d 704, 525 N.Y.S.2d 49, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1765 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 1025, 530 N.Y.S.2d 560, 526 N.E.2d 52, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 2186 (N.Y. 1988).

It was no defense to first degree attempted murder prosecution that crime was factually impossible because shotgun malfunctioned when defendant pulled trigger while aiming at police officers. People v Deresky, 137 A.D.2d 704, 525 N.Y.S.2d 49, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1765 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 1025, 530 N.Y.S.2d 560, 526 N.E.2d 52, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 2186 (N.Y. 1988).

Evidence was legally sufficient to establish defendant's guilt of 2 counts of attempted first degree murder where, during his arrest after drug transaction, he aimed partially loaded revolver at 2 arresting officers and pulled trigger twice on 2 empty chambers, and he was subdued prior to his squeezing trigger third time on loaded chamber; defendant's intent to kill 2 officers could be readily inferred. People v Orama, 150 A.D.2d 505, 541 N.Y.S.2d 102, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6460 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 744, 545 N.Y.S.2d 119, 543 N.E.2d 762, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 2587 (N.Y. 1989).

Indictment for first degree attempted murder was sufficient since whether indictment charged that defendant discharged gun "at" or "in direction of" police officers was not critical, as long as he did so with intent to cause death by his actions. People v Nicholas, 163 A.D.2d 844, 558 N.Y.S.2d 373, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9525 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 989, 563 N.Y.S.2d 778, 565 N.E.2d 527, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 4673 (N.Y. 1990).

Proof was sufficient to establish intent in regard to charges of first degree attempted murder and first degree attempted assault with respect to police officer where (1) defendant took woman hostage at airport and demanded airplane to fly him to Japan, (2) after woman escaped, defendant ran at police officer while holding 5-inch serrated steak knife, and (3) when defendant, with knife raised, was within 4 feet of officer, officer shot him twice in leg to stop his advance. People v Taylor, 163 A.D.2d 902, 558 N.Y.S.2d 425, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9624 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 944, 563 N.Y.S.2d 74, 564 N.E.2d 684, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 4382 (N.Y. 1990).

Evidence was sufficient to support convictions on 3 separate counts of attempted first degree murder where defendant initiated armed confrontation with police and, during confrontation, he pointed his gun at each of 3 officers and either fired or misfired his gun. People v Danielson, 184 A.D.2d 723, 585 N.Y.S.2d 78, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8540 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 80 N.Y.2d 928, 589 N.Y.S.2d 856, 603 N.E.2d 961, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 4030 (N.Y. 1992).

Evidence supported convictions of attempted first degree murder and related offenses arising from incident in which defendant and another shot at 2 police officers from their car, despite claim that defendant was merely unsuspecting occupant of car, where (1) driver testified that he had seen defendant holding gun, (2) ballistics evidence showed that 2 weapons were fired at officers, and (3) spent shells recovered in area of incident were found not to have come from gun recovered from defendant's companion. People v La Torres, 186 A.D.2d 479, 590 N.Y.S.2d 187, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12437 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1992), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 842, 595 N.Y.S.2d 741, 611 N.E.2d 780, 1993 N.Y. Evidence was sufficient to support conviction for first degree attempted murder where it was shown that, while being chased by officers after attempted robbery, defendant turned around, assumed combat stance, and shot 3 rounds from pistol at officers. People v Santos, 202 A.D.2d 258, 608 N.Y.S.2d 645, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2296 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 83 N.Y.2d 1007, 616 N.Y.S.2d 488, 640 N.E.2d 156, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 3259 (N.Y. 1994).

In attempted first degree murder trial, consecutive sentences were legally imposedwhere jury found that defendant had tried to kill 2 police officers, since each attempted killing, which involved firing of separate shots, constituted distinct act perpetrated against separate victim. People v Ramos, 205 A.D.2d 404, 613 N.Y.S.2d 879, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6360 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 84 N.Y.2d 831, 617 N.Y.S.2d 151, 641 N.E.2d 172, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 3733 (N.Y. 1994).

Evidence was sufficient to support conviction of attempted first degree murder where defendant removed gun hidden in stolen car next to where he was standing and shot police officer standing nearby with his back to defendant; although defendant denied intent to kill officer, intent to kill could be inferred from fact that he directed gun at officer and pulled trigger. People v Francis, 209 A.D.2d 539, 619 N.Y.S.2d 71, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11196 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994), app. denied, 85 N.Y.2d 909, 627 N.Y.S.2d 331, 650 N.E.2d 1333, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 1603 (N.Y. 1995).

Evidence supported conclusion that defendant acted in concert with codefendant and that he had mental culpability required for commission of attempted first and second degree murder, second degree assault, and second degree weapon possession in assault on off-duty police officer where (1) defendant and codefendant approached officer's motorcycle, displayed weapons, and attempted to steal motorcycle, (2) officer displayed his shield and yelled "police," after which codefendant fired shots at officer, and (3) gun fight ensued in which officer was shot in thigh. People v Smith, 210 A.D.2d 267, 620 N.Y.S.2d 67, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12316 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994), app. denied, 85 N.Y.2d 914, 627 N.Y.S.2d 337, 650 N.E.2d 1339, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 1740 (N.Y. 1995).

Defendant's conviction of attempted first degree murder was supported by evidence that he pointed his gun at police officer and fired it. People v Van Buren, 213 A.D.2d 504, 623 N.Y.S.2d 906, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2689 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 86 N.Y.2d 847, 634 N.Y.S.2d 457, 658 N.E.2d 235, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 4714 (N.Y. 1995).

Grand jury evidence was legally sufficient to establish elements of attempted first degree murder where defendant, while in police custody, suddenly pulled loaded weapon from his waistband, placed his finger on trigger, and pointed weapon at arresting officers' midsections. People v Chen, 217 A.D.2d 637, 629 N.Y.S.2d 771, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7810 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1995).

Conviction of attempted first degree murder, first degree reckless endangerment, and second, third, and fourth degree weapon possession was supported by evidence that defendant repeatedly tried to pull trigger while gun was pointed at officer's face during struggle over gun. People v Vega, 238 A.D.2d 278, 657 N.Y.S.2d 30, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4308 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 911, 663 N.Y.S.2d 523, 686 N.E.2d 235, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3544 (N.Y. 1997).

Defendant's intent to cause death of uniformed police officer who was pursuing him was shown by fact that defendant pointed his gun at officer and fired twice within about 10 feet of officer's body. People v German, 243 A.D.2d 647, 663 N.Y.S.2d 259, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10184 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 892, 669 N.Y.S.2d 6, 691 N.E.2d 1032, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 404 (N.Y. 1998).

Evidence that defendant momentarily pointed loaded gun at chest of police officer from distance of 25 feet was insufficient to prove first degree attempted murder, where there was no proof that defendant had his finger on trigger or otherwise came very near to accomplishing intended crime, and fact that he had fired shots in direction of civilians moments before his encounter with police was insufficient to permit inference that his finger remained on trigger. People v Chandler, 250 A.D.2d 410, 673 N.Y.S.2d 100, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5423 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Jury verdict convicting defendant of attempted first and second degree murder and second degree weapon possession was not against weight of evidence where defendant's intent to kill 2 civilians and police officer could be reasonably be inferred from evidence, including testimony that defendant aimed and fired at each of 3 victims and then, during police pursuit, turned, advanced in direction of officer, and continued to fire. People v Peets, 286 A.D.2d 624, 730 N.Y.S.2d 108, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8593 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 686, 738 N.Y.S.2d 302, 764 N.E.2d 406, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4501 (N.Y. 2001).

Sufficient evidence supported defendant's conviction of four counts of attempted murder in the first degree in violation of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 125.27(1)(a)(viii), (b); there was evidence establishing that defendant had the requisite intent to kill or seriously injure additional persons other than defendant's intended victim by shooting at them, as the intent to harm additional persons could have been inferred from defendant's actions in shooting into a crowd and pursuing individuals as they entered an apartment building. People v McLee, 32 A.D.3d 1315, 821 N.Y.S.2d 720, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11666 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2006), app. denied, 8 N.Y.3d 847, 862 N.E.2d 798, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 426 (N.Y. 2007).

Evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of attempted murder in violation of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 125.27 because there was evidence that defendant pointed a loaded revolver at close range at a police officer who was chasing him, but that the officer was able to grab the gun away from defendant after a struggle. People v Smith, 32 A.D.3d 1318, 821 N.Y.S.2d 723, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11701 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.3d 929, 827 N.Y.S.2d 698, 860 N.E.2d 1000, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 4169 (N.Y. 2006).

Verdict convicting defendant of attempted first degree murder was supported by the weight of evidence because there was sufficient corroborating evidence to support accomplice testimony that defendant made repeated solicitation for the participation of his coconspirators to shoot and rob the victim, other evidence were his own tweets and text messages between himself and coconspirators, and neurosurgeon's testimony on the need for immediate life-saving surgery on traumatic wounds to victim's brain. People v Chapman, 182 A.D.3d 862, 123 N.Y.S.3d 236, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2436 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2020).

Evidence before grand jury was insufficient to support charge of attempted first degree murder of police officer where (1) officer was off duty, not in uniform, and did not display shield or service revolver, (2) prior to walking his cousin to her automobile because she feared group of individuals who had threatened her, officer never called for assistance and did not do so until after shots were fired, (3) officer's actions in helping his cousin were no different from actions which any civilian might have taken under same circumstances, and (4) cousin's testimony that group yelled "if you are cops...show us your weapon" was consistent with defendant's lack of awareness as to officer's status. People v Martin, 163 Misc. 2d 799, 622 N.Y.S.2d 665, 1994 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 622 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1994).

In prosecution arising out of defendant's pointing of gun at police officer who was trying to detain him, defendant's assaultive behavior immediately prior to his pointing gun and his statement afterward evinced his intent to shoot officer and supported indictment for attempted first degree murder; grand jury could have inferred that actions of officers who came to detaining officer's aid was only thing that stopped defendant from pulling trigger. People v Dixon, 167 Misc. 2d 612, 640 N.Y.S.2d 403, 1996 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 62 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1996).

Since second degree intentional murder can be charged as attempt, core conduct of first degree intentional murder, as set out in main clause of CLS Penal § 125.27, can be attempted. People v Fernandez, 173 Misc. 2d 938, 662 N.Y.S.2d 349, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 349 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

Defendant went beyond mere preparation, and was properly charged with first degree attempted murder based on his hiring of someone to procure hit man, even though that person went to police as informant and never intended to carry out his role, based on grand jury evidence that he gave $10,000 to informant for hit man and promised $20,000 more on confirmation of victim's death, gave victim's picture and pertinent information to informant, and even demanded that victim's body be found in public. People v Sabo, 179 Misc. 2d 396, 687 N.Y.S.2d 513, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 653 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1998).

Defendant's conviction and 25-year sentence of attempted murder in the second degree, criminal use of a firearm in the first degree, assault in the first degree, and criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree, based on his drive-by shooting at a pedestrian were affirmed; police response in four minutes to stop red car with white occupants, as described by victim and a bystander, was based on reasonable suspicion, so evidence was not suppressed. iven the callous and random nature of the crime, the fact that defendant was on a specific mission that morning to intentionally shoot someone in this particular neighborhood and the fact that defendant had a recent conviction of similar ilk, we find the 25- year sentence to be neither harsh nor excessive People v Berry, 306 A.D.2d 623, 762 N.Y.S.2d 139, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6636 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 618, 767 N.Y.S.2d 401, 799 N.E.2d 624, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 3702 (N.Y. 2003).

Defendant's guilty plea to the charge of first-degree attempted murder was knowingly and voluntarily made where a review of the record indicated that the county court engaged in a thorough plea colloquy, during which defendant acknowledged that he understood the rights he was giving up, he had not been coerced, he was not under the influence of medication or alcohol, his mind was clear, he had ample opportunity to discuss the ramifications of his plea with counsel and he did, in fact, commit the crime as charged. People v Hodge, 4 A.D.3d 676, 772 N.Y.S.2d 748, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2043 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 2 N.Y.3d 800, 781 N.Y.S.2d 300, 814 N.E.2d 472, 2004 N.Y. Where a trial court charged the jury pursuant to defendant's request on justification as it related to the defense of defendant under N.Y. Penal Law § 35.15(2)(a) rather than as it related to the defense of a premises during a burglary under N.Y. Penal Law § 35.20(3), defendant waived the contention that defendant was deprived of a fair trial; in any event, the evidence was legally sufficient to establish that defendant attempted to cause the death of another person that he knew or should have known was a police officer, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 125.27(1)(a)(i), 110.00. People v Rocker, 5 A.D.3d 1106, 773 N.Y.S.2d 318, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2902 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2004).

Evidence was sufficient to support defendant's conviction for attempted first-degree murder of police officer under Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(i), where defendant pointed loaded gun at officer, officer heard loud metallic click, hammer of gun recovered from scene contained cartridge in its firing chamber, hammer of gun was down, and cartridge's primer was slightly dented. Leslie v Artuz, 72 F. Supp. 2d 267, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16438 (S.D.N.Y. 1999), aff'd, 230 F.3d 25, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 25710 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2000).

Where evidence indicated that petitioner fired at police officers at least twice and the officers testified that petitioner assumed what they termed a "combat stance" and used both hands to aim the gun at them when he fired, and because gun is inherently a deadly weapon, petitioner failed to show that no reasonable jury could conclude that he intended to kill the officers when he shot at them. Douglas v Portuondo, 232 F. Supp. 2d 106, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21583 (S.D.N.Y. 2002).

6. Affirmative defenses

The defenses under New York's death penalty statute for murder of a corrections officer (Penal Law, §§ 60.06, 125.27, subd

1, par [a], cl [ii]) do not allow an individualized consideration of the character, propensity, record or attributes of the individual offender as required by the Supreme Court, since the defenses simply do not present the required information and do not permit a jury which has rejected these defenses and has found a defendant guilty of murder in the first degree to then mitigate the punishment by resurrecting the defenses. People v Davis, 43 N.Y.2d 17, 400 N.Y.S.2d 735, 371 N.E.2d 456, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 2434 (N.Y. 1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 998, 98 S. Ct. 1653, 56 L. Ed. 2d 88, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 1645 (U.S. 1978), cert. denied, 438 U.S. 914, 98 S. Ct. 3143, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1160, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2435 (U.S. 1978).

People did not preserve for appellate review issue of whether defense of extreme emotional disturbance is applicable to attempted murder where People did not argue that point in opposition to defendant's request for charge on extreme emotional disturbance. People v Tabarez, 69 N.Y.2d 663, 511 N.Y.S.2d 832, 503 N.E.2d 1369, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 21265 (N.Y. 1986).

Defense of extreme emotional disturbance under CLS Penal Law § 125.27(2)(a) is applicable to attempted murder in first degree, since, applying principal that Penal Law is not to be strictly construed (CLS Penal Law § 5.00), defendant, acting under influence of extreme emotional disturbance, who shoots at police officer and misses, should not be convicted of class A-1 felony, while he would be subject only to conviction for class B felony had his bullet found its mark and killed officer. People v Tabarez, 113 A.D.2d 461, 497 N.Y.S.2d 80, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52944 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1985), aff'd, 69 N.Y.2d 663, 511 N.Y.S.2d 832, 503 N.E.2d 1369, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 21265 (N.Y. 1986).

Court committed reversible error during prosecution of defendant convicted of attempted murder in first degree, robbery in third degree and criminal possession of weapon in third degree, by refusing defendant's request to instruct jury on affirmative defense of extreme emotional disturbance under CLS Penal Law § 125.27(2)(a), since there was ample objective and opinion evidence from which jury might have concluded that at time defendant turned and fired at police officer, he was suffering from extreme emotional disturbance, and that explanation offered by defendant was "objectively" reasonable, and not attributable to robbery which preceded shooting incident, where evidence indicates that defendant's disturbance could have predated robbery and, taking into account his inadequate personality and borderline retardation, could have been triggered by stress of his prolong unemployment, as well as residual effects of his ingestion of toxic fruit as youngster. People v Tabarez, 113 A.D.2d 461, 497 N.Y.S.2d 80, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52944 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1985), aff'd, 69 N.Y.2d 663, 511 N.Y.S.2d 832, 503 N.E.2d 1369, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 21265 (N.Y. 1986).

Defendant's assertion that court erred in refusing to charge affirmative defense of extreme emotional disturbance is without merit, since defendant's sworn testimony that he did not intend to hit police officer or to harm him in any way, but intended only to provoke police officer into shooting back, is incompatible with affirmative defense of extreme emotional disturbance. People v Lyness, 115 A.D.2d 333, 495 N.Y.S.2d 848, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 54618 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1985), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1070, 107 S. Ct. 2465, 95 L. Ed. 2d 873, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 2320 (U.S. 1987).

Manslaughter defendant was properly precluded from offering evidence as to 3 instances of victim's violent behavior of which defendant had knowledge, although evidence of other instances of victim's violent behavior was permitted, where 3 instances were not reasonably related in time and quality to particular justification defense advanced by defendant at trial. People v Tumerman, 133 A.D.2d 714, 519 N.Y.S.2d 880, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 51761 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 938, 524 N.Y.S.2d 690, 519 N.E.2d 636, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 3945 (N.Y. 1988).

In prosecution for first degree attempted murder of police officers, court properly refused to submit defense of extreme emotional disturbance to jury, notwithstanding that defendant and his female companion argued prior to arrival of police and despite fact that defendant may have used drugs in past and smelled of liquor at time of incident, since there was no evidence of loss of self-control or reasonable excuse for such emotional state. People v Deresky, 137 A.D.2d 704, 525 N.Y.S.2d 49, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1765 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 1025, 530 N.Y.S.2d 560, 526 N.E.2d 52, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 2186 (N.Y. 1988).

Defendant, associated with "Black Liberation Army" and being sought in connection with prior robbery, was not entitled to jury charge of justification in prosecution for first degree attempted murder of police officers, which arose when he fired gun at officers following high speed car chase, since (1) defendant could have peacefully surrendered prior to escalating confrontation by merely pulling his car over after observing police car, which had merely activated its roof rack lights and siren, (2) defendant's assertion that he reasonably feared that police were intent on killing him even before he attempted to flee rested on wholly subjective perception that pursuing officers would employ unwarranted deadly force in effecting his arrest since law enforcement personnel had allegedly used "oppressive tactics" against black activists in past, (3) although police had twice struck defendant's car with their vehicle, they did so only after he materially heightened intensity of chase by recklessly traversing highway median, and (4) immediately before second collision, defendant's accomplice fired at officers in order to deter their pursuit. People v Odinga, 143 A.D.2d 202, 531 N.Y.S.2d 818, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8446 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 853, 537 N.Y.S.2d 500, 534 N.E.2d 338, 1988 N.Y. In prosecution for first degree attempted murder, defendant was not entitled to jury charge on defense of extreme emotional disturbance where he had testified that he believed his behavior was entirely rational and justified from his own point of view, and he never suggested that his thinking was disturbed or that he suffered any loss of self-control or "'mental infirmity,' not rising to level of insanity" usually associated with such defense. People v Odinga, 143 A.D.2d 202, 531 N.Y.S.2d 818, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8446 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 853, 537 N.Y.S.2d 500, 534 N.E.2d 338, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 6198 (N.Y. 1988), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 858, 537 N.Y.S.2d 505, 534 N.E.2d 343, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 6318 (N.Y. 1988).

First degree murder defendant's statement that "you can do anything you want to as long as you go for psychiatric help" was admissible to rebut his insanity defense by showing his understanding of how feigned insanity could be to his advantage. People v Swan, 158 A.D.2d 158, 557 N.Y.S.2d 791, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9757 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 991, 563 N.Y.S.2d 780, 565 N.E.2d 529, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 4730 (N.Y. 1990).

At first degree murder trial in which defendant raised insanity defense, defendant's psychiatrist was properly cross-examined concerning his testimony at prior retention hearings since expert's track record is clearly probative of his competence and expertise. People v Swan, 158 A.D.2d 158, 557 N.Y.S.2d 791, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9757 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 991, 563 N.Y.S.2d 780, 565 N.E.2d 529, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 4730 (N.Y. 1990).

In attempted first degree murder trial, no reasonable view of evidence could establish elements of defense of justification where, although police officer had drawn his gun, he merely requested defendant to stop, defendant instead hid behind car and then deliberately shot at officer, who had identified himself as police officer and was in uniform, and defendant fired 6 to 8 shots at officer at close range, and continued to shoot at officer after he had fallen. People v Douglas, 160 A.D.2d 1015, 554 N.Y.S.2d 727, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4985 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 855, 560 N.Y.S.2d 995, 561 N.E.2d 895, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 3848 (N.Y. 1990).

In trial for attempted first degree murder, jury properly rejected affirmative defense of extreme emotional disturbance on basis of evidence that defendant, while clearly angry with his wife and son in period of time preceding shootout, confronted police officers in calm and controlled manner, aimed his handgun at them, and ordered them to drop their weapons; defendant did not exhibit loss of self-control generally associated with defense of extreme emotional disturbance. People v Marinaccio, 190 A.D.2d 819, 593 N.Y.S.2d 856, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1479 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 1016, 600 N.Y.S.2d 204, 616 N.E.2d 861, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 2503 (N.Y. 1993).

In prosecution for first degree murder arising out of defendant's shooting of 2 police officers, defendant's alleged extreme emotional disturbance was not reasonably explained by actions of police officer 4 months earlier in allegedly abusing and threatening defendant during interrogation since neither defendant nor anyone else present at such interrogation testified to what occurred there, and only testimony concerning event was given by defendant's expert witness psychologist, who recited what defendant had told him, which was hearsay inadmissible to prove truth of facts related by defendant. People v Manzella, 199 A.D.2d 964, 606 N.Y.S.2d 471, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12544 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1993), app. denied, 83 N.Y.2d 807, 611 N.Y.S.2d 143, 633 N.E.2d 498, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 569 (N.Y. 1994).

Trial court was not obligated to instruct jury sua sponte regarding justification in prosecution for multiple offenses, including attempted first degree murder, attempted second degree murder, attempted aggravated assault on police officer and first degree assault, where defendant's trial counsel made proper strategic decision in not requesting jury charge regarding justification, because such defense was unsupported by evidence and would have posed risk of undermining defense of lack of intent. People v Midgette, 242 A.D.2d 492, 662 N.Y.S.2d 479, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9119 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 835, 667 N.Y.S.2d 689, 690 N.E.2d 498, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4364 (N.Y. 1997).

Because a jury instruction precluded the jury, in assessing the reasonableness of defendant's belief that he was in deadly peril, from considering all of the circumstances surrounding him from his point of view at the time that he used deadly force, the charge was erroneous and the error could not be deemed harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. People v Young, 33 A.D.3d 1120, 825 N.Y.S.2d 147, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12681 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006), app. denied, 8 N.Y.3d 921, 834 N.Y.S.2d 511, 866 N.E.2d 457, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 1240 (N.Y. 2007).

Pursuant to N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 250.10, a defendant who intends to interpose an affirmative defense of extreme emotional disturbance is required to serve and file a notice of intent to proffer psychiatric evidence and to submit to an exam by a psychiatrist designated by the People, even though he only intends to present lay testimony in support of that defense. People v Diaz, 62 A.D.3d 157, 876 N.Y.S.2d 69, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1963 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2009), aff'd, 15 N.Y.3d 40, 904 N.Y.S.2d 343, 930 N.E.2d 264, 2010 N.Y. LEXIS 1149 (N.Y. 2010).

Trial court erred in denying defendant's N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law art. 440 motion, alleging ineffective assistance of counsel, without a hearing, under circumstances in which defendant claimed that counsel advised him, inter alia, that he had an excellent defense of extreme emotional disturbance; the affirmative defense of extreme emotional disturbance was only a defense to intentional murder, and defendant was not charged with that crime. People v Hampton, 64 A.D.3d 872, 883 N.Y.S.2d 338, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5569 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 13 N.Y.3d 796, 887 N.Y.S.2d 546, 916 N.E.2d 441, 2009 N.Y. LEXIS 4389 (N.Y. 2009).

Because defendant's N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 250.10(2) notice of a psychiatric defense was untimely and inadequate, and because defendant repeatedly ignored legitimate requests made by the prosecution for more information regarding the specifics of defendant's N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(2)(a) defense, the trial court properly precluded defendant from asserting the defense or presenting lay evidence of defendant's alleged extreme emotional disturbance. People v Muller, 72 A.D.3d 1329, 899 N.Y.S.2d 425, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3157 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 15 N.Y.3d 776, 907 N.Y.S.2d 465, 933 N.E.2d 1058, 2010 N.Y. LEXIS 2403 (N.Y. 2010).

Admission of challenged testimony was harmless in light of the overwhelming evidence establishing both defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt and his corresponding failure to prove his affirmative defense of extreme emotional disturbance by a preponderance of the evidence. People v Pavone, 117 A.D.3d 1329, 986 N.Y.S.2d 674, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3841 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2014), aff'd, 26 N.Y.3d 629, 47 N.E.3d 56, 26 N.Y.S.3d 728, 2015 N.Y. LEXIS 3926 (N.Y. 2015).

Evidence was legally sufficient to support defendant's convictions for murder in the first degree because he failed to sufficiently establish the defense of extreme emotional disturbance. People v Ashline, 124 A.D.3d 1258, 3 N.Y.S.3d 469, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 170 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2015), app. denied, 27 N.Y.3d 1128, 61 N.E.3d 508, 39 N.Y.S.3d 109, 2016 N.Y. LEXIS 2102 (N.Y. 2016).

Statute declaring it to be an affirmative defense to charge of murder that the defendant acted under the influence of extreme emotional disturbance unconstitutionally shifts burden of proof to the defendant by obliging him to plead and prove an affirmative defense on the issue of the degree of culpability; when the defense of extreme emotional disturbance is pleaded to a murder indictment, state must prove its absence beyond a reasonable doubt. People v Balogun, 82 Misc. 2d 907, 372 N.Y.S.2d 384, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2843 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1975).

United States Supreme Court decision holding that due process requires the prosecution to prove, beyond a reasonable doubt, the absence of the influence of extreme emotional disturbance when this issue is properly presented in trial of murder indictment applies only to cases in which the trial commences after June 9, 1975. People v Balogun, 82 Misc. 2d 907, 372 N.Y.S.2d 384, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2843 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1975).

The affirmative defense of extreme emotional disturbance (Penal Law, § 125.27, subd 2, par [a]) must be submitted to the jury on the highest count against defendant, attempted murder in the first degree, since the extreme emotional disturbance formulation, which has significantly expanded upon the heat of passion concept, may be charged in attempted murder in the first degree where a three-pronged formulation is met: that the extreme emotional disturbance is the emotional state of a person who has no mental disease or defect that rises to the level established by section 30.05 of the Penal Law, who is exposed to an extremely unusual and overwhelming stress and has an extreme emotional reaction to it, as a result of which there is a loss of self-control, and reason is overborne by intense feelings; therefore, since defendant's psychological condition is relevant in relation to his emotional state and testimony relevant to defendant's plea of insanity is applicable to the affirmative defense of extreme emotional disturbance, both must be submitted to the jury. People v Ford, 102 Misc. 2d 160, 423 N.Y.S.2d 402, 1979 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2841 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1979).

In prosecution for first and second degree murder and other crimes, prosecution had right under CLS CPL § 250.10 to independent examination of defendant by expert of its choosing, even though defendant was not examined by any expert who would testify on her behalf during guilt phase of trial, and no expert would be testifying on her behalf during guilt phase, where defendant served notice of intent to rely on defense of diminished capacity, which she planned to prove through her school grades and I.Q. and psychological tests performed at her schools, to negate element of intent of crimes charged; it would be unfair for defendant to raise defense involving her mental capacity and then hide behind her constitutional rights, thus making insurmountable prosecution's burden of proving intent beyond reasonable doubt. People v Irwin, 182 Misc. 2d 113, 695 N.Y.S.2d 906, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 398 (N.Y. County Ct. 1999).

Because the defense of extreme emotional disturbance in N.Y. Penal Law §§ 125.25(1)(a), 125.27(2)(a) was only available to a defendant charged with first- or second-degree murder or attempted murder, defendant's application to have it available as a possible affirmative defense to the charge of first-degree assault in N.Y. Penal Law § 120.10 was denied as a matter of law. People v Charles, 821 N.Y.S.2d 878, 13 Misc. 3d 985, 2006 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2703 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2006).

7. Evidence

In a murder prosecution, the admission of certain inculpatory statements by defendant that had been taken by police in violation of defendant's right to counsel was harmless error, since there was no reasonable possibility that the erroneously admitted statements contributed to defendant's conviction in that defendant's claim that he killed the victim in self defense was overwhelmingly refuted by evidence that the stab wounds in the victim's body were in his back, that defendant had expressed an intent to kill the victim, that defendant had told a neighbor not to call the police after the crime, that defendant had attempted to hide after the homicide, and that defendant had never mentioned self defense to anyone he had informed about the homicide prior to turning himself in to the police. People v Flecha, 60 N.Y.2d 766, 469 N.Y.S.2d 671, 457 N.E.2d 777, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 3447 (N.Y. 1983).

Photographs of victim's corpse are likely to arouse passions and resentment of jury in homicide case, and thus should not be admitted unless they tend to prove or disprove material fact. People v Stevens, 76 N.Y.2d 833, 560 N.Y.S.2d 119, 559 N.E.2d 1278, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 1987 (N.Y. 1990).

When People demonstrate that photographs of victim's corpse are relevant in homicide trial, question of whether jury should be permitted to view them is addressed to trial court's discretion; availability of other evidence on point is factor but not dispositive factor, and court may find it appropriate to admit photographs to illustrate, elucidate, or corroborate other evidence. People v Stevens, 76 N.Y.2d 833, 560 N.Y.S.2d 119, 559 N.E.2d 1278, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 1987 (N.Y. 1990).

Basic principles applying to admissibility of photographs of victim's corpse in homicide case also apply to "portraits" or photographs of victim taken when he or she was alive. People v Stevens, 76 N.Y.2d 833, 560 N.Y.S.2d 119, 559 N.E.2d 1278, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 1987 (N.Y. 1990).

"Portraits," or photographs of homicide victim taken when he or she was alive, may arouse jury's emotions, particularly when presented in before-and-after format with photographs of corpse, and should not be admitted unless relevant to material fact to be proved at trial. People v Stevens, 76 N.Y.2d 833, 560 N.Y.S.2d 119, 559 N.E.2d 1278, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 1987 (N.Y. 1990).

Relevance of "portraits," or photographs of homicide victim taken when he or she was alive, must be independently established; fact that photographs of victim's corpse have been found to be relevant does not necessarily establish relevance, and hence admissibility, of portraits. People v Stevens, 76 N.Y.2d 833, 560 N.Y.S.2d 119, 559 N.E.2d 1278, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 1987 (N.Y. 1990).

When defendant was prosecuted for assaulting his wife with a baseball bat and then entering her hospital room, where he poisoned her, resulting in her death, while there was sufficient evidence to allow the jury to find that the murder was committed to preclude his wife's testimony against him regarding the assault, allowing imposition of the death penalty under N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(v), the weight of the evidence did not support this finding, as there was no indication that his wife would have been able to testify against him regarding the assault, nor was it likely, given his confession, that he could have avoided a conviction for this crime in any event, so his conviction of first degree murder, under this provision, had to be vacated. People v Cahill, 2 N.Y.3d 14, 777 N.Y.S.2d 332, 809 N.E.2d 561, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 3978 (N.Y. 2003).

When defendant was prosecuted for assaulting his wife with a baseball bat and then entering her hospital room, where he poisoned her, resulting in her death, he could not properly be convicted of first degree murder, allowing imposition of the death penalty, under N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(vii), for committing a murder in the course of burglarizing his wife's hospital room because his criminal intent to commit murder could not be used both to elevate his criminal trespass of the hospital room to a burglary and to elevate his intentional murder of his wife to first degree murder, as his intent to commit burglary had to be distinct from his intent to commit murder, so his first degree murder conviction under § 125.27(1)(a)(vii) had to be reversed. People v Cahill, 2 N.Y.3d 14, 777 N.Y.S.2d 332, 809 N.E.2d 561, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 3978 (N.Y. 2003).

Direct and circumstantial evidence, including various statements made by defendant, was legally sufficient to prove defendant killed the victim either by actually shooting or by commanding an accomplice to shoot; after reviewing the evidence in support of both theories of the occurrence, the state's highest court concluded that a verdict of guilty on either basis was not against the weight of the evidence. People v Mateo, 2 N.Y.3d 383, 779 N.Y.S.2d 399, 811 N.E.2d 1053, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 263 (N.Y.), cert. denied, 542 U.S. 946, 124 S. Ct. 2929, 159 L. Ed. 2d 828, 2004 U.S. LEXIS 4736 (U.S. 2004).

Court of Appeals of New York has determined that there is no reason to hold that similarity must be shown by the killing act alone. People v Shulman, 6 N.Y.3d 1, 809 N.Y.S.2d 485, 843 N.E.2d 125, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 2703 (N.Y. 2005), cert. denied, 547 U.S. 1043, 126 S. Ct. 1623, 164 L. Ed. 2d 339, 2006 U.S. LEXIS 2562 (U.S. 2006).

Evidence was sufficient to support an appellant's conviction under N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(xi) where, in all three murders, the appellant brought the women to the room where he lived and killed them by repeatedly beating them about the face and head with a heavy, blunt object, using such force that he split their skulls open. Afterward, the appellant hacked off the victims' hands or limbs and disposed of the bodies in garbage receptacles, and threw away their severed hands and limbs in trash locations away from the spots where he disposed of their bodies. People v Shulman, 6 N.Y.3d 1, 809 N.Y.S.2d 485, 843 N.E.2d 125, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 2703 (N.Y. 2005), cert. denied, 547 U.S. 1043, 126 S. Ct. 1623, 164 L. Ed. 2d 339, 2006 U.S. LEXIS 2562 (U.S. 2006).

In a murder case, a police detective ended up testifying beyond any cognizable field of expertise as an apparently omniscient expositor of the facts of the case. Although considerable portions of the detective's testimony were admitted in error, the proof of defendant's commission of the charged crimes was overwhelming, and the court of appeals perceived no significant probability that, but for the error, the verdict, as it bore upon defendant, would have been less adverse. People v Inoa, 25 N.Y.3d 466, 34 N.E.3d 839, 13 N.Y.S.3d 329, 2015 N.Y. LEXIS 1363 (N.Y. 2015).

Had a police detective in a murder case been qualified to testify simply as to the meaning of coded expressions in telephone recordings and his expert testimony been accordingly limited in scope, the receipt of that testimony would not have been problematic for its subject matter. The detective, however, was qualified not simply to decode what was coded, but to decode telephone conversations generally and, as the trial progressed, it became evident that the trial court understood that permission to extend to explaining the meaning of virtually everything that was said during the recorded conversations, whether it was coded or not. People v Inoa, 25 N.Y.3d 466, 34 N.E.3d 839, 13 N.Y.S.3d 329, 2015 N.Y. LEXIS 1363 (N.Y. 2015).

Evidence did not support defendant's convictions for attempted murder in the first and second degrees because the evidence failed to prove that defendant and his feigned confederate took any actual step toward accomplishing defendant's plan to kill his wife and mother-in-law beyond mere conversations and planning, and, thus, none of the acts put forth by the People could satisfy the dangerous-proximity test. People v Lendof-Gonzalez, 2020 N.Y. LEXIS 2639 (N.Y. 2020).

In prosecution for aggravated assault upon police officer under CLS Penal § 120.11 and attempted murder in first degree under CLS Penal § 125.27, testimony that on night of incident police detectives were properly looking for defendant in order to arrest him is admissible as being directly relevant and necessary to establish elements of crime charged; trial court prevents defendant from suffering undue prejudice from admission of such testimony by refusing to permit People to introduce evidence of nature of offense for which defendant was sought and by properly instructing jury as to how to consider testimony in question. People v Simon, 118 A.D.2d 883, 500 N.Y.S.2d 367, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 54739 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Evidence adduced at trial supported charge of attempted first degree murder, and thus trial court properly denied defendant's motion to dismiss under CLS CPL § 290.10, since defendant's intent could have been to cause death, not merely inflict serious physical injury, where he fired gun at 2 police officers who pursued him as he fled scene of another shooting. People v Ciola, 136 A.D.2d 557, 523 N.Y.S.2d 553, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 334 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 893, 527 N.Y.S.2d 1003, 523 N.E.2d 310, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 1347 (N.Y. 1988).

Court properly allowed testimony that certain items in defendant's vehicle were stolen property taken during robbery since that testimony was probative of defendant's motive and intent in engaging in later shooting incident with police which resulted in charges of first and second degree attempted murder, and court carefully circumscribed scope of testimony and instructed jury as to limited use for which it could be used. People v Maggio, 137 A.D.2d 623, 524 N.Y.S.2d 511, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1035 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 1029, 530 N.Y.S.2d 564, 526 N.E.2d 57, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 2294 (N.Y. 1988).

People's inadvertent destruction of gun did not warrant dismissal of first degree attempted murder indictment where there was no evidence of bad faith by law enforcement officials, absence of gun from trial had no bearing on question of defendant's guilt or innocence, and defendant's inaction in failing to inspect gun prior to trial negated any claim of prejudice since gun was not essential element in preparation of his trial strategy; under circumstances, suppression of ballistics reports and preclusion of expert testimony was proper sanction. People v Deresky, 137 A.D.2d 704, 525 N.Y.S.2d 49, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1765 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 1025, 530 N.Y.S.2d 560, 526 N.E.2d 52, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 2186 (N.Y. 1988).

Evidence supported defendant's conviction of first degree attempted murder where he had pursued and fired shots at off-duty police officer, who moments before had identified himself as such, whereupon officer displayed his shield and, in his capacity as police officer, began to fire back at defendant. People v Woods, 141 A.D.2d 684, 529 N.Y.S.2d 384, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6559 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 72 N.Y.2d 926, 532 N.Y.S.2d 860, 529 N.E.2d 190, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 3291 (N.Y. 1988).

In trial for attempted first degree murder arising from incident in which defendant became angry after he was given 3 traffic summonses by officer, drove to his residence and obtained shotgun, and then located officer and shot him in face, evidence of defendant's past violent and antisocial behavior, as well as his actions prior to shooting, supported jury's conclusion that defendant acted out of simple malevolence rather than extreme emotional disturbance. People v Ludwigsen, 159 A.D.2d 591, 552 N.Y.S.2d 450, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2745 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 738, 558 N.Y.S.2d 900, 557 N.E.2d 1196, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 2228 (N.Y. 1990).

In attempted first degree murder trial, evidence that defendant fired 6 to 8 shots at uniformed police officer at close range, and continued to shoot at officer after he had fallen, was sufficient to establish his intent to cause death. People v Douglas, 160 A.D.2d 1015, 554 N.Y.S.2d 727, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4985 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 855, 560 N.Y.S.2d 995, 561 N.E.2d 895, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 3848 (N.Y. 1990).

Attempted first degree murder conviction was supported by evidence that (1) defendant twice compressed his forearm on police officer's throat and caused him to black out, and twice grabbed for officer's gun and attempted to gain control of it, and (2) defendant did not take advantage of opportunity to flee during altercation and, according to eyewitness, was going to kill officer despite presence of crowd. People v Wiggins, 191 A.D.2d 364, 595 N.Y.S.2d 416, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2796 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 1021, 600 N.Y.S.2d 210, 616 N.E.2d 867, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 2637 (N.Y. 1993).

In prosecution for first degree murder arising out of defendant's shooting of 2 police officers, court properly admitted evidence of defendant's prior arrests and confrontations with police as bearing on his state of mind—namely, his hostility toward police, which preceded his alleged abuse by police during an interrogation 4 months prior to shootings; such evidence was highly probative to rebut defense of extreme emotional disturbance. People v Manzella, 199 A.D.2d 964, 606 N.Y.S.2d 471, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12544 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1993), app. denied, 83 N.Y.2d 807, 611 N.Y.S.2d 143, 633 N.E.2d 498, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 569 (N.Y. 1994).

In prosecution for first degree murder arising out of defendant's shooting of 2 police officers, court properly excluded evidence concerning propensities of police officer who allegedly abused defendant prior to shootings, proffered in support of defense of extreme emotional disturbance, since evidence of prior assaults or abuse is not admissible as evidence of habit because of varying circumstances under which those actions are committed. People v Manzella, 199 A.D.2d 964, 606 N.Y.S.2d 471, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12544 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1993), app. denied, 83 N.Y.2d 807, 611 N.Y.S.2d 143, 633 N.E.2d 498, 1994 N.Y. In trial for, inter alia, second degree murder and attempted first and second degree murder, element of intent was established by evidence that (1) defendant, armed with loaded shotgun, followed 2 acquaintances after he had engaged in altercation with them, shot at them twice from 3 feet away as they attempted to flee, and chased them until he saw them approach 2 police officers, and (2) when officers pursued defendant, he ran into yard where he took cover and fired several shots at both officers from 10 to 20 feet away, killing one officer. People v Campbell, 208 A.D.2d 641, 617 N.Y.S.2d 195, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9531 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994), app. denied, 84 N.Y.2d 1029, 623 N.Y.S.2d 185, 647 N.E.2d 457, 1995 N.Y. Marine on weekend pass who claimed to have shot "suppressive fire" at officers who were pursuing him after attempted robbery was sufficiently shown to have had requisite intent to be convicted of attempted first and second degree murder, since conclusion that he aimed at officers could readily be inferred from his conduct and surrounding circumstances. Defendants were properly convicted of noncapital first degree murder for having perpetrated multiple killings by each shooting one rival drug dealer in concerted effort to kill off 2 competitors where murder weapons were traced back to defendants, and each defendant's killing of one victim was shown beyond reasonable doubt, even though it could not be established which defendant used which gun. Evidence supported conviction of attempted first degree murder where defendant's homicidal intent was proved by (1) "combat stance" that he took while carefully aiming at officers and firing at least 2 shots and (2) fact that he hit van behind which officers had taken cover. People v Douglas, 273 A.D.2d 24, 709 N.Y.S.2d 527, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6364 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 889, 715 N.Y.S.2d 381, 738 N.E.2d 785, 2000 N.Y. In prosecution for attempted first degree murder and first degree robbery, lineup was not unduly suggestive where fillers were reasonably similar to defendant and had variety of hairstyles, and defendant's unusual hairstyle was product of his hasty efforts to alter his appearance and was substantially different from style that he was described as wearing at time of crime. People v Douglas, 273 A.D.2d 24, 709 N.Y.S.2d 527, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6364 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 889, 715 N.Y.S.2d 381, 738 N.E.2d 785, 2000 N.Y. Evidence supported conviction of first degree murder where killing occurred "while the defendant was in the course of committing or attempting to commit and in furtherance of robbery" under CLS Penal § 125.27(1)(a)(vii). People v Striplin, 273 A.D.2d 120, 711 N.Y.S.2d 716, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7121 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 893, 715 N.Y.S.2d 385, 738 N.E.2d 789, 2000 N.Y. In prosecution for first degree murder and second degree weapon possession, defendant's uncharged crimes were admissible where they were relevant to motive, necessary to complete narrative, and inextricably intertwined with charged crimes. People v Capace, 273 A.D.2d 320, 710 N.Y.S.2d 529, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6469 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 933, 721 N.Y.S.2d 609, 744 N.E.2d 145, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3969 (N.Y. 2000).

Statements made by murder victim prior to his death while lying on pavement moments after he was shot at close range, and comments uttered by him less than one hour later at hospital as he was about to undergo emergency surgery, were admissible as excited utterances at defendant's first degree murder trial. People v Johnson, 277 A.D.2d 702, 717 N.Y.S.2d 668, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12253 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 831, 729 N.Y.S.2d 451, 754 N.E.2d 211, 2001 N.Y. Statements made by defendant in hours preceding shooting incident, that he intended to "get" victim and that "someone was going to get it," were properly admitted in People's case-in-chief as proof of defendant's intent to commit first degree murder, particularly as they tended to show that shooting was not accidental. People v Johnson, 277 A.D.2d 702, 717 N.Y.S.2d 668, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12253 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 831, 729 N.Y.S.2d 451, 754 N.E.2d 211, 2001 N.Y. In prosecution for attempted first degree murder and second and third degree weapon possession, court properly rule, after Sandoval hearing, that if defendant took the stand, prosecutor could question her about her 4 prior petit larceny convictions and their underlying facts, her use of aliases, and her status as alien. People v Medina, 281 A.D.2d 563, 721 N.Y.S.2d 829, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2596 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 863, 730 N.Y.S.2d 37, 754 N.E.2d 1120, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2578 (N.Y. 2001).

Permissible inferences of intent, forcible rape, and forcible sodomy based on the evidence at trial supported defendant's two convictions of first degree murder as set forth in N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(vii), (b), especially since defendant's version of events, in which defendant claimed that the victim engaged in consensual sex and that defendant lacked the requisite intent, contained unexplained contradictions and was inconsistent with the physical evidence that was presented at trial. People v Ogletree, 295 A.D.2d 967, 743 N.Y.S.2d 372, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6308 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 98 N.Y.2d 731, 749 N.Y.S.2d 481, 779 N.E.2d 192, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 3646 (N.Y. 2002).

Circumstantial evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of first degree murder where a valid line of reasoning and permissible inferences could lead a rational juror to find defendant killed the victim in furtherance of a robbery, and the jury could reasonably infer defendant forced the victim to reveal her personal identification number, which he used to withdraw money from her bank account. People v Rodriguez, 302 A.D.2d 240, 756 N.Y.S.2d 145, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1290 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 99 N.Y.2d 658, 760 N.Y.S.2d 122, 790 N.E.2d 296, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 1625 (N.Y. 2003).

Pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(i), defendant's conviction for murder in the first degree was not against the sufficiency of the evidence based upon witness identifications of a photo array, physical evidence recovered, and the testimony of two passengers of a vehicle who were present when a police officer was shot and killed. People v Parker, 304 A.D.2d 146, 755 N.Y.S.2d 521, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 952 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 585, 764 N.Y.S.2d 396, 796 N.E.2d 488, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 3156 (N.Y. 2003).

Evidence was legally sufficient to establish defendant's guilt under a theory of transferred intent in a case where the wrong person was killed in a murder-for-hire scheme involving defendant and two other persons, the unintended victim was shot in the vicinity of the expected location of the intended victim, and the unintended victim was shot solely because a co-defendant who fired the fatal shots mistook the unintended victim for the intended victim. People v Powell, 304 A.D.2d 410, 757 N.Y.S.2d 297, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4110 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 578, 775 N.Y.S.2d 794, 807 N.E.2d 907, 2003 N.Y. Where defendant stabbed a first correctional officer and bit the finger of a second officer, the evidence was sufficient to conclude that defendant intentionally engaged in conduct tending to cause the death of a state correctional institution employee in violation of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 125.27(1)(a)(ii). People v Logan, 305 A.D.2d 797, 761 N.Y.S.2d 111, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5523 (N.Y. Trial court properly denied defendant's motion to suppress evidence, pursuant to N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 710.20, in a trial for first degree murder, N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27; the circumstances indicated that defendant's incriminating statements were voluntarily made after knowingly and voluntarily waiving his Miranda rights. People v Duggins, 1 A.D.3d 450, 766 N.Y.S.2d 702, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11803 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003), aff'd, 3 N.Y.3d 522, 788 N.Y.S.2d 638, 821 N.E.2d 942, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 3730 (N.Y. 2004).

Evidence was legally sufficient to convict defendant of murder in the first degree pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(vii) and the verdict was not against the weight of the evidence under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 470.15(5), where there was sufficient evidence from which a rational trier of fact could have found that defendant, with the intent to kill, shot the victim once, this wound contributed to the victim's death, and defendant did this in the course of, and in furtherance of, a robbery. People v Harrell, 5 A.D.3d 503, 772 N.Y.S.2d 581, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2485 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 3 N.Y.3d 641, 782 N.Y.S.2d 412, 816 N.E.2d 202, 2004 N.Y. Although defendant argued that the evidence was insufficient to show capital murder for hire where in the end the hired killer had been unable to complete the murder, so that defendant had to strike the blow, defendant could be found guilty as a principal in the main attack just as well. People v Glanda, 5 A.D.3d 945, 774 N.Y.S.2d 576, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3439 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 3 N.Y.3d 640, 782 N.Y.S.2d 412, 816 N.E.2d 202, 2004 N.Y. Defendant's first-degree murder, intentional second-degree murder, and attempted intentional second-degree murder convictions were reversed, where no record evidence was presented demonstrating that defendant shared a community of purpose with his co-conspirators to kill anyone other than the complaining witness, but the entire record was consistent with a spontaneously formed decision by the co-conspirators to shoot the family members of the complaining witness, a decision in which defendant took no purposeful part. People v Couser, 12 A.D.3d 1040, 785 N.Y.S.2d 212, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14033 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2004), app. denied, 4 N.Y.3d 762, 792 N.Y.S.2d 6, 825 N.E.2d 138, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 295 (N.Y. 2005).

There was sufficient evidence to support defendant's conviction for murder in the first degree, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(vii), where defendant committed a burglary of the victim's apartment with the intent to assault the occupants and to get payment for drugs, and while there, he fatally stabbed one of the occupants seven times and caused him other injuries from being beaten and cut; other evidence that implicated defendant was his boasting of having committed the crime to others, eyewitness accounts of his physical attack on the victim by defendant's accomplices, and blood on defendant's clothing. People v Johnson, 20 A.D.3d 808, 799 N.Y.S.2d 276, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14627 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 5

Evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of attempted murder in the first degree, conspiracy in the second degree, and assault in the first degree when the victim identified defendant as the shooter and various witnesses testified about conversations between defendant and codefendant regarding the codefendant's desire to get back at the victim for allegedly stealing drugs, as well as defendant's statements that he could take care of the problem for the right price. Defendant had been seen prior to the incident at the bar where the shooting occurred, police had found car keys at the scene, and there was evidence that defendant had picked up money from the codefendant. People v Faulkner, 36 A.D.3d 1009, 826 N.Y.S.2d 526, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 230 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 8 N.Y.3d 944, 836 N.Y.S.2d 554, 868 N.E.2d 237, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 1311 (N.Y. 2007).

Although defendant's sexual assault of the victim occurred in Connecticut, after a prolonged break in time, defendant continued to restrain the victim and tried to kill the victim in New York; therefore, the evidence was sufficient to support defendant's convictions for first-degree kidnapping and attempted first-degree murder under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 135.25(2)(a), 110.00, 125.27(1)(a)(v). People v McIntosh, 53 A.D.3d 1, 860 N.Y.S.2d 64, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5338 (N.Y. Evidence was legally sufficient to satisfy the element of intent for the crimes of first-degree murder and conspiracy, of which defendant was convicted. The trial evidence and defendant's written statements revealed that defendant played an active and instrumental role in obtaining the murder weapon and the phone used by defendant's accomplices to lure the victim to his death and that, prior to obtaining these items, defendant had full knowledge that they would be used to cause the victim's death. People v Booker, 53 A.D.3d 697, 862 N.Y.S.2d 139, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6037 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 11 N.Y.3d 853, 872 N.Y.S.2d 76, 900 N.E.2d 559, 2008 N.Y. Evidence that a murder victim was shot from inside a hunting camp which had been broken into; that defendant was seen driving the victim's truck after the murder; that the camp owner's rifle and the victim's credit card were found in defendant's possession; that the rifle fired the fatal bullets; that defendant's fingerprints and DNA were found in the victim's abandoned truck; and that the truck was worth more than $2000, was sufficient to convict him of first degree murder (N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)), first degree burglary (N.Y. Penal Law § 140.30(1)), and three counts of fourth degree grand larceny (N.Y. Penal Law § 155.30). People v Race, 78 A.D.3d 1217, 910 N.Y.S.2d 271, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7875 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2010), app. denied, 16 N.Y.3d 835, 921 N.Y.S.2d 199, 946 N.E.2d 187, 2011 N.Y. Conviction of murder in the first degree was supported by sufficient evidence including, inter alia, the victim's girlfriend found defendant in her apartment, the victim had been shot to death and his body was also in the apartment, the girlfriend observed defendant, face to face and in good lighting, and the girlfriend's description matched defendant's general characteristics, as well as the clothing he was wearing when arrested about eight hours later; a firearms examiner testified that the .40 caliber bullets recovered at the scene were the same style of bullet as those contained in a box of ammunition found in defendant's backpack, and, further, that the expended shell casings recovered at the scene bore the same manufacturer's stamp as those present in that box of ammunition. Defendant's fingerprints were found on a table in the apartment, the victim's fingerprints were found on a bag inside the backpack and security cameras at the apartment complex showed an individual matching defendant's description exiting the premises with a plastic bag around the time of the murder. People v Burnell, 89 A.D.3d 1118, 931 N.Y.S.2d 776, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7610 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2011), app. denied, 18 N.Y.3d 922, 942 N.Y.S.2d 461, 965 N.E.2d 963, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 719 (N.Y. 2012).

Murder conviction was not against the weight of the evidence where the shooting was witnessed by several different people who saw defendant fire multiple shots in the victim's direction; contrary to defendant's assertion on appeal, his criminal intent was readily inferable from his conduct because the testimony established that defendant called out to the victim and, when the victim turned, shot at him from close range, and then, as the victim ran, defendant continued to shoot until he eventually inflicted a fatal wound in the victim's back. People v Guy, 93 A.D.3d 877, 939 N.Y.S.2d 613, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1524 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 961, 950 N.Y.S.2d 113, 973 N.E.2d 211, 2012 N.Y. People sufficiently established defendant's identity as the shooter in a drive-by shooting, and the verdict convicting defendant attempted murder in the first degree, N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 125.27(1)(a)(i), 20.00, reckless endangerment in the first degree, N.Y. Penal Law §§ 120.25, 20.00, and criminal possession of a weapon in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 265.03(3), was not against the weight of the evidence on the identification issue where the two police officers and the two civilian witnesses who saw the shooting testified unequivocally that the shooter was situated in the front passenger seat of the vehicle, during the shooting, the shooter's hat blew off of his head and landed in the middle of the street, and DNA testing matched defendant's DNA to that found on the hat; defendant was also the source of the major DNA profile extracted from the gun recovered in the parking lot where defendant was apprehended, and four fired cartridge cases recovered by the police in the area of the shooting exhibited "class characteristics" consistent with being fired from that gun. Further, a jailhouse informant testified that defendant admitted that he was the shooter. People v Carr, 99 A.D.3d 1173, 952 N.Y.S.2d 342, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6630 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2012), app. denied, 20 N.Y.3d 1010, 960 N.Y.S.2d 353, 984 N.E.2d 328, 2013 N.Y. LEXIS 645 (N.Y. 2013).

Evidence was sufficient to support defendant's first-degree murder conviction because it showed that: (1) defendant's accomplices testified that defendant suggested that they "get some free money" and that seconds after defendant reached the victim a gunshot was heard; (2) defendant admitted to shooting the victim in two letters he wrote from jail; (3) a witness saw someone matching defendant's description crouched down near the victim's body before fleeing the scene; (4) cell phone evidence placed defendant in the vicinity of the crime at the time of the murder; and (5) the doctor who performed the autopsy on the victim testified that the gun was very close to his head when the bullet was fired, and was possibly touching it. People v Callicutt, 101 A.D.3d 1256, 956 N.Y.S.2d 607, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8575 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2012), app. denied, 20 N.Y.3d 1096, 965 N.Y.S.2d 792, 988 N.E.2d 530, 2013 N.Y. Even in the absence of a definitive time of death for the victims, a married couple, it was clear that their deaths occurred in sufficient proximity to one another to be deemed part of the same criminal transaction because they were unaccounted for at the same time and the manner of death was the same. People v Dashnaw, 116 A.D.3d 1222, 983 N.Y.S.2d 681, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2563 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 23 N.Y.3d 1019, 992 N.Y.S.2d 802, 16 N.E.3d 1282, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 1801 (N.Y. 2014).

Defendant's first-degree murder convictions were not against the weight of the evidence because there was overwhelming proof to establish defendant as the perpetrator of the charged crimes; defendant's DNA was found in the victims' residence and he used the victims' credit cards and cashed three of their checks. The requisite intent was inferred based on the multiple stab wounds inflicted upon each victim and the defensive injuries sustained by the husband. People v Dashnaw, 116 A.D.3d 1222, 983 N.Y.S.2d 681, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2563 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 23 N.Y.3d 1019, 992 N.Y.S.2d 802, 16 N.E.3d 1282, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 1801 (N.Y. 2014).

Evidence was legally sufficient to support defendant's convictions for, inter alia, first degree murder, as the evidence established that defendant was the person who committed the crimes and that he acted with intent as opposed to depraved indifference when he killed the victims. People v McCray, 121 A.D.3d 1549, 993 N.Y.S.2d 413, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6660 (N.Y. Proof to corroborate defendant's admission that a homicide occurred during an attempted robbery was not required for the counts charging defendant with felony murder and murder in the first degree because the fact that the victim was found dead as the result of a gunshot wound was sufficient corroboration. People v Harper, 132 A.D.3d 1230, 17 N.Y.S.3d 797, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7011 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2015), app. denied, 27 N.Y.3d 998, 59 N.E.3d 1220, 38 N.Y.S.3d 108, 2016 N.Y. LEXIS 1338 (N.Y. 2016).

Defendant's convictions for murder in the first degree were not against the weight of the evidence because several individuals testified they saw defendant at victim A's apartment, defendant's bloody palm print was found in the apartment, defendant's DNA was found on several items that were in the apartment, and a shoe print matching the shoe recovered from defendant's home was found on victim's B's coat People v Ramos, 133 A.D.3d 904, 20 N.Y.S.3d 183, 2015 N.Y. Trial court's pretrial Molineux ruling was not an abuse of discretion because the evidence regarding defendant's drug dealing enterprise was inextricably intertwined with the victim's murder, tended to establish defendant's motive for procuring the commission of the killing, and provided necessary background information with respect to defendant's relationship with the People's witnesses. People v Resto, 147 A.D.3d 1331, 47 N.Y.S.3d 522, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 830 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 29 N.Y.3d 1000, 80 N.E.3d 415, 57 N.Y.S.3d 722, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 1636 (N.Y. 2017).

Defendant's first-degree attempted murder conviction was reduced to second-degree attempted murder as there was insufficient evidence of defendant's age, and the jury's opportunity to observe defendant's appearance during his trial in 2012 did not satisfy the People's obligation to prove defendant's age; there was sufficient evidence that defendant intended to kill each of the officers and the verdict was not against the weight of the evidence with respect to his intent. People v Vangorden, 147 A.D.3d 1436, 46 N.Y.S.3d 730, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 805 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 29 N.Y.3d 1037, 84 N.E.3d 978, 62 N.Y.S.3d 306, 2017 N.Y. Evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of robbery and attempted murder, as the testimony of his accomplice was sufficiently corroborated and the jury did not fail to give that testimony the weight it should be accorded on the issue of defendant's identity as the robber and shooter. People v Hough, 151 A.D.3d 1591, 57 N.Y.S.3d 780, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4514 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 30 N.Y.3d 950, 89 N.E.3d 523, 67 N.Y.S.3d 133, 2017 N.Y. Evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of robbery and attempted murder, as the testimony of his accomplice was sufficiently corroborated and the jury did not fail to give that testimony the weight it should be accorded on the issue of defendant's identity as the robber and shooter. Sufficient evidence established defendant's identity as the perpetrator through permissible inferences because: (1) defendant's vehicle or one strikingly similar was seen in the driveway of the site shortly before the victims went to that home; (2) the victims' blood was found in defendant's car and on items found inside defendant's residence; and (3) the victims' cell phones were located in a bag with a receipt linked to defendant's girlfriend. Ed. 2d 269, 2019 U.S. LEXIS 6738 (U.S. 2019).

Sufficient evidence supported defendant's murder convictions because the People were not required to establish that the murders were necessary to advance the purpose of the burglary, and there was a logical nexus between a murder and a felony; the murder convictions were not against the weight of the evidence. People v Taylor, 158 A.D.3d 1095, 72 N.Y.S.3d 256, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 782 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), reh'g denied, 160 A.D.3d 1506, 72 N.Y.S.3d 918, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2995 (N.Y. Ed. 2d 269, 2019 U.S. LEXIS 6738 (U.S. 2019).

Evidence was sufficient to support defendant's convictions for murder in first and second degree, Penal Law §§ 125.27 and 125.25, because security footage showed defendant was only person to enter the victim's building the night of the murder, and he had the victim's DNA on his pants and possessed the victim's property, including his cell phone. People v Valcarcel, 160 A.D.3d 1034, 75 N.Y.S.3d 598, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2377 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 31 N.Y.3d 1088, 103 N.E.3d 1257, 79 N.Y.S.3d 110, 2018 N.Y. Sufficient evidence did not support defendant's convictions for attempted murder in the first degree and in the second degree because while defendant planned the crimes, discussed them with the inmate in the next cell and with that inmate's girlfriend, and exchanged notes about them, the People failed to establish that any accessory took any step that brought the crimes "dangerously near" to completion; neither the inmate nor his girlfriend did anything to effectuate the crimes. People v Lendofgonzalez, 170 A.D.3d 1508, 95 N.Y.S.3d 675, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1976 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 33 N.Y.3d 1070, 129 N.E.3d 330, 105 N.Y.S.3d 10, 2019 N.Y. Sufficient evidence supported defendant's convictions for murder and robbery because an inmate testified that defendant admitted to him that he went to "some guy's" house to steal an amplifier and music equipment but, because it did not go well and, an argument occurred and then there was a rope around the guy's neck. Evidence showed that items belonging to the victim were missing and forensic testing revealed the presence of defendant's DNA at the crime scene. People v Wakefield, 175 A.D.3d 158, 107 N.Y.S.3d 487, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6153 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 34 N.Y.3d 1083, 139 N.E.3d 816, 116 N.Y.S.3d 158, 2019 N.Y. LEXIS 3747 (N.Y. 2019).

Sufficient evidence established that defendant procured commission of the killing of his wife pursuant to an agreement with the principal, who was defendant's former employee, because there was ample evidence from which a jury could have inferred that the principal killed the victim at the behest of defendant, who provided the principal with key logistical support. People v Clayton, 175 A.D.3d 963, 108 N.Y.S.3d 94, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6289 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2019).

Sufficient evidence established that, pursuant to an agreement, the principal committed the killing of defendant's wife for the receipt, or in expectation of the receipt, of a thing of pecuniary value because defendant offered several things of pecuniary value to the principal, including a bicycle, a promise to pay an outstanding fine, and referrals for new employment, and the principal requested a payment of money from defendant only five days before the murder. People v Clayton, 175 A.D.3d 963, 108 N.Y.S.3d 94, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6289 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2019).

Late filing of notice of intention to present psychiatric evidence was allowed, considering defendant's constitutional right to present probative evidence in his defense, minimal prejudice to People in permitting late notice to stand, voluminous motion practice previously conducted and issues underlying potential imposition of death penalty, physical illness of defense counsel, and recent fire at counsel's home. People v Holland, 173 Misc. 2d 286, 660 N.Y.S.2d 822, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 325 (N.Y. County Ct. 1997).

In death penalty case, evidence of prior inconsistent statements, bad acts, criminal convictions and other general impeachment material not qualifying as "exculpatory" under court's definition, need only be disclosed to extent required by CLS CPL §§ 240.44 and 240.45. People v Arthur, 175 Misc. 2d 742, 673 N.Y.S.2d 486, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 673 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

In death penalty case arising from robbery and murder of high school teacher, lesson plans or other documents reflecting victim's views of capital punishment would not be admissible at sentencing proceeding as mitigating factor under CLS CPL § 400.27(9)(f). People v Arthur, 175 Misc. 2d 742, 673 N.Y.S.2d 486, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 673 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

In capital murder trial under so-called "commander" section of first degree murder statute, court deferred defendant's obligation to file notice of intent to offer psychiatric evidence under CLS CPL § 400.27(13) until completion of guilt phase of trial where he affirmatively stated that there would be no psychiatric evidence submitted by him before penalty phase of trial. People v Mateo, 177 Misc. 2d 814, 676 N.Y.S.2d 903, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 359 (N.Y. County Ct. 1998).

In capital murder trial, People were not precluded from arguing or suggesting that defendant caused victim's death by shooting him with gun on basis that they had argued, at previous trial of defendant's wife arising from same murder, that she was actual shooter, where People's position had always been that they could not say with certainty which perpetrator pulled trigger and which commanded other to pull trigger, and they maintained that their arguments in each case were based on reasonable view of evidence presented to that jury. People v Mateo, 177 Misc. 2d 817, 676 N.Y.S.2d 908, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 372 (N.Y. County Ct. 1998).

In death penalty case, members of victims' families could testify at guilt phase of trial even if People could establish prima facie case without them, where their testimony was relevant to prove victims' identities and establish victims' relationships to one another and to social club where they were murdered, and was not unfairly prejudicial. People v Harris, 177 Misc. 2d 903, 679 N.Y.S.2d 242, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 380 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1998).

First degree murder defendant was not entitled to order precluding "any state actor from assigning, encouraging, or permitting an inmate snitch...to exact a statement, confession and/or admission from defendant about [his] case, without prior notice to defense counsel and opportunity for counsel to be present," as he did not allege any misconduct or negligence on part of prosecution, which logically prevented him from showing prejudice resulting therefrom, and he could later challenge admissibility of any statements which he felt were unlawfully procured. People v Morgan, 178 Misc. 2d 551, 681 N.Y.S.2d 723, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 509 (N.Y. County Ct. 1998).

Live photographs of both victims were admissible during guilt phase of first degree murder trial where People intended to offer testimony of witnesses who would be able to identify each victim as she was observed with defendant prior to her death, and both victims were unrecognizable in photographs after death due to their wounds. People v Owens, 187 Misc. 2d 644, 727 N.Y.S.2d 264, 2001 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 112 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2001).

Petitioner's claim that there was insufficient evidence to support his convictions of murder in the first degree, under N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(vii), two counts of murder in the second degree, under N.Y. Penal Law § 125.25(1) and (3), and robbery in the first degree, under N.Y. Penal Law § 160.15(1), was rejected as a rational trier of fact could have found petitioner guilty of the robbery, the first-degree murder, and the second-degree felony murder charges because (1) the People introduced evidence that petitioner and the victim rented a hotel room together, petitioner used the victim's bank card around the time that the medical examiner estimated that the victim died, petitioner was seen dragging a bag away from the room, the victim's body was later found in the room, petitioner was arrested with two of the victim's identification cards in his possession, and petitioner attempted to dispose of the bank card when police arrested him; (2) the People also established that a toilet top cover, the alleged murder weapon, was missing from the bathroom of the room where the victim's body was discovered; and (3) taken together, these events could have led a rational trier of fact to determine that petitioner murdered the victim in furtherance of a robbery, namely to obtain the PIN number on her ATM card. Rodriguez v Smith, 485 F. Supp. 2d 368, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 29376 (S.D.N.Y. 2007).

When an inmate pled guilty to two charges of first degree murder under N.Y. Penal Law § 125.27(1)(a)(viii), the inmate waived his claim that the prosecutor exceeded his authority under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 610.20 by issuing a subpoena duces tecum to gather information he sought to use in deciding whether to seek the death penalty, and even if the claim had not been waived, such issues of state law were not cognizable in federal habeas corpus proceedings. Hall v Conway, 630 F. Supp. 2d 283, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 55603 (W.D.N.Y. 2009).

Evidence at the first trial was sufficient to a permit rational jury to find the prisoner guilty beyond a reasonable doubt of first-degree witness-elimination murder, and thus, the Double Jeopardy Clause did not bar his retrial following the reversal of his initial conviction based on an error in swearing the venire panel. Hoffler v Bezio, 726 F.3d 144, 2013 U.S. App. LEXIS 16398 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2013).

7.5. Ineffective assistance

Defense counsel's advice that defendant could receive an additional consecutive sentence if he went to trial did not constitute ineffective assistance because at the time of sentencing, the Fourth Department had yet to address the issue of whether the sentence on a first-degree felony murder charge had to run concurrently with the sentence imposed on the underlying felony while the Second and Third Departments determined the sentences had to run concurrently. People v Couser, 28 N.Y.3d 368, 68 N.E.3d 26, 45 N.Y.S.3d 301, 2016 N.Y. LEXIS 3607 (N.Y. 2016).

8. Under former § 125.30

Writ of prohibition would not issue to prevent county court from proceeding of criminal trial as against contentions that defendant should be allowed to waive jury in case in which he might be sentenced to death and that applicable homicide statute with respect to a sentence for murder was unconstitutional, where such matters could be properly reviewed on appeal. People v Fitzpatrick, 34 A.D.2d 730, 311 N.Y.S.2d 577, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5156 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. dismissed, 27 N.Y.2d 742, 314 N.Y.S.2d 992, 263 N.E.2d 390, 1970 N.Y. A defendant, who pled guilty to murder, was not entitled to relief as, even if he would have invoked his right to a trial but for the possibility of the imposition of the death penalty, his plea was not thereby rendered involuntary and under the terms of the statute, the death penalty may be imposed only upon a jury verdict of guilty. People v Black, 34 A.D.2d 999, 312 N.Y.S.2d 658, 312 N.Y.S.2d 849, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4432 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1970), aff'd, 30 N.Y.2d 593, 330 N.Y.S.2d 804, 281 N.E.2d 849, 1972 N.Y. The homicide statutes are constitutional. People v Fitzpatrick, 61 Misc. 2d 1043, 308 N.Y.S.2d 18, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1906 (N.Y. 9. Under former § 125.35

Since Penal L § 125.35, subdivision 5 leaves infliction of death penalty solely to discretion of jury, such penalty constitutes cruel and unusual punishment in violation of Eighth Amendment of US Constitution. People v Fitzpatrick, 32 N.Y.2d 499, 346 N.Y.S.2d 793, 300 N.E.2d 139, 1973 N.Y. 10. Under former § 1045

The purpose of this section was to make murder convictions more certain. People v Hicks, 287 N.Y. 165, 38 N.E.2d 482, 287 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 165, 1941 N.Y. LEXIS 1382 (N.Y. 1941).

Sections 1044, 1045 and 1045-a of the Penal Law and § 42 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and a sentence of death pursuant to them, do not violate the Constitution of the United States as based upon information supplied by persons with whom the accused has not been confronted and as to whom he has had no opportunity for cross-examination or rebuttal. People v Williams, 298 N.Y. 863, 84 N.E.2d 446, 298 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 863, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 1725 (N.Y.), aff'd, Williams v New York, 337 U.S. 241, 69 S. Ct. 1079, 93 L. Ed. 1337, 1949 U.S. LEXIS 2308 (U.S. 1949).

Section 1045 as amended by L 1937 c 67 and § 1045-a, as added by said chapter, give trial court discretion as to sentence in case of felony murder conviction, where jury makes recommendation of life imprisonment. People v Smith, 297 N.Y.S. 489, 163 Misc. 469, 1937 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1384 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1937).

Since, under subd. 3 of this section, added in 1963, the death penalty cannot be imposed upon a defendant charged with murder in the first degree committed while he was under 18 years of age, a demand for a special jury pursuant to § 749-aa of the Judiciary Law need not be granted in the absence of showing circumstances in addition to the nature of the crime charged. People v Courtney, 40 Misc. 2d 682, 243 N.Y.S.2d 800, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1612 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1963).

Amendment of this section by ch 994 of the Laws of 1963 was not invalid as to a person convicted of felony murder prior to the amendment as subjecting him to an ex post facto law. People ex rel. Lonschein v Warden, Queens House of Detention for Men, 43 Misc. 2d 109, 250 N.Y.S.2d 15, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1729 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), aff'd, 15 N.Y.2d 663, 255 N.Y.S.2d 876, 204 N.E.2d 206, 1964 N.Y. LEXIS 801 (N.Y. 1964).

The amendment of this section by ch 994 of the Laws of 1963 was not invalid as ex post facto as changing the nature of evidence admissible in sentencing a defendant found guilty of felony murder or as inflicting a greater or additional punishment. People ex rel. Lonschein v Warden, Queens House of Detention for Men, 43 Misc. 2d 109, 250 N.Y.S.2d 15, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1729 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), aff'd, 15 N.Y.2d 663, 255 N.Y.S.2d 876, 204 N.E.2d 206, 1964 N.Y. LEXIS 801 (N.Y. 1964).

Capital case is one of "importance" within that standard set for the ordering special jury by Judiciary Law 749-aa, subd 4, and case is brought within such standard by simple allegation that indictment is for murder in first degree. Possibility of imposing capital punishment is enough alone to be sufficient to justify use of such jury. People v Blanchfield, 45 Misc. 2d 536, 257 N.Y.S.2d 438, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2220 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1965).

11. Under former § 1045-a

Section 1045-a does not expressly, or by fair implication, provide that jury finding defendant guilty shall render verdict of "guilty" without recommendation of life imprisonment where jurors have not agreed upon such verdict, since until jury has reached agreement upon every part of verdict it has not agreed upon any verdict. People v Hicks, 287 N.Y. 165, 38 N.E.2d 482, 287 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 165, 1941 N.Y. LEXIS 1382 (N.Y. 1941).

The burden of proving that the defendant is not entitled to recommendation of life imprisonment is not placed upon the people by the statute. People v Mardavich, 287 N.Y. 344, 39 N.E.2d 906, 287 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 344, 1942 N.Y. LEXIS 1116 (N.Y. 1942).

County court is without power to furnish, gratis, to defendant, appealing from conviction of robbery a transcript of the minutes of trial, after trial. Where the judgment is of death, or, of life imprisonment following a recommendation of a jury pursuant to § 1045-a, a transcript may be furnished without charge. People v Raymondi, 43 N.Y.S.2d 217, 180 Misc. 973, 1943 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2160 (N.Y. County Ct. 1943), app. dismissed, 268 A.D. 863, 50 N.Y.S.2d 678, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3925 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944).

12. —Jury's recommendation of mercy as binding

The jury's recommendation of a life sentence for a person convicted of first degree murder is not binding on the court. People v Ertel, 283 N.Y. 519, 29 N.E.2d 70, 283 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 519, 1940 N.Y. LEXIS 904 (N.Y. 1940).

Under § 1045-a trial judge in felony murder case may or may not follow recommendation of jury that defendant be sentenced to life imprisonment, but when requested so to do trial judge should charge jury that he is not bound by law to follow such a recommendation, if one should be made. People v Cole, 285 N.Y. 838, 35 N.E.2d 503, 285 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 838, 1941 N.Y. LEXIS 1805 (N.Y. 1941).

Word "may," as used in § 1045-a, which provides that court "may" sentence to life imprisonment a person who has been found guilty of murder in first degree, with recommendation of jury that he be sentenced to life imprisonment, means "must." People v De Renna, 2 N.Y.S.2d 694, 166 Misc. 582, 1938 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1333 (N.Y. County Ct. 1938).

Under § 1045-a, permitting a jury to make a recommendation of life imprisonment in case of felony murder, as a part of its verdict, and providing that on such recommendation the court "may" sentence the defendant to imprisonment for life, the court is not required to give its reasons for following such finding, but it should follow the recommendation in every instance save where such recommendation is improper, unduly influenced or without any basis in fact or circumstances. People v Ray, 16 N.Y.S.2d 224, 172 Misc. 1004, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2518 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1939), app. dismissed, 282 N.Y. 680, 26 N.E.2d 811, 282 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 680, 1940 N.Y. LEXIS 1482 (N.Y. 1940), aff'd, 259 A.D. 1065, 22 N.Y.S.2d 119, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7976 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

13. — —Factors considered by court

On prosecution for a felony murder under subd. 2 the defendant was sentenced to life imprisonment on recommendation of the jury where the defendant was mentally ill and had previously been of good repute. People v Smith, 297 N.Y.S. 489, 163 Misc. 469, 1937 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1384 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1937).

The age and immaturity of a defendant 20 years of age was held ample reason for following the jury's recommendation of a life sentence. People v Ray, 16 N.Y.S.2d 224, 172 Misc. 1004, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2518 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1939), app. dismissed, 282 N.Y. 680, 26 N.E.2d 811, 282 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 680, 1940 N.Y. LEXIS 1482 (N.Y. 1940), aff'd, 259 A.D. 1065, 22 N.Y.S.2d 119, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7976 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

14. —Court's charge to jury

It was reversible error for court to charge jurors that if they found defendant guilty of felony murder, they should then proceed to consider whether to recommend that punishment be life imprisonment rather than death, but that if "not unanimous on that proposition it is nevertheless your duty to bring in the verdict of murder in the first degree." People v Hicks, 287 N.Y. 165, 38 N.E.2d 482, 287 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 165, 1941 N.Y. LEXIS 1382 (N.Y. 1941).

In a proceeding under the above statute it is not error to fail to charge that there is any burden of proof on either side. People v Dusablon, 16 N.Y.2d 9, 261 N.Y.S.2d 38, 209 N.E.2d 90, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1269 (N.Y. 1965).

Where in a proceeding under the above statute the court charged the jury that it would be possible for a defendant who had been sentenced to life imprisonment to be placed on parole after he had served 26 years and eight months, such charge was in performance of the obligation imposed by subd 4 of such statute requiring that the jury be charged as to the law relating to the possible release on parole of a person sentenced to life imprisonment. People v Dusablon, 16 N.Y.2d 9, 261 N.Y.S.2d 38, 209 N.E.2d 90, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1269 (N.Y. 1965).

15. —Evidence at sentencing hearing

Sections 1044, 1045 and 1045-a of the Penal Law and § 42 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and a sentence of death pursuant to them, do not violate the Constitution of the United States as based upon information supplied by persons with whom the accused has not been confronted and as to whom he has had no opportunity for cross-examination or rebuttal. People v Williams, 298 N.Y. 863, 84 N.E.2d 446, 298 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 863, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 1725 (N.Y.), aff'd, Williams v New York, 337 U.S. 241, 69 S. Ct. 1079, 93 L. Ed. 1337, 1949 U.S. LEXIS 2308 (U.S. 1949).

Although the defendant was found legally sane during his trial for murder, it was error to exclude evidence of his mental condition at the sentencing hearing and such error must result in remand to the trial court for an automatic sentence of life imprisonment. People v Moseley, 20 N.Y.2d 64, 281 N.Y.S.2d 762, 228 N.E.2d 765, 1967 N.Y. LEXIS 1381 (N.Y. 1967).

At the sentencing stage of a trial a defendant is not entitled to prior notice that the prosecution is planning to introduce a confession, and is not automatically entitled to a "Huntley hearing" on its voluntariness prior to introduction. People v Jackson, 20 N.Y.2d 440, 285 N.Y.S.2d 8, 231 N.E.2d 722, 1967 N.Y. LEXIS 1152 (N.Y. 1967), cert. denied, 391 U.S. 928, 88 S. Ct. 1815, 20 L. Ed. 2d 668, 1968 U.S. LEXIS 1757 (U.S. 1968).

§ 145.00. Criminal mischief in the fourth degree

A person is guilty of criminal mischief in the fourth degree when, having no right to do so nor any reasonable ground to believe that he or she has such right, he or she:

1. Intentionally damages property of another person; or

2. Intentionally participates in the destruction of an abandoned building as defined in section one thousand nine hundred seventy-one-a of the real property actions and proceedings law; or

3. Recklessly damages property of another person in an amount exceeding two hundred fifty dollars; or

4. With intent to prevent a person from communicating a request for emergency assistance, intentionally disables or removes telephonic, TTY or similar communication sending equipment while that person: (a) is attempting to seek or is engaged in the process of seeking emergency assistance from police, law enforcement, fire or emergency medical services personnel; or (b) is attempting to seek or is engaged in the process of seeking emergency assistance from another person or entity in order to protect himself, herself or a third person from imminent physical injury. The fact that the defendant has an ownership interest in such equipment shall not be a defense to a charge pursuant to this subdivision.

Criminal mischief in the fourth degree is a class A misdemeanor.

I. In General

1. In general

Where 17-year-old defendant had record of several arrests and two convictions and had completely failed to cooperate with authorities after having previously been granted youthful offender status, trial court properly denied defendant youthful offender status in connection with indictments for criminal possession of stolen property and fourth-degree criminal mischief. People v Bruce, 57 A.D.2d 1024, 395 N.Y.S.2d 252, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12324 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

Property owners' conclusory statements of amount of damage to their property, as set forth in depositions annexed to juvenile delinquency petition, were legally insufficient to sustain counts of petition alleging commission of acts which, if committed by adult, would have constituted third and fourth degree criminal mischief. In re John B., 261 A.D.2d 471, 690 N.Y.S.2d 109, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4783 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. dismissed, 94 N.Y.2d 797, 700 N.Y.S.2d 429, 722 N.E.2d 509, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 3720 (N.Y. 1999).

Breaking of car window in course of committing petit larceny of car's contents constituted first degree auto stripping (CLS Penal former § 165.10(1)) as well as fourth degree criminal mischief. People v Robinson, 265 A.D.2d 241, 697 N.Y.S.2d 23, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10862 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1999), aff'd, 95 N.Y.2d 179, 711 N.Y.S.2d 148, 733 N.E.2d 220, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 1839 (N.Y. 2000).

Court properly joined for trial 2 indictments, each of which charged, inter alia, third degree burglary and criminal mischief, where, in each case, police responded to burglar alarm at store located in one-story shopping center in early morning hours, found that roof had been broken through, and saw defendant near store carrying stolen merchandise. People v Hall, 272 A.D.2d 412, 708 N.Y.S.2d 125, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5049 (N.Y. App. Div.

2d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 853, 714 N.Y.S.2d 4, 736 N.E.2d 865, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 2648 (N.Y. 2000).

Defendant, a juvenile, could not claim a justification defense under N.Y. Penal Law § 35.25 to a criminal mischief in the fourth degree charge under N.Y. Penal Law § 145.00(1) because § 35.25 only justified the use of physical force upon another person rather than against property; defendant was not entitled to strike the victim's car with a metal pole because defendant thought the victim was committing a larceny by impounding defendant's puppies to entice defendant to attend school. Matter of Timothy HH., 41 A.D.3d 913, 838 N.Y.S.2d 226, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6849 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

Because defendant, who matched the victim's description, was seen carrying a white plastic bag near the scene of a reported burglary, and because defendant was evasive and fled from the police, they had probable cause to pursue and arrest defendant for second-degree burglary, petit larceny, and fourth-degree criminal mischief, violations of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 140.25(2), 155.25, 145.00(1), prior to a showup identification. People v Davis, 48 A.D.3d 1120, 851 N.Y.S.2d 320, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 851 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 957, 863 N.Y.S.2d 141, 893 N.E.2d 447, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 2908 (N.Y. 2008).

Fourth degree criminal mischief (Penal L § 145.00) is a Class A misdemeanor over which a Village Justice has original jurisdiction under the Uniform Justice Court Act § 2001, subd 1. People v Krstovich, 72 Misc. 2d 90, 338 N.Y.S.2d 132, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1392 (N.Y. County Ct. 1972).

A charge of criminal mischief under Penal L § 145.00 for writing the words "Satan Spades" on a subway station wall was not precluded merely because such act may also have been a violation of Penal L § 145.30 (unlawful advertising) or of a city's transit rules and regulations. In re Charles W., 72 Misc. 2d 370, 339 N.Y.S.2d 193, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1249 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. 1972).

That administrator of leased premises, appointed to collect rents and remedy conditions, obtained from housing court hearing officer an ex parte order to effect that administrator was only person authorized to run building did not so effectively prohibit president of corporate owner from entering building's basement, where he had stored personalty, as to sustain charges of criminal mischief and criminal trespass. People v Mauer, 82 Misc. 2d 753, 370 N.Y.S.2d 443, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2671 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1975).

Neither fact that the United Nations and/or its representative was the complainant in the case charging defendant with criminal mischief in having sprayed red paint on the outside wall of the United Nations headquarters, nor fact that the property involved was internationally owned was such as to deprive the Criminal Court of the City of New York of its jurisdiction of the person of defendant or of the subject matter where, by reason of a treaty known as the "Headquarters Agreement" between the United States and the United Nations, infractions on property located within headquarters district were, for jurisdictional purposes, to be considered solely as a crime committed against property located in New York County. Neither fact that situs of offense, i. e., criminal mischief, was the headquarters of the United Nations, nor fact that the defendant was apprehended by a United Nations guard who himself was an alien and a foreign complainant, both individually and as a representative of the United Nations, was sufficient to strip the district attorney of New York County of his authority to prosecute defendant in view of the applicable provisions of the County Law and the "Headquarters Agreement" between the United States and the United Nations. People v Weiner, 85 Misc. 2d 161, 378 N.Y.S.2d 966, 1976 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1974 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1976).

Offense of criminal mischief is not within Family Court jurisdiction as delineated in CLS Family Ct Act § 812 and CLS CPL § 530.11, and thus exclusion provision of CLS CPL § 100.07 does not apply to such offense. Defendant can be subject to both Family Court proceeding involving charge of disorderly conduct and criminal proceeding involving charge of criminal mischief, even though both arise from same transaction, since family offense proceedings are civil in nature and there is no constitutional prohibition against concurrent criminal and civil remedies for same acts or transactions. People v Bulin, 142 Misc. 2d 776, 538 N.Y.S.2d 436, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 115 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1989).

Former employee of car service was not entitled to dismissal of fourth degree criminal mischief and third degree criminal tampering charges where he was alleged to have possessed 2-way radio tuned to radio frequency owned by car service, and to have played music over that frequency so as to render radio communications of car service inoperable; while radio frequency and right to use radio frequency were not tangible property subject to statutes, radio signals generated by car service and its employees, and electronic equipment used to transmit and receive those signals, were tangible property subject to statutes. People v Choo, 152 Misc. 2d 324, 576 N.Y.S.2d 486, 1991 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 623 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1991).

Defendant could not be charged with fourth degree criminal mischief arising from incident in which he destroyed property jointly or co-owned by him and victim, who was his wife, as proof that person other than defendant owned property that was damaged is essential element of offense. People v Kheyfets, 174 Misc. 2d 516, 665 N.Y.S.2d 802, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 498 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

CLS Penal § 155.00(5) definition of "owner" applies only to Title J of Penal Law, and did not apply to charge of attempted fourth degree criminal mischief, which is part of Title I. People v Brown, 185 Misc. 2d 326, 711 N.Y.S.2d 707, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 297 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2000).

Trial court denied defendant's motion to dismiss the charges against defendant in a case involving defendant crashing a county police car that defendant was driving as part of defendant's employment with the county police; the information filed against defendant, which included information from two witnesses, sufficiently established charges against defendant of reckless driving, reckless endangerment in the second degree, and criminal mischief in the fourth degree where defendant drove with the car's lights off, late at night, at a high rate of speed, and lost control of the vehicle. People v Muscarnera, 842 N.Y.S.2d 241, 16 Misc. 3d 622, 237 N.Y.L.J. 95, 2007 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3843 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2007).

Defendant's intent was to injure the complainant, not to damage her phone, and thus the mens rea requirement of intent for establishing a violation of the statute was not sufficiently pleaded; the count charging defendant with criminal mischief in the fourth degree was facially insufficient, since it failed to allege facts of an evidentiary character supporting or tending to support that charge or demonstrating reasonable cause to believe that defendant had committed that offense, and the entire accusatory instrument was dismissed. People v Toro, 61 Misc. 3d 26, 79 N.Y.S.3d 844, 2018 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2713 (N.Y. App. Term 2018).

Bay constable acted reasonably in believing that storeowner acted intentionally in damaging town property, and thus constable had probable cause to arrest storeowner for fourth degree criminal mischief, and was entitled to qualified immunity in storeowner's malicious prosecution action as matter of law, where storeowner had picked up traffic barricades belonging to town, had broken them by throwing them against building, and had driven his vehicle over remaining barricades and tapped constable with bumper. O'Neill v Babylon, 986 F.2d 646, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 2412 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1993).

A town may provide for the payment of a reward for information leading to the detection, arrest and conviction of persons guilty of vandalism in the town. 1978 Op St Comp File #787.

2. Constitutional considerations

Family Court's reversal of its prior decision to dismiss delinquency petition for failure to establish prima facie elements of fourth degree criminal mischief, third degree unauthorized use of vehicle, and possession of burglar's tools did not expose juvenile to double jeopardy where court had erroneously granted dismissed motion under misapprehension that it was necessary to show that automobile was stolen to establish elements of those crimes; court's reinstatement of charges on discovery of its mistake was correction of legal error, which did not require further adjudication of facts but merely reconsideration of applicable law. In re Lionel F., 152 A.D.2d 571, 543 N.Y.S.2d 696, 1989

N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9672 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989), aff'd, 76 N.Y.2d 747, 559 N.Y.S.2d 228, 558 N.E.2d 30, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 1338 (N.Y. 1990).

Trial court was not required to hold a hearing, pursuant to N.Y. Crim. P. Law art. 730, to determine if defendant who had a history of mental illness was competent to stand trial before it accepted his guilty plea, and the appellate court rejected defendant's claims that he was denied effective assistance of counsel because his counsel did not request a competency hearing and that his guilty plea to criminal mischief in the fourth degree was involuntary because the court did not hold a competency 730 hearing. People v Barclay, 1 A.D.3d 705, 766 N.Y.S.2d 636, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11714 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 567, 775 N.Y.S.2d 785, 807 N.E.2d 898, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 4472 (N.Y. 2003).

3. Evidence; admissibility

In trial for second degree assault and fourth degree criminal mischief arising from fight between defendant and complainant wherein defense counsel elicited testimony that police officer handcuffed both men when he arrived at scene, officer was properly permitted to testify that he uncuffed complainant and arrested defendant after speaking with 2 bystanders, and reversal was not required on ground that reference to out-of-court statements of bystanders (who were unavailable to testify) inferentially bolstered complainant's testimony that defendant started fight, where court did not admit substance of officer's conversation with bystanders and promptly issued limiting instructions; furthermore, defendant himself invited admission of such testimony by eliciting that officer had handcuffed both men, which created material gap in narrative that People were entitled to explain. People v Rivera, 96 N.Y.2d 749, 725 N.Y.S.2d 264, 748 N.E.2d 1060, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 232 (N.Y. 2001).

In prosecution of landlord for fourth degree criminal mischief stemming from her entry into tenant's home on tenant's default in paying rent, and her removal of various cabinets, countertops, and household fixtures which she had installed at commencement of tenancy, trial court erred in curtailing defense counsel's efforts to elicit landlord's testimony as to her state of mind, since criminal mischief requires showing that defendant had no right to damage property and that she had no reasonable ground to believe she had such right, and thus landlord should have been permitted to testify to her belief that she was entitled to remove from premises property to which she held title. People v Reed, 121 A.D.2d 574, 503 N.Y.S.2d 624, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 58561 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

In prosecution for fourth degree mischief arising from incident in which defendant allegedly drove school bus through red light and collided with another vehicle, court erred in refusing to admit in evidence, as excited utterances, defendant's statements to bus matron, only passenger on school bus, immediately following accident, to effect that driver of car ran red light, since statements were made while he was still under influence of crash. Court's refusal to admit defendant's hearsay statements into evidence did not constitute harmless error in prosecution for fourth degree mischief where proof of recklessness was not overwhelmingly shown, and statements in question were to effect that driver of other vehicle involved in accident ran red light. People v Cannon, 228 A.D.2d 513, 644 N.Y.S.2d 311, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6586 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1996).

In prosecution for attempted third degree burglary, fourth degree mischief, and trespass, defendant was not entitled to suppression of eyewitness's identification testimony where eyewitness's viewing of defendant as he was led out of station house in handcuffs was accidental and neither unduly suggestive nor result of questionable police practice. People v Marino, 245 A.D.2d 529, 666 N.Y.S.2d 41, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13216 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 928, 670 N.Y.S.2d 409, 693 N.E.2d 756, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 772 (N.Y. 1998).

In prosecution for second degree burglary, fourth degree mischief, child endangerment, and second degree harassment, prosecution was properly allowed to elicit evidence of defendant's past thefts from, and acts of violence against, victim where those prior bad acts were probative of defendant's intent to commit crime when he broke down door of victim's residence. People v Springs, 255 A.D.2d 609, 685 N.Y.S.2d 69, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12831 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 902, 689 N.Y.S.2d 714, 711 N.E.2d 990, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1567 (N.Y. 1999).

4. —Sufficiency

Trial court's judgments of conviction finding defendant guilty of 12 counts of criminal mischief had to be reversed, except for one count of criminal mischief in the third degree; defendant could not be acquitted of "making graffiti," as he was by the jury and be convicted of 11 of the 12 counts because they were all based on the same conduct. alleged spray-painting, and, thus, the verdict was repugnant. Colavito v New York Organ Donor Network, Inc., 6 N.Y.3d 820, 813 N.Y.S.2d 37, 846 N.E.2d 467, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 517 (N.Y. 2006).

Evidence, particularly testimony of police officer specially trained in identifying suspects, that defendant was perpetrator she saw in her house, was sufficient to support conviction for second degree burglary, petit larceny and criminal mischief in fourth degree despite testimony of defendant's family that he was home at time of occurrence. People v Cerulli, 126 A.D.2d 736, 511 N.Y.S.2d 323, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 41885 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Evidence established that juvenile committed act which if done by adult would have constituted fourth degree criminal mischief where he grabbed chain and medallion from undercover officer's neck, dropping them when apprehended; officer's testimony that she felt chain snap when juvenile grabbed it established that he damaged chain, and his breaking of clasp to ensure fast removal of chain demonstrated intent to damage officer's property. In re Eric H., 129 A.D.2d 638, 514 N.Y.S.2d 265, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 45319 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Defendant was properly convicted of 2 counts of fourth degree criminal mischief where he admitted breaking windows in each of 2 apartments without license to do so; defendant's statement to detective, that if any persons had tried to stop him "I'd break their heads with my bare hands...I wouldn't need the brick" furnished sufficient evidence of his criminal intent. People v Waterman, 131 A.D.2d 524, 516 N.Y.S.2d 125, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 47982 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

By removing vehicle hood from its mounting, defendants could be found to have damaged vehicle sufficiently to be guilty of fourth degree criminal mischief, and guilt was established beyond reasonable doubt where defendants were apprehended running out of woods 50 yards from where 3 men were seen running from 2 vehicles—one registered to codefendant and one stolen and partially dismantled—and men fit general description of those who had driven cars into area, who were seen leaning over engine area of stolen car (hood of which had been removed and was lying on ground), and who had fled into woods when police arrived. People v MacDonnell, 133 A.D.2d 177, 518 N.Y.S.2d 688, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49686 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Conviction of third degree weapon possession and fourth degree criminal mischief, based on possessing Molotov Cocktail and causing damage to house by throwing it against wall, was supported by evidence that bottle recovered from house was filled with gasoline, contained wick, and bore defendant's fingerprints and scrapings of paint matching scratches on wall of house. People v Webb, 134 A.D.2d 303, 520 N.Y.S.2d 629, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50488 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 939, 524 N.Y.S.2d 690, 519 N.E.2d 636, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19861 (N.Y. 1987).

Evidence was sufficient to support defendant's convictions for second degree burglary, petit larceny, and fourth degree criminal mischief based on (1) victim's testimony that small red bank had been broken and lid removed from glass jar, and that money had been taken from each, (2) defendant's fingerprints obtained from both items, and (3) testimony of victim and investigating officer describing damage done to screen window by which entry was obtained. People v Caffey, 134 A.D.2d 923, 521 N.Y.S.2d 937, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 51122 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 930, 524 N.Y.S.2d 681, 519 N.E.2d 627, 1987 N.Y. Defendant's guilt of third degree burglary, fourth degree criminal mischief, and possession of burglar's tools was established by facts that (1) police observed defendant exit through third-story window at 3:00 a.m., (2) prompt search of building revealed property damage, including indentations in wood frame of window through which defendant had exited, broken window lock, and indentations in wood frame of internal set of double doors which led to office containing valuable office equipment, with moulding between doors having been removed, and (3) 14-inch screwdriver and tin snip were found on floor near window through which defendant had exited, with screwdriver having black sticky substance similar to that seen on defendant's hands during his arrest. People v Lowman, 137 A.D.2d 622, 524 N.Y.S.2d 510, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1037 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Defendant's guilt of first degree possession of stolen property, third degree attempted burglary, and fourth degree criminal mischief was supported by evidence that police, in response to radio call of burglary in progress, (1) arrived at scene and saw defendant and codefendant exiting through chainlink fence which surrounded premises, (2) observed defendants run toward nearby vehicle, with defendant opening its door, and then run away as officers approached, (3) found vehicle's motor running, its ignition ripped out, and slotted screwdriver on floor, and (4) discovered that vehicle was stolen and found that warehouse door had been pried open. People v Atson, 139 A.D.2d 520, 526 N.Y.S.2d 618, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3772 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 72 N.Y.2d 856, 532 N.Y.S.2d 506, 528 N.E.2d 896, 1988 N.Y. In trial for fourth degree criminal mischief, evidence was sufficient to prove that defendant intentionally damaged property of another where he had kicked in paneling in utility closet in order to gain entrance to doctor's office. People v Selby, 146 A.D.2d 655, 536 N.Y.S.2d 552, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 410 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Police officer's statements that defendant injured officers by kicking, punching and biting them while they were making arrest, and scattering newspapers at nearby newsstand, if found to be true, would establish that defendant committed each element of crimes of second degree assault, menacing, resisting arrest, second degree obstruction of governmental administration, and fourth degree criminal mischief. In re Jeremy B., 151 A.D.2d 314, 542 N.Y.S.2d 582, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7904 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1989).

Evidence supported convictions for third degree burglary, fourth degree criminal mischief, and possession of burglar's tools where (1) defendant was observed by police breaking into building, (2) defendant then attempted to break into real estate office in building, which was secured by locked metal door, (3) when efforts proved futile, defendant ventured behind stairwell and broke through padlock and hinge which secured door to basement, (4) defendant was apprehended by police as he left premises, (5) police recovered screwdriver from defendant's person, and (6) pry marks, indentations and scratches were later found on various doors in premises. People v Johnson, 155 A.D.2d 555, 547 N.Y.S.2d 410, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14297 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 814, 552 N.Y.S.2d 564, 551 N.E.2d 1242, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 483 (N.Y. 1990).

Evidence was sufficient to establish defendant's guilt of third degree burglary, and third and fourth degree criminal mischief, where he and his codefendant were discovered in predawn hours holding up steel gate which secured entrance to shopping mall, accomplice was crawling out from underneath gate clutching leather coat, glass behind gate was smashed and curtains enclosing 2 booths inside mall were ripped or slashed, cash registers in both booths were broken, and leather coats and jackets were strewn on floor with footprints on them, with some missing. Police officer's unrebutted testimony that defendant had repeatedly kicked and damaged holding room door after he had been taken into custody supported conviction for fourth degree mischief. People v Ellis, 233 A.D.2d 692, 650 N.Y.S.2d 329, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12106 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

In delinquency proceeding, evidence supported finding that juvenile committed acts that, if committed by adult, would be second and third degree burglary, second and third degree trespass, petty larceny, fourth degree mischief, and fifth degree possession of stolen property where victim saw accused juvenile, moments after crime, exiting adjacent building with several individuals, one of whom victim had seen in his apartment, and victim later saw police recover part of his property from each member of group of 3 persons that included accused juvenile. In re Jay R., 255 A.D.2d 134, 681 N.Y.S.2d 15, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11722 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Evidence supported conviction of third degree weapon possession and fourth degree mischief where there was ample evidence that defendant intended to use baseball bat unlawfully against another, including evidence from which jury could find intent to menace victim. People v Reese, 255 A.D.2d 230, 679 N.Y.S.2d 824, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12446 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

Evidence failed to show that damage to property exceeded $1,500 where no expert testified as to value, no documentary proof as to cost of repair or replacement was introduced, and complainant's testimony that repair and replacement cost over $1,500 was insufficient since that testimony was unsupported by documentation or other evidence; thus, defendant's conviction of second degree mischief would be reduced to fourth degree mischief. People v Wilson, 284 A.D.2d 420, 728 N.Y.S.2d 174, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6129 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 926, 732 N.Y.S.2d 643, 758 N.E.2d 669, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4077 (N.Y. 2001).

Evidence of defendant's threats to go to victim's home and harm him, together with damage done to victim's apartment and car thought to be victim's, supported fourth degree criminal mischief conviction. People v McDonald, 287 A.D.2d 655, 732 N.Y.S.2d 32, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9784 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 685, 738 N.Y.S.2d 300, 764 N.E.2d 404, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4468 (N.Y. 2001).

Evidence was legally sufficient to support his convictions of burglary in the third degree, a violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 140.20; criminal mischief in the fourth degree, a violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 145.00(1); and petit larceny, a violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 155.25 where the owner of the bar which defendant had entered after hours and from defendant took money, testified that defendant did not have permission to enter the bar after hours, to damage property, or to take money from the bar, such that there was a valid line of reasoning and permissible inferences to lead a rational person to the conclusion reached by the jury on the basis of the evidence at trial despite defendant's assertion that defendant believed that defendant had permission to enter the bar to take the money at issue. People v Prober, 298 A.D.2d 966, 748 N.Y.S.2d 118, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9010 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 99 N.Y.2d 538, 752 N.Y.S.2d 599, 782 N.E.2d 577, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 4171 (N.Y. 2002).

Sufficient evidence supported defendant's convictions of two counts of burglary in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 140.25(1)(b), and one count each of assault in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(6), and criminal mischief in the fourth degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 145.00. The term "entry" for burglary had to be redefined for the jury. People v Diefenbacher, 21 A.D.3d 1293, 801 N.Y.S.2d 466, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10010 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2005), app. denied, 6 N.Y.3d 775, 811 N.Y.S.2d 342, 844 N.E.2d 797, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 342 (N.Y. 2006).

Evidence was sufficient to support defendant's conviction for criminal mischief in the fourth degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 145.00(1), as the victim testified that she heard loud banging and the sound of glass shattering in the victim's apartment in the early morning, and defendant then entered the victim's bedroom and punched the victim in the face and head. The testimony of the victim and neighbors established that the victim's front door was broken, and the jury was entitled to infer therefrom that defendant entered the victim's apartment with the intent to assault the victim and that defendant intended to break the door in order to gain entry into the apartment. People v Jackson, 46 A.D.3d 1408, 847 N.Y.S.2d 800, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13094 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2007), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 841, 859 N.Y.S.2d 400, 889 N.E.2d 87, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 1750 (N.Y. 2008).

Weight of the evidence, which included testimony that defendant went to the victim's apartment seeking return of his cell phone and threatened to kill her if she did not open the door, the victim and her child came outside, and defendant attacked the victim, readily supported defendant's convictions for burglary in the second degree, robbery in the second degree, grand larceny in the fourth degree, assault in the third degree, criminal mischief in the fourth degree and endangering the welfare of a child. People v Curry, 152 A.D.3d 818, 59 N.Y.S.3d 161, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5311 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 30 N.Y.3d 948, 89 N.E.3d 522, 67 N.Y.S.3d 132, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 3501 (N.Y. 2017).

Mother established, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the father committed criminal mischief in the fourth degree because the father got upset when he saw that the older child was recording the altercation, and the father grabbed the older child's cell phone and threw it to the ground, breaking it. Matter of Joan WW. v Peter WW., 173 A.D.3d 1380, 104 N.Y.S.3d 358, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4766 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2019).

Juvenile defendant's admission to breaking a window failed to establish that defendant recklessly damaged property in an amount exceeding $250, as the petition did not allege a monetary amount and no evidence of the window's value was adduced. Even if the petition was liberally construed to have charged defendant with the intentional conduct subdivision of criminal mischief, dismissal was warranted because defendant's admission failed to show that she intentionally broke the window. Matter of P., 175 A.D.3d 1298, 109 N.Y.S.3d 310, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6497 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2019).

Defendant's verdict of criminal mischief in the third degree and other crimes was not against the weight of evidence because defendant and her codefendant unlawfully broke into the building's garage and caused damage to the garage door and personal property belonging to other tenants in the building, and the property manager testified that the damage to the garage door was well in excess of $250. People v Saunders, 181 A.D.3d 1049, 120 N.Y.S.3d 658, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1739 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2020).

Defendant was guilty of attempted fourth degree criminal mischief where he deliberately crashed car into light pole, despite agreement that entitled him to share use of car, where title to car was not in defendant's name and there was no doubt that car was "property of another person." People v Brown, 185 Misc. 2d 326, 711 N.Y.S.2d 707, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 297 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2000).

Verdict finding defendant guilty of assault in the first degree, criminal mischief in the fourth degree, and criminal possession of a weapon in the fourth degree, was not against the weight of the evidence despite defendant's defense of justification, as the consistent and credible testimony of the People's witnesses indicated that defendant was the initial aggressor of the attack which caused serious physical injury to the complainant. People v Williams, 304 A.D.2d 595, 759 N.Y.S.2d 329, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3690 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 567, 763 N.Y.S.2d 824, 795 N.E.2d 50, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 2225 (N.Y. 2003).

In a proceeding pursuant to N.Y. Fam. Ct. Act art. 3, the family court properly adjudicated a juvenile as a delinquent; the evidence supported the conclusion that the juvenile intentionally caused actual damage to property that, if done by an adult, would have constituted criminal mischief pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 145.00(1). In re Joshua F., 309 A.D.2d 1012, 765 N.Y.S.2d 670, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10986 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

Evidence was sufficient to support defendant's conviction for criminal mischief in the fourth degree where there was testimony that defendant tore a metal heater cover from a wall and swung it around the cell to bang it against other objects, which established that defendant intended to damage a heater cover. People v Liggins, 2 A.D.3d 1325, 770 N.Y.S.2d 263, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14284 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2003).

Criminal mischief charge against defendant juvenile was established by evidence that defendant chose, as a means of attacking another person, to throw glass objects that almost certainly would have to shatter in order to injure his opponent, thereby evincing an intent to also destroy property. Matter of Carlos M., 32 A.D.3d 686, 820 N.Y.S.2d 581, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10554 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2006).

Although the victim testified that her television, glasses, a framed picture and a pair of mukluks were damaged in the incident, the record was devoid of any proof as to the reasonable cost of repairing and/or replacing this property, and neither the victim's conclusory and unsubstantiated testimony regarding the value of the items in question nor the photo evidence contained in the record was sufficient to establish that the damage to the victim's property exceeded $250 for purposes of the third degree criminal mischief conviction; the record was, however, sufficient to establish that defendant intentionally damaged the victim's property and, therefore, defendant's conviction was reduced to criminal mischief in the fourth degree. People v Beauvais, 105 A.D.3d 1081, 962 N.Y.S.2d 764, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2227 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2013).

5. — —Circumstantial evidence

Circumstantial evidence was sufficient to support convictions for attempted third degree burglary, fourth degree criminal mischief, and possession of burglar's tools where (1) police officer, responding to anonymous phone call reporting burglary in progress at tire store, saw defendant and accomplice, who matched descriptions provided by caller, standing in front of premises, (2) defendant and accomplice began to walk away from store as unmarked police car approached, and officer stopped them for questioning, and (3) officer saw defendant drop screwdriver under front of police car, and it was subsequently determined that screwdriver matched pry marks around lock of store, and those on molding which had been pried away from windows of store. People v Letieri, 154 A.D.2d 622, 546 N.Y.S.2d 451, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13501 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

In trial for third degree burglary and fourth degree criminal mischief, proof was sufficient to permit inference that defendant entered premises with intent to commit crime, in light of fact that he used force in obtaining entry by smashing glass in interior door, buttressed by numerous other factors, including his unexplained and unauthorized presence on premises in middle of night. People v Gates, 170 A.D.2d 971, 566 N.Y.S.2d 137, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1696 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 78 N.Y.2d 922, 573 N.Y.S.2d 475, 577 N.E.2d 1067, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 2334 (N.Y. 1991).

6. — —Corroboration

In prosecution for second degree burglary and criminal mischief in fourth degree, independent evidence was sufficient to corroborate accomplice's testimony where (1) arresting officer, who had proceeded to scene of crime in response to radio call of burglary in progress, established that defendant and accomplice were found sitting on front stoop of burglarized premises, (2) officer recovered pieces of metal in doorjamb of premises which matched knife recovered from accomplice, and (3) neighbor testified that defendant had placed his hand through broken garage window in apparent attempt to gain entry to premises. People v Dawkins, 151 A.D.2d 495, 542 N.Y.S.2d 284, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7494 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 846, 546 N.Y.S.2d 1011, 546 N.E.2d 194, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 3839 (N.Y. 1989).

7. — —Grand jury proceedings

Evidence before grand jury was sufficient to sustain indictment for reckless endangerment in first degree, criminal mischief in fourth degree, and falsely reporting incident in third degree where testimony showed that deer slug had been fired through victim's trailer window following defendant's threat on victim's life, shotgun had been found next day along road where defendant had been stopped by sheriff during investigation on night of shooting, defendant reported theft of same shotgun from his home on next day, and defendant told fellow prisoner while in custody that he had fired shotgun blast through trailer of person he had argued with. People v McCarthy, 126 A.D.2d 935, 511 N.Y.S.2d 708, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 42034 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1987).

Grand jury evidence supported indictment on charges of third degree burglary and fourth degree criminal mischief where defendant was found in apartment whose door lock and windows were broken and from which television was missing, without authority or permission to be there. People v Scott, 131 A.D.2d 893, 517 N.Y.S.2d 248, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 48328 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Court erred in dismissing count of indictment charging fourth degree criminal mischief for insufficient proof of ownership of damaged apartment door where manager testified that he knew owner of complex and managed apartments for owner, collected rent, and performed all necessary maintenance and repairs, that he did not personally know defendant but knew of him, and that he had never given defendant permission to break window in screen door; under circumstances, grand jury could reasonably infer that owner of damaged property was someone other than defendant, which was all People were required to establish. People v Cannon, 210 A.D.2d 764, 620 N.Y.S.2d 539, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13018 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1994).

Allegation that defendant applied glue to wall and covered wall with advertisements was sufficient to charge him with fourth degree criminal mischief, which must contain facts tending to show defendant's "intent to damage" property of another, even though defendant's argument that his sole intent was to place advertisements on wall might prevail at trial. People v Vinolas, 174 Misc. 2d 740, 667 N.Y.S.2d 198, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 564 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1997).

Sufficient evidence supported the burglary, criminal mischief, and unlawful imprisonment charges contained in a grand jury indictment against defendant as the evidence established that defendant remained at the residence at issue after he was told to leave and then he purposefully swept bobblehead dolls off a table and grabbed his girlfriend, dragging her from the residence. People v Huntington, 867 N.Y.S.2d 377, 20 Misc. 3d 1114(A), 240 N.Y.L.J. 25, 2008 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 7175 (N.Y. County Ct.), aff'd, 57 A.D.3d 1238, 869 N.Y.S.2d 702, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9806 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

8. — —Insufficient evidence

Defendant was improperly convicted of fourth degree criminal mischief based on evidence that, in midst of dispute with neighbor over border of their properties, she pulled up marker stake that had been positioned by surveyor hired by neighbor and threw it several feet, where there was no proof of damage to property demarcated by stake or to stake itself, and People did not identify any other property that was allegedly damaged by defendant's actions. People v Hills, 95 N.Y.2d 947, 722 N.Y.S.2d 460, 745 N.E.2d 379, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3880 (N.Y. 2000).

Defendant's conviction of fourth degree criminal mischief would be reversed, even though People demonstrated that premises which defendant and 3 others rented was damaged, since People failed to prove that defendant caused damage. People v Capozzi, 133 A.D.2d 481, 519 N.Y.S.2d 210, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49949 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987).

Court would reverse defendant's conviction of fourth degree criminal mischief under CLS Penal § 145.00(1), which requires specific intent to damage property of another, since evidence established only that defendant's intent was directed at complainant and that damage to complainant's table occurred during course of struggle. People v Roberts, 140 A.D.2d 961, 529 N.Y.S.2d 636, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5918 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1988).

Evidence was insufficient to establish that damage to premises exceeded $1,500, and thus defendant's conviction of second degree criminal mischief would be reduced to fourth degree criminal mischief, where proof consisted merely of testimony of owner and his employee that repairs had cost about $2,500 which was unsupported by documentation or other evidence that amount represented reasonable cost of repairs. People v Jackson, 168 A.D.2d 633, 563 N.Y.S.2d 468, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16077 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1990), app. denied, 77 N.Y.2d 962, 570 N.Y.S.2d 495, 573 N.E.2d 583, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 1455 (N.Y. 1991).

Evidence was insufficient to establish that juvenile, who was discovered as passenger in back seat of stolen and extensively damaged automobile, committed act which, if committed by adult, would have constituted fourth degree criminal mischief since circumstantial evidence did not show that juvenile was individual who damaged vehicle or that he acted in concert with individual who damaged vehicle. In re Garfield H., 185 A.D.2d 846, 587 N.Y.S.2d 351, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9886 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1992).

Court properly dismissed charges for possession of burglar's tools and fourth degree criminal mischief where People lost bolt cutter allegedly used by defendant and lock alleged to have been cut. People v Cobb, 198 A.D.2d 128, 604 N.Y.S.2d 54, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10802 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1993).

Conviction of third degree criminal mischief was improper absent proof of monetary amount of damages to property; reviewing court would reduce defendant's conviction to fourth degree offense, which requires no monetary element. People v Pluff, 217 A.D.2d 744, 629 N.Y.S.2d 333, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7745 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1995).

Defendant's convictions for fourth degree mischief and petit larceny would be reversed, those counts of indictment dismissed, and sentences imposed thereon vacated since he had equitable interest in items he was charged with damaging or stealing. People v Person, 239 A.D.2d 612, 658 N.Y.S.2d 372, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5623 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 878, 668 N.Y.S.2d 576, 691 N.E.2d 648, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4666 (N.Y. 1997).

Juvenile delinquent did not engage in reckless conduct under CLS Penal §§ 15.05(3) and 145.00(3), and thus did not engage in illegal conduct in violation of condition of his probation, where he accidentally broke elementary school window while trying to throw rock onto school roof, and it was common activity for children to throw rocks onto school roof, because presence of raised incline made it easy to do so. In re Mark "PP", 281 A.D.2d 689, 721 N.Y.S.2d 156, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2030 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

Court would dismiss count of information charging fourth degree criminal mischief where there was no allegation that defendant was more than mere passenger in stolen and damaged car; only possible evidence of criminal mischief would be inference that recent and unexplained possession of newly damaged property implied that possessor was responsible for damage, but since mere passenger cannot possess car, no such inference could be drawn. People v Simmons, 139 Misc. 2d 859, 528 N.Y.S.2d 984, 1988 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 286 (N.Y. Crim. Ct. 1988).

Where the only proof that the damage caused by defendant was over $1500 was given by the complainant, the evidence was insufficient to support defendant's conviction of criminal mischief in the second degree, and defendant should have been convicted of criminal mischief in the fourth degree. People v Deolall, 7 A.D.3d 635, 777 N.Y.S.2d 173, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6901 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 3 N.Y.3d 658, 782 N.Y.S.2d 700, 816 N.E.2d 573, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 3062 (N.Y. 2004).

Since it was impossible to infer the requisite intent that a juvenile intended to damage a door, it was improper to find him a delinquent based on acts that would have constituted criminal mischief. In re Brandon S., 8 A.D.3d 31, 777 N.Y.S.2d 638, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7592 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2004).

Defendant's conviction for criminal for criminal mischief in the fourth degree was not supported by legally sufficient evidence because an essential element of the crime, under N.Y. Penal Law § 145.00(1), is that defendant damaged the property of another person, and the People failed to prove that the residence that defendant damaged was owned by another person. People v Bertone, 16 A.D.3d 710, 790 N.Y.S.2d 311, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2165 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 5 N.Y.3d 759, 801 N.Y.S.2d 253, 834 N.E.2d 1263, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 1921 (N.Y. 2005).

Jury's verdict, which found defendant guilty of criminal mischief in the fourth degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 145.00(1), was against the weight of the evidence because the jury failed to give the evidence the weight it should have been accorded on the issue of defendant's intent. Specifically, although defendant might have acted recklessly with respect to damage to a victim's car, the evidence weighed heavily in favor of a finding that defendant did not specifically intend to damage the car. People v Terborg, 35 A.D.3d 1169, 825 N.Y.S.2d 897, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15591 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2006), app. denied, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 1250 (N.Y. Mar. 29, 2007), app. denied, 8 N.Y.3d 927, 834 N.Y.S.2d 518, 866 N.E.2d 464, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 1226 (N.Y. 2007).

Evidence did not support conclusion that juvenile was the initial aggressor, because juvenile's insults were not sufficient to make him the initial aggressor in the altercation, and allegations that juvenile committed acts which, had they been committed by an adult, would have constituted the crimes of assault and criminal mischief must be dismissed since they were based upon conduct which were justified in the juvenile's self-defense. Matter of Mondy E., 121 A.D.3d 785, 994 N.Y.S.2d 173, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6820 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2014).

While defendant assaulted the victim while the victim was trying to make a 911 call, tied the victim's hands with the telephone cord, and slammed the telephone on the victim's hands/fingers, because defendant did not remove or disable the telephone, defendant did not violate N.Y. Penal Law § 145.00(4); therefore, pursuant to N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 330.30(1) the criminal mischief guilty verdict was set aside. People v Syville, 938 N.Y.S.2d 882, 35 Misc. 3d 435, 2012 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 581 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2012).

9. Jury instructions

Refusal to charge on crime of criminal mischief was not error where defendant was charged solely with attempted burglary and neither intentional nor reckless destruction of property was necessary element of charged crime. People v Henderson, 41 N.Y.2d 233, 391 N.Y.S.2d 563, 359 N.E.2d 1357, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 3148 (N.Y. 1976).

In a prosecution for fourth degree criminal mischief arising out of a barroom incident during which defendant broke the glass in an emergency fire exit door, the trial court committed reversible error by failing to charge the jury on the defense of justification pursuant to Penal Law § 35.05, since defendant's testimony that he pushed on the door frame and broke the glass in an attempt to retreat from an unprovoked assault by the bar owner was a sufficient basis for the requested charge, and, though defendant never admitted that he intended to cause the property damage, the availability of the justification defense is not limited to cases in which the act committed in avoidance of the allegedly greater injury is admitted to have been intentional. People v Padgett, 60 N.Y.2d 142, 468 N.Y.S.2d 854, 456 N.E.2d 795, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 3411 (N.Y. 1983).

A conviction of criminal mischief in the third degree would be reduced to criminal mischief in the fourth degree where the trial court improperly refused to charge the fourth-degree offense inasmuch as defendant did not intentionally damage property in an amount exceeding $250. People v Benigno, 87 A.D.2d 597, 447 N.Y.S.2d 748, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15872 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 56 N.Y.2d 808, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 5990 (N.Y. 1982).

Court properly refused to charge fourth degree criminal mischief as lesser included offense of second degree criminal mischief where no reasonable view of evidence could support finding that damage inflicted by defendant was less than $250. People v Simpson, 132 A.D.2d 894, 518 N.Y.S.2d 453, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49360 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 937, 524 N.Y.S.2d 689, 519 N.E.2d 635, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19828 (N.Y. 1987).

There was no reasonable view of evidence to support finding that defendant slashed victim's tire as necessary emergency measure to avoid imminent injury so as to justify jury charge on justification defense in prosecution for fourth degree criminal mischief where confrontation between defendant and victim had already ended and defendant was completely free to leave area at time he committed offense. People v Bolton, 213 A.D.2d 660, 624 N.Y.S.2d 210, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3160 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 85 N.Y.2d 970, 629 N.Y.S.2d 730, 653 N.E.2d 626, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 2269 (N.Y. 1995).

In prosecution for second degree escape and fourth degree criminal mischief, it was reversible error to deny defendant's request to charge justification defense where he testified that, while he was being transported by parole officers to county jail after being arrested on parole revocation warrant, parole officers began to taunt him, and that, while they were stopped at red light, one officer held him while other officer punched him, and he stated that he kicked out window of vehicle and escaped because he was being attacked and feared for his life. People v Mercer, 267 A.D.2d 1019, 701 N.Y.S.2d 551, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13771 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1999).

Indictment counts charging defendant with reckless endangerment of property and fourth degree criminal mischief, as well as jury's findings of guilt on both counts, were not inconsistent, and thus jury charge under CLS CPL § 300.40(5) was not required, where (1) despite same mental state of recklessness involved in both crimes, results of damage to property as opposed to risk of damage to property were different, (2) acts constituting offenses were different, (3) court instructed jury that alleged conduct causing damage to property supporting reckless endangerment of property was defendant's jumping from moving truck, and (4) although court referred to no specific conduct while instructing on mischief charge, jury could have found that requisite risk of damage to truck arose earlier when defendant recklessly drove into field. People v Swart, 273 A.D.2d 503, 709 N.Y.S.2d 653, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6436 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 908, 716 N.Y.S.2d 649, 739 N.E.2d 1154, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3723 (N.Y. 2000).

New trial was required on charges of burglary in the second degree and criminal mischief in the fourth degree; the trial court erred in denying defendant's request for a charge on intoxication and the error was not harmless given the evidence of defendant's intent on those charges was not overwhelming. People v Velez, 132 A.D.3d 916, 17 N.Y.S.3d 780, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7763 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2015).

10. Lesser included offenses

Where evidence established that defendants inflicted intentional damage to an automobile but did not show that the value of the automobile exceed $250, their convictions for criminal mischief in the third degree would be modified by reducing the convictions to the lesser included offense of criminal mischief in the fourth degree. People v Johnson, 58 A.D.2d 662, 395 N.Y.S.2d 524, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12761 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

In a prosecution for attempted robbery in the second degree the defendant was improperly convicted of attempted larceny in the second degree as a lesser included offense, since grand larceny in the second degree is not a lesser included offense of robbery. Since there was no proof of the value of the property which the defendant allegedly had attempted to steal, there was insufficient proof of the commission of a felony upon which a felony assault conviction could have been based. However, evidence did support conviction for the crime of reckless endangerment in the second degree, where the defendant had attacked a taxi driver, knocked him down and kicked him in the eye. But, since the evidence did not reveal a specific intent directed toward the victim's eyeglasses which were broken during the attack, it did not support conviction of criminal mischief in the fourth degree. People v Bryant, 82 A.D.2d 758, 440 N.Y.S.2d 204, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14397 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), op. withdrawn, 85 A.D.2d 575, 445 N.Y.S.2d 711, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16371 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1981).

Defendant's conviction for third-degree criminal mischief would be reduced to fourth-degree criminal mischief, where to support a conviction for third-degree criminal mischief the people had to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the damage to the victim's property exceeded $250, where the evidence showed only that there was one small hole in one of the panes of glass in an office window and bent protective bars, where that evidence did not establish the requisite value, and where the evidence was sufficient only to support the jury's determination that defendant had intentionally damaged the property of another person. People v Cunningham, 95 A.D.2d 680, 463 N.Y.S.2d 470, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18584 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 60 N.Y.2d 615, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 6063 (N.Y. 1983).

Court properly refused to charge fourth degree criminal mischief as lesser included offense of second degree criminal mischief where no reasonable view of evidence could support finding that damage inflicted by defendant was less than $250. People v Simpson, 132 A.D.2d 894, 518 N.Y.S.2d 453, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49360 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 937, 524 N.Y.S.2d 689, 519 N.E.2d 635, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19828 (N.Y. 1987).

In prosecution arising from incident in which defendant removed water heater from victim's house and placed it on his truck, possibly injuring heater, third degree criminal mischief conviction would be reduced to fourth degree for lack of proof that damage to property exceeded $250, since (1) People did not adduce proof of monetary amount of damages to heater itself, and thus jury could only consider cost for reinstalling water heater, not cost of new water heater, and (2) jury could only conclude that cost for installation was about $120 in view of evidence that it cost $355 to install heater but $234 of that amount was attributable to cost of new heater. People v David, 133 A.D.2d 277, 519 N.Y.S.2d 67, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49766 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Criminal mischief in fourth degree is not lesser included offense of second degree arson since it is possible to commit greater offense (e.g., by setting fire to one's own residence) without concomitantly committing lesser offense. In re Christopher E., 171 A.D.2d 976, 567 N.Y.S.2d 918, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3838 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1991).

Court should have charged fourth degree criminal mischief as lesser included offense in trial for third degree criminal mischief, since jury could have found that defendant acted recklessly rather than intentionally in damaging his girlfriend's car as he left party, where there was evidence that defendant had drunk 2 40-ounce containers of beer and (with his cousin) pint of gin before going to party, and that while at party, defendant drank beer, alcoholic punch, and brandy. People v Young, 207 A.D.2d 1011, 617 N.Y.S.2d 254, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10271 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1994).

Conviction of third degree criminal mischief would be reduced to fourth degree criminal mischief where evidence did not prove that amount of damage to vehicle intentionally caused by defendant exceeded $250. People v Duran, 238 A.D.2d 351, 656 N.Y.S.2d 56, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3375 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

11. Sentencing

It was error to sentence defendant to concurrent prison terms of one year on his convictions of fourth degree weapon possession and fourth degree criminal mischief, both class A misdemeanors, and sentence would be modified to concurrent 6-month terms. People v Freeman, 133 A.D.2d 842, 520 N.Y.S.2d 359, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 51892 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 931, 524 N.Y.S.2d 683, 519 N.E.2d 629, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19664 (N.Y. 1987).

Defendant convicted of first degree criminal contempt, third degree assault, and fourth degree mischief was properly sentenced to consecutive prison terms where each offense consisted of separate act, and none of acts constituting each offense was material element of another. People v Frederick, 281 A.D.2d 963, 723 N.Y.S.2d 302, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2826 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 829, 729 N.Y.S.2d 449, 754 N.E.2d 209, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2151 (N.Y. 2001).

Consecutive sentences for robbery in the third degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 160.05, criminal mischief in the fourth degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 145.00(3), and endangering the welfare of a child, N.Y. Penal Law § 260.10(1), based upon defendant's theft of two pairs of shoes from a department store while his two young children were present were illegal; the acts which constituted the crime of endangering the welfare of a child were not separate and distinct from the acts which constituted the crimes of robbery and criminal mischief. Further, the evidence established that, during his flight from the department store, defendant "floored" his vehicle in reverse with his driver's side door open, striking a security guard as well as the vehicle parked beside his vehicle, which acts served as the basis for the criminal mischief count and for the "use of physical force" element of the robbery count and thus the sentences imposed on the robbery and the criminal mischief counts also had to run concurrently. People v Dekenipp, 105 A.D.3d 1346, 964 N.Y.S.2d 792, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2790 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 21 N.Y.3d 1041, 972 N.Y.S.2d 538, 995 N.E.2d 854, 2013 N.Y. LEXIS 2586 (N.Y. 2013).

12. Verdict

Verdict finding defendant guilty of discharging firearm across public highway was not repugnant to his acquittal on charges of first degree reckless endangerment and fourth degree criminal mischief since intent is not element of discharging firearm across public highway. People v Maille, 136 A.D.2d 829, 523 N.Y.S.2d 667, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 364 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

Indictment counts charging defendant with reckless endangerment of property and fourth degree criminal mischief, as well as jury's findings of guilt on both counts, were not inconsistent, and thus jury charge under CLS CPL § 300.40(5) was not required, where (1) despite same mental state of recklessness involved in both crimes, results of damage to property as opposed to risk of damage to property were different, (2) acts constituting offenses were different, (3) court instructed jury that alleged conduct causing damage to property supporting reckless endangerment of property was defendant's jumping from moving truck, and (4) although court referred to no specific conduct while instructing on mischief charge, jury could have found that requisite risk of damage to truck arose earlier when defendant recklessly drove into field. People v Swart, 273 A.D.2d 503, 709 N.Y.S.2d 653, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6436 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 908, 716 N.Y.S.2d 649, 739 N.E.2d 1154, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3723 (N.Y. 2000).

Defendant's convictions for criminal mischief were reversed where defendant was acquitted of making graffiti charges based on the same alleged act of vandalism as the only evidence of property damage submitted to the jury was of spray-painting. People v Wallender, 27 A.D.3d 955, 812 N.Y.S.2d 157, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3579 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

II. Under Former Law

13. Under former § 464

No person, except by authority of the Legislature, or of the authorized agents of the state, has a right to tap the state dam, and draw off the waters of the artificial pond which is created by such dam for public purposes. Varick v Smith, 1835 N.Y. LEXIS 224 (N.Y. Mar. 17, 1835).

14. Under former § 1423

One who maliciously throws a switch without authority and thereby stops certain machinery violates subd. Smith v Bell & Fyfe Foundry Co., 127 A.D. 278, 111 N.Y.S. 202, 1908 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1954 (N.Y. App. Div. 1908).

State was not liable for accident caused by ice on highway brought about by obstruction of a gutter by an adjoining owner, where evidence established that the failure of owner to remove the obstruction was the proximate cause of the action and the driver of the automobile was contributorily negligent Rasher v State, 3 Misc. 2d 324, 154 N.Y.S.2d 621, 1956 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1618 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1956), app. dismissed, 7 A.D.2d 954, 182 N.Y.S.2d 1018, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9995 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

A person who wilfully or maliciously removes a highway sign designating a highway may be punished under the provisions of sub 11 of this section 1952 Ops St Compt, File #5757.

15. Under former § 1425; in general

To establish the offense it is simply necessary to show that the act was done intentionally without the consent of the owner and without right. Anderson v How, 116 N.Y. 336, 22 N.E. 695, 116 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 336, 1889 N.Y. LEXIS 1340 (N.Y. 1889).

Section 1425 and prosecution for violation of subd. 11-a by placing emery dust in complainant's motor truck, evidence to rebut defendant's denial that defendant on another occasion put emery dust in another vehicle held inadmissible. People v Edwards, 282 N.Y. 413, 26 N.E.2d 957, 282 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 413, 1940 N.Y. LEXIS 950 (N.Y. 1940).

Defendant charged with publicly defiling and casting contempt on flag, contrary to subd. 16, is not entitled to certificate that prosecution should be by indictment because court, in zeal for fairness, should not be carried too far by claim that trial before jury not yet summoned will not be fair. Burden is on applicant to demonstrate that fair trial cannot be had where offense was allegedly committed. People v Katzowitz, 267 N.Y.S. 748, 150 Misc. 63, 1933 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1710 (N.Y. County Ct. 1933).

Court will not enjoin use of similar trade-mark where buyers could not be misled. Durable Toy & Novelty Corp. v J. Chein & Co., 133 F.2d 853, 1943 U.S. App. LEXIS 3905 (2d Cir. N.Y.), cert. denied, 320 U.S. 211, 63 S. Ct. 1447, 87 L. Ed. 1849, 1943 U.S. LEXIS 1244 (U.S. 1943).

16. —Particular acts as malicious mischief

Cutting down plaintiff's land, which was higher than appellant's land, was wilful and unlawful and within subd. Hazak, Inc. v Robertson Goetz Bldg. Co., 289 N.Y. 478, 46 N.E.2d 893, 289 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 478, 1943 N.Y. LEXIS 1148 (N.Y. 1943).

Letting air out of the tires of another's automobile is a misdemeanor if there is an injury to the automobile. People v Costello, 305 N.Y. 63, 110 N.E.2d 880, 305 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 63, 1953 N.Y. LEXIS 836 (N.Y. 1953).

Evidence revealing that defendant's companion had thrown a litter basket at the complaining witness and struck the witness' car, and that defendant had punched and kicked at the complaining witness' friends was insufficient to support a conviction under a complaint charging malicious mischief. People v Washington, 18 N.Y.2d 366, 275 N.Y.S.2d 508, 222 N.E.2d 378, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 984 (N.Y. 1966).

Removal of soil which may in a given instance be done without injury to real property comes within § 1425; but the same act which injures and destroys real proeprty comes within § 1433, subd. 3. New York Institute for Education of Blind v Colonial Sand & Stone Co., 264 A.D. 339, 35 N.Y.S.2d 368, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4144 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

Where shots are fired into an automobile, damaging it and causing it to overturn, killing the operator, the offense under this section of causing damage to property is distinct and not merged in a homicide or manslaughter charge based on the operator's death. People v Nicoll, 3 A.D.2d 64, 158 N.Y.S.2d 279, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3490 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1956).

The evidence was not sufficient to sustain conviction for malicious injury to property where it merely showed that defendant was observed standing alongside the smashed window of a parked car with dirty and blood smeared hands and two slightly flattened balls of tinfoil in his pockets, plus testimony of a police officer who had experience as an auto mechanic that tinfoil could be used for "jumping" the ignition switch in order to start a car. People v Lashway, 16 A.D.2d 637, 227 N.Y.S.2d 202, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10211 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1962).

Family court did not err in granting the petitioner's application for an order of protection because petitioner prove that respondent committed criminal mischief because he intentionally damaged petitioner's property when he kicked the door and broke the glass in the upper part of the door. Matter of Bedford v Seeley, 176 A.D.3d 1338, 112 N.Y.S.3d 295, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7522 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2019).

One who enters on a forest reserve and cuts trees violates subd. 1 of this section. People v Gallagher, 111 N.Y.S. 473, 58 Misc. 512, 1908 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 387 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1908).

Landlord who, before expiration of lease and in violation thereof, by means which violate no existing statute, re-enters premises in absence of tenant, to make repairs, is mere trespasser and commits no crime by such act. People v Zittel, 186 N.Y.S. 648, 114 Misc. 33, 1920 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1976 (N.Y. Gen. Sess. 1920).

Whatever rights the public may have to catch freely moving fish in navigable waters, the public does not have the right to rake for shellfish in private lands under those waters. People v Johnson, 7 Misc. 2d 385, 166 N.Y.S.2d 732, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2419 (N.Y. Police Ct. 1957).

17. — —Flag involved

Judgments convicting defendants of desecrating flag of United States of America are affirmed, where jury could properly find that automobile of defendants, on which appeared at six different places defendants' name, emblem and appeal to "Travel America," constituted one advertisement to which flag of United States of America was affixed, in violation of statute. People v Picking, 263 A.D. 366, 33 N.Y.S.2d 317, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6892 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 288 N.Y. 644, 42 N.E.2d 741, 288 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 644, 1942 N.Y. LEXIS 1486 (N.Y. 1942).

The statute was unconstitutionally applied insofar as it permitted a person to be punished merely for speaking defiant or contemptuous words about the American flag. A state may not constitutionally inflict criminal punishment upon a person for publicly defying or casting contempt upon the American flag by words where (1) the person, after setting the American flag on fire, was standing on a street corner and speaking to a small crowd, (2) he said to the crowd "we don't need no damn flag," and when questioned by a police officer, he said "we don't need an American flag," (3) the crowd did not obstruct the street or sidewalk and was not unruly or threatening, (4) the person's words, taken alone, did not urge anyone to do anything unlawful, but amounted only to somewhat excited public advocacy of the idea that the United States should abandon, at least temporarily, one of its national symbols, (5) the statute making it a misdemeanor publicly to defy or cast contempt upon the flag by words did not purport to punish only those defiant or contemptuous words which amounted to incitement, and there was no evidence that the state courts regarded the statute as so limited, (6) the person's remarks were not so inherently inflammatory as to amount to fighting words which were likely to provoke the average person to retaliation and thereby cause a breach of the peace, (7) the statute was not narrowly drawn so as to punish only such fighting words, and there was no indication that it had been so interpreted by the state courts, (8) the person's words were not likely to have any shock effect on passers-by, and (9) there was no indication that the state court regarded the statute as limited to words which were likely to have such shock effect. Street v New York, 394 U.S. 576, 89 S. Ct. 1354, 22 L. Ed. 2d 572, 1969 U.S. LEXIS 3189 (U.S. 1969).

18. — —Seals involved

Where a defendant, after purchasing a farm upon which he gave a purchase money mortgage, cut certain timber with as he claimed, the consent of the complaining witness for use in either repairing a barn or selling it to defray the cost of such repairs, it was questionable whether the defendant could properly have been convicted of anything more than a misdemeanor of malicious injury to property. People v Moltesen, 282 A.D. 1090, 126 N.Y.S.2d 217, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5892 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

19. — —Timber involved

Allowing treble damages for injury to trees was improper where subdivision 1 of § 1425 of the former Penal Law dealt specifically with injuries to trees and did not provide for civil liability of treble damages. Voetsch v Mt. Vernon Contracting Corp., 35 A.D.2d 677, 314 N.Y.S.2d 933, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3883 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1970).

People v Reade, 247 A.D. 376, 287 N.Y.S. 473, 1936 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8269 (N.Y. App. Div. 1936).

This section is not applicable where plaintiff acquiesced in conversion, and where no crime was committed. Rock v Belmar Contracting Co., 252 N.Y.S. 463, 141 Misc. 242, 1930 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1814 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1930).

Conviction is defective where prisoner was convicted and sentenced for malicious mischief in violation of this section without specifying value of property destroyed or diminution in value of property by reason of injury since there is nothing to show whether prisoner was convicted of misdemeanor or felony. People ex rel. Sweet v Lewis, 271 N.Y.S. 154, 150 Misc. 650, 1934 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1251 (N.Y. County Ct. 1934).

Judgment of conviction on information which charges defendant with willful injury to property, in violation of § 1433, must be reversed, where allegation showing the value or diminution in value of said property to be $250 or less was omitted from information, inasmuch as such omission is more than a mere irregularity and renders the information insufficient to confer jurisdiction of the court of special sessions. People v Freer, 12 N.Y.S.2d 856, 171 Misc. 478, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1961 (N.Y. County Ct. 1939).

Arrest of bankrupt on body execution for non-payment of judgment for treble damages for unlawful and wilful destruction and injury to real property is justifiable, since "unlawful and wilful" are practically synonymous with "wilful and malicious," and therefore arrest is upon a debt not dischargeable in bankruptcy by virtue of Bankruptcy Act, USC, Title 11, § 35. Ex parte Goldstein, 30 F. Supp. 443, 1939 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2061 (D.N.Y. 1939).

22. —Nature and elements of offense

There must be proved an unlawful as well as a wilful destruction of property. People v Kane, 131 N.Y. 111, 29 N.E. 1015, 131 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 111, 1892 N.Y. LEXIS 1000 (N.Y. 1892).

The word "wilfully" would seem to include and require that the element of intent to do the damage complained of, or at least an intent to damage property must be shown to sustain a conviction. People v Washington, 18 N.Y.2d 366, 275 N.Y.S.2d 508, 222 N.E.2d 378, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 984 (N.Y. 1966).

A conviction for unlawful entry may not be sustained in the absence of proof from which an inference may be drawn that defendant had an intent to commit a crime at the time of entry. People v Hamilton, 18 A.D.2d 871, 237 N.Y.S.2d 97, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4925 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1963).

A conviction of malicious mischief cannot be sustained where there is no evidence that the injury to the property was willful. People v Callahan, 19 A.D.2d 889, 244 N.Y.S.2d 766, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3003 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1963), cert. denied, 376 U.S. 966, 84 S. Ct. 1130, 11 L. Ed. 2d 983, 1964 U.S. LEXIS 1574 (U.S. 1964).

To sustain a conviction for violation of this section it must appear that defendant wilfully destroyed or injured some property of another, and it is not sufficient to show that he intended to injure the person of another. People v Hackley, 20 A.D.2d 534, 245 N.Y.S.2d 58, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2695 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1963).

This section is not applicable where no evidence of actual physical damage to the property of another is shown. Cherno v Bank of Babylon, 54 Misc. 2d 277, 282 N.Y.S.2d 114, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1399 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1967), aff'd, 29 A.D.2d 767, 288 N.Y.S.2d 862, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4697 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1968).

23. —Liability for treble damages

Action by assignee of contract for purchase of dwelling house against owners and vendors thereof, to recover damages for injuries alleged to have been wilfully, maliciously and wantonly inflicted thereon by owners pending contract and conveyance, is maintainable, but plaintiff in such action is not entitled to treble damages, because his ownership during contract period is merely equitable, and not such as to entitle him to benefit of this section which applies only to damages to "real or personal property of another"—that is to one holding legal title. Potter v Bierwirth, 171 A.D. 175, 157 N.Y.S. 25, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10328 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

In action to recover damages for unlawful and wilful injury to personal property, plaintiff has right, under subd. 3, to judgment for treble amount of actual damages found by jury. Alloway v Hickok, 215 A.D. 86, 213 N.Y.S. 192, 1925 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS

5369 (N.Y. App. Div. 1925), aff'd, 243 N.Y. 615, 154 N.E. 628, 243 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 615, 1926 N.Y. LEXIS 905 (N.Y. 1926).

Plaintiff is entitled to permanent injunction restraining defendants from entering upon plaintiff's tract and unlawfully and willfully destroying and injuring the real property, and to recover from defendant sand company, treble damages, under § 1433, subd. 3 where evidence established that while wrongful acts of sand company were not willful when it entered upon plaintiff's property on representations made by individual defendant, the proof shows that after being advised that the company should stop taking top soil belonging to plaintiff, it continued its acts of removing soil without making any search or obtaining any proper survey of property. New York Institute for Education of Blind v Colonial Sand & Stone Co., 264 A.D. 339, 35 N.Y.S.2d 368, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4144 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

Judgment for the plaintiff in an action for treble damages sustained when the defendant ran his boat into and rammed the plaintiff's boat affirmed. Lindsey v Zagame, 275 A.D. 720, 88 N.Y.S.2d 254, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4198 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

Treble damages cannot be awarded for a mere trespass to real property by defendant, in the absence of proof that the trespass was both unlawful and willful, and proof establishing that it was willful is not, of itself, sufficient to show that it was likewise unlawful and with criminal intent. MacDonald v Parama, Inc., 15 A.D.2d 797, 224 N.Y.S.2d 854, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11599 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1962).

To recover treble damages pursuant to former Penal Law § 1433 requires a finding of criminality. Kessler v Hunter, 30 A.D.2d 573, 291 N.Y.S.2d 268, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3864 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1968).

Where the grantee of land on which was located a wooden structure which did not pass with the land, brought action for injury to such building it was held such grantee could not obtain treble damages under this section. Sacret Heart Roman Catholic Church v Vedder, 142 N.Y.S. 870, 80 Misc. 541, 1913 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1194 (N.Y. County Ct. 1913).

This section is not applicable where, in view of stipulation of parties, they intended that trial justice should determine single damages and not treble damages. Rock v Belmar Contracting Co., 252 N.Y.S. 463, 141 Misc. 242, 1930 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1814 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1930).

Where plaintiff and defendant own adjoining lots on which is a two-family building, defendant is not liable for treble damages on tearing down his half of building. A claim for treble damages, under Real Prop. Law, § 535, Penal Law, § 1433, subd. 3, and Civil Practice Act, § 435, cannot be raised for the first time after a decision is rendered, when the complaint did not ask for treble damages. Schneider v 44-84 Realty Corp., 7 N.Y.S.2d 305, 169 Misc. 249, 1938 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2046 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1938), aff'd, 257 A.D. 932, 12 N.Y.S.2d 1022, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8484 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

Acquittal on a criminal prosecution is no defense to an action to recover treble damages. Von Hoffman v Kendall, 17 N.Y.S. 713, 63 Hun 628, 1892 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 474 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1892), app. dismissed, 138 N.Y. 629, 33 N.E. 1084 (N.Y. 1893).

Plaintiff is entitled to treble damages as a matter of right, where judgment was for willful and unlawful injury to real property. Marconi Realty Corp. v Goldstein, 13 N.Y.S.2d 547, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2071 (N.Y. App. Term 1939).

24. — —Stating cause of civil action

In a civil action under subdivision 3 of this section, a complaint must state facts sufficient to constitute a crime under the section. Polychrome Corp. v Lithotech Corp., 4 A.D.2d 968, 168 N.Y.S.2d 346, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3850 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1957).

A cause of action for inducing a breach of contract was dismissed as insufficient, since this section deals with malicious mischief involving legal ownership of real and personal property and to support a recovery of treble damages, the cause must set forth facts to constitute a crime within the statute. Frischman v Metropolitan Tobacco Co., 104 N.Y.S.2d 446, 199 Misc. 844, 1951 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1755 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1951).

A complaint seeking treble damages for trespass must state facts sufficient to constitute a crime under this section and to show that the trespass caused unlawful and willful destruction or injury to real or personal property of plaintiff. Goldson v Englard, 219 N.Y.S.2d 898 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1961).

Where plaintiff alleged that defendants, with knowledge of plaintiff's contractual rights with a corporation, conspired to deprive plaintiff of the benefits thereof, and alleged various acts in furtherance of the conspiracy including, among others, opening plaintiff's mail, slandering his business reputation and ability, and destroying plaintiff's property without justification and actuated solely by malice against the plaintiff, such allegations state a cause of action under §§ 1433 and 1436. Vassardakis v Parish, 36 F. Supp. 1002, 1941 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3833 (D.N.Y. 1941).

25. —Admissibility of evidence

Injury to window and electric globe is within section. People v Paterra, 265 N.Y. 445, 193 N.E. 263, 265 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 445, 1934 N.Y. LEXIS 1059 (N.Y. 1934).

In prosecution of union members for placing emery in crank cases of taxicabs of corporation, evidence that later defendant had possession of emery and also threatened to burn taxicabs of such corporation, held inadmissible and prejudicial. People v Horie, 258 A.D. 246, 16 N.Y.S.2d 235, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6412 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

26. —Particular acts

Evidence revealing that defendant's companion had thrown a litter basket at the complaining witness and struck the witness' car, and that defendant had punched and kicked at the complaining witness' friends was insufficient to support a conviction under a complaint charging malicious mischief. People v Washington, 18 N.Y.2d 366, 275 N.Y.S.2d 508, 222 N.E.2d 378, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 984 (N.Y. 1966).

Sawing off fence posts and filing post holes, pursuant to state highway contract, held not violation of this section. McPhilomy v Williams, 249 A.D. 689, 291 N.Y.S. 278, 1936 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5487 (N.Y. App. Div. 1936).

The action of a landlord of a six-family house in cutting the wires leading from a window television aerial to the apartment of a tenant and twisting the antenna when the tenant refused to remove it pursuant to the landlord's demand, constitutes a violation of this section. People v Stein, 277 A.D. 996, 100 N.Y.S.2d 41, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4221 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

A claim of malicious interference with a contract is not made out by a showing that defendant told mutual customers that he would not sell them any merchandise unless they ceased purchasing Japanese merchandise sold by the plaintiffs. Photographic Importing & Distributing Corp. v Elgeet Optical Co., 282 A.D. 223, 122 N.Y.S.2d 215, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4438 (N.Y. App. Div.), app. denied, 282 A.D. 836, 124 N.Y.S.2d 341, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5090 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Upon an examination of the entire record in a case where there had been a conviction under the above statute, on appeal the Appellate Division found that the record contained ample evidence to sustain the verdict of the jury and saw no reason to disturb it, holding further that the defendant had a fair trial, that the case was submitted to the jury upon a clear and comprehensive charge, and that the sentence was not excessive. People v Chambers, 24 A.D.2d 656, 261 N.Y.S.2d 171, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3635 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965), aff'd, 18 N.Y.2d 819, 275 N.Y.S.2d 526, 222 N.E.2d 391, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 1024 (N.Y. 1966).

Defendants are not entitled to dismissal of complaint, charging them with malicious mischief, where it alleges that prior to foreclosure sale of certain real property, on which complainant held purchase-money mortgage of one of defendants, defendants removed plumbing equipment, mirrors and other articles attached to realty, to its damage. People ex rel. Scharfstein v Rader, 251 N.Y.S. 539, 140 Misc. 707, 1931 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1454 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1931).

27. — —Injury to incorporeal rights

Subdivision 3 of this section is intended to apply to actual physical damage to property, in the nature of mischief; and is not intended to apply to violations of incorporeal rights. And mere breaches of contract or interference with contract rights or acts which do not constitute a crime under the section do not give rise to a civil cause of action. Polychrome Corp. v Lithotech Corp., 4 A.D.2d 968, 168 N.Y.S.2d 346, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3850 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1957).

28. — —Acts covered by other statutes

Where plaintiff's civil action involves acts specifically covered, as to criminal punishment, by § 1425, subd. 4, § 1433, subd. 3 has no application, and there is no authority for trebling damages assessed by jury. Hazak, Inc. v Robertson Goetz Bldg. Co., 289 N.Y. 478, 46 N.E.2d 893, 289 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 478, 1943 N.Y. LEXIS 1148 (N.Y. 1943).

This section does not apply to a case where the punishment is especially prescribed by another statute. People v Costello, 305 N.Y. 63, 110 N.E.2d 880, 305 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 63, 1953 N.Y. LEXIS 836 (N.Y. 1953).

Removal of soil which may in a given instance be done without injury to real property comes within § 1425; but the same act which injures and destroys real property comes within § 1433, subd. 3. New York Institute for Education of Blind v Colonial Sand & Stone Co., 264 A.D. 339, 35 N.Y.S.2d 368, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4144 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

This section was not applicable where the alleged waste amounted to theft and larceny and the motivation for the waste was personal profit rather than disinterested malevolence. Golding v Golding, 4 A.D.2d 65, 163 N.Y.S.2d 118, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5363 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1957).

Allowing treble damages for injury to trees was improper where subdivision 1 of § 1425 of the former Penal Law dealt specifically with injuries to trees and did not provide for civil liability of treble damages. Voetsch v Mt. Vernon Contracting Corp., 35 A.D.2d 677, 314 N.Y.S.2d 933, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3883 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1970).

Defendants, who entered church cemetery, and who knocked down and damaged monument stones, were improperly charged under subd. 2 of this section, since offense was expressly covered by § 1427 and § 1430 of the penal code. People v Wozniak, 14 Misc. 2d 909, 180 N.Y.S.2d 532, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2230 (N.Y. County Ct. 1958).

Defendant could not be convicted under this section for injury to an azalea bush, since it is an ornamental plant and is covered by § 1427. People v Edstrom, 15 Misc. 2d 567, 185 N.Y.S.2d 181, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3218 (N.Y. County Ct. 1958).

29. Under former § 1873

Refusal to permit a sheriff to take possession of an automobile levied upon by him, upon advice of counsel, may be a violation of this section. Williamson Mill & Lumber Co. v Valentine, 206 A.D. 252, 200 N.Y.S. 527, 1923 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7187 (N.Y. App. Div. 1923).

Where union failed to ascertain its rights from National Labor Relations Board in advance of its picketing of private property and defendant picketers insistently continued to picket after reasonable requests by store manager and police to move some few feet away from store entrance, National Labor Relations Act did not preempt enforcement of state criminal trespass statute against defendants. People v Bush, 39 N.Y.2d 529, 384 N.Y.S.2d 733, 349 N.E.2d 832, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 2679 (N.Y. 1976).

In juvenile delinquency proceedings, a boy would not be guilty of third-degree criminal mischief absent intent to damage a banister in the courthouse, where he had damaged the banister while swinging a metal sign holder in an attempt to defend himself from other boys who had pursued him into the building. In re "K", 89 A.D.2d 630, 453 N.Y.S.2d 96, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17740 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1982).

It was not abuse of discretion to require defendant convicted of third degree criminal mischief to pay portion of restitution to victim's insurance carrier since carrier had reimbursed victim for damage to her car and was therefore "victim" under CLS Penal §§ 60.27 and 65.10. People v Chery, 126 A.D.2d 659, 511 N.Y.S.2d 88, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 41789 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Defendant was properly convicted of third degree burglary, third degree criminal mischief, and possession of burglar's tools where police, notified by security company of possible burglary at client's premises, arrived at scene and heard noises inside building, shortly thereafter saw defendant on roof near only available means of ingress and egress from that part of building, observed defendant as he scurried about, but finding no means of escape, surrendered shouting "all right, you got me now, don't shoot," whereupon search of premises revealed pick and axe located on top of safe which had been damaged, as well as 40 missing cartons of cigarettes. People v Goods, 129 A.D.2d 735, 514 N.Y.S.2d 495, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 45419 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Evidence that defendant, while committing burglary, inflicted damage on property of another resulting in repair costs in excess of $250 sustained conviction of third degree criminal mischief. People v Jackson, 134 A.D.2d 283, 520 N.Y.S.2d 453, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50466 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 933, 524 N.Y.S.2d 684, 519 N.E.2d 630, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19704 (N.Y. 1987).

Defendant was not entitled to vacation of judgment of third degree criminal mischief based on new evidence, despite claim that his cousin had admitted, after trial, that it was he, not defendant, who had broken vehicle's window with rock, where admission was of dubious authenticity in that it was made one week after expiration of statute of limitations for crime, defendant's conviction was based on testimony of 2 eyewitnesses and police officer, and it was thus unlikely that such "new evidence" would result in different verdict. People v Green, 135 A.D.2d 565, 522 N.Y.S.2d 164, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52509 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 897, 527 N.Y.S.2d 1006, 523 N.E.2d 313, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 1428 (N.Y. 1988).

Evidence was insufficient to establish that damage to property exceeded $250 to sustain defendant's conviction for third degree criminal mischief based solely on owner's testimony that "approximate cost" of replacing glass and fixing door frame "and everything" was $325 "the best I can recall," which was not supported by any documentation or other proof that such amount represented reasonable cost of repairs. People v Gaines, 136 A.D.2d 731, 524 N.Y.S.2d 70, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 852 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 896, 527 N.Y.S.2d 1005, 523 N.E.2d 312, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 1406 (N.Y. 1988).

Evidence supported conviction for third degree criminal mischief where general foreman of board of education testified that cost of repair of window and doors damaged during break-in at school was $343 since testimony was sufficient proof that value of damaged property exceeded $250. People v Woodard, 148 A.D.2d 997, 539 N.Y.S.2d 229, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2651 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 749, 545 N.Y.S.2d 124, 543 N.E.2d 767, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 2701 (N.Y. 1989).

Evidence was insufficient to support conviction for third degree criminal mischief based on damage caused when defendant, while fleeing from police, recklessly disregarded substantial and unjustifiable risk that he would cause damage to vehicle he was driving; under circumstances, element of intent was not shown. People v Ruiz, 159 A.D.2d 656, 553 N.Y.S.2d 173, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2995 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 742, 558 N.Y.S.2d 904, 557 N.E.2d 1200, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 2314 (N.Y. 1990).

In bench trial for third degree criminal mischief, court erred in constructively amending indictment, which alleged that defendant damaged door of vehicle in amount exceeding $250, by considering evidence of damage to vehicle's ignition as well, even though vehicle's owner testified that when he parked his car earlier in day both door lock and ignition were in good condition, where defendant testified before grand jury that he intended only to steal radio and that he did not tamper with lock or ignition, and indictment voted by grand jury alleged only damage to door, thus at least partially crediting his testimony. People v Rodriguez, 164 A.D.2d 832, 559 N.Y.S.2d 725, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10815 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1990).

Evidence was sufficient to establish defendant's guilt of third degree burglary, and third and fourth degree criminal mischief, where he and his codefendant were discovered in predawn hours holding up steel gate which secured entrance to shopping mall, accomplice was crawling out from underneath gate clutching leather coat, glass behind gate was smashed and curtains enclosing 2 booths inside mall were ripped or slashed, cash registers in both booths were broken, and leather coats and jackets were strewn on floor with footprints on them, with some missing. People v Williams, 171 A.D.2d 827, 567 N.Y.S.2d 756, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3663 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 78 N.Y.2d 976, 574 N.Y.S.2d 956, 580 N.E.2d 429, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 4633 (N.Y. 1991).

In prosecution for third degree criminal mischief, testimony by complainant was sufficient to establish that damage to his automobile exceeded $250 in value where complainant was not simply lay witness, but was treated as expert. People v Dixon, 184 A.D.2d 725, 587 N.Y.S.2d 185, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8536 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1992).

Evidence supported conviction for third degree criminal mischief arising from high speed chase in which defendant was apprehended while driving stolen vehicle where it was shown that defendant intended to damage police vehicle when he struck it in rear during chase. In trial for, inter alia, third degree criminal mischief arising from high speed chase during which defendant struck police vehicle in rear, defendant was not entitled to have jury charged as to criminal mischief in fourth degree as lesser included offense since crimes had same elements with exception of dollar value of damage, and evidence clearly established that damage to police vehicle exceeded $250. People v Cammorto, 185 A.D.2d 986, 587 N.Y.S.2d 408, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10336 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 80 N.Y.2d 1025, 592 N.Y.S.2d 675, 607 N.E.2d 822, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 4647 (N.Y. 1992).

Conviction of third degree criminal mischief was improper absent proof of monetary amount of damages to property; reviewing court would reduce defendant's conviction to fourth degree offense, which requires no monetary element. People v Pluff, 217 A.D.2d 744, 629 N.Y.S.2d 333, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7745 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1995).

Defendant's severance motion was properly denied where crimes charged (third degree burglary, possession of burglar's tools, and third degree mischief) were same or similar, jury considered each count separately based on its acquittal on 3 of original 5 charges, including 2 charges solely related to first incident, proof of each crime was separately presented, uncomplicated, and easily distinguishable in jury's mind, and there was substantial difference in quantum of proof. People v Burnett, 228 A.D.2d 788, 644 N.Y.S.2d 79, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6713 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

In prosecution for 2 counts of third degree criminal mischief involving defendant's repeated firing of shotgun at 2 1979 Chevrolet Camaros, prosecution proved that defendant caused damage of at least $250 to each car, as required by CLS Penal § 145.05, where professional body shop owner and auto dealer testified that each car had value of $1,200 to $1,500 before incident and that cost of repairing shotgun damage would be $1,355.06 for one car and $2,165.80 for other, thus permitting finding that each car was damaged in amount of $1,200 or more, and owner testified that sale prices after repair of damage were $900 and $500. Reversal of defendant's conviction was not required by prosecution's failure to make pretrial disclosure of photograph of one car where (1) photograph had limited evidentiary value, was found on forgotten roll of undeveloped film, and was provided to defendant promptly after it was discovered and made available to prosecution, (2) defendant sought no continuance and had ample opportunity to examine photograph before cross-examination of car owner, and (3) defendant was able to take advantage of disclosure by offering several photographs on roll of film, which were received in evidence without objection. People v Katovich, 238 A.D.2d 751, 656 N.Y.S.2d 499, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3951 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

In prosecution for third degree mischief, court properly ruled that evidence of harassing conduct exhibited by defendant toward victim during previous 3 years, including gifts sent to her, was admissible for purposes of establishing identity of perpetrator, motive, and intent. People v Shiffer, 256 A.D.2d 818, 682 N.Y.S.2d 266, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13596 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 878, 689 N.Y.S.2d 440, 711 N.E.2d 654, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1071 (N.Y. 1999).

Property owners' conclusory statements of amount of damage to their property, as set forth in depositions annexed to juvenile delinquency petition, were legally insufficient to sustain counts of petition alleging commission of acts which, if committed by adult, would have constituted third and fourth degree criminal mischief. In re John B., 261 A.D.2d 471, 690 N.Y.S.2d 109, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4783 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. dismissed, 94 N.Y.2d 797, 700 N.Y.S.2d 429, 722 N.E.2d 509, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 3720 (N.Y. 1999).

Jury was entitled to conclude that defendant intended to damage patrol car, in prosecution for third degree criminal mischief, on deputy sheriff's uncontroverted eyewitness testimony that he was verbally combative, repeatedly hit his head against car's window, and kicked windows out of back of car. People v De Chellis, 265 A.D.2d 735, 697 N.Y.S.2d 711, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10953 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Evidence that it cost $692.95 to have patrol car repaired established that damage exceeded statutory threshold in prosecution for third degree criminal mischief based on defendant's conduct in repeatedly hitting his head against car's window and kicking windows out of back of car. People v De Chellis, 265 A.D.2d 735, 697 N.Y.S.2d 711, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10953 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Court properly joined for trial 2 indictments, each of which charged, inter alia, third degree burglary and criminal mischief, where, in each case, police responded to burglar alarm at store located in one-story shopping center in early morning hours, found that roof had been broken through, and saw defendant near store carrying stolen merchandise. People v Hall, 272 A.D.2d 412, 708 N.Y.S.2d 125, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5049 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 853, 714 N.Y.S.2d 4, 736 N.E.2d 865, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 2648 (N.Y. 2000).

Evidence supported conviction of attempted third degree grand larceny and third degree criminal mischief where owner of car that defendant tried to steal testified as to prior good condition of car, expert witness properly relied on car industry valuation books and conversations with owner in appraising car, and thus there was sufficient proof that value of car exceeded $3,000 and that damage to car caused by defendant exceeded $250. People v Brown, 275 A.D.2d 668, 713 N.Y.S.2d 726, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10023 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 732, 722 N.Y.S.2d 799, 745 N.E.2d 1022, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 314 (N.Y. 2001).

Denial of motion to dismiss defamation complaint was error because, inter alia, certain statements referring to plaintiff's alleged criminal conduct were made in the context of plaintiff's purported demolition/reconstruction activities for which legitimate issues of fact existed, i.e., whether they were duly authorized by a village in each instance and whether they encroached upon the owner's property rights; arguably, plaintiff could have been subject to prosecution for felonious criminal mischief. Galasso v Saltzman, 42 A.D.3d 310, 839 N.Y.S.2d 731, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8178 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2007).

Conviction of criminal mischief in the third degree was based on legally sufficient evidence and was not against the weight of the evidence under circumstances in which, in one of her statements to police, defendant admitted that she scratched the victim's car; the victim testified that defendant had no right to damage the vehicle, and both the victim and a detective testified that the car had deep scratches all along both sides and on the hood. The victim testified that she received three estimates and had the repairs performed by the shop with the lowest estimate, approximately $2,600, and that shop's written estimate was admitted into evidence. People v Hooks, 71 A.D.3d 1184, 896

Since the value of the property damages is an ingredient which determines the degree of the felony, an omission to allege such fact renders an indictment insufficient to charge the crime of criminal mischief in the second degree, a felony which can only prevail where damaged property of another person exceeds $250. People v Vieira, 65 Misc. 2d 390, 317 N.Y.S.2d 946, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1252 (N.Y. County Ct. 1970).

There was ample evidentiary support for the trial court's conclusion that repair costs of at least $250 were proved, to support defendant's conviction for criminal mischief in the third degree; photographic evidence of damage to a wall unit and, particularly, to a television screen, in addition to the victim's testimony as to what she paid for those items, together with her claim that the repair cost would be $500 for the wall unit and $700 for the television, were sufficient to establish repair costs in excess of $250. People v Garcia, 29 A.D.3d 255, 812 N.Y.S.2d 66, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3714 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.3d 789, 821 N.Y.S.2d 818, 854 N.E.2d 1283, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 2782 (N.Y. 2006).

Because the evidence was legally sufficient to establish that a juvenile intended to damage a vehicle when the juvenile drove into it, the family court properly adjudicated the juvenile delinquent for committing acts that, if committed by an adult, would constitute the crimes of third-degree criminal mischief and third-degree unauthorized use of a vehicle under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 145.05(2), 165.05(1). Matter of Kayla C., 35 A.D.3d 1187, 826 N.Y.S.2d 549, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15616 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2006).

Although the victim testified that her television, glasses, a framed picture and a pair of mukluks were damaged in the incident, the record was devoid of any proof as to the reasonable cost of repairing and/or replacing this property, and neither the victim's conclusory and unsubstantiated testimony regarding the value of the items in question nor the photo evidence contained in the record was sufficient to establish that the damage to the victim's property exceeded $250 for purposes of the third degree criminal mischief conviction; the record was, however, sufficient to establish that defendant intentionally damaged the victim's property and, therefore, defendant's conviction was reduced to criminal mischief in the fourth degree. People v Beauvais, 105 A.D.3d 1081, 962 N.Y.S.2d 764, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2227 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2013).

2. Constitutional considerations

State criminal trespass statute is not unconstitutional for vagueness. People v Bush, 39 N.Y.2d 529, 384 N.Y.S.2d 733, 349 N.E.2d 832, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 2679 (N.Y. 1976).

Legislature's classification of third degree criminal mischief as class E felony did not violate defendant's constitutional right to equal protection, as classification was rationally related to legitimate state purpose of punishing those who destroy property. People v Davis, 227 A.D.2d 983, 643 N.Y.S.2d 835, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6954 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1996).

3. Lesser included offenses

In order to sustain defendants' convictions for third-degree criminal mischief as result of damage inflicted on an automobile, there had to be proof beyond a reasonable doubt not only that the damage inflicted on the automobile exceeded $250 but also that the value of the automobile was $250 or more; and, where evidence established that defendants inflicted intentional damage to an automobile but did not show that the value of the automobile exceeded $250, their convictions for criminal mischief in the third degree would be modified by reducing the convictions to the lesser included offense of criminal mischief in the fourth degree. People v Johnson, 58 A.D.2d 662, 395 N.Y.S.2d 524, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12761 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

A conviction of criminal mischief in the third degree would be reduced to criminal mischief in the fourth degree where the trial court improperly refused to charge the fourth-degree offense inasmuch as defendant did not intentionally damage property in an amount exceeding $250. People v Benigno, 87 A.D.2d 597, 447 N.Y.S.2d 748, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15872 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 56 N.Y.2d 808, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 5990 (N.Y. 1982).

Defendant's conviction for third-degree criminal mischief would be reduced to fourth-degree criminal mischief, where to support a conviction for third-degree criminal mischief the people had to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the damage to the victim's property exceeded $250, where the evidence showed only that there was one small hole in one of the panes of glass in an office window and bent protective bars, where that evidence did not establish the requisite value, and where the evidence was sufficient only to support the jury's determination that defendant had intentionally damaged the property of another person. People v Cunningham, 95 A.D.2d 680, 463 N.Y.S.2d 470, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18584 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 60 N.Y.2d 615, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 6063 (N.Y. 1983).

In prosecution arising from incident in which defendant removed water heater from victim's house and placed it on his truck, possibly injuring heater, third degree criminal mischief conviction would be reduced to fourth degree for lack of proof that damage to property exceeded $250, since (1) People did not adduce proof of monetary amount of damages to heater itself, and thus jury could only consider cost for reinstalling water heater, not cost of new water heater, and (2) jury could only conclude that cost for installation was about $120 in view of evidence that it cost $355 to install heater but $234 of that amount was attributable to cost of new heater. People v David, 133 A.D.2d 277, 519 N.Y.S.2d 67, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49766 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Conviction would be reversed where defendant was charged with reckless endangerment in first degree in violation of CLS Penal 120.25 and entered plea of guilty to criminal mischief in third degree in violation of CLS Penal § 145.05 in satisfaction of indictment, since criminal mischief in third degree was not lesser included offense of reckless endangerment in first degree. People v Sicurella, 149 A.D.2d 983, 543 N.Y.S.2d 352, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6072 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1989).

Defendant's conviction for third degree criminal mischief would be reduced to fourth degree criminal mischief based on insufficient evidence to prove that damage to complainant's vehicle exceeded $250, even though appraiser estimated that new ignition would cost $210 and repair to passenger door lock would cost $145, where indictment voted by grand jury alleged only damage to door. People v Rodriguez, 164 A.D.2d 832, 559 N.Y.S.2d 725, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10815 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1990).

Defendant was entitled to vacatur of conviction for third degree criminal mischief where he was charged with second degree criminal mischief, neither party requested charge of third degree criminal mischief as lesser included offense, court charged jury only as to second degree criminal mischief, jury was given verdict sheet which misstated that charge was third degree criminal mischief and returned verdict of guilty on that charge, and error was never discovered by trial court. People v Klos, 190 A.D.2d 754, 593 N.Y.S.2d 545, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 994 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 972, 598 N.Y.S.2d 774, 615 N.E.2d 231, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 2015 (N.Y. 1993).

Court should have charged fourth degree criminal mischief as lesser included offense in trial for third degree criminal mischief, since jury could have found that defendant acted recklessly rather than intentionally in damaging his girlfriend's car as he left party, where there was evidence that defendant had drunk 2 40-ounce containers of beer and (with his cousin) pint of gin before going to party, and that while at party, defendant drank beer, alcoholic punch, and brandy. People v Young, 207 A.D.2d 1011, 617 N.Y.S.2d 254, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10271 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1994).

Conviction of third degree criminal mischief would be reduced to fourth degree criminal mischief where evidence did not prove that amount of damage to vehicle intentionally caused by defendant exceeded $250. People v Duran, 238 A.D.2d 351, 656 N.Y.S.2d 56, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3375 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

Defendant waived his challenge to the legal sufficiency of the evidence supporting his conviction of criminal mischief in the fourth degree inasmuch as he asked the trial court to charge that crime as a lesser included offense of criminal mischief in the third degree and he ultimately was convicted of the lesser included offense. People v Daniels, 75 A.D.3d 1169, 904 N.Y.S.2d 859, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6117 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 15 N.Y.3d 892, 912 N.Y.S.2d 581, 938 N.E.2d 1016, 2010 N.Y. LEXIS 3413 (N.Y. 2010).

4. Sentencing

Sentence of one year in jail imposed on defendant's conviction for third degree criminal mischief was not unduly harsh in view of his prior criminal record and fact that he smashed roof, hood, windows, and lights of his former girlfriend's parked car, causing over $3,200 in damage. People v Wright, 233 A.D.2d 618, 649 N.Y.S.2d 844, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11707 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

Court erred in sentencing defendant to 1 ½ to 3 years imprisonment for third degree criminal mischief since such crime was not violent felony, and defendant was not found to be prior felony offender; thus, sentence would be reduced to 1 to 3 years imprisonment. People v Stinson, 272 A.D.2d 483, 707 N.Y.S.2d 675, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5533 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 858, 714 N.Y.S.2d 9, 736 N.E.2d 870, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 2779 (N.Y. 2000).

In prosecution for third degree criminal mischief, court properly fixed amount of restitution without hearing where defendant did not request hearing, and record contained sufficient evidence to support finding as to out-of-pocket loss that defendant caused. People v Stubbs, 281 A.D.2d 498, 721 N.Y.S.2d 562, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2402 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 908, 730 N.Y.S.2d 806, 756 N.E.2d 94, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2957 (N.Y. 2001).

Amount of restitution ordered on conviction of third degree criminal mischief was not excessive where ordinary meaning of "restitution" is restoring someone to position occupied before particular event. People v Stubbs, 281 A.D.2d 498, 721 N.Y.S.2d 562, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2402 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 908, 730 N.Y.S.2d 806, 756 N.E.2d 94, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2957 (N.Y. 2001).

Sentence of one to 3 years for third degree criminal mischief was not excessive and would not be reduced in interest of justice where it was within permissible statutory range, it was in accordance with plea agreement in full satisfaction of 12-count information, defendant had extensive criminal record, and no extraordinary circumstances existed. People v Arquette, 281 A.D.2d 652, 720 N.Y.S.2d 852, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2041 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

In prosecution for third degree criminal mischief, collection surcharge imposed under CLS Penal § 60.27(8) on amount of restitution was improperly calculated and would be reduced from 10 to 5 percent, absent affidavit indicating that actual cost of collection exceeded 5 percent. People v Arquette, 281 A.D.2d 652, 720 N.Y.S.2d 852, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2041 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

Concurrent indeterminate sentences of three to six years imprisonment, which were imposed on defendant's convictions of two counts of criminal mischief in the third degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 145.05, were illegal under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.06(3)(e) and, thus, had to be vacated. People v Penna, 47 A.D.3d 844, 849 N.Y.S.2d 161, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1358 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 843, 859 N.Y.S.2d 402, 889 N.E.2d 89, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 1741 (N.Y. 2008).

Criminal mischief in the third degree was not a violent felony, and the People conceded that defendant should have been sentenced to an indeterminate term as a second felony offender rather than a determinate term as a second violent felony offender for such crime. People v Ramos, 48 A.D.3d 984, 851 N.Y.S.2d 724, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1633 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 938, 862 N.Y.S.2d 345, 892 N.E.2d 411, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 2368 (N.Y. 2008), cert. denied, 556 U.S. 1110, 129 S. Ct. 1595, 173 L. Ed. 2d 686, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 1896 (U.S. 2009).

Appellate court could not consider defendant's challenge to an enhanced sentence imposed following his guilty plea to assault in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05, and criminal mischief in the third degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 145.05 (2003); as part of the plea agreement, defendant knowingly, intelligently, and voluntarily waived his right to appeal the sentence. People v Schryver, 306 A.D.2d 626, 759 N.Y.S.2d 904, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6635 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 598, 766 N.Y.S.2d 174, 798 N.E.2d 358, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 3621 (N.Y. 2003).

Although the sentence imposed upon defendant was the maximum, the sentence was neither harsh nor excessive because defendant engaged in a deliberate plan to set an interior fire to an apartment building with several occupants, endangering their lives; defendant caused significant burn damage to an apartment's doorway area and carpeting. People v Launder, 132 A.D.3d 1151, 18 N.Y.S.3d 747, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7929 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2015), app. denied, 27 N.Y.3d 1153, 62 N.E.3d 127, 39 N.Y.S.3d 387, 2016 N.Y. LEXIS 2521 (N.Y. 2016).

Trial court properly imposed consecutive sentences because while defendant's crimes of criminal possession of stolen property in the fourth degree, based on his possession of the subject stolen vehicle, and criminal mischief in the third degree, based on him intentionally causing certain damage to a State Police vehicle during the police pursuit, albeit while operating that stolen vehicle, occurred in the course of one continuous criminal incident, the charges arose from separate, distinct acts. People v Light, 184 A.D.3d 904, 125 N.Y.S.3d 185, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3262 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2020).

5. Verdict

Trial court's judgments of conviction finding defendant guilty of 12 counts of criminal mischief had to be reversed, except for one count of criminal mischief in the third degree; defendant could not be acquitted of "making graffiti," as he was by the jury and be convicted of 11 of the 12 counts because they were all based on the same conduct. alleged spray-painting, and, thus, the verdict was repugnant. Colavito v New York Organ Donor Network, Inc., 6 N.Y.3d 820, 813 N.Y.S.2d 37, 846 N.E.2d 467, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 517 (N.Y. 2006).

Jury verdict finding defendant guilty of third degree criminal mischief was not repugnant with his acquittal of fourth degree criminal mischief where he drove his car into and intended to damage one vehicle, while not intending to damage another vehicle which he hit. People v Samiec, 181 A.D.2d 983, 586 N.Y.S.2d 535, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4573 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1992).

Defendant's convictions for criminal mischief were reversed where defendant was acquitted of making graffiti charges based on the same alleged act of vandalism as the only evidence of property damage submitted to the jury was of spray-painting. People v Wallender, 27 A.D.3d 955, 812 N.Y.S.2d 157, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3579 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

Conviction of criminal mischief in the third degree was based on legally sufficient evidence and was not against the weight of the evidence under circumstances in which, in one of her statements to police, defendant admitted that she scratched the victim's car; the victim testified that defendant had no right to damage the vehicle, and both the victim and a detective testified that the car had deep scratches all along both sides and on the hood. The victim testified that she received three estimates and had the repairs performed by the shop with the lowest estimate, approximately $2,600, and that shop's written estimate was admitted into evidence. People v Hooks, 71 A.D.3d 1184, 896 N.Y.S.2d 501, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1678 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2010).

6. Evidence sufficient

Defendant's conviction for criminal mischief in the third degree was in accord with the weight of the evidence because defendant admitted to having thrown a dumbbell through the victim's living room window, and the victim testified that the resulting damage to her fish tank and furnishings totaled $ 1,600. People v Odofin, 153 A.D.3d 972, 59 N.Y.S.3d 842, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5952 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2017).

Sufficient evidence supported defendant's criminal mischief in the third degree convictions because there was significant burn damage to the doorway area and carpeting of a specific apartment from a fire started by defendant, and the damage totaled $1,450, and the damage to the security cameras defendant spray-painted several days after the fire was just under $700. People v Launder, 132 A.D.3d 1151, 18 N.Y.S.3d 747, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7929 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2015), app. denied, 27 N.Y.3d 1153, 62 N.E.3d 127, 39 N.Y.S.3d 387, 2016 N.Y. LEXIS 2521 (N.Y. 2016).

Defendant's verdict of criminal mischief in the third degree and other crimes was not against the weight of evidence because defendant and her codefendant unlawfully broke into the building's garage and caused damage to the garage door and personal property belonging to other tenants in the building, and the property manager testified that the damage to the garage door was well in excess of $250. People v Saunders, 181 A.D.3d 1049, 120 N.Y.S.3d 658, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1739 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2020).

7. Evidence insufficient

Evidence was legally insufficient to establish defendant's guilt of criminal mischief in the third degree because the evidence did not establish, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the damage to the subject property exceeded the sum of $250. People v Casiano, 148 A.D.3d 1044, 50 N.Y.S.3d 439, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2015 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2017).

8. Weight of evidence

Defendant's convictions for criminal mischief in the third degree and assault in the third degree were not against the weight of the evidence. There was no reason to disturb the county court's credibility determinations with respect to whether defendant intended to violate the order of protection, whether he was the initial aggressor in starting a brawl, or whether he was still capable of forming the requisite criminal intent for the crimes despite evidence he was intoxicated. People v Barrett, 188 A.D.3d 1736, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7125 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. dismissed, 188 A.D.3d 1739, 132 N.Y.S.3d 706, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7096 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2020).

Notes to Unpublished Decisions

1. In general

Unpublished decision: As there was no explanation as to why defendant's girlfriend did not testify as to the damage defendant did to her car for purposes of a criminal mischief charge under N.Y. Penal Law § 145.05(2) to revoke his supervised release, her hearsay statements were erroneously admitted under Fed. R. Crim. P. 32.1(b)(2)(C), and, while it would have been preferable for the district court to have signaled its intent to take judicial notice of the amount of damage caused to the girlfriend's car prior to rendering its decision, it was not obligated to do so under Fed. R. Evid. 201(f), and since there was other testimony and photographs of the damage, any error in taking judicial notice of significant damages, clearly in excess of the relatively low statutory threshold of $250, was not plain. United States v Bryant, 402 Fed. Appx. 543, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 20466 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2010).

§ 145.10. Criminal mischief in the second degree

A person is guilty of criminal mischief in the second degree when with intent to damage property of another person, and having no right to do so nor any reasonable ground to believe that he has such right, he damages property of another person in an amount exceeding one thousand five hundred dollars.

Criminal mischief in the second degree is a class D felony.

Notes to Decisions

In juvenile delinquency proceeding in which defendant was accused of committing act which, if committed by adult, would constitute crime of second degree criminal tampering, defendant had burden to establish by preponderance of evidence affirmative defense that he did not engage in conduct of which he was accused for larcenous or otherwise unlawful or wrongful purpose. In re Rodney B., 69 N.Y.2d 687, 512 N.Y.S.2d 17, 504 N.E.2d 384, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 21305 (N.Y. 1986).

Indeterminate sentences of three and one-half to ten years and two and one-third to seven years, respectively, imposed after defendant's conviction of first-degree burglary and second-degree criminal mischief, were not excessive; and, where convictions for first-degree burglary and second-degree criminal mischief were based on separate and distinct acts, sentences on such convictions were properly made to be served consecutively. People v Longendyke, 56 A.D.2d 683, 391 N.Y.S.2d 732, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10840 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

The monetary damage to each of nine vehicles could not be aggregated to charge defendants accused of slashing the tires of the nine automobiles with criminal mischief in the second degree, where, although the tire slashings may have been the product of a single intent and design, they were separate acts against various owners and, therefore, could not be considered together to constitute a single crime of criminal mischief in the second degree. People v Bornstein, 96 A.D.2d 722, 465 N.Y.S.2d 361, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19293 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 60 N.Y.2d 822, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 6439 (N.Y. 1983).

People failed to establish value of subject property in excess of $1,500 to support convictions for attempted grand larceny in second degree and criminal mischief in second degree where only evidence of value consisted of improperly admitted hearsay testimony that value of property was $7,000 as set forth by "the engineering group." People v Butler, 123 A.D.2d 877, 507 N.Y.S.2d 477, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 60988 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

To extent that it is necessary to demonstrate value of damaged property for criminal mischief purposes (i.e., to show that value of property prior to infliction of damage was not less than amount of damage necessary to convict defendant of second degree criminal mischief), it is sufficient to define value in terms of cost of repair of property, so long as property is repairable; thus, People sufficiently demonstrated amount of damage to complainant's truck by showing that truck was repairable and was repaired for over $1,500. In prosecution for second degree criminal mischief based on incident where defendant damaged complainant's property shortly after complainant had fired him, court properly allowed complainant to testify concerning defendant's swearing and threats made to complainant on learning he was fired, and concerning prior incident where defendant removed keys from complainant's car to prevent complainant from leaving defendant; evidence was interwoven with complainant's recitation of incident, was relevant with regard to defendant's state of mind, and related to defendant's intent and motive to damage complainant's property. Court properly refused to charge fourth degree criminal mischief as lesser included offense of second degree criminal mischief where no reasonable view of evidence could support finding that damage inflicted by defendant was less than $250. People v Simpson, 132 A.D.2d 894, 518 N.Y.S.2d 453, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49360 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 937, 524 N.Y.S.2d 689, 519 N.E.2d 635, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19828 (N.Y. 1987).

Appellate court would reduce conviction of second degree criminal mischief to third degree offense where (1) only evidence as to value of damaged property was testimony of victim, who was not expert, (2) no evidence was offered to support his claim that replacement of property was necessary at cost of $10,000, and (3) defendant conceded that damage exceeded $250. People v Gina, 137 A.D.2d 555, 524 N.Y.S.2d 296, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 718 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 1027, 530 N.Y.S.2d 562, 526 N.E.2d 54, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 2230 (N.Y. 1988).

Although court improperly received claims form submitted by victim to her insurance company as business record in prosecution for second degree criminal mischief and second degree reckless endangerment, error was harmless since proof of value was derived not from claims form submitted by victim but from appraisal forms which were properly received into evidence. People v Caufield, 148 A.D.2d 985, 539 N.Y.S.2d 221, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2567 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1989).

Evidence was legally sufficient to support verdicts of attempted first degree assault, second degree assault, second degree criminal mischief and third degree weapon possession where victim intervened in fight between defendant and another individual in front of victim's store, defendant slapped or punched victim and threatened him, defendant then got into his vehicle and attempted to strike victim with vehicle, injuring victim's hand, and defendant then drove vehicle directly into store where several people had assembled. People v Guerrero, 150 A.D.2d 489, 541 N.Y.S.2d 90, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6489 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Defendant was properly convicted of CLS Penal § 145.10 second degree criminal mischief in connection with hiring contractor to widen town road constituting principal access to his property, where contractor's bulldozer operator testified that defendant instructed him to take down stone walls abutting road and remove anything else needed to make road wider, including wire fences and trees, and push debris off to side of road onto property of another landowner. People v Misevis, 155 A.D.2d 729, 547 N.Y.S.2d 439, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13849 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989), aff'd, 76 N.Y.2d 777, 559 N.Y.S.2d 957, 559 N.E.2d 651, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 1451 (N.Y. 1990).

Evidence was insufficient to establish that damage to premises exceeded $1,500, and thus defendant's conviction of second degree criminal mischief would be reduced to fourth degree criminal mischief, where proof consisted merely of testimony of owner and his employee that repairs had cost about $2,500 which was unsupported by documentation or other evidence that amount represented reasonable cost of repairs. People v Jackson, 168 A.D.2d 633, 563 N.Y.S.2d 468, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16077 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1990), app. denied, 77 N.Y.2d 962, 570 N.Y.S.2d 495, 573 N.E.2d 583, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 1455 (N.Y. 1991).

In trial for second degree criminal mischief, evidence failed to establish that property damage exceeded $1,500 where no expert testified as to value of damaged property, no documentary proof as to cost of repair or replacement was introduced, and victim's testimony that repairs cost $4,500 was unsupported by documentation or other evidence that such cost was reasonable. People v Hoppe, 184 A.D.2d 582, 584 N.Y.S.2d 860, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7896 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1992).

Evidence supported conviction of second degree criminal mischief arising out of vandalizing of car of victim who allegedly owed defendant money, where defendant admitted that he had left note with victim which threatened "big problems" if victim failed to pay him by certain date, and evidence showed that defendant told victim's foreman after incident "today is the car and tomorrow it is him," since such evidence, together with evidence of defendant's hostility in dealing with both victim and victim's foreman, established that either defendant or someone acting at his behest did indeed cause "big problems" by severely damaging victim's car. People v Chillino, 186 A.D.2d 260, 588 N.Y.S.2d 321, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10847 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 80 N.Y.2d 973, 591 N.Y.S.2d 143, 605 N.E.2d 879, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 4264 (N.Y. 1992).

Evidence failed to support conviction for second degree criminal mischief arising from incident in which inmate ripped hot water heater from wall of prison cell since conviction required proof of damage in minimum amount of $1,500, and maintenance employee at prison testified only that electrical fixtures would have to be checked out and that they were probably damaged; judgment would be modified to reduce conviction to fourth degree criminal mischief. People v Brantley, 186 A.D.2d 1036, 588 N.Y.S.2d 475, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11610 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1992), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 785, 594 N.Y.S.2d 731, 610 N.E.2d 404, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 335 (N.Y. 1993).

Court did not err in submitting both first degree reckless endangerment count and second degree criminal mischief count to jury without providing charge under CLS CPL § 300.40(5) since there is nothing inconsistent about one acting with intent to cause property damage, as required for criminal mischief, while at same time evidencing conscious disregard for risk of death created by same actions, as required for reckless endangerment. People v McGrath, 195 A.D.2d 831, 601 N.Y.S.2d 200, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7508 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 82 N.Y.2d 851, 606 N.Y.S.2d 603, 627 N.E.2d 525, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 4731 (N.Y. 1993).

Sufficient evidence supported conviction of second degree criminal mischief and second degree criminal contempt arising out of incident in which defendant sprayed acid on his ex-girlfriend's car in violation of protective order, where complainant testified that she observed defendant spraying liquid on her car, and operator of collision shop testified that, in his expert opinion, cost of repairing vehicle would be $1,963.93. In prosecution for second degree criminal mischief and second degree criminal contempt for violation of protective order, trial court properly denied defendant's request for moral certainty charge on circumstantial evidence, given direct testimony of complainant that she saw defendant vandalizing her car. Court properly refused to admit damaged vehicle or photographs of vehicle where there was no assurance that condition of vehicle had not changed between time of incident and time when photographs were taken shortly before trial. People v Smeraldo, 242 A.D.2d 886, 662 N.Y.S.2d 883, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10436 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 880, 668 N.Y.S.2d 579, 691 N.E.2d 651, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4729 (N.Y. 1997).

In prosecution for attempted first degree coercion and second degree mischief, court properly admitted direct testimony about incident in which defendant and other union plumbers went through work site in manner that caused nonunion plumbers to leave; such testimony properly showed that defendant used "strong-arm" tactics as part of wide-ranging scheme or plan to pressure nonunion businesses or contractors into hiring union plumbers. People v Martello, 251 A.D.2d 187, 675 N.Y.S.2d 33, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7434 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998), aff'd, 93 N.Y.2d 645, 695 N.Y.S.2d 525, 717 N.E.2d 684, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1425 (N.Y. 1999).

In juvenile delinquency proceeding based on charges of conduct that would be second degree arson and second degree mischief if committed by adult, petition was sufficient on its face, despite juvenile's claim that his mother's statement that he communicated to her by signing that he used matches to start fire was not admission, because it was nonverbal communication; witness may testify concerning statement made by another person who communicates nonverbally by sign language, and juvenile did not prove that his method of communication with his mother was unreliable. In re Terrance W., 251 A.D.2d 1004, 674 N.Y.S.2d 529, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7021 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 810, 680 N.Y.S.2d 54, 702 N.E.2d 839, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 3180 (N.Y. 1998).

Judgment convicting defendant of attempted second degree mischief would be modified by vacating amount of restitution, and matter would be remitted for determination of amount of victim's out-of-pocket loss, where record did not support amount of restitution ordered. People v Linscott, 255 A.D.2d 1007, 679 N.Y.S.2d 865, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12317 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

Defendant's fiancee's general approximation of cost of repairing or replacing various property items was insufficient to show amount of damage to support conviction for second degree mischief; thus, judgment would be modified by reducing conviction to fourth degree mischief. People v Jackson, 269 A.D.2d 867, 703 N.Y.S.2d 804, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1836 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 798, 711 N.Y.S.2d 166, 733 N.E.2d 238, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 2022 (N.Y. 2000).

In prosecution for third degree arson, second degree criminal mischief, and child endangerment, defendant was entitled to hearing on amount of restitution to be paid, and case would be remitted for that purpose, where record did not contain sufficient evidence to support amount ordered. People v Wilson, 275 A.D.2d 1035, 714 N.Y.S.2d 920, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9588 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 808, 726 N.Y.S.2d 386, 750 N.E.2d 88, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1817 (N.Y. 2001).

Evidence failed to show that damage to property exceeded $1,500 where no expert testified as to value, no documentary proof as to cost of repair or replacement was introduced, and complainant's testimony that repair and replacement cost over $1,500 was insufficient since that testimony was unsupported by documentation or other evidence; thus, defendant's conviction of second degree mischief would be reduced to fourth degree mischief. People v Wilson, 284 A.D.2d 420, 728 N.Y.S.2d 174, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6129 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 926, 732 N.Y.S.2d 643, 758 N.E.2d 669, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4077 (N.Y. 2001).

Defendant was properly convicted of criminal mischief on evidence that he sprayed a solution containing chicken excrement all over the Hall of the Court of Appeals of New York, destroying the court's banner, and causing the State to incur thousands of dollars of expense in seeking to eradicate the stench, which lingered for many months. People v Collins, 288 A.D.2d 756, 733 N.Y.S.2d 289, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11525 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 752, 742 N.Y.S.2d 612, 769 N.E.2d 358, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 1156 (N.Y. 2002).

Because the evidence was legally sufficient to prove, beyond a reasonable doubt, that defendant caused damage exceeding $1,500 to the complainant's vehicle, defendant was properly found guilty of second-degree criminal mischief under N.Y. Penal Law 145.10. People v Ramirez, 49 A.D.3d 667, 853 N.Y.S.2d 604, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2112 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 963, 863 N.Y.S.2d 147, 893 N.E.2d 453, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 2789 (N.Y. 2008).

Evidence supported defendant's conviction for criminal mischief, as when the victim went to her car after leaving a bar, she saw something move in her car, the car's rear window then shattered, and defendant climbed out of the car; according to the appraiser from the victim's automobile insurer, it would cost over $4,500 to restore the car to its pre-loss condition. People v Stacconi, 151 A.D.3d 1395, 58 N.Y.S.3d 201, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5068 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2017).

Evidence was sufficient to support defendant's conviction for criminal mischief in second degree under Penal Law § 145.10 because the victim testified that defendant punched and kicked her car eight or nine times resulting in dents in hood and all the way down the side of her car and a broken sun visor, and a repair shop estimated the cost to repair the damage to the car at $ 2,280, thus exceeding the statutory requirement of $1,500. People v Bombard, 159 A.D.3d 1119, 71 N.Y.S.3d 759, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1531 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 31 N.Y.3d 1145, 108 N.E.3d 501, 83 N.Y.S.3d 427, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 2421 (N.Y. 2018).

Verdict that convicted defendant of burglary in the third degree, criminal mischief, and petit larceny was not against the weight of the evidence where testimony indicated that defendant and four other employees resembled the individual depicted on a video prying open the door, blood found on the doorway matched defendant's DNA, and defendant testified that the blood might have transferred to the doorway as he had suffered an injury and went into the office to get a bandage. People v Young, 160 A.D.3d 1206, 75 N.Y.S.3d 645, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2655 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 31 N.Y.3d 1155, 108 N.E.3d 510, 83 N.Y.S.3d 436, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 2419 (N.Y. 2018).

There was nothing plainly illegal about the $ 40,000 restitution award; first, defendant failed to preserve the issue, and preservation was required as defendant claimed restitution was about the statutory cap and was directed to a person or entity that was not a victim of the crime, and second, imposing joint and several liability on all perpetrators for the entire loss promoted the purposes of the restitution statute. People v Graves, 163 A.D.3d 16, 78 N.Y.S.3d 613, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4439 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2018), app. denied, 35 N.Y.3d 970, 148 N.E.3d 509, 125 N.Y.S.3d 45, 2020 N.Y. LEXIS 1220 (N.Y. 2020).

Defendant confessed to police and two eyewitnesses definitively identified defendant as one of the vandals; he thereby qualified for accessorial liability, in connection with his criminal mischief trial. People v Graves, 163 A.D.3d 16, 78 N.Y.S.3d 613, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4439 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2018), app. denied, 35 N.Y.3d 970, 148 N.E.3d 509, 125 N.Y.S.3d 45, 2020 N.Y. LEXIS 1220 (N.Y. 2020).

Jury was instructed in defendant's criminal mischief trial that the extent or degree of his personal participation in the vandalism did not matter to his guilt, and since it was undisputed that the group as a whole did well over $ 1,500 in damage, it did not matter whether the People proved that defendant personally caused damage to such an extent or degree. People v Graves, 163 A.D.3d 16, 78 N.Y.S.3d 613, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4439 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2018), app. denied, 35 N.Y.3d 970, 148 N.E.3d 509, 125 N.Y.S.3d 45, 2020 N.Y. LEXIS 1220 (N.Y. 2020).

Jury had ample basis to infer that the dealership was either a private corporation or a partnership, and either qualified as an appropriate nonhuman person, for purposes of defendant's criminal mischief in the second degree conviction; in light of the description of the enterprise offered by the employees, formal corporate documentation was not strictly necessary to prove that the dealership qualified as an appropriate nonhuman person. People v Graves, 163 A.D.3d 16, 78 N.Y.S.3d 613, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4439 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2018), app. denied, 35 N.Y.3d 970, 148 N.E.3d 509, 125 N.Y.S.3d 45, 2020 N.Y. LEXIS 1220 (N.Y. 2020).

Evidence was not legally sufficient to establish defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt on the fourteenth and sixteenth counts of the indictment as the evidence failed to establish that defendant intended to damage police vehicle unit 305 and failed to establish that the amount of the damage caused to police vehicle unit 322 exceeded $ 1,500. People v Peloso, 176 A.D.3d 1107, 113 N.Y.S.3d 87, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7584 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. dismissed, 176 A.D.3d 1110, 108 N.Y.S.3d 890, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7613 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2019).

Finding that defendant was a persistent felony offender was vacated in the interest of justice where it was unduly harsh and severe because, despite defendant's frequent involvement with law enforcement, he had only two prior felony convictions (one in 1981 one in 2002), and because a sentence of 20 years to life was a particularly harsh penalty in light of the People's final pretrial plea offer of 6 to 9 years' incarceration. Moreover, because the trial court did not include the sentence on defendant's conviction for second-degree criminal in the persistent felony offender sentence, it imposed a sentence on that count that was illegal whether defendant was sentenced as a persistent felony offender or a second felony offender. People v Garno, 184 A.D.3d 1106, 125 N.Y.S.3d 816, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3415 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 35 N.Y.3d 1065, 152 N.E.3d 1191, 129 N.Y.S.3d 389, 2020 N.Y. LEXIS 2129 (N.Y. 2020).

Court would not dismiss counts of indictment charging defendant with second and fourth degree criminal mischief arising from his act of widening town road without authority since (1) evidence showed that he intentionally damaged land adjacent to road (which was owned by another) by destroying walls, fences, and trees, and by piling debris on land, (2) he was not town superintendent, and thus he derived no authority to widen road based on CLS High § 189, which authorizes town superintendent to widen lands used by public as highway for 10 years or more, and (3) therewas no reasonable ground for him to believe that he had right to widen road because § 189 does not authorize appropriation of lands not actually in use as roads without consent of owner or payment of just compensation. People v Misevis, 138 Misc. 2d 1097, 526 N.Y.S.2d 387, 1988 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 78 (N.Y. County Ct. 1988).

In trial for second degree criminal mischief, any reduced usefulness or loss of efficiency that resulted from defendant's conduct of spraying chicken feces on marble exterior of court building was sufficient for jury to find damages even though facade of building was not physically damaged, and amount of clean-up costs was properly considered in determining amount of damage to building. People v Collins, 183 Misc. 2d 303, 704 N.Y.S.2d 791, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 22 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), review or reh'g denied, People ex rel. Collins v Perlman, 95 N.Y.2d 899, 716 N.Y.S.2d 637, 739 N.E.2d 1141, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3778 (N.Y. 2000).

Evidence that defendant allowed former boyfriend to use defendant's mother's car earlier in the evening and that defendant drove the boyfriend to another person's residence later that same night, waited in the car while the boyfriend relit a fire the boyfriend had set at the residence, and drove the boyfriend to defendant's house after he restarted the fire was sufficient to corroborate the boyfriend's testimony that defendant knew the boyfriend was going to set the fire and assisted the boyfriend in doing so, and the appellate court sustained defendant's convictions on charges of burglary in the second degree, arson in the third degree, assault in the second degree, and criminal mischief in the second degree. People v Wood, 299 A.D.2d 739, 751 N.Y.S.2d 106, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11391 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2002), app. denied, 99 N.Y.2d 621, 757 N.Y.S.2d 833, 787 N.E.2d 1179, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 693 (N.Y. 2003).

Where the only proof that the damage caused by defendant was over $1500 was given by the complainant, the evidence was insufficient to support defendant's conviction of criminal mischief in the second degree, and defendant should have been convicted of criminal mischief in the fourth degree. People v Deolall, 7 A.D.3d 635, 777 N.Y.S.2d 173, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6901 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 3 N.Y.3d 658, 782 N.Y.S.2d 700, 816 N.E.2d 573, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 3062 (N.Y. 2004).

Intent could have been inferred from the act itself or from the defendant's conduct and the surrounding circumstances, and there was legally sufficient evidence from which the jury could have inferred that defendant intended to place the victim in reasonable fear of physical injury by, inter alia, displaying a tire iron, that defendant intended to damage the victim's vehicle, and that defendant intended to use a dangerous instrument, his own vehicle, against the victim. People v Bryant, 13 A.D.3d 1170, 787 N.Y.S.2d 540, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16299 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2004), review denied, 4 N.Y.3d 884, 798 N.Y.S.2d 729, 831 N.E.2d 974, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 1646 (N.Y. 2005).

Sufficient evidence existed to convict a defendant of assault in the second degree N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3), reckless endangerment in the first degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.25, and criminal mischief in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 145.10 since the jury could best resolve credibility and N.Y. Penal Law § 40.15 insanity defense fact issues; he had the ability to understand that firing 59 shots at police and neighbors was wrong even though his expert psychiatrist testified he had a delusional disorder (paranoid schizophrenia) for years and was delusional the night of the shooting. People v Stoffel, 17 A.D.3d 992, 794 N.Y.S.2d 230, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4520 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 5 N.Y.3d 795, 801 N.Y.S.2d 816, 835 N.E.2d 676, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 2431 (N.Y. 2005).

Defendant's convictions for criminal mischief were reversed where defendant was acquitted of making graffiti charges based on the same alleged act of vandalism as the only evidence of property damage submitted to the jury was of spray-painting. People v Wallender, 27 A.D.3d 955, 812 N.Y.S.2d 157, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3579 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

Defendant's conviction for criminal mischief, for which defendant was not charged with making graffiti based on the same alleged acts of vandalism, was supported by the weight of the evidence as a witness testified that defendant was dressed in black at a party and that either defendant or another individual stated that "You will hear about it tomorrow"; there was also testimony that defendant admitted participating in the vandalism, although aspects of this evidence were incredible. People v Wallender, 27 A.D.3d 955, 812 N.Y.S.2d 157, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3579 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

Evidence was sufficient to support a conviction for criminal mischief in the second degree, pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 145.10, when the evidence showed that defendant had shot at his former girlfriend's home with a shotgun and had caused at least $1,500 in damage to the home. People v Gray, 30 A.D.3d 771, 816 N.Y.S.2d 609, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8001 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.3d 848, 823 N.Y.S.2d 777, 857 N.E.2d 72, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 3423 (N.Y. 2006).

Defendant's claim that, in a case trying a charge of criminal mischief, his counsel ineffectively pursued supposed defense that his conduct did not rise to the level of criminal activity was meritless. Counsel raised the issue of intent in both his opening and closing statements, and presented testimony that defendant's purpose in cutting, trimming, and removing plantings at a leased residence was to make the property safer and more aesthetically pleasing. Experts were consulted by defense counsel and one was scheduled to testify but did not appear because his travel was delayed and the trial court denied counsel's request for a continuance to accommodate the witness. People v Varden, 34 A.D.3d 926, 823 N.Y.S.2d 597, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13197 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.3d 929, 827 N.Y.S.2d 698, 860 N.E.2d 1000, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 4163 (N.Y. 2006).

Denial of motion to dismiss defamation complaint was error because, inter alia, certain statements referring to plaintiff's alleged criminal conduct were made in the context of plaintiff's purported demolition/reconstruction activities for which legitimate issues of fact existed, i.e., whether they were duly authorized by a village in each instance and whether they encroached upon the owner's property rights; arguably, plaintiff could have been subject to prosecution for felonious criminal mischief. Galasso v Saltzman, 42 A.D.3d 310, 839 N.Y.S.2d 731, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8178 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2007).

Based, inter alia, on defendant's complaint about a store, defendant's admission to starting a fire, and leaving the scene without ascertaining that the fire was out or that the building's occupants knew about it, defendant was properly convicted of second-degree arson, second-degree criminal mischief and first-degree reckless endangerment under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 150.15, 145.10, 120.25. People v Hodges, 66 A.D.3d 1228, 888 N.Y.S.2d 224, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7568 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2009), app. denied, 13 N.Y.3d 939, 895 N.Y.S.2d 330, 922 N.E.2d 919, 2010 N.Y. LEXIS 525 (N.Y. 2010).

Trial court's judgments of conviction finding defendant guilty of 12 counts of criminal mischief had to be reversed, except for one count of criminal mischief in the third degree; defendant could not be acquitted of "making graffiti," as he was by the jury and be convicted of 11 of the 12 counts because they were all based on the same conduct. alleged spray-painting, and, thus, the verdict was repugnant. Colavito v New York Organ Donor Network, Inc., 6 N.Y.3d 820, 813 N.Y.S.2d 37, 846 N.E.2d 467, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 517 (N.Y. 2006).

Analysis

1. In general
2. Under former § 1423

1. In general

In juvenile delinquency proceeding in which defendant was accused of committing act which, if committed by adult, would constitute crime of second degree criminal tampering, defendant had burden to establish by preponderance of evidence affirmative defense that he did not engage in conduct of which he was accused for larcenous or otherwise unlawful or wrongful purpose. In re Rodney B., 69 N.Y.2d 687, 512 N.Y.S.2d 17, 504 N.E.2d 384, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 21305 (N.Y. 1986).

Trial court's acquittal of defendant on greater charges of arson in first, second and third degrees was not inconsistent with his conviction of fourth degree arson, since verdict was logically explained as limited acceptance of intoxication defense to extent of finding that defendant intentionally set fire but recklessly, not intentionally, damaged building. People v Gerasimovic, 124 A.D.2d 593, 507 N.Y.S.2d 873, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 61905 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

By pushing metal rod up and down in subway turnstile's token slot, defendant engaged in "tampering" within meaning of CLS Penal § 145.15. People v Gittens, 279 A.D.2d 291, 719 N.Y.S.2d 230, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 92 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 829, 729 N.Y.S.2d 449, 754 N.E.2d 209, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2164 (N.Y. 2001).

Evidence that defendant used jumper cables at meter box at his home that allowed him to use 10 percent of the electricity without its being recorded by the meter, and testimony from the company's security investigator that the cables did not belong in the meter box, was sufficient to establish that the cables were placed in the box without the company's consent. Therefore, defendant was properly convicted of criminal tampering in the second degree under N.Y. Pen. Law § 145.15. People v Myles, 58 A.D.3d 889, 870 N.Y.S.2d 598, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 55 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2009), app. denied, 14 N.Y.3d 890, 903 N.Y.S.2d 779, 929 N.E.2d 1014, 2010 N.Y. LEXIS 1860 (N.Y. 2010).

2. Under former § 1423

Subdivision 6 of this section, which punishes the conscious and deliberate tapping of telephones within the State, does not offend the Supremacy Clause of the U. S. Constitution (Art 6 § 2) on the ground that Congress in enacting § 605 of the Federal Communications Act intended to usurp the field. The word "wilfully" in the phrase "unlawfully and wilfully" in that part of § 1423 prohibiting wire tapping, means deliberately. This being so, when the word "wilfully" was carried into former § 738, the new statutory section forbidding eavesdropping, the same meaning applies. People v Broady, 5 N.Y.2d 500, 186 N.Y.S.2d 230, 158 N.E.2d 817, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1447 (N.Y.), cert. denied, 361 U.S. 8, 80 S. Ct. 57, 4 L. Ed. 2d 49, 1959 U.S. LEXIS 348 (U.S. 1959).

Evidence as to a crime obtained by the police by tapping telephone wire should not be excluded upon the ground that the police in obtaining the information violated § 552 and this section. People v McDonald, 177 A.D. 806, 165 N.Y.S. 41, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6441 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

Where the subscriber consents to the use of his telephone by an employee, a member of his household or by his wife there is a condition implied that the telephone will not be used to the detriment of the subscriber's business, household or marital status and, in order to determine if his line is being so used he may have his own line tapped. People v Appelbaum, 277 A.D. 43, 97 N.Y.S.2d 807, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2988 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 301 N.Y. 738, 95 N.E.2d 410, 301 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 738, 1950 N.Y. LEXIS 1033 (N.Y. 1950).

A defendant's statutory and constitutional rights are not infringed by the attachment of a recording device to his telephone showing only the numbers dialed thereon and the time of such dialing where such device was attached by the telephone company at the request of a person at whose complaint a charge is pending against defendant for violation of the provision of subd 6 of above statute making it a crime to use a telephone line to make calls to a place of business for the purpose of keeping the line busy in order to injure such business. People v Schneider, 45 Misc. 2d 680, 257 N.Y.S.2d 876, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2247 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1965).

§ 145.20. Criminal tampering in the first degree

A person is guilty of criminal tampering in the first degree when, with intent to cause a substantial interruption or impairment of a service rendered to the public, and having no right to do so nor any reasonable ground to believe that he or she has such right, he or she damages or tampers with property of a gas, electric, sewer, steam or water-works corporation, telephone or telegraph corporation, common carrier, nuclear powered electric generating facility, or public utility operated by a municipality or district, and thereby causes such substantial interruption or impairment of service.

Criminal tampering in the first degree is a class D felony.

1. In general

A bridge may be considered a "public utility" operated by a municipality within the meaning of Penal Law § 145.20. Bridge operators who left their bridges open while on strike could properly be charged with first degree criminal tampering under Penal L § 145.20, bridges coming within the broad meaning of "public utility" as used in such statute. The term "public utility" means the furnishing of services to the public by a governmental authority. People v Siciliano, 40 A.D.2d 818, 338 N.Y.S.2d 478, 1972 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3228 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1972), aff'd, 34 N.Y.2d 575, 354 N.Y.S.2d 945, 310 N.E.2d 542, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1808 (N.Y. 1974).

2. Under former § 1423

A labor management contract which permits the union to direct its members who were employed to send both domestic telegraph messages and cablegrams while remaining on the job not to transmit cablegrams during a strike of union members engaged exclusively in transmitting cablegrams would be invalid as a violation of this section and therefore in the event of ambiguity such a contract must be construed not to authorize such a stoppage. Western Union Tel. Co. v American Communications Ass'n, C. I. O., 299 N.Y. 177, 86 N.E.2d 162, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 177, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 980 (N.Y. 1949).

Where defendant, upon buying his premises from former owner, bought latter's share in telephone line, cut wire across his property and removed it after his telephone was disconnected for failure to pay charge assessed for use of telephone, having given one day notice to other landowners of his intention, it cannot be said that defendant violated this section. § 145.25. Reckless endangerment of property

A person is guilty of reckless endangerment of property when he recklessly engages in conduct which creates a substantial risk of damage to the property of another person in an amount exceeding two hundred fifty dollars.

Reckless endangerment of property is a class B misdemeanor.

HISTORY:

Add, L 1965, ch 1030, § 1, eff Sept 1, 1967.

Commission Staff Notes: See Commission Staff Notes under Art 145.

Notes to Decisions

Indictment counts charging defendant with reckless endangerment of property and fourth degree criminal mischief, as well as jury's findings of guilt on both counts, were not inconsistent, and thus jury charge under CLS CPL § 300.40(5) was not required, where (1) despite same mental state of recklessness involved in both crimes, results of damage to property as opposed to risk of damage to property were different, (2) acts constituting offenses were different, (3) court instructed jury that alleged conduct causing damage to property supporting reckless endangerment of property was defendant's jumping from moving truck, and (4) although court referred to no specific conduct while instructing on mischief charge, jury could have found that requisite risk of damage to truck arose earlier when defendant recklessly drove into field. People v Swart, 273 A.D.2d 503, 709 N.Y.S.2d 653, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6436 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 908, 716 N.Y.S.2d 649, 739 N.E.2d 1154, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3723 (N.Y. 2000).

Establishment of fraud allegations in handling of strike ballot on part of union officers would result in such officers lacking standing to invoke provisions of the Taylor Law, statute authorizing collective bargaining for public employees, as a defense to criminal charges of reckless endangerment and related crimes arising from calling strike of firemen. Trial jury could properly find beyond a reasonable doubt that the callousness of conduct of defendant union leaders in calling strike of city's firemen on basis of allegedly phony strike "mandate" thereby creating a substantial risk to property and persons in the city for mere personal or pecuniary gain amounted to "recklessness" under the reckless endangerment statutes. A strike by firemen may properly be the subject of a prosecution for reckless endangerment notwithstanding contention that reckless endangerment sections were not intended to apply to conduct not involving the performance of a physical act. People v Vizzini, 78 Misc. 2d 1040, 359 N.Y.S.2d 143, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1554 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1974).

Police officer had probable cause to arrest juvenile for second degree reckless endangerment and reckless endangerment of property, at minimum, where juvenile deliberately threw lit fireworks in path of moving vehicular traffic on city street. ARSON

HISTORY:

Add, L 1965, ch 1030, § 1, eff Sept 1, 1967.

§ 150.00. Arson; definitions

As used in this article,

1. "Building", in addition to its ordinary meaning, includes any structure, vehicle or watercraft used for overnight lodging of persons, or used by persons for carrying on business therein. Where a building consists of two or more units separately secured or occupied, each unit shall not be deemed a separate building.

2. "Motor vehicle", includes every vehicle operated or driven upon a public highway which is propelled by any power other than muscular power, except (a) electrically-driven invalid chairs being operated or driven by an invalid, (b) vehicles which run only upon rails or tracks, and (c) snowmobiles as defined in article forty-seven of the vehicle and traffic law.

HISTORY:

Add, L 1965, ch 1030, § 1, with substance derived from § 220; amd, L 1979, ch 225, § 17, eff Sept 1, 1979.

3. Under former § 227

1. In general

Evidence held insufficient to warrant conviction of arson where evidence would not reasonably exclude the electrical lead furnishing current for pin up lamp as exposed to the interior wall of a closet as the source of fire. People v Trippoda, 40 A.D.2d 388, 341 N.Y.S.2d 66, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5379 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1973).

Sentence of 15 years, with no minimum term, for arson of a motel was proper where psychotherapy treatment under protective conditions was not available to defendant due to overcrowded conditions in public clinics. People v Gatti, 41 A.D.2d 593, 340 N.Y.S.2d 412, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5305 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1973).

Within statute defining "building" for purposes of arson statute as meaning, in addition to its ordinary meaning, structure, vehicle or watercraft used for overnight lodging of persons or used by persons for carrying on business therein, the modifying phrase as to use for overnight lodging or for carrying on business therein has no application to the phrase " 'building,' in addition to its ordinary meaning." People v Richberg, 56 A.D.2d 279, 392 N.Y.S.2d 16, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10429 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1977).

People proved that "sugar shack" was "building" in accordance with arson statute, where its owner testified that it was constructed on concrete slab, had roof, and contained equipment used for production of maple syrup. People v Letendre, 264 A.D.2d 943, 696 N.Y.S.2d 538, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9567 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Structure built by homeless people, which consisted of carpets draped over clotheslines running between two fixed fences, plywood providing additional support to one side of the structure, an entrance covered by shower curtains and blankets, a tarp covering the entire structure, and carpeting on the ground, and had diverted electrical service from a nearby subway station, was a "building," under N.Y. Penal Law 150.00(1), which could be the subject of second degree arson, because it was utilized for overnight lodging and because it fit within the ordinary meaning of the term "building," so substantial evidence supported defendant's arson conviction under N.Y. Penal Law § 150.15. People v Fox, 3 A.D.3d 577, 771 N.Y.S.2d 156, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 709 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 2 N.Y.3d 739, 778 N.Y.S.2d 465, 810 N.E.2d 918, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 1128 (N.Y. 2004).

Defendant's conviction for arson in the third degree was supported by sufficient evidence because the trailer that defendant set fire to was within the definition of "building," as it was enclosed by walls, covered by a roof, designed to stand permanently, and served a useful purpose. People v Norcutt, 115 A.D.3d 1306, 982 N.Y.S.2d 661, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2110 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 23 N.Y.3d 966, 988 N.Y.S.2d 573, 11 N.E.3d 723, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 1657 (N.Y. 2014).

Defendant's conviction for arson in the third degree was supported by sufficient evidence because the trailer that defendant set fire to was within the definition of "building," as it was used for overnight lodging on vacations or weekend retreats. People v Norcutt, 115 A.D.3d 1306, 982 N.Y.S.2d 661, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2110 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 23 N.Y.3d 966, 988 N.Y.S.2d 573, 11 N.E.3d 723, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 1657 (N.Y. 2014).

2. Under former § 220

Where a defendant makes false and fraudulent claims to a fire insurance company as to the origin of a fire, and he is later acquitted of an arson charge, a subsequent trial for false swearing is not barred by the former trial. People v Berger, 106 N.Y.S.2d 761, 199 Misc. 543, 1950 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2558 (N.Y. County Ct. 1950).

"Goods" within a village ordinance requiring sprinkler systems in cellar areas used for storage of combustible goods or merchandise included office records to be stored in such an area. Strauss v Schlimm, 144 N.Y.S.2d 229, 1955 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3710 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1955).

If a building is generally occupied by persons lodging therein at night, it is a "dwelling house" within the meaning of this section, even though it would not ordinarily be regarded as a dwelling house. People v Orcutt (1851) 1 Park Crim 252.

Analysis

1. In general
2. Under former § 223

1. In general

In a prosecution of the proprietors of the burned building for arson, the court's engaging in an off-the-record conference with a witness, the fire marshal, and thereafter stating, "After a colloquy with the witness, his answer is that he could not say with any reasonable degree of certainty that the gasoline was wilfully ignited. It could have been accidentally ignited, but in a case like this you do not have a spontaneous combustion, it does not ignite by itself," was prejudicial error. People v Schatz, 37 A.D.2d 584, 322 N.Y.S.2d 802, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3914 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1971).

Where at time of entry of guilty plea parties apparently relied on Penal L § 150.05 as it read prior to 1971 amendment which raised attempted arson in the third degree from a class A misdemeanor to the class D felony; thus guilty plea in sentence should be vacated and case remitted. People v Bradshaw, 41 A.D.2d 658, 340 N.Y.S.2d 669, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5163 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1973).

In prosecution wherein defendant was adjudged to be a youthful offender, after being found guilty of arson, fourth degree, remark by witness that defendant liked to start fires was not prejudicial where it was elicited by defendant's attorney and court immediately instructed jury to disregard it. People v U, 47 A.D.2d 791, 365 N.Y.S.2d 570, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9106 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

Evidence was sufficient to support crime of arson in the fourth degree, in that record justified finding that defendant threw lighted cigarette into upstairs hayloft knowing it was lit and without caring whether fire started therefrom. People v U, 47 A.D.2d 791, 365 N.Y.S.2d 570, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9106 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

Acquittals on counts charging arson second degree and arson third degree did not bar defendant's retrial on lowest submitted count of arson fourth degree, as to which count jury disagreed, since conviction of arson fourth degree, which requires finding of intent to start fire or cause explosion recklessly resulting in damage to building, would not be inconsistent with acquittals on higher counts which required, in addition to proof of intent to start fire, proof of intent to damage building, and since subparagraph of statute, preventing retrial for submitted offense upon which jury could not agree if that offense and some other submitted offense of higher or equal grade which was subject of verdict of conviction were so related that consecutive sentences thereon could not have been imposed, was not applicable. Doolen v Darrigrand, 58 A.D.2d 1028, 397 N.Y.S.2d 283, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13254 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 42 N.Y.2d 810, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 3906 (N.Y. 1977).

In a prosecution for felony murder based upon allegations that defendant started a fire in a dwelling which caused the death of two occupants, it was not error to charge the elements of arson i the fourth degree as the predicate for felony murder despite the fact that the jury was not asked to determine defendant's guilt of arson in the fourth degree as a separately charged substantive crime and even though the jury acquitted defendant of arson in the second degree. People v Wroblewski, 109 A.D.2d 39, 489 N.Y.S.2d 797, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 47924 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1985), aff'd, 67 N.Y.2d 933, 502 N.Y.S.2d 719, 493 N.E.2d 943, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 18080 (N.Y. 1986).

Court properly refused to charge fourth degree arson as lesser included offense of second degree arson where no reasonable view of evidence could support finding that defendant "recklessly" started fire inasmuch as 2 separate and "uncommunicated" fires were set and defendant pushed 2 burning chairs against front door of house to block occupants from exiting. People v Clinkscales, 134 A.D.2d 889, 522 N.Y.S.2d 390, 1987 N.Y. App.

Div. LEXIS 51081 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1987), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 1005, 526 N.Y.S.2d 940, 521 N.E.2d 1083, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 808 (N.Y. 1988).

Conviction for fourth degree arson by starting fire in apartment was sufficiently established, even though building itself did not burn, where evidence showed that fire was started by putting match to combustible liquid poured on mattress, and that fire caused smoke damage to ceiling and walls, heat damage to light fixture, and charring of mattress and bed frame. People v Fleming, 164 A.D.2d 942, 560 N.Y.S.2d 50, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10833 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 1021, 565 N.Y.S.2d 771, 566 N.E.2d 1176, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 4815 (N.Y. 1990).

Court properly denied defendant's request to charge attempted fourth degree arson as lesser included offense of attempted third degree arson since there is no such crime; person is guilty of CLS Penal § 150.05(1) fourth degree arson when he recklessly damages building or motor vehicle by intentionally starting fire or causing explosion (damage must thus ensue from reckless conduct), but person is guilty of attempt to commit crime only when he intends to commit that crime. People v DeJesus, 190 A.D.2d 1012, 593 N.Y.S.2d 633, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1206 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 969, 598 N.Y.S.2d 770, 615 N.E.2d 227, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 1938 (N.Y. 1993).

Court properly submitted fourth degree arson as lesser included offense of third degree arson where evidence of defendant's intoxication was sufficient to negate intent element and allow finding of recklessness, leaving to fact finder whether extent of intoxication acted to negate intent element; fact that counts of third degree arson and fourth degree arson required showing of different culpable mental states did not preclude finding that latter was lesser included offense of former. People v Borst, 232 A.D.2d 727, 648 N.Y.S.2d 720, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10257 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 940, 655 N.Y.S.2d 891, 678 N.E.2d 504, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 535 (N.Y. 1997).

Court erred in dismissing fourth degree arson charge under CLS CPL § 210.20(1)(b) where grand jury evidence indicated that defendants were inside vacant building hours before it was destroyed by fire, that they rolled up newspapers and set them on fire to use as torches to see inside building, that they attempted to extinguish torches and discarded one in area where most significant charring was detected (which is usually origin of fire), and that investigation by fire officials ruled out other causes of fire. People v Goins, 234 A.D.2d 996, 653 N.Y.S.2d 51, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13809 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1996), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 1012, 658 N.Y.S.2d 250, 680 N.E.2d 624, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 1078 (N.Y. 1997), app. denied sub. nom., People v Pick, 89 N.Y.2d 1014, 658 N.Y.S.2d 252, 680 N.E.2d 626, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 1140 (N.Y. 1997), app. denied sub. nom., People v Burdick, 89 N.Y.2d 1009, 658 N.Y.S.2d 248, 680 N.E.2d 622, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 1026 (N.Y. 1997).

In prosecution for fourth degree arson, defendant's actions in reporting fire he had set and acknowledging his culpability to fire marshals was sufficient to show that he had been "aware of and consciously disregarded(ed) a substantial and unjustifiable risk" (CLS Penal § 15.05(3)). People v Calderon, 256 A.D.2d 122, 682 N.Y.S.2d 38, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13267 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 851, 688 N.Y.S.2d 498, 710 N.E.2d 1097 (N.Y. 1999), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 851, 688 N.Y.S.2d 498, 710 N.E.2d 1097, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 474 (N.Y. 1999).

Blistering and smoke damage, which resulted from fire, was sufficient to show damage element of fourth degree arson. People v Calderon, 256 A.D.2d 122, 682 N.Y.S.2d 38, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13267 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 851, 688 N.Y.S.2d 498, 710 N.E.2d 1097 (N.Y. 1999), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 851, 688 N.Y.S.2d 498, 710 N.E.2d 1097, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 474 (N.Y. 1999).

In a case in which defendant was convicted of the crime of arson in the fourth degree, defendant's sentence was not harsh and excessive because, while the county court had the authority to sentence defendant to an indeterminate prison sentence with a maximum of four years, the court exercised its discretion to impose an alternative definite sentence of one year in jail; and, in view of that, coupled with defendant's prior criminal history and the circumstances surrounding the crime, there was no abuse of discretion or extraordinary circumstances warranting a reduction of defendant's sentence in the interest of justice. People v McGowan, 149 A.D.3d 1161, 53 N.Y.S.3d 205, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2636 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 29 N.Y.3d 999, 80 N.E.3d 414, 57 N.Y.S.3d 721, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 1648 (N.Y. 2017).

Evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of the crime of arson in the fourth degree because, after his estranged wife rejected defendant's sexual advances, he angrily grabbed her lingerie from her dresser drawer, placed it in the bathtub and then set fire to a piece of her underwear with a lighter, saying, that if he could not have her, than no one could; and the jury was permitted to reasonably and logically find that defendant then placed the burning piece of underwear on the pile of lingerie in the bathtub, making his intent to start the fire that caused the damage to the marital home clearly inferable. People v McGowan, 149 A.D.3d 1161, 53 N.Y.S.3d 205, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2636 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 29 N.Y.3d 999, 80 N.E.3d 414, 57 N.Y.S.3d 721, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 1648 (N.Y. 2017).

Defendant's claim that his conviction for the crime of arson in the fourth degree was against the manifest weight of the evidence was without merit because it was undisputed that defendant intentionally set fire to clothing and other personal items in his cell; moreover, an expert in arson investigation who responded to the incident testified that he had discovered areas of defendant's cell where spalling had created a crater in the wall due to the fire which defendant intentionally started. People v Rice, 162 A.D.3d 1244, 78 N.Y.S.3d 776, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4349 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 32 N.Y.3d 940, 109 N.E.3d 1167, 84 N.Y.S.3d 867, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 2814 (N.Y. 2018).

An indictment for second degree arson pursuant to Penal L § 150.15, based on an allegation that defendant had set fire to a garage and that the fire had spread to an inhabited building next door, would be dismissed with leave to the People to represent the charge to a new grand jury pursuant to CPL § 210.20(4) where, though a grand jury could find circumstantial evidence of defendant's intent to burn the inhabited building by starting the fire in the garage, the grand jury had erroneously been instructed that intent to damage the inhabited building was not required; however, a related charge of fourth degree arson arising out of damage caused by the fire to a parked motor vehicle would be deemed sufficient, since the indictment therefor contained an allegation that defendant intended to damage the vehicle itself by starting a fire in the garage next door. People v Keech, 121 Misc. 2d 368, 467 N.Y.S.2d 786, 1983 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3933 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1983).

Defendant's voluntary act of imbibing alcoholic beverage, knowing that he was prone to criminal acts while drunk and that consumption of even one drink would destroy his ability to resist further drinking, to point of intoxication, constituted recklessness per se; thus, although defendant was not guilty of second degree arson for setting fire to his apartment while intoxicated since he lacked specific intent to damage building, he was guilty of lesser included offense of fourth degree arson, defined as "recklessly damag[ing] building...by intentionally starting fire," and also first degree reckless endangerment. People v Tocco, 138 Misc. 2d 510, 525 N.Y.S.2d 137, 1988 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 50 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1988).

Because a showup identification was not unduly suggestive even though it was conducted simultaneously with a confirmatory showup by another witness, because the trial court properly admitted testimony that defendant unsuccessfully attempted to purchase a rifle the day before the crimes, defendant was properly convicted of attempted second-degree murder, third-degree criminal possession of a weapon, and fourth-degree arson under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 125.25(1), 265.02(1), 150.05(1). People v Rodriguez, 32 A.D.3d 1203, 821 N.Y.S.2d 331, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11145 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2006), app. denied, 8 N.Y.3d 849, 830 N.Y.S.2d 708, 862 N.E.2d 800, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 456 (N.Y. 2007).

2. Under former § 223

Evidence of defendant's drinking liquor subsequent to the fire was admissible, as bearing upon the question of guilt, intending to show what was his conduct and demeanor when engaged in matters connected with the fire, and in the course and disposition of which he was principally interested and a prominent actor. People v O'Neil, 112 N.Y. 355, 19 N.E. 796, 112 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 355, 20 N.Y. St. 754, 1889 N.Y. LEXIS 830 (N.Y. 1889).

This section is limited and qualified by § 225. People v Fanshawe, 137 N.Y. 68, 32 N.E. 1102, 137 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 68, 1893 N.Y. LEXIS 657 (N.Y. 1893).

An expression of intent to burn out a neighbor when not followed by any overt act for two years, is of slight consequence to prove that the person who threatened carried out the threat, since threats alone are not sufficient to identify the person who commits a crime. Circumstantial evidence, in order to sustain a conviction, must exclude every other reasonable hypothesis except the guilt of the defendant as an explanation of the circumstances proven. People v Whitlock, 187 A.D. 863, 176 N.Y.S. 436, 1919 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7117 (N.Y. App. Div. 1919).

Evidence was not admissible, as part of the res gestae, as to the statements made by a man who entered the burning house and received burns from which he soon died, as to the conditions that he observed therein, as he was away from the fire at the time and a substantial time had elapsed between the occurrence and the statements, and they were made in response to questions by third persons. People v Chapman, 191 A.D. 660, 181 N.Y.S. 750, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4779 (N.Y. App. Div. 1920).

If the testimony of an accomplice has been corroborated by facts and circumstances which tend to connect the defendant with the crime, it will be sufficient for a conviction even though the accomplice has been several times convicted of crime. People v Smith, 177 N.Y.S. 519, 108 Misc. 240, 1919 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 857 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1919).

Agency Opinions

1. In general

Person convicted of arson in any degree is, by statute, ineligible to become member of volunteer fire company, but issuance to that person of unrestricted certificate of relief from disabilities prevents automatic statutory disqualification; however, certificate does not prevent fire company or fire district commissioners from exercising discretion to deny membership based on facts and circumstances surrounding arson conviction. Person convicted of arson in any degree is, by statute, ineligible to hold office of fire district commissioner; certificate of relief from disabilities does not apply to public office such as fire district commissioner. 1998 NY Ops Atty Gen I 98-50.

§ 150.10. Arson in the third degree

1. A person is guilty of arson in the third degree when he intentionally damages a building or motor vehicle by starting a fire or causing an explosion.

2. In any prosecution under this section, it is an affirmative defense that (a) no person other than the defendant had a possessory or proprietary interest in the building or motor vehicle, or if other persons had such interests, all of them consented to the defendant's conduct, and (b) the defendant's sole intent was to destroy or damage the building or motor vehicle for a lawful and proper purpose, and (c) the defendant had no reasonable ground to believe that his conduct might endanger the life or safety of another person or damage another building or motor vehicle.

Arson in the third degree is a class C felony.

Evidence on motion to dismiss arson count of indictment that structure in question was an empty, vandalized and perhaps abandoned building presented at most a question of fact as to whether the structure was a "building" which could be the subject of the crime of arson in the third degree, and thus question was for determination by jury as part of the whole case and not by judge sitting without jury trying the matter as a separate issue. People v Richberg, 56 A.D.2d 279, 392 N.Y.S.2d 16, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10429 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1977).

Court erred in failing to determine whether defendant had possible defense to charge of arson in third degree where defendant pleaded guilty and, when asked why he started fire, stated that he was drunk and on drugs since arson in third degree requires specific intent to damage building and intoxication could have negated specific intent. People v Zeth, 148 A.D.2d 960, 538 N.Y.S.2d 963, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2635 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1989).

Fact that court found defendant not guilty of arson did not mean that she could not be convicted of third degree insurance fraud where proof was overwhelming that defendant was aware that fire was intentionally set to collect on insurance policy. People v Michael, 210 A.D.2d 874, 620 N.Y.S.2d 637, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13321 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1994), app. denied, 84 N.Y.2d 1035, 623 N.Y.S.2d 191, 647 N.E.2d 463, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 538 (N.Y. 1995).

Defendant's inability to recall events of fire did not affect her ability to understand consequences of agreement by which she pleaded guilty to third degree arson. Defendant's contention that her guilty plea to third degree arson was involuntary because she did not specifically waive insanity defense was without merit where, as part of plea agreement, she explicitly waived any viable defenses, she was adequately represented by counsel, and she informed County Court during prior court appearance that she was adamant that mental defect defense would not be raised at trial. People v Hall-Mizrahi, 238 A.D.2d 627, 655 N.Y.S.2d 697, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3154 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

In third degree arson prosecution arising from fire at trailer home owned by defendant and his wife, matter was remitted for hearing on restitution because, although defendant did not request hearing, record was insufficient for sentencing court to have ordered restitution as it did where (1) insurance company representative testified as to limits of insurance policy but stated that no money was actually paid to defendant because his claim was denied, and (2) lienholder, who was loss payee for damage to structure and had financial interest of $14,856, testified that insurance company paid him "around $8,500." People v Mangan, 258 A.D.2d 819, 686 N.Y.S.2d 506, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1959 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 927, 693 N.Y.S.2d 510, 715 N.E.2d 513, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1723 (N.Y. 1999).

Officer's observation of van emerging from driveway of burning animal kennel after business hours justified initial stop of van, in which defendant was passenger. People v Pistone, 284 A.D.2d 415, 727 N.Y.S.2d 439, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6120 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 642, 735 N.Y.S.2d 499, 761 N.E.2d 4, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 3697 (N.Y. 2001).

Based on information that one accomplice planned to purchase cocaine from another, along with evidence that the conspiracy had been ongoing, officers had probable cause to believe that defendant committed a conspiracy offense, but the People did not prove that officers had reasonable suspicion that defendant was concealing drug evidence at the time of the strip search; as there was a reasonable possibility that the admission of the cocaine and testimony regarding the search contributed to his convictions, they were reversed. People v Turner, 178 A.D.3d 70, 111 N.Y.S.3d 718, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7512 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2019).

Where a fireman died from a heart attack while fighting a fire which was the result of arson, the statutory requirement that a felony murder pursuant to Penal Law § 125.25 be committed in the course of an furtherance of the crime of arson was neither comprehensible nor applicable since arson is the only crime to which felony murder applies which is inherently dangerous to human life and where there is little likelihood of a personal confrontation. People v Lozano, 107 Misc. 2d 345, 434 N.Y.S.2d 588, 1980 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2891 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1980).

Appeals court affirmed judgment convicting defendant of three counts of N.Y. Penal Law § 150.10(1) arson in the third degree; defendant's guilty plea was knowing and voluntary, established guilt of each element of charges, and was not improvident or baseless. People v Page, 302 A.D.2d 628, 753 N.Y.S.2d 763, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 846 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 99 N.Y.2d 657, 760 N.Y.S.2d 121, 790 N.E.2d 295, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 1603 (N.Y. 2003).

Defendant's third-degree arson conviction was upheld, despite his reliance upon an affirmative defense under N.Y. Penal Law § 150.10(2), as: (1) he failed to establish that he was the only person with a possessory or proprietary interest in the affected building; (2) his own testimony confirmed that at least one of the individuals who was residing in the house was a month-to-month tenant to whom he failed to give the requisite 30 days notice before forcing him to vacate the premises; (3) given the arrears award owed to his ex-wife, coupled with his stated intent that he committed the arson and other crimes to preclude her from recovering those funds, he failed to establish her lack of a proprietary interest in the property; and (4) all of the aforementioned undermined his claim that his intent was for a lawful and proper purpose. People v Gigliuto, 22 A.D.3d 890, 803 N.Y.S.2d 216, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11173 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2005), app. denied, 7 N.Y.3d 789, 821 N.Y.S.2d 819, 854 N.E.2d 1283, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 2785 (N.Y. 2006).

Appeals court rejected defendant's claim of error that the felony complaint filed against him, quoting the language of a Penal Law section different from the language in the section set forth in the felony complaint, rendered the superior court information and the waiver of indictment jurisdictionally defective, as a specific reference in the felony complaint to N.Y. Penal Law § 150.10(1), along with the factual recitation, rendered the felony complaint legally sufficient to charge defendant with third-degree arson. People v Chianese, 41 A.D.3d 1168, 837 N.Y.S.2d 820, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6999 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2007), app. denied, 9 N.Y.3d 1032, 852 N.Y.S.2d 17, 881 N.E.2d 1204, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 356 (N.Y. 2008).

2. Evidence; admissibility

Failure to edit out portion of confession of defendant charged with arson in the second degree referring to the setting of other fires was error in that any probative value of said evidence was clearly outweighed by its prejudicial effect. People v Chaffee, 42 A.D.2d 172, 346 N.Y.S.2d 30, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3770 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1973).

Evidence of oral and written statements given by the defendant in an arson prosecution to a State Police investigator were properly admitted where district attorney had served defendant with an amended CPL § 710.30 notice, and where defendant's confession was properly corroborated by testimony of fire officials concerning the suspicious circumstances of the fire and by testimony from one of defendant's friends that defendant had admitted setting the fire. But trial court committed reversible error in holding that prosecution would be permitted to cross-examine defendant in regards to a prior arson which had occurred six years previously and for which defendant had never been charged since the court's ruling prevented the defendant from taking the stand, presumably out of fear of the impact of the impeachment testimony. People v Anderson, 80 A.D.2d 33, 437 N.Y.S.2d 985, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9741 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 54 N.Y.2d 682, 1981 N.Y. LEXIS 4671 (N.Y. 1981).

It was reversible error to allow evidence that defendant, charged with arson in third degree, had made insurance claims on 2 prior fire losses where there was no showing that prior fires were products of arson and such incidents had no direct connection with current case. Testimony was properly received in third degree arson case that defendant illegally offered to allow those persons who actually set fire to use credit cards in defendant's possession because arson and credit card scheme were inextricably intertwined and could not be divorced without emasculating People's case; however, it was not proper to admit testimony concerning other, irrelevant credit card crimes. People v Simpson, 122 A.D.2d 383, 505 N.Y.S.2d 201, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 59706 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

Defendant could not be convicted of third degree arson where only evidence linking him to crime was testimony of witness who saw unidentified man outside warehouse one hour before fire was discovered, although vehicle used by unidentified man matched vehicle defendant was seen using on night in question; assuming, arguendo, that man seen at warehouse was defendant, jury could not reasonably infer that defendant set fire. People v Mills, 138 A.D.2d 638, 526 N.Y.S.2d 222, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3110 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

In trial for third degree arson, court properly permitted testimony by undercover officer as to conversation between informant, officer and detective in which defendant asked whether he could participate in "other jobs" because he needed money; testimony was not evidence of uncharged crimes, since only actual crimes that have occurred can be uncharged crimes, but alluded more to defendant's character than any actual criminal activity committed by him. People v Morgan, 145 A.D.2d 442, 535 N.Y.S.2d 97, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12932 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Prosecution in arson trial failed to lay proper foundation for reliability of accelerant-sniffing dog where neither fire investigator testified to past performance or effectiveness of dog as accelerant sniffer. People v Dix, 242 A.D.2d 912, 662 N.Y.S.2d 879, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10473 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1997).

It was reversible error to allow defendant's unredacted statement to be admitted into evidence where bad acts and uncharged crimes referenced therein had no material bearing on third degree arson charges against him and could have only served to severely prejudice his case, court's sua sponte curative instructions at close of People's case compounded error by implying to jury that they could consider other matters in statement as to shooting of defendant's father and stabbing and bludgeoning of his former bosses in determining whether he was guilty of instant crimes, and statement was sent to jury for consideration during deliberations. People v Letendre, 247 A.D.2d 796, 669 N.Y.S.2d 439, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1856 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998), aff'd, 94 N.Y.2d 939, 709 N.Y.S.2d 497, 731 N.E.2d 153, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 525 (N.Y. 2000).

Court erred in allowing fire investigator to testify that "some human person ignited those fires"; however, error was harmless in light of overwhelming evidence of guilt. People v Champion, 247 A.D.2d 901, 668 N.Y.S.2d 857, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1239 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 971, 672 N.Y.S.2d 850, 695 N.E.2d 719, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 1511 (N.Y. 1998).

In a prosecution of the defendant for arson second degree, arson third degree, and the felony murder second degree of a fireman who died of a heart attack, the fact that the fireman had a previous weakened heart and might have met a similar fate from natural or accidental fires was of no legal consequence since the evidence established a direct spatiotemporal nexus between the fire and the death sufficient to warrant holding the defendant for a trial by jury on the charge of murder. People v Lozano, 107 Misc. 2d 345, 434 N.Y.S.2d 588, 1980 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2891 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1980).

3. —Circumstantial

Third degree arson conviction was supported by circumstantial evidence where defendant was only person in building at time of fire, he acknowledged that earlier same morning he was in basement where gasoline was found, he was seen removing items from house shortly before fire, and he had taken out renter's insurance policy day before fire. People v Flick, 147 A.D.2d 957, 537 N.Y.S.2d 403, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1424 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 73 N.Y.2d 921, 539 N.Y.S.2d 306, 536 N.E.2d 635, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 1334 (N.Y. 1989).

Circumstantial evidence was legally sufficient to support third degree arson conviction arising from fire at defendant's home, although there was virtually no evidence of defendant's motive, where fire investigator testified that fire had several separate points of origin and that he had eliminated all accidental sources of fire. People v Stabell, 270 A.D.2d 894, 706 N.Y.S.2d 553, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3573 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 804, 711 N.Y.S.2d 173, 733 N.E.2d 245, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 2178 (N.Y. 2000).

Sufficient circumstantial evidence supported defendant's conviction for arson in the third degree because, inter alia, a volunteer firefighter testified that he observed a green sedan parked across the street from a barn and then spotted a masked individual standing in the weeds, holding a red gas can, and a second eyewitness, who was driving by the barn, testified that she observed an individual run into the road carrying a red gas can and get into a green sedan. People v Marryshow, 162 A.D.3d 1313, 79 N.Y.S.3d 377, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4546 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2018).

4. —Insufficient

The conviction of a defendant for arson is reversed, the defendant having been convicted of arson, conspiracy and criminal solicitation, since although there was competent evidence from which defendant's guilt of conspiracy and solicitation could be inferred, this evidence did not create more than an inference of some undefined involvement by the defendant in the eventual arson itself, and the defendant was not so connected on the basis of the other circumstantial evidence in the case with the actual commission of the arson to the degree that his conduct negated a reasonable and innocent explanation; any inference of guilt drawn was within the range of conjecture and, accordingly, for the jury to have found the defendant guilty of the arson, it had to have done so on the strength of a few facts, which, viewed most favorably to the People, were inadequate as a matter of law to support an ultimate conclusion of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Although they may have furnished some grounds of suspicion, the episodes described were so riddled with subjective inferential links based on probabilities of low grade or insufficient degree that, on examining the evidence as a whole, the circumstantial evidence fell below the standards for determining its sufficiency. People v Piazza, 48 N.Y.2d 151, 422 N.Y.S.2d 9, 397 N.E.2d 700, 1979 N.Y. LEXIS 2343 (N.Y. 1979).

A grand jury indictment for third degree arson under Penal Law § 150.10 would be dismissed where the evidence presented to the grand jury was legally insufficient to support an arson indictment in that the arson statute contemplates a motor vehicle in operable condition, and the evidence presented indicated that defendant had set fire to a tow truck that had no battery and contained "no electric whatever," and where the prosecutor's instructions to the grand jury that "a motor vehicle is any vehicle not propelled by muscular power" but which omitted the phrase "operated . . . on a public highway" from the definition of "motor vehicle" were incorrect and so emasculated the statutory definition of "motor vehicle" in the context of the limited testimony provided to the grand jury as to prejudice the interests of defendant and impair the integrity of the grand jury. People v Carey, 120 Misc. 2d 862, 466 N.Y.S.2d 887, 1983 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3812 (N.Y. County Ct. 1983).

5. —Sufficient

Evidence was sufficient to present jury question with respect to damage within meaning of CLS Penal Law § 150.10, stating that person is guilty of arson in third degree when he intentionally "damages" building or motor vehicle, where fire expert testified that fire had caused charring to building's clapboards in 2 locations and that such charring, along with incidental damage cause by firefighters in pulling some boards away from foundation, plus owner's failure to repair building in 8 months since fire, had diminished value of building, despite opinion of officer of corporate owner of building that fire had not caused diminution of value or damage to building, and that corporation had made no insurance claim for property loss resulting from fire. People v McDonald, 68 N.Y.2d 1, 505 N.Y.S.2d 824, 496 N.E.2d 844, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 19362 (N.Y. 1986).

Defendant was properly convicted of arson in the third degree on evidence that the fire had been deliberately set, that he had previously owned the property damaged by the fire, that he believed that the present owner to whom he had sold the property had not paid him enough for it, and that he had a relative drive him to within one-half mile of the property shortly before the fire, told her to keep the engine running, returned in 10 to 15 minutes breathing hard and said "lets get out of here", took the wheel and drove away at a fast rate of speed. People v Landers, 107 A.D.2d 1022, 486 N.Y.S.2d 522, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 42834 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 65 N.Y.2d 696, 491 N.Y.S.2d 1036, 481 N.E.2d 264, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 14928 (N.Y. 1985).

Defendant's guilt of fourth degree conspiracy, third degree arson, and second degree murder was established by evidence that defendant (1) importuned coconspirator to throw military smoke-producing grenade, supplied by defendant, through living room window of house at time when he knew occupants would be asleep, (2) was aware that grenade explosion would emit flame likely to set carpet afire, and (3) intended to damage home by smoke from grenade; on these facts, jury was justified in concluding that defendant intentionally damaged house by starting fire or causing explosion, thereby establishing his guilt to arson, and hence felony murder as result of death of woman and her 3 children. People v Cisco, 129 A.D.2d 805, 514 N.Y.S.2d 796, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 45499 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Evidence was sufficient to support defendant's conviction for third degree arson involving building in which defendant operated dry-cleaning business where (1) defendant's brother was seen running from building immediately after fire started, (2) defendant and his brother, on day of fire, moved clothing from store and filled gas can found at scene, and (3) defendant doubled his business insurance coverage one month prior to fire and requested confirmation of increase less than one week before incident. People v Karadimas, 134 A.D.2d 952, 522 N.Y.S.2d 84, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 51160 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 933, 524 N.Y.S.2d 685, 519 N.E.2d 631, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19713 (N.Y. 1987).

Evidence supported third degree arson conviction, despite contention that there was no proof that defendant acted with requisite intent to damage building either by starting fire or acting as accessory to person who actually lit fire, where (1) defendant conceded that he was present inside building at time crime was committed, (2) fire was started with lighter and matches for express purpose of hiding fingerprints, (3) defendant had obtained books of matches earlier in same evening, and (4) defendant gave written statement to police that, after leaving building, he and companion looked back "to see if the fire was catching." People v Ames, 159 A.D.2d 1008, 552 N.Y.S.2d 735, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3330 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1990).

Evidence was sufficient to support conviction for third degree arson arising from fire at house which had recently been rented to city for purpose of housing foster children where (1) defendant and others were active in neighborhood organizations formed to oppose city's plans, and had threatened to burn house down, (2) on night of fire, codefendant lured security guard away from house, told uninvolved neighbor to stay in his house, and telephoned television news station to tell them that house might be burned down, (3) defendant joined with other codefendants and walked to rear of house, (4) sound of breaking glass was then heard and house was soon filled with smoke and flames, and (5) as house burned, defendant and others stood watching from across street and toasted fire with glasses of liquor. Ed. 2d 107, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 391 (U.S. 1992).

Conviction for attempted third degree arson was supported by evidence that defendant, after having argument with complainant, stated that he was going to burn her car, and that complainant and 2 other people then saw defendant pour gasoline on tire and hood of car and put flaming cigarette lighter, which was extinguished by wind, near gasoline. People v Clemmons, 173 A.D.2d 723, 570 N.Y.S.2d 611, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8207 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 78 N.Y.2d 964, 574 N.Y.S.2d 943, 580 N.E.2d 415, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 4321 (N.Y. 1991).

Conviction for third degree arson was supported by evidence that defendant had made threats against complainant and then left burning trash bag against door of his apartment, thus allowing jury to reasonably infer that defendant intended that building would be damaged by fire. People v Utsey, 182 A.D.2d 575, 582 N.Y.S.2d 433, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6355 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 80 N.Y.2d 839, 587 N.Y.S.2d 923, 600 N.E.2d 650, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 2061 (N.Y. 1992).

Defendant's conviction for third degree arson was supported by his admission to police, 2 days after fire at his place of employment, that he broke into building and poured gasoline around inside, and that he must have started fire but could not remember; although he took stand at trial and denied his participation in arson, there was no evidence to support reasonable alternative explanation for arson as cause of fire. People v Coneen, 191 A.D.2d 839, 594 N.Y.S.2d 897, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2384 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 1012, 600 N.Y.S.2d 200, 616 N.E.2d 857, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 2406 (N.Y. 1993).

Defendant's guilt of third degree arson was supported by his financial motive, his sole opportunity to set fire, and his suspicious conduct observed only minutes before fire was set. LEXIS 1648 (N.Y. 2000).

Defendant's guilt of third degree arson was supported by evidence showing that, on day before fire, he moved his personal belongings out of his mobile home and dug his automobile out of snow and moved it across street from his mobile home, he told one witness of his plan to set his mobile home on fire, he purchased insurance policy on mobile home few weeks before fire, and witnesses observed him in his automobile leaving area of mobile home in haste shortly before fire. Defendant's arson conviction under N.Y. Penal Law § 150.10(1) was supported by sufficient evidence, was not against the manifest weight of the evidence, and was corroborated under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 60.50 where: (1) defendant's written statement provided that she used her cigarette lighter to set fire to the interior of her neighbor's garage, went home and called 911; (2) defendant was home on the night of the fire; (3) the origin of the fire was consistent with defendant's description; and (4) the neighbor testified that, in addition to notifying him of the fire on the night in question, defendant approached him the following day and expressed an interest in purchasing the property. People v Flemming, 101 A.D.3d 1483, 956 N.Y.S.2d 678, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9082 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2012), app. denied, 21 N.Y.3d 942, 968 N.Y.S.2d 4, 990 N.E.2d 138, 2013 N.Y. Defendant's arson conviction under N.Y. Penal Law § 150.10(1) was supported by sufficient evidence, was not against the manifest weight of the evidence, and was corroborated under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 60.50 where: (1) defendant's written statement indicated that she approached the back porch of her prior residence, after sliding open a window, used her cigarette lighter to set fire to a set of sheer curtains, returned to her residence, could hear the smoke alarm going off and called the Sheriff's Department; (2) although defendant told a trooper that she had heard the smoke alarm from inside her own kitchen, two troopers did not hear the alarm when they exited their vehicles and could not hear it until they actually approached the residence; (3) a trooper saw the fire directly beneath the window; (4) defendant' was in the general vicinity of the fire on the night in question; and (5) the troopers' testimony as to the location of the fire and observation of a melted curtain near the rear window were consistent with defendant's statement. People v Flemming, 101 A.D.3d 1483, 956 N.Y.S.2d 678, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9082 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2012), app. denied, 21 N.Y.3d 942, 968 N.Y.S.2d 4, 990 N.E.2d 138, 2013 N.Y. Defendant's arson conviction under N.Y. Penal Law § 150.10(1) was supported by sufficient evidence, was not against the manifest weight of the evidence, and was corroborated under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 60.50 where: (1) defendant's written statement indicated that she used the cigarette she was smoking to set fire to the papers in her husband's truck, the fire spread to the center console area and rear floor board, she struck up a conversation with her neighbors, and a neighbor noticed the fire and extinguished it with a garden hose; (2) the neighbor attested the her conversation with defendant and role in extinguishing the fire; and (3) the fire investigator opined that the fire started in the center console, ruled out all natural and/or accidental causes of the fire, and opined that if papers had been set on fire underneath or near the rear of the center console/armrest, that was consistent with a possible cause of the fire. People v Flemming, 101 A.D.3d 1483, 956 N.Y.S.2d 678, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9082 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2012), app. denied, 21 N.Y.3d 942, 968 N.Y.S.2d 4, 990 N.E.2d 138, 2013 N.Y. Defendant's attempted arson conviction under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00 and 150.10(1) was supported by sufficient evidence, was not against the manifest weight of the evidence, and was corroborated under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 60.50 where: (1) defendant's written statement indicated that she entered the rear porch of that residence and, using her cigarette lighter, set fire to some cardboard and papers inside of a recycling bin, that as she was reentering her back yard, she heard someone on the rear porch of the residence and returned to discover the homeowner dousing the fire with water, and that she then used some dirt to help put out the fire, returned home and called 911; (2) a fire investigator observed some charred cardboard on the porch of the residence next to the recycling bin; (3) a cigarette butt was found at the scene; and (4) the DNA on the cigarette butt matched defendant's DNA. People v Flemming, 101 A.D.3d 1483, 956 N.Y.S.2d 678, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9082 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2012), app. denied, 21 N.Y.3d 942, 968 N.Y.S.2d 4, 990 N.E.2d 138, 2013 N.Y. N.Y. Penal Law § 150.15, relying on the definition of a person in N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00, requires that the person be alive when the fire is started; there was insufficient evidence to support defendant's second-degree arson conviction since there was no evidence that the victims were still alive when defendant set the fires, but there was sufficient evidence to support a third-degree arson conviction as defendant intentionally damaged a building by starting a fire in the home. People v Taylor, 158 A.D.3d 1095, 72 N.Y.S.3d 256, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 782 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), reh'g denied, 160 A.D.3d 1506, 72 N.Y.S.3d 918, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2995 (N.Y. An indictment for second degree arson pursuant to Penal L § 150.15, based on an allegation that defendant had set fire to a garage and that the fire had spread to an inhabited building next door, would be dismissed with leave to the People to re=present the charge to a new grand jury pursuant to CPL § 210.20(4) where, though a grand jury could find circumstantial evidence of defendant's intent to burn the inhabited building by starting the fire in the garage, the grand jury had erroneously been instructed that intent to damage the inhabited building was not required; however, a related charge of fourth degree arson arising out of damage caused by the fire to a parked motor vehicle would be deemed sufficient, since the indictment therefor contained an allegation that defendant intended to damage the vehicle itself by starting a fire in the garage next door. People v Keech, 121 Misc. 2d 368, 467 N.Y.S.2d 786, 1983 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3933 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1983).

Evidence that defendant allowed former boyfriend to use defendant's mother's car earlier in the evening and that defendant drove the boyfriend to another person's residence later that same night, waited in the car while the boyfriend relit a fire the boyfriend had set at the residence, and drove the boyfriend to defendant's house after he restarted the fire was sufficient to corroborate the boyfriend's testimony that defendant knew the boyfriend was going to set the fire and assisted the boyfriend in doing so, and the appellate court sustained defendant's convictions on charges of burglary in the second degree, arson in the third degree, assault in the second degree, and criminal mischief in the second degree. People v Wood, 299 A.D.2d 739, 751 N.Y.S.2d 106, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11391 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2002), app. denied, 99 N.Y.2d 621, 757 N.Y.S.2d 833, 787 N.E.2d 1179, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 693 (N.Y. 2003).

Evidence was legally sufficient to support a conviction for third degree arson because the People presented evidence establishing that defendant had stated that he was going to get the arson victim, he wanted the building to burn down once it caught fire, he admitted setting the fire, and his hands smelled of gasoline. People v Adams, 43 A.D.3d 1423, 842 N.Y.S.2d 848, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10174 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 9 N.Y.3d 1004, 850 N.Y.S.2d 392, 880 N.E.2d 878, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 3900 (N.Y. 2007).

Based on evidence that the fire was set intentionally, that defendant was the only person in the building with access to the location where the fire started near the time when the fire was detected, and that defendant was having financial difficulty at the time, the jury's verdict was not against the weight of the evidence; to the extent that defendant's arson investigator testified-in contrast to the opinions provided by the People's witnesses-that the fire started in the ceiling between the first and second floors of the common hallway and that an electrical cause could not be ruled out, that testimony presented a credibility determination for the jury. People v Stevens, 84 A.D.3d 1424, 922 N.Y.S.2d 596, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3601 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 17 N.Y.3d 822, 929 N.Y.S.2d 811, 954 N.E.2d 102, 2011 N.Y. LEXIS 2842 (N.Y. 2011).

Defendant's conviction for arson in the third degree was supported by sufficient evidence because the trailer that defendant set fire to was within the definition of "building," as it was enclosed by walls, covered by a roof, designed to stand permanently, and served a useful purpose. People v Norcutt, 115 A.D.3d 1306, 982 N.Y.S.2d 661, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2110 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 23 N.Y.3d 966, 988 N.Y.S.2d 573, 11 N.E.3d 723, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 1657 (N.Y. 2014).

Defendant's conviction for arson in the third degree was supported by sufficient evidence because the trailer that defendant set fire to was within the definition of "building," as it was used for overnight lodging on vacations or weekend retreats. People v Norcutt, 115 A.D.3d 1306, 982 N.Y.S.2d 661, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2110 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 23 N.Y.3d 966, 988 N.Y.S.2d 573, 11 N.E.3d 723, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 1657 (N.Y. 2014).

Defendant's conviction for arson in the third degree was not against the weight of the evidence because there was no evidence that the jury was swayed by improper factors. People v Norcutt, 115 A.D.3d 1306, 982 N.Y.S.2d 661, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2110 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 23 N.Y.3d 966, 988 N.Y.S.2d 573, 11 N.E.3d 723, 2014 N.Y. 6. Lesser included offenses

Court properly denied defendant's request to charge attempted fourth degree arson as lesser included offense of attempted third degree arson since there is no such crime; person is guilty of CLS Penal § 150.05(1) fourth degree arson when he recklessly damages building or motor vehicle by intentionally starting fire or causing explosion (damage must thus ensue from reckless conduct), but person is guilty of attempt to commit crime only when he intends to commit that crime. People v DeJesus, 190 A.D.2d 1012, 593 N.Y.S.2d 633, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1206 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 969, 598 N.Y.S.2d 770, 615 N.E.2d 227, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 1938 (N.Y. 1993).

Court properly submitted fourth degree arson as lesser included offense of third degree arson where evidence of defendant's intoxication was sufficient to negate intent element and allow finding of recklessness, leaving to fact finder whether extent of intoxication acted to negate intent element; fact that counts of third degree arson and fourth degree arson required showing of different culpable mental states did not preclude finding that latter was lesser included offense of former. People v Borst, 232 A.D.2d 727, 648 N.Y.S.2d 720, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10257 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 940, 655 N.Y.S.2d 891, 678 N.E.2d 504, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 535 (N.Y. 1997).

As defendant orally admitted that he intentionally set a fire on his mother's apartment porch, which resulted in the destruction or damage to several apartment buildings and injuries to two volunteer firefighters, and he further admitted that he knew or should have known that the building was occupied and that firefighters would have been called to the scene, his convictions for arson in the third degree and reckless endangerment in the first degree, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 150.10(1) and 120.25, were proper; the element of defendant's scienter was sufficiently proved by his admissions and the plea colloquy. People v Anderson, 38 A.D.3d 1061, 831 N.Y.S.2d 582, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2862 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 8 N.Y.3d 981, 838 N.Y.S.2d 484, 869 N.E.2d 660, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 1864 (N.Y. 2007).

7. Sentencing

Where at time of entry of guilty plea parties apparently relied on Penal L § 150.05 as it read prior to 1971 amendment which raised attempted arson in the third degree from a class A misdemeanor to the class D felony; thus guilty plea in sentence should be vacated and case remitted. People v Bradshaw, 41 A.D.2d 658, 340 N.Y.S.2d 669, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5163 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1973).

Where indictment charged arson in the second degree but facts contained in indictment were sufficient only to sustain charge of arson in third degree and defendant pled guilty to facts amounting to arson in third degree, sentence for arson in the second degree was improper and would be remanded for resentencing for crime of arson in third degree. People v Hutchins, 43 A.D.2d 412, 352 N.Y.S.2d 520, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5665 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

Seven-year sentence of imprisonment imposed upon twenty-two year-old defendant convicted on guilty plea to arson in third degree would be modified, in interest of justice, as matter of discretion, by reducing sentence to maximum term of three years where, inter alia, defendant's record was unblemished until incident occurred which resulted in present conviction and where one of defendant's former employers furnished court with testimonial respecting defendant's good character. People v Record, 51 A.D.2d 677, 378 N.Y.S.2d 156, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11040 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1976).

Sentence of indeterminate term of imprisonment not to exceed four years imposed upon defendant who was convicted of arson in the third degree as the result of fire in the home where defendant resided with his wife and two children and a vacant house next door was not unduly harsh or excessive. People v Perry, 52 A.D.2d 963, 382 N.Y.S.2d 845, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12831 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976).

Court properly imposed harshest penalty for third degree arson conviction (5 to 15 years in prison), despite facts that defendant was acquitted on related murder charges and he had not been previously convicted of any prior felony, where he set fire to house to prevent or hinder authorities from obtaining evidence of 3 vicious murders. People v La Veglia, 215 A.D.2d 836, 626 N.Y.S.2d 314, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4787 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1995).

Sentence of 3 to 6 years for third degree arson as second felony offender was not excessive where it was in accordance with plea agreement, and there were no extraordinary circumstances warranting reduction under CLS CPL § 470.15(6)(b). People v Trumbach, 246 A.D.2d 912, 667 N.Y.S.2d 322, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 744 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Court properly enhanced defendant's sentence for attempted third degree arson, as second felony offender, to 3 ½ to 7 years where defendant violated his cooperation agreement to fully, fairly, and truthfully disclose all information, as determined by prosecution. People v Anonymous, 251 A.D.2d 179, 675 N.Y.S.2d 865, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7369 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1998).

In prosecution for third degree arson, second degree criminal mischief, and child endangerment, defendant was entitled to hearing on amount of restitution to be paid, and case would be remitted for that purpose, where record did not contain sufficient evidence to support amount ordered. People v Wilson, 275 A.D.2d 1035, 714 N.Y.S.2d 920, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9588 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 808, 726 N.Y.S.2d 386, 750 N.E.2d 88, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1817 (N.Y. 2001).

Maximum sentence of 25 years, as second felony offender, for second degree arson and first degree reckless endangerment was not excessive and would not be reduced in interest of justice where fact that no one was injured by 5 separate fires set by defendant in theater complex was fortuitous rather than indicative of lack of vicious intent, defendant lacked remorse, and sentencing court properly considered defendant's suppressed confession to present arson as well as another in college dormitory. People v Brown, 281 A.D.2d 700, 728 N.Y.S.2d 100, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2312 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 826, 729 N.Y.S.2d 446, 754 N.E.2d 206, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2089 (N.Y. 2001).

Sentence to four consecutive 15-year prison terms for 4 separate second degree burglaries, and concurrent term of 7 ½ to 15 years for third degree arson, although long, was not excessive where it fell within permissible range for those crimes, defendant had prior criminal record, and there were no extraordinary circumstances warranting modification. People v Cleveland, 281 A.D.2d 815, 721 N.Y.S.2d 876, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3000 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 900, 730 N.Y.S.2d 797, 756 N.E.2d 85, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2752 (N.Y. 2001).

Defendant's sentence to imprisonment upon his conviction for arson in the third degree was not unduly harsh or severe because he had a significant criminal history and was thus properly sentenced as a persistent felony offender. People v Norcutt, 115 A.D.3d 1306, 982 N.Y.S.2d 661, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2110 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 23 N.Y.3d 966, 988 N.Y.S.2d 573, 11 N.E.3d 723, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 1657 (N.Y. 2014).

8. Verdict

Trial court's acquittal of defendant on greater charges of arson in first, second and third degrees was not inconsistent with his conviction of fourth degree arson, since verdict was logically explained as limited acceptance of intoxication defense to extent of finding that defendant intentionally set fire but recklessly, not intentionally, damaged building. People v Gerasimovic, 124 A.D.2d 593, 507 N.Y.S.2d 873, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 61905 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Notwithstanding that single overt act alleged in conspiracy count was setting of fire identically described in arson count, defendants' conviction for conspiracy was not fatally inconsistent with their acquittal on arson count; crime of conspiracy is embracive and covers all overt acts and substantive crimes in persisting criminal enterprise, proof of any of which may support conviction, and since there was ample evidence of other conduct which jury could find was in furtherance of conspiracy, verdicts were not repugnant. People v Springer, 127 A.D.2d 250, 514 N.Y.S.2d 555, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 41509 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987), aff'd, 71 N.Y.2d 997, 529 N.Y.S.2d 275, 524 N.E.2d 876, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 715 (N.Y. 1988).

Jury verdict convicting defendant of first degree insurance fraud was not repugnant to acquittal of third degree arson since (1) jury could have found that People failed to prove that fire intentionally set by defendant resulted in "damage" to building, which was necessary element of arson under CLS Penal § 150.10, and (2) such determination was not inconsistent with jury's further finding that defendant intentionally set fire in attempt to obtain property in excess of $1,500 through fraudulent insurance claim, in violation of CLS Penal former § 176.20. People v Amar, 134 A.D.2d 601, 522 N.Y.S.2d 5, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50808 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Court properly set aside jury verdict finding defendant guilty of third degree arson, first degree insurance fraud, and second degree grand larceny, despite fact that there was evidence to show that defendant had possible motive to start fire at his restaurant, since (1) People did not establish when fire started, (2) there was one-hour hiatus between time of defendant's presence at restaurant and time when fire department responded to alarm, (3) defendant was not only person with access to restaurant keys, and (4) there was no evidence connecting defendant to accelerant used to start fire. People v Zurzolo, 143 A.D.2d 286, 532 N.Y.S.2d 173, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8930 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988), aff'd, 74 N.Y.2d 680, 543 N.Y.S.2d 385, 541 N.E.2d 414, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 653 (N.Y. 1989).

Defendant's conviction of reckless endangerment in the second degree was not inconsistent with her acquittal of arson in the third degree because, although defendant argued that the acquittal of arson, when viewed in tandem with her conviction of conspiracy in the fourth and fifth degrees and insurance fraud in the third degree, implied that the jury found that she had not started the fire either personally or acting in concert with others, conspiracy was an embracive crime, covering all of the overt acts and substantive crimes in the persisting criminal enterprise, and not necessarily the actual commission of the crime that was the object of the conspiracy; hence, contrary to defendant's argument, the jury was not required to determine that defendant intentionally damaged the apartment building by setting a fire in order to convict defendant upon the conspiracy counts, but, rather, the jury was required to find that defendant committed an overt act in furtherance of the conspiracy. Likewise, insurance fraud required a finding that defendant intentionally concealed the cause of the fire on her insurance claim, and the jury was not further obliged to find that she intended to damage the apartment building by setting the fire. People v Pagan, 87 A.D.3d 1181, 929 N.Y.S.2d 332, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6325 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2011), app. denied, 18 N.Y.3d 885, 939 N.Y.S.2d 755, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 405 (N.Y. 2012).

II. Under Former § 222

9. In general

Knowledge by defendant of existence of fire insurance on contents of building, which he is charged with attempting to burn, is essential to conviction under § 222, subd. 5. People v Popoff, 289 N.Y. 344, 45 N.E.2d 904, 289 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 344, 1942 N.Y. LEXIS 957 (N.Y. 1942).

Where there is no proof that defendant, insurance adjuster, had knowledge of insurance of building, defendant could not have intended to defraud and injure insurance company. People v

Shields, 242 A.D. 846, 275 N.Y.S. 483, 1934 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7884 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1934), aff'd, 266 N.Y. 200, 194 N.E. 407, 266 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 200, 1935 N.Y. LEXIS 1358 (N.Y. 1935).

To convict of arson in the second degree it must be shown that the building touched another, or was within the curtilage thereof. Peverelly v People (1855) 3 Park Crim 59.

10. Indictment

District attorney was not bound to elect under what subdivision of this section he was proceeding. Indictment is not insufficient in that it charged defendant with attempt to burn his own house. People v Rosen, 251 A.D. 584, 297 N.Y.S. 877, 1937 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7003 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 275 N.Y. 627, 11 N.E.2d 790, 275 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 627, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1599 (N.Y. 1937).

Where a first indictment by one grand jury was for second degree arson under subd. 2 of this section, and likewise for perjury, that indictment was dismissed with a direction to resubmit the matter to the same grand jury, instead of which it was resubmitted to a different Grand Jury which, without hearing witnesses anew, indicted defendant for violating subd. 5 of this section, validity of the second indictment was at least doubtful. People v Decker, 11 A.D.2d 600, 200 N.Y.S.2d 655, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9963 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), limited, People v Grossman, 35 Misc. 2d 488, 230 N.Y.S.2d 852, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2867 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

A count of an indictment charging attempted arson of a building with intent to defraud the insurer thereof should be dismissed where there is no proof of any insurance on the building, notwithstanding proof of existence of insurance on its contents. People v Moore, 18 A.D.2d 417, 239 N.Y.S.2d 967, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3801 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), aff'd, 13 N.Y.2d 1070, 246 N.Y.S.2d 216, 195 N.E.2d 894, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 820 (N.Y. 1963).

Count in indictment which charges defendant with setting fire to building with intent to burn same, which building was insured against loss and damage by fire, with unlawful and fraudulent intent to defraud insurer is sufficient under subd. 5, of this section without alleging name of insurer. Count in indictment which charges defendant with setting fire to building with intent to burn it, which building adjoined and stood in close proximity to inhabited building in which there was human being at time is sufficient under subd. 3 this section. Question whether or not burned building was in close proximity to another building which was inhabited is question to be determined on trial and cannot be considered on demurrer. People v Kalbfeld, 207 N.Y.S. 744, 124 Misc. 200, 1924 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1094 (N.Y. County Ct. 1924).

A prisoner may be convicted of arson in the second degree under an indictment charging that offense, even though the facts would have justified a conviction of a higher grade of crime under an indictment properly framed. People v Durkin (1862) 5 Park Crim 243.

11. Admissibility and competency of evidence

No inference of incendiarism could be properly drawn from fact that defendant, after discovery of fire, sought to protect his house, rather than to extinguish fire in barn which was filled with hay and was bound to be consumed no matter what efforts might be made to stop it, since under such circumstances the only rational course for defendant to pursue was to protect his residence, if possible. People v Lewis, 275 N.Y. 33, 9 N.E.2d 765, 275 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 33, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1397 (N.Y. 1937).

Evidence as to insurance policies owned by the defendant's uncle, covering the burned house, was erroneously admitted where there was no claim of complicity of the uncle in the crime. People v Nicolia, 287 N.Y. 398, 39 N.E.2d 929, 287 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 398, 1942 N.Y. LEXIS 1097 (N.Y. 1942).

On a trial for arson it is error to admit evidence of an admission by the defendant to an insurance adjuster that he had fires at three other places within two years. People v Brown, 110 A.D. 490, 96 N.Y.S. 957, 1906 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12 (N.Y. App. Div. 1906), aff'd, 188 N.Y. 554, 80 N.E. 1115, 188 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 554, 1907 N.Y. LEXIS 1178 (N.Y. 1907).

Evidence of insurance is admissible on the question of motive, and also as one of the existing circumstances, particularly where consideration of subd. 5 has been withdrawn from the jury. People v Rosen, 251 A.D. 584, 297 N.Y.S. 877, 1937 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7003 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 275 N.Y. 627, 11 N.E.2d 790, 275 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 627, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1599 (N.Y. 1937).

The surrounding facts and circumstances, relative to the fire, are always material and proper as evidence. People v Bloodgood, 251 A.D. 593, 298 N.Y.S. 91, 1937 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7005 (N.Y. App. Div. 1937).

In the trial, on a charge of arson, where the defendant's confession stated that he lighted the fire which resulted in his indictment and prosecution by throwing a lighted cigarette into a closet of his home in which had been placed a model airplane containing inflammable liquid, it was no abuse of the trial court's discretion to refuse, on the voir dire examination to determine the admissibility of the confession, to permit defendant's counsel to perform an experiment designed to demonstrate conditions which it was claimed would result in the snuffing of a lighted cigarette, when the demonstration had none of the characteristics which obtained in the defendant's home on the day of the fire. People v Bolster, 24 A.D.2d 774, 263 N.Y.S.2d 574, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3194 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

12. —Accomplice testimony

In a prosecution for attempted arson, admissions by co-conspirator or accomplice, made during the commission of the crime or in furtherance of its purpose, are competent, but statements made by him after the crime has been consummated are incompetent and inadmissible. People v Vaccaro, 288 N.Y. 170, 42 N.E.2d 472, 288 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 170, 1942 N.Y. LEXIS 1023 (N.Y. 1942).

Judgment convicting the defendant of the crime of arson in the second degree must be reversed and a new trial granted where it appears that the defendant was charged with employing codefendants to burn a building "with intent to prejudice or defraud the insurer thereof," in violation of § 222, subd. 5; that the verdict of conviction is against the weight of the credible evidence; that the attempted corroboration of the accomplices, who testified for the prosecution, was insufficient; that the charge of the trial court on corroboration was erroneous in that it was not sufficiently full, clear and explicit as to the testimony of the corroborating witnesses, and that the evidence failed to establish intent to defraud the insurer of the premises. People v Lashkowitz, 257 A.D. 518, 13 N.Y.S.2d 663, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7796 (N.Y. App. Div.), reh'g denied, 258 A.D. 828, 15 N.Y.S.2d 625, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7138 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

Where the only evidence against the defendant was that of accomplices who were unsatisfactorily corroborated, it was not sufficient for a conviction. People v Neilson, 261 A.D. 1021, 25 N.Y.S.2d 853, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8577 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

13. Jury questions

In a prosecution under subd. 5, where there was no evidence connecting the defendant with the insurance or proof that he had knowledge of the insurance, and nothing from which an inference could be drawn that he attempted to burn the premises so that his brother-in-law, the owner, could collect the insurance, it was error for the court to allow the jury to take into consideration the fact that the owner was insured. People v Goldberg, 146 A.D. 335, 130 N.Y.S. 708, 1911 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1887 (N.Y. App. Div. 1911).

Whether the defendant acted innocently or in furtherance of a criminal conspiracy to burn a building is a question for the jury. People v Bloodgood, 251 A.D. 593, 298 N.Y.S. 91, 1937 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7005 (N.Y. App. Div. 1937).

14. Sufficiency of evidence

An admission by the defendant that he hired another to burn an insured building is sufficient to sustain a conviction. People v La Barbera, 274 N.Y. 339, 8 N.E.2d 884, 274 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 339, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 851 (N.Y. 1937).

A farmer has prima facie no motive for burning his barn, but rather strong motive to the contrary, and evidence that he had stocked his barn with grain for his dairy herd after issuance of the insurance established a lack of motive. Evidence that defendant purchased can of kerosene; that he was seen going to milk house in southeast corner of barn with what looked like a can; that thereafter flames were seen coming from west or south end of barn and that wind was blowing from southwest, was insufficient to sustain theory that defendant entered milk house with kerosene, left it by way of door opening into alleyway, proceeded along alleyway to cow stable, and through cow stable to main floor where he set barn on fire at a point which wind would be expected to carry flames so that entire barn might be consumed. People v Lewis, 275 N.Y. 33, 9 N.E.2d 765, 275 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 33, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1397 (N.Y. 1937).

A conviction cannot be had under subd. 5 of this section upon proof that the defendant committed arson in the third degree as defined in § 223, by hiring two persons to burn his wife's barn not necessarily found by the jury, under the instructions of the court, to have been insured. People v Butler, 62 A.D. 508, 71 N.Y.S. 129, 1901 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1285 (N.Y. App. Div. 1901).

A conviction under subd. 5 may be sustained on evidence tending to show that the defendant transferred the property in question to a third person, without the payment of any consideration, under an agreement with said third person to burn the property so that the defendant could procure the insurance. People v Badger, 217 A.D. 424, 216 N.Y.S. 723, 1926 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7826 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 243 N.Y. 632, 154 N.E. 635, 243 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 632, 1926 N.Y. LEXIS 927 (N.Y. 1926).

Conviction of arson in second degree was substantiated by evidence of kerosene all around the premises, together with bags of waste and candles, where defendant's shoes smelled of kerosene immediately after fire and he was only person who had means of access to store. People v Weiss, 263 A.D. 722, 30 N.Y.S.2d 638, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4713 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

Person convicted of arson in any degree is, by statute, ineligible to become member of volunteer fire company, but issuance to that person of unrestricted certificate of relief from disabilities prevents automatic statutory disqualification; however, certificate does not prevent fire company or fire district commissioners from exercising discretion to deny membership based on facts and circumstances surrounding arson conviction. Person convicted of arson in any degree is, by statute, ineligible to hold office of fire district commissioner; certificate of relief from disabilities does not apply to public office such as fire district commissioner. 1998 NY Ops Atty Gen I 98-50.

Statute providing that person is guilty of arson in second degree when he attempts to damage building by starting fire, rather than statute providing that person is guilty of arson in first degree for intentionally damaging building by causing explosion, applied to conduct of defendant, who threw Molotov cocktail through window of ground floor apartment where alleged assailant of defendant lived. People v McCrawford, 47 A.D.2d 318, 366 N.Y.S.2d 424, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9235 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1975).

People were properly permitted to amend indictment during second degree arson trial, even though indictment charged defendant with setting fire to "building," where evidence and instructions provided to grand jury had specified "dwelling" and amendment did not change People's theory of case so as to prejudice defendant on merits, or cure legal insufficiency in respect to factual allegations. People v Jones, 186 A.D.2d 46, 587 N.Y.S.2d 646, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10588 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1992), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 842, 595 N.Y.S.2d 741, 611 N.E.2d 780, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 922 (N.Y. 1993).

Defendant's responses during plea allocution did not prove elements of second degree arson and even negated at least one element, and thus conviction of that crime on his guilty plea would be reversed, where he did not admit that he intended to damage occupied building when he set fire to unoccupied building connected to occupied building by breezeway, he admitted placing burning papers in basement of unoccupied building with intent to "burn that building down," and he confirmed court's statement that he intentionally damaged building that was not occupied; negation of element of crime brought defendant's appeal within exception to preservation rule despite absence of motion to withdraw or vacate plea. People v Makas, 273 A.D.2d 510, 709 N.Y.S.2d 650, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6448 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Trial court erred in denying defendant's motion to withdraw his plea because defendant's sworn affidavit, together with the comments by the prosecutor and the court at sentencing, that he was intoxicated at the time of a fire and that he was never advised of the impact of intoxication on the intent required for the crime of arson under N.Y. Penal Law § 150.15 raised the possibility of an intoxication defense. People v Maxson, 101 A.D.3d 1384, 956 N.Y.S.2d 301, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8783 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2012).

Where defendant was accused of setting fire to uninhabited building, and fire spread to adjacent inhabited building, such occurrence was foreseeable consequence of original act without any supervening cause, and defendant could properly be charged with arson in second degree. People v Davis, 89 Misc. 2d 535, 392 N.Y.S.2d 195, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1892 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1977).

Reasonable cause exists for the belief that defendants, both 14 years old, by lighting a torch for the purpose of illumination during the commission of a burglary and then leaving the fire burning on the wooden floor in close proximity to readily combustible objects ultimately resulting in the deaths of six persons, committed the crimes of arson in the second degree (Penal Law, § 150.15) and felony murder (Penal Law, § 125.25, subd 3) and, accordingly, their cases must be held for the action of the Grand Jury and cannot be removed to Family Court over the objection of the District Attorney. People v Torres, 99 Misc. 2d 767, 417 N.Y.S.2d 575, 1978 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2930 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1978).

In a prosecution of the defendant for arson second degree, arson third degree, and the felony murder second degree of a fireman who died of a heart attack, the fact that the fireman had a previous weakened heart and might have met a similar fate from natural or accidental fires was of no legal consequence since the evidence established a direct spatiotemporal nexus between the fire and the death sufficient to warrant holding the defendant for a trial by jury on the charge of murder. Where a fireman died from a heart attack while fighting a fire which was the result of arson, the statutory requirement that a felony murder pursuant to Penal Law § 125.25 be committed in the course of an furtherance of the crime of arson was neither comprehensible nor applicable since arson is the only crime to which felony murder applies which is inherently dangerous to human life and where there is little likelihood of a personal confrontation. People v Lozano, 107 Misc. 2d 345, 434 N.Y.S.2d 588, 1980 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2891 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1980).

An indictment for second degree arson pursuant to Penal L § 150.15, based on an allegation that defendant had set fire to a garage and that the fire had spread to an inhabited building next door, would be dismissed with leave to the People to represent the charge to a new grand jury pursuant to CPL § 210.20(4) where, though a grand jury could find circumstantial evidence of defendant's intent to burn the inhabited building by starting the fire in the garage, the grand jury had erroneously been instructed that intent to damage the inhabited building was not required; however, a related charge of fourth degree arson arising out of damage caused by the fire to a parked motor vehicle would be deemed sufficient, since the indictment therefor contained an allegation that defendant intended to damage the vehicle itself by starting a fire in the garage next door. People v Keech, 121 Misc. 2d 368, 467 N.Y.S.2d 786, 1983 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3933 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1983).

In a case in which an alien, who was a lawful permanent resident, appealed the Board of Immigration Appeals' order affirming an immigration judge's finding that he was removable and ineligible for cancellation of removal, the appellate court lacked jurisdiction. The alien had pled guilty to attempted arson in the second degree, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 150.15 and 110.00, and he was sentenced to a term of imprisonment of 18 to 54 months; attempted arson in the second degree was a crime of violence under 18 U.S.C.S. § 16(b), and an aggravated felony under Immigration and Nationality Act § 101(a)(43)(F) and (U). Santana v Holder, 714 F.3d 140, 2013 U.S. App. LEXIS 7925 (2d Cir. 2013).

2. Constitutional considerations

A defendant was properly convicted of attempted arson and his motion to suppress certain of his inculpatory statements for alleged violations of his right to counsel was properly denied where it was clear from the record that he had not requested an attorney prior to his being questioned. People v Morris, 83 A.D.2d 691, 442 N.Y.S.2d 606, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15003 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981).

In prosecution for second degree arson, inter alia, defendant was not deprived of effective assistance because of counsel's failure to object to admission of testimony as to defendant's prior assault on his wife's boyfriend since counsel used that testimony as strategy to convince jury that residents of building where boyfriend lived wrongly accused defendant of arson because they held grudge against him as result of assault. People v Key, 151 A.D.2d 782, 542 N.Y.S.2d 759, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9212 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 967, 556 N.Y.S.2d 252, 555 N.E.2d 624, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 1841 (N.Y. 1990), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 790, 559 N.Y.S.2d 996, 559 N.E.2d 690, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 2756 (N.Y. 1990).

3. Evidence; admissibility

Although trial court, in prosecution for arson, should have allowed defendant to read to jury portions of transcript of testimony given by defendant in his civil claim to recover insurance proceeds for fire loss after the People read approximately 50 lines from the 70-page transcript as portions he sought to read were plainly relevant to explain and offset that portion presented by prosecution, failure to admit such could be deemed harmless error. People v Spano, 57 A.D.2d 715, 395 N.Y.S.2d 548, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11768 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1977).

In prosecution for arson, testimony that one of the defendants was a "problem" and sometimes stole pizzas from the premises in question and that he was told by the witness "to behave himself" and not come back constituted inadmissible testimony of other crimes and improper conduct having no bearing on the charge for which defendants were being tried, adduced at a time when they had not put their character or credibility in issue, and was not admissible as motive testimony. People v Napoletano, 58 A.D.2d 83, 395 N.Y.S.2d 469, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11834 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1977).

Where alibi witness on cross-examination in arson prosecution denied having told prosecutor that defendants had said to him "Wouldn't it be funny if [the premises in question] burned down," such negative answer was binding on the People, and testimony of investigator from the district attorney's office in rebuttal that the alibi witness had indeed uttered such a statement was improperly received. People v Napoletano, 58 A.D.2d 83, 395 N.Y.S.2d 469, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11834 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1977).

In arson trial, court abused its discretion in admitting into evidence tape-recorded conversation in Spanish between defendant and prosecution informant (who volunteered to wear tape recorder and transmitting device), since tape was not sufficiently audible to permit production of reasonable transcript by third party, where (1) official court translator was unable to produce satisfactory translation at audibility hearing, (2) even after translator was permitted to remove tape for private listening, resulting transcription contained numerous notations of inaudibility, and (3) only incriminatory portions of transcript were hearsay statements of informant, including repeated comment suggesting defendant's incriminatory involvement, even though defendant admitted no involvement in reply; thus, probative value of tape was outweighed by potential for prejudice. People v Carrasco, 125 A.D.2d 695, 509 N.Y.S.2d 879, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 62954 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

In arson trial, it was not improper to permit fire marshal to testify that he had eliminated all possible natural and accidental causes of fire to reasonable degree of scientific certainty since he did not testify that fire was incendiary in nature or that it was intentionally set and thus rule that ultimate fact question is for jury to decide was not violated. Fire marshal's testimony that debris which he found at point of origin of fire "smelled of gasoline" was admissible as factual observation regarding condition of premises which he inspected. People v Rivera, 131 A.D.2d 518, 516 N.Y.S.2d 474, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 47973 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

It was proper to admit testimony of defendant's prior assault on his wife's boyfriend as probative of his motive to commit arson at building where boyfriend resided. People v Key, 151 A.D.2d 782, 542 N.Y.S.2d 759, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9212 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 967, 556 N.Y.S.2d 252, 555 N.E.2d 624, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 1841 (N.Y. 1990), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 790, 559 N.Y.S.2d 996, 559 N.E.2d 690, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 2756 (N.Y. 1990).

In prosecution for second degree arson, inter alia, it was reversible error to allow fire marshal to testify that fire was deliberately set since such testimony invaded jury's exclusive province of determining ultimate facts. People v Bajraktari, 154 A.D.2d 542, 546 N.Y.S.2d 384, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12744 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 963, 556 N.Y.S.2d 248, 555 N.E.2d 620, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 1749 (N.Y. 1990).

In second degree arson prosecution, testimony of fire marshal as to cause of fire did not usurp jury's function where he did not testify that fire was incendiary in nature or that it was intentionally set. People v Luckerson, 170 A.D.2d 695, 567 N.Y.S.2d 110, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3137 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 77 N.Y.2d 997, 571 N.Y.S.2d 923, 575 N.E.2d 409, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 2110 (N.Y. 1991).

In second degree arson trial, court properly precluded testimony that occupant of trailer had previously fallen asleep and dropped cigarettes on floor and furniture, causing fire, where such evidence was inconsistent with physical evidence as to cause of fire in defendant's case and thus could not provide "clear link" establishing that someone else caused fire. People v Beebe, 217 A.D.2d 950, 630 N.Y.S.2d 170, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8372 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 86 N.Y.2d 872, 635 N.Y.S.2d 953, 659 N.E.2d 776, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 4771 (N.Y. 1995), reh'g denied, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11111 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't Sept. 29, 1995).

Court properly allowed defendant's wife to testify that he admitted setting fire at issue where it was clearly shown that arson was directed against wife. People v Capobianco, 218 A.D.2d 707, 630 N.Y.S.2d 386, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8683 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 86 N.Y.2d 841, 634 N.Y.S.2d 450, 658 N.E.2d 228, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 4548 (N.Y. 1995).

In second degree arson prosecution, court properly allowed testimony of defendant's stepdaughter that his wife exclaimed "(h)e set the house on fire," as she ran from house immediately after fire started; testimony was properly admitted under present sense impression exception to hearsay rule. People v Carvalho, 249 A.D.2d 945, 673 N.Y.S.2d 277, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5051 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1998).

In juvenile delinquency proceeding based on charges of conduct that would be second degree arson and second degree mischief if committed by adult, petition was sufficient on its face, despite juvenile's claim that his mother's statement that he communicated to her by signing that he used matches to start fire was not admission, because it was nonverbal communication; witness may testify concerning statement made by another person who communicates nonverbally by sign language, and juvenile did not prove that his method of communication with his mother was unreliable. In re Terrance W., 251 A.D.2d 1004, 674 N.Y.S.2d 529, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7021 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 810, 680 N.Y.S.2d 54, 702 N.E.2d 839, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 3180 (N.Y. 1998).

Defendant's counsel was not ineffective for failing to pursue an intoxication defense in his criminal matter involving charges of arson, as defendant had admitted that he intentionally damaged a building by setting a fire and he knew it was probably occupied, and he failed to show the absence of strategic or other legitimate explanations for counsel's decision. People v Russell, 133 A.D.3d 1199, 20 N.Y.S.3d 760, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8370 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2015), app. denied, 26 N.Y.3d 1149, 51 N.E.3d 574, 32 N.Y.S.3d 63, 2016 N.Y. LEXIS 505 (N.Y. 2016).

Trial court properly denied defendant's motion to vacate his arson conviction; admission of the statements he made at the crime scene did not violate his Miranda rights, as he was not then in custody and the officer's questions about how the fire had started and if anyone else was inside the residence were proper under the emergency doctrine. People v Harris, 129 A.D.3d 1522, 11 N.Y.S.3d 359, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4996 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2015), app. denied, 27 N.Y.3d 998, 59 N.E.3d 1220, 38 N.Y.S.3d 108, 2016 N.Y. LEXIS 1358 (N.Y. 2016).

In prosecution under indictment which charged second-degree arson, first-degree reckless endangerment and third-degree assault, defendant was not entitled to suppression of testimonial evidence concerning observations of defendant's apartment and photographs taken therein by two fire marshals shortly after the fire which gave rise to the charges where, under all circumstances, fire marshals' warrantless entry was reasonable and lawful. People v Calhoun, 90 Misc. 2d 88, 393 N.Y.S.2d 529, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1996 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1977), aff'd, 67 A.D.2d 1110, 413 N.Y.S.2d 535, 1979 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15193 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1979).

4. —Sufficiency

Defendant was properly convicted of second degree arson on theory of accessorial liability arising from fire in building that housed nightclub owned by him, and it was error to set aside verdict under CLS CPL § 290.10 where, inter alia, there had been numerous complaints about club filed with police, its liquor license was in danger of being revoked, defendant's investment in nightclub was at risk if liquor license was revoked, fire was intentionally set, fire alarm system had been intentionally disabled, there was no evidence of break-in, expensive lighting system was removed from club shortly before fire and hidden at defendant's house, and defendant had lied about "destruction" of that system in fire. People v Grassi, 92 N.Y.2d 695, 685 N.Y.S.2d 903, 708 N.E.2d 976, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 27 (N.Y. 1999).

A conviction for second-degree attempted arson was proper, after defendant was permitted to plead guilty in full satisfaction of an indictment for second-degree arson, in that sufficient factual basis for the plea was established by defendant's statement to the trial court that he intentionally aided and abetted another person in setting the fire, and that he knew or should have known that the building in question was occupied at the time. People v Paige, 92 A.D.2d 653, 460 N.Y.S.2d 147, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16921 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1983).

Sufficient evidence existed to sustain conviction of arson in second degree where it was shown that building was damaged and that defendant knew there were people in building when he started fire; defendant's statement to police, given after voluntary waiver of right, when viewed in conjunction with circumstantial evidence, established that defendant intentionally started fire intending to cause damage by piling rags next to wooden door, holding match to them until they started burning, and then leaving fire unattended. People v Fisher, 112 A.D.2d 1008, 492 N.Y.S.2d 816, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52217 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1985).

Evidence was sufficient to prove intent in second degree arson case where defendant admitted causing fire in his wife's residence building but contended it was accidental, and where defendant, on date of fire, had threatened to burn dwelling and was observed entering cellar carrying containers and hurriedly leaving shortly thereafter when fire began. People v Harris, 122 A.D.2d 493, 505 N.Y.S.2d 254, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 59774 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

Evidence supported convictions of second degree arson and first degree reckless endangerment where (1) fire was set with combustible materials or liquid in at least 3 locations inside building, and gas leak was deliberately started inside building, resulting in explosion, and (2) only means of ingress or egress was front door, one defendant was seen working on heater inside building prior to explosion, both defendants left building together 15 minutes before explosion, defendants locked security gates behind them, no one else was seen entering or leaving building thereafter, and expert testified that it would have taken 20 minutes or less for enough gas to accumulate to result in explosion. People v Mann,

Evidence was sufficient to support convictions for second degree arson, third degree assault, and fourth degree criminal mischief where (1) defendant, and 2 accomplices who testified for People at trial, attempted to collect drug money from 3 women who sold crack on behalf of defendant, and (2) when unsuccessful, defendant beat each of 3 women, ransacked their respective rooms, and set fire to bed in third room, which then spread. People v Barnes, 180 A.D.2d 605, 580 N.Y.S.2d 315, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2818 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 79 N.Y.2d 1046, 584 N.Y.S.2d 1013, 596 N.E.2d 411, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 2493 (N.Y. 1992).

Convictions of second degree arson and first degree reckless endangerment were supported by evidence that defendant, disgruntled over being evicted, painted hate message on another tenant's door and liberally doused halls and stairways of 4 story apartment building with gasoline, and left when several other tenants came out and angrily confronted her. People v Johnson, 186 A.D.2d 363, 588 N.Y.S.2d 162, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11023 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 763, 594 N.Y.S.2d 725, 610 N.E.2d 398, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 4862 (N.Y. 1992).

People established that there were persons other than person who set fire present in building in second degree arson prosecution where fire department lieutenant who responded to scene of fire testified that he observed persons exiting building. People v Grogan, 192 A.D.2d 719, 597 N.Y.S.2d 151, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4286 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 1073, 601 N.Y.S.2d 593, 619 N.E.2d 671, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 2779 (N.Y. 1993).

Evidence sustained attempted second degree arson conviction where defendant was seen splashing gasoline on his ex-girlfriend's house, occupants ran out after smelling gasoline and heard him say that he thought everyone inside was asleep and that "you all supposed to burn," 2 lighters were found on him, and he had been at house twice that night smashing windows and threatening to kill his ex-girlfriend; lack of evidence that defendant attempted to ignite gasoline did not mean that he was not dangerously close to completion. People v Adams, 222 A.D.2d 1124, 635 N.Y.S.2d 906, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14322 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1995), app. denied, 87 N.Y.2d 1016, 644 N.Y.S.2d 150, 666 N.E.2d 1064, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 1193 (N.Y. 1996).

Evidence that portions of building exhibited burn pattern and charring as result of fire was sufficient to establish "damage" element of second degree arson. People v Jackson, 265 A.D.2d 343, 696 N.Y.S.2d 75, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9602 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 824, 702 N.Y.S.2d 594, 724 N.E.2d 386, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 4184 (N.Y. 1999).

Proof that defendant intentionally tampered with electric water heater located in basement of house with intent to set fire to house, and did so knowing that his estranged wife and their children were inside house, supported second degree attempted arson conviction. People v Krug, 282 A.D.2d 874, 725 N.Y.S.2d 409, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3941 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001), app. denied, 98 N.Y.2d 652, 745 N.Y.S.2d 511, 772 N.E.2d 614, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 2112 (N.Y. 2002).

Structure built by homeless people, which consisted of carpets draped over clotheslines running between two fixed fences, plywood providing additional support to one side of the structure, an entrance covered by shower curtains and blankets, a tarp covering the entire structure, and carpeting on the ground, and had diverted electrical service from a nearby subway station, was a "building," under N.Y. Penal Law 150.00(1), which could be the subject of second degree arson, because it was utilized for overnight lodging and because it fit within the ordinary meaning of the term "building," so substantial evidence supported defendant's arson conviction under N.Y. Penal Law § 150.15. People v Fox, 3 A.D.3d 577, 771 N.Y.S.2d 156, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 709 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 2 N.Y.3d 739, 778 N.Y.S.2d 465, 810 N.E.2d 918, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 1128 (N.Y. 2004).

Sufficient evidence supported defendant's conviction for arson in the second degree, as an arson investigator testified that the fire originated on the front left burner of the stove in defendant's business and was caused by that burner being turned on high heat while a pan of grease was on the burner; defendant and his girlfriend were the last ones to leave. Defendant admittedly owed more than $30,000 in debts related to the business, and his $20,000 insurance policy covering the contents of the business was set to expire approximately one month from the date of the fire. People v Cushner, 46 A.D.3d 1121, 847 N.Y.S.2d 723, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13173 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 809, 857 N.Y.S.2d 43, 886 N.E.2d 808, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 1247 (N.Y. 2008).

Because defendant acknowledged committing acts that constituted third-degree criminal possession of a weapon and attempted second-degree arson under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 265.02(4), 110.00, 150.15, defendant's contentions that the trial court abused its discretion in denying defendant's motion to withdraw the pleas as involuntary and that defendant's counsel was ineffective lacked merit. People v Powell, 46 A.D.3d 1457, 848 N.Y.S.2d 464, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12955 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2007), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 770, 854 N.Y.S.2d 332, 883 N.E.2d 1267, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 844 (N.Y. 2008).

Based, inter alia, on defendant's complaint about a store, defendant's admission to starting a fire, and leaving the scene without ascertaining that the fire was out or that the building's occupants knew about it, defendant was properly convicted of second-degree arson, second-degree criminal mischief and first-degree reckless endangerment under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 150.15, 145.10, 120.25. People v Hodges, 66 A.D.3d 1228, 888 N.Y.S.2d 224, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7568 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2009), app. denied, 13 N.Y.3d 939, 895 N.Y.S.2d 330, 922 N.E.2d 919, 2010 N.Y. LEXIS 525 (N.Y. 2010).

Because defendant's friend, defendant's estranged wife, and the man with whom she was living testified, inter alia, that defendant hired the friend to start two fires and that defendant had threatened the wife and the man, the evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of second- and third-degree arson and fourth-degree conspiracy. People v Burns, 68 A.D.3d 1246, 889 N.Y.S.2d 775, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8928 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2009), app. denied, 14 N.Y.3d 798, 899 N.Y.S.2d 132, 925 N.E.2d 936, 2010 N.Y. LEXIS 931 (N.Y. 2010).

Conviction of second degree attempted arson was supported by sufficient evidence where a resident of the subject building testified that she and defendant had argued, that she had been on the porch approximately 20 minutes before the subject incident, it had appeared dry, and there was not a lighter fluid bottle or matches in the vicinity at that time; a neighbor testified that she observed defendant squirt or throw a clear liquid onto the first-floor resident's porch and then make motions with her hands as if she was striking matches. When police arrived, they recovered matches, an empty matchbook and an empty bottle of lighter fluid from the porch, observed that the porch was wet, and smelled lighter fluid. People v Abare, 86 A.D.3d 803, 927 N.Y.S.2d 233, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5866 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2011), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 861, 947 N.Y.S.2d 410, 970 N.E.2d 433, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 1571 (N.Y. 2012).

Defendant's arson conviction was not against the weight of the evidence because defendant, who was angry with his neighbors, admitted that "he would use lighter fluid to start a fire" outside their door and he ought to "set their house on fire," surveillance video implicated defendant, and there was physical evidence that a lighter fluid was used as an accelerant. People v Launder, 132 A.D.3d 1151, 18 N.Y.S.3d 747, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7929 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2015), app. denied, 27 N.Y.3d 1153, 62 N.E.3d 127, 39 N.Y.S.3d 387, 2016 N.Y. LEXIS 2521 (N.Y. 2016).

Evidence supported defendant's conviction for arson in the second degree, based on allegations that defendant intentionally set fire to the family's residence in the middle of the night, killing family members who were inside the residence at the time, because defendant admitted to a friend and a sibling's paramour that defendant started the fire and defendant reeked of gasoline when defendant was taken into custody within hours after the fire erupted. In addition, defendant confessed defendant's guilt to the police. People v Pilato, 145 A.D.3d 1593, 46 N.Y.S.3d 313, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8519 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2016), app. denied, 29 N.Y.3d 951, 76 N.E.3d 1085, 54 N.Y.S.3d 382, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 875 (N.Y. 2017).

Defendant was properly convicted of murder, arson, and abortion, because the weight of the evidence established that he caused the death of the victim by strangling her and setting her on fire and, as a consequence, also caused the death of her unborn child. Witness testimony and DNA evidence showed that he was in the victim's apartment, had sex with the victim just hours before her death, was the father of her unborn child and had urged her to get an abortion; samples of the ignitable liquid taken from the victim's bedroom were identified as gasoline. People v Vega, 170 A.D.3d 1266, 95 N.Y.S.3d 620, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1676 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 33 N.Y.3d 1074, 129 N.E.3d 368, 105 N.Y.S.3d 48, 2019 N.Y. LEXIS 2182 (N.Y. 2019).

Defendant did not sufficiently rebut the evidence presented at his trial to the extent necessary to warrant habeas relief; the fire marshall's testimony concerning the extent of damage that the building suffered was not given in an evidentiary vacuum, but was corroborated by pictorial evidence that illustrated quite clearly that the cell was indeed damaged by the fires. Further, the context of defendant's questioning clearly indicated that when he said charring and blackening, he was referring to the door, floor, and walls of the cell and a rational trier of fact could have found proof of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Dixon v McGinnis, 492 F. Supp. 2d 343, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 44198 (S.D.N.Y. 2007).

Defendant's convictions for attempted arson in the second degree and two counts of endangering the welfare of a child (two counts) were not against the weight of the evidence because a witness saw defendant enter his home with two red gasoline cans, defendant doused a bedroom in his home with gasoline, threatened to burn the house down, and several members of defendant's family, including his two young grandchildren, were in the home at the time. People v Lind, 133 A.D.3d 914, 18 N.Y.S.3d 786, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8102 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2015), app. denied, 27 N.Y.3d 1153, 62 N.E.3d 127, 39 N.Y.S.3d 387, 2016 N.Y. LEXIS 2530 (N.Y. 2016).

5. — —Circumstantial evidence

There was no danger that jury improperly bridged gaps in evidence by drawing improper inferences at second degree arson trial, and thus defendant was not entitled to circumstantial evidence charge, where evidence established that defendant had set fire to apartment that his brother had recently vacated because he had been dispossessed, owner testified that she had confrontation with defendant several days before fire, tenants saw defendant placing debris in bathtub and furniture near oven shortly before fire, and as fire burned, one tenant overheard defendant, who was at scene, expressing his lack of concern for his actions. People v Garcia, 162 A.D.2d 150, 556 N.Y.S.2d 89, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6975 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1990).

Circumstantial evidence was sufficient to establish defendant's guilt of second degree arson where he had recently been asked to move out of trailer he shared with his estranged girlfriend, he had argued with her on night before fire, 3 witnesses heard and saw defendant's car at scene immediately before fire broke out, butane lighter and several books of matches were found in his car, and expert testimony established non-accidental cause for fire. People v Brown, 231 A.D.2d 956, 648 N.Y.S.2d 198, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10960 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1996).

Evidence supported conviction of second degree arson and first degree reckless endangerment where defendant was seen going back into theater in which he had viewed movie after all showings were completed, he was seen running from theater in which fire had been set while alarm was sounding, he was seen leaving theater through rear exit rather than through front entrance as he had claimed in statement to police, clothes matching description of his clothing on night of fire and exhibiting presence of accelerant were later found in his apartment, and although each of those facts individually could lead to inferences equally consistent with innocence as with guilt, jury could have rationally inferred essential elements of crimes charged beyond reasonable doubt from combination of those facts. People v Brown, 281 A.D.2d 700, 728 N.Y.S.2d 100, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2312 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 826, 729 N.Y.S.2d 446, 754 N.E.2d 206, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2089 (N.Y. 2001).

6. — —Corroboration

In prosecution for second degree arson, People sufficiently corroborated defendant's admission to support conviction, as required by CLS CPL § 60.50, on proof that (1) defendant was present at scene of crime 12 to 15 minutes prior to its discovery, (2) defendant had motive for setting fire, since he had been fired by firm which occupied building only one week prior to incident, and (3) fire was product of human agency. People v Noren, 123 A.D.2d 453, 506 N.Y.S.2d 756, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 60203 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

There was sufficient independent evidence that arson had been committed at tavern to corroborate defendant's admissions of guilt where (1) defendant had been involved in altercation with another patron and bar's owner, and angrily left after being refused last drink before establishment was closed, (2) fire was discovered within 15 minutes after defendant left, (3) fire's origin was pinpointed at location where defendant said she set it, (4) on day after fire defendant requested that friend wash any traces of smoke from jeans and shoes she had worn on previous night, and (5) arson investigation excluded most other possible causes of fire. People v Fiacco, 132 A.D.2d 887, 518 N.Y.S.2d 231, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49357 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 874, 523 N.Y.S.2d 501, 518 N.E.2d 12, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 19138 (N.Y. 1987).

Because defendant's accomplice testified that defendant ignited the gasoline after the accomplice poured it on the victim's porch, and because that testimony was corroborated by the testimony of other witnesses in accordance with N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 60.22(1), defendant was properly convicted of second-degree arson and first-degree reckless endangerment under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 150.15, 120.25. People v Self, 75 A.D.3d 924, 906 N.Y.S.2d 164, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6306 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 15 N.Y.3d 895, 912 N.Y.S.2d 583, 938 N.E.2d 1018, 2010 N.Y. LEXIS 3356 (N.Y. 2010).

7. — —Expert witness testimony

Defendant was properly convicted of second degree arson where People's expert testified that fire was started with flammable fluid and that point of origin was defendant's kitchen floor, and where 2 witnesses saw defendant enter his apartment minutes before fire broke out; proof was not defective merely because expert could not identify accelerant used, and reasonable doubt was not created by testimony of defense expert who viewed photographs of site and hypothesized that fire could be attributed to nonsuspect causes, but conceded that he could not determine that fire was nonincendiary without viewing site. People v Herrera, 136 A.D.2d 567, 523 N.Y.S.2d 562, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 340 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 1007, 526 N.Y.S.2d 941, 521 N.E.2d 1084, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 856 (N.Y. 1988).

Convictions for arson in second degree and reckless endangerment in second degree were not against weight of evidence where (1) woman moved out of premises she had shared with defendant for 12 years and moved in with cousin, (2) about 2 months later, woman was escorted by police to and from defendant's residence 5 times in one day and, during visits, defendant attempted to persuade her to return and also stated that she would not spend one more night with cousin, (3) that night, cousin's household was awakened by loud crash to find public hallway in front of entrance to apartment in flames, (4) as fire erupted, tenant observed man fleeing from building and identified man as defendant, and (5) expert eliminated accident and spontaneous combustion as causes of fire and testified that fire was caused by ignition of flammable liquid; facts established all elements of crime of which defendant was convicted and did not require jury to leap logical gaps to arrive at determination of guilty. People v McCaskill, 144 A.D.2d 496, 533 N.Y.S.2d 1020, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11814 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Juvenile was entitled to reversal of determination that he committed act which, if committed by adult, would constitute second degree arson, since fire investigator was improperly permitted to testify that fire was incendiary in origin and that it had been intentionally set; while it is proper for expert in arson trial to testify that he or she has eliminated all possible natural and accidental causes of fire, it is not proper for expert to testify that fire was incendiary or that it was intentionally set. In re Ralph YY., 192 A.D.2d 762, 596 N.Y.S.2d 202, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3544 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1993).

In prosecution for second degree arson, court properly denied defendant's mid-trial request for adjournment to secure services of unidentified voice analysis expert witness where value of expert's testimony was speculative at best, and defendant took no steps to pursue that issue until after trial had started, even though he knew more than 5 months before trial that prosecution had tape recording purporting to be of his voice. People v Houghton, 245 A.D.2d 135, 665 N.Y.S.2d 884, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13004 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1997), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 973, 672 N.Y.S.2d 853, 695 N.E.2d 722, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 1582 (N.Y. 1998).

8. — —Insufficient

Where indictment charged arson in the second degree but facts contained in indictment were sufficient only to sustain charge of arson in third degree and defendant pled guilty to facts amounting to arson in third degree, sentence for arson in the second degree was improper and would be remanded for resentencing for crime of arson in third degree. People v Hutchins, 43 A.D.2d 412, 352 N.Y.S.2d 520, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5665 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

Evidence did not sustain second degree arson conviction where (1) inference that defendant possessed accelerant was not supported by discovery of accelerant containers at scene after fire, (2) defendant was observed at scene 40 minutes before fire started and "a while" after it started, but not at time fire began, and (3) defendant's false or inaccurate statements to police were not inconsistent with his innocence; evidence of defendant's threats and motive could not substitute for proof that he committed crime. People v Hamilton, 129 A.D.2d 859, 513 N.Y.S.2d 887, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 45551 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987).

While the evidence was sufficient to establish that defendant was aware of circumstances that would render the presence of another person in the building a reasonable possibility, the evidence was legally insufficient to prove that a resident of one of the apartments was actually present in the building when the fire was set; therefore, defendant was improperly convicted of violating N.Y. Penal Law § 150.15(a). People v Harris, 72 A.D.3d 1110, 900 N.Y.S.2d 137, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3395 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2010).

9. Lesser included offenses

Court properly refused to charge fourth degree arson as lesser included offense of second degree arson where no reasonable view of evidence could support finding that defendant "recklessly" started fire inasmuch as 2 separate and "uncommunicated" fires were set and defendant pushed 2 burning chairs against front door of house to block occupants from exiting. People v Clinkscales, 134 A.D.2d 889, 522 N.Y.S.2d 390, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 51081 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1987), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 1005, 526 N.Y.S.2d 940, 521 N.E.2d 1083, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 808 (N.Y. 1988).

Criminal mischief in fourth degree is not lesser included offense of second degree arson since it is possible to commit greater offense (e.g., by setting fire to one's own residence) without concomitantly committing lesser offense. In re Christopher E., 171 A.D.2d 976, 567 N.Y.S.2d 918, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3838 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1991).

Defendant's voluntary act of imbibing alcoholic beverage, knowing that he was prone to criminal acts while drunk and that consumption of even one drink would destroy his ability to resist further drinking, to point of intoxication, constituted recklessness per se; thus, although defendant was not guilty of second degree arson for setting fire to his apartment while intoxicated since he lacked specific intent to damage building, he was guilty of lesser included offense of fourth degree arson, defined as "recklessly damag[ing] building...by intentionally starting fire," and also first degree reckless endangerment. People v Tocco, 138 Misc. 2d 510, 525 N.Y.S.2d 137, 1988 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 50 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1988).

10. Sentencing

In view of seriousness of offense and its hostile nature, it was not abuse of court's discretion to deny youthful offender status and to sentence defendant, convicted upon his plea of guilty to crime of arson in second degree, to indeterminate term of imprisonment not to exceed seven years. People v Wood, 57 A.D.2d 663, 393 N.Y.S.2d 485, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11689 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

Intermittent sentence imposed upon defendant who was convicted of arson in second degree, a class B felony, was invalid as a matter of law; it could only be imposed upon conviction of class D or E felony, or for offense not felony, provided defendant was not second or persistent felony offender. People v Pazkowski, 57 A.D.2d 846, 394 N.Y.S.2d 37, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12059 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1977).

There was no abuse of discretion in imposition of maximum sentence for second degree arson where defendant knew apartment house was occupied and he nonetheless deliberately set it on fire. People v Royce, 137 A.D.2d 931, 525 N.Y.S.2d 355, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1741 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 72 N.Y.2d 866, 532 N.Y.S.2d 516, 528 N.E.2d 906, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 3904 (N.Y. 1988).

Court did not abuse its discretion in directing that sentences for second degree arson and first degree reckless endangerment run consecutively to sentences for first degree manslaughter and first degree burglary where defendant had strangled woman following some drinking and alleged altercation in her apartment, and he then removed some of her personal property and set fire to cover homicide and theft. People v Cody, 207 A.D.2d 962, 617 N.Y.S.2d 77, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10131 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1994), app. denied, 85 N.Y.2d 860, 624 N.Y.S.2d 379, 648 N.E.2d 799, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 835 (N.Y. 1995).

It was not excessive to impose prison sentence of 5 to 15 years on defendant's conviction of second degree arson given serious nature of crime and his criminal background. People v Smith, 214 A.D.2d 845, 625 N.Y.S.2d 684, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4425 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 86 N.Y.2d 741, 631 N.Y.S.2d 622, 655 N.E.2d 719, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 3289 (N.Y. 1995).

Sentence would be modified so that sentence for second degree arson would run concurrently, rather than consecutively, with sentences for second degree murder and first degree kidnapping where those convictions were based on same act. People v Torres, 266 A.D.2d 409, 697 N.Y.S.2d 528, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11571 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 885, 705 N.Y.S.2d 18, 726 N.E.2d 495, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 472 (N.Y. 2000).

Defendant's sentence of five years in prison with three years of postrelease supervision was not harsh or excessive for a conviction of attempted arson in the second degree; the permissible range was 3 ½ to 15 years, and given defendant's criminal history and the serious nature of the crime, there was no abuse of discretion nor extraordinary circumstances warranting a reduction of the sentence imposed. Defendant's alcohol abuse did not mitigate in her favor, in light of her squandered opportunities to address her alcohol problem in the past. People v Abare, 86 A.D.3d 803, 927 N.Y.S.2d 233, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5866 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2011), app. denied, 19 N.Y.3d 861, 947 N.Y.S.2d 410, 970 N.E.2d 433, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 1571 (N.Y. 2012).

Although the sentence imposed upon defendant was the maximum, the sentence was neither harsh nor excessive because defendant engaged in a deliberate plan to set an interior fire to an apartment building with several occupants, endangering their lives. People v Launder, 132 A.D.3d 1151, 18 N.Y.S.3d 747, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7929 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2015), app. denied, 27 N.Y.3d 1153, 62 N.E.3d 127, 39 N.Y.S.3d 387, 2016 N.Y. LEXIS 2521 (N.Y. 2016).

11. Verdict

Trial court's acquittal of defendant on greater charges of arson in first, second and third degrees was not inconsistent with his conviction of fourth degree arson, since verdict was logically explained as limited acceptance of intoxication defense to extent of finding that defendant intentionally set fire but recklessly, not intentionally, damaged building. People v Gerasimovic, 124

A.D.2d 593, 507 N.Y.S.2d 873, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 61905 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

II. Under Former Law

12. Under former § 221

Arson may be committed by one in burning his own dwelling house. Shepherd v People, 19 N.Y. 537, 19 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 537, 1859 N.Y. LEXIS 66 (N.Y. 1859).

A conviction for arson in the first degree was proper where it appeared that defendant, intending to defraud an insurance company, which insured his personal effects in a trunk, set fire to the trunk in his room with the intent of destroying the insured goods but with no intent to destroy the building, since it is not necessary to charge in the indictment or to prove at the trial that the defendant set the fire with the intent to destroy the building. People v Fanshawe, 137 N.Y. 68, 32 N.E. 1102, 137 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 68, 1893 N.Y. LEXIS 657 (N.Y. 1893).

The provision in the New York City Charter that evidence taken on investigation into fires shall not be used in criminal action, does not apply to admission of a defendant to fire marshal in informal conversation. People v Ales, 247 N.Y. 351, 160 N.E. 395, 247 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 351, 1928 N.Y. LEXIS 1078 (N.Y. 1928).

Evidence that the defendant owed $3980 was insufficient to show a motive for burning a restaurant, allegedly to get back investment of $7000, where he had $1000 in the bank and the restaurant was a profitable and growing business. People v Ice, 265 A.D. 46, 38 N.Y.S.2d 32, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5675 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

For a conviction of arson in the first degree, a willful criminal intention to set fire to a dwelling house in which there is a human being, in the night time, must be shown. Evidence that the defendant three years before the fire had made threats to kill his wife, who was in the burned building, were admissible to show motive. People v Bates, 271 A.D. 550, 67 N.Y.S.2d 1, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5105 (N.Y. App. Div.), app. denied, 332 U.S. 789, 68 S. Ct. 94, 92 L. Ed. 371, 1947 U.S. LEXIS 1738 (U.S. 1947).

An indictment for arson is good which charges in one count that the building is the property of one person and in a second count that it is the property of another, but both counts allege it is in the same city and occupied by the same five persons. People v Lafunay, 217 N.Y.S. 696, 127 Misc. 862, 1926 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 713 (N.Y. County Ct. 1926).

Where a defendant makes false and fraudulent claims to a fire insurance company as to the origin of a fire, and he is later acquitted of an arson charge, a subsequent trial for false swearing is not barred by the former trial. People v Berger, 106 N.Y.S.2d 761, 199 Misc. 543, 1950 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2558 (N.Y. County Ct. 1950).

Responsibility for the crime of arson, in its several degrees, is limited to one who willfully burns or sets on fire any of the structures and chattels specified in §§ 221–223 of the Penal Law, the common-law definition of the crime thus being redefined by the Legislature. People v Roderman, 34 Misc. 2d 497, 229 N.Y.S.2d 209, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3229 (N.Y. County Ct. 1962).

Setting fire to a building usually occupied by persons lodging therein is arson in the first degree, though not a dwelling house in the ordinary acceptation of the term. People v Orcutt (1851) 1 Park Crim 252.

Person convicted of arson in any degree is, by statute, ineligible to become member of volunteer fire company, but issuance to that person of unrestricted certificate of relief from disabilities prevents automatic statutory disqualification; however, certificate does not prevent fire company or fire district commissioners from exercising discretion to deny membership based on facts and circumstances surrounding arson conviction. Person convicted of arson in any degree is, by statute, ineligible to hold office of fire district commissioner; certificate of relief from disabilities does not apply to public office such as fire district commissioner. 1998 NY Ops Atty Gen I 98-50.

§ 150.20. Arson in the first degree

1. A person is guilty of arson in the first degree when he intentionally damages a building or motor vehicle by causing an explosion or a fire and when (a) such explosion or fire is caused by an incendiary device propelled, thrown or placed inside or near such building or motor vehicle; or when such explosion or fire is caused by an explosive; or when such explosion or fire either (i) causes serious physical injury to another person other than a participant, or (ii) the explosion or fire was caused with the expectation or receipt of financial advantage or pecuniary profit by the actor; and when (b) another person who is not a participant in the crime is present in such building or motor vehicle at the time; and (c) the defendant knows that fact or the circumstances are such as to render the presence of such person therein a reasonable possibility.

2. As used in this section, "incendiary device" means a breakable container designed to explode or produce uncontained combustion upon impact, containing flammable liquid and having a wick or a similar device capable of being ignited.

Arson in the first degree is a class A-I felony.

Notes to Decisions

In a prosecution for first-degree arson, any error in admitting expert testimony about the causes of the fires was harmless, because the evidence of defendant's guilt was overwhelming and there was no significant probability that the jury would have acquitted defendant without the expert testimony. People v. Grutz, 212 N.Y. 72 (1914), to the extent it held that expert testimony as to whether a fire was intentionally set was inadmissible in an arson case, was overruled. People v Rivers, 18 N.Y.3d 222, 936 N.Y.S.2d 650, 960 N.E.2d 419, 2011 N.Y. LEXIS 3321 (N.Y. 2011).

Determination whether a Molotov cocktail is an "explosive substance" within purview of penal law provision for possession of weapon, dangerous instrument and appliance as a felony, or can cause an "explosion" within purview of penal law provision for arson in the first degree, must take into account any previous interpretation and application and intent of legislature including prior determination that bottle filled with kerosene, under provisions of labor law, general business law, and vehicle and traffic law, was inflammable but not explosive substance. Statute providing that person is guilty of arson in second degree when he attempts to damage building by starting fire, rather than statute providing that person is guilty of arson in first degree for intentionally damaging building by causing explosion, applied to conduct of defendant, who threw Molotov cocktail through window of ground floor apartment where alleged assailment of defendant lived. Defendant, who was improperly convicted of arson in first degree, and acquitted of arson in second degree, which was applicable offense, could not have conviction for arson in first degree reduced to lesser offense of arson in third degree in view of, inter alia, such improper conviction and acquittal. People v McCrawford, 47 A.D.2d 318, 366 N.Y.S.2d 424, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9235 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1975).

Upon a new trial for the crime of arson and attempted grand larceny, a witness qualified as an expert in determining the causes of fire and explosions should not be permitted again to testify that the fire was set intentionally where the physical facts concerning the origin of the fire can be readily understood when properly described; it will be for the jury to draw the appropriate conclusion. Upon a prosecution for arson and attempted grand larceny arising from the burning of defendant's insured residence, it is reversible error for the People to offer proof of a prior fire in defendant's residence and many of its attendant circumstances, without directly connecting defendant with that fire and failing to prove its incendiary nature, inasmuch as the evidence is of no probative force and its receipt is fraught with undue prejudice; nor is evidence of the prior fire admissible as bearing upon defendant's motive, intent or mental state concerning the attempted grand larceny count since defendant's guilt of the attempt to steal is wholly dependent upon his culpability in the burning of the building, and his intention to defraud the insurance carrier is easily to be inferred from proof of the act of arson itself and, as such, the exclusion of the disputed evidence on the arson count applies with equal force to its introduction on the attempted grand larceny count. People v Vincek, 75 A.D.2d 412, 429 N.Y.S.2d 928, 1980 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11715 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 51 N.Y.2d 776, 1980 N.Y. LEXIS 4299 (N.Y. 1980).

Trial court's acquittal of defendant on greater charges of arson in first, second and third degrees was not inconsistent with his conviction of fourth degree arson, since verdict was logically explained as limited acceptance of intoxication defense to extent of finding that defendant intentionally set fire but recklessly, not intentionally, damaged building. People v Gerasimovic, 124 A.D.2d 593, 507 N.Y.S.2d 873, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 61905 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Defendant was properly granted trial order of dismissal as to count of first degree arson and 2 counts of first degree reckless endangerment where People never directly connected him with fire or with means to start it, and were unable to establish cause of fire. People v Rohany, 134 A.D.2d 626, 521 N.Y.S.2d 521, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50838 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 1010, 526 N.Y.S.2d 945, 521 N.E.2d 1088, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 952 (N.Y. 1988).

It was not improper to accept defendant's guilty plea to first degree attempted arson on ground that defendant's statements at time of plea made clear that he only intended to "annoy" police officer when he threw explosive device at officer's home and did not intend to cause damage, since requisite intent for defendant's plea could be inferred from acts which he admitted, and his self-serving explanation of his motive was not at odds with intent required for first degree attempted arson, inasmuch as damaging person's house would be effective method of annoying that person. It was neither harsh nor excessive to sentence defendant to 5 to 15 years' imprisonment, considering that he had prior criminal record and was allowed to plead to first degree attempted arson in satisfaction of indictment charging arson, criminal mischief and reckless endangerment, all in first degree, for throwing explosive device at police officer's home. People v Bankowski, 134 A.D.2d 768, 521 N.Y.S.2d 809, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50943 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987).

Convictions of first degree arson and attempted second degree murder based on accessorial conduct would be reversed, even though defendant had helped codefendant transport gasoline and tow chain to location of codefendant's disabled vehicle near convenience store immediately prior to codefendant's hurling of Molotov cocktail through store window in retaliation for racial slur which store clerk had earlier uttered against codefendant, where People failed to show that defendant had any motive to be angry at clerk, that codefendant had told him of his criminal design, that defendant had known that gasoline would be used for making bomb rather than for innocent purpose of starting codefendant's vehicle, or that defendant knew tow chain would be used for moving vehicle away from store to facilitate codefendant's getaway rather than for simply towing vehicle from area. People v Chapman, 137 A.D.2d 884, 524 N.Y.S.2d 863, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1654 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

First degree arson and second degree murder convictions were sustained by proof that fire was deliberately set with petroleum accelerant, that defendant purchased gasoline in metal can shortly before fire, that he smelled of smoke and had burned hair shortly after fire, that he knew victims and was familiar with premises, and that he subsequently admitted to fellow tavern patron that he "got even" when he "torched the place." People v Pierce, 150 A.D.2d 948, 541 N.Y.S.2d 866, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7096 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 817, 546 N.Y.S.2d 575, 545 N.E.2d 889, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 3669 (N.Y. 1989).

Conviction of, inter alia, first degree arson was supported by 2 detailed statements—one written and one videotaped—in which defendant admitted setting fire because he was angry with his wife. People v Maldonado, 157 A.D.2d 674, 549 N.Y.S.2d 775, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 268 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 75 N.Y.2d 921, 555 N.Y.S.2d 40, 554 N.E.2d 77, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 1606 (N.Y. 1990).

In first degree arson trial, circumstantial evidence established that defendant set fire which resulted in deaths of 2 persons and serious injury to third person where (1) defendant had frequented apartment on numerous occasions to smoke cocaine, (2) she had threatened to set apartment on fire just hours before fire broke out, (3) she was seen entering building with plastic jug and exiting 5 or 10 minutes later without it, and (4) fire marshals testified that, in their opinion, fire was deliberately set by ignition of highly flammable liquid poured onto floor near entrance to apartment. Defendant was properly convicted of 3 counts of first degree arson, although she set only one fire, since her conduct resulted in serious injuries to 3 separate persons; each injury constituted element of separate crime of first degree arson. People v Perez, 173 A.D.2d 162, 569 N.Y.S.2d 72, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5296 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 78 N.Y.2d 925, 573 N.Y.S.2d 478, 577 N.E.2d 1070, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 2403 (N.Y. 1991).

In prosecution for second degree murder and first degree arson, defendant was not entitled to jury charge on issue of whether principal prosecution witness was accomplice under CLS CPL § 60.22(2)(a), notwithstanding that witness admitted to initially lying to investigators of arson after defendant fled scene, where (1) there was no proof to controvert witness' statement that he was unwilling bystander, and (2) witness was also victim of crimes given that his residence and all of his possessions were destroyed by fire that was set in his apartment. People v Montgomery, 178 A.D.2d 663, 578 N.Y.S.2d 224, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16899 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1991), app. denied, 79 N.Y.2d 1005, 584 N.Y.S.2d 459, 594 N.E.2d 953, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 2884 (N.Y. 1992).

In trial for, inter alia, first degree arson, expert testimony of fire marshal as to cause of fire usurped jury's function where fire marshal testified that his findings were consistent with bottle of flammable liquid being thrown through window of building which burned down, since testimony was not factual observation of conditions but instead confirmed prosecutor's theory that fire was deliberately set. People v Johnson, 186 A.D.2d 584, 588 N.Y.S.2d 381, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11103 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 763, 594 N.Y.S.2d 725, 610 N.E.2d 398, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 4865 (N.Y. 1992).

Evidence supported conviction for first degree arson and second degree murder where (1) minutes before fire started, 2 witnesses saw defendant carrying soda bottle filled with "brownish liquid," (2) one witness saw defendant standing outside house that burned down holding bottle with rag in it, threatening to burn victim if she did not let defendant inside, (3) after neighbor heard window break and explosion, he saw that defendant no longer held bottle and that second floor window was broken, (4) defendant later told neighbor that she threw bottle because victim would not let her get her shoes, and (5) witness heard defendant muttering that she would fix everybody in house that burned. People v Johnson, 186 A.D.2d 584, 588 N.Y.S.2d 381, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11103 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 763, 594 N.Y.S.2d 725, 610 N.E.2d 398, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 4865 (N.Y. 1992).

In first degree arson trial, defendant was entitled to redaction of statement he made to police, since admission of that part of statement regarding previous fires at houses owned by defendant was highly prejudicial and irrelevant, as there was no proof that any of previous fires were result of arson or that defendant had been charged with insurance fraud as consequence of those fires. People v Mitchell, 203 A.D.2d 948, 611 N.Y.S.2d 400, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4961 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 83 N.Y.2d 969, 616 N.Y.S.2d 22, 639 N.E.2d 762, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 2491 (N.Y. 1994).

Defendant's awareness that his wife and son were present in house at time he set fire was shown by facts that he made his escape by jumping from window located on second floor, which contained 3 bedrooms, and defendant admitted to psychiatrist that he ran through all floors of house after he set fire. People v Harvey, 224 A.D.2d 713, 638 N.Y.S.2d 963, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1974 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 879, 645 N.Y.S.2d 454, 668 N.E.2d 425, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 2174 (N.Y. 1996), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1121, 117 S. Ct. 1257, 137 L. Ed. 2d 337, 1997 U.S. LEXIS 1730 (U.S. 1997).

Court in nonjury trial properly rejected insanity defense to first degree arson where, inter alia, People's psychiatrist testified, based on 2 interviews with defendant as well as examination of his file, that defendant did not lack substantial capacity to know that he was starting fire, that such fire could burn down building and injure occupants therein, and that such conduct was wrong, and defendant's repeated assertions of severe depressions, suicidal intentions, or psychiatric history prior to fire could not be independently documented or confirmed. People v Harvey, 224 A.D.2d 713, 638 N.Y.S.2d 963, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1974 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 879, 645 N.Y.S.2d 454, 668 N.E.2d 425, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 2174 (N.Y. 1996), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1121, 117 S. Ct. 1257, 137 L. Ed. 2d 337, 1997 U.S. LEXIS 1730 (U.S. 1997).

Expert testimony regarding personality profile of arsonist was improperly admitted where prosecution failed to prove that profile was generally accepted by scientific community or that subject was beyond ordinary ken of jury. Expert opinion testimony that fire was set by an individual was improperly admitted in arson trial because it invaded province of jury to decide whether fire was intentionally set. People v Avellanet, 242 A.D.2d 865, 662 N.Y.S.2d 345, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10399 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 868, 668 N.Y.S.2d 566, 691 N.E.2d 638, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4434 (N.Y. 1997).

Evidence was sufficient to support conviction of attempted first degree arson and first degree reckless endangerment where accomplice testified, with sufficient corroboration, that (1) 2 days after he sustained serious injuries in altercation at particular apartment, defendant asked him to point out that apartment, which he did, (2) defendant then parked his car some distance away, got out, carried bottle with rag wrapped around it in direction of apartment, returned, and told accomplice "that's the way we do it in Massachusetts," and (3) accomplice then saw flames emanating from apartment. People v Harrison, 251 A.D.2d 893, 677 N.Y.S.2d 637, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7764 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 949, 681 N.Y.S.2d 480, 704 N.E.2d 233, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4188 (N.Y. 1998).

Cash recovered from defendant's premises and biological evidence from victim's vaginal swabs were admissible in prosecution for second degree murder, first degree arson, rape, and robbery where prosecution provided reasonable assurances that evidence submitted at trial was identical to that involved in crimes, that evidence was in unchanged condition, and that no tampering had occurred. People v Pettigrew, 255 A.D.2d 969, 681 N.Y.S.2d 712, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12236 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 1037, 684 N.Y.S.2d 502, 707 N.E.2d 457, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4743 (N.Y. 1998).

Evidence supported conviction of first degree arson where fire, which was neither accidental nor result of natural causes, originated in corner of dining room, victim was discovered in adjoining bedroom, victim was rendered unconscious by strangulation and later died of strangulation and smoke inhalation, defendant raped and murdered victim and stole property from her apartment, and defendant had motive—to hide his other criminal acts. People v Pettigrew, 255 A.D.2d 969, 681 N.Y.S.2d 712, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12236 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 1037, 684 N.Y.S.2d 502, 707 N.E.2d 457, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4743 (N.Y. 1998).

In prosecution for first degree arson and second degree murder for defendant's setting fire in which her 2 small children were killed, court properly admitted evidence in form of full-sized replica of children's bedroom. People v Kanner, 272 A.D.2d 866, 708 N.Y.S.2d 659, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5232 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 867, 715 N.Y.S.2d 222, 738 N.E.2d 370, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3065 (N.Y. 2000).

Court properly admitted in evidence threats by defendant to burn down her house and kill her children to show defendant's intent to commit arson (CLS Penal § 150.20(1)) and creation of grave risk of death to her children (CLS Penal § 125.25(4)). People v Kanner, 272 A.D.2d 866, 708 N.Y.S.2d 659, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5232 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 867, 715 N.Y.S.2d 222, 738 N.E.2d 370, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3065 (N.Y. 2000).

In a prosecution for first-degree arson in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 150.20, evidence that an apartment fire in which defendant's child was killed had multiple points of origin and was set by an ignitable liquid; that defendant was the only adult present; that she claimed to have rescued her older children from the fire, but neither she nor they smelled of smoke or had symptoms consistent with being in a burning building, was sufficient to support the conviction. People v Casey, 37 A.D.3d 1113, 829 N.Y.S.2d 309, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1219 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 8 N.Y.3d 983, 838 N.Y.S.2d 486, 869 N.E.2d 662, 2007 N.Y. LEXIS 1776 (N.Y. 2007).

Conviction of defendant for arson in the first degree was not against manifest weight of the evidence because the proof adduced at trial established that the fire was not natural or accidental in origin and caused damage to the building, as well as that she knew or could reasonably suspect that the tenant was present. People v Permaul, 174 A.D.3d 1127, 105 N.Y.S.3d 214, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5720 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 34 N.Y.3d 983, 137 N.E.3d 40, 113 N.Y.S.3d 670, 2019 N.Y. LEXIS 3322 (N.Y. 2019).

Based on information that one accomplice planned to purchase cocaine from another, along with evidence that the conspiracy had been ongoing, officers had probable cause to believe that defendant committed a conspiracy offense, but the People did not prove that officers had reasonable suspicion that defendant was concealing drug evidence at the time of the strip search; as there was a reasonable possibility that the admission of the cocaine and testimony regarding the search contributed to his convictions, they were reversed. People v Turner, 178 A.D.3d 70, 111 N.Y.S.3d 718, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7512 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2019).

Agency Opinions

Person convicted of arson in any degree is, by statute, ineligible to become member of volunteer fire company, but issuance to that person of unrestricted certificate of relief from disabilities prevents automatic statutory disqualification; however, certificate does not prevent fire company or fire district commissioners from exercising discretion to deny membership based on facts and circumstances surrounding arson conviction. Person convicted of arson in any degree is also, by statute, ineligible to hold office of fire district commissioner; certificate of relief from disabilities does not apply to public office such as fire district commissioner. 1998 NY Ops Atty Gen I 98-50.

§ 190.25. Criminal impersonation in the second degree

A person is guilty of criminal impersonation in the second degree when he:

1. Impersonates another and does an act in such assumed character with intent to obtain a benefit or to injure or defraud another; or

2. Pretends to be a representative of some person or organization and does an act in such pretended capacity with intent to obtain a benefit or to injure or defraud another; or

3. (a) Pretends to be a public servant, or wears or displays without authority any uniform, badge, insignia or facsimile thereof by which such public servant is lawfully distinguished, or falsely expresses by his words or actions that he is a public servant or is acting with approval or authority of a public agency or department; and (b) so acts with intent to induce another to submit to such pretended official authority, to solicit funds or to otherwise cause another to act in reliance upon that pretense.

4. Impersonates another by communication by internet website or electronic means with intent to obtain a benefit or injure or defraud another, or by such communication pretends to be a public servant in order to induce another to submit to such authority or act in reliance on such pretense.

Criminal impersonation in the second degree is a class A misdemeanor.

HISTORY:

Add, L 1965, ch 1030, § 1, eff Sept 1, 1967, with substance derived from §§ 854, 928, 930, 931, 936–b, 942, 1278, 1846; amd, L 1980, ch 27, § 1, eff Sept 1, 1980; L 2008, ch 304, § 1, eff Nov 1, 2008.

Commission Staff Notes: This section, which is a substantial restatement of former law, is designed to replace a variety of former Penal Law provisions which prohibited the impersonation of public officers (former §§ 854, 931, 936-b, 1846) and private persons (former §§ 928, 930, 942, 1278).

I. Generally

1. In general

Charge that defendant impersonated FBI agent for entire 5 years that he knew complainant was not unreasonably broad time period, and did not require dismissal of indictment, since criminal impersonation can constitute continuing offense, in that one can impersonate another with intent to defraud with single act or series of acts constituting pattern of behavior. People v Sanchez, 84 N.Y.2d 440, 618 N.Y.S.2d 887, 643 N.E.2d 509, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 3389 (N.Y. 1994).

Defendant's act of producing driver's license and registration in name other than his real name, after being stopped by policeman who suspected that he was driving while under influence of alcohol, did not constitute crime of criminal impersonation where record indicated that legitimate license had been issued by Department of Motor Vehicles for person named on defendant's license, where People failed to prove that name on license was anything but name used by defendant to secure license, and where defendant was even indicted in name shown on license. People v Powell, 59 A.D.2d 950, 399 N.Y.S.2d 477, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14203 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1977).

Evidence was not legally sufficient to support conviction for second degree criminal impersonation where People did not establish at trial that defendant assumed identity of real person. In trial for second degree criminal impersonation, court improperly instructed jury that defendant could be found guilty on finding that he pretended to be person with "a certain status, with a certain occupation or of a certain official character"; court should have instructed jury to determine whether "defendant impersonated another person, to wit (name of person impersonated)." People v Sadiq, 236 A.D.2d 638, 654 N.Y.S.2d 35, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1580 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied sub. nom., People v Sikandar, 89 N.Y.2d 1100, 660 N.Y.S.2d 394, 682 N.E.2d 995, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 2136 (N.Y. 1997).

Defendant's conviction of first degree impersonation would be reduced to second degree where there was no longer predicate felony because defendant's conviction of third degree weapon possession had been reversed. People v Archer, 238 A.D.2d 183, 656 N.Y.S.2d 237, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3717 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1997).

In prosecution for third degree sodomy, Pennsylvania statute was not sufficiently analogous to CLS Penal § 170.10 to render Pennsylvania conviction predicate felony under CLS Penal § 70.06 where (1) § 170.10 penalizes false making, completion, or alteration of written instrument "with intent to defraud, deceive or injure another," (2) Pennsylvania statute allows conviction even where there is simply "knowledge [on the part of the defendant] that he is facilitating a fraud or injury to be perpetrated by anyone," which cannot be equated with intent that other person succeed, and thus is more akin to misdemeanor of fourth degree facilitation under CLS Penal § 115.00, and (3) Pennsylvania statute further proscribes unauthorized use of "any writing [which includes a credit card] so that it purports to be the act of another," which is analogous to misdemeanor of second degree impersonation under CLS Penal § 190.25. People v Rota, 245 A.D.2d 133, 665 N.Y.S.2d 661, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12998 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

In trial for second degree criminal impersonation and related offenses claiming that defendant sold house barge belonging to complainant without authorization, defendant was deprived of his constitutional right to confront witnesses and present his agency defense when court refused to allow him to cross-examine complainant concerning his need to acquire money while distancing himself from sale of his house barge to avoid charges of defrauding his creditors. People v Panetta, 250 A.D.2d 710, 673 N.Y.S.2d 434, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5493 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 903, 680 N.Y.S.2d 67, 702 N.E.2d 852, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 3522 (N.Y. 1998).

Defendant's guilt of second degree criminal impersonation was supported by evidence that he gained entry to victim's home by posing as utility company repairman. People v Mitchell, 254 A.D.2d 830, 679 N.Y.S.2d 761, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10572 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 984, 683 N.Y.S.2d 765, 706 N.E.2d 753, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4455 (N.Y. 1998).

In prosecution for second degree assault and second degree impersonation, evidence that defendant threatened to kill police officer involved in his arrest was admissible, despite lack of CLS CPL § 710.30 notice to defendant of that evidence, where defendant moved for suppression of that evidence, thus excusing notice requirement. People v Laws, 286 A.D.2d 991, 730 N.Y.S.2d 911, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9010 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2001), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 706, 739 N.Y.S.2d 107, 765 N.E.2d 310, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 355 (N.Y. 2002).

Evidence was legally sufficient to establish defendant's guilt of criminal impersonation in the second degree under circumstances in which, in a written statement to police, defendant admitted pretending to be the victim when calling the police in an effort to close a criminal mischief case against her, as well as leaving her home phone number for the police to ostensibly contact the victim; the detective testified that he twice called the number that defendant left with the police and talked to a woman who identified herself as the victim, and during the second call, the victim was actually present at the police station, so the person the detective spoke to could not possibly have been the victim, and the victim stated that she had not previously spoken to the detective by phone. People v Hooks, 71 A.D.3d 1184, 896 N.Y.S.2d 501, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1678 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2010).

There was no probable cause for defendant's arrest for criminal impersonation, N.Y. Penal Law § 190.25(1), during a traffic stop; while defendant had another person's driver's license in his possession, he did not offer it as his own and he did not impersonate anyone. The police never even asked defendant to produce a driver's license. People v Omowale, 83 A.D.3d 614, 923 N.Y.S.2d 442, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3265 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. dismissed, in part, aff'd, 18 N.Y.3d 825, 938 N.Y.S.2d 831, 962 N.E.2d 252, 2011 N.Y. LEXIS 3591 (N.Y. 2011).

People's alternative argument that there was probable cause to arrest defendant for attempted criminal impersonation, N.Y. Penal Law § 190.25(1), during a traffic stop was not persuasive; while defendant had another person's driver's license in his possession, he did not offer it as his own and he did not impersonate anyone. Defendant's mere act of holding the driver's license in apparent preparation for a criminal impersonation does not constitute a punishable attempt. People v Omowale, 83 A.D.3d 614, 923 N.Y.S.2d 442, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3265 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. dismissed, in part, aff'd, 18 N.Y.3d 825, 938 N.Y.S.2d 831, 962 N.E.2d 252, 2011 N.Y. LEXIS 3591 (N.Y. 2011).

Off-duty auxiliary policeman could not be convicted of criminal impersonation under Penal Law § 190.25, subd 3 where, encouraged by his neighbors, he entered the police room of a housing project and, identifying himself as a policeman, asked a real police officer what was transpiring therein. People v Jackson, 72 Misc. 2d 297, 339 N.Y.S.2d 429, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1256 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1972).

Defendant's failure to properly identify himself to a police officer was not an offense proscribed by an existing statute and was thus not "an independently unlawful act" on which a finding of guilty of obstructing governmental administration (Penal Law § 195.05) could be based, where defendant's conduct did not amount to criminal impersonation (Penal Law § 190.25) or the making of an apparently sworn false statement (Penal Law § 210.35). People v Gaissert, 75 Misc. 2d 478, 348 N.Y.S.2d 82, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1598 (N.Y. County Ct. 1973).

Defendant was guilty of criminal impersonation where he sought to impersonate transit authority conductor and displayed conductor's badge in effort to prevent police officer from arresting him for possession of a weapon. Fact that arrest of defendant for possession of dangerous weapon was invalid did not taint subsequent arrest of defendant for criminal impersonation where such impersonation was attempted to avoid original arrest. People v Diamond, 77 Misc. 2d 412, 353 N.Y.S.2d 688, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1152 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1974).

In absence of presentence report, trial court did not have discretion to sentence defendant convicted of criminal impersonation, a Class A misdemeanor, to more than 90 days' imprisonment. Imposition of nine months' sentence was excessive upon conviction of criminal impersonation, a Class A misdemeanor, based on charges stemming from defendant's signing name other than her own to supermarket cash register receipt in amount of $35, when she had only $26, and failure to return with balance as she promised. People v Bentley, 78 Misc. 2d 578, 359 N.Y.S.2d 391, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1451 (N.Y. App. Term 1974).

Statute providing that person is guilty of criminal impersonation when he impersonates another and does an act in such assumed character with intent to injure or defraud another does not proscribe cross-dressing. People v Simmons, 79 Misc. 2d 249, 357 N.Y.S.2d 362, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1640 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1974).

Mere proof that defendant gave police name other than his own, standing alone, would be insufficient to establish that defendant committed criminal impersonation without demonstration that name given was that of real person and that purpose of impersonation was to obtain benefit or injure or defraud another. People v Jones, 84 Misc. 2d 737, 376 N.Y.S.2d 885, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3207 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1975).

Defendants, who had solicited money from residents of an area while pretending that they represented the junior class of a high school collecting for the cancer fund and had used the money for their own purposes and who upon arraignment in Justice Court pleaded guilty to criminal impersonation and petit larceny, may not be prosecuted under indictments charging them with scheme to defraud in the first degree; when the defendants pleaded guilty they were, in effect, pleading guilty to the equivalent of scheme to defraud in the second degree, the necessary elements of which are criminal impersonation and larceny, and scheme to defraud in the second degree is a lesser included offense of scheme to defraud in the first degree. A plea to the lesser included offense bars a plea to the greater offense under the circumstances. People v Lasek, 94 Misc. 2d 1007, 405 N.Y.S.2d 991, 1978 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2337 (N.Y. County Ct. 1978).

In a prosecution for criminal impersonation pursuant to Penal Law § 190.25(1) the information would be dismissed for being insufficient on its face where defendant allegedly gave a police officer an erroneous date of birth when stopped for a traffic infraction and the gravamen of the offense was holding oneself out as some other specific individual. People v Danisi, 113 Misc. 2d 753, 449 N.Y.S.2d 874, 1982 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3374 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1982).

A verdict convicting defendant of resisting arrest under Penal Law § 205.30 and criminal impersonation under Penal Law § 190.25 would be set aside on the ground that the initial arrest was unauthorized pursuant to CPL § 140.25, where a railroad policeman, who was driving a railroad-owned vehicle on a city street to and from a railroad-owned facility on his tour of duty made a warrantless arrest of defendant for blowing his horn on a city street, in that the arresting peace officer was not acting pursuant to his "special duties" in the situation, it was not established that the offense was committed in the arresting peace officer's presence, nor was there evidence that the peace officer actually observed defendant touching his horn or that defendant was not properly sounding his horn to warn a person or animal of danger; further, the charge that defendant, by telling the arresting officer that he was "one of you" and that he had left his badge at home was guilty of impersonating a peace officer cannot stand, where it was not established that defendant, a retired city police detective working as a licensed detective at a race track, was not a peace officer entitled to carry a badge. People v Hartman, 114 Misc. 2d 138, 451 N.Y.S.2d 347, 1982 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3447 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1982).

A defendant, who when apprehended for traffic violations lied to the police officer about his identity using a fictitious or assumed name and who admitted that he had disposed of his wallet to avoid prosecution under his real name, did not violate Penal Law § 190.25(1) where, although he did intend to obtain a benefit by using another name, he had not passed himself off as another real person having a certain identity. People v Sherman, 116 Misc. 2d 109, 455 N.Y.S.2d 528, 1982 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3842 (N.Y. City Ct. 1982).

Trial court found no basis to dismiss an information against defendant pursuant to N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law §§ 100.40(1) and 100.15(3), as the information was legally sufficient based on defendant's having been stopped for a traffic offense, after which defendant showed the police officer a fake detective shield and told him that he was a member of the New York City detective force; defendant's intent to induce the officer to act in reliance on his pretense for purposes of N.Y. Penal Law § 190.25(3) was inferred, the fake shield constituted a "forged instrument" under N.Y. Penal Law § 170.00(7) for purposes of a charge under N.Y. Penal Law § 170.20, and defendant allegedly did not possess a valid license for purposes of N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 509(1). People v Makwana, 844 N.Y.S.2d 607, 17 Misc. 3d 296, 238 N.Y.L.J. 37, 2007 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 5368 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2007).

N.Y. Penal Law § 170.00(7) "forged instrument" definition does not encompass possession of a facsimile of a police badge, which is expressly dealt with in N.Y. Penal Law §§ 190.25, 190.26. People v Simmons, 774 N.Y.S.2d 284, 2 Misc. 3d 728, 2003 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1631 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2003).

Evidence was legally sufficient to establish defendant's guilt of criminal impersonation in the second degree under circumstances in which, in a written statement to police, defendant admitted pretending to be the victim when calling the police in an effort to close a criminal mischief case against her, as well as leaving her home phone number for the police to ostensibly contact the victim; the detective testified that he twice called the number that defendant left with the police and talked to a woman who identified herself as the victim, and during the second call, the victim was actually present at the police station, so the person the detective spoke to could not possibly have been the victim; and the victim stated that she had not previously spoken to the detective by phone. People v Hooks, 71 A.D.3d 1184, 896 N.Y.S.2d 501, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1678 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2010).

Unexcused, belated disclosure of e-mails between the prosecutor and a mother of a minor who defendant allegedly engaged in improper sexual conduct with, which showed the minor's motive to lie, did not affect the verdict with respect to sodomy charges relating to another minor or some of the misdemeanor charges, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 130.45, 130.40, 190.25(1), and 240.50(3)(a), as the evidence against defendant was overwhelming; there was no reasonable possibility that the serious disclosure failures by the prosecution affected the verdict in that regard. People v Sinha, 84 A.D.3d 35, 922 N.Y.S.2d 275, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2750 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2011), aff'd, 19 N.Y.3d 932, 951 N.Y.S.2d 697, 976 N.E.2d 223, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 1837 (N.Y. 2012).

Two counts in a grand jury indictment charging defendant with the crime of coercion required dismissal as the People instructed the grand jury on the law but did not specify the location, or anything else, for either count. The procedure utilized gave the appearance that the grand jury only voted on the accusatory part of the indictment, leaving it to the People to determine and fill in the factual statement supporting each count, including which coercion count applied to the events at one victim's home, at another location, and who the victim was for each of the counts. People v Huntington, 867 N.Y.S.2d 377, 20 Misc. 3d 1114(A), 240 N.Y.L.J. 25, 2008 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 7175 (N.Y. County Ct.), aff'd, 57 A.D.3d 1238, 869 N.Y.S.2d 702, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9806 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

Defendant's motion to dismiss a superseding information pursuant to CPL 170.40 was denied because there existed no compelling factor, consideration, or circumstance demonstrating that conviction or prosecution of defendant upon the counts charged in the superseding information would constitute or result in an injustice as defendant was alleged to have identified himself as a corrections officer during and after his arrest for criminal mischief, menacing, disorderly conduct, and harassment. People v Copeland, 52 Misc. 3d 372, 29 N.Y.S.3d 132, 2016 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1361 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2016).

Where an arrestee alleged that an officer asked whether the arrestee was an officer only after the officer had reached into the arrestee's wallet without the arrestee's permission and removed the arrestee's police union membership card, the officer was not entitled to summary judgment based on qualified immunity as to the arrestee's false arrest claims, because viewing the full factual context in the light most favorable to the arrestee, there was a genuine issue for a jury as to whether the officer had probable cause to arrest the arrestee for criminal impersonation. Simpson v City of New York, 793 F.3d 259, 2015 U.S. App. LEXIS 12163 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2015).

Because petitioner was convicted under overbroad version of New York criminal impersonation statute that had been narrowed by the state court, some of his convictions were invalid as jury could have impermissibly convicted him on those counts based on overbroad interpretation of "injure." Golb v AG of N.Y., 870 F.3d 89, 2017 U.S. App. LEXIS 16746 (2d Cir. 2017), cert. denied, 138 S. Ct. 988, 200 L. Ed. 2d 251, 2018 U.S. LEXIS 1034 (U.S. 2018).

Petitioner's First Amendment facial challenge to New York criminal impersonation statute failed because it was not unconstitutionally vague or overbroad as it was fairly clear what conduct fell within it. Golb v AG of N.Y., 870 F.3d 89, 2017 U.S. App. LEXIS 16746 (2d Cir. 2017), cert. denied, 138 S. Ct. 988, 200 L. Ed. 2d 251, 2018 U.S. LEXIS 1034 (U.S. 2018).

Plaintiff submitted sufficient evidence to create a genuine issue of fact that precluded summary judgment on the N.Y. Gen. Mun. Law § 205-e claim based upon an alleged violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 190.25(3) where one defendant created the false impression at the scene that he was acting with the approval or authority of the Nassau County Police Department, and caused others to rely upon that pretense. Breitkopf v Gentile, 41 F. Supp. 3d 220, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 121581 (E.D.N.Y. 2014).

2. Sufficiency of evidence

Where defendant started an Internet campaign to promote the views of his father while attacking the integrity and reputation of other Dead Sea Scrolls scholars, the mere creation of email accounts in the names of four individuals did not constitute criminal impersonation because defendant did not cause any pecuniary loss or interfere with governmental operations. Therefore, the evidence was insufficient to support his convictions. People v Golb, 23 N.Y.3d 455, 991 N.Y.S.2d 792, 15 N.E.3d 805, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 1093 (N.Y.), reh'g denied, 24 N.Y.3d 932, 993 N.Y.S.2d 543, 17 N.E.3d 1139, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 2379 (N.Y. 2014), cert. denied, 574 U.S. 1079, 135 S. Ct. 1009, 190 L. Ed. 2d 839, 2015 U.S. LEXIS 87 (U.S. 2015).

II. Under Former Law

2. Under former § 928

False personation of another and in such assumed character marriage to woman with her connivance is violation of § 928 and the woman may be convicted as a principal. People v Thompson, 276 N.Y. 640, 12 N.E.2d 798, 276 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 640, 1938 N.Y. LEXIS 1228 (N.Y. 1938).

An action to restrain a woman from holding herself out as the lawful wife of plaintiff's husband is not within this section. Hodecker v Stricker, 20 A.D. 245, 46 N.Y.S. 808, 1897 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1717 (N.Y. App. Div. 1897).

In order to sustain a conviction for falsely personating another in violation of subd 5 of this section it is necessary to show not only an act of false personation of another by the party charged with the crime, but also that there was some act which if done by the person falsely personated might result to that person's injury or disadvantage. It is not essential to a conviction that the act on the part of the person falsely personating another would necessarily subject the party personated, if doing the same act, to a charge, forfeiture or penalty, but it is sufficient if the act done, if done by the personated "might, in any event," lead to the imposition of a penalty. One who appears and answers in criminal proceeding in which defendant is charged with disorderly conduct and falsely personates true defendant therein is guilty of violation of subd 5 of this section. People ex rel. Harris v Mallon, 191 A.D. 443, 181 N.Y.S. 487, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4736 (N.Y. App. Div. 1920).

3. Under former § 930

Purpose of § 930 as to prevent impositions upon persons who part with their property as result of commendable charitable impulses, though buyer paid market value therefor. People v Yarmish, 68 N.Y.S.2d 618, 189 Misc. 1041, 1947 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2103 (N.Y. Gen. Sess. 1947).

4. Under former § 931

Conviction under this section was sustained over contention that a detective had been improperly committed to corroborate identification previously made by the complainant. People v Dancyger, 308 N.Y. 1040, 127 N.E.2d 870, 308 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 1040, 1955 N.Y. LEXIS 1263 (N.Y. 1955).

Conviction of defendant of falsely impersonating state motor vehicle inspector and threatening to place driver of motor vehicle under arrest unless he paid defendant small sum of money, is against weight of evidence where it appears that, although gravamen of offense, according to information, is impersonation of public officer for purpose of obtaining paltry sum as bribe to refrain from making arrest, yet defendant immediately sought to put matter in hands of an unknown and independent officer of law and also evinced no interest in obtaining possession of money. People v Nastri, 220 A.D. 141, 221 N.Y.S. 182, 1927 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9250 (N.Y. App. Div. 1927).

Court of special sessions has jurisdiction of violation of this section. People ex rel. Bailey v McCann, 222 A.D. 465, 226 N.Y.S. 449, 1928 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8089 (N.Y. App. Div. 1928).

Arrest, search, and seizure of defendant, charged with false impersonation of a police officer, was not rendered unlawful because the case was submitted by the trial judge to the jury under § 1846 of the Penal Law instead of under this section. People v Manasek, 20 A.D.2d 661, 246 N.Y.S.2d 567, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4536 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), cert. denied, 379 U.S. 867, 85 S. Ct. 139, 13 L. Ed. 2d 70, 1964 U.S. LEXIS 781 (U.S. 1964).

Revenue agent or officer is a public officer within the meaning of the statute. People v Chesnik, 205 N.Y.S. 146, 123 Misc. 509, 1922 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1702 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1922).

5. Under former § 1846

"Revenue agent or officer" is "public officer" within meaning of this section, but revenue agent is not a "peace officer" under Code of Criminal Procedure, §§ 154 and 960. Though this section makes it misdemeanor to hold oneself out as peace officer, or to exercise functions of such without due authority, verdict adjudging various defendants guilty upon count in indictment under this section will be set aside where evidence is insufficient to show that they acted or pretended to act "under pretense or color of any process." People v Chesnik, 205 N.Y.S. 146, 123 Misc. 509, 1922 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1702 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1922).

The legality of an arrest cannot be considered in determining the jurisdiction of a court to hear evidence of commission of a crime. Rose v McKean, 76 N.Y.S.2d 391, 190 Misc. 982, 1948 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2065 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1948).

One who, when approached by detectives suspecting him of burglary, flashes a police badge and claims to be, himself, a police officer, is subject to arrest and search without warrant as having committed a crime in the presence of the arresting officer, under § 177 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. People v Manasek, 33 Misc. 2d 832, 225 N.Y.S.2d 673, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2032 (N.Y. County Ct. 1961).

Notes to Unpublished Decisions

I. Generally

1. In general

Unpublished decision: Defendants had at least arguable probable cause to file criminal charges against plaintiff for impersonating a police officer; the fact that plaintiff was suspended, rather than terminated, at the time of the traffic stop did not change the court's analysis because plaintiff arguably could have violated the criminal impersonation statute because he lacked authority to act as a police officer while suspended. Barcomb v Sabo, 487 Fed. Appx. 645, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 14009 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2012).

ARTICLE 195

OFFICIAL MISCONDUCT AND OBSTRUCTION OF PUBLIC SERVANTS GENERALLY

HISTORY:

Add, L 1965, ch 1030, § 1, eff Sept 1, 1967.

§ 195.00. Official misconduct

A public servant is guilty of official misconduct when, with intent to obtain a benefit or deprive another person of a benefit:

1. He commits an act relating to his office but constituting an unauthorized exercise of his official functions, knowing that such act is unauthorized; or

2. He knowingly refrains from performing a duty which is imposed upon him by law or is clearly inherent in the nature of his office.

Official misconduct is a class A misdemeanor.

HISTORY:

Add, L 1965, ch 1030, § 1, with substance derived from §§ 373, 461, 462, 489, 854, 997, 1231, 1792, 1830, 1839, 1840–1844, 1847, 1857, 1862–1867, 1869, 1874–1876.; amd, L 1990, ch 906, § 1, eff Nov 1, 1990.

Commission Staff Notes: This section replaces some thirty former Penal Law provisions which defined misdemeanor offenses of misfeasance and nonfeasance by public servants (see Table II). Most of the crimes were very narrow ones of commission and omission involving violations of specific duties by specified public officers. In the main, they were virtually crimes of absolute liability; little was required in the way of criminal intent, a "willful" commission of a proscribed act or a neglect of an official duty ordinarily being sufficient. While one such provision, applying to "public officers" generally, appeared to define an offense of general application, it was expressly limited to violations of duty not covered by any of the more specific sections (former PL § 1841).

This section condenses this general area of official misconduct into one offense. Subdivision 1 covers conduct of commission, and subdivision 2 conduct of omission. A specific mens rea is predicated: criminal liability attaches only when the offender intends "to obtain a benefit or to injure or deprive another person of a benefit." This excludes unauthorized conduct or neglect of duty, which, though possibly a proper basis for removal or disciplinary action in some instances, does not seem a fair basis for the automatic imposition of criminal sanctions.

In absence of showing of same single scheme to collect corrupt payments from architect and contractor in connection with single school construction project or any equivalent indentity of time, place and circumstances or persons from whom payments were to be exacted, evidence as to payments to architect was inadmissible to show common scheme or plan to receive similar corrupt payments from contractor, in prosecution based on payments to contractor. People v Fiore, 34 N.Y.2d 81, 356 N.Y.S.2d 38, 312 N.E.2d 174, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1601 (N.Y. 1974).

Dismissal of indictment charging official misconduct and accepting a bribe was proper, where there was no testimony before grand jury showing proof of a "benefit" to defendant. People v Ioppolo, 45 A.D.2d 745, 356 N.Y.S.2d 662, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4719 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1974).

Village mayor's acts constituted unauthorized exercise of his official functions, and he was properly found guilty of official misconduct, where he threatened to fire village clerk if she testified against his wife in harassment trial; verbal expressions constitute acts just as do physical movements, and defendant had spoken in his capacity as mayor. People v Perlman, 121 A.D.2d 765, 503 N.Y.S.2d 174, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 58741 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

Verdict convicting defendant of official misconduct, and acquitting him of second degree bribe receiving and receiving unlawful gratuities, was not repugnant where court instructed jury that one element of bribe receiving and receiving unlawful gratuities was that defendant solicited, accepted "and" agreed to accept benefit, rather than solicited "or" agreed; thus, jury could have concluded that defendant did not actually accept money but that he still committed unauthorized act constituting official misconduct. People v Funchus, 133 A.D.2d 843, 520 N.Y.S.2d 209, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 51893 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

In prosecution charging police officer with petit larceny, third degree possession of controlled substance, and official misconduct for theft of narcotics, "coke user's kit" recovered during lawful search of officer's car was properly admitted in evidence, even though it constituted evidence of uncharged crimes, since officer's intent was not readily inferable from his acts, and "kit" created inference of guilty knowledge with respect to crimes charged. Court properly allowed officer to be questioned regarding his failure to report seizure of narcotics and his alleged attempted narcotics arrest since officer was under obligation to speak and his silence was patently inconsistent with his defense that his failure to report attempted arrest or seizure and his failure to voucher narcotics was due to injuries he sustained during attempted arrest and his concern for recovery of his gun. People v Hardwick, 137 A.D.2d 714, 524 N.Y.S.2d 798, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1762 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 71 N.Y.2d 969, 529 N.Y.S.2d 80, 524 N.E.2d 434, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 1950 (N.Y. 1988).

Evidence established official misconduct by defendant deputy city clerk where undercover officer represented to defendant that he was contractor interested in obtaining city contract for purchase and development of particular plot of land owned by city, defendant stated to witness that he expected $50,000 "consulting fee" from contractor, at meeting with witness and undercover officer defendant made statements indicating that he could assist officer in obtaining contract, and defendant furtively gave witness unpublished prospectus 8 days before announcement of public bidding on contract and directed him to transfer it to undercover officer. People v Hurst, 160 A.D.2d 1023, 554 N.Y.S.2d 945, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5012 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1990).

Defendant's background as police officer who had abused his position by improper conduct over lengthy time period warranted consecutive sentences for his convictions of official misconduct, second degree aggravated harassment, and first and second degree harassment. People v Maloney, 233 A.D.2d 681, 650 N.Y.S.2d 342, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12071 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

Defendant's convictions for official misconduct and coercion were not supported by sufficient evidence that defendant had the requisite mental state, as it was not shown that he knew that certain directives regarding a citizen's application to become a village police officer were not authorized. People v Hutchins, 136 A.D.3d 1148, 25 N.Y.S.3d 699, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1222 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2016).

Although an EMT did not render emergency aid to an ill citizen despite being asked for assistance, the city, the fire department, and emergency medical services were not liable because, even if the EMT was guilty of misconduct, the violation of this statute did not give rise to a special duty so as to impose tort liability; the citizen was not of a class for whose particular benefit the statute was enacted. Rennix v Jackson, 152 A.D.3d 551, 59 N.Y.S.3d 57, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5307 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2017).

Attorney was suspended from the practice of law for two years because the attorney was convicted of the serious crime of official misconduct, adversely reflecting on the attorney's fitness as a lawyer, in the attorney's capacity as a public official, based on acts committed knowingly and with venal purpose to defend the attorney against a sexual harassment claim, when the attorney threatened to transfer an employee unless the employee provided the attorney with evidence incriminating another employee alleging the sexual harassment. Matter of Bonilla, 154 A.D.3d 117, 60 N.Y.S.3d 405, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6342 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2017).

In order for an indictment to charge the criminal act of official misconduct, it must contain a factual allegation of the defendant's intent to benefit by his refraining from making the arrest which, must be a venal or culpable motive for failing to perform his duty. A culpable motive is required which must be directly connected with the duty which the public servant refrains from performing, and such motive must be of a venal nature. People v Thompson, 58 Misc. 2d 511, 296 N.Y.S.2d 166, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1857 (N.Y. County Ct. 1969).

A criminal offense constitutes an unauthorized act whenever such offense arises from and relates to the function of the perpetrator's public office, and particularly so, whenever such offense occurs while the public servant is on duty, or for that matter, whenever such offense occurs, either directly or indirectly, in the course of the public servant's work, employment, or duty. People v Volpicello, 72 Misc. 2d 641, 340 N.Y.S.2d 154, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1222 (N.Y. County Ct. 1972).

New statute extending limitation of time for bringing prosecution action for offenses in the nature of misconduct in public office was held not be ex post facto as applied to prosecution which was not barred at time new limitation statute was adopted; thus indictment dated after running of statute of limitations in effect at time of offense was not untimely. People v Pfitzmayer, 72 Misc. 2d 739, 340 N.Y.S.2d 85, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1223 (N.Y. County Ct. 1972).

Although third count of indictment was in language of the official misconduct statute it was legally insufficient where it did not specify the conduct underlying the charge nor reveal any facts supporting it. People v Gibson, 77 Misc. 2d 49, 354 N.Y.S.2d 273, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1187 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), modified, 40 A.D.2d 818, 338 N.Y.S.2d 478, 1972 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3228 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1972).

That count of indictment did not charge defendant state legislator with appointing person to job which defendant knew would not be performed by such person but merely charging the appointment of such person and alleging defendant's corrupt reason, namely to obtain a benefit, failed to sufficiently charge crime of official misconduct since statute requires that in addition to the corrupt motive the act itself be unauthorized and without scope of defendant's official duties. Officer may perform his official duties for an unworthy and illegal purpose without violating official misconduct statute, although he would be in violation of other provisions of law of penal nature such as Public Officers Law relating to unlawful fees and payments. People v Hochberg, 87 Misc. 2d 1024, 386 N.Y.S.2d 740, 1976 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2618 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1976), aff'd, 62 A.D.2d 239, 404 N.Y.S.2d 161, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10444 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1978).

Acceptance by a deputy building commissioner of moneys for preparation of plans which are subject to his approval would be an unauthorized exercise of his official functions under provisions of Penal Law governing official misconduct. People v Pinto, 88 Misc. 2d 303, 387 N.Y.S.2d 385, 1976 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2669 (N.Y. City Ct. 1976).

The administrator of a county civil service employees' association benefit and legal services funds was not a "public officer" within the meaning of Pen Law § 10.00(15) and could not therefore be charged with the bribery and official misconduct offenses defined by Pen Law §§ 195.00, 200.10, 200.25, and 200.35; defendant was, however, a "labor official" within the meaning of Pen Law § 180.10 for purposes of charging violations of Pen Law §§ 105.05 and 180.25. People v Confoy, 110 Misc. 2d 252, 441 N.Y.S.2d 941, 1981 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3073 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1981).

Public servant, to be guilty of official misconduct, must intend to obtain benefit for himself. People v Esposito, 144 Misc. 2d 919, 545 N.Y.S.2d 468, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 499 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1989), aff'd, 160 A.D.2d 378, 554 N.Y.S.2d 16, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3957 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1990).

Emergency medical technician was not entitled to dismissal of count of official misconduct on basis that his employer was private corporation and he was not public employee as defined in CLS Penal 10.00(15), since his employer was provided, maintained and operated pursuant to CLS Unconsol § 7385(9) by New York City Health and Hospitals Corporation, which was public benefit corporation. In trial of emergency medical technician on charges of official misconduct and third degree sexual abuse, in which it was alleged that he touched private parts of female complainant while she was being taken by ambulance to hospital, court did not err in precluding defense from cross-examining complainant as to amount of damages she was seeking in related civil suit. People v Abranko, 162 Misc. 2d 739, 621 N.Y.S.2d 433, 1994 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 585 (N.Y. App. Term 1994).

CLS Penal § 195.00(2), whereby public servant is accused of failing to perform "duty clearly inherent in the nature of his office," sufficiently apprises reasonable man of nature of acts prohibited and of what conduct is required of him to comply with due process protections. Indictment charging defendant with official misconduct was not facially insufficient where it tracked language of CLS Penal § 195.00(2) under which defendant was charged; bill of particulars and supplementation requested by defendant would provide him with fair notice of accusations against him and enable him to prepare adequate defense. School board member who voted to approve paid services of insurance consultant with whom he had preexisting fee sharing arrangement, and voted to approve contracts with insurance provider from which he benefited financially, while supposedly acting under CLS Educ § 1709(34-a), was properly charged with official misconduct where grand jury evidence indicated that he was aware of his statutory duties, including his ethical obligation to perform those duties free from conflicts and disclose such conflicts; mere fact that conduct charged was also prohibited by rules of ethical conduct adopted by school board under CLS Gen Mun § 806 did not preclude criminal prosecution. People v Lynch, 176 Misc. 2d 430, 674 N.Y.S.2d 894, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 117 (N.Y. County Ct. 1998).

Defendant's motion pursuant to N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 100.15(3), seeking to dismiss a charge against her of official misconduct, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 195.00(2), due to facial insufficiency, lacked merit, as the complaint sufficiently alleged on its face what defendant intended to obtain as a benefit for her failure to provide treatment to a restaurant worker who had fallen ill; there was no requirement that the complaint specifically indicate which allegation constituted the "benefit." People v Jackson, 938 N.Y.S.2d 726, 35 Misc. 3d 179, 2011 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 6545 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2011).

Defendant's motion pursuant to N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 100.15(3), seeking to dismiss a charge against her of official misconduct, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 195.00(2), due to facial insufficiency, lacked merit, as the complaint sufficiently alleged that defendant knowingly refrained from performing a duty imposed upon her by law or clearly inherent in the nature of her office where she refrained from helping a restaurant worker who had fallen ill. People v Jackson, 938 N.Y.S.2d 726, 35 Misc. 3d 179, 2011 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 6545 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2011).

Unauthorized conduct with an intent to benefit is within the ambit of N.Y. Penal Law § 195.00, while unauthorized conduct in the absence of an intent to benefit is not a crime; where an officer's function was to receive a report of suspected drug activity and to refer the informant to a detective, the officer engaged in official misconduct when he telephoned the suspect's mother and warned her that her son should stay away from the site of the suspected activity. People v Lucarelli, 300 A.D.2d 1013, 753 N.Y.S.2d 638, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12865 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2002).

Where a town highway superintendent admitted to official misconduct in exercising his duties as a town officer in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 195.00(1), summary removal under N.Y. Pub. Off. Law § 36 was warranted for the misconduct, which violated the public trust. Grady v Yeno, 302 A.D.2d 385, 754 N.Y.S.2d 562, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 776 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003).

Defendant's conviction for official misconduct was reversed because, at trial, there was a variance between the proof and the indictment, as amplified by a bill of particulars, and the proof was directed exclusively to a theory other than that charged in the indictment, so the proof was insufficient to support the conviction. People v Burnett, 306 A.D.2d 947, 760 N.Y.S.2d 800, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6863 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2003).

Appellate court confirmed a hearing panel's finding that an attorney who pled guilty to a charge of official misconduct, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 195.00(1), after he falsified a memorandum signed by a City of New York (New York) employee to make it appear as if he had received a salary increase, violated N.Y. Code Prof. Resp. DR 1-102(a)(3), (4), and (7), and it suspended the attorney for six months. In re Vasquez, 1 A.D.3d 16, 766 N.Y.S.2d 419, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10934 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2003).

In spite of mitigating evidence, an attorney who was convicted of official misconduct pursuant to Penal Law § 195 while serving as a county official and who also was convicted in an unrelated incident of second degree coercion and harassment was suspended from practicing law for two years for violating N.Y. Code Prof. Resp. DR 1-102(A)(3), (7), (22 NYCRR 1200.3(a)(3), (7)), with credit for an interim suspension imposed immediately upon his conviction pursuant to N.Y. Jud. Ct. Acts Law § 90(4)(f); notwithstanding mitigating evidence, which included his unawareness of the bidding requirements he violated, his payment of restitution and resignation from his position, his lack of prior disciplinary history, and his enrollment in divinity studies in a seminary, he had been convicted of a serious crime and other offenses committed in his capacity as a public official. Matter of Sylver, 33 A.D.3d 266, 820 N.Y.S.2d 643, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10460 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

Prosecution of an election official accused of electioneering within a polling place in violation of his official function was not constitutionally impaired because the term electioneering was not constitutionally vague because the statutes required an intent to influence voters to vote in a particular way, law enforcement officials were not left to apply an undefined standard, and the determination of whether a violation of a statute occurred was not equated with vagueness but rather one of sufficiency of proof to meet a standard of conduct which was prohibited. People v Maldonado, 63 Misc. 3d 716, 97 N.Y.S.3d 408, 2019 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1181 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2019).

2. Police; correction officers

Police officer on trial for official misconduct failed to preserve for appellate review his contention that People had not established that he had duty to make arrest (as element of crime under CLS Penal § 195.00) where he argued before trial court only that there was no evidence that he had received benefit from his actions. People v Logan, 74 N.Y.2d 859, 547 N.Y.S.2d 828, 547 N.E.2d 83, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 2983 (N.Y. 1989).

Police officers, although purportedly acting under authority of police department and while on duty, were properly convicted of official misconduct based on their unlawful entry into 2 apartments where they restrained and threatened occupants in attempt to recover police radio; their intent was not some general societal benefit in reducing crime, but rather to benefit themselves. In trial of police officers for official misconduct arising out of their entry into 2 apartments, where they restrained and threatened occupants in attempt to recover police radio, court's jury charge did not confuse constitutional unlawfulness (for which there are no criminal sanctions) with criminal unlawfulness under Penal Law; although it may have been better practice to avoid word "unlawful" in describing reasonable searches, instruction as to when search of apartment would be lawful was necessary for defense. Defendant police officers were not entitled to reversal of official misconduct convictions arising out of their unlawful entry into 2 apartments (where they restrained and threatened occupants in attempt to recover police radio) even though court erred by instructing jury that "stop and frisk" is permitted only in public places instead of correctly instructing jury that police officer justifiably present in private apartment may frisk occupant under reasonable belief that his or her safety is in jeopardy, where jury found defendants guilty of trespass, thereby necessarily determining that they were not "justifiably present" in apartment. People v Feerick, 93 N.Y.2d 433, 692 N.Y.S.2d 638, 714 N.E.2d 851, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1288 (N.Y. 1999).

Sufficient evidence supported defendant's convictions for conspiracy in the sixth degree and official misconduct based on the evidence showing that, as the detective sergeant in charge of asset forfeiture for a police department, he used his position, along with his accomplices, to orchestrate the return of unvouchered evidence to high school authorities with the goal of terminating the open felony investigation of his friend's son and preventing the son's imminent arrest. People v Flanagan, 28 N.Y.3d 644, 71 N.E.3d 541, 49 N.Y.S.3d 50, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 62 (N.Y. 2017).

Trial court erred by dismissing the indictment because the evidence presented to the grand jury was legally sufficient to support the charge of official misconduct based on defendant's failure to file a written report concerning the incident until ordered to. While defendant notified superiors about the prisoner's attempted escape, he did not notify anyone about the level of his subsequent force used, and he thereafter repeatedly inquired of fellow officers what the prisoner had said to them, from which the grand jury could rationally have drawn an inference that his failure to file the required paperwork was done with the intent to benefit himself by secreting his use of force. People v Castaldo, 146 A.D.3d 797, 46 N.Y.S.3d 115, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 182 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2017).

In prosecution of community services worker for official misconduct, People failed to establish prima facie case that worker exercised his discretion to permit female conjugal visits with her inmate husband in return for "sexual favors" for himself, since worker had no authority to grant or deny conjugal visits as his duties were narrowly confined by correctional services directive to gathering information upon which his superiors granted or denied requests for conjugal visits, and thus worker could not be indicted for exercising authority he did not have. People v Groskin, 122 A.D.2d 561, 505 N.Y.S.2d 475, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 59836 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1986).

In trial for second degree bribe receiving and official misconduct, where driver of car testified that defendant police officers solicited sex from her in exchange for not arresting her for traffic violation and possession of drugs, court properly refused to submit to jury, as question of fact, issue of whether male and female passengers were accomplices where (1) male passenger left car before females went with officers and there was no evidence that he knew where women went or why they were going with officers, and (2) female passenger did not participate in giving any benefit to officers, nor was it clear that she knew why she and driver were getting into officers' car. It was error for court to fail to charge jury that driver was accomplice as matter of law concerning official misconduct counts where it charged that she was accomplice as matter of law as to bribe receiving count, since all counts arose out of same transaction and facts; however, error was harmless in light of corroborating testimony given by passenger in car and court's charge on corroborating testimony. People v Teitelbaum, 138 A.D.2d 647, 526 N.Y.S.2d 230, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3189 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Police lieutenant was properly convicted of official misconduct where he inexcusably failed to restrain his subordinates during their assault on prisoner, during which he was present. People v Cheswick, 166 A.D.2d 88, 570 N.Y.S.2d 318, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7644 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), aff'd, 78 N.Y.2d 1119, 578 N.Y.S.2d 873, 586 N.E.2d 56, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 4919 (N.Y. 1991).

In Article 78 proceeding to review termination of state police officer's employment, substantial evidence supported finding that he was guilty of knowingly engaging in official misconduct by buying .32-caliber semiautomatic pistol from fellow officer while knowing that fellow officer did not lawfully possess it and that gun was nuisance weapon that should have been surrendered to police superintendent. Doolittle v McMahon, 245 A.D.2d 736, 665 N.Y.S.2d 739, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12957 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Penalty of dismissal from employment as state police officer was not so disproportionate as to shock one's sense of fairness where officer committed crimes of fourth degree grand larceny, offering false instrument for filing, and official misconduct by purchasing .32-caliber semiautomatic pistol from fellow officer, while knowing that fellow officer did not lawfully possess it and that gun was nuisance weapon that should have been surrendered to police superintendent, and by attempting to convert it as his own property by filling out false form. Doolittle v McMahon, 245 A.D.2d 736, 665 N.Y.S.2d 739, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12957 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Charge specifying "unauthorized exercise of (police officer's) official functions," in violation of New York City Police Department Patrol Guide's prohibition against "conduct prejudicial to good order, efficiency or discipline of the department," was not barred by 18-month Statute of Limitations in CLS Civ S § 75(4) since misconduct charged also constituted crime of official misconduct under CLS Penal § 195.00(1), which is expressly excluded from time bar of CLS Civ S § 75(4). Mieles v Safir, 272 A.D.2d 199, 707 N.Y.S.2d 437, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5660 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

Police officer was entitled to summary judgment dismissing claim for unauthorized exercise of official functions in violation of CLS Penal § 195.00 arising from incident that occurred when, after his future stepdaughter told him that plaintiff had followed her and made "hang-up" phone calls to her home, he went to school where plaintiff worked while wearing his uniform, falsely represented to school secretary that "we have a complaint against [plaintiff]" and, after being escorted to plaintiff's classroom, told plaintiff to stay away from his future stepdaughter, as there was no evidence that he intended to obtain benefit from his actions or to deprive plaintiff of benefit, his actions did not rise to level of flagrant and intentional abuse of authority intended by legislature, and plaintiff did not appear to be member of class for whose benefit § 195.00 was enacted. Tourge v City of Albany, 285 A.D.2d 785, 727 N.Y.S.2d 753, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7432 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001), overruled, Yonaty v Mincolla, 97 A.D.3d 141, 945 N.Y.S.2d 774, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5397 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2012).

Although defendant, a sheriff, violated N.Y. Penal Law § 195.00(1) by directing investigations of defendant's opponents and critics for purely political purpose, potential prejudice arose under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law art. 190, § 210.20(1)(c) when the victims' family members were allowed to determine whether to indict defendant. People v Connolly, 63 A.D.3d 1703, 881 N.Y.S.2d 257, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4719 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2009).

Evidence did not support an official misconduct charge because the People had not established that defendant's actions in flashing her police badge to encourage a pharmacist to fill prescriptions faster constituted criminal conduct as opposed to professional misconduct. People v Barnes, 117 A.D.3d 1203, 984 N.Y.S.2d 693, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3253 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2014).

State's duty to defend a correctional officer (CO) in an inmate's 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 suit did not cease when CO pled guilty to official misconduct as: (1) neither CO's allocution nor the elements of official misconduct established that the acts alleged in the civil suit occurred while CO was acting outside the scope of his employment or that the inmate's damages were due to CO's intentional wrongdoing; (2) CO did not particularize the crime to the acts alleged in the inmate's suit in his allocution; (3) the amended bill of particulars could not provide the missing factual detail; and (4) the guilty plea did not establish whether CO intentionally authored false statements or reports that resulted in disciplinary action against the inmate. Matter of Rademacher v Schneiderman, 155 A.D.3d 1459, 66 N.Y.S.3d 541, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8476 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2017).

City police officers who allegedly knowingly participated in illegal card games within the limits of the city and failed in the performance of their duty to make proper arrests violated statute. People v Heckt, 62 Misc. 2d 287, 306 N.Y.S.2d 320, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 950 (N.Y. County Ct. 1969).

Unauthorized act of correction officer in assaulting inmate was an act relating to his office within the meaning of Penal L § 195.00. People v Volpicello, 72 Misc. 2d 641, 340 N.Y.S.2d 154, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1222 (N.Y. County Ct. 1972).

Defendant was acting within her colorable authority as police officer when she allegedly filed false charges against complainant and solicited bribe for rescinding them, and she was properly charged with first degree attempted coercion, second degree attempted grand larceny, third degree bribe receiving, fourth degree criminal solicitation and official misconduct where she summoned fellow officers, informed them of fact that she was police officer, directed them to arrest complainant, then tried to use her position as police officer and her special relationship with district attorney's office to effect dismissal of false charges; qualification that defendant was off-duty and out of uniform at time of incident, versus on-duty, was distinction without difference. People v Gray, 172 Misc. 2d 14, 656 N.Y.S.2d 145, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 97 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

Because going to a doctor was not clearly inherent in the office of a corrections officer, and because there was no legally sufficient evidence presented to a grand jury that supported an allegation that defendant failed to go to a chiropractor on the days defendant sought N.Y. Gen. Mun. Law § 207-c benefits, pursuant to N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law §§ 170.30(a), 100.35, 200.50(7), the information charging defendant with official misconduct under N.Y. Penal Law § 195.00(2) was dismissed as legally insufficient. People v Ridge, 887 N.Y.S.2d 811, 25 Misc. 3d 432, 242 N.Y.L.J. 22, 2009 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1795 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2009).

Defendant's failure to disclose the fact that a suspect was incarcerated on the date of a charged robbery was not a violation of a duty to discluse exculpatory information as there was no question that the suspect knew, or should have known, that he was incarcerated on that date and could not have committed the alleged robbery on that date. People v Lemma, 959 N.Y.S.2d 655, 39 Misc. 3d 399, 2013 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 511 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2013), rev'd, in part, 50 Misc. 3d 34, 22 N.Y.S.3d 280, 2015 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3548 (N.Y. App. Term 2015).

Trial court erred in dismissing a count of an indictment, charging official misconduct pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 195.00(1), because one of the victims testified that defendant, a police officer, followed her vehicle while driving his patrol vehicle, pulled her vehicle over, and kissed her cheek. People v Watson, 32 A.D.3d 1199, 821 N.Y.S.2d 328, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11141 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.3d 929, 827 N.Y.S.2d 698, 860 N.E.2d 1000, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 4109 (N.Y. 2006).

Alleged improper time reporting by defendant correction officer provided defendant a benefit because her paycheck would have been less had she properly recorded her time. People v Simmons, 55 Misc. 3d 575, 49 N.Y.S.3d 615, 2017 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 324 (N.Y. County Ct. 2017).

Defendant's actions constituted a flagrant, significant, and intentional abuse of authority by someone empowered to enforce the law that warranted an official misconduct charge, rather than a mere serious error in judgment, which could be properly addressed in a disciplinary forum, where defendant reported to work as a police officer when intoxicated, drove a police vehicle, and responded in a bizarre and aberrational manner to a call involving what appeared to be a mere noise complaint; defendant acted with the intent to deprive his partner, his fellow police officers and the citizens of the benefit of a sober police officer. People v Evans, 57 Misc. 3d 320, 63 N.Y.S.3d 196, 2017 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2591 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2017).

In an action by a former city investigator against a city, city agency, and police department, alleging, inter alia, violation of 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983, false arrest, malicious prosecution, and abuse of process, following the investigator's acquittal on charges of petit larceny, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 155.25, falsifying business records in the first degree, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 175.10, offering a false instrument in the first degree, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 175.35, and official misconduct, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 195.00, the city, city agency, and police department were entitled to qualified immunity on the investigator's claims because, regarding the investigator's 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 malicious prosecution claim, it was the investigator's burden to rebut the presumption of probable cause that arose from his indictment, and the investigator failed to present evidence other than mere conjecture that his indictment was procured as a result of conduct undertaken by the city, city agency, or police department in bad faith, and, regarding the investigator's 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 false arrest and abuse of process claims, the evidence created a sufficient basis for a reasonable officer to believe that the investigator had stolen a ring and, therefore, that probable cause existed for his arrest, and there was no evidence of any abuse of process surrounding the investigator's arrest and prosecution. Savino v City of New York, 331 F.3d 63, 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 10263 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2003).

Police officer who took woman into custody, implying that she was under arrest, telling her that she could be placed in jail for years and never be able to work again, and coerced woman into having sexual intercourse with him in return for which police officer would destroy alleged arrest record, was guilty of official oppression as police officer was public officer acting under color of legal authority and injured person in her person, property and rights. Government of Virgin Islands v Derricks, 810 F.2d 50, 23 V.I. 449, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 1181 (3d Cir. V.I. 1987).

3. Judges; district attorneys

An order affirming the dismissal of an indictment charging defendant, a Supreme Court Justice, with issuing a false certificate and official misconduct is affirmed; the trial court had found that "interest-of-justice considerations by themselves" did not provide a sufficient basis for dismissal of the indictment, but had dismissed the indictment for "various [other] legal reasons . . . and in the interest of justice". People v Tyler, 46 N.Y.2d 251, 413

N.Y.S.2d 295, 385 N.E.2d 1224, 1978 N.Y. LEXIS 2416 (N.Y. 1978).

An indictment charging a Judge with official misconduct under subdivision 2 of section 195.00 of the Penal Law, which provides that a public servant is guilty of official misconduct when, with intent to obtain a benefit or to injure or deprive another person of a benefit, he knowingly refrains from performing a duty which is imposed upon him by law or is clearly inherent in the nature of his office, is insufficient and is dismissed where, for the purpose of defining the duty "clearly inherent in the nature of his office" which allegedly was violated, it only incorporates by reference the provisions of the Code of Judicial Conduct, since the Legislature may not delegate the essentially legislative function of definition of a substantive criminal offense and no legislative enactment incorporates or otherwise adopts the provisions of the Code of Judicial Conduct, and the disciplining of Judges for violation of ethical standards not involving independently criminal conduct has been reserved by the State Constitution (NY Const, art VI, § 22) to proceedings instituted before the Commission on Judicial Conduct. People v La Carrubba, 46 N.Y.2d 658, 416 N.Y.S.2d 203, 389 N.E.2d 799, 1979 N.Y. LEXIS 1902 (N.Y. 1979).

The conduct of law enforcement agents creating the predicate for a defendant's crime by contriving a criminal case which could be "fixed" by the defendant, while he was an Assistant District Attorney, did not offend due process and the defendant's prosecution which resulted in his conviction of bribe receiving and receiving a reward for official misconduct was, therefore, proper. The government did not manufacture a crime which otherwise would not likely have occurred; the defendant's participation in the corrupt scheme was not the least bit reluctant and was not the product of active encouragement or instigation by the government; the government's motivation was to weed out existing corruption and restore the integrity of the criminal justice system in the county, and its conduct was consistent with a sense of justice and respect for the defendant's fundamental rights. People v Archer, 68 A.D.2d 441, 417 N.Y.S.2d 507, 1979 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10959 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1979), aff'd, 49 N.Y.2d 978, 428 N.Y.S.2d 949, 406 N.E.2d 804, 1980 N.Y. LEXIS 2325 (N.Y. 1980).

Indictment charging official misconduct, stated in language of statute, and further alleging that defendant district attorney secured the release of students from attendance at school for unauthorized purposes, substantially conformed to statutory requirements and was legally sufficient, notwithstanding fact that indictment did not specify "benefit" that district attorney received from his actions. Where indictment charging district attorney with official misconduct, unlawful imprisonment, endangering welfare of child, criminal possession of forged instrument, forgery, and assault, arose out of allegations that district attorney improperly used official documents to secure release of female students from schools and bound and gagged them, joinder of all counts in one indictment was proper. People v D'Arcy, 79 Misc. 2d 113, 359 N.Y.S.2d 453, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1595 (N.Y. County Ct. 1974).

Defendant cannot be charged with a violation of N.Y. Jud. Law § 18 twice, once for having given advice and a second time for having received compensation because the prohibition is directed, not at advice and compensation separately, but at compensation for advice; thus, where defendant, who was a judge, was charged with three counts of official misdconduct under N.Y. Penal Law § 195.00 premised upon his alleged violation of the prohibition against compensation for advice under N.Y. Jud. Law § 18, the evidence was legally sufficient to support one, but only one, count of official misconduct, and the two remaining counts were dismissed. People v Garson, 775 N.Y.S.2d 827, 4 Misc. 3d 258, 2004 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 473 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2004), aff'd, 17 A.D.3d 695, 793 N.Y.S.2d 539, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4427 (N.Y. II. Under Former Law

A. Under Former § 1857

4. In general

The term "person," as used in this section, includes a corporation. People v Long I. R. Co., 134 N.Y. 506, 31 N.E. 873, 134 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 506, 1892 N.Y. LEXIS 1544 (N.Y. 1892).

This section applies only to wilful neglect or omission to perform duties specifically enjoined by law, and this refers to some duty or duties more definitely enjoined by law than the defendants general responsibility for the management and supervision of the personnel of the Nassau County Children's Shelter. People v Shapiro, 20 N.Y.2d 694, 282 N.Y.S.2d 762, 229 N.E.2d 442, 1967 N.Y. LEXIS 1293 (N.Y. 1967).

Offenses by public officials, even though acting in a judicial or semi-judicial capacity, are punishable under this section. People ex rel. Devery v Jerome, 73 N.Y.S. 306, 36 Misc. 256, 1901 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 739 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1901).

Where a municipal officer violates this section mandamus will not issue to him if there is an adequate remedy by the ordinary process of the courts. People ex rel. Clapp v Listman, 82 N.Y.S. 263, 40 Misc. 372, 1903 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 172 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), aff'd, 84 A.D. 633, 82 N.Y.S. 784, 1903 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1883 (N.Y. App. Div. 1903).

A duly elected and qualified member of a town board of assessors who refuses to perform the duties of his office is entitled to the salary as fixed by the town board. 1946 Ops St Compt 281.

5. Jurisdiction

The city court of Long Beach has exclusive jurisdiction of prosecution of police officer for wilful neglect of duty, subject only to right of removal as prescribed in Code of Criminal Procedure. People ex rel. Kohut v Hendrickson, 249 A.D. 528, 293 N.Y.S. 323, 1937 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9639 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 276 N.Y. 563, 12 N.E.2d 577, 276 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 563, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1132 (N.Y. 1937), aff'd, 276 N.Y. 564, 12 N.E.2d 577, 276 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 564, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1133 (N.Y. 1937), aff'd, 276 N.Y. 566, 12 N.E.2d 578, 276 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 566, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1134 (N.Y. 1937).

The county court has jurisdiction to try a person accused of violating this section, although the crime was committed in a village of the first class having a police justice with jurisdiction of misdemeanors. People ex rel. Smith v McClellan, 232 N.Y.S. 9, 133 Misc. 280, 1928 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1169 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1928).

6. Indictment

An indictment charging a County Treasurer with violating this section by failing to keep true account of all receipts and expenditures in books provided by the county for that purpose pursuant to § 550 of the County Law was insufficient to inform defendant of the charge against him for lack of specificity as to books involved and the nature of the omissions, inaccuracies, etc., forming the basis of the charge. People v Field, 20 A.D.2d 609, 245 N.Y.S.2d 447, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2600 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

An indictment was sufficient where it charged police officer with wilful omission to perform duties required by the police department under authority of city charter. People v Grawunder, 2 Misc. 2d 126, 151 N.Y.S.2d 137, 1956 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1924 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1956).

An indictment against the warden of Sing Sing prison charging that he "unlawfully and wilfully did commit various unlawful and unnatural acts with the inmates," does not charge a crime under this section. People v Osborne, 158 N.Y.S. 419 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1916).

Indictment was sufficient to accuse a police charge captain of official misconduct and obstruction of governmental administration, in violation of Penal Law § 195.00, because it alleged that he failed to conduct a breath test of a detective within two hours of an alleged drunk driving accident, with the goal of avoiding criminal charges. People v Yaguchi, 62 Misc. 3d 1054, 91 N.Y.S.3d 862, 2019 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 171 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2019).

7. Practice and procedure, generally

It was reversible error for the prosecution, in selecting a jury, to refer to the defendant as a suspended police officer. Also, it was error to charge that the defendant could be found guilty of violating § 1857 of the Penal Law if he had reasonably suspected that a crime had been committed, but did not arrest the suspected perpetrator, since that charge failed to correlate reasonable suspicion and temporary questioning on one hand and reasonable cause and arrest on the other. People v Davies, 26 A.D.2d 573, 271 N.Y.S.2d 132, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3951 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1966).

8. Particular acts as omission of duty

The wilful neglect of a board of excise to decide a case submitted to it is an unlawful neglect to perform a duty imposed by law. People v Meakim, 133 N.Y. 214, 30 N.E. 828, 133 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 214, 1892 N.Y. LEXIS 1302 (N.Y. 1892).

There is no statute requiring directors of a trust company to administer its affairs diligently and honestly, and consequently such directors cannot be indicted for neglect of duty in that regard as public officers. People v Knapp, 206 N.Y. 373, 99 N.E. 841, 206 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 373, 1912 N.Y. LEXIS 980 (N.Y. 1912).

Where petition for removal from office of chief city magistrate of city of New York, charged that he held certain defendants, arrested for unlawful assembly (a misdemeanor), without bail in violation of this section, respondent is not guilty of any violation of law, where information charges crime of riot (a felony) as well as misdemeanor, and no application was made to admit defendants to bail, and where petition contains no charge of corrupt intent, malice, unfairness or bias. American Civil Liberties Union, Inc. v McAdoo, 229 A.D. 511, 242 N.Y.S. 696, 1930 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10431 (N.Y. App. Div. 1930).

A district attorney who surrenders the minutes of the grand jury, except when lawfully superseded, or upon a court order, violates this section. In re Osborne, 117 N.Y.S. 169, 62 Misc. 575, 1909 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 603 (N.Y. Gen. Sess. 1909).

Duty prescribed by rules and regulations of department of correction is not a duty enjoined by law and therefore willful omission by warden of New York County Penitentiary to perform such duty is not a misdemeanor under §§ 1841 or 1857. People v McCann, 273 N.Y.S. 839, 151 Misc. 792, 1934 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1567 (N.Y. Gen. Sess.), aff'd, 242 A.D. 515, 275 N.Y.S. 887, 1934 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6112 (N.Y. App. Div. 1934).

The officials of a town whose duty it is to furnish funds for home relief may be punished for failure to provide the necessary cash for cash relief. 1946 Op St Compt No. 46–258.

9. —Failure of official to file report

Where a town supervisor willfully refuses to furnish a monthly report pursuant to Town Law § 119 he may be removed from office and/or prosecuted for the violation of this section and/or § 1841 of the Penal Law. 1957 Ops St Compt 250.

10. —Failure of police official to enforce laws

A police captain of the City of New York who fails to perform the general duty imposed upon him as a peace officer to suppress houses of prostitution located within his precinct, or the special duty imposed upon him by § 315 of the Greater New York Charter with reference to such houses, is guilty under this section and § 1841. People v Herlihy, 66 A.D. 534, 73 N.Y.S. 236, 1901 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2443 (N.Y. App. Div. 1901), aff'd, 170 N.Y. 584, 63 N.E. 1120, 170 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 584, 1902 N.Y. LEXIS 1132 (N.Y. 1902).

Failure of a police officer to make an arrest for a misdemeanor committed in his presence renders him liable to prosecution. Sharp v Erie R. Co., 90 A.D. 502, 85 N.Y.S. 553, 1904 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 77 (N.Y. App. Div. 1904), rev'd, 184 N.Y. 100, 76 N.E. 923, 184 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 100, 1906 N.Y. LEXIS 1341 (N.Y. 1906).

B. Under Other Former Laws

11. Under former § 854

A deputy police commissioner acts judicially in trying members of the police force, but this does not protect him from indictment where he is guilty of oppression. People ex rel. Devery v Jerome, 73 N.Y.S. 306, 36 Misc. 256, 1901 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 739 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1901).

12. —Injunction to restrain violation

Equity will not intervene to restrain the police authorities from stationing officers outside of a place having a liquor tax certificate, when such authorities suspect the place of being conducted as a disorderly house, and from notifying customers who are in the place and those who are about to enter the same that it is a disorderly house which is likely to be raided at any moment, and that those who are on the premises at the time of such raid are liable to arrest. The proprietor of the place, if oppressed or injured by any unlawful act of the authorities, may invoke this section or he may maintain an action at law for damages. Delaney v Flood, 183 N.Y. 323, 76 N.E. 209, 183 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 323, 1906 N.Y. LEXIS 785 (N.Y. 1906).

An action to restrain the police authorities from posting patrolmen in front of one's premises, who is suspected of conducting a poolroom in violation of law, should be brought under this section. Stevens v McAdoo, 112 A.D. 458, 98 N.Y.S. 553, 1906 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 706 (N.Y. App. Div. 1906).

Where the plaintiff was engaged in an honest and reputable business selling wallpaper and paints, equity will enjoin the action of the police in stationing officers on his premises and interfering with customers desiring to enter the building for the transaction of business, in the absence of evidence that plaintiff conducted or the premises were used for unlawful activities. McGorie v McAdoo, 113 A.D. 271, 99 N.Y.S. 47, 1906 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1409 (N.Y. App. Div. 1906).

Injunction will not be granted to restrain arrest of plaintiff, proprietor of moving picture show, for opening it on Sunday contrary to conditions of license granted to him by mayor of city, but if plaintiff is oppressed or injured by any unlawful act of defendant, chief of police, he may invoke this section, or bring action against him for damages. Equity will not restrain enforcement of criminal law, no matter how mistaken such enforcement may be. Person oppressed or injured by such unlawful enforcement may invoke this section, or bring action at law for damages. Klinger v Ryan, 153 N.Y.S. 937, 91 Misc. 71, 1915 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 759 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1915).

To grant injunction restraining police from entering premises without warrant is to determine without evidence that future acts of police will be unlawful. Unity Contract Bridge Club, Inc. v Wallander, 63 N.Y.S.2d 455, 187 Misc. 23, 1946 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2429 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1946).

13. —Particular acts as oppression

Evidence that a police officer who had been assaulted by the complainant had requested and received payment of money from complainant to avoid jail sentence was sufficient to raise question for jury on a charge of oppression. People v Rudolph, 303 N.Y. 73, 100 N.E.2d 142, 303 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 73, 1951 N.Y. LEXIS 689 (N.Y. 1951).

Charges against defendant of extortion (§ 850) and oppression (§ 854), in that he obtained money from complaining witness by threatening to report him to commissioner of motor vehicles and thereby cause him to fear he would lose his automobile operator's license, were not sustained, where evidence was sufficient to convict complaining witness of driving a motor vehicle while intoxicated, and such conviction would have been sufficient cause for revocation of his operator's license. People v Learman, 261 A.D. 748, 28 N.Y.S.2d 360, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7428 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

Where a police captain, accompanied by three patrolmen, entered a retail cigar and tobacco store, and remained in possession all one day, and then continuously for eleven days, and refused to go on demand and protest of the proprietor saying that they were officers, and by their presence gave the store a bad name, injuring complainant's good name and business, said acts fully make out the crime of oppression under this section. People v Summers, 82 N.Y.S. 297, 40 Misc. 384, 1903 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 510 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1903).

Where a person went to a poolroom to collect a bill and while there the place was raided by police officers upon information that gambling was in progress and an officer, though informed of the lawful purpose for which such person was upon the premises, called him an opprobrious name, struck him and took him before a magistrate upon a charge of disorderly conduct, upon which the magistrate discharged him, and it does not appear that he was engaged either in gambling or in the commission of any overt act which would subject him to arrest, the officer is guilty of oppression under this section. People ex rel. Reardon v Flynn, 111 N.Y.S. 1065, 58 Misc. 621, 1908 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 417 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1908).

14. Under former § 885

An intent to defraud is not an element under this section. Marden v Dorthy, 160 N.Y. 39, 54 N.E. 726, 160 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 39, 1899 N.Y. LEXIS 1136 (N.Y. 1899).

In trial on indictment under this section charging that commissioner of deeds "willfully certified falsely" that certain mortgage was duly acknowledged before him by person purporting to be mortgagor, in order to show knowledge, intention and absence of mistake, district attorney has right to prove similar acts, done under similar circumstances at about same time, with intent to defraud same person by same means. People v Marrin, 205 N.Y. 275, 98 N.E. 474, 205 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 275, 1912 N.Y. LEXIS 1217 (N.Y. 1912).

An attorney may be subject to disbarment for executing false acknowledgments. In re Gottheim, 153 A.D. 779, 138 N.Y.S. 636, 1912 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11185 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1912).

15. Under former § 997

The fact that the chief of police placed individuals under arrest and placed them in custody is prima facie evidence that there was no failure to inform. In re Doherty, 58 Misc. 2d 347, 295 N.Y.S.2d 368, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1225 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1964).

16. Under former § 1830

Sections 1826 and 1830 of the Penal Law are not violated by New York City Police Commissioner regulations requiring fingerprinting of all cabaret employees who come in contact with patrons and further requiring them to obtain identification cards for which a two-dollar charge is imposed. Simone v Kennedy, 26 Misc. 2d 748, 212 N.Y.S.2d 838, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3336 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1961).

17. Under former § 1839

The crime of committing "any unlawful act tending to hinder justice," dealt with in subd 2 of this section, by "justice" means that end which ought to be reached in a case by the regular administration of the principles of law involved as applied to the facts, and by "hinder" to "obstruct," impede, or prevent, with or without use of direct force or means. An indictment charging police officers with transporting a woman who had confessed to commission of certain acts which would make her a vagrant, with knowledge of her guilt and likewise with knowledge of the identity of a male participant in such acts, from Syracuse to Rochester, was sufficient to charge them with committing an unlawful act tending to hinder justice under subd 2 of this section. People v Longo, 16 A.D.2d 297, 227 N.Y.S.2d 815, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9807 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1962).

18. Under former § 1841

The removal of a commissioner of excise of the City of New York, under § 109 of the Consolidation Act, was not a punishment within the meaning of this section. People v Meakim, 133 N.Y. 214, 30 N.E. 828, 133 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 214, 1892 N.Y. LEXIS 1302 (N.Y. 1892).

A wilful failure to arraign a prisoner promptly is a crime, but such wrongful detention, without more, does not invalidate the confession obtained during the detention. People v Mummiani, 258 N.Y. 394, 180 N.E. 94, 258 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 394, 1932 N.Y. LEXIS 1198 (N.Y. 1932).

This section applies only to wilful neglect or omission to perform duties specifically enjoined by law, and this refers to some duty or duties more definitely enjoined by law than the defendants general responsibility for the management and supervision of the personnel of the Nassau County Children's Shelter. People v Shapiro, 20 N.Y.2d 694, 282 N.Y.S.2d 762, 229 N.E.2d 442, 1967 N.Y. LEXIS 1293 (N.Y. 1967).

A captain of police in the city of New York, who omits to discharge the duty imposed on him to suppress houses of prostitution, is punishable under this section and § 1857, in spite of the special provisions of the charter vesting the power of punishing officers in the police board. People v Herlihy, 66 A.D. 534, 73 N.Y.S. 236, 1901 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2443 (N.Y. App. Div. 1901), aff'd, 170 N.Y. 584, 63 N.E. 1120, 170 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 584, 1902 N.Y. LEXIS 1132 (N.Y. 1902).

City Court of Long Beach, subject only to the right of removal as prescribed in the Code of Criminal Procedure, § 57, has exclusive jurisdiction of prosecution of police officers for willful negligence and omission to perform duty enjoined upon them by law in permitting maintenance and operation of certain gambling house within city under this section and § 1857. People ex rel. Kohut v Hendrickson, 249 A.D. 528, 293 N.Y.S. 323, 1937 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9639 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 276 N.Y. 563, 12 N.E.2d 577, 276 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 563, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1132 (N.Y. 1937), aff'd, 276 N.Y. 564, 12 N.E.2d 577, 276 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 564, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1133 (N.Y. 1937), aff'd, 276 N.Y. 566, 12 N.E.2d 578, 276 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 566, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1134 (N.Y. 1937).

An indictment against a county official for violation of this section was dismissed. The indictment charged that the official had failed to see to it that goods in excess of $1,000 were purchased in compliance with competitive bidding requirements. But there was no evidence that he had knowledge that the goods were purchased wrongfully. People v Hattemer, 4 A.D.2d 674, 164 N.Y.S.2d 188, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5259 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1957), aff'd, 4 N.Y.2d 837, 173 N.Y.S.2d 812, 150 N.E.2d 239, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1079 (N.Y. 1958).

A wilful omission by a deputy police commissioner to cause an arrest may be a violation of this section. People v Porter, 189 N.Y.S. 664, 115 Misc. 301, 1921 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1602 (N.Y. Gen. Sess. 1921).

Duty prescribed by rules and regulations of department of correction of city of New York, adopted pursuant to statutory authority given to commissioner of department, is not duty enjoined by law, and therefore willful omission by warden of New York county penitentiary to perform such duty is not misdemeanor under this section or § 1857. People v McCann, 273 N.Y.S. 839, 151 Misc. 792, 1934 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1567 (N.Y. Gen. Sess.), aff'd, 242 A.D. 515, 275 N.Y.S. 887, 1934 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6112 (N.Y. App. Div. 1934).

An indictment was sufficient where it charged police officer with wilful omission to perform duties required by the police department under authority of city charter. People v Grawunder, 2 Misc. 2d 126, 151 N.Y.S.2d 137, 1956 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1924 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1956).

Where a town supervisor willfully refuses to furnish a monthly report pursuant to Town Law § 119, he may be removed from office and/or prosecuted for the violation of this section and/or § 1857 of the Penal Law. 1957 Ops St Compt 250.

19. Under former § 1844

A confession obtained from accused while being unlawfully detained in violation of the "prompt arraignment" statutes and after his attorney has requested and been denied access to him is inadmissible and requires reversal of conviction as in violation of due process regardless of what other evidence lawfully admitted would indicate his guilt. People v Donovan, 13 N.Y.2d 148, 243 N.Y.S.2d 841, 193 N.E.2d 628, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 973 (N.Y. 1963), limited, People v Gunner, 15 N.Y.2d 226, 257 N.Y.S.2d 924, 205 N.E.2d 852, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1537 (N.Y. 1965).

Disobedience by a policeman to the instructions of a police lieutenant, after having arrested another on a criminal charge, does not constitute a violation of this section. People ex rel. Flood v Baker, 150 A.D. 250, 134 N.Y.S. 917, 1912 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7097 (N.Y. App. Div. 1912).

Police officers have no discretion as to when a prisoner should be arraigned and where officer detained a prisoner for 24 hours because of desire to obtain evidence of guilt through confessions, officer was guilty of a misdemeanor under this section. People v Kelly, 264 A.D. 14, 35 N.Y.S.2d 55, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4055 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

Holding incommunicado for fifteen hours an eighteen-year-old boy charged with arson, until a confession was obtained from him after an assault by the arresting officer, made the officer guilty of a crime, requiring new trial for the boy. People v Redmond, 265 A.D. 307, 38 N.Y.S.2d 727, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5741 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

In a rape prosecution, the refusal to charge on the failure of authorities promptly to arraign defendant as bearing on the validity of his confession was reversible error. People v Richmond, 266 A.D. 903, 42 N.Y.S.2d 745, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5099 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943).

An unexplained delay of sixty-two hours in arraigning a defendant after his arrest constituted grounds for reversal where a confession had been made during this period which influenced the jury and the defendant claimed that he was ill when the so-called confession was made. People v Trinchillo, 2 A.D.2d 146, 153 N.Y.S.2d 685, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4622 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1956).

20. Under former § 1862

The recording officer may refuse to register a deed acknowledged before one who had no title to the office by virtue of which he claimed to take the acknowledgment. People ex rel. Oaklawn Corp. v Donegan, 226 N.Y. 84, 123 N.E. 71, 226 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 84, 1919 N.Y. LEXIS 837 (N.Y. 1919).

21. Under former § 1863

An indictment which in one count charges the defendant with the crime of auditing and allowing, as a public officer, a false and fraudulent claim, is not bad for duplicity because, in addition to stating acts constituting the crime charged, it also states acts constituting the crime of fraudulently presenting a false account to a public officer for allowance. This section is distinguished from § 1872 in that the crime under this section can be committed only by a public officer, while that under § 1872 may be committed by a person who, in the form prescribed by law, presents for audit a false and fraudulent charge or claim against a municipal corporation. People v Klipfel, 160 N.Y. 371, 54 N.E. 788, 160 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 371, 1899 N.Y. LEXIS 1167 (N.Y. 1899).

No claim of falsity or fraud can be predicated upon the presentation of a claim the terms of which are correct, but the sums charged therefor are excessive. People v King, 43 N.Y.S. 975, 19 Misc. 98, 1897 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3 (N.Y. County Ct.), aff'd, 15 A.D. 84, 44 N.Y.S. 287, 1897 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 404 (N.Y. App. Div. 1897).

An indictment which charges the defendant, as a member of a board of supervisors, possessing the power to audit and allow claims against the county, with knowingly and corruptly using the power to allow a dishonest demand, and to authorize the county auditor to pay it, in violation of this section, and which also charges him with presenting a fraudulent claim (being the same claim presented to the county auditor), to an auditing board for allowance and payment in violation of § 1872, is bad for duplicity as it charges in one count, two specific crimes. People v Stock, 47 N.Y.S. 94, 21 Misc. 147, 1897 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 543 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1897).

Where there are two indictments charging defendant with auditing fraudulent claims in violation of this section and jury has disagreed on trial under first indictment, motion by defendant to quash certain counts in first indictment which allege same crimes as certain counts in second indictment will be granted as matter of right. People v Sloan, 24 N.Y.S.2d 381, 175 Misc. 618, 1940 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2493 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1940).

An indictment charging defendant with violating this section was not supported by sufficient evidence where it charged him with fraudulent certification of payrolls for employees improperly appointed and was predicated upon the assumption of his guilt on counts of perjury set forth in another indictment, no factual basis having been established. People v Wright, 28 Misc. 2d 719, 214 N.Y.S.2d 461, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2943 (N.Y. County Ct. 1961).

The knowledge of the defendant must be shown to be knowledge that the claim when certified to was false and fraudulent, and, where the act itself has no necessary element of criminal character, the guilty intent becomes an independent act and must be proved accordingly. People v Gresser, 124 N.Y.S. 581 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1910).

An ineligible person appointed to public office may not continue holding the office nor receive the salary for the balance of the term after discovery of the ineligibility. 1967 Ops St Compt File #474.

22. Under former § 1864

Transfers of city funds, made by direction of defendant mayor, from one bank to another bank, which latter bank was subsequently closed by the superintendent of banks, are not "transfers" within the meaning of this section. People v Frankel, 264 N.Y. 658, 191 N.E. 612, 264 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 658, 1934 N.Y. LEXIS 1690 (N.Y. 1934).

Evidence that the defendant, a Commissioner of Public Welfare, aided codefendant drug store proprietors in receiving drugs at an institutional discount by receiving the drugs ostensibly ordered for a county home by the drug store proprietors at his residence was sufficient to warrant a return of indictments against him for violation of this section. People v Kirkup, 4 N.Y.2d 209, 173 N.Y.S.2d 574, 149 N.E.2d 866, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1068 (N.Y. 1958).

Defendant who had a false name placed on a city payroll and each week drew pay thereunder without doing any work for the city, was properly convicted under this section, although not a public officer. People v Reilly, 255 A.D. 109, 6 N.Y.S.2d 161, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4670 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938), aff'd, 280 N.Y. 509, 19 N.E.2d 919, 280 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 509, 1939 N.Y. LEXIS 1351 (N.Y. 1939).

The fine imposed by this section is imposed as punishment and not as restitution and cannot be turned into private use by payment to the surety who has made good the town's loss. No civil right or remedy of either town or surety was in any way impaired or affected by criminal prosecution of accomplice of one convicted of violating this section or by payment of fine as result of her conviction. American Surety Co. v Islip, 268 A.D. 92, 48 N.Y.S.2d 749, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3116 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944).

A state civil servant employed as a foreman in the Correction Department was not entitled to an order directing the Civil Service Commission to reinstate him where he had been suspended in 1948 for conniving with a fellow employee on the audit of an unlawful claim against the state. Charges of misconduct and incompetency were not served until three years after his suspension. While subdivision 2 of section 22 of the Civil Service Law requires that charges be preferred and determined promptly. Special Term had the power to deny a mandatory order of reinstatement in the light of the employee's laches in moving for reinstatement and conceded misconduct. Fay v Lyons, 282 A.D. 90, 121 N.Y.S.2d 878, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4402 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

The purpose of this section is to punish those who aid in the conversion of property held by, or in the possession of, the State or one of its subdivisions. People v Freistadt, 3 A.D.2d 937, 163 N.Y.S.2d 772, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5297 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1957), rev'd, 4 N.Y.2d 209, 173 N.Y.S.2d 574, 149 N.E.2d 866, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1068 (N.Y. 1958).

Defendant, a case worker for a City Welfare Department, was properly found guilty of violating §§ 1864 and 1865 of the Penal Law upon evidence that she fraudulently caused checks to be issued to welfare recipients and then induced the recipients to indorse the checks back to her or turn over cash received by telling them that the checks were issued by mistake. People v Meadows, 17 A.D.2d 640, 230 N.Y.S.2d 419, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8685 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1962).

Crime of conniving at audit and payment of false and fraudulent claims against county, whereby accused obtained money of county, was not shown where, in constructing highway, accused was employed as supervisor, and where, being also a truck owner, he circumvented regulations by transferring his trucks, in form only, to his drivers and where they, although merely dummies, presented claims and received payment for work actually done, which accused paid, since claims were not false in absence of showing that services were not rendered or materials not furnished. People v Dally, 24 N.Y.S.2d 692, 175 Misc. 680, 1941 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1387 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1941).

Since this section proscribes the willful audit of a false claim against the county or the wrongful interference with property held by the county, it would seem to require a specific intent by the defendant to do the county a disservice, as distinct from a general purpose to do an act which might be reprehensible for other reasons. People v Freistadt, 23 Misc. 2d 534, 196 N.Y.S.2d 147, 1960 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3830 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1960).

A conviction of violating this section requires the disbarment of an attorney. In re Case, 259 A.D. 1029, 20 N.Y.S.2d 697 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

Where defendant "knowingly" kept false accounts and made false entries in cashbook, term "knowingly" means more than carelessness and imports guilty knowledge or evil or fraudulent intent. People v McHugh, 271 A.D. 135, 63 N.Y.S.2d 319, 1946 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2707 (N.Y. App. Div. 1946).

Defendant, a case worker for a City Welfare Department, was properly found guilty of violating §§ 1864 and 1865 of the Penal Law upon evidence that she fraudulently caused checks to be issued to welfare recipients and then induced the recipients to indorse the checks back to her or turn over cash received by telling them that the checks were issued by mistake. The deposit of funds into a bank account, without the alteration of any record, does not violate § 1865 of the Penal Law since it does not involve a fraudulent alteration, falsification, or concealment of an account. People v Baranello, 24 A.D.2d 637, 262 N.Y.S.2d 382, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3497 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1965).

24. Under former § 1866

This section is all-inclusive and relates to the violation of any provisions of law relating to official conduct, since such wilful and corrupt misconduct in office of public officers is an indictable offense and does not come within any of the subdivisions of § 56 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. In re Wilcox, 276 N.Y.S. 117, 153 Misc. 761, 1934 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1863 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1934).

25. Under former § 1867

A county treasurer was indicted and convicted under this section. He was charged with violating only that portion of the section which reads "or who is guilty of any other malfeasance or wilful neglect of duty in his office." Specifically, he was charged with failing to remove a deputy county treasurer after he knew the deputy had appropriated county money. Held: indictment dismissed for insufficient proof and conviction reversed. There was a serious question as to the validity of that portion of the section under which the treasurer had been indicted, but since there was no proof to sustain a conviction, the court did not pass on the statute's validity. People v Avery, 9 A.D.2d 34, 189 N.Y.S.2d 734, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7387 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

26. Under former § 1874

The law presumes that all officers entrusted with the custody of public files and records will perform their official duty by keeping the same safely in their offices, and if a paper is not found where, if in existence, it ought to be deposited or recorded, the presumption thereupon arises that no such document has ever been in existence, and until this presumption is rebutted it must stand as proof of such non-existence. Deshong v New York, 176 N.Y. 475, 68 N.E. 880, 176 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 475, 14 N.Y. Ann. Cas. 169, 1903 N.Y. LEXIS 827 (N.Y. 1903).

The stenographic minutes, including the judges' charge, in a criminal trial were records or other papers in a public office, and a newspaper could compel the stenographer to furnish it with a transcript thereof. § 195.05. Obstructing governmental administration in the second degree

A person is guilty of obstructing governmental administration when he intentionally obstructs, impairs or perverts the administration of law or other governmental function or prevents or attempts to prevent a public servant from performing an official function, by means of intimidation, physical force or interference, or by means of any independently unlawful act, or by means of interfering, whether or not physical force is involved, with radio, telephone, television or other telecommunications systems owned or operated by the state, or a county, city, town, village, fire district or emergency medical service or by means of releasing a dangerous animal under circumstances evincing the actor's intent that the animal obstruct governmental administration.

Obstructing governmental administration is a class A misdemeanor.

There was no comprehensive provision directed at such conduct generally. This new section is designed to fill this gap.

I. Generally

1. In general

As used in statute providing that person is guilty of obstructing governmental administration when he obstructs administration of law by physical force or interference, "interference" must be physical interference. If every element of crime of obstructing governmental administration is not properly recited in the factual parts of an information and the accompanying deposition, review of that issue is not barred by plea of guilty. A citizens band radio message from one motor vehicle operator to another as to the highway location of a radar speed checkpoint does not constitute the crime of obstructing governmental administration. People v Case, 42 N.Y.2d 98, 396 N.Y.S.2d 841, 365 N.E.2d 872, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 2109 (N.Y. 1977).

Petition alleging that juvenile committed acts which if done by adult would constitute crimes of resisting arrest and second degree obstructing governmental administration was jurisdictionally defective on its face where arresting officer's supporting affidavit simply stated that juvenile kicked him in groin and physically resisted being placed in handcuffs, with intent to prevent him from performing his lawful duty of placing her under arrest; petition failed to allege that underlying arrest (which constituted official function performed by police) was authorized, and thus allegations of petition were insufficient to establish all essential elements of crimes charged. In re Verna C., 143 A.D.2d 94, 531 N.Y.S.2d 344, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8140 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

While interference necessary to support charge of second degree obstructing governmental administration must at least be physical in nature, inappropriate or disruptive conduct at scene of performance of official function is within ambit of CLS Penal § 195.05, even if no physical force is involved. Willinger v City of New Rochelle, 212 A.D.2d 526, 622 N.Y.S.2d 321, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1111 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1995).

In prosecution for second degree obstructing governmental administration, it was reversible error to instruct jury that, as matter of law, issuing desk appearance ticket was "official function" of police officer, without also instructing jury to consider whether officer's actions were authorized. People v Greene, 221 A.D.2d 559, 634 N.Y.S.2d 144, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11928 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1995).

Court properly denied defendant's request to charge justification where no version of evidence showed that any officers used excessive force in effecting arrest of third person so as to justify force used by defendant against officer who was not even involved in arrest. People v Lucena, 243 A.D.2d 269, 662 N.Y.S.2d 320, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9297 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 876, 668 N.Y.S.2d 574, 691 N.E.2d 646, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4623 (N.Y. 1997).

To establish defendant's guilt of resisting arrest, second degree assault, and second degree obstructing governmental administration, People were required to prove that officer had probable cause to arrest him for disorderly conduct, but were not required to prove that he actually committed disorderly conduct. People v McDermott, 279 A.D.2d 361, 719 N.Y.S.2d 76, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 415 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 803, 726 N.Y.S.2d 381, 750 N.E.2d 83, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1677 (N.Y. 2001).

It was reversible error to refuse defendant's request to charge second degree obstructing governmental administration as lesser included offense of second degree assault. People v Sullivan, 284 A.D.2d 917, 728 N.Y.S.2d 320, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5935 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 942, 733 N.Y.S.2d 382, 759 N.E.2d 381, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 3590 (N.Y. 2001), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 658, 737 N.Y.S.2d 59, 762 N.E.2d 937, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 4269 (N.Y. 2001).

Convictions of obstructing governmental administration in the second degree and resisting arrest were supported by sufficient evidence where, when police accompanied defendant's mother to her apartment to serve defendant with a protective order, defendant responded belligerently and, ignoring an officer's suggestion that he calm down, repeatedly and aggressively sought to push past the officers and confront his mother; this provided probable cause for his arrest, and he violently resisted that lawful arrest, resulting in injuries to officers. People v Sowell, 25 A.D.3d 386, 808 N.Y.S.2d 46, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 150 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.3d 763, 819 N.Y.S.2d 889, 853 N.E.2d 260, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 2378 (N.Y. 2006).

Conviction of second degree assault, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3), was reversed because the trial court refused to charge the lesser included offense of third degree obstructing governmental administration; the record contained evidence that a police officer who was kicked in the groin by defendant responded to another call after the incident, did not seek medical attention until he was directed to do so, declined medication, indicated that his pain was subsiding by the time he was discharged from the hospital a few hours after the incident, and that his discomfort over the next several days was vague. Under these circumstances, the jury could have found that defendant did not sustain a physical injury for purposes of second degree assault, and, thus, defendant was entitled to the requested charge down. People v Nisselbeck, 85 A.D.3d 1206, 923 N.Y.S.2d 801, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4510 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2011).

Defendant's conviction for obstructing governmental administration in the second degree was not against the weight of the evidence because defendant, inter alia, refused to speak with the police, walked away, hit an officer in the face with a lemon wedge, broke free of an officer's grasp and bit him on the hand, punched and head butted a second officer, and refused repeated orders to stop struggling; defendant acknowledged that the occupants of the vehicle that approached her were in uniform. People v McLean, 128 A.D.3d 1106, 8 N.Y.S.3d 696, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3842 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 25 N.Y.3d 1204, 37 N.E.3d 1169, 16 N.Y.S.3d 526, 2015 N.Y. LEXIS 2402 (N.Y. 2015).

There was no way of knowing if the jurors acquitted defendant of the greater counts on the basis of justification so as to mandate acquittal on the lesser count because the verdict sheet did not mention justification, and the court did not instruct the jurors that if they were to find defendant not guilty of the greater counts of assault in the second degree on the basis of justification, they were not to consider the lesser count of obstructing governmental administration in the second degree. People v Gunther, 181 A.D.3d 712, 121 N.Y.S.3d 279, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1633 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2020).

Trial court properly, upon a jury verdict, convicted defendant of second-degree obstructing governmental administration and resisting arrest because defendant failed to object to the trial court's plan to declare a mistrial, despite an opportunity to do so, the charges were not necessarily based on the acts that were the basis for the charges of which defendant was acquitted, and there was a manifest necessity for a mistrial where one of the jurors was appropriately discharged for misconduct, there were no alternate jurors available—defendant had refused to allow any such replacement and would not proceed without the required jury of 12, and the obstruction and resisting arrest charges were not necessarily based on the acts that were the basis for the charges of which defendant was acquitted. People v Alman, 185 A.D.3d 714, 126 N.Y.S.3d 730, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3862 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 35 N.Y.3d 1092, 155 N.E.3d 780, 131 N.Y.S.3d 287, 2020 N.Y. LEXIS 2382 (N.Y. 2020).

The proof of facts necessary to sustain a charge of assault in the third degree and a charge of resisting arrest are not identical, and therefore the two crimes are different and separate as a matter of fact and law, and a plea of double jeopardy or prior acquittal of the crime of resisting a public officer in the discharge of his duty was without merit. Although the facts may be closely related, the crimes of resisting arrest and assault in the third degree are separate and distinct as a matter of law. People v Minton, 54 Misc. 2d 552, 283 N.Y.S.2d 73, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1325 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1967).

A verbal act alone does not constitute physical force or interference with the governmental administration of justice. The gravamen of the charge of obstructing governmental administration is the obstruction, impairment and perversion of the administration of law and forbidding the police officers from conducting an undercover investigation. People v Longo, 71 Misc. 2d 385, 336 N.Y.S.2d 85, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1347 (N.Y. County Ct. 1971).

Statutory definitions of crimes of resisting arrest and obstructing governmental justice include acts which are, in their very nature, attempts; therefore, there can be no such crime as attempt to resist arrest or attempt to obstruct governmental administration. People v Schmidt, 76 Misc. 2d 976, 352 N.Y.S.2d 399, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1986 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1974).

Defendant, who when apprehended for traffic offenses lied to a police officer about his identity using a fictitious or assumed name, and who admitted that he had disposed of his wallet to avoid prosecution under his real name, did not obstruct governmental administration in violation of Penal Law § 195.05, since verbally transmitting information to a police officer does not constitute intimidation, physical force or interference. People v Sherman, 116 Misc. 2d 109, 455 N.Y.S.2d 528, 1982 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3842 (N.Y. City Ct. 1982).

A local ordinance of the City of Buffalo entitled "Resisting Officer in Discharge of Duty," which makes it illegal for a person to "refuse to obey a reasonable order or request of a police officer in the discharge of his regular duty" or to "resist or interfere with any officer or employee of the City in the discharge of his regular duty," would not be deemed to be invalid on preemption grounds, since the gravamen of the State obstruction of governmental administration statute (Pen Law § 195.05) is the prohibition of an intentional obstruction by means of intimidation, physical force, or interference, or by means of any independently unlawful act, while the local ordinance restricts less serious behavior than that proscribed by the State statute. People v Flinn, 126 Misc. 2d 570, 482 N.Y.S.2d 418, 1984 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3666 (N.Y. City Ct. 1984), aff'd, 130 Misc. 2d 877, 497 N.Y.S.2d 994, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2443 (N.Y. County Ct. 1986).

There was nothing improper in court responding "yes" to juror's inquiry "Does intimidation include verbal?" following supplemental instructions that person is guilty of obstructing governmental administration in second degree under CLS Penal § 195.05 when he intentionally obstructs or attempts to prevent public servant from performing official function by means of "intimidation, physical force or interference," since (1) court's reply was intended to convey that words could constitute part of defendant's attempt to intimidate public officer's performance of official function and did not imply that "mere words alone" could constitute "intimidation" sufficient to support charge, and (2) legislature's inclusion of word "intimidate" in statute was intended to provide for something other than physical force; thus, defendants' motion to set aside verdict on ground that court provided jury with additional factual consideration affecting verdict would be denied. Misdemeanor information stating that "defendants...with intent to prevent deponent, a Police Officer, from performing his lawful duty...did fight with deponent, jumping on his back and causing him to fall on the ground" was sufficient to allege that defendants physically interfered with police officer's performance of official function in violation of CLS Penal § 195.05, second degree obstruction of governmental administration. People v Jimenez, 138 Misc. 2d 867, 525 N.Y.S.2d 482, 1988 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 110 (N.Y. Crim. Ct. 1988).

Toy or imitation nature of pistol need not be proven as element of charge of obstruction of governmental administration in second degree arising from use of imitation pistol to threaten government agent about to tow automobile. People v Wilfong, 141 Misc. 2d 574, 533 N.Y.S.2d 814, 1988 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 652 (N.Y. Crim. Ct. 1988).

Information charging violation of CLS Penal § 195.05, second degree obstruction of governmental administration, which alleged only that defendant threw crack pipe to ground causing it to break as police officer approached, was facially insufficient since essential element of crime is that defendant's conduct involve intimidation, physical force or interference, or independently unlawful act. People v Simon, 145 Misc. 2d 518, 547 N.Y.S.2d 199, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 686 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1989).

Information charging violation of CLS Penal § 195.05, second degree obstruction of governmental administration, which alleged only that defendant threw crack pipe to ground causing it to break as police officer approached, was facially insufficient in failing to allege essential element of crime, namely, that defendant's conduct prevented public servant from performing official function. People v Simon, 145 Misc. 2d 518, 547 N.Y.S.2d 199, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 686 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1989).

Motion to dismiss information charging defendant with second degree obstruction of governmental administration would be denied where conduct alleged—swallowing of vial of crack cocaine to prevent or impede its recovery by police—constituted "physical interference" with public servant as contemplated by statute, and allegation that police officer attempted to keep defendant from swallowing vial was sufficient to establish that officer was engaged in official police function. Bare allegation that police officer broke her finger in attempting to keep defendant from swallowing vial of crack cocaine failed to establish "physical force" to prevent officer from carrying out official function as necessary element of second degree obstruction of governmental administration, since there were no factual allegations connecting officer's injury to specific acts of force by defendant. People v Ravizee, 146 Misc. 2d 679, 552 N.Y.S.2d 503, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 76 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1990).

Defendants who sat and went limp after being arrested for participation in antiabortion demonstration, requiring police to carry them away, could not be convicted of resisting arrest or obstruction of governmental administration in second degree since their conduct did not prevent police from effecting authorized arrest. People v McDaniel, 154 Misc. 2d 89, 593 N.Y.S.2d 154, 1992 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 595 (N.Y. App. Term 1992), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 889, 597 N.Y.S.2d 950, 613 N.E.2d 982, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 1488 (N.Y. 1993), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 892, 597 N.Y.S.2d 954, 613 N.E.2d 986 (N.Y. 1993), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 894, 597 N.Y.S.2d 956, 613 N.E.2d 988 (N.Y. 1993).

Information charging defendant with second degree obstructing governmental administration by assaulting police officer who "was in uniform and on patrol performing lawful police duties" was legally insufficient in failing to satisfy statutory element that defendant must have intended to interfere with specific official function. People v Joseph, 156 Misc. 2d 192, 592 N.Y.S.2d 238, 1992 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 564 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1992).

After rendition of jury verdict convicting defendant of obstructing governmental administration for offering to pay money to 3 police officers so that they would not serve him with Criminal Court summons, it was error to set aside verdict on sole ground that underlying accusatory instrument was facially insufficient because it did not allege that officers' service of Criminal Court summons was "authorized." People v Pappalardo, 180 Misc. 2d 707, 693 N.Y.S.2d 835, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 265 (N.Y. App. Term 1999).

Allegation that defendant released live crickets into public auction room, causing attendees to scream, climb onto chairs and run to exits, resulting in suspension of proceedings, sufficiently demonstrated physical interference and independent unlawful act to plead prima facie case of second degree obstruction of governmental administration. People v Spiegel, 181 Misc. 2d 48, 693 N.Y.S.2d 393, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 231 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1999).

Court would dismiss, for facial insufficiency, information charging second degree obstructing governmental administration where it was alleged that defendant "a suspect in a narcotics investigation ... ran from the (investigating) officer, thereby preventing (the officer) from conducting an investigation"; fleeing from police officer conducting investigation, by itself, does not constitute "physical" interference with investigation of police officer within meaning of CLS Penal § 195.05. People v Tillman, 184 Misc. 2d 20, 706 N.Y.S.2d 819, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 82 (N.Y. City Ct. 2000).

Accusatory instrument charging obstruction of governmental administration need not use words "authorized arrest" so long as factual allegations delineate what obstruction and official function consisted of; however, when arrest forms basis of official function interfered with, defendant may use unauthorized arrest as defense and it is duty of trier of fact to determine if arrest was, in fact, authorized. People v Cacsere, 185 Misc. 2d 92, 712 N.Y.S.2d 298, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 325 (N.Y. App. Term 2000).

In prosecution for third degree trespass and second degree obstructing governmental administration arising from confrontation in which defendants attempted to prevent city from clearing "community garden" located on city-owned property, defendants were not entitled to proffer justification defense where confrontation occurred 7 hours before onset of bulldozers and thus impending injury to garden was not "imminent," they failed to explain why they sought no alternative legal remedies in time available to them, and they did not establish that gravity of harm which they sought to avoid could justify their illegal activities. People v Shenker, 187 Misc. 2d 521, 725 N.Y.S.2d 519, 2001 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 68 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2001).

Inasmuch as the information alleged that defendant took money from people so that he could swipe them into the subway system with a forged metrocard and that he prevented the New York City Transit Authority from collecting the lawful fare, it sufficiently established all of the elements of the charge of obstructing governmental administration in the second degree, for pleading purposes. People v Dixson, 798 N.Y.S.2d 659, 9 Misc. 3d 358, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1286 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2005).

Information charging second degree obstructing governmental administration, N.Y. Penal Law § 195.05, based on defendant's failure to provide a DNA sample was insufficient because there was no allegation that notice of the obligation to provide a sample was ever properly provided to defendant or that he ever refused to comply upon service of such notice. People v Davis, 865 N.Y.S.2d 545, 21 Misc. 3d 953, 2008 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 6057 (N.Y. City Ct. 2008).

Because defendant refused to leave a park so that it could be cleaned, sat down, and interlocked arms with other persons, the accusatory instrument sufficiently alleged the elements of trespass, disorderly conduct, and second-degree obstructing governmental administration under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 140.00(5), 240.20(6), 195.05; accordingly, there was no basis to dismiss the accusatory instrument under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 170.30(1)(a), (f). People v Nunez, 943 N.Y.S.2d 857, 36 Misc. 3d 172, 2012 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1586 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2012).

Trial court found that the interest of justice required it to dismiss an information charging a 17-year-old high school student who was arrested while demonstrating against the war in Iraq with one count of obstruction of governmental administration in the second degree, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 195.05, and two counts of disorderly conduct, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 240.20(5) and (6). People v Gragert, 765 N.Y.S.2d 471, 1 Misc. 3d 646, 2003 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1239 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2003).

Because an information merely alleged that defendant was seen with what appeared to be marijuana, running into traffic, and dropping the object, pursuant to N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 100.15, the information was insufficient to support charges for reckless endangerment, second-degree obstruction of governmental administration, and attempted tampering with physical evidence under Penal Law §§ 120.20, 195.05, 110, 215.40(2). People v Beam, 866 N.Y.S.2d 564, 22 Misc. 3d 306, 240 N.Y.L.J. 91, 2008 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 6384 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2008).

Trial court erred in convicting defendant of resisting arrest because, while the accusatory instrument sufficiently alleged that the arresting officer had probable cause to believe that defendant committed the offense of second-degree obstructing governmental administration, the trial court's jury charge suggested that defendant could be found guilty of the crime of resisting arrest, even if the arrest were unauthorized, if she used physical force. People v Aitkens, 995 N.Y.S.2d 899, 45 Misc. 3d 50, 2014 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4329 (N.Y. App. Term 2014).

2. Constitutional considerations

Having determined that statute prohibiting divulging of eavesdropping warrant was unconstitutional as applied, to petitioner for habeas corpus relief, a private citizen who was convicted thereunder, additional charge of obstructing governmental administration had to also fall since his act could not be independently unlawful; that is, if his speech was constitutionally protected, he could not be punished for exercising that right by giving his alleged criminal act a different name. People ex rel. Serra v Warden, Rikers Island Men's House of Detention, 90 Misc. 2d 654, 395 N.Y.S.2d 602, 1977 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2126 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1977).

The arrest of a juvenile for obstructing governmental administration, Penal Law § 195.05, was not unlawful as an infringement of freedom of speech and validly served as the predicate for the "authorized arrest" component of the crime of resisting arrest, where eliminating all the speech elements of the juvenile's conduct there was reasonable cause to arrest based solely upon the juvenile's physical presence in a proscribed area and his refusal to obey four lawful police commands to leave the area. In re W., 109 Misc. 2d 788, 441 N.Y.S.2d 188, 1981 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2473 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. 1981).

CLS Penal § 195.05 is not void for vagueness in that (1) what is and is not "administration of law or other governmental function" is not beyond understanding of average person, and (2) statute's prohibition of preventing or attempting to prevent "a public servant from performing an official function, by means of intimidation, physical force or interference, or by means of any independently unlawful act" is neither ambiguous nor subject to arbitrary interpretation. People v Santos, 182 Misc. 2d 764, 700 N.Y.S.2d 381, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 512 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1999).

Since defendant, a non-suspect believed by police to have witnessed a crime, was not required to respond to officers' questions, there were no grounds for immediately arresting defendant for obstruction of governmental administration; since the arrest was invalid, so was a charge of resisting that arrest, and a disorderly conduct charge was also groundless where it was based on defendant's verbal protest to the unauthorized arrest. People v Ferreira, 807 N.Y.S.2d 832, 10 Misc. 3d 441, 234 N.Y.L.J. 79, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2263 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2005).

Where protesters were arrested after they failed to comply with police instructions to move from a no-demonstration zone to a demonstration area, the protesters' Fourth Amendment claims failed because officers had probable cause to arrest them for obstruction of governmental administration under N.Y. Penal Law § 195.05 since they rejected 17 directives to leave the no-demonstration zone, and an audio recording showed indisputably that they were neither courteous nor compliant. Marcavage v City of New York, 689 F.3d 98, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 16081 (9th Cir. Nev. 2012), cert. denied, 568 U.S. 1212, 133 S. Ct. 1492, 185 L. Ed. 2d 548, 2013 U.S. LEXIS 1951 (U.S. 2013).

Penal Law § 195.05, prohibiting obstructing governmental administration, held not constitutionally invalid on its face. Bishop v Golden, 302 F. Supp. 502, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9867 (E.D.N.Y. 1969).

In an action under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 in which a plaintiff alleged that his civil rights were violated when he was falsely arrested and charged with, inter alia, obstructing governmental information in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 195.05, an arresting police officer had not established that he was entitled to summary judgment on the claim because there were factual issues remaining concerning whether or not plaintiff's conduct in the courtroom while attending a hearing on a parking ticket provided sufficient probable cause for the arrest and charges. Searles v Pompilio, 652 F. Supp. 2d 432, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 64725 (S.D.N.Y. 2009).

3. Dealings with police

Defendant, who resisted a police officer's execution of a warrant to search his apartment, was properly convicted of obstructing governmental administration under Penal L § 195.05, although the papers upon which the issuance of the warrant had been based were defective, where the warrant had not be invalid on its face and where defendant had appeared at the hearing on the state's motion for the search warrant. People v Coffaro, 52 N.Y.2d 932, 437 N.Y.S.2d 666, 419 N.E.2d 344, 1981 N.Y. LEXIS 2164 (N.Y. 1981).

Child was properly adjudicated in Family Court to be juvenile delinquent where she responded to police officer's attempt to detain her on investigation of truancy with acts of resistance, including striking officer both before and after arrest, since, had acts been committed by adult, they would have constituted crimes of obstructing governmental administration, attempted second degree assault, and resisting arrest. In re Shannon B., 70 N.Y.2d 458, 522 N.Y.S.2d 488, 517 N.E.2d 203, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 18970 (N.Y. 1987).

Police officer's statements that defendant injured officers by kicking, punching and biting them while they were making arrest, and scattering newspapers at nearby newsstand, if found to be true, would establish that defendant committed each element of crimes of second degree assault, menacing, resisting arrest, second degree obstruction of governmental administration, and fourth degree criminal mischief. In re Jeremy B., 151 A.D.2d 314, 542 N.Y.S.2d 582, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7904 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1989).

Evidence supported conviction for second degree obstruction of governmental administration arising from incident in which defendant approached officer from behind in threatening manner while officer was arresting and subduing another individual, despite contention that officer was not aware of defendant's presence and that defendant did not actually come into physical contact with officer, since (1) approach of defendant required that another officer divert his assistance in arrest and intervene to protect officer from defendant, and (2) approach of defendant constituted knowing, physical interference with and disruption of arrest being performed by officer. People v Tarver, 188 A.D.2d 938, 591 N.Y.S.2d 907, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14675 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 893, 597 N.Y.S.2d 955, 613 N.E.2d 987, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 1609 (N.Y. 1993).

Evidence was insufficient to support conviction for second degree obstruction of governmental administration where defendant was alleged to have walked away from arresting officer in disobedience to order to stop and to have struggled with police to avoid being handcuffed, since police were not authorized to attempt to detain defendant as they did not possess reasonable suspicion that he was engaged in criminal activity. Defendant may not be convicted of obstructing governmental administration or interfering with police officer in performance of official duty unless it is established that police were engaged in authorized conduct. People v Lupinacci, 191 A.D.2d 589, 595 N.Y.S.2d 76, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2309 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1993).

Defendant was not victim of selective prosecution for resisting arrest and obstructing governmental administration arising from incident in which he became embroiled in argument with pizza shop employees after they refused to serve his brother, where evidence showed that pizza shop employees immediately complied with police officers' order to stop fighting and that sole basis for defendant's prosecution was his subsequent attack on police officers. People v England, 191 A.D.2d 706, 595 N.Y.S.2d 793, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3110 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1993).

Physical interference and obstruction of official duties being performed by police officers was adequately established by evidence that defendant, appearing upset, approached officer who was administering sobriety tests to defendant's friend, and that second officer directed defendant to stop, but defendant pushed past second officer toward first officer. People v Godbold, 207 A.D.2d 1008, 617 N.Y.S.2d 70, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10256 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1994), app. denied, 85 N.Y.2d 862, 624 N.Y.S.2d 381, 648 N.E.2d 801, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 869 (N.Y. 1995).

Defendant may not be convicted of interfering with police officer in performance of official function unless it is shown that police were engaged in "authorized" conduct. People v Greene, 221 A.D.2d 559, 634 N.Y.S.2d 144, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11928 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1995).

Juvenile's acts would not, if committed by adult, be second degree obstruction of governmental administration where her initial untruthfulness about presence of weapon inside apartment, followed by her refusal to disclose its location, did not satisfy elements of CLS Penal § 195.05. In re Kezzia T., 273 A.D.2d 13, 709 N.Y.S.2d 401, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6104 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2000).

Evidence was legally insufficient to support conviction for obstructing governmental administration in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 195.05, because the arresting officer testified that he was not arresting defendant's son, as charged in the indictment, but another person, when defendant allegedly interfered with performance of the officer's duties. People v Gerecke, 34 A.D.3d 1260, 823 N.Y.S.2d 797, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15975 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.3d 925, 827 N.Y.S.2d 694, 860 N.E.2d 996, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 4101 (N.Y. 2006).

Convictions for assault in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 120.05(3), resisting arrest, N.Y. Penal Law § 205.30, and obstructing governmental administration in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 195.05, were improper because there was insufficient evidence to establish that the arrest was lawful; officers lacked reasonable cause to believe that defendant committed offense in their presence, and defendant was not required to respond to the officers' request for identification or to open his door to the officers. Further, the officers were aware that defendant initially provided a fictitious name to them, and thus they lacked reasonable cause to believe that defendant had committed the crime of criminal impersonation. People v Perez, 47 A.D.3d 1192, 851 N.Y.S.2d 747, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2857 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 814, 857 N.Y.S.2d 48, 886 N.E.2d 813, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 1266 (N.Y. 2008).

Conviction of resisting arrest was supported by sufficient evidence because, inter alia, an officer's testimony supported a finding that he could have reasonably believed that defendant was recklessly creating a risk of public inconvenience, annoyance, or alarm by his conduct during a traffic stop of another individual and the area in which the traffic stop occurred included a municipal building, a diner and private homes and that defendant was swearing and appeared to be shouting at the stopped individual that he was going to kill him; thus, there was probable cause to arrest defendant for disorderly conduct and obstructing governmental administration. The testimony of two officers concerning defendant's body language and conduct in refusing to allow them to handcuff him, and the fact that it took two officers to restrain him, demonstrated his intent to resist arrest. People v Lepard, 83 A.D.3d 1214, 922 N.Y.S.2d 585, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2913 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2011), app. denied, 18 N.Y.3d 925, 942 N.Y.S.2d 464, 965 N.E.2d 966, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 763 (N.Y. 2012).

Defendant-bar owner's guilt of the crime of "obstructing governmental administration" would be established, as alleged in the information, challenged as not alleging an offense, if proof later showed that, when police officers sought to make an inspection pursuant to statute of premises licensed to sell alcoholic beverages, defendant stood in officer's way and stated his bar was private and officer would have to lock him up if he wanted to check the bar. People v De Martino, 67 Misc. 2d 11, 323 N.Y.S.2d 297, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1521 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1971).

Any action which would bar a police officer from effecting a lawful arrest in a peaceable manner or prevent a police officer from conveying a lawfully arrested person to the police station without physical interference, is proscribed by the statute. People v Shea, 68 Misc. 2d 271, 326 N.Y.S.2d 70, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1135 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1971).

Defendant's failure to properly identify himself to a police officer was not an offense proscribed by an existing statute and was thus not "an independently unlawful act" on which a finding of guilty of obstructing governmental administration (Penal Law § 195.05) could be based, where defendant's conduct did not amount to criminal impersonation (Penal Law § 190.25) or the making of an apparently sworn false statement (Penal Law § 210.35). People v Gaissert, 75 Misc. 2d 478, 348 N.Y.S.2d 82, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1598 (N.Y. County Ct. 1973).

Under city ordinance giving police authority to arrest for failure of citizen to comply with police request, resisting arrest conviction could not be based on scuffle which ensued when defendant, after refusing to show police officers a sample of literature he was distributing on street corner, and having promptly and properly identified himself, was informed that he was under arrest; police could not use ordinance as a pretext for discovering probable cause to arrest for violation of General Business Law § 330 where there were no suspicious circumstances, contents of literature were unknown to officers, and no citizen complaints were made or being investigated. People v Ailey, 76 Misc. 2d 589, 350 N.Y.S.2d 981, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1990 (N.Y. City Ct. 1974).

Defendants arrested for alleged operation and control of stolen vehicle did not violate Penal Law § 195.05 by giving false names, addresses, and ages to arresting officer who requested such information. People v Ketter, 76 Misc. 2d 698, 351 N.Y.S.2d 579, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2005 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1974).

A motion by defendant to dismiss charges of obstructing governmental administration (Penal Law, § 195.05) and resisting arrest (Penal Law, § 205.30) is properly denied as the People have met their burden of establishing reasonable cause under circumstances where the defendant, upon being approached by three uniformed policemen after he was observed purchasing a glassine envelope containing white powder, locked his car door, and once told that he was under arrest, ate the envelope, whereupon one officer broke the car window and forcibly removed the defendant from the vehicle while another officer struggled with defendant in an attempt to recover the envelope from his mouth. People v Traynham, 95 Misc. 2d 145, 407 N.Y.S.2d 408, 1978 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2395 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1978).

An accusatory instrument, in order to be valid, must state not only the crime with which a defendant is charged but also the particular acts constituting the crime; accordingly, a motion to dismiss a charge of obstructing governmental administration (Penal Law, § 195.05), after the close of the People's case, is properly granted under circumstances where the complaint states only that "the defendant did flee in attempt to avoid being summoned" by a police officer, as fleeing from an officer prior to arrest is not a crime and while the alleged act of flight may have been further defined by the evidence during trial, such acts were not charged in the information. People v Offen, 96 Misc. 2d 147, 408 N.Y.S.2d 914, 1978 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2569 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1978).

Obstructing governmental administration (Penal Law, § 195.05) was intended to make criminal conduct designed to interrupt or shut down administrative governmental operations; it was not designed for the situation where defendant recognized a plainclothes police officer on a subway platform and warned those within hearing, including a suspect the officer claims he then had under surveillance, that complainant was a police officer. People v Lopez, 97 Misc. 2d 124, 410 N.Y.S.2d 787, 1978 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2758 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1978).

Resistance to a police arrest unaccompanied by intimidation, physical force or some other physical act, does not support a charge of Obstructing Governmental Administration under Penal Law § 195.05 because it does not constitute an "independently unlawful act" as required by the statute. In re M., 108 Misc. 2d 376, 437 N.Y.S.2d 565, 1981 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2210 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. 1981).

Defendant, who when apprehended for traffic offenses lied to a police officer about his identity using a fictitious or assumed name, and who admitted that he had disposed of his wallet to avoid prosecution under his real name, did not obstruct governmental administration in violation of Penal Law § 195.05, since verbally transmitting information to a police officer does not constitute intimidation, physical force or interference. People v Sherman, 116 Misc. 2d 109, 455 N.Y.S.2d 528, 1982 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3842 (N.Y. City Ct. 1982).

Reliance upon inspections by police officers of taverns is essential to effective enforcement of Alcoholic Beverage Control Law, and thus, defendant tavern owner's failure to make available to policemen records of his purchases and sales of alcohol, which were requested while inspecting tavern, was interference within meaning of CLS Penal Law § 195.05, since policemen were engaged in authorized government function and power to inspect licensed premises includes power to inspect books and records. People v Stumpp, 129 Misc. 2d 703, 493 N.Y.S.2d 679, 1985 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2722 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1985), aff'd, 132 Misc. 2d 3, 505 N.Y.S.2d 758, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2626 (N.Y. App. Term 1986).

Owner of premises which sold liquor for on-premises consumption was properly convicted of obstructing governmental administration for refusing police officer access to books and records, since police officer is permitted to inspect premises selling liquor for on-premises consumption and such inspection includes right to inspect books and records. People v Stumpp, 132 Misc. 2d 3, 505 N.Y.S.2d 578 (Sup App T 1986).

Court would reverse defendant's conviction of obstructing governmental administration, which was based on her refusal to allow her former husband to see their children after police requested her to do so, since police did not, sua sponte, have authority to enforce visitation order and there was no proof that wife interfered "by means of intimidation, physical force...or by means of any independently unlawful act." People v Lawler, 140 Misc. 2d 661, 531 N.Y.S.2d 861, 1988 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 484 (N.Y. County Ct. 1988).

Defendant who was chained to door at time of arrest in connection with antiabortion demonstration could not be convicted of resisting arrest or obstruction of governmental administration in second degree since there was complete absence of proof of element of intent to commit crimes charged. People v McDaniel, 154 Misc. 2d 89, 593 N.Y.S.2d 154, 1992 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 595 (N.Y. App. Term 1992), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 889, 597 N.Y.S.2d 950, 613 N.E.2d 982, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 1488 (N.Y. 1993), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 892, 597 N.Y.S.2d 954, 613 N.E.2d 986 (N.Y. 1993), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 894, 597 N.Y.S.2d 956, 613 N.E.2d 988 (N.Y. 1993).

Allegation that defendant threw marihuana cigarette into sewer to prevent police officer from retrieving it was facially insufficient to charge second degree obstructing governmental administration because, absent any indication that defendant disposed of marihuana cigarette in response to actions or order of officer, there was no indication that he acted with intent to obstruct officer. People v Vargas, 179 Misc. 2d 236, 684 N.Y.S.2d 848, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 627 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1998).

Defendant was properly charged with second degree obstructing governmental administration where she allegedly refused to comply with police officer's repeated instructions to walk through magnetometer in courthouse, impeded other people standing behind her from walking through magnetometer, flailed her arms and kicked when officer tried to arrest and handcuff her, and stated "Fuck you, I don't have to do what you say. I'll blow up the building, shoot you and put a bullet in your head." People v Barrett, 179 Misc. 2d 261, 684 N.Y.S.2d 818, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 633 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1998).

Defendant was properly charged with second degree obstructing governmental administration for preventing police officer from fingerprinting her following her arrest. People v Santos, 182 Misc. 2d 764, 700 N.Y.S.2d 381, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 512 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1999).

Information charging second degree obstruction of governmental administration met requirements of CLS CPL §§ 100.15(3) and 100.40(1)(b) where it stated that defendant attempted to prevent uniformed police officer from arresting her husband by grabbing officer's arm while he was attempting to take her husband into custody for driving while intoxicated, and that she was then advised that she was under arrest for obstructing governmental administration. People v Cacsere, 185 Misc. 2d 92, 712 N.Y.S.2d 298, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 325 (N.Y. App. Term 2000).

The statute was not designed for a situation where a defendant is suspected of a violation of an ordinance, and then doesn't stop for a police officer; it was, rather, intended to make criminal conduct designed to interrupt or shut down administrative governmental operations. People v Bryan, 190 Misc. 2d 818, 741 N.Y.S.2d 669, 2002 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 196 (N.Y. City Ct. 2002).

Although defendant's conduct in signing his birth name rather than his legal name to a fingerprint card may have been inappropriate, it was not sufficient to support his conviction on a charge of obstruction of governmental administrationin the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 195.05; regardless of the name defendant used to sign the cards, defendant's fingerprints were taken and the card was sent in for checking, and therefore, there was no showing that defendant had obstructed, impaired, or perverted the administration of law or other governmental function. People v Anzisi, 798 N.Y.S.2d 843, 8 Misc. 3d 85, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 946 (N.Y. App. Term), app. denied, 5 N.Y.3d 784, 801 N.Y.S.2d 805, 835 N.E.2d 665, 2005 N.Y. LEXIS 2215 (N.Y. 2005).

Motion to dismiss an information charging obstructing governmental administration was denied because the allegation that defendant physically "came between" an officer and unapprehended individuals satisfied the requirement that the interference have been physical in nature; in any event, defendant's actions of intentionally and physically placing himself between the officer and other unapprehended individuals, screaming at them, and refusing repeated requests to move as the officer attempted to investigate an assault in progress, satisfied the element of interference and met the specifications of N.Y. Penal Law § 195.05. The officer had the right to approach the unapprehended individuals to request information after arriving at the scene of the radio call alleging an assault in progress. People v Yarborough, 852 N.Y.S.2d 751, 19 Misc. 3d 520, 2008 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 783 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2008).

Charges of resisting arrest and second-degree obstructing governmental administration, stemming from an officer's attempt to cite defendant for having an open container in an public place (an elevator), were facially insufficient because an interior, common area of an apartment building did not constitute a "public place" as defined in New York City, N.Y., Admin. Code § 10-125(b)); thus, the officer was not authorized to issue defendant a summons for public consumption of alcohol. People v Chavez, 972 N.Y.S.2d 858, 41 Misc. 3d 526, 2013 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3582 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2013).

Under N.Y. Crim. Proc. Law § 410.70(2), (3), a defendant's parole revocation was proper: by a preponderance of the evidence, defendant (1) consumed alcohol, and (2) obstructed governmental administration in second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 195.05, (with no physical violence, interfering with officers who were arresting the defendant's girlfriend). People v Romeo, 9 A.D.3d 744, 779 N.Y.S.2d 860, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9943 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2004).

Information failed to adequately allege a charge of obstruction of governmental administration, N.Y. Penal Law § 195.05, based on defendant's alleged refusal to open an apartment door in response to an officer's attempt to execute an arrest warrant for an arrestee who was not defendant; there was no indication that the officer had a search warrant in addition to the arrest warrant, and the information failed to allege that the apartment was the arrestee's dwelling or that the officer announced his purpose and authority before demanding entry into the apartment. By failing to allege that the apartment was the arrestee's dwelling, the information did not adequately plead that the governmental function was authorized, and if the officer's demand for entry was unauthorized, then defendant's refusal to open the door was not the predicate for an obstruction charge. People v Rodriquez, 851 N.Y.S.2d 342, 19 Misc. 3d 302, 239 N.Y.L.J. 50, 2008 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 445 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2008).

Warrantless entry into defendant's home lawful under the emergency doctrine, and the police had probable cause to arrest defendant for obstruction of governmental administration in the second degree, after defendant tried to physically stop officers responding to mental health complaint from entering the home. People v Ormanian, 55 Misc. 3d 566, 47 N.Y.S.3d 847, 2016 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4947 (N.Y. City Ct. 2016).

Accusatory instrument charging a defendant with obstruction of governmental administration was facially sufficient because the defendant allegedly placed himself between an officer and the intended recipient of the summons, told the intended recipient not to identify himself and slapped the officer's hand down. People v Lawrence, 59 Misc. 3d 215, 70 N.Y.S.3d 798, 2018 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 383 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2018).

Citizen's silence could not constitute any element of obstructing governmental administration, even if such interfered with officers' attempt to investigate whether he was violating park rules, the district court failed to convey that obstruction required a physical act, and to the extent the instruction implied that sometimes refusal to respond to police might be considered obstruction, the instruction mischaracterized the law; jurors could have concluded that probable cause existed for the citizen's arrest for obstruction without considering whether probable cause supported his arrest for disorderly conduct, and the verdict was vacated. Uzoukwu v City of New York, 805 F.3d 409, 2015 U.S. App. LEXIS 19372 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2015).

Police officer lacked probable cause to arrest plaintiff for obstructing governmental administration in violation of New York Penal Law based on his refusal to comply with a stop, to comply with an order to turn over his cell phone, and his asserted attempt to flee. Even if the stop was lawful, plaintiff's refusal to respond was protected under the state constitution and was not a crime; further, his actions could not have obstructed governmental administration because the officer's Terry stop and frisk were unauthorized. Dancy v McGinley, 843 F.3d 93, 2016 U.S. App. LEXIS 21753 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2016).

In a § 1983 suit filed against police officers, the district court did not err in denying the police officers' motions for JMOL on the false arrest claim because they did not have probable cause to arrest plaintiff for disorderly conduct or obstruction of governmental administration. A reasonable jury could have found that plaintiff did not physically interfere with the officers' investigation, because he simply asked why he and his companions had to leave; but did not raise his voice, curse, or do anything outside of normal conversation. Ekukpe v Santiago, 823 Fed. Appx. 25, 2020 U.S. App. LEXIS 26275 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2020).

Family Court order authorized the police officers' entry during the June 29-30 incident, and they were performing an official function within the meaning of the obstructing governmental administration statute; the residents' refusal to allow officers to lawfully enter their home was not pure speech, and New York courts had found that one could obstruct governmental administration by refusing to comply with a search warrant. Shaheed v Kroski, 2020 U.S. App. LEXIS 34985 (2d Cir. N.Y. Nov. 3, 2020).

Deputy sheriff had probable cause to arrest automobile accident victim for second degree obstructing governmental administration where (1) victim failed to comply with sheriff's instructions to "step back" from accident scene, and physically broke away from sheriff, who had been called to assist in rescue attempt, and (2) victim approached another rescue worker, touched his arm, and asked him questions while worker was trying to save another victim's life; furthermore, even if there was no probable cause, deputy sheriff reasonably believed that he had probable cause, and thus was entitled to qualified immunity in victim's subsequent § 1983 action for false arrest and false imprisonment. Decker v Campus, 981 F. Supp. 851, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18029 (S.D.N.Y. 1997).

Arrestee's claims for false arrest, unlawful imprisonment, and malicious prosecution under both § 1983 and New York law must fail, where investigators pursuing potential robbery suspect were obstructed when he attempted to lock door of van and hold it closed, and resisted when he grabbed steering wheel to prevent investigators from taking him out of van, because probable cause existed for his arrest, detention, and prosecution for violating Penal §§ 195.05 and 205.30. Diehl v Munro, 170 F. Supp. 2d 311, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16141 (N.D.N.Y. 2001).

Arresting officer was not entitled to qualified immunity on plaintiff's Fourth Amendment claims against him because there was no probable cause to arrest plaintiff for obstruction; plaintiff alleged that his ambiguous response of "What?" to the officer constituted only a querulous reaction to someone speaking to him, not an affirmation of identity, and the officer did not check plaintiff's person for identification after he was in handcuffs (ignoring an officer's request for identification was not a crime, nor did that act supply any such element). Williams v City of Mt. Vernon, 428 F. Supp. 2d 146, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15504 (S.D.N.Y. 2006).

It was undisputed that the arrestee interfered with the dog control officer's attempt to seize his dog by refusing physical access to his residence and/or the dog in a manner that was hostile and profane, and based on the circumstances with which the police officer was confronted and the plain language of N.Y. Penal Law § 195.05, the police officer had probable cause to issue the arrestee the appearance ticket, and, consequently, the arrestee's false arrest claim had to be dismissed. Because the existence of probable cause also served as an absolute defense to a cause of action for malicious prosecution, the arrestee's malicious prosecution claim against the police officer and the dog control officer was also dismissed. Skinner v Chapman, 680 F. Supp. 2d 470, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7730 (W.D.N.Y. 2010), aff'd, 412 Fed. Appx. 387, 2011 U.S. App. LEXIS 4338 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2011).

No reasonable trier of fact could conclude that the officers lacked probable cause to arrest plaintiff for obstruction of government administration in the second degree, pursuant to N.Y. Penal Law § 195.05, because she engaged in multiple attempts to interrupt her husband's arrest, confronting the arresting officers and even attempting to free her husband from police custody by opening the door of the patrol car in which he had been placed. Yevstifeev v Steve, 860 F. Supp. 2d 217, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 69470 (W.D.N.Y. 2012).

Plaintiff was in close proximity to the arrest, which alone did not provide probable cause to arrest him for obstructing governmental administration. Charles v City of New York, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46741 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2014).

Asking why you are being arrested, while simultaneously obeying police commands, does not constitute obstructive conduct. Charles v City of New York, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46741 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2014).

Where protesters were arrested after they failed to comply with a police order to disperse, defendant law enforcement officials were entitled to qualified immunity with respect to the protesters' civil rights claims of false arrest and malicious prosecution because there was probable cause to arrest for obstructing governmental administration and disorderly conduct and it was reasonable for defendants to believe that the order to disperse was lawfully given as a means to clear the public entrance to a police station house and direct the protesters to an alternate barricaded area. Olugbenga Akinnagbe v City of New York, 128 F. Supp. 3d 539, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 117375 (E.D.N.Y. 2015), dismissed, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 141646 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 18, 2015).

4. —Undercover investigations

Juvenile committed act which, if committed by adult, would constitute second degree obstructing governmental administration where he intentionally rode his bicycle into specific area of police undercover narcotics "buy operation" at storefront after police told him to leave area and not get involved, and he yelled "cops, cops...watch out...police are coming" as he pedaled past storefront. In re Davan L., 91 N.Y.2d 88, 666 N.Y.S.2d 1015, 689 N.E.2d 909, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3716 (N.Y. 1997).

The gravamen of the charge of obstructing governmental administration is the obstruction, impairment and perversion of the administration of law and forbidding the police officers from conducting an undercover investigation. People v Longo, 71 Misc. 2d 385, 336 N.Y.S.2d 85, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1347 (N.Y. County Ct. 1971).

Where there was no proof before the grand jury that the defendant spoke to someone in such a way as to reveal the identity of an undercover agent or physically interfered with the functioning of such agent, indictment charging obstruction of governmental administration was insufficient. People v Longo, 71 Misc. 2d 385, 336 N.Y.S.2d 85, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1347 (N.Y. County Ct. 1971).

Superseding information, charging defendant with second degree obstructing governmental administration for identifying on-duty undercover officer as being police officer by "stating loudly that said undercover officer was a police officer," was dismissed as (1) it was facially insufficient where, other than conclusory assertion that officer was "on duty," there was no indication that undercover operation was in progress, and (2) speedy trial period had elapsed. People v Hinkson, 184 Misc. 2d 496, 708 N.Y.S.2d 546, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 205 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2000).

Misdemeanor complaint sufficiently set forth factual basis for charge of second degree obstructing governmental administration by alleging, inter alia, that defendant approached 2 undercover police officers who were engaged in narcotics "buy and bust" operation and told deponent officer that he knew he was "a cop," that while in close proximity to both officers' faces told them to "go home because you will get hurt if you stay here any longer, I am going to let them know," and that he then walked away and stopped to talk to 2 individuals, pointing out 2 officers to those individuals. People v Williams, 186 Misc. 2d 705, 721 N.Y.S.2d 456, 2000 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 570 (N.Y. App. Term 2000), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 789, 725 N.Y.S.2d 654, 749 N.E.2d 223, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1349 (N.Y. 2001).

4.5 Sufficiency of accusatory instrument

Misdemeanor complaint charging defendant with obstructing governmental administration in the second degree was jurisdictionally defective because the factual part of the complaint merely stated that the officer was attempting to effectuate the arrest of defendant's brother, but the complaint contained no factual allegations that would establish, if true, that the underlying arrest of defendant's brother was authorized. People v Sumter, 151 A.D.3d 556, 58 N.Y.S.3d 304, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4816 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2017).

Misdemeanor complaint charging defendant with obstructing governmental administration in the second degree was jurisdictionally defective because the factual part of the complaint merely stated that the officer was attempting to effectuate the arrest of defendant's brother, but the complaint contained no factual allegations that would establish, if true, that the underlying arrest of defendant's brother was authorized. People v Sumter, 151 A.D.3d 556, 58 N.Y.S.3d 304, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4816 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2017).

Information contained nothing more than an allegation indicating that the correction officer was on duty; the absence of any factual allegations identifying an official function necessitated dismissal of the charge of Penal Law § 195.05. Additionally, since the element of an official function had not been alleged, the information failed to establish that defendant, by throwing an unknown liquid at the correction officer, acted with the intent to prevent a public servant in the performance of that official function. People v Ford, 53 Misc. 3d 318, 36 N.Y.S.3d 374, 2016 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2658 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2016).

Trial court erred in convicting defendant, upon his plea of guilty, of second-degree obstructing governmental administration because the information was facially insufficient inasmuch as defendant's alleged actions—taking money from another in exchange for swiping a MetroCard through a subway turnstile—were not physical in nature nor could they be considered "minimal interference set in motion to frustrate police activity," and a violation of the unauthorized sale of transportation services statute could not be considered an "independently unlawful act" under the obstruction statute since it encompassed the same conduct as that which was considered to have obstructed the Transit Authority's function. People v Collins (Clinton), 58 Misc. 3d 10, 64 N.Y.S.3d 851, 2017 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4253 (N.Y. App. Term 2017).

Information sufficiently alleged the charge of obstructing governmental administration in the second degree based on factual questions existing whether the bar was open for business at the approximately 3:30 a.m.-or-later hour, and whether the employee roster was actually available upon the premises at that time—or, indeed, whether such a roster existed at all—when the police officer sought to inspect. People v Salgado, 58 Misc. 3d 820, 69 N.Y.S.3d 785, 2018 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 118 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2018).

Information was facially sufficient to charge obstructing governmental administration, because defendant refused the police officers instructions to move away and stop blocking the building entrance to permit their entry into the location to investigate a crime in progress. People v Broughton, 63 Misc. 3d 435, 94 N.Y.S.3d 830, 2019 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 795 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2019).

5. Evidence

Television films of events alleged to constitute the crime charged did not, as a matter of law, establish that there was a reasonable doubt as to the guilt of defendant where it was stipulated that the films were not in sequence and were cut and spliced and there was no testimony elicited upon the trial as to whether the events depicted in the television tape represented a complete pictorial record of the facts and circumstances leading to defendant's arrest. People v Eisenberg, 22 N.Y.2d 99, 291 N.Y.S.2d 318, 238 N.E.2d 719, 1968 N.Y. LEXIS 1362 (N.Y.), reh'g denied, 22 N.Y.2d 884, 1968 N.Y. LEXIS 2262 (N.Y. 1968).

At his trial on charges of obstructing governmental administration and assaulting several sheriffs deputies, it was not objectionable hearsay for the defendant, his brother and mother to testify that a justice of the peace had instructed the defendant and his brother that they would not be photographed or fingerprinted, where this evidence was offered to establish the reasonable belief by the defendant that the police officers were acting outside their lawful authority in processing him and his brother for commitment to the county jail on unrelated charges. People v Stewart, 37 A.D.2d 908, 325 N.Y.S.2d 533, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3137 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1971).

Finding of malice on part of officer who arrested plaintiff for obstructing governmental administration was against the great weight of the evidence even assuming a lack of probable cause and thus an inference of malice. Martin v Albany, 51 A.D.2d 596, 377 N.Y.S.2d 774, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10907 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976), rev'd, 42 N.Y.2d 13, 396 N.Y.S.2d 612, 364 N.E.2d 1304, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 2092 (N.Y. 1977).

Evidence that arrestees, who had originally been charged with, inter alia, bribery, pleaded guilty solely to a charge of obstructing governmental administration and admitted that they had attempted to prevent a police lieutenant from performing an official function, i. e., the processing of their arrest, by means of an independently unlawful act was insufficient to show that the $25,000 in cash in their possession at the time of their arrest was to be used to attempt to bribe the police officer and thus was insufficient to show that arrestees were not entitled to return of the money. Burden of proof was on police department property clerk to demonstrate that money found in possession of arrestees at the time of arrest was contraband and to show specifically that it was an instrumentality of the crime in question. Clay v McCabe, 56 A.D.2d 747, 392 N.Y.S.2d 29, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10994 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1977).

City's police chief was improperly convicted of second degree obstruction of governmental administration arising out of his alleged disruption of undercover narcotics investigation conducted in city by sheriff's department where he told sheriff that if sheriff's department had manpower to police city, then it had manpower to transport its own prisoners between court and jail, which historically had been provided by city police as courtesy to sheriff, since (1) sheriff's agreement to limit his investigation within city would not be improper per se in view of overlapping jurisdictions and legitimate concern for effective deployment of manpower, and (2) there was no basis to interject intimidation into conversation at which cessation of transportation was dis-

City's police chief was properly convicted of second degree obstructing governmental administration, arising out of his intentional disruption of controlled drug purchases by drug task force, where he dispatched officers in marked police cars to undercover drug purchase, and personally appeared in uniform at scene. People v Dolan, 172 A.D.2d 68, 576 N.Y.S.2d 901, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15097 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1991), app. denied, 79 N.Y.2d 946, 583 N.Y.S.2d 200, 592 N.E.2d 808, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 2247 (N.Y. 1992).

Evidence supported convictions for second degree assault and obstruction of governmental administration where (1) defendant was arrested and transported to precinct, (2) when handcuffs were thereafter removed, she became verbally and physically abusive, (3) before she could be subdued, she severely scratched face of officer standing by officer who removed handcuffs, and (4) injured officer was on duty standing by to assist officer assigned to process defendant. People v Lane, 190 A.D.2d 604, 593 N.Y.S.2d 802, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1545 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 1015, 600 N.Y.S.2d 203, 616 N.E.2d 860, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 2486 (N.Y. 1993).

Evidence established that juvenile committed act which, if committed by adult, would have constituted second degree obstructing governmental administration where (1) officer responded to report that female was calling for help from building, (2) as officer exited his marked patrol car and entered building, juvenile ran out of doorway and pushed past officer by striking him with both hands in chest, and (3) officer ordered juvenile to stop and, when he refused to do so, grabbed his sweatshirt and struggle ensued. In re Jose M., 210 A.D.2d 228, 619 N.Y.S.2d 349, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12266 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1994).

Respondent's acts of holding on to officer and refusing to let go despite repeated orders to do so constituted "knowing physical interference" which disrupted officer's performance of official function for purposes of establishing guilt of second degree obstructing governmental administration under CLS Penal § 195.05, where officer was engaged in controlling crowd to prevent injury to fellow officers who were attempting to effect arrest of another individual. In re Samuel VV, 217 A.D.2d 863, 629 N.Y.S.2d 843, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8169 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1995).

Court erred in allowing witness' unredacted testimony during People's direct case against defendant's mother, codefendant in joint trial, on charge of second degree obstructing governmental administration, that codefendant had asked witness outside court "Can you say that another guy had kicked the door instead of [defendant]? Because he's on parole, probation, and he will get violated or the state will pick it up"; however, error was harmless given overwhelming evidence of guilt. People v Cancer, 232 A.D.2d 875, 649 N.Y.S.2d 492, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11267 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 984, 656 N.Y.S.2d 742, 678 N.E.2d 1358, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 854 (N.Y. 1997).

Family Court properly found that juvenile committed act constituting second degree obstructing governmental administration when, having been warned by police to leave area where officers intended to arrest certain drug dealers, juvenile instead rode his bicycle past targeted location, shouting "Cops" and "Five-O." In re Davan L., 248 A.D.2d 473, 669 N.Y.S.2d 513, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2258 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1998).

Testimony that respondent grabbed a flashlight from an officer and raised it as if to strike the officer while the police were attempting to arrest his father was legally sufficient to establish that respondent was attempting to interfere with the arrest of his father, and was sufficient to establish that respondent committed acts that, if committed by an adult, would have constituted obstruction of governmental administration. Matter of Daniel M., 37 A.D.3d 1101, 830 N.Y.S.2d 410, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1150 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2007).

Evidence at trial was legally sufficient to support defendant's convictions for obstructing governmental administration in the second degree and resisting arrest, and the convictions were not against the weight of the evidence where, after a traffic stop, defendant refused the officer's request to turn over her license and registration and then, after being told that she was about to be placed under arrest for that refusal, she physically resisted the efforts of that officer and others to obtain the requested paperwork, to remove her from the vehicle, and to place her under arrest; among other obstructive actions, defendant closed her vehicle's window on the officer's arm, causing him injury, and flailed and kicked as she was handcuffed. People v Sibblies, 98 A.D.3d 458, 949 N.Y.S.2d 685, 2012 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5988 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2012), rev'd, dismissed, 22 N.Y.3d 1174, 985 N.Y.S.2d 474, 8 N.E.3d 852, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 702 (N.Y. 2014).

Evidence was sufficient to adjudicate a juvenile as delinquent for second-degree unlawful imprisonment under N.Y. Penal Law § 135.05, but not second-degree obstructing governmental administration under N.Y. Penal Law § 195.05 because the juvenile grabbed the complaining witness by the waist and spun her around, but immediately released her when she ordered him to do so. Matter of Terry J.P., 106 A.D.3d 1092, 966 N.Y.S.2d 200, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3767 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2013).

Defendant's conviction for obstructing governmental administration in the second degree was not contrary to the weight of the evidence because, inter alia, defendant physically attacked the arresting officer and knocked him to the ground, a second officer pulled defendant off of the arresting officer while defendant was throwing fists and kicking, and a third officer deployed two cartridges of his taser on defendant, which failed to fully subdue him. People v Jasiewicz, 162 A.D.3d 1398, 79 N.Y.S.3d 755, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4632 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 32 N.Y.3d 1005, 111 N.E.3d 1119, 86 N.Y.S.3d 763, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 3108 (N.Y. 2018).

Convictions of obstructing governmental administration and menacing, based on charges that defendant committed such crimes using imitation pistol, would not be set aside due to fact that prosecution witnesses uniformly testified that defendant possessed real gun, since nature of object used in commission of crimes charged was immaterial to charges and beyond what was necessary to sustain convictions. People v Wilfong, 146 Misc. 2d 577, 557 N.Y.S.2d 829, 1990 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 304 (N.Y. App. Term), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 798, 559 N.Y.S.2d 1003, 559 N.E.2d 697, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 2948 (N.Y. 1990).

Information charging second degree obstructing governmental administration would not be dismissed for failure to meet requirements of CLS CPL § 100.40, where it alleged that defendant intentionally interfered with investigation of automobile accident by locking himself in his car, that police officer was engaged in specific official activity when defendant locked himself in car, and that defendant told officer that only way to get him out of car was to call emergency services to forcibly remove him; element of "physical interference" was satisfied by allegation that defendant locked himself in car. People v Salter, 167 Misc. 2d 877, 638 N.Y.S.2d 566, 1996 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 36 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1996).

Facts alleged in an information did not support the charge of obstructing governmental administration in the second degree because the accusatory instrument alleged that defendant, upon being approached by a plain-clothed officer who observed defendant purchasing a small object containing white powder, swallowed the object when the officer identified herself as a police officer. The complaint was insufficient because it did not allege that the object was contraband, nor did the police tell defendant that he was under arrest or not to do anything with the small object. People v Berdini, 845 N.Y.S.2d 717, 18 Misc. 3d 221, 238 N.Y.L.J. 106, 2007 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 7523 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2007).

Evidence did not demonstrate whatsoever that it was defendant's intent to obstruct, impair or pervert the administration of law, or prevent or attempt to prevent the performance of that function by failing to advise anyone that a suspect was incarcerated on the date when the charged robbery occurred. While defendant's silence was demonstrated to have been the result of neglect, carelessness, callousness or indifference, that was not the same thing as a conscious objective or purpose to affect the administration of justice in any way. People v Lemma, 959 N.Y.S.2d 655, 39 Misc. 3d 399, 2013 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 511 (N.Y.

Dist. Ct. 2013), rev'd, in part, 50 Misc. 3d 34, 22 N.Y.S.3d 280, 2015 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3548 (N.Y. App. Term 2015).

Obstruction charge against defendant juvenile was established by evidence that the police were performing an official function of securing a crime scene and making an investigation, when defendant interfered by pushing and trying to choke an officer. Matter of Carlos M., 32 A.D.3d 686, 820 N.Y.S.2d 581, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10554 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2006).

Defendant was properly convicted of second-degree obstructing governmental administration because he prevented police officers from performing an official function, regardless of whether the underlying arrest was authorized, where his successful avoidance of being fingerprinted was independent, remote, completely attenuated from the arrest People v Qureshi, 996 N.Y.S.2d 462, 45 Misc. 3d 57, 2014 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4327 (N.Y. App. Term 2014), app. denied, 24 N.Y.3d 1122, 27 N.E.3d 477, 3 N.Y.S.3d 763, 2015 N.Y. LEXIS 457 (N.Y. 2015), cert. denied, 577 U.S. 978, 136 S. Ct. 485, 193 L. Ed. 2d 355, 2015 U.S. LEXIS 7084 (U.S. 2015).

City court properly convicted defendant, upon a jury verdict, of second-degree obstructing governmental administration because he admitted that he drove his vehicle backwards at a high rate of speed in an attempt to elude police officers, the accusatory instrument did not have to allege facts to establish that the arrest was authorized, a valid warrant for the search of defendant's vehicle was in effect, and a video recording purporting to depict defendant's violent encounter with the police on a prior occasion would have been largely cumulative of defendant's description of the incident, the People were entitled to present some evidence of the background to their execution of the warrant. People v Wheeler, 61 Misc. 3d 30, 85 N.Y.S.3d 329, 2018 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4308 (N.Y. App. Term 2018), rev'd, 34 N.Y.3d 1134, 141 N.E.3d 136, 118 N.Y.S.3d 68, 2020 N.Y. LEXIS 129 (N.Y. 2020).

Upon review of the case law cited, a motion to dismiss the count of obstructing governmental administration in the second degree, Penal Law § 195.05, was decided correctly where the language of the statute and the statute's history, application, and interpretation led to the conclusion that an element of the crime was the prevention of a specific official function, and there were no evidentiary facts specifying that the corrections officer was engaged in an official function. People v Darby, 61 Misc. 3d 881, 85 N.Y.S.3d 739, 2018 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4466 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2018).

In a 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 action, police officers who claimed qualified immunity were not entitled to judgment as a matter of law under Fed. R. Civ. P. 50(b) on plaintiff's Fourth Amendment false arrest and malicious prosecution claims because the officers did not have arguable probable cause to arrest plaintiff for disorderly conduct in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 240.20(5), (6), or (7) or interference with a governmental function in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 195.05. Viewed in plaintiff's favor, the evidence showed that plaintiff respectfully informed the officers at a demonstration protesting construction of a housing development that an injunction enjoining the construction would be arriving shortly, that plaintiff did not sit down on a road used by construction vehicles or tell others to sit down, and that the officers did not give plaintiff any order; thus, a reasonable officer would not have believed that plaintiff obstructed traffic, that plaintiff refused to comply with an order to disperse, that plaintiff created a hazardous condition by an act that served no legitimate purpose, or that plaintiff interfered with the performance of the officers' duties. Zellner v Summerlin, 494 F.3d 344, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 17272 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2007).

Defendants had probable cause to arrest a demonstrator for violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 195.05 when the demonstrator ignored three orders to move away from what was soon to be a zone of danger, and the demonstrator's presence in the area would have preventing local officials from removing a tree, the subject of the demonstration. Wilder v Vill. of Amityville, 288 F. Supp. 2d 341, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19297 (E.D.N.Y. 2003), aff'd, 111 Fed. Appx. 635, 2004 U.S. App. LEXIS 22148 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2004).

Court granted summary judgment to defendants on the N.Y. Penal Law § 195.05-based N.Y. Gen. Mun. Law § 205-e claims because (1) no reasonable jury could conclude that defendants intended to prevent decedent from performing his duties; and (2) that the effect of their actions obstructed decedent did not mean they intended to obstruct his performance of his duties. Breitkopf v Gentile, 41 F. Supp. 3d 220, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 121581 (E.D.N.Y. 2014).

Plaintiff was entitled to judgment on her claim against arresting officer for false arrest because her statements to officer, coupled with her physical actions, did not provide officer with adequate probable cause to believe that she was attempting to interfere with his ability to secure crime scene, and determination that officer lacked probable cause to arrest plaintiff for obstruction of governmental administration compelled determination that he lacked probable cause to arrest plaintiff for resisting arrest; although arresting officer was not entitled to qualified immunity on false arrest claim because information he possessed at the time of arrest did not add up to probable cause, assisting officer was entitled to qualified immunity because he acted reasonably in coming to arresting officer's aid when he observed that arresting officer was struggling to arrest plaintiff. McKnight v Vasile, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 47970 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 30, 2017).

6. Public servants; persons performing governmental functions

Juvenile delinquency petition sufficiently charged respondent with committing acts constituting second degree obstruction of governmental administration where supporting deposition of truant officer established that, while acting in his official capacity, he observed respondent in public during school hours and approached him in order to return him to school, and that respondent ran away, disregarded order to stop, hid nearby, and cursed and screamed when officer found and apprehended him. In re Michael C., 264 A.D.2d 842, 695 N.Y.S.2d 423, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9375 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1999).

School teachers and their superiors are persons performing such governmental functions within the purview of § 195.05 of the Penal Law; however to maintain a finding of juvenile delinquency based on allegations in compliance with such statutes, there must be present an intent to interfere with a teacher or other school personnel's performance of his official role and an isolated minor disruption lacking such intent cannot be considered the violation of the statute. In re Walter S., 71 Misc. 2d 1032, 337 N.Y.S.2d 774, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1423 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. 1972).

A special patrolman was a "public servant," and thus defendants could properly be charged with obstructing governmental administration, notwithstanding fact that alleged victim of such obstruction was a special patrolman. Authority to issue an appearance ticket renders a nonpolice officer a "public servant." People v Lewis, 87 Misc. 2d 806, 386 N.Y.S.2d 560, 1976 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2309 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1976).

Federal marshall is "public servant" within meaning of statute where he is engaged in operation of state law enforcement function and is acting under auspices of joint federal and state task force designed to execute large number of state bench warrants outstanding for persons who have failed to appear in court on serious crimes. People v Smith, 128 Misc. 2d 733, 491 N.Y.S.2d 236, 1985 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2986 (N.Y. Crim. Ct. 1985).

Defendant's motion to dismiss a charge of obstructing governmental administration in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 195.05, was granted, because defendant's alleged harassment of a postal clerk did not constitute a violation of the statute as the clerk was a federal employee, and federal employees did not meet the definition of a public servant under N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(15). People v Bilus, 804 N.Y.S.2d 670, 10 Misc. 3d 761, 234 N.Y.L.J. 106, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2626 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2005).

Supporting deposition of the arresting officer contained sufficient nonhearsay allegations to establish defendant's commission of obstructing governmental administration where deposition showed that, during school hours, the arresting officer told defendant to go to school, and defendant repeatedly refused, responded with obscenities, and became louder and more agitated, refused to comply with the officer's demands, and resisted the officer's attempts to handcuff him. In re Darnell C., 305

A.D.2d 405, 759 N.Y.S.2d 739, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5117 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003).

Defendant's motion to dismiss a charge of obstructing governmental administration in the second degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 195.05, was granted, because defendant's alleged harassment of a postal clerk did not constitute a violation of the statute as the clerk was a federal employee, and federal employees did not meet the definition of a public servant under N.Y. Penal Law § 10.00(15). People v Bilus, 804 N.Y.S.2d 670, 10 Misc. 3d 761, 234 N.Y.L.J. 106, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2626 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 2005).

Arrestee's false arrest claim must fail, where arrestee admits ignoring sheriff's instruction to "step back," and admits approaching rescue worker, touching his arm, and asking him questions, while worker was trying to save life of arrestee's wife, who was trapped in convertible, because in so doing arrestee obstructed duties of 2 governmental officials, risked delaying rescue of his wife, and probably "obstructed governmental administration" in violation of CLS Penal Law § 195.05. Decker v Campus, 981 F. Supp. 851, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18029 (S.D.N.Y. 1997).

7. School disruptions

School teachers and their superiors are persons performing such governmental functions within the purview of § 195.05 of the Penal Law; however to maintain a finding of juvenile delinquency based on allegations in compliance with such statutes, there must be present an intent to interfere with a teacher or other school personnel's performance of his official role and an isolated minor disruption lacking such intent cannot be considered the violation of the statute. In re Walter S., 71 Misc. 2d 1032, 337 N.Y.S.2d 774, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1423 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. 1972).

8. Selective Service demonstrations

An information charging defendant with obstructing governmental administration, to wit, being "near the premises of the Selective Service . . . Utica, New York, while inductees were boarding a bus for induction, he intentionally obstructed the administration of law by placing himself in the rear of the bus preventing its departure and prevented a public servant from performing an official function" should have been dismissed as the statute was not intended to apply to the administration of Federal law and that Federal agents and employees were not within the definition of "public servant" as used in the statute. People ex rel. Penree v Garfield, 63 Misc. 2d 79, 312 N.Y.S.2d 830, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1645 (N.Y. City Ct. 1970).

Defendants could not be prosecuted under the statute under evidence that they forcibly entered the waiting area of a Selective Service Board office, interfering with and disrupting the orderly course of business necessary for the induction process and refused to leave when requested to do so, inasmuch as such acts violated the Federal Selective Service Act and federal courts had exclusive jurisdiction of violations of the Act. People v Arvio, 66 Misc. 2d 474, 321 N.Y.S.2d 382, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1610 (N.Y. J. Ct. 1971).

9. Sentence; penalty

An attorney, an administrative hearing officer in charge of the Brooklyn office of the parking violations bureau, who dismissed some parking violations summonses, reduced the fines on others and caused them to be entered on the records as though the recipients had appeared and who was convicted, upon his plea of guilty, of conspiracy in the third degree, a class A misdemeanor (two counts), and obstructing governmental administration, a class A misdemeanor, is suspended for two years and until further order of the court. In re Israel, 67 A.D.2d 1, 414 N.Y.S.2d 582, 1979 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10065 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1979).

In a prosecution for obstructing governmental administration, the trial court erred in imposing jail time upon a defendant, where the jury rejected a contention that the defendant caused a police officer serious injury from assault, where fellow rioters and obstructors of justice involved in a general melee were not sentenced to any jail time, and where the defendant's presentence report did not recommend jail time while noting that the defendant had been incarcerated pending trial for five days. People v Jiminez, 82 A.D.2d 996, 442 N.Y.S.2d 156, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14727 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981).

Defendant's probation would be revoked under CPL §§ 410.10, 410.70 where defendant pleaded guilty in Indiana to resisting law enforcement and admitted that, after running a toll booth in Indiana, he was chased by police at high speeds across various lanes of traffic for approximately 20 miles, during the course of which police chase vehicles were damaged, and where such conduct would constitute obstructing governmental administration, a misdemeanor in New York under Penal Law § 95.05. People v Risi, 113 Misc. 2d 1009, 450 N.Y.S.2d 359, 1982 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3413 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1982).

Court would sentence defendants to conditional discharge with no conditions imposed on their convictions of second degree obstruction of governmental administration arising from incident in which they placed themselves between transit authority police officer and man officer sought to question concerning dispute aboard subway train, since probationary supervision would serve no purpose and might be deleterious to defendants' futures. People v Jimenez, 138 Misc. 2d 867, 525 N.Y.S.2d 482, 1988 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 110 (N.Y. Crim. Ct. 1988).

10. Tampering with public property

Evidence supported counts charging bridge operators, who left bridges in open position after rendering them inoperable by removal of part of electrical equipment, with having obstructed and impaired governmental administration by unlawful act of tampering; bridge operators, who took such action during course of strike by municipal employees, were not being prosecuted for union activities. People v Gibson, 77 Misc. 2d 49, 354 N.Y.S.2d 273, 1972 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1187 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), modified, 40 A.D.2d 818, 338 N.Y.S.2d 478, 1972 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3228 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1972).

II. Under Former Law

A. Under Former § 1851

11. In general

An article in Time, which stated that Hearst's Journal-American had received the week before, a letter from the "Mad Bomber," and instead of printing the letter, it decided to withhold the letter from the police and ran an item in its personal column intimating that it would help the bomber, was not libelous per se. The plaintiffs, the owners of the Journal-American, argued on appeal that, they were being charged with being accessories to the bomber's crimes within the meaning of § 2 of the Penal Law; but the publication cannot be reasonably read as saying, within the frame of the statute that, the newspaper aided the offender "with intent that he may avoid or escape from arrest." Neither did the publication, by any possible pleading of construction or innuendo charge the wilful obstruction of a public officer in performance of a duty within the meaning of Penal Law § 1851. Berkson v Time, Inc., 8 A.D.2d 352, 187 N.Y.S.2d 849, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7772 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1959), aff'd, 7 N.Y.2d 1007, 200 N.Y.S.2d 51, 166 N.E.2d 847, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1407 (N.Y. 1960).

Ordinance of city of Utica imposing penalty not to exceed fifty dollars upon person who shall resist or obstruct police officer of city in discharging or attempting to discharge his duties is not inconsistent with Second Class Cities Law, §§ 30 and 42, or Penal Law, §§ 1825 and 1851. People v Stewart, 47 N.Y.S.2d 349, 183 Misc. 212, 1944 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1772 (N.Y. City Ct. 1944).

A contention that village ordinances are invalid where covering the same acts as are prohibited by Penal Law, §§ 722, 723, and this section, cannot be raised in a proceeding under CPA art 78, petitioner's remedy by appeal being adequate. Brewer v Watson, 77 N.Y.S.2d 97, 191 Misc. 117, 1947 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3668 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1947).

This section applies to anyone who willfully resists or obstructs a public officer in discharging his duty, and is not limited to acts of third persons other than the one whom the officer is trying to arrest or curb. There is no basis for a contention that a charge or conviction for violating this section, in addition to being charged and convicted for the offense for which the person was arrested, is a violation of constitutional rights. People ex rel. Howell v Knight, 35 Misc. 2d 216, 228 N.Y.S.2d 981, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3273 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1962).

12. "Public officer"

A police officer is a public officer within the meaning of this section. People v Stewart, 47 N.Y.S.2d 349, 183 Misc. 212, 1944 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1772 (N.Y. City Ct. 1944).

13. Relation to other offenses

A charge of disorderly conduct based on cutting an officer's ear with a razor blade is not the same offense as a charge of felonious assault, as the latter requires proof of the additional fact of specific intent to inflict grievous bodily harm, and accordingly neither can be raised as involving jeopardy of the other. Covington v Supreme Court, 21 A.D.2d 822, 251 N.Y.S.2d 529, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3489 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1964), aff'd, 15 N.Y.2d 855, 257 N.Y.S.2d 962, 205 N.E.2d 880, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1540 (N.Y. 1965).

Charges of disorderly conduct and delaying or obstructing an officer represent separate offenses, and convictions on both counts does not constitute double punishment for same act. People v Crayton, 55 Misc. 2d 213, 284 N.Y.S.2d 672, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1159 (N.Y. App. Term 1967).

14. Jurisdiction

A justice of the peace of the town of Clarkstown has no jurisdiction of the offense charged in an information that defendant unlawfully resisted a public officer in violation of this section. People v Kischel, 276 N.Y. 116, 11 N.E.2d 559, 276 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 116, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1040 (N.Y. 1937).

15. Indictment

An indictment alleging that a motorist failed to stop on demand of officers is defective when it fails to show that the officers had cause to believe that an examination of the defendant's automobile would disclose evidence that the defendant had violated the conservation law, since the acts of the officers were illegal, under Civil Rights Law, § 8, and therefore the defendant was not required to stop. People v Hill, 227 N.Y.S. 285, 131 Misc. 521, 1928 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 727 (N.Y. County Ct. 1928).

16. Particular acts as resistance

Probable cause for prosecution of plaintiff for interfering with public officers in discharge of their duties existed to preclude action for malicious prosecution where plaintiffs repeatedly removed pump from manhole to prevent it from flooding their farmland despite warning by police officer and police court judge that such action would lead to their arrest. Colaruotolo v Cohoes, 44 A.D.2d 616, 353 N.Y.S.2d 542, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5499 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974), aff'd, 36 N.Y.2d 716, 367 N.Y.S.2d 485, 327 N.E.2d 638, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 1756 (N.Y. 1975).

Where the police officer was in full uniform, arrived in a clearly marked police vehicle, and he thought that a crime or offense had been committed in his presence, the defendant may be found guilty of interference with a public officer contrary to the statute, even though, the ordinance with which the defendant was charged was held unconstitutional and the defendant was found not guilty on another charge. People v Mastrup, 58 Misc. 2d 316, 295 N.Y.S.2d 138, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1032 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1968), aff'd, 61 Misc. 2d 1027, 307 N.Y.S.2d 601, 1970 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1995 (N.Y. App. Term 1970).

17. —Passive resistance

Where defendants refused to leave a building as directed by police officers in the performance of their duties, the fact that their resistance was passive, nevertheless constitutes resistance under the statute. People v Williams, 25 N.Y.2d 86, 302 N.Y.S.2d 780, 250 N.E.2d 201, 1969 N.Y. LEXIS 1152 (N.Y. 1969).

Passive resistance is nonetheless resistance to an officer attempting to make an arrest and a violation of this section, and a person placed under arrest by an officer can be convicted of violating it because he passively resists the officer in taking him into custody to such extent that he has to be forcibly handled, carried, or dragged. People ex rel. Howell v Knight, 35 Misc. 2d 216, 228 N.Y.S.2d 981, 1962 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3273 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1962).

Penal L § 1851 explicitly included delay and obstruction in any form in addition to physical resistance, the intent of statute being that the police go about their business without any obstacles put in their way. People v Crayton, 55 Misc. 2d 213, 284 N.Y.S.2d 672, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1159 (N.Y. App. Term 1967).

Going limp upon arrest as part of group action, requiring the arresting officers to carry the group, including each defendant, to patrol wagon, was manifestly resisting a public officer in discharge of his duty in violation of Penal L § 1851. People v Crayton, 55 Misc. 2d 213, 284 N.Y.S.2d 672, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1159 (N.Y. App. Term 1967).

18. —Resisting unlawful arrest

Force used to regain a diamond ring seized by an officer unlawfully, and without warrant or arrest, merely to discover possible grounds yet unknown for arrest or accusation, does not constitute a violation of this section. People v Richter, 265 A.D. 767, 40 N.Y.S.2d 751, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6413 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 291 N.Y. 161, 51 N.E.2d 690, 291 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 161, 1943 N.Y. LEXIS 1048 (N.Y. 1943).

Defendant, who urged two women not to get into a patrol wagon, did not violate this section, where arrest of women was illegal. People v Papp, 19 Misc. 2d 331, 185 N.Y.S.2d 907, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4111 (N.Y. Gen. Sess. 1959).

A conviction under this section will not lie where the arrest is unlawful. People v Lasko, 43 Misc. 2d 693, 252 N.Y.S.2d 209, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1555 (N.Y. County Ct. 1964).

A 15-year-old boy, who contended that he was resisting unlawful arrest when an officer attempted to handcuff him to a fence for conduct which constituted a violation of Penal Law § 43 was guilty of disorderly conduct and the facts did not establish the allegation of resisting arrest. In re Rooney, 48 Misc. 2d 890, 266 N.Y.S.2d 217, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1215 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. 1965).

B. Under Other Former Laws

19. Under former § 196

This section is not unconstitutional as giving public monies to an individual. American Soc., P. C. A. v New York, 205 A.D. 335, 199 N.Y.S. 728, 1923 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5019 (N.Y. App. Div. 1923).

20. Under former § 1824

Where relator admitted to police officers that he was conducting poolroom over his saloon and intended to go on and do business and at once made his way to door to poolroom and beckoned other to go with him, it is right and duty of police officers to accompany relator into premises for purpose of preventing pool-selling, and any interference on relator's part, as blocking entrance of police with his body, is violation of this section and relator is not entitled to be released from custody on habeas corpus after he has been arrested for such violation. People ex rel. Fried v Frank, 130 N.Y.S. 807, 73 Misc. 1, 1911 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 461 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1911).

A deputy police commissioner cannot be convicted of an attempt to prevent police officer from making an arrest on the uncorroborated testimony of the officers, since by acceding to his request they became accomplices with him. People v Porter, 189 N.Y.S. 664, 115 Misc. 301, 1921 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1602 (N.Y. Gen. Sess. 1921).

The owner of personal property is liable to indictment for using force to prevent an officer from levying upon such property, by virtue of an execution against another person, where the officer acts in good faith, believing the property to be that of the execution debtor. People v Hall, 31 Hun 404 (N.Y.).

21. Under former § 1825

Resistance to search by a police officer on the part of one arrested, without a warrant, for a misdemeanor not committed in the presence of the arresting officer is not a violation of this section, the arrest being illegal. People v O'Connor, 257 N.Y. 473, 178 N.E. 762, 257 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 473, 1931 N.Y. LEXIS 880 (N.Y. 1931).

A town justice of the peace, as a Court of Special Sessions, lacks jurisdiction to entertain a prosecution for the misdemeanor of resisting arrest under § 56 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. People v Nicometi, 12 N.Y.2d 428, 240 N.Y.S.2d 589, 191 N.E.2d 79, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 1180 (N.Y. 1963).

A conviction under the above statute was held good even if defendant's arrest for jaywalking and disorderly conduct was unlawful, where he punched a police officer when ordered out of a police car after being transported some four or five blocks to a police station, the court holding that such physical attack could not under the circumstances be considered reasonable resistance to unlawful arrest, and that such combative behavior stemming from an initial reasonable request by the policeman that the defendant identify himself for the purpose of receiving a summons for jaywalking and occurring at a time and place removed from that at which he was taken into custody, must be viewed as a counterattack, pursued for the sake of revenge or the infliction of needless injury. People v McNeil, 15 N.Y.2d 717, 256 N.Y.S.2d 614, 204 N.E.2d 648, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1705 (N.Y. 1965).

Ordinance of city of Utica imposing penalty not to exceed fifty dollars upon person who shall resist or obstruct police officer of city in discharging or attempting to discharge his duties is not inconsistent with this section. A police officer is an executive officer within the meaning of this section. People v Stewart, 47 N.Y.S.2d 349, 183 Misc. 212, 1944 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1772 (N.Y. City Ct. 1944).

Resistance to arrest without warrant by officer not witness to offense, does not constitute crime. People v McCarthy, 67 N.Y.S.2d 560, 188 Misc. 132, 1947 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1989 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1947).

If a police officer fails to establish his identity sufficiently, as a police officer, a person might well be within his right as a citizen to resist arrest. People v Galick, 11 Misc. 2d 961, 176 N.Y.S.2d 479, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2868 (N.Y. County Ct. 1958).

Conviction for resisting arrest by an officer cannot stand, if arrest is for violation of an unconstitutional statute, or if there is a fatally defective information. People v Stevens, 16 Misc. 2d 162, 183 N.Y.S.2d 968, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4278 (N.Y. County Ct. 1959).

22. Under former § 1839

The crime of committing "any unlawful act tending to hinder justice," dealt with in subd 2 of this section, by "justice" means that end which ought to be reached in a case by the regular administration of the principles of law involved as applied to the facts, and by "hinder" to "obstruct," impede, or prevent, with or without use of direct force or means. An indictment charging police officers with transporting a woman who had confessed to commission of certain acts which would make her a vagrant, with knowledge of her guilt and likewise with knowledge of the identity of a male participant in such acts, from Syracuse to Rochester, was sufficient to charge them with committing an unlawful act tending to hinder justice under subd 2 of this section. People v Longo, 16 A.D.2d 297, 227 N.Y.S.2d 815, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9807 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1962).

1. In General

Unpublished decision: Where an arrestee and an officer had an altercation on a mall escalator, officers were not entitled to summary judgment as to the arrestee's false arrest and excessive force claims, because the arrestee's version of events did not support an inference of probable cause since the arrestee's version contained no support for the inference that the arrestee intended to obstruct the officer. Barksdale v Colavita, 506 Fed. Appx. 82, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 26331 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2012).

Unpublished decision: Officers were entitled to qualified immunity in plaintiff's 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 action claiming false arrest in violation of the Fourth Amendment because reasonable officer could have determined that it was lawful to arrest plaintiff for obstruction of governmental administration by physical interference under circumstances in which plaintiff repeatedly declined to move out of officer's way. Basinski v City of New York, 706 Fed. Appx. 693, 2017 U.S. App. LEXIS 16162 (2d Cir. 2017).

2. Dealings with police

Unpublished decision: Police officer presented with the following undisputed facts would have a reasonable belief that there was probable cause to arrest a subject for disorderly conduct where (1) the subject told his niece not to cooperate with police officers' request for her identification, (2) when a police officer asked the subject to leave the scene, the subject refused, despite warnings from that officer that if the subject did not stop interfering with the officers' questioning of the subject's niece, he would be arrested. It is also undisputed that a crowd of some 30 people had gathered at the scene by the time of the arrest. Crenshaw v City of Mount Vernon, 372 Fed. Appx. 202, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 8189 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2010).

3. Evidence

Unpublished decision: Denial of defendant police officer's motion for judgment as a matter of law on his defense of qualified immunity from plaintiff's false arrest claim was affirmed because the facts, viewed in the light most favorable to plaintiff, did not provide a basis to think that plaintiff intended to disrupt police efforts or cause public inconvenience; plaintiff testified that while he was trapped in a dense crowd of protestors, a line of officers moving into the crowd bumped into him, he fell, he quickly rolled onto his stomach, face-down on the sidewalk, to protect himself as the line passed overhead, he felt someone grab his arm, lift him partway off the sidewalk, then drop him, and he was placed under arrest. Bradley v Jusino, 374 Fed. Appx. 144, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 7683 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2010).

1. In General

In instances of concurrent police department and fire department jurisdiction, the determination as to which of the two has primary jurisdiction over the event in question is dependent upon the circumstances of the particular case. In general, a fire department is in absolute command at the scene of a fire emergency until such time as, in the judgment of the fire chief, the premises are free from immediate danger of fire or explosion and safe for occupancy. N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-67.

2. Public servants; persons performing governmental functions

Upon the conviction of a mayor of a city of the crimes of official misconduct and obstructing governmental administration, the office becomes vacant automatically by operation of law. The conviction occurs at the time of the jury verdict of guilt or the entry of a plea of guilty, notwithstanding that no sentence has been imposed and that an appeal has been filed. 1983 NY Ops Atty Gen Mar 28 (informal).

Court would not hold as a matter of law that plaintiff acted "unreasonably" if she had a legal right, as her husband's health care agent, to decide where her husband got treated, she obstructed the Individual defendants in an attempt to enforce that legal right, and prevent her husband's potentially unlawful removal to a hospital she did not choose, nor was the court prepared to say, as a matter of law, that defendant had "probable cause" to remove plaintiff from the room and temporarily detain her, based upon the apparently incorrect belief that health care agents had no authority outside of a hospital setting, and that plaintiff was thus acting unreasonably in obstructing the emergency medical personnel. Article 225. Gambling Offenses

Section
225.00. Gambling offenses; definitions of terms

HISTORY:

Add, L 1965, ch 1030, § 1, eff Sept 1, 1967.

ARTICLE 225

GAMBLING OFFENSES

HISTORY:

Add, L 1965, ch 1030, § 1, eff Sept 1, 1967.

§ 225.00. Gambling offenses; definitions of terms

The following definitions are applicable to this article:

1. "Contest of chance" means any contest, game, gaming scheme or gaming devise in which the outcome depends in a material degree upon an element of chance, notwithstanding that skill of the contestants may also be a factor therein.

2. "Gambling." A person engages in gambling when he stakes or risks something of value upon the outcome of a contest of chance or a future contingent event not under his control or influence, upon an agreement or understanding that he will receive something of value in the event of a certain outcome.

3. "Player" means a person who engages in any form of gambling solely as a contestant or bettor, without receiving or becoming entitled to receive any profit therefrom other than personal gambling winnings, and without otherwise rendering any material assistance to the establishment, conduct or operation of the particular gambling activity. A person who gambles at a social game of chance on equal terms with the other participants therein does not otherwise render material assistance to the establishment, conduct or operation thereof by performing, without fee or remuneration, acts directed toward the arrangement or facilitation of the game, such as inviting persons to play, permitting the use of premises therefor and supplying cards or other equipment used therein. A person who engages in "bookmaking", as defined in this section is not a "player."

4. "Advance gambling activity." A person "advances gambling activity" when, acting other than as a player, he engages in conduct which materially aids any form of gambling activity. Such conduct includes but is not limited to conduct directed toward the creation or establishment of the particular game, contest, scheme, device or activity involved, toward the acquisition or maintenance of premises, paraphernalia, equipment or apparatus therefor, toward the solicitation or inducement of persons to participate therein, toward the actual conduct of the playing phases thereof, toward the arrangement of any of its financial or recording phases, or toward any other phase of its operation. One advances gambling activity when, having substantial proprietary or other authoritative control over premises being used with his knowledge for purposes of gambling activity, he permits such to occur or continue or makes no effort to prevent its occurrence or continuation.

5. "Profit from gambling activity." A person "profits from gambling activity" when, other than as a player, he accepts or receives money or other property pursuant to an agreement or understanding with any person whereby he participates or is to participate in the proceeds of gambling activity.

6. "Something of value" means any money or property, any token, object or article exchangeable for money or property, or any form of credit or promise directly or indirectly contemplating transfer of money or property or of any interest therein, or involving extension of a service, entertainment or a privilege of playing at a game or scheme without charge.

7. "Gambling device" means any device, machine, paraphernalia or equipment which is used or usable in the playing phases of any gambling activity, whether such activity consists of gambling between persons or gambling by a person involving the playing of a machine. Notwithstanding the foregoing, lottery tickets, policy slips and other items used in the playing phases of lottery and policy schemes are not gambling devices.

7-a. A "coin operated gambling device" means a gambling device which operates as a result of the insertion of something of value. A device designed, constructed or readily adaptable or convertible for such use is a coin operated gambling device notwithstanding the fact that it may require adjustment, manipulation or repair in order to operate as such. A machine which awards free or extended play is not a gambling device merely because such free or extended play may constitute something of value provided that the outcome depends upon the skill of the player and not in a material degree upon an element of chance.

8. "Slot machine" means a gambling device which, as a result of the insertion of a coin or other object, operates, either completely automatically or with the aid of some physical act by the player, in such manner that, depending upon elements of chance, it may eject something of value. A device so constructed, or readily adaptable or convertible to such use, is no less a slot machine because it is not in working order or because some mechanical act of manipulation or repair is required to accomplish its adaptation, conversion or workability. Nor is it any less a slot machine because, apart from its use or adaptability as such, it may also sell or deliver something of value on a basis other than chance. A machine which sells items of merchandise which are of equivalent value, is not a slot machine merely because such items differ from each other in composition, size, shape or color.

9. "Bookmaking" means advancing gambling activity by unlawfully accepting bets from members of the public as a business, rather than in a casual or personal fashion, upon the outcomes of future contingent events.

10. "Lottery" means an unlawful gambling scheme in which (a) the players pay or agree to pay something of value for chances, represented and differentiated by numbers or by combinations of numbers or by some other media, one or more of which chances are to be designated the winning ones; and (b) the winning chances are to be determined by a drawing or by some other method based upon the element of chance; and (c) the holders of the winning chances are to receive something of value provided, however, that in no event shall the provisions of this subdivision be construed to include a raffle as such term is defined in subdivision three-b of section one hundred eighty-six of the general municipal law.

11. "Policy" or "the numbers game" means a form of lottery in which the winning chances or plays are not determined upon the basis of a drawing or other act on the part of persons conducting or connected with the scheme, but upon the basis of the outcome or outcomes of a future contingent event or events otherwise unrelated to the particular scheme.

12. "Unlawful" means not specifically authorized by law.

13. "Authorized gaming establishment" means any structure, structure and adjacent or attached structure, or grounds adjacent to a structure in which casino gaming, conducted pursuant to article thirteen of the racing, pari-mutuel wagering and breeding law, or Class III gaming, as authorized pursuant to a compact reached between the state of New York and a federally recognized Indian nation or tribe under the federal Indian Gaming Regulatory Act of 1988, is conducted and shall include all public and non-public areas of any such building, except for such areas of a building where either Class I or II gaming are conducted or any building or grounds known as a video gaming entertainment facility, including facilities where food and drink are served, as well as those areas not normally open to the public, such as where records related to video lottery gaming operations are kept, except shall not include the racetracks or such areas where such video lottery gaming operations or facilities do not take place or exist, such as racetrack areas or fairgrounds which are wholly unrelated to video lottery gaming operations, pursuant to section sixteen hundred seventeen-a and paragraph five of subdivision a of section sixteen hundred twelve of the tax law, as amended and implemented.

14. "Authorized gaming operator" means an enterprise or business entity authorized by state or federal law to operate casino or video lottery gaming.

15. "Casino gaming" means games authorized to be played pursuant to a license granted under article thirteen of the racing, pari-mutuel wagering and breeding law or by federally recognized Indian nations or tribes pursuant to a gaming compact reached in accordance with the federal Indian Gaming Regulatory Act of 1988, Pub. L. 100-497, 102 Stat. 2467, codified at 25 U.S.C. §§ 2701-21 and 18 U.S.C. §§ 1166-68.

16. "Cash equivalent" means a treasury check, a travelers check, wire transfer of funds, transfer check, money order, certified check, cashiers check, payroll check, a check drawn on the account of the authorized gaming operator payable to the patron or to the authorized gaming establishment, a promotional coupon, promotional chip, promotional cheque, promotional token, or a voucher recording cash drawn against a credit card or charge card.

17. "Cheques" or "chips" or "tokens" means non-metal, metal or partly metal representatives of value, redeemable for cash or cash equivalent, and issued and sold by an authorized casino operator for use at an authorized gaming establishment. The value of such cheques or chips or tokens shall be considered equivalent in value to the cash or cash equivalent exchanged for such cheques or chips or tokens upon purchase or redemption.

18. "Class I gaming" and "Class II gaming" means those forms of gaming that are not Class III gaming, as defined in subsection eight of section four of the federal Indian Gaming Regulatory Act, 25 U.S.C. § 2703.

19. "Class III gaming" means those forms of gaming that are not Class I or Class II gaming, as defined in subsections six and seven of section four of the federal Indian Gaming Regulatory Act, 25 U.S.C. § 2703 and those games enumerated in the Appendix of a gaming compact.

20. "Compact" or "gaming compact" means the agreement between a federally recognized Indian tribe and the state of New York regarding Class III gaming activities entered into pursuant to the federal Indian Gaming Regulatory Act, Pub. L. 100-497, 102 Stat. 2467, codified at 25 U.S.C. §§ 2701-21 and 18 U.S.C. §§ 1166-68 (1988 & Supp. II).

21. "Gaming equipment or device" means any machine or device which is specially designed or manufactured for use in the operation of any Class III or video lottery game.

22. "Gaming regulatory authority" means, with respect to any authorized gaming establishment on Indian lands, territory or reservation, the Indian nation or tribal gaming commission, its authorized officers, agents and representatives acting in their official capacities or such other agency of a nation or tribe as the nation or tribe may designate as the agency responsible for the regulation of Class III gaming, jointly with the state gaming agency, conducted pursuant to a gaming compact between the nation or tribe and the state of New York, or with respect to any casino gaming authorized pursuant to article thirteen of the racing, pari-mutuel wagering and breeding law or video lottery gaming conducted pursuant to section sixteen hundred seventeen-a and paragraph five of subdivision a of section sixteen hundred twelve of the tax law, as amended and implemented.

23. "Premises" includes any structure, parking lot, building, vehicle, watercraft, and any real property.

24. "Sell" means to sell, exchange, give or dispose of to another.

25. "State gaming agency" shall mean the New York state gaming commission, its authorized officials, agents, and representatives acting in their official capacities as the regulatory agency of the state which has responsibility for regulation with respect to video lottery gaming or casino gaming.

26. "Unfair gaming equipment" means loaded dice, marked cards, substituted cards or dice, or fixed roulette wheels or other gaming equipment which has been altered in a way that tends to deceive or tends to alter the elements of chance or normal random selection which determine the result of the game or outcome, or the amount or frequency of the payment in a game.

27. "Unlawful gaming property" means:

(a) any device, not prescribed for use in casinio [casino]* gaming by its rules, which is capable of assisting a player:

(i) to calculate any probabilities material to the outcome of a contest of chance; or

(ii) to receive or transmit information material to the outcome of a contest of chance; or

(b) any object or article which, by virtue of its size, shape or any other quality, is capable of being used in casino gaming as an improper substitute for a genuine chip, cheque, token, betting coupon, debit instrument, voucher or other instrument or indicia of value; or

(c) any unfair gaming equipment.

28. "Video lottery gaming" has the meaning set forth in subdivision six of section sixteen hundred two of the tax law.

29. "Voucher" means an instrument of value generated by a video lottery terminal representing a monetary amount and/or play value owed to a customer at a specific video lottery terminal based on video lottery gaming winnings and/or amounts not wagered.

1. In general

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction of promoting gambling in first degree, contrary to contention that it was not proven that accused accepted more than $5,000 in bets during one day because of failure to distinguish between calls made by bookmakers, as to which accused claimed he was merely acting as an agent, and calls made by other players, since, even as to calls by bookmakers, there was sufficient evidence that defendant advanced unlawful gambling by receiving or accepting them. People v Audi, 54 A.D.2d 805, 388 N.Y.S.2d 351, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14498 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976).

Charitable organization which sponsored raffle could not be compelled to award winning prize or value thereof where it was uncontroverted that raffle of new car did not fall within exceptions to prohibitions against illegal gambling under CLS NY Const Art I § 9(2), and raffle, in which "contribution" of $10 purchased 5 chances to win car, constituted lottery proscribed by CLS Penal § 225.00(10); under circumstances, raffle constituted illegal contract in violation of CLS Gen Oblig § 5-417 and was void and unenforceable. Harris v Economic Opportunity Comm'n, Inc., 171 A.D.2d 223, 575 N.Y.S.2d 672, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13739 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1991).

zoning ordinance requiring a building permit. Brookhaven v Suffolk Meadows Quarter Horse Racing Ass'n, 76 Misc. 2d 175, 350 N.Y.S.2d 525, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1436 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1973).

Defendants charged in information with being a "dealer," "cutter," "moneyman/manager" or "security," had fair notice of conduct forbidden by gambling statute. People v Shing, 83 Misc. 2d 462, 371 N.Y.S.2d 322, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2924 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1975).

In proceeding in which accused were convicted of promoting gambling in second degree and possession of gambling device, evidence that cash was accepted at gambling tables, that gambling activities, which were purportedly engaged in on behalf of charitable organizations, were conducted without knowledge and consent of charities, that charities only received 10% of proceeds and that a charity was dissatisfied with its share of proceeds and terminated doing business with accused was relevant to issues involved and was admissible, notwithstanding assertion that such evidence was used to show that accused were guilty of criminal acts not charged in indictment. People v Berk, 83 Misc. 2d 711, 373 N.Y.S.2d 748, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2966 (N.Y. App. Term 1975).

2. Constitutionality

Language "materially aids" in statutory definition of advancing gambling activity was not unconstitutionally vague. People v Shing, 83 Misc. 2d 462, 371 N.Y.S.2d 322, 1975 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2924 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1975).

3. Relationship to other laws

Penal Law § 225.00 definitions relating to gambling offenses are instructive in determining whether alcoholic beverage licensee has suffered or permitted gambling on premises in violation of Al Bev Law § 106. Plato's Cave Corp. v State Liquor Authority, 115 A.D.2d 426, 496 N.Y.S.2d 436, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 54818 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1985), aff'd, 68 N.Y.2d 791, 506 N.Y.S.2d 856, 498 N.E.2d 420, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 20104 (N.Y. 1986).

Mere possession or use of gambling device, as defined in Penal Law § 225.00, on premises of alcoholic beverage licensee, in violation of Al Bev § 106, is not disorderly conduct, as set forth in Penal Law § 240.20 and accordingly does not constitute operation of disorderly premises in violation of Al Bev § 106. Plato's Cave Corp. v State Liquor Authority, 115 A.D.2d 426, 496 N.Y.S.2d 436, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 54818 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1985), aff'd, 68 N.Y.2d 791, 506 N.Y.S.2d 856, 498 N.E.2d 420, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 20104 (N.Y. 1986).

4. Local laws

State does not have exclusive regulatory power in gambling field so as to prevent city from prohibiting pinball machines or games of chance. Albert Simon, Inc. v Myerson, 36 N.Y.2d 300, 367 N.Y.S.2d 755, 327 N.E.2d 801, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 1764 (N.Y.), reh'g denied, 37 N.Y.2d 740, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 2979 (N.Y. 1975), app. dismissed, 423 U.S. 908, 96 S. Ct. 209, 46 L. Ed. 2d 137, 1975 U.S. LEXIS 3013 (U.S. 1975).

Local law proscribing gambling was beyond city's power to legislate under NY Const Art 9 § 2 subd c ¶ 10, and Art 9 § 3 subd d ¶ 1, and General City L § 20(13) where state had pre-empted field of anti-gambling laws by passage of Penal L § 225.00, and 225.30. People v Wilkerson, 73 Misc. 2d 895, 342 N.Y.S.2d 936, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1993 (N.Y. County Ct. 1973).

5. Particular statutory terms

A gambling device promotes an operation based on chance, and possession of such a device is a class A misdemeanor. Beamel Amusement Corp. v Police Dep't of Suffolk County, 54 Misc. 2d 946, 283 N.Y.S.2d 760, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1179 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1967).

Raffle run by charitable institution to raise funds for scholarship fund fell within definition of lottery contained in CLS Penal § 225.00, and thus it was not game of chance which could be conducted pursuant to CLS Gen Mun Art 9-A. Harris v Economic Opportunity Comm'n, Inc., 142 Misc. 2d 980, 542 N.Y.S.2d 913, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 378 (N.Y. App. Term 1989), aff'd, 171 A.D.2d 223, 575 N.Y.S.2d 672, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13739 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1991).

Definition of "unlawful" in CLS Penal § 225.00(12), which uses phrase "not specifically authorized by law," is to be interpreted as referring to laws of New York and not to laws of sister states. People v Kim, 154 Misc. 2d 346, 585 N.Y.S.2d 310, 1992 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 261 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1992).

Accusatory instrument was facially insufficient with respect to charge of possession of gambling device where instrument charged that defendant operated lotto machine from which detective obtained receipt for Florida lotto ticket; lotto machine was not gambling device within meaning of CLS Penal § 225.00(7). People v Kim, 154 Misc. 2d 346, 585 N.Y.S.2d 310, 1992 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 261 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1992).

Respondents engaged in conduct that materially aided gambling activity in violation of CLS Penal § 225.00(4) and violated CLS Penal § 225.05, where they operated offshore casino that offered gambling to Internet users in New York, and they actively targeted New York as location where they conducted many of their allegedly illegal activities. People v World Interactive Gaming Corp., 185 Misc. 2d 852, 714 N.Y.S.2d 844, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 425 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1999).

Conduct encouraging continuance of gambling site by ensuring proprietor of "protection" is activity materially aiding gambling and falls within Penal Law § 225.00(4). United States v Lombardozzi, 620 F. Supp. 587, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14539 (E.D.N.Y. 1985), aff'd, 788 F.2d 6 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1986).

6. —"Gambling"

State Liquor Authority properly relied on definition of "gambling" in CLS Penal Law § 225.00 in determining that licensee violated CLS Al Bev Law § 106 by permitting on its premises "Joker Poker" machine which awarded free games to winning players. Plato's Cave Corp. v State Liquor Auth., 68 N.Y.2d 791, 506 N.Y.S.2d 856, 498 N.E.2d 420, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 20104 (N.Y. 1986).

Gambling is defined as parting with value on the chance of receiving a return of value, the material element being chance though skill may be somewhat involved. Beamel Amusement Corp. v Police Dep't of Suffolk County, 54 Misc. 2d 946, 283 N.Y.S.2d 760, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1179 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1967).

Wagering by the participants to the outcome of a game of skill is not gambling and billiards is a game of skill. People v Stiffel, 61 Misc. 2d 1100, 308 N.Y.S.2d 64, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1042 (N.Y. App. Term 1969).

Defendant was entitled to dismissal of information charging possession of gambling device in violation of CLS Penal § 225.30(2), arising from allegation that he ran game of 3-card monte, since 3-card monte is not contest of chance and thus does not fall within definition of gambling. People v Hunt, 162 Misc. 2d 70, 616 N.Y.S.2d 168, 1994 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 350 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1994).

Defendant was entitled to dismissal of information charging second degree promotion of gambling in violation of CLS Penal § 225.05, arising from allegation that he ran game of 3-card monte, since 3-card monte is not contest of chance and thus does not fall within definition of gambling. People v Hunt, 162 Misc. 2d 70, 616 N.Y.S.2d 168, 1994 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 350 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1994).

Gambling with dice, per se, is not illegal; gambling becomes illegal only if person advances gambling activity when acting other than as player. People v Davidson, 181 Misc. 2d 999, 696 N.Y.S.2d 640, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 414 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1999), rev'd, 291 A.D.2d 810, 737 N.Y.S.2d 467, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1087 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2002).

Three-card monte (and, by inference. "the shell game") is game of skill in which accuracy of player's eye competes with speed of dealer's hand, and thus does not constitute gambling under CLS Penal § 225.00(2). People v Mohammed, 187 Misc. 2d 729, 724 N.Y.S.2d 803, 2001 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 105 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2001).

Fantasy sports contests (IFS) were games determined by skill and chance, and IFS therefore constituted gambling within the prohibition in N.Y. Const. art. I, § 9; N.Y. Racing, Pari-Mutuel Wagering and Breeding Law § 1400 et seq., was unconstitutional to the extent that it authorized IFS, but not to the extent it defined gambling in the penal law. White v Cuomo, 62 Misc. 3d 877, 87 N.Y.S.3d 805, 2018 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 5158 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2018), reh'g denied, 2019 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4811 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. Mar. 5, 2019), rev'd, in part, modified, 181 A.D.3d 76, 118 N.Y.S.3d 775, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 956 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2020).

Post-verdict judgment of acquittal, setting aside guilty verdicts on violations of Illegal Gambling Business Act (IGBA), and conspiring to do so, was error because IGBA's plain language covered defendant's "Texas Hold'em" poker business; 18 U.S.C.S. § 1955(b)(2) did not include language limiting it to include only games analogous to those enumerated and it was not disputed that poker was gambling under N.Y. Penal Law § 225.00(2). United States v DiCristina, 726 F.3d 92, 2013 U.S. App. LEXIS 16197 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2013), cert. denied, 571 U.S. 1197, 134 S. Ct. 1281, 188 L. Ed. 2d 299, 2014 U.S. LEXIS 1457 (U.S. 2014).

Trading card manufacturer's conduct in charging additional consideration for each packages of cards, for chance of winning extra-value "chase" card which could immediately be exchanged for cash in secondary market, violated New York's gambling laws. Schwartz v Upper Deck Co., 967 F. Supp. 405, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7989 (S.D. Cal. 1997), vacated, 104 F. Supp. 2d 1228, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11863 (S.D. Cal. 2000).

7. —"Slot machine"

Fact that "Lucky Shamrock Vending Machine" installed in bar did not contain random number generator or other device to determine winners did not prevent it from being gambling device in violation of CLS Al Bev § 106(6) and 9 NYCRR § 53.1(t) where CLS Penal § 225.00(8) provides that "'[s]lot machine' means a gambling device which, as a result of the insertion of a coin or other object, operates, either completely automatically or with the aid of some physical act by the player, in such manner that, depending upon elements of chance, it may eject something of value" and that device is no "less a slot machine because, apart from its use or adaptability as such, it may also sell or deliver something of value on a basis other than chance." Black North Assocs. v Kelly, 281 A.D.2d 974, 722 N.Y.S.2d 666, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3046 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2001).

Pinball machines fall specifically within the framework of the general definition of "slot machines," and thus are excluded from the more broadly defined area of "gambling devices" per se. Beamel Amusement Corp. v Police Dep't of Suffolk County, 54 Misc. 2d 946, 283 N.Y.S.2d 760, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1179 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1967).

Since under this section before a device may be called a slot machine, it must be shown to be capable of actually ejecting something of value, pinball machines which do not eject things, value, or anything else are not susceptible of characterization as slot machine gambling devices. Beamel Amusement Corp. v Police Dep't of Suffolk County, 54 Misc. 2d 946, 283 N.Y.S.2d 760, 1967 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1179 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1967).

Because the Joker Poker machine located in defendant's establishment and described in the information was slot machine, as defined in N.Y. Penal Law § 225.00(8), the information was sufficient to withstand defendant's motion to dismiss the charge of possession of a gambling device under N.Y. Penal Law § 225.30(a)(1). People v Delacruz, 872 N.Y.S.2d 876, 23 Misc. 3d 720, 241 N.Y.L.J. 34, 2009 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 218 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2009).

8. Video games

Joker-poker videogame, outcome of which depends in material degree upon draw of cards, is gambling device notwithstanding degree of skill and concentration involved in playing poker, where person playing game may win credits for winning hand and use credits for continued play without further payment. Plato's Cave Corp. v State Liquor Authority, 115 A.D.2d 426, 496 N.Y.S.2d 436, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 54818 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1985), aff'd, 68 N.Y.2d 791, 506 N.Y.S.2d 856, 498 N.E.2d 420, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 20104 (N.Y. 1986).

Substantial evidence supported determination that liquor licensee suffered or permitted gambling on licensed premises and permitted keeping or maintaining of video display game machine of type prohibited under rule 36.1(t) of Rules of State Liquor Authority (9 NYCRR § 53.1(t)) where "Big Apple" video game present on premises rewarded winning poker hand with opportunity to prolong initial play by means of playing high-low double-up feature, which was not available to person who drew losing poker hand; such extension of play was "something of value" within meaning of CLS Penal § 225.00(6) and, therefore, "gambling" within meaning of § 225.00(2). Cos Dei San, Inc. v New York State Liquor Authority, 147 A.D.2d 370, 537 N.Y.S.2d 536, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1280 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 611, 546 N.Y.S.2d 556, 545 N.E.2d 870, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 2883 (N.Y. 1989).

9. Under former § 1370; in general

The word "lottery" has no technical legal meaning, and must be construed in the popular sense and with a view of remedying the mischief intended to be prevented. Wilkinson v Gill, 74 N.Y. 63, 74 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 63, 1878 N.Y. LEXIS 707 (N.Y. 1878).

It cannot be successfully contended, because the lottery laws were enacted before the game of "policy" came into being, that, therefore, there may be no prosecution of "policy" under the lottery statute, since the statute is comprehensive and there is no need of a new statute every time ingenuity invents a new form of game in which the fundamental principal of chance is the same. People v Hines, 284 N.Y. 93, 29 N.E.2d 483, 284 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 93, 1940 N.Y. LEXIS 865 (N.Y. 1940), overruled, People v Kohut, 30 N.Y.2d 183, 331 N.Y.S.2d 416, 282 N.E.2d 312, 1972 N.Y. LEXIS 1409 (N.Y. 1972).

The laws of New York prohibiting lotteries apply not merely to pure gambling operations, but also to business operations conducted as lotteries. State by Lefkowitz v ITM, Inc., 52 Misc. 2d 39, 275 N.Y.S.2d 303, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1486 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1966).

10. —Elements of lottery, generally

The three essential elements which go to make up a game of chance or a lottery are consideration, chance and prize. People v Cadle, 114 N.Y.S.2d 451, 202 Misc. 415, 1952 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2917 (N.Y. County Ct. 1952).

Three elements enter into a lottery, a consideration, chance, and a prize or some advantage or in a quality in amount or value, which is in the nature of a prize, the presence of consideration is a most essential element of the lottery. People v Psallis, 12 N.Y.S.2d 796, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1950 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1939).

11. — —Consideration

To make the "bank nite" scheme a lottery there must be either payment of a valuable consideration or an agreement to pay for the chance to win a prize. Requirement of the presence of the participant in the theater or lobby within 5 minutes is not such a consideration. People v Shafer, 289 N.Y.S. 649, 160 Misc. 174, 1936 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1371 (N.Y. County Ct.), aff'd, 273 N.Y. 475, 6 N.E.2d 410, 273 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 475, 1936 N.Y. LEXIS 1486 (N.Y. 1936).

Where there was definite proof that participation in drawing for valuable prizes was absolutely free, there was no violation of § 1370. People v Psallis, 12 N.Y.S.2d 796, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1950 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1939).

12. — —Chance

Where the element of chance so permeates a scheme to induce sales by giving credits for leads to potential sales to others, such action must be condemned as a lottery. State by Lefkowitz v ITM, Inc., 52 Misc. 2d 39, 275 N.Y.S.2d 303, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1486 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1966).

There is no "lot" or "chance" involved in a retirement plan in the sense such elements contaminate a contract, because uncertainties result from the possibility that an employee may die or be discharged or withdraw from employment before retirement. Wells v J. C. Penny Co., 250 F.2d 221, 1957 U.S. App. LEXIS 4577 (9th Cir. Or. 1957).

13. — —Prize

To constitute a lottery, the prizes need not be in money. People v Psallis, 12 N.Y.S.2d 796, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1950 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1939).

14. —Illegal and legal activities distinguished

The basic distinction between the illegal gambling transaction and the legitimate speculative investment turns on the nature of the stake. If a sum of money is put up merely to abide a contingent event, at which time the event will determine to whom the money shall go, the transaction is clearly a wager. If, on the other hand, the money is used in the speculative enterprise, the reward of success is deemed a return on investment. The difference is that the investor does something or attempts to do something to influence the favorable outcome of the venture, while the gambler passively awaits the happening of the fortuitous event. The absence or a working investment, with money passing only after the event, is one of the indicia of an illegal investment. Liss v Manuel, 58 Misc. 2d 614, 296 N.Y.S.2d 627, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 946 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1968).

Risk is not the element which makes the transaction a gamble. When a party has a genuine personal stake in the outcome of future events, as when he has an insurable interest, an investment, a contract involving goods, commodities, work, labor or services, it is an approved and judicially enforceable mode or form of business and regardless of risk, not a bet, wager or illegal gamble. Liss v Manuel, 58 Misc. 2d 614, 296 N.Y.S.2d 627, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 946 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1968).

15. —Indictment; and information

Crime of operating lottery is sufficiently indicated by reference in information to violation of this section, which defines lottery, for by constitution lottery is illegal. St. Lawrence County v Goldberg, 175 A.D. 88, 161 N.Y.S. 641, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8280 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

This section defines a lottery as a scheme for the distribution of property by chance, among persons who have paid or agreed to pay for "a valuable consideration for the chance. . . . " An indictment charging violations of former §§ 1370, 1372 and 1376 prohibiting operation of a lottery, which stated that participants paid $1 for use of a folding chair, should not have been dismissed on the ground that, it failed to allege payment of consideration and that, therefore, no lottery took place. The alleged participants were not paying merely for the privilege of sitting down, but were paying for a chair at a bingo game. The allegation of payment of $1 at least raised a question of fact as what the $1 was paid for. People v Cadle, 7 A.D.2d 65, 180 N.Y.S.2d 576, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3799 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1958).

16. —Evidence

Evidence given by police department engineer, who testified that in four games which he played with his eyes open and intent upon winning, he achieved success in an average of twenty-six throws and then in a fifth did so with his eyes shut in twenty-one throws, tended to prove that game constitute lottery within meaning of former §§ 1370 and 1376. People ex rel. Ehrman v Kearney, 292 N.Y. 627, 55 N.E.2d 505, 292 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 627, 1944 N.Y. LEXIS 1784 (N.Y. 1944).

17. —Particular activities as constituting lottery

The sale of "prize candy" in boxes, each box being represented to contain a prize of money or jewelry, and the purchaser selecting his box in ignorance of its contents, held a lottery. Hull v Ruggles, 56 N.Y. 424, 56 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 424, 1874 N.Y. LEXIS 142 (N.Y. 1874).

A scheme providing for the distribution of a sum of money and a quantity of cigars among the purchasers of certain brands who should estimate most closely the number of cigars of all brands upon which the government would collect taxes during the month named, conceding that the distribution does not depend exclusively on chance, but to some extent is affected by the exercise of judgment, is a lottery within the meaning of this section, and under § 1374, advertising it is a misdemeanor. People ex rel. Ellison v Lavin, 179 N.Y. 164, 71 N.E. 753, 179 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 164, 1904 N.Y. LEXIS 1082 (N.Y. 1904).

Payment which entitles one to ticket of admission to theatre, plus chance to win prize, constitutes payment of valuable consideration for chance, within meaning of this section, defining "lottery". People v Miller, 271 N.Y. 44, 2 N.E.2d 38, 271 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 44, 1936 N.Y. LEXIS 1162 (N.Y. 1936).

Numbers game or policy, whereby player selected number of 3 figures, which was given with amount bet to collector, and winning number was determined by chance, and paid 600 times amount bet, held lottery within § 1370. People v Hines, 284 N.Y. 93, 29 N.E.2d 483, 284 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 93, 1940 N.Y. LEXIS 865 (N.Y. 1940), overruled, People v Kohut, 30 N.Y.2d 183, 331 N.Y.S.2d 416, 282 N.E.2d 312, 1972 N.Y. LEXIS 1409 (N.Y. 1972).

Sales technique involving an "endless chain transaction" consisting of referral-type sales, where buyer is promised a specific sum for each sale resulting from his submission of names, and the element of chance permeates the entire scheme, is a lottery within the meaning of this section, a public nuisance within meaning of Penal Law § 1371, and is persistently illegal within meaning of Executive Law § 63 subsection 12. State by Lefkowitz v ITM, Inc., 52 Misc. 2d 39, 275 N.Y.S.2d 303, 1966 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1486 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1966).

Under a contract or writing that a party was to furnish the money for a perfectly legal purchase of stock; that the other party was to furnish specialized or "inside" information as to the identity of the stock, and the timing of the sale; that plaintiff would make the initial investment, and he and the defendant would each get 50 percent of the net profits, while defendant was to bear all the losses, there existed a joint venture in which each party was to furnish money or knowledge of a particular transaction, and was to share the profits and losses in accordance with a specified formula. Liss v Manuel, 58 Misc. 2d 614, 296 N.Y.S.2d 627, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 946 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1968).

Sale of bonds of a foreign country, the purchaser of which has a chance to obtain a prize, dependent upon lot, is a lottery. Horner v United States, 147 U.S. 449, 13 S. Ct. 409, 37 L. Ed. 237, 1893 U.S. LEXIS 2173 (U.S. 1893).

18. — —Bingo

Under the State Constitution and implementing statutes, the game of bingo may not be conducted in the absence of affirmative referendum. It is not necessary to show that consideration was paid or agreed to be paid to play bingo. The game itself is controlled and the old lottery statute, Penal Law § 1370 et seq., is not in effect and prosecutions for unauthorized bingo must now be made under the General Municipal Law. Italian Community Home Federation, Inc. v Kelly, 12 Misc. 2d 33, 178 N.Y.S.2d 694, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2968 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1958).

Bingo and related games have been held illegal because they are in violation of those sections of the Penal Law forbidding lotteries. Cotroneo v Townsend, 111 N.Y.S.2d 491, 1952 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2532 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1952).

19. — —Drawings

Where retail dealer in dry goods, to promote trade, offered for sale at twenty-five cents each certain small "banks" numbered consecutively from 500 to 999, keeping record of name of each purchaser of bank as sold, and each day name of some one purchaser was drawn and number of bank corresponding to such name was displayed in window of store, one for each day, permitting person whose number was thus displayed to select merchandise of retail value of one dollar, each purchaser's number sooner or later similarly appearing, it must be held that scheme is within condemnation of this section. Carl Co. v Lennon, 148 N.Y.S. 375, 86 Misc. 255, 1914 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 932 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1914).

Scheme to attract customers to defendant's lunch wagon, whereby certificates were distributed with each purchase, the certificate holders being entitled to participate in drawing cash prizes and to redeem the certificates for valuable articles, held not a lottery. People v Psallis, 12 N.Y.S.2d 796, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1950 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1939).

2. Constitutionality

A proposal authorizing the Division of the Lottery to conduct a game in which bets are placed on the outcome of pro sports events would require an amendment to the State Constitution in order to be implemented. The Constitution, both through its specific bans on bookmaking and pool-selling and through its general ban on all forms of gambling not expressly authorized, forbids the kinds of gambling involved in the proposed sports betting game. OFFENSES AGAINST PUBLIC ORDER

HISTORY:

Add, L 1965, ch 1030, § 1, eff Sept 1, 1967.

§ 240.50. Falsely reporting an incident in the third degree

A person is guilty of falsely reporting an incident in the third degree when, knowing the information reported, conveyed or circulated to be false or baseless, he or she:

1. Initiates or circulates a false report or warning of an alleged occurrence or impending occurrence of a crime, catastrophe or emergency under circumstances in which it is not unlikely that public alarm or inconvenience will result; or

2. Reports, by word or action, to an official or quasi-official agency or organization having the function of dealing with emergencies involving danger to life or property, an alleged occurrence or impending occurrence of a catastrophe or emergency which did not in fact occur or does not in fact exist; or

3. Gratuitously reports to a law enforcement officer or agency (a) the alleged occurrence of an offense or incident which did not in fact occur; or (b) an allegedly impending occurrence of an offense or incident which in fact is not about to occur; or (c) false information relating to an actual offense or incident or to the alleged implication of some person therein; or

4. Reports, by word or action, an alleged occurrence or condition of child abuse or maltreatment or abuse or neglect of a vulnerable person which did not in fact occur or exist to:

(a) the statewide central register of child abuse and maltreatment, as defined in title six of article six of the social services law or the vulnerable persons' central register as defined in article eleven of such law, or

(b) any person required to report cases of suspected child abuse or maltreatment pursuant to subdivision one of section four hundred thirteen of the social services law or to report cases of suspected abuse or neglect of a vulnerable person pursuant to section four hundred ninety-one of such law, knowing that the person is required to report such cases, and with the intent that such an alleged occurrence be reported to the statewide central register or vulnerable persons' central register.

Falsely reporting an incident in the third degree is a class A misdemeanor.

Commission Staff Notes: Subdivisions 1 and 2 define a genuine disorderly conduct offense found in a more limited form in former provisions dealing with false bomb scares and fire alarms (former PL §§ 727, 1424).

Subdivision 3, dealing with the giving of false information to law enforcement authorities, proscribes an area of "harassing" conduct which, prior to 1964, was limited to kidnapping cases [former PL § 1250-b(3)]. At the 1964 legislative session a new § 728 was added to the former Penal Law (Laws 1964, ch 445). This section was substantially similar to subd 3.

1. In general

Where officer applying for search warrant testified under oath before magistrate as to observations of informant whose identity was then made known to magistrate who examined informant, but not under oath, and magistrate concluded that statement of informant, who could be prosecuted for false report if he had lied, was essentially the same as police officer's, there was adequate demonstration of informant's credibility and issuance of search warrant was proper. People v Brown, 40 N.Y.2d 183, 386 N.Y.S.2d 359, 352 N.E.2d 545, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 2870 (N.Y. 1976).

Defendant was wrongly charged with falsely reporting an incident within Penal Law § 240.50 where her statements were made in response to inquiry by police officer, under which circumstances it could not be said that defendant "gratuitously" reported false information within the terms of the statute. People v Clairborne, 36 A.D.2d 500, 323 N.Y.S.2d 527, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3901 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1971), rev'd, 29 N.Y.2d 950, 329 N.Y.S.2d 580, 280 N.E.2d 366, 1972 N.Y. LEXIS 1546 (N.Y. 1972).

Fact that policeman had been reinstated for approximately one year following nine-month suspension pending criminal proceeding in which he pled guilty to misdemeanor of falsely reporting an accident did not estop the city police commissioner from thereafter dismissing the policeman on the basis of his misdemeanor conviction following a departmental trial where the plea of guilty had been subject to the commissioner's ordering a departmental trial. Arroya v Codd, 50 A.D.2d 752, 376 N.Y.S.2d 158, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11540 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1975).

Evidence before grand jury was sufficient to sustain indictment for reckless endangerment in first degree, criminal mischief in fourth degree, and falsely reporting incident in third degree where testimony showed that deer slug had been fired through victim's trailer window following defendant's threat on victim's life, shotgun had been found next day along road where defendant had been stopped by sheriff during investigation on night of shooting, defendant reported theft of same shotgun from his home on next day, and defendant told fellow prisoner while in custody that he had fired shotgun blast through trailer of person he had argued with. People v McCarthy, 126 A.D.2d 935, 511 N.Y.S.2d 708, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 42034 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1987).

Proof that defendant announced presence of bomb on premises and called for evacuation of building supported conviction of first degree falsely reporting incident rather than merely third degree offense, since warning of bomb's existence carried with it implication of impending explosion. People v Surdis, 275 A.D.2d 553, 711 N.Y.S.2d 875, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8650 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 908, 716 N.Y.S.2d 649, 739 N.E.2d 1154, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3722 (N.Y. 2000).

Convictions of falsely reporting an incident in the third degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 240.50(3)(a), were affirmed because, although defendant claimed on appeal that, in instructing the jury, the trial court erred in omitting the element that the false report must be "gratuitously" made, he did not object to the instruction at trial, and the appellate court rejected his request that it exercise its interest of justice jurisdiction; measured against the elements as charged to the jury without exception, the evidence was legally sufficient to establish defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. People v Taylor, 79 A.D.3d 944, 913 N.Y.S.2d 308, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9456 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2010), app.

Trial court erred in convicting defendant of third-degree falsely reporting an incident because the issues of whether a burglary occurred and whether defendant provided false information about it were relevant to the element of whether defendant knew the reported information was false or baseless or he reasonably believed that a burglary had occurred, and the trial court did not provide the jury with the legal definition of burglary. People v Sassi, 122 A.D.3d 779, 995 N.Y.S.2d 611, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7590 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2014), app. denied, 24 N.Y.3d 1221, 28 N.E.3d 45, 4 N.Y.S.3d 609, 2015 N.Y. LEXIS 602 (N.Y. 2015).

There is a duty when reporting an occurrence calling for police, fire or other emergency service entailing rapid vehicular response, to do so truthfully and this is a duty of reasonable conduct imposed by common law as well as by statute. Daas v Pearson, 66 Misc. 2d 95, 319 N.Y.S.2d 537, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1810 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), aff'd, 37 A.D.2d 921, 325 N.Y.S.2d 1011, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6970 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1971).

Where the alleged false information was given to the police during the course of an investigation and in response to questions put to the petitioner concerning place of death of person with whom he was sniffing carbona, statement was not given "gratuitously" within the meaning of that word as used in Penal Law § 240.50(3). People ex rel. Morris v Skinner, 67 Misc. 2d 221, 323 N.Y.S.2d 905, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1371 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1971).

The statute providing that "a person may not be convicted of any offense solely upon evidence of a confession or admission made by him without additional proof that the offense charged has been committed" (CPL 60.50), is satisfied by the production of some proof, of whatever weight, either direct or circumstantial, that a crime was committed by someone; the proof need not be of such character as would be sufficient to sustain a conviction, but there must be at least some proof tending to show the commission of a crime; accordingly, since possession of a weapon is the corpus delicti and defendant, who told police that five males had robbed him of a gun recovered by the police from the area in which the five men were standing, had neither actual physical possession nor constructive possession of the gun which was not in a place in the control or reach of the defendant, and no other evidence independent of defendant's confession was adduced to show that a crime was committed, the felony charge of unlawful possession of a weapon must be dismissed and the charge of falsely reporting an incident (Penal Law, § 240.50, subd 3) must likewise be dismissed since no testimony was offered independent of the defendant's statements to show that the robbery did not occur. People v Barclift, 97 Misc. 2d 994, 412 N.Y.S.2d 991, 1979 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2029 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1979).

Even if accepted as true, defendant's factual allegations that his mental condition and inadequate medication to control his condition impacted his conduct at time of offense (third degree falsely reporting incident) did not warrant dismissal of information in furtherance of justice. People v Dodard, 178 Misc. 2d 242, 680 N.Y.S.2d 393, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 451 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1998).

Charge of third degree "falsely reporting an incident" required that People state in pleadings that defendant knew incident "did not in fact occur." People v Torres, 188 Misc. 2d 58, 727 N.Y.S.2d 587, 2001 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 127 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2001).

Because defendant failed to seek medical care of a dog after it developed significant physical maladies as a result of defendant's neglect, and because defendant falsely reported that the dog's maladies developed while another person had custody of it, the evidence was legally sufficient to establish defendant's guilt under N.Y. Agric. & Mkts. Law § 353 and N.Y. Penal Law § 240.50(3)(c). People v Romano (Stacey), 908 N.Y.S.2d 520, 29 Misc. 3d 9, 2010 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4052 (N.Y. App. Term 2010), app. denied, 16 N.Y.3d 899, 926 N.Y.S.2d 34, 949 N.E.2d 982, 2011 N.Y. LEXIS 1908 (N.Y. 2011).

Defendant's motion to dismiss a charge of falsely reporting an incident under N.Y. Penal Law § 240.50(3)(a) was denied; defendant started a chain of events resulting in police questioning and therefore was responsible for initiating police contact, and therefore defendant's false statement that a police officer had stolen money from defendant was gratuitous, as it was not the product of solicitation by law enforcement. People v Oliver, 193 Misc. 2d 250, 750 N.Y.S.2d 449, 2002 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1440 (N.Y. City Ct. 2002).

Unexcused, belated disclosure of e-mails between the prosecutor and a mother of a minor who defendant allegedly engaged in improper sexual conduct with, which showed the minor's motive to lie, did not affect the verdict with respect to sodomy charges relating to another minor or some of the misdemeanor charges, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 130.45, 130.40, 190.25(1), and 240.50(3)(a), as the evidence against defendant was overwhelming; there was no reasonable possibility that the serious disclosure failures by the prosecution affected the verdict in that regard. People v Sinha, 84 A.D.3d 35, 922 N.Y.S.2d 275, 2011 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2750 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2011), aff'd, 19 N.Y.3d 932, 951 N.Y.S.2d 697, 976 N.E.2d 223, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 1837 (N.Y. 2012).

Count in a misdemeanor information charging defendant with falsely reporting an incident in the third degree was sufficiently pleaded because the information alleged that defendant "admitted that no assault had occurred," which constituted both an admission by a party opponent and a declaration against the defendant's penal interest. People v Marian, 49 Misc. 3d 562, 16 N.Y.S.3d 683, 2015 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2421 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2015).

here was an issue of fact whether the alleged false reporting of a medical emergency and asking to be brought to a hospital within the geographical jurisdiction of the court was materially harmful to the City of Hudson and whether such alleged criminal act harmed the well-being of the City of Hudson as a whole; these questions of fact were within the realm of the trier of fact, namely the jury. People v Jerome, 59 Misc. 3d 338, 71 N.Y.S.3d 809, 2018 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 477 (N.Y. City Ct. 2018).

Where an arrestee had filed a domestic incident report (DIR) indicating that an ex-boyfriend called her from jail, although the ex-boyfriend's probation officer told the detective investigating the DIR that the ex-boyfriend was released from prison one month before the alleged phone call to the arrestee was made, the detective, who arrested the arrestee for falsifying a police incident report in violation of N.Y. Penal Law § 240.50(3)(c), was not entitled to sovereign immunity on the arrestee's false arrest claim because the detective did not at the time the arrestee was initially seized have information supporting the inference that the arrestee knew that the ex-boyfriend was out of jail at the time of the phone call. Brewton v City of New York, 550 F. Supp. 2d 355, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36455 (E.D.N.Y. 2008).

1.5. Sufficient evidence.

Sufficient evidence supported defendant's conviction for falsely reporting an incident in the third degree because the medical evidence, including, inter alia, a lack of cuts or bruises on defendant's head and no ligature marks, provided compelling proof that defendant was not hit on the head with a toilet tank lid and strangled as he had claimed, but instead lied to the police about being attacked so he could obtain prescription pain medication; defendant called 911 to report he was assaulted. People v Barto, 144 A.D.3d 1641, 41 N.Y.S.3d 838, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7637 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2016), app. denied, 28 N.Y.3d 1142, 74 N.E.3d 679, 52 N.Y.S.3d 294, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 278 (N.Y. 2017).

2. Under former § 728

The fact that the defendant informed the police that he was operating a motor vehicle when it was involved in an accident and the information was received at the very time the police were investigating the accident and it was alleged that someone other than the defendant was actually operating the vehicle at the time and defendant was attempting to protect the actual driver, the information, though false, was not made "with intent to harass, annoy or alarm another," and hence was not punishable under this section. People v Komosa, 47 Misc. 2d 634, 263 N.Y.S.2d 153, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1545 (N.Y. City Ct. 1965).

Notes to Unpublished Decisions

1. In general

Unpublished decision: Officers had at least arguable probable cause to arrest plaintiff where he made statement to his wife at airport after he was asked to exit security line to place jar of peanut butter in his checked luggage that "they're looking to confiscate my explosives." While statement was arguably not false report or warning of alleged occurrence or impending occurrence of explosion, in violation of N.Y. Penal Law section that he was arrested for violating, it arguably was violation of two other statutes that, taken together, rendered his statement, taken at face value, false statement that he was committing crime of possessing explosives. Hannibal v Sanchez, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 107514 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 5, 2014).

Agency Opinions

1. In general

An individual making a false request for ambulance service can be charged with falsely reporting an incident in the third degree. Failure to pay for ambulance service constitutes a civil, not a criminal, offense. 1981 NY Ops Atty Gen July 1 (Informal Opinion).

§ 240.55. Falsely reporting an incident in the second degree

A person is guilty of falsely reporting an incident in the second degree when, knowing the information reported, conveyed or circulated to be false or baseless, he or she:

1. Initiates or circulates a false report or warning of an alleged occurrence or impending occurrence of a fire, explosion, or the release of a hazardous substance under circumstances in which it is not unlikely that public alarm or inconvenience will result;

2. Reports, by word or action, to any official or quasi-official agency or organization having the function of dealing with emergencies involving danger to life or property, an alleged occurrence or impending occurrence of a fire, explosion, or the release of a hazardous substance which did not in fact occur or does not in fact exist; or

3. Knowing the information reported, conveyed or circulated to be false or baseless and under circumstances in which it is likely public alarm or inconvenience will result, he or she initiates or circulates a report or warning of an alleged occurrence or an impending occurrence of a fire, an explosion, or the release of a hazardous substance upon any private premises.

Notes to Decisions

Defendant could be convicted of second degree falsely reporting incident where, in response to fire on his neighbor's property, he set off town fire alarm even though fire was under control of firefighters on scene, fire posed no threat, and defendant had been so advised. People v Bayes, 78 N.Y.2d 546, 577 N.Y.S.2d 585, 584 N.E.2d 643, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 5128 (N.Y. 1991).

Fact that false alarm was directed at fire department rather than general public was no defense to charge of second degree falsely reporting incident since, by communicating report of fire in manner that required fire department to respond, defendant made it "not unlikely" that public alarm or inconvenience would result given facts that residents within earshot of alarm were also alerted to existence of fire, rapidly moving emergency vehicles were placed on road, and firefighters could have been kept from attending genuine emergency elsewhere. People v Bayes, 78 N.Y.2d 546, 577 N.Y.S.2d 585, 584 N.E.2d 643, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 5128 (N.Y. 1991).

In criminal prosecution of defendant for having falsely reported incident of child neglect to Statewide Central Register of Child Abuse and Maltreatment, where People sought unsealing and disclosure of Child Protective Service records regarding unfounded report previously filed about defendant, court would conduct in camera inspection to determine whether any information contained in sealed records might be probative of charges against defendant. In prosecution under CLS Penal § 240.55 for falsely reporting incident of child neglect to Statewide Central Register of Child Abuse and Maltreatment, defendant was not entitled to unsealing and disclosure of Child Protective Service file concerning neighbor about whom false report was made, as neighbor was not charged with or accused of any further charges, and defendant was private citizen rather than governmental agency seeking access to confidential information. People v Berliner, 179 Misc. 2d 844, 686 N.Y.S.2d 673, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 68 (N.Y. City Ct. 1999).

§ 240.60. Falsely reporting an incident in the first degree

A person is guilty of falsely reporting an incident in the first degree when he:

1. commits the crime of falsely reporting an incident in the second degree as defined in section 240.55 of this article, and has previously been convicted of that crime; or

2. commits the crime of falsely reporting an incident in the third degree as defined in subdivisions one and two of section 240.50 of this article or falsely reporting an incident in the second degree as defined in subdivisions one and two of section 240.55 of this article and another person who is an employee or member of any official or quasi-official agency having the function of dealing with emergencies involving danger to life or property; or who is a volunteer firefighter with a fire department, fire company, or any unit thereof as defined in the volunteer firefighters' benefit law; or who is a volunteer ambulance worker with a volunteer ambulance corporation or any unit thereof as defined in the volunteer ambulance workers' benefit law suffers serious physical injury or is killed in the performance of his or her official duties in traveling to or working at or returning to a firehouse, police station, quarters or other base facility from the location identified in such report; or

3. commits the crime of falsely reporting an incident in the third degree as defined in subdivisions one and two of section 240.50 of this article or falsely reporting an incident in the second degree as defined in subdivisions one and two of section 240.55 of this article and another person suffers serious physical injury or is killed as a result of any vehicular or other accident involving any emergency vehicle which is responding to, operating at, or returning from the location identified in such report.

4. An emergency vehicle as referred to in subdivision three of this section shall include any vehicle operated by any employee or member of any official or quasi-official agency having the function of dealing with emergencies involving danger to life or property and shall include, but not necessarily be limited to, an emergency vehicle which is operated by a volunteer firefighter with a fire department, fire company, or any unit thereof as defined in the volunteer firefighters' benefit law; or by a volunteer ambulance worker with a volunteer ambulance corporation, or any unit thereof as defined in the volunteer ambulance workers' benefit law.

5. Knowing the information reported, conveyed or circulated to be false or baseless and under circumstances in which it is likely public alarm or inconvenience will result, he or she initiates or circulates a report or warning of an alleged occurrence or an impending occurrence of a fire, an explosion, or the release of a hazardous substance upon school grounds and it is likely that persons are present on said grounds.

6. Knowing the information reported, conveyed or circulated to be false or baseless and under circumstances in which it is likely public alarm or inconvenience will result, he or she initiates or circulates a report or warning of an alleged occurrence or impending occurrence of a fire, explosion or the release of a hazardous substance in or upon a sports stadium or arena, mass transportation facility, enclosed shopping mall, any public building or any public place, and it is likely that persons are present. For purposes of this subdivision, the terms "sports stadium or arena, mass transportation facility or enclosed shopping mall" shall have their natural meaning and the term "public building" shall have the meaning set forth in section four hundred one of the executive law.

Falsely reporting an incident in the first degree is a class D felony.

Notes to Decisions

Proof that defendant announced presence of bomb on premises and called for evacuation of building supported conviction of first degree falsely reporting incident rather than merely third degree offense, since warning of bomb's existence carried with it implication of impending explosion. People v Surdis, 275 A.D.2d 553, 711 N.Y.S.2d 875, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8650 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 908, 716 N.Y.S.2d 649, 739 N.E.2d 1154, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3722 (N.Y. 2000).

Telephone company investigator did not provide necessary foundation for admission of another telephone carrier's record that showed originating number of pay phone call, in prosecution for first degree falsely reporting incident, where he failed to testify that he had such knowledge of other carrier's recordkeeping procedures that he could state that record was made in regular course of its business and contemporaneously to phone call. People v Surdis, 275 A.D.2d 553, 711 N.Y.S.2d 875, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8650 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 908, 716 N.Y.S.2d 649, 739 N.E.2d 1154, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3722 (N.Y. 2000).

Erroneous admission of telephone carrier's record that showed originating number of pay phone call was harmless, in prosecution for first degree falsely reporting incident, in light of overwhelming evidence of guilt, including another similar call made by defendant and testimony of witnesses who recognized his voice, and absence of significant probability that he would otherwise have been acquitted. People v Surdis, 275 A.D.2d 553, 711 N.Y.S.2d 875, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8650 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 908, 716 N.Y.S.2d 649, 739 N.E.2d 1154, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3722 (N.Y. 2000).

Timing of second bomb-threat phone call, less than 3 hours after first call, and similarity in proof of subsequent crime with earlier crime, including origination of calls from same pay phone and witness recognition of defendant's voice, raised strong inference that defendant was perpetrator of both calls in prosecution for first degree falsely reporting incident. People v Surdis, 275 A.D.2d 553, 711 N.Y.S.2d 875, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8650 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 908, 716 N.Y.S.2d 649, 739 N.E.2d 1154, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3722 (N.Y. 2000).

Because the indeterminate sentence that defendant bargained for and received was impermissible under N.Y. Penal Law 70.06(6), the trial court properly reduced the conviction for falsely reporting an incident in the first degree from a class D violent felony under N.Y. Penal Law § 70.02 (1)(c) to a class E felony under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 110.00, 240.60(1). People v Surdis, 23 A.D.3d 841, 805 N.Y.S.2d 433, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13123 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2005), app. denied, 6 N.Y.3d 818, 812 N.Y.S.2d 458, 845 N.E.2d 1289, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 910 (N.Y. 2006).

HISTORY:

Add, L 1965, ch 1030, § 1, eff Sept 1, 1967.

§ 265.00. Definitions. [Effective until April 3, 2021]

As used in this article and in article four hundred, the following terms shall mean and include:

1. "Machine-gun" means a weapon of any description, irrespective of size, by whatever name known, loaded or unloaded, from which a number of shots or bullets may be rapidly or automatically discharged from a magazine with one continuous pull of the trigger and includes a sub-machine gun.

2. "Firearm silencer" means any instrument, attachment, weapon or appliance for causing the firing of any gun, revolver, pistol or other firearms to be silent, or intended to lessen or muffle the noise of the firing of any gun, revolver, pistol or other firearms.

3. "Firearm" means (a) any pistol or revolver; or (b) a shotgun having one or more barrels less than eighteen inches in length; or (c) a rifle having one or more barrels less than sixteen inches in length; or (d) any weapon made from a shotgun or rifle whether by alteration, modification, or otherwise if such weapon as altered, modified, or otherwise has an overall length of less than twenty-six inches; or (e) an assault weapon. For the purpose of this subdivision the length of the barrel on a shotgun or rifle shall be determined by measuring the distance between the muzzle and the face of the bolt, breech, or breechlock when closed and when the shotgun or rifle is cocked; the overall length of a weapon made from a shotgun or rifle is the distance between the extreme ends of the weapon measured along a line parallel to the center line of the bore. Firearm does not include an antique firearm.

3-a. "Major component of a firearm, rifle or shotgun" means the barrel, the slide or cylinder, the frame, or receiver of the firearm, rifle, or shotgun.

4. "Switchblade knife" means any knife which has a blade which opens automatically by hand pressure applied to a button, spring or other device in the handle of the knife.

20. "Disguised gun" means any weapon or device capable of being concealed on the person from which a shot can be discharged through the energy of an explosive and is designed and intended to appear to be something other than a gun.

21. "Semiautomatic" means any repeating rifle, shotgun or pistol, regardless of barrel or overall length, which utilizes a portion of the energy of a firing cartridge or shell to extract the fired cartridge case or spent shell and chamber the next round, and which requires a separate pull of the trigger to fire each cartridge or shell.

22. "Assault weapon" means

(a) a semiautomatic rifle that has an ability to accept a detachable magazine and has at least one of the following characteristics:

(i) a folding or telescoping stock;

(ii) a pistol grip that protrudes conspicuously beneath the action of the weapon;

(iii) a thumbhole stock;

(iv) a second handgrip or a protruding grip that can be held by the non-trigger hand;

(v) a bayonet mount;

(vi) a flash suppressor, muzzle break, muzzle compensator, or threaded barrel designed to accommodate a flash suppressor, muzzle break, or muzzle compensator;

(vii) a grenade launcher; or

(b) a semiautomatic shotgun that has at least one of the following characteristics:

(i) a folding or telescoping stock;

(ii) a thumbhole stock;

(iii) a second handgrip or a protruding grip that can be held by the non-trigger hand;

(iv) a fixed magazine capacity in excess of seven rounds;

(v) an ability to accept a detachable magazine; or

(c) a semiautomatic pistol that has an ability to accept a detachable magazine and has at least one of the following characteristics:

(i) a folding or telescoping stock;

(ii) a thumbhole stock;

(iii) a second handgrip or a protruding grip that can be held by the non-trigger hand;

(iv) capacity to accept an ammunition magazine that attaches to the pistol outside of the pistol grip;

(v) a threaded barrel capable of accepting a barrel extender, flash suppressor, forward handgrip, or silencer;

(vi) a shroud that is attached to, or partially or completely encircles, the barrel and that permits the shooter to hold the firearm with the non-trigger hand without being burned;

(vii) a manufactured weight of fifty ounces or more when the pistol is unloaded; or

(viii) a semiautomatic version of an automatic rifle, shotgun or firearm;

(d) a revolving cylinder shotgun;

(e) a semiautomatic rifle, a semiautomatic shotgun or a semiautomatic pistol or weapon defined in subparagraph (v) of paragraph (e) of subdivision twenty-two of section 265.00 of this chapter as added by chapter one hundred eighty-nine of the laws of two thousand and otherwise lawfully possessed pursuant to such chapter of the laws of two thousand prior to September fourteenth, nineteen hundred ninety-four;

(f) a semiautomatic rifle, a semiautomatic shotgun or a semiautomatic pistol or weapon defined in paragraph (a), (b) or (c) of this subdivision, possessed prior to the date of enactment of the chapter of the laws of two thousand thirteen which added this paragraph;

(g) provided, however, that such term does not include:

(i) any rifle, shotgun or pistol that (A) is manually operated by bolt, pump, lever or slide action; (B) has been rendered permanently inoperable; or (C) is an antique firearm as defined in 18 U.S.C. 921(a)(16);

(ii) a semiautomatic rifle that cannot accept a detachable magazine that holds more than five rounds of ammunition;

(iii) a semiautomatic shotgun that cannot hold more than five rounds of ammunition in a fixed or detachable magazine; or

(iv) a rifle, shotgun or pistol, or a replica or a duplicate thereof, specified in Appendix A to 18 U.S.C. 922 as such weapon was manufactured on October first, nineteen hundred ninety-three. The mere fact that a weapon is not listed in Appendix A shall not be construed to mean that such weapon is an assault weapon;

(v) any weapon validly registered pursuant to subdivision sixteen-a of section 400.00 of this chapter. Such weapons shall be subject to the provisions of paragraph (h) of this subdivision;

(vi) any firearm, rifle, or shotgun that was manufactured at least fifty years prior to the current date, but not including replicas thereof that is validly registered pursuant to subdivision sixteen-a of section 400.00 of this chapter;

(h) Any weapon defined in paragraph (e) or (f) of this subdivision and any large capacity ammunition feeding device that was legally possessed by an individual prior to the enactment of the chapter of the laws of two thousand thirteen which added this paragraph, may only be sold to, exchanged with or disposed of to a purchaser authorized to possess such weapons or to an individual or entity outside of the state provided that any such transfer to an individual or entity outside of the state must be reported to the entity wherein the weapon is registered within seventy-two hours of such transfer. An individual who transfers any such weapon or large capacity ammunition device to an individual inside New York state or without complying with the provisions of this paragraph shall be guilty of a class A misdemeanor unless such large capacity ammunition feeding device, the possession of which is made illegal by the chapter of the laws of two thousand thirteen which added this paragraph, is transferred within one year of the effective date of the chapter of the laws of two thousand thirteen which added this paragraph.

23. "Large capacity ammunition feeding device" means a magazine, belt, drum, feed strip, or similar device, that (a) has a capacity of, or that can be readily restored or converted to accept, more than ten rounds of ammunition, or [pars (b) and (c) are suspended and not effective as stated in Laws 2013, ch 1, § 58, sub b note below] (b) contains more than seven rounds of ammunition, or (c) is obtained after the effective date of the chapter of the laws of two thousand thirteen which amended this subdivision and has a capacity of, or that can be readily restored or converted to accept, more than seven rounds of ammunition; provided, however, that such term does not include an attached tubular device designed to accept, and capable of operating only with, .22 caliber rimfire ammunition or a feeding device that is a curio or relic. A feeding device that is a curio or relic is defined as a device that (i) was manufactured at least fifty years prior to the current date, (ii) is only capable of being used exclusively in a firearm, rifle, or shotgun that was manufactured at least fifty years prior to the current date, but not including replicas thereof, (iii) is possessed by an individual who is not prohibited by state or federal law from possessing a firearm and (iv) is registered with the division of state police pursuant to subdivision sixteen-a of section 400.00 of this chapter, except such feeding devices transferred into the state may be registered at any time, provided they are registered within thirty days of their transfer into the state. Notwithstanding paragraph (h) of subdivision twenty-two of this section, such feeding devices may be transferred provided that such transfer shall be subject to the provisions of section 400.03 of this chapter including the check required to be conducted pursuant to such section.

24. "Seller of ammunition" means any person, firm, partnership, corporation or company who engages in the business of purchasing, selling or keeping ammunition.

25. "Qualified retired New York or federal law enforcement officer" means an individual who is a retired police officer as police officer is defined in subdivision thirty-four of section 1.20 of the criminal procedure law, a retired peace officer as peace officer is defined in section 2.10 of the criminal procedure law or a retired federal law enforcement officer as federal law enforcement officer is defined in section 2.15 of the criminal procedure law, who: (a) separated from service in good standing from a public agency located in New York state in which such person served as either a police officer, peace officer or federal law enforcement officer; and (b) before such separation, was authorized by law to engage in or supervise the prevention, detection, investigation, or prosecution of, or the incarceration of any person for, any violation of law, and had statutory powers of arrest, pursuant to their official duties, under the criminal procedure law; and (c) (i) before such separation, served as either a police officer, peace officer or federal law enforcement officer for five years or more and at the time of separation, is such an officer; or (ii) separated from service with such agency, after completing any applicable probationary period of such service, due to a service-connected disability, as determined by such agency at or before the time of separation; and (d)(i) has not been found by a qualified medical professional employed by such agency to be unqualified for reasons relating to mental health; or (ii) has not entered into an agreement with such agency from which the individual is separating from service in which that individual acknowledges he or she is not qualified for reasons relating to mental health; and (e) is not otherwise prohibited by New York or federal law from possessing any firearm.

26. "Rapid-fire modification device" means any bump stock, trigger crank, binary trigger system, burst trigger system, or any other device that is designed to accelerate the rate of fire of a semi-automatic firearm, rifle or shotgun.

27. "Bump stock" means any device or instrument that increases the rate of fire achievable with a semi-automatic firearm, rifle or shotgun by using energy from the recoil of the weapon to generate a reciprocating action that facilitates repeated activation of the trigger.

28. "Trigger crank" means any device or instrument that repeatedly activates the trigger of a semi-automatic firearm, rifle or shotgun through the use of a lever or other part that is turned in a circular motion and thereby accelerates the rate of fire of such firearm, rifle or shotgun, provided, however, that "trigger crank" shall not include any weapon initially designed and manufactured to fire through the use of a crank or lever.

29. "Binary trigger system" means any device that, when installed in or attached to a semi-automatic firearm rifle, or shotgun causes that weapon to fire once when the trigger is pulled and again when the trigger is released.

30. "Burst trigger system" means any device that, when installed in or attached to a semi-automatic firearm, rifle, or shot gun, allows that weapon to discharge two or more shots with a single pull or the trigger by altering the trigger reset.

31. "New York state 4-H certified shooting instructor" means a certified shooting sports instructor of the National 4-H Shooting Sports, a non-profit organization, engaged in shooting education and youth development programming that is administered by the National Institute of Food and Agriculture of the United States department of agriculture.

Editor's Notes Laws 1997, ch 446, §§ 1, 7, eff Aug 25, 1997, provide as follows:

Section 1. This act shall be known and may be cited as the "Westchester county handgun record-keeping and accountability act". (Amd, L 1997, ch 447, § 1, eff Aug 25, 1997.).

§ 7. This act shall take effect immediately and in Westchester county shall apply to licenses issued on or after such date. (Amd, L 1997, ch 447, § 4, eff Aug 25, 1997.).

Laws 1997, ch 447, § 5, eff Aug 25, 1997, provides as follows:

§ 5. This act shall take effect on the same date as a chapter of the laws of 1997, amending the penal law enacting the Westchester county handgun record-keeping and accountability act, as proposed in legislative bills numbers S. 5498-A and A. 8311-A, takes effect, and nothing contained in such chapter shall be construed as abridging the five year period applicable within Suffolk county with respect to the expiration of licenses to carry or possess a revolver.

Laws 1999, ch 635, §§ 1, 2 and 17, eff Dec 1, 1999, provide as follows:

Section 1. Short title. This act shall be known and may be cited as the "clinic access and anti-stalking act of 1999."

§ 2. Legislative intent. The legislature finds and declares that criminal stalking behavior, including threatening, violent or other criminal conduct has become more prevalent in New York state in recent years. The unfortunate reality is that stalking victims have been intolerably forced to live in fear of their stalkers. Stalkers who repeatedly follow, phone, write, confront, threaten or otherwise unacceptably intrude upon their victims, often inflict immeasurable emotional and physical harm upon them. Current law does not adequately recognize the damage to public order and individual safety caused by these offenders. Therefore, our laws must be strengthened to provide clear recognition of the dangerousness of stalking.

The high correlation between stalking behavior and the infliction of physical violence or sexual assault is demonstrated by two federal studies. A recent FBI crime report shows that thirty percent of all murdered women are killed by their husbands or boyfriends who stalked them. A November 1997 National Institute of Justice study of stalking found that eighty percent of stalking victims who were stalked by their current or former intimate partner had, at some point in their relationship, been physically assaulted by their partner and thirty-one percent had been sexually assaulted by their partner. In recognition of the real and substantial risk of harm associated with stalking behavior, 49 states have enacted anti-stalking laws.

In 1992, the Legislature took an important step towards recognizing that stalking requires stronger enforcement measures by amending New York's menacing and harassment sections to include stalking behavior within the definition of these crimes. With this act, New York creates the separate crime of stalking. This act will protect victims by providing real and effective sanctions for stalking conduct even at its earliest stages. It will also provide increased penalties for repeat offenders, for those offenders who stalk children, for those offenders who possess weapons when stalking, and for those offenders who commit stalking in violation of an order of protection.

The legislature also finds that criminal acts involving violence and intolerance at health care facilities and places of religious worship have become more prevalent in recent years. Medical clinics, physicians' offices and other facilities throughout the state have become targets in a campaign of obstruction and terrorism aimed at closing the facilities and intimidating those who seek to obtain or provide reproductive health services. In addition, places of religious worship have regrettably been targets of vandals thereby threatening these havens of peaceful prayer and meditation. Despite the passage of a 1994 federal law that makes it a federal crime for a person to deny access to or vandalize health care facilities and places of religious worship, state legislation is necessary to supplement federal law by empowering state and local officials to assist in combating violence and acts of vandalism at health care facilities and places of religious worship. It is therefore the intent of the legislature to provide state criminal penalties against anyone who, by force or threat of force or by physical obstruction, intentionally injures, intimidates or interferes with another person or attempts to injure, intimidate or interfere with another person, because such other person was or is seeking to obtain or provide or assist in the provision of reproductive health services or exercise the right of religious freedom.

§ 17. Nothing contained in this act shall be construed to eliminate, limit or impair any sanction or remedy not provided by the provisions of this act which is otherwise available to punish or prohibit the criminal interference with health care services or religious worship.

§ 28. This act shall take effect immediately; provided, however, that:

1. Sections one through three, six through nineteen and twenty-three and twenty-four of this act shall take effect on the first day of November next succeeding the date on which it shall have become a law; provided, further, however, that effective immediately the division of state police is authorized and directed to promulgate such rules and regulations as may be necessary to effectuate the provisions of sections three and four of this act; provided, further, that the amendments to subdivision 3 of section 265.00 of the penal law made by section eight of this act shall apply to offenses committed in violation of article 265 or 400 of the penal law on or after the first day of November next succeeding the date on which this act shall have become a law; and.

Laws 2007, ch 510, §§ 1, 5, eff Feb 11, 2008, provide:

Section 1. Legislative intent. It is the intent of the legislature to facilitate the establishment of certain museums that are dedicated to cataloging, inventorying, exhibiting or displaying cutlery and knives made in New York state. This act will particularly help municipalities and interested groups located in the Hudson valley, which has a long history of manufacturing knives, to establish a cutlery and knife museum to offer for public display or exhibition of, among other exhibits, certain automatic knives. During the early twentieth century, the counties of Orange, Sullivan, and Ulster manufactured approximately fifty percent of all knives manufactured in the United States. There are persons who are interested in local history and are planning to establish a local museum to display all the various kinds of cutlery and knives that were manufactured in the Hudson valley and throughout the United States. However, while certain military and police personnel and those who hold a hunting or fishing license are able to legally possess certain automatic knives, museums and other institutions, incorporated for the promotion of art, education, history, and science, are not legally permitted to possess or own such artifacts. This act remedies this situation in a way that still places these knives in a secure environment and out of general circulation.

§ 5. This act shall take effect on the one hundred eightieth day after it shall have become a law; provided that any and all rules and regulations and any other measures necessary to implement any provision of this act on its effective date may be promulgated and taken, respectively, on or before the effective date of such provision.

Laws 2013, ch 1, § 58, sub b, eff Jan 15, 2013, provides as follows:

§ 58. This act shall take effect immediately; provided, however, that:

b. The amendments to subdivision 23 of section 265.00 of the penal law made by section thirty-eight of this act shall take effect on the ninetieth day after this act shall have become a law, except that the amendments designating paragraph (a) of subdivision 23 shall take effect immediately; and provided further that the effective date of the amendments adding paragraphs (b) and (c) to such subdivision shall be suspended and not effective; (Amd, L 2013, ch 57, § 4 (Part FF), eff March 29, 2013, deemed in full force and eff March 16, 2013)

Laws 2018, ch 60, § 8, eff June 11, 2018, provides:

§ 8. This act shall take effect on the sixtieth day after it shall have become a law.

Laws 2019, ch 130, § 7, eff July 29, 2019, provides:

§ 7. This act shall take effect immediately; provided, however, that section two of this act shall take effect on the one hundred twentieth day after it shall have become a law.

Laws 2019, ch 134, § 8, eff January 26, 2020, provides:

§ 8. This act shall take effect on the one hundred eightieth day after it shall have become a law.

Laws 2019, ch 146, § 4, eff November 4, 2019, provides:

§ 4. This act shall take effect on the first of November next succeeding the date on which it shall have become a law.

Laws 2020, ch 55, § 4 (Part N), eff April 3, 2020, provides:

§ 4. This act shall take effect immediately; provided, however, that sections one and two of this act shall take effect one year after it shall have become a law and shall apply to out-of-state convictions entered in such jurisdictions on or after such date.

Amendment Notes The 2018 amendment by ch 60, § 1, added 17(c).

The 2019 amendment by ch 34, § 3, deleted "a gravity knife" following "switchblade knife" in 5-c.

The 2019 amendment by ch 130, § 1, added 26 through 30.

The 2019 amendment by ch 134, § 1, added 3-a.

The 2019 amendment by ch 146, § 1, added 5-d.

The 2020 amendment by ch 55, § 1 (Part N), deleted former 17(a); redesignated and rewrote former 17(b) [first setout] as 17(a); deleted former 17(b) [second setout], which read: "any of the following offenses defined in the penal law: illegally using, carrying or possessing a pistol or other dangerous weapon; possession of burglar's tools; criminal possession of stolen property in the third degree; escape in the third degree; jostling; fraudulent accosting; endangering the welfare of a child; the offenses defined in article two hundred thirty-five; issuing abortional articles; permitting prostitution; promoting prostitution in the third degree; stalking in the third degree; stalking in the fourth degree; the offenses defined in article one hundred thirty; the offenses defined in article two hundred twenty"; redesignated former 17(c) as 17(b); added "defined in the current penal law and any offense in any jurisdiction or in the former penal law that includes all of the essential elements of any of the following offenses" in 17(b); and added 17(c).

The 2020 amendment by ch 150, §§ 1, 3, substituted "paragraph c of subdivision three of section 11-0713 of the environmental conservation law" for "paragraph d of subdivision six of section 11-0713 of the environmental conservation law" in 19(c); added 19(d); added 31; and made a related change.

1. In general

Possession of weapons vis-a-vis the arresting officers was independent of and not a lesser included offense of robbery charge. People v Reynolds, 53 A.D.2d 877, 385 N.Y.S.2d 337, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13707 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1976).

Application for firearm license is properly denied where applicant has prior conviction for serious offense, as defined in CLS Penal § 265.00, of unlawful entry into building and has also been convicted of driving while impaired and of driving while intoxicated, with latter conviction stemming from arrest occurring only several weeks prior to submission of license application. Schnell v Spano, 120 A.D.2d 669, 502 N.Y.S.2d 263, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 56774 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Defendant's conviction of fourth degree weapon possession would be reversed, in interest of justice, since trial court's refusal to present weapon charge to jury at first trial warranted inference that charge was dismissed for insufficient evidence, and therefore defendant should not have been retired on that charge. People v Kluck, 131 A.D.2d 590, 516 N.Y.S.2d 298, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 48053 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987).

Dealer in firearms cannot lawfully possess or dispose of firearm silencers and machine guns, and gunsmith cannot lawfully dispose of machine guns and cannot lawfully possess or dispose of firearm silencers. Oefinger v New York State Police, 146 A.D.2d 186, 540 N.Y.S.2d 360, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4881 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

CLS Penal § 265.00 is definitional in nature and thus could not be read to provide applicable standard of care such that violation of it would constitute negligence. McDonald v Cook, 252 A.D.2d 302, 681 N.Y.S.2d 900, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13874 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 812, 695 N.Y.S.2d 540, 717 N.E.2d 699, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1870 (N.Y. 1999).

The State has the power to dispense with the element of scienter in defining a crime if it is necessary to do so in the public interest where the offenses prohibited and made punishable are capable of inflicting widespread injury, and where the requirement of proof of the offender's guilty knowledge and wrongful intent would render enforcement of the prohibition difficult if not impossible, tending to nullify the statute; accordingly, the fact that a loaded firearm is capable of inflicting widespread injury furnishes a justifiable basis for eliminating the need to prove intent or guilty knowledge as elements of the crime of illegally possessing a loaded firearm and no different rule should be applied where the possession of a loaded firearm merely raises the degree of the crime or mandates increased punishment. People v A., 97 Misc. 2d 1053, 413 N.Y.S.2d 92, 1979 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2035 (N.Y. County Ct. 1979).

A police commissioner would be compelled to accept petitioner's application for a target pistol license, notwithstanding that the application had been refused on the basis that the applicant was under 21 years of age, since the controlling provisions of Penal Law §§ 265.00, 400.00, do not set forth a minimum age for handgun license applicants and a judicial determination has been made prohibiting the denial of target pistol licenses solely on the grounds for age. De Vito v McGuire, 124 Misc. 2d 65, 475 N.Y.S.2d 730, 1984 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3149 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1984).

State was required to prove that stud gun was operable instrument capable of inflicting harm so as to be classified as weapon for purposes of revoking parole on basis of possession of dangerous weapon in violation of conditions of parole. People ex rel. Spann v Rodriguez, 130 Misc. 2d 1077, 498 N.Y.S.2d 957, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2469 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1986).

Weapon found in defendant's possession was "gravity knife" within meaning of CLS Penal § 265.00(5), justifying his conviction of fourth degree weapon possession, since knife, in its folded position, had hinge on one end connecting 2 narrow handles and locking or safety device on other end, with blade concealed between handles, so that if locking device were in place, knife became operational by merely pushing locking lever, whereby blade became exposed either by force of gravity or centrifugal force; further, if knife were carried without safety lever in position, blade could be similarly exposed by force of gravity or centrifugal force. People v Dolson, 140 Misc. 2d 240, 530 N.Y.S.2d 427, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2827 (N.Y. City Ct. 1987).

Counts of indictment charging burglary and weapon possession were not barred on double jeopardy grounds based on prior Family Court disposition imposed against defendant for violating order of protection based on allegation that he forced his way into his wife's home and menaced her with knife, as violation of protective order did not include elements of burglary or weapons statutes (namely, unlawful entry into building with intent to commit crime or possession of weapon with intent to use unlawfully against another). People v Arnold, 174 Misc. 2d 585, 664 N.Y.S.2d 1008, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 488 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1997).

Verdict finding defendant guilty of menacing in the second degree was not against the weight of the evidence because the evidence was legally sufficient to establish that defendant displayed what appeared to be a pistol or firearm. People v Colon, 116 A.D.3d 1234, 984 N.Y.S.2d 438, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2566 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 24 N.Y.3d 959, 996 N.Y.S.2d 219, 20 N.E.3d 999, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 2974 (N.Y. 2014).

Where any inconsistencies existed between the firearms examiner's report and grand jury testimony, the court concluded it would not have a material influence upon the grand jury, as credibility factors should be more appropriately reserved for presentation to the petit jury; the People called a firearms examiner who testified that he inspected all of the weapons at issue and concluded that each was capable of accepting a detachable magazine. People v Perkins, 58 Misc. 3d 171, 64 N.Y.S.3d 454, 2017 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3518 (N.Y. County Ct. 2017).

Ban on gravity knives was not void for vagueness under Fourteenth Amendment because it provided sufficient notice that knives were unlawful to possess as law was similarly enforced prior to instant action and courts had upheld law's application to common folding knives by wrist-flick test. Copeland v Vance, 893 F.3d 101, 2018 U.S. App. LEXIS 16957 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2018), cert. denied, 139 S. Ct. 2714, 204 L. Ed. 2d 1123, 2019 U.S. LEXIS 4081 (U.S. 2019).

2. Firearms, generally

Definition of "firearm" in Penal Law § 265.00 is limited to the possession, use and purchase of firearms and the licensing and destruction of weapons; and, because neither is related in any way to a prosecution for perjury, § 265.00 by its express language precludes reliance upon its firearm definition in such a prosecution, except as a question or answer may have been specifically addressed to that definition. People v Neumann, 51 N.Y.2d 658, 435 N.Y.S.2d 956, 417 N.E.2d 69, 1980 N.Y. LEXIS 2778 (N.Y. 1980), reh'g denied, 52 N.Y.2d 1073, 1981 N.Y. LEXIS 5955 (N.Y. 1981), cert. denied, 452 U.S. 918, 101 S. Ct. 3056, 69 L. Ed. 2d 423, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 2436 (U.S. 1981).

In prosecution for attempted second degree weapon possession and related offenses, allegation that respondent carried weapon on public street, and that weapon was loaded, was sufficient to support inference that respondent believed and intended firearm to be operable. In re Lavar D., 90 N.Y.2d 963, 665 N.Y.S.2d 612, 688 N.E.2d 486, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3215 (N.Y. 1997).

Defendant's plea of guilty to first degree robbery was inappropriate where gun which he displayed during robbery was "beebee" gun; however, display of "beebee" gun would support conviction of second degree robbery. People v Bowman, 133 A.D.2d 701, 519 N.Y.S.2d 951, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 51736 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 953, 525 N.Y.S.2d 836, 520 N.E.2d 554, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 304 (N.Y. 1988).

Evidence at trial on charges of second degree weapon possession and second degree assault was legally sufficient to establish that weapon possessed and employed by defendant in course of assault was "firearm" within meaning of CLS Penal § 265.00(3), even though victim was unable to describe weapon (which went unrecovered) with which defendant shot him, where his detailed account of shooting, and reenactment in which he demonstrated defendant's stance and manner in which defendant held weapon, together with bullet recovered at hospital, supported reasonable inference that defendant employed firearm in shooting victim. People v McGrew, 150 A.D.2d 729, 541 N.Y.S.2d 597, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6994 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Phrase "as defined in section 265.00" under CLS Penal § 140.17(2) requires operability of firearm, rifle, or shotgun. People v Cruz, 272 A.D.2d 922, 709 N.Y.S.2d 717, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5294 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2000), aff'd, 96 N.Y.2d 857, 730 N.Y.S.2d 29, 754 N.E.2d 1112, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1870 (N.Y. 2001).

Court was not required to define "firearm"(CLS Penal § 265.00(3)) with respect to length of barrel of sawed-off shotgun in trial for attempted first degree robbery, since robbery statute requires only display of what appears to be firearm, and testimony was clear that weapon displayed by defendant appeared to complainant to be pistol. People v Jennings, 279 A.D.2d 284, 720 N.Y.S.2d 4, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 149 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 830, 729 N.Y.S.2d 451, 754 N.E.2d 211, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2201 (N.Y. 2001).

Legally sufficient evidence supported defendant's conviction for criminal possession of a weapon in the second degree under N.Y. Penal Law § 265.03(3) because there was evidence at trial that the shotgun barrel had been sawed off to less than 18 inches (a firearm under N.Y. Penal Law § 265.00(3)), the gun was operable, the ammunition in defendant's pocket could be used in that weapon (a loaded firearm under N.Y. Penal Law § 265.00(15)), and the police saw defendant possessing the toy alligator in which the weapon had been placed. People v Tillery, 60 A.D.3d 1203, 875 N.Y.S.2d 343, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1876 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 12 N.Y.3d 860, 881 N.Y.S.2d 672, 909 N.E.2d 595, 2009 N.Y. LEXIS 2787 (N.Y. 2009).

Trial court erred in dismissing an owner's action pursuant to N.Y. C.P.L.R. art. 78 seeking to compel police to return firearms seized from the owner's home; although continued police custody of the firearms was proper, the trial court erred by not holding a hearing as required by Trial court erred in dismissing an owner's action seeking to compel police to return firearms seized from the owner's home; although continued police custody of the firearms was proper, the trial court erred by not holding a hearing as required by N.Y. Penal Law § 265.00(16). Caso v Nassau County Police Dep't, 306 A.D.2d 473, 761 N.Y.S.2d 303, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7412 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003).

Second count of the indictment was properly dismissed because, by test-firing defendant's weapon two days after his arrest, with ammunition belonging to the State Police and not with that found with the weapon, the People failed to present sufficient evidence to the grand jury to charge defendant with possession of a loaded firearm, under N.Y. Penal Law § 265.00(15). A necessary element of that crime was that the ammunition be live. People v Colon, 15 A.D.3d 777, 790 N.Y.S.2d 288, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1919 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2005), app. denied, 6 N.Y.3d 811, 812 N.Y.S.2d 450, 845 N.E.2d 1281, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 746 (N.Y. 2006), app. denied, 6 N.Y.3d 811, 812 N.Y.S.2d 451, 845 N.E.2d 1282, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 747 (N.Y. 2006).

Verdict on second degree robbery was not against the weight of the evidence because, although the witness's testimony was somewhat inconsistent or unclear as to whether he believed that defendant had an actual firearm as opposed to a BB gun, the evidence was legally sufficient to establish that defendant displayed what appeared to be a pistol or firearm while in immediate flight from the commission of a robbery. People v Colon, 116 A.D.3d 1234, 984 N.Y.S.2d 438, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2566 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 24 N.Y.3d 959, 996 N.Y.S.2d 219, 20 N.E.3d 999, 2014 N.Y. LEXIS 2974 (N.Y. 2014).

In a prosecution for second-degree criminal possession of a weapon, the evidence was legally sufficient to establish the operability of the firearm; although its barrel was loose and the loading gate would not remain closed, a firearms examiner testified that neither fact affected the operability of the firearm itself, and it was operational when the firearms examiner test-fired it with the ammunition that had been loaded in it at the time it was recovered. People v Hailey, 128 A.D.3d 1415, 7 N.Y.S.3d 808, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3691 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 26 N.Y.3d 929, 38 N.E.3d 838, 17 N.Y.S.3d 92, 2015 N.Y. LEXIS 3098 (N.Y. 2015).

Trial court properly convicted defendant of second-degree criminal possession of a weapon and third-degree criminal possession of marijuana because the jury did not fail to give the evidence the weight it should be accorded, the verdict, based on the applicability of the automobile presumption, was not against the weight of the evidence, the jury was entitled to find defendant guilty pursuant to a theory of constructive possession on the basis that he jointly possessed the firearm with his acquaintance as part of the same criminal operation, and the jury was entitled to find that defendant possessed an operable firearm loaded with live ammunition. People v Watkins, 151 A.D.3d 1913, 57 N.Y.S.3d 841, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5467 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 30 N.Y.3d 984, 89 N.E.3d 1266, 67 N.Y.S.3d 586, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 3539 (N.Y. 2017).

While a different verdict would not have been unreasonable, the verdict convicting defendant of criminal possession of a weapon was not against the weight of the evidence because a finding of exclusive access to the area where the weapon was found was not necessary to establish constructive possession, constructive possession may have been established through circumstantial evidence, and defendant's claim that the witness was not credible was explored during cross-examination and was a matter for the jury's consideration. People v Jemmott, 164 A.D.3d 953, 82 N.Y.S.3d 657, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5576 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 32 N.Y.3d 1112, 115 N.E.3d 635, 91 N.Y.S.3d 363, 2018 N.Y. LEXIS 3521 (N.Y. 2018).

There was no merit to defendant's argument that firearms found along with associated ammunition under a step on a stairway could not be considered "loaded" because the associated ammunition was found separate from the firearms. People v McCoy, 169 A.D.3d 1260, 95 N.Y.S.3d 441, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1453 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 33 N.Y.3d 1033, 126 N.E.3d 167, 102 N.Y.S.3d 517, 2019 N.Y. LEXIS 1814 (N.Y. 2019).

Evidence was legally sufficient to support defendant's conviction of criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree under Penal Law § 265.02(7) relating to his possession of assault weapons, given the rifles and photographs of them were admitted into evidence and they met the statutory definition of an assault weapon. People v Steinmetz, 177 A.D.3d 1292, 112 N.Y.S.3d 833, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8044 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2019), app. denied, 34 N.Y.3d 1133, 141 N.E.3d 486, 118 N.Y.S.3d 530, 2020 N.Y. LEXIS 252 (N.Y. 2020).

Inmate's claim that the gun he admitted to possessing was not loaded was incorrect as although the ammunition was not in the gun's chamber, it was on his person. People v Lewis, 989 N.Y.S.2d 590, 45 Misc. 3d 396, 2014 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3050 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2014), aff'd, 129 A.D.3d 637, 14 N.Y.S.3d 328, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5470 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2015).

3. —Pistols and revolvers

Reversal of defendant's conviction of criminal possession of a weapon was mandated, where the prosecution presented no evidence at trial that the .22 caliber gun found in defendant's glove compartment was operable, and thereby failed to prove that defendant was in possession of "firearm" within the meaning of Pen Law § 265.00(3). People v Actie, 99 A.D.2d 815, 472 N.Y.S.2d 147, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17207 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1984).

Conviction of third degree criminal possession of weapon (revolver) would not be reversed on defendant's assertion that jury had not been properly instructed on issue of whether revolver was operable where trial court initially gave no instruction on operability, but after defendant's exception, charged that gun which cannot be fired does not fit within statute; trial court should have included charge on operability in its initial instructions, but jury was able to gather correct rules on basis of entire charge. People v Ramsey, 124 A.D.2d 835, 508 N.Y.S.2d 553, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 62169 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1986).

Term "handgun" in indictment constituted sufficient factual support for subject element of first and second degree robbery, and first and second degree criminal use of firearm, as well as sufficiently specific description of what implement allegedly displayed by defendant appeared to be, even though term is not specifically included within definition of "firearm" under CLS Penal § 265.00 and is not among any of enumerated implements contained in statutes defining crimes with which defendant was charged, since CLS CPL § 200.50 requires simply that defendant be notified of crime of which he stands indicted. People v Singleton, 130 A.D.2d 598, 515 N.Y.S.2d 307, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 46612 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1987), aff'd, 72 N.Y.2d 845, 531 N.Y.S.2d 798, 527 N.E.2d 281, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 1643 (N.Y. 1988).

Penal Law contemplates "imitation pistol" in reality of its use, while Administrative Code contemplates same in reality of its appearance; under either statute, "imitation pistol" is not actual firearm which can discharge projectile or which acts by force of gunpowder, nor is it an inoperable pistol which can be readily made operable. People v Webb, 78 Misc. 2d 253, 356 N.Y.S.2d 494, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1376 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1974).

4. —Shotguns

Sawed-off shotgun which had overall size of 27 inches in length with padded stock or butt measuring 12 inches in circumference was not a "firearm" as defined in Penal Law section defining firearm as any pistol, revolver, sawed-off shotgun or other firearm of a size which may be concealed under the person; thus, its possession did not constitute the crime of possession of a firearm. People v Eldridge, 53 A.D.2d 1037, 385 N.Y.S.2d 912, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15848 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1976).

Sawed off shotgun 23 ½ inches in length was not "firearm" within the meaning of Penal Law § 265.00, subdivision 3, as it was not of a size that could be concealed upon the person. People v Roberts, 73 Misc. 2d 500, 342 N.Y.S.2d 757, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2020 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1973), app. dismissed, 79 Misc. 2d 243, 360 N.Y.S.2d 151, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1637 (N.Y. App. Term 1974).

With regard to offense of possession of a firearm, sawed-off shotgun, which was 22 ½ inches long, was not a "concealed weapon" within meaning of statute which provides that the term "firearm" means any pistol, revolver, sawed-off shotgun or other firearm of a size which may be concealed upon the person. In re Peabody, 86 Misc. 2d 520, 382 N.Y.S.2d 934, 1976 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2478 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. 1976).

The issue of whether a sawed-off shotgun measuring 27 inches in length is a "firearm" within the meaning of subdivision 3 of section 265.00 of the Penal Law, which defines "firearm" as a "sawed-off shotgun or other firearm of a size which may be concealed upon the person", is a factual question as to whether it is concealable upon the person to be resolved by the jury and is not a legal matter to be resolved by the court. People v Ahern, 104 Misc. 2d 13, 427 N.Y.S.2d 549, 1980 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2383 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1980).

A 22 inch sawed-off shotgun was a firearm capable of concealment within the meaning of Penal § 265(3) where the defendant had actually concealed the weapon in his back pocket covered by his outer clothes. People v Davis, 107 Misc. 2d 1, 433 N.Y.S.2d 56, 1980 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2816 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1980).

Where a sawed-off shotgun, possession of which by defendants resulted in their indictment for criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree, was 26 and $^3/_8$ inches long, approximately half the heighth of each of the defendants, and where there was no evidence presented to the grand jury indicating that the defendants on the summer night of their arrest were garbed in a manner to aid, rather than hinder, concealment of the weapon, the grand jury minutes were therefore legally insufficient to establish concealability of the guns, presumptions that any sawed-off shotgun up to 18 inches in length is concealable, any sawed-off shotgun between 18 and 24 inches in length creates a fact question for judge or jury as to its concealability, and any sawed-off shotgun in excess of 24 inches would be considered not concealable in the absence of special circumstances relating to dress, or other factor which would manifest concealability; when given its common sense meaning the controlling statute was not subject to a constitutional attack for vagueness. People v Cortez, 110 Misc. 2d 652, 442 N.Y.S.2d 873, 1981 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3137 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1981).

In a prosecution for possession of a weapon in the fourth degree, defendant's motion to set aside his conviction based upon the alleged error of the court in submitting to the jury the issue of whether the sawed-off shotgun in question was a concealable weapon was denied, since it was proper for the jury in the instant prosecution to determine whether a shotgun measuring 27 and one-quarter incles in length is concealable and therefore a proscribed "firearm" as statutorily defined. People v Davis, 112 Misc. 2d 138, 446 N.Y.S.2d 159, 1981 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3413 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1981).

In the prosecution of defendant, who had been arrested while lying on a bed, apparently asleep, with a sawed-off shotgun cradled in his arms, for criminal possession of a weapon in the fourth degree (Penal Law, § 265.01, subd [1]), the trial court properly refused to instruct the jury that subd 1 of § 265.01 should be construed as defining a crime requiring the elements of scienter or mental culpability, since scienter, guilty knowledge or intent, was not a necessary element of the crime; moreover, although criminal liability required proof of a voluntary act, there was no necessity that an instruction as to an involuntary act or an innocent act, which would have had an effect on defendant's possession of a weapon (Penal Law, § 10.00, subd 8), be given in the absence of any evidence of intoxication or other involuntary act. Further, the issue of whether the gun was concealable, and therefore a proscribed firearm as defined in Penal Law § 265.00, subd 3, was properly submitted to the jury where the gun, which measured 27 ½ inches in length, could have been concealed by the defendant, who was about 5 feet 10 inches tall, and where defendant was carefully viewed by the jury during trial. People v Davis, 112 Misc. 2d 138, 446 N.Y.S.2d 159, 1981 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3413 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1981).

CLS Penal § 265.00(3)(b) outlaws any "shotgun" or "weapon made from a shotgun" if barrel measures less than 18 inches no matter what over-all length of gun; § 265.00(3)(b) also contains separate, distinct and additional prohibition against any "weapon made from a shotgun" if such weapon has over-all length of less than 26 inches, no matter what its barrel length. People v Santiago, 133 Misc. 2d 161, 506 N.Y.S.2d 136, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2843 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1986).

District Attorney properly instructed grand jury that "firearm" was defined "in pertinent part as a shotgun having one or more barrels less than eighteen inches in length," without instructing grand jury to consider over-all length of gun or to distinguish between "shotgun" and "weapon made from a shotgun," since CLS Penal § 265.00(3)(b) must be read in disjunctive to outlaw any "shotgun" or "weapon made from a shotgun" if barrel measures less than 18 inches, no matter what its over-all length. People v

Santiago, 133 Misc. 2d 161, 506 N.Y.S.2d 136, 1986 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2843 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1986).

CLS Penal § 265.00(3) is not unconstitutionally vague since it clearly establishes 2 types of separate standards for 2 separate weapons—i.e., shotguns and weapons made from shotguns. People v Crivillaro, 142 Misc. 2d 527, 538 N.Y.S.2d 152, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 54 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1989).

CLS Penal § 265.00(3) is properly read in disjunctive so that only element required to bring shotgun within definition of firearm is that of barrel length of less than 18 inches, and shotgun is not also required to have overall length of less than 26 inches. People v Crivillaro, 142 Misc. 2d 527, 538 N.Y.S.2d 152, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 54 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1989).

Indictment charging defendant with third degree weapon possession would be dismissed where weapon in question was 29 inches in length and, although shotgun originally, had been altered so as to be incapable of being fired from shoulder; in order for weapon made from shotgun to be considered firearm within statutory definitions found in CLS Penal §§ 265.00(3) and 265.00(12), it must be less than 26 inches in length and capable of being fired from shoulder. People v C. C., 144 Misc. 2d 350, 544 N.Y.S.2d 950, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 503 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1989).

Count of indictment charging defendant with fourth degree grand larceny under CLS Penal § 155.30(7) for stealing shotgun was reduced to petit larceny charge where no evidence was provided to grand jury that shotgun was "operable" as defined in CLS Penal § 265.00(12), nor was grand jury charged regarding this requirement. People v Ewing, 172 Misc. 2d 120, 656 N.Y.S.2d 849, 1997 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 121 (N.Y. County Ct. 1997).

5. —Rifles

Gun with barrel length of $17^{7}/_{8}$ inches qualified as "firearm" under CLS Penal § 265.00, even though its over-all length of approximately 29 inches exceeded statutory limit, since statute should be read in disjunctive so that barrel length limitation may be applied independently of over-all length limitation. People v Villani, 141 A.D.2d 883, 530 N.Y.S.2d 209, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7125 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't), app. denied, 72 N.Y.2d 926, 532 N.Y.S.2d 860, 529 N.E.2d 190, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 3272 (N.Y. 1988).

Court should have charged on requirement that barrel of gun be shorter than 18 inches, in trial for second degree weapon possession, where testimony of People's ballistics expert as to length of barrel was vague and there was no other testimony on subject except for complaining witness' inexact demonstration. People v Jennings, 279 A.D.2d 284, 720 N.Y.S.2d 4, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 149 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 96 N.Y.2d 830, 729 N.Y.S.2d 451, 754 N.E.2d 211, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 2201 (N.Y. 2001).

A rifle which has been reduced, by sawing off the barrel, to a size that it may be concealed on the person loses its statutory exemption from provision relating to concealment of a dangerous weapon. People v Caffrey, 73 Misc. 2d 504, 342 N.Y.S.2d 754, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2021 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1973).

Grand jury evidence was not legally sufficient to charge third and fourth degree possession of "assault weapons" where arresting officer described 4 rifles in question as semi-automatic rifles with detachable magazines and additional characteristics satisfying statutory definition under CLS Penal § 265.00(22), but ballistic reports, while concluding that all 4 rifles were semi-automatic and operable, did not mention special characteristics testified to by arresting officer, and all but one rifle was observed to have no magazine; preferable practice would be to include all necessary characteristics needed for "assault weapons" charge in ballistics report. People v Digaetano, 188 Misc. 2d 771, 729 N.Y.S.2d 614, 2001 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 283 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2001).

County court erred, after determining that operability was a necessary finding to convict defendant of the crime of fourth-degree criminal possession of stolen property, in refusing to grant defendant's additional instruction request to include the words "under this Count, the rifle need not be loaded, but it must be operable. To be operable, the rifle must be capable of discharging ammunition," as such was contained in the pattern criminal jury instruction, despite reading the definition of a rifle as detailed in N.Y. Penal Law § 265.00(11); further, such error was not harmless, as it denied defendant a fair trial and entitled him to a new trial be had. People v Rowland, 14 A.D.3d 886, 787 N.Y.S.2d 741, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 433 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2005).

Because the destruction of an owner's rifles, shotgun, and shooting accessories was not permissible under the version of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 265.00(3), 400.05(6) in effect at the time of the destruction, due process was not satisfied by N.Y. Fam. Ct. Act § 842-a(7); accordingly, the owner properly brought a 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 action against the sheriff's department. Maio v Kralik, 70 A.D.3d 1, 888 N.Y.S.2d 582, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8062 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2009).

6. Knives, generally

Defendant was properly convicted of fourth-degree criminal possession of a weapon because the accusatory instrument was facially sufficient where it stated that the knife at issue, once opened, locked "automatically in place," which was synonymous to the statutory phrase "by means of a device," and the accusatory instrument sufficiently pleaded that the arresting police officer exercised his expertise by testing the knife and determining that it opened and locked in the manner proscribed by the gravity knife statute. 2015 N.Y. LEXIS 3239.

Court correctly instructed jury that, in order to convict defendant of possessing gravity knife, prosecution had to prove that defendant knew he had a knife in his possession, not that he knew it was specifically a gravity knife, and that knife fit legal description of gravity knife under CLS Penal § 265.00(5); knowledge that thing possessed answers description of prohibited instrument is not element of third degree criminal possession of weapon. People v Berrier, 223 A.D.2d 456, 637 N.Y.S.2d 69, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 489 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 876, 645 N.Y.S.2d 450, 668 N.E.2d 421, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 5037 (N.Y. 1996).

Defendant's conviction of possession of a weapon in the fourth degree, N.Y. Penal Law § 265.01(1) was not supported by sufficient evidence; the knife possessed by defendant, known as a butterfly knife, did not satisfy the statutory definition of a gravity knife under N.Y. Penal Law § 265.00(5), as the knife required manual locking. People v Zuniga, 303 A.D.2d 773, 759 N.Y.S.2d 86, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3353 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003).

Where a trial court's credibility determinations were supported by the record, the fact that a gravity knife malfunctioned during trial demonstrations did not defeat the proof of operability; therefore, the evidence supported defendant's conviction for criminal possession of a weapon under N.Y. Penal Law §§ 265.00(5), 265.01(1), 265.02(1) and defendant's suppression motion was properly denied. People v Smith, 309 A.D.2d 608, 765 N.Y.S.2d 777, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10707 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 1 N.Y.3d 580, 775 N.Y.S.2d 796, 807 N.E.2d 909, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 4734 (N.Y. 2003).

Legally sufficient evidence supported defendant's conviction for criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree as the People proved the operability of the gravity knife at issue within the meaning of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 265.00(5), 265.01(1), and 265.02(1) based on a police officer's testimony regarding his testing of the knife after defendant's arrest; the officer described the manner in which the knife operated and demonstrated its operability in open court. People v Birth, 49 A.D.3d 290, 853 N.Y.S.2d 317, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1874 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 10 N.Y.3d 859, 860 N.Y.S.2d 486, 890 N.E.2d 249, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 2123 (N.Y. 2008).

Because a police officer's description and demonstration for the jury of the manner in which a gravity knife recovered from defendant operated conformed to definition of a gravity knife in N.Y. Penal Law § 265.00(5),defendant's argument to the contrary was based on a misinterpretation of the officer's testimony. People v Jouvert, 50 A.D.3d 504, 856 N.Y.S.2d 84, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3596 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 11 N.Y.3d 790, 866 N.Y.S.2d 616, 896 N.E.2d 102, 2008 N.Y. LEXIS 3772 (N.Y. 2008).

Trial court properly convicted defendant of second-degree criminal possession of a weapon because the mere fact that he might have only fired one round from his rifle neither precluded nor negated a finding that it was a "repeating rifle," the weapon was only required to have the ability to accept a detachable magazine, not that the magazine be utilized every time the weapon was fired, and the presence of a spring in the magazine did not take the rifle outside the statutory definition. People v Gray, 151 A.D.3d 1470, 57 N.Y.S.3d 561, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5188 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 30 N.Y.3d 949, 89 N.E.3d 523, 67 N.Y.S.3d 133, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 3371 (N.Y. 2017), cert. denied, 138 S. Ct. 1295, 200 L. Ed. 2d 483, 2018 U.S. LEXIS 1843 (U.S. 2018).

Weapon found in defendant's possession was "gravity knife" within meaning of CLS Penal § 265.00(5), justifying his conviction of fourth degree weapon possession, since knife, in its folded position, had hinge on one end connecting 2 narrow handles and locking or safety device on other end, with blade concealed between handles, so that if locking device were in place, knife became operational by merely pushing locking lever, whereby blade became exposed either by force of gravity or centrifugal force; further, if knife were carried without safety lever in position, blade could be similarly exposed by force of gravity or centrifugal force. People v Dolson, 140 Misc. 2d 240, 530 N.Y.S.2d 427, 1987 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2827 (N.Y. City Ct. 1987).

Knife whose blade does not lock into place "when released" from its cover is not "gravity knife" under CLS Penal § 265.00, even if blade can be released from its sheath by flick of wrist. People v Dolson, 142 Misc. 2d 779, 538 N.Y.S.2d 393, 1989 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 116 (N.Y. County Ct. 1989).

Defendant was not allowed to withdraw guilty pleas to weapons possession charges under N.Y. Penal Law § 265.01 because the sole basis proffered was that the allocution failed to establish the operability of the gravity knives at issue, but defendant admitted that the knives were gravity knives, and, in any event, all that was required was defendant's knowledge that he possessed a knife, not that he knew that it the statutory description of a gravity knife; the court allocuted defendant as to all necessary elements of the crime and apprised him of the rights and privileges that he would be waiving by pleading guilty. People v Daly, 932 N.Y.S.2d 845, 33 Misc. 3d 963, 2011 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 4966 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2011).

Information that stated that an officer tested a knife and that the blade released from the handle by force of gravity or centrifugal force and locked in place by means of a button, spring, lever or other device in the handle was facially sufficient, even though the officer did not mention his training and experience, as ultimately testing and personal knowledge as to the operability of a gravity knife, and not training and experience, were the key components of a N.Y. Penal Law § 265.00 charge. People v Octavio, 932 N.Y.S.2d 803, 34 Misc. 3d 790, 2011 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 5466 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2011).

Officer did not have to state what test he used to determine that a knife was a gravity knife to support the sufficiency of an information on a N.Y. Penal Law § 265.00 charge. People v Octavio, 932 N.Y.S.2d 803, 34 Misc. 3d 790, 2011 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 5466 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2011).

Complaint that indicated that after a knife was tested certain results occurred was sufficient to charge a N.Y. Penal Law § 265.00 offense where the results were the same as the statutory definition; that the allegations tracked the statutory language was not a defect as it was the only way that a complaint could be pled to sufficiently distinguish a gravity knife from all other knives that were not per se weapons. People v Octavio, 932 N.Y.S.2d 803, 34 Misc. 3d 790, 2011 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 5466 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 2011).

In an action for declaratory and injunctive relief in which plaintiffs invoked 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 to charge defendants with applying New York law criminalizing the possession of "gravity knives," three plaintiffs (an artist, an art dealer, and a retail store) had standing to challenge defendants' application of N.Y. Penal Law §§ 265.00(5) and 265.01(1) because each had expressed present intent to possess such knives (but for defendants' challenged enforcement actions) and each had demonstrated a credible threat of prosecution; however, two organizational plaintiffs did not have standing to sue on their own behalf or on behalf of their members. Knife Rights, Inc. v Vance, 802 F.3d 377, 2015 U.S. App. LEXIS 16814 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2015).

Even if the officer had reasonable suspicion to initially stop defendant, which he did not, there was no probable cause to arrest him; the tool which was recovered was not a gravity knife and the officer could not have reasonably believed it to be one—it was designed, sold, and used as a folding knife. Although the officer was ultimately able to open the tool with centrifugal force at the hearing, it was obviously not designed to be opened in this fashion and did not readily open through such force; defendant's expert, as well as a representative of the retailer, each testified that the tool was not intended to be opened with centrifugal force and was not treated as a weapon by its designer, manufacturer, seller, or users. United States v Irizarry, 509 F. Supp. 2d 198, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 64365 (E.D.N.Y. 2007).

7. Deface

Proof that weapon was sawed off, without more, does not fall within definition of "deface" in CLS Penal § 265.00(7) and is insufficient to support conviction of third degree weapon possession. People v Blair, 242 A.D.2d 883, 662 N.Y.S.2d 649, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10434 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1997).

It is apparent from the statutory definition that the legislature intended "deface" to mean something quite different than the adaptation of a weapon to make it concealable and that such definition would not apply to sawing off a shotgun to make it concealable in the absence of any evidence that the manufacturer's serial number or other distinguishing number was altered. People v Caffrey, 73 Misc. 2d 504, 342 N.Y.S.2d 754, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2021 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1973).

Merely sawing off a portion of a weapon is not an act sufficient within itself to establish that weapon has been "defaced" for purposes of statute providing that it is criminal possession of weapon in third degree when person "knowingly has in his possession a machine-gun or firearm which has been defaced for the purpose of concealment or prevention of the detection of a crime or misrepresenting the identity of such machine-gun or firearm." In re Peabody, 86 Misc. 2d 520, 382 N.Y.S.2d 934, 1976 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2478 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. 1976).

8. Antique firearm

Term "muzzle loading . . . revolver" within statute exempting certain antique firearms from designation as prohibited weapons is sufficiently ambiguous to require full factual inquiry into historical and commonly understood use of the term; though there may be no such thing as a revolver which loads through the barrel, if it should be established that a certain class of revolvers were historically and are now commonly known as "muzzle loaders," the exemption would extend to such class. Long Island Antique Gun Collectors Asso. v Frank, 53 A.D.2d 644, 384 N.Y.S.2d 500, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13364 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1976).

A defendant who possessed a partially-loaded, muzzle-loading pistol would be guilty of criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree as possessing "a loaded firearm" under Penal Law § 265.02(4) since, although antique weapons are excluded from the definition of firearms pursuant to Penal Law § 265.00(3), the weapon possessed must be loaded; in enacting the exemption for antique weapons, it was the intention to include only unloaded weapons, and possession of a partially loaded pistol together with the ammunition necessary to fire the gun is not within this exception. People v Mott, 112 Misc. 2d 833, 447 N.Y.S.2d 632, 1982 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3200 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1982).

9. Preemption of local laws

State law which evinced intent to cover most of possible categories of weapons for which it deemed some sanction necessary when weapons were used with illegal intent did not preempt field of legislation with respect to criminality in connection with toy guns and was not at odds with city ordinance making it unlawful to possess toy pistol resembling real one in certain particulars. People v Judiz, 38 N.Y.2d 529, 381 N.Y.S.2d 467, 344 N.E.2d 399, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 2260 (N.Y. 1976).

Defendant's conviction of unlawful possession of assault weapon under Rochester City Code § 47-5(F) was not preempted by CLS Penal Art 265, which regulates firearms and other dangerous weapons; mere fact that local ordinance has some connection with subject on which state statute exists does not automatically vitiate it. People v Stagnitto, 261 A.D.2d 890, 691 N.Y.S.2d 223, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4939 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 1028, 697 N.Y.S.2d 587, 719 N.E.2d 948, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 3372 (N.Y. 1999).

Article 265 of the Penal Law does not treat so extensively with the subject of the control of rifles and shotguns as to evidence any design or intention by the state to preempt the entire field. Grimm v New York, 56 Misc. 2d 525, 289 N.Y.S.2d 358, 1968 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1721 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1968).

Statute providing that any person having in his possession any imitation pistol with intent to use same unlawfully against another is guilty of class A misdemeanor does not so extensively treat subject of imitation pistols as to evidence intent or desire by State Legislature that it be sole and exclusive legislation in this area. People v Webb, 78 Misc. 2d 253, 356 N.Y.S.2d 494, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1376 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1974).

City ordinance that regulated semiautomatic rifles and shotguns with ammunition feeding devices permitting them to be loaded with combination of more than 6 rounds was not preempted by state gun control laws (e.g., CLS Gen Mun § 139-d, CLS Civ R § 4, and CLS Penal Art 265 and Art 400); state has not, directly or indirectly, regulated all aspects of gun possession and use as to time, place, and circumstance. Citizens for a Safer Community v City of Rochester, 164 Misc. 2d 822, 627 N.Y.S.2d 193, 1994 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 671 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1994).

N.Y. Penal Law § 400.00 preempted Nassau County, N.Y., Ordinance No. 5-2008, as amended by Nassau County, N.Y., Ordinance 9-2008 (Ordinance), which banned the possession of "deceptively colored" firearms because § 400.00(2) specifically precluded from licensing assault weapons and disguised guns and the comprehensive and detailed regulatory language and scheme of § 400.00 demonstrated the legislature's intent to preempt the field of firearm regulation; the Ordinance interfered with the licensing provisions set forth in N.Y. Penal Law § 265.00 et seq. and N.Y. Penal Law § 400.00 et seq. by making it illegal for an individual to possess a deceptively colored handgun in Nassau County even though such individual held a valid firearms license under state law. Matter of Chwick v Mulvey, 81 A.D.3d 161, 915 N.Y.S.2d 578, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9817 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2010).

10. Possession of dangerous weapon

Since city ordinance making it unlawful to possess toy pistol resembling real gun in certain particulars is constitutional and had not been preempted by state law, conviction of defendant, who was apprehended while in possession of toy pistol resembling gun known as a Luger, was proper under such ordinance. People v Judiz, 38 N.Y.2d 529, 381 N.Y.S.2d 467, 344 N.E.2d 399, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 2260 (N.Y. 1976).

Possession of weapon must be voluntary, in order to be culpable. People v Valentine, 54 A.D.2d 568, 387 N.Y.S.2d 25, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13900 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1976).

Sentence of probation for five years on conviction on plea of guilty to attempted possession of a weapon was not excessive even in light of defendant's unblemished prior record. People v Manners, 54 A.D.2d 938, 388 N.Y.S.2d 141, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14811 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1976), app. denied, 41 N.Y.2d 867, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 3232 (N.Y. 1977).

Although police officers' testimony to the effect that gun was removed from defendant's person, if credited, would certainly support verdict finding defendant guilty of possession of a weapon as a felony, if the jury believed defendant's claim that he found the gun and gave it to the police, his properly explained temporary possession would not have been unlawful; accordingly, reversible error occurred when the court refused defendant's sufficiently articulated request for an appropriate charge as to innocent possession. People v Richardson, 55 A.D.2d 514, 389 N.Y.S.2d 14, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15146 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1976).

Defendant's possession of glass with intent to use it unlawfully against another within meaning of CLS Penal §§ 265.01(2) and 265.02(1) was established by evidence that, during altercation at bar, defendant struck victim twice in face with glass, glass broke on first impact, and victim sustained injury when struck second time. People v Tellone, 155 A.D.2d 631, 548 N.Y.S.2d 46, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14437 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989), app. denied, 76 N.Y.2d 744, 558 N.Y.S.2d 905, 557 N.E.2d 1201, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 2357 (N.Y. 1990).

Evidence supported convictions for first degree robbery and third degree weapon possession since jury was entitled to conclude that defendant used force and threatened use of dangerous instrument (razor blade) to prevent store security guard from regaining possession of stolen items. People v Gill, 191 A.D.2d 321, 595 N.Y.S.2d 46, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2587 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 81 N.Y.2d 1073, 601 N.Y.S.2d 592, 619 N.E.2d 670, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 2769 (N.Y. 1993).

In trial for possession of drugs and weapons, defendant's dominion and control over apartment was established by evidence of his residence and presence in apartment, his possession of keys fitting front door locks, and his involvement in prior drug transaction in apartment. People v Bernard, 237 A.D.2d 210, 655 N.Y.S.2d 931, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2768 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 855, 661 N.Y.S.2d 182, 683 N.E.2d 1056, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 2386 (N.Y. 1997).

Defendant's adjudication of delinquency for acts which, if committed by an adult, would have constituted criminal possession of a weapon under an accomplice liability theory was supported by sufficient evidence as: (1) after police heard gunshots in the area, defendant was observed holding a bulge that was visible at his waistband which, according to one of the officers, was consistent with the carrying of a gun; (2) upon seeing the officer, defendant immediately fled, holding his waistband with his right hand as he ran; and (3) defendant threw a firearm to the ground with his right hand during the officers' pursuit. The adjudication was not against the weight of the evidence. Matter of Ya-Sin S., 122 A.D.3d 751, 996 N.Y.S.2d 319, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7602 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2014).

Since intent is not required for a violation of statute prohibiting possession of weapons and dangerous instruments and appliances, defendant's contention that he believed the weapon, a sawed off shotgun 23 ½ inches long, to be inoperable and the fact that there was no ammunition found for it were not defenses to the action. People v Roberts, 73 Misc. 2d 500, 342 N.Y.S.2d 757, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2020 (N.Y. Dist. Ct. 1973), app. dismissed, 79 Misc. 2d 243, 360 N.Y.S.2d 151, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1637 (N.Y. App. Term 1974).

Fact that defendant was seen as a passenger in a taxicab carrying on his lap, in open view, a loaded, sawed-off .22 caliber rifle was sufficient evidence to warrant holding him for action of grand jury on charge of possession of dangerous weapon. People v Caffrey, 73 Misc. 2d 504, 342 N.Y.S.2d 754, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2021 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1973).

By prohibiting possession of any imitation pistol with intent to use same unlawfully against another, state statute does not impliedly permit possession of imitation pistol in all other circumstances. People v Webb, 78 Misc. 2d 253, 356 N.Y.S.2d 494, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1376 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1974).

Administrative Code provision making it unlawful for any person to possess or use any imitation pistol which substantially duplicates actual pistol, with certain exceptions, is not invalid as attempt to regulate in field preempted by state law nor is it an improper exercise of police power. People v Webb, 78 Misc. 2d 253, 356 N.Y.S.2d 494, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1376 (N.Y. City Crim. Ct. 1974).

For purposes of prosecution involving multiple counts of possession of dangerous weapon consisting of homemade devices containing "an explosive substance," term "explosive" (not defined in Penal Law but defined in CLS Labor § 451) meant something that was capable of exploding and causing death or injury to person or property. People v Getman, 188 Misc. 2d 809, 729 N.Y.S.2d 858, 2001 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 273 (N.Y. County Ct. 2001).

11. Licensing requirement

Pistol licensing officer who is also county judge need not issue order in his judicial capacity when denying permit application. Lehner v Humphreys, 156 A.D.2d 867, 550 N.Y.S.2d 88, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15876 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Appropriate procedure to seek review of determination of County Court Judge, acting in his administrative capacity as firearms licensing officer for Westchester County under CLS Penal §§ 400.00(11) and 265.00(10), was not by direct appeal but by commencement of CLS CPLR Art 78 proceeding in Appellate Division. County of Westchester v D'Ambrosio, 244 A.D.2d 334, 663 N.Y.S.2d 886, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10998 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1997).

Although county attorney had sought revocation of appellant's pistol licenses, county attorney was not proper party to appellant's Article 78 proceeding to review judge's revocation of those licenses, in light of CLS Penal §§ 260.00(10) and 400.00(1),(3), and (10). Romanoff v Lange, 281 A.D.2d 551, 721 N.Y.S.2d 821, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2643 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2001).

Where agency investigations relied on by county judge as the basis for his denial of application for pistol license were not available to applicant or supreme court, such denial could not be evaluated by such court in an Article 78 proceeding. Guida v Dier (1975) 84 Misc 2d 110, 375 NYS2d 826, mod (1976, 3d Dept) 54 App Div 2d 86, 387 NYS2d 720, holding that applicant was entitled to notice of objections that had been submitted to county judge in opposition to his application and a reasonable opportunity to submit proof to respond thereto.

New York State firearm licensing laws did not violate Second Amendment by conditioning right to obtain at-home permit on good moral character, integrity and absence of good cause to deny license and by requiring those conditions plus showing of proper cause in order to obtain concealed-carry permit because circuit precedent foreclosed challenge to "proper cause" prerequisite for concealed-carry permit, and "good moral character" and "good cause" requirements for at-home permit were not onerous, complaint did not allege that any law-abiding, responsible citizen who applied for firearm license had been denied at-home permit, and there was close relationship between licensing regime and State's interests in public safety and crime prevention. Libertarian Party v Cuomo, 970 F.3d 106, 2020 U.S. App. LEXIS 25323 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2020).

12. Under former § 1896

A "machine gun" which was without two vital parts, so that it was impossible to fire more than one shot at a time and the gun had to be separately loaded for each successive shot, is not a "machine gun" within the meaning of the statute. The statute is constitutional. People v Woods, 114 N.Y.S.2d 611, 202 Misc. 562, 1952 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2946 (N.Y. Magis. Ct. 1952).

Subdivision 11 of above statute obviously does not apply to persons who are under 16 years of age since it was passed at same time as subd 6 of § 1897 forbidding possession of a rifle by any person who had been convicted of crime and a person under 16 years of age cannot be convicted of any crime except murder. In re Faber, 45 Misc. 2d 360, 255 N.Y.S.2d 415, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2386 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. 1965).

Notes to Unpublished Decisions

1. In general

Unpublished decision: Public employees were entitled to qualified immunity from plaintiff's false arrest and malicious prosecution claims because an officer of reasonable competence could have concluded that he violated the law, as it was not clearly established that the law defining "assault weapon" excluded rifles whose banned features were obscured or disguised, that N.Y. Penal Law § § 265.10(3) (banning the sale of assault weapons to the general public) required knowledge of such features, or that licensed firearms dealers like plaintiff were exempt. Sanseviro v New York, 685 Fed. Appx. 75, 2017 U.S. App. LEXIS 5757 (2d Cir. N.Y. 2017).

2. Knives, generally
3. Licensing requirement

1. Firearms, generally

Flare launchers approved by the Coast Guard and not capable of firing conventional ammunition are not firearms as defined in the Penal Law. 1981 NY Ops Atty Gen Dec 23.

2. Knives, generally

Municipality may not lawfully display knives designated as illegal to possess under CLS Penal § 265.01(1), unless they are disabled in such manner as to bring them outside scope of applicable Penal Law definitions. 2004 NY Ops Atty Gen I 04-2.

None of exemptions in CLS Penal § 265.20 covers possession by local government, municipal agency, or museum for display purposes of knives otherwise illegal to possess under Penal Law. 2004 NY Ops Atty Gen I 04-2.

3. Licensing requirement

Under the presently effective Village Law and under the new Village Law, the Mayor of the Village of Floral Park is not a sworn officer of the village police department within the contemplation of Criminal Procedure Law, § 1.20(34)(d), whether or not he is the Police Commissioner of the village and consequently may not possess a pistol or revolver without a license therefor. 1973 NY Ops Atty Gen July 16 (informal).

Museums are not exempt from the firearm licensing requirements of Penal Law, § 400 and application for the requisite firearm license should be made by an appropriate individual on behalf of the museum. 1975 NY Ops Atty Gen Feb 3.

The Legislature, in enacting chapter 986 of the Laws of 1974, impliedly repealed those provisions of section 400.00(2)(f) of the Penal Law requiring the licensing of "antique pistols"; and "antique firearms" as defined in section 265.00 of the Penal Law are not subject to the licensing requirements contained in section 400.00. 1975 NY Ops Atty Gen Nov 13.

Unloaded replica muzzle loading percussion pistols may be sold, purchased and possessed without a license. Simultaneous possession of these pistols and the necessary ammunition to discharge them required a license. 1977 NY Ops Atty Gen Dec 19 (Informal).

§ 265.00. Definitions. [Effective April 3, 2021]

As used in this article and in article four hundred, the following terms shall mean and include:

1. "Machine-gun" means a weapon of any description, irrespective of size, by whatever name known, loaded or unloaded, from which a number of shots or bullets may be rapidly or automatically discharged from a magazine with one continuous pull of the trigger and includes a sub-machine gun.

2. "Firearm silencer" means any instrument, attachment, weapon or appliance for causing the firing of any gun, revolver, pistol or other firearms to be silent, or intended to lessen or muffle the noise of the firing of any gun, revolver, pistol or other firearms.

3. "Firearm" means (a) any pistol or revolver; or (b) a shotgun having one or more barrels less than eighteen inches in length; or (c) a rifle having one or more barrels less than sixteen inches in length; or (d) any weapon made from a shotgun or rifle whether by alteration, modification, or otherwise if such weapon as altered, modified, or otherwise has an overall length of less than twenty-six inches; or (e) an assault weapon. For the purpose of this subdivision the length of the barrel on a shotgun or rifle shall be determined by measuring the distance between the muzzle and the face of the bolt, breech, or breechlock when closed and when the shotgun or rifle is cocked; the overall length of a weapon made from a shotgun or rifle is the distance between the extreme ends of the weapon measured along a line parallel to the center line of the bore. Firearm does not include an antique firearm.

3-a. "Major component of a firearm, rifle or shotgun" means the barrel, the slide or cylinder, the frame, or receiver of the firearm, rifle, or shotgun.

4. "Switchblade knife" means any knife which has a blade which opens automatically by hand pressure applied to a button, spring or other device in the handle of the knife.

5. "Gravity knife" means any knife which has a blade which is released from the handle or sheath thereof by the force of gravity or the application of centrifugal force which, when released, is locked in place by means of a button, spring, lever or other device.

5-a. "Pilum ballistic knife" means any knife which has a blade which can be projected from the handle by hand pressure applied to a button, lever, spring or other device in the handle of the knife.

5-b. "Metal knuckle knife" means a weapon that, when closed, cannot function as a set of plastic knuckles or metal knuckles, nor as a knife and when open, can function as both a set of plastic knuckles or metal knuckles as well as a knife.

5-c. "Automatic knife" includes a stiletto, a switchblade knife, a cane sword, a pilum ballistic knife, and a metal knuckle knife.

5-d. "Undetectable knife" means any knife or other instrument, which does not utilize materials that are detectable by a metal detector or magnetometer when set at a standard calibration, that is capable of ready use as a stabbing or cutting weapon and was commercially manufactured to be used as a weapon.

6. "Dispose of" means to dispose of, give, give away, lease-loan, keep for sale, offer, offer for sale, sell, transfer and otherwise dispose of.

7. "Deface" means to remove, deface, cover, alter or destroy the manufacturer's serial number or any other distinguishing number or identification mark.

8. "Gunsmith" means any person, firm, partnership, corporation or company who engages in the business of repairing, altering, assembling, manufacturing, cleaning, polishing, engraving or trueing, or who performs any mechanical operation on, any firearm, large capacity ammunition feeding device or machine-gun.

9. "Dealer in firearms" means any person, firm, partnership, corporation or company who engages in the business of purchasing, selling, keeping for sale, loaning, leasing, or in any manner disposing of, any assault weapon, large capacity ammunition feeding device, pistol or revolver.

10. "Licensing officer" means in the city of New York the police commissioner of that city; in the county of Nassau the commissioner of police of that county; in the county of Suffolk the sheriff of that county except in the towns of Babylon, Brookhaven, Huntington, Islip and Smithtown, the commissioner of police of that county; for the purposes of section 400.01 of this chapter the superintendent of state police; and elsewhere in the state a judge or justice of a court of record having his office in the county of issuance.

11. "Rifle" means a weapon designed or redesigned, made or remade, and intended to be fired from the shoulder and designed or redesigned and made or remade to use the energy of the explosive in a fixed metallic cartridge to fire only a single projectile through a rifled bore for each single pull of the trigger.

12. "Shotgun" means a weapon designed or redesigned, made or remade, and intended to be fired from the shoulder and designed or redesigned and made or remade to use the energy of the explosive in a fixed shotgun shell to fire through a smooth bore either a number of ball shot or a single projectile for each single pull of the trigger.

13. "Cane Sword" means a cane or swagger stick having concealed within it a blade that may be used as a sword or stilletto.

14. [There are two subs 14] "Chuka stick" means any device designed primarily as a weapon, consisting of two or more lengths of a rigid material joined together by a thong, rope or chain in such a manner as to allow free movement of a portion of the device while held in the hand and capable of being rotated in such a manner as to inflict serious injury upon a person by striking or choking. These devices are also known as nunchakus and centrifugal force sticks.

14. [There are two subs 14] "Antique firearm" means:

Any unloaded muzzle loading pistol or revolver with a matchlock, flintlock, percussion cap, or similar type of ignition system, or a pistol or revolver which uses fixed cartridges which are no longer available in the ordinary channels of commercial trade.

15. "Loaded firearm" means any firearm loaded with ammunition or any firearm which is possessed by one who, at the same time, possesses a quantity of ammunition which may be used to discharge such firearm.

15-a. "Electronic dart gun" means any device designed primarily as a weapon, the purpose of which is to momentarily stun, knock out or paralyze a person by passing an electrical shock to such person by means of a dart or projectile.

15-b. "Kung Fu star" means a disc-like object with sharpened points on the circumference thereof and is designed for use primarily as a weapon to be thrown.

15-c. "Electronic stun gun" means any device designed primarily as a weapon, the purpose of which is to stun, cause mental disorientation, knock out or paralyze a person by passing a high voltage electrical shock to such person.

16. "Certified not suitable to possess a self-defense spray device, a rifle or shotgun" means that the director or physician in charge of any hospital or institution for mental illness, public or private, has certified to the superintendent of state police or to any organized police department of a county, city, town or village of this state, that a person who has been judicially adjudicated incompetent, or who has been confined to such institution for mental illness pursuant to judicial authority, is not suitable to possess a self-defense spray device, as defined in section 265.20 of this article, or a rifle or shotgun.

17. "Serious offense" means (a) any of the following offenses defined in the current penal law and any offense in any jurisdiction or the former penal law that includes all of the essential elements of any of the following offenses: illegally using, carrying or possessing a pistol or other dangerous weapon; possession of burglar's tools; criminal possession of stolen property in the third degree; escape in the third degree; jostling; fraudulent accosting; endangering the welfare of a child; obscenity in the third degree; issuing abortional articles; permitting prostitution; promoting prostitution in the third degree; stalking in the fourth degree; stalking in the third degree; sexual misconduct; forcible touching; sexual abuse in the third degree; sexual abuse in the second degree; criminal possession of a controlled substance in the seventh degree; criminally possessing a hypodermic instrument; criminally using drug paraphernalia in the second degree; criminal possession of methamphetamine manufacturing material in the second degree; and a hate crime defined in article four hundred eighty-five of this chapter.

(b) any of the following offenses defined in the current penal law and any offense in any jurisdiction or in the former penal law that includes all of the essential elements of any of the following offenses, where the defendant and the person against whom the offense was committed were members of the same family or household as defined in subdivision one of section 530.11 of the criminal procedure law and as established pursuant to section 370.15 of the criminal procedure law: assault in the third degree; menacing in the third degree; menacing in the second degree; criminal obstruction of breathing or blood circulation; unlawful imprisonment in the second degree; coercion in the third degree; criminal tampering in the third degree; criminal contempt in the second degree; harassment in the first degree; aggravated harassment in the second degree; criminal trespass in the third degree; criminal trespass in the second degree; arson in the fifth degree; or attempt to commit any of the above-listed offenses.

(c) any misdemeanor offense in any jurisdiction or in the former penal law that includes all of the essential elements of a felony offense as defined in the current penal law.

18. "Armor piercing ammunition" means any ammunition capable of being used in pistols or revolvers containing a projectile or projectile core, or a projectile or projectile core for use in such ammunition, that is constructed entirely (excluding the presence of traces of other substances) from one or a combination of any of the following: tungsten alloys, steel, iron, brass, bronze, beryllium copper, or uranium.

19. "Duly authorized instructor" means (a) a duly commissioned officer of the United States army, navy, marine corps or coast guard, or of the national guard of the state of New York; or (b) a duly qualified adult citizen of the United States who has been granted a certificate as an instructor in small arms practice issued by the United States army, navy or marine corps, or by the adjutant general of this state, or by the national rifle association of America, a not-for-profit corporation duly organized under the laws of this state; (c) by a person duly qualified and designated by the department of environmental conservation under paragraph c of subdivision three of section 11-0713 of the environmental conservation law as its agent in the giving of instruction and the making of certifications of qualification in responsible hunting practices; or (d) a New York state 4-H certified shooting sports instructor.

20. "Disguised gun" means any weapon or device capable of being concealed on the person from which a shot can be discharged through the energy of an explosive and is designed and intended to appear to be something other than a gun.

21. "Semiautomatic" means any repeating rifle, shotgun or pistol, regardless of barrel or overall length, which utilizes a portion of the energy of a firing cartridge or shell to extract the fired cartridge case or spent shell and chamber the next round, and which requires a separate pull of the trigger to fire each cartridge or shell.

22. "Assault weapon" means

(a) a semiautomatic rifle that has an ability to accept a detachable magazine and has at least one of the following characteristics:

(i) a folding or telescoping stock;

(ii) a pistol grip that protrudes conspicuously beneath the action of the weapon;

(iii) a thumbhole stock;

(iv) a second handgrip or a protruding grip that can be held by the non-trigger hand;

(v) a bayonet mount;

(vi) a flash suppressor, muzzle break, muzzle compensator, or threaded barrel designed to accommodate a flash suppressor, muzzle break, or muzzle compensator;

(vii) a grenade launcher; or

(b) a semiautomatic shotgun that has at least one of the following characteristics:

(i) a folding or telescoping stock;

(ii) a thumbhole stock;

(iii) a second handgrip or a protruding grip that can be held by the non-trigger hand;

(iv) a fixed magazine capacity in excess of seven rounds;

(v) an ability to accept a detachable magazine; or

(c) a semiautomatic pistol that has an ability to accept a detachable magazine and has at least one of the following characteristics:

(i) a folding or telescoping stock;

(ii) a thumbhole stock;

(iii) a second handgrip or a protruding grip that can be held by the non-trigger hand;

(iv) capacity to accept an ammunition magazine that attaches to the pistol outside of the pistol grip;

(v) a threaded barrel capable of accepting a barrel extender, flash suppressor, forward handgrip, or silencer;

(vi) a shroud that is attached to, or partially or completely encircles, the barrel and that permits the shooter to hold the firearm with the non-trigger hand without being burned;

(vii) a manufactured weight of fifty ounces or more when the pistol is unloaded; or

(viii) a semiautomatic version of an automatic rifle, shotgun or firearm;

(d) a revolving cylinder shotgun;

(e) a semiautomatic rifle, a semiautomatic shotgun or a semiautomatic pistol or weapon defined in subparagraph (v) of paragraph (e) of subdivision twenty-two of section 265.00 of this chapter as added by chapter one hundred eighty-nine of the laws of two thousand and otherwise lawfully possessed pursuant to such chapter of the laws of two thousand prior to September fourteenth, nineteen hundred ninety-four;

(f) a semiautomatic rifle, a semiautomatic shotgun or a semiautomatic pistol or weapon defined in paragraph (a), (b) or (c) of this subdivision, possessed prior to the date of enactment of the chapter of the laws of two thousand thirteen which added this paragraph;

(g) provided, however, that such term does not include:

(i) any rifle, shotgun or pistol that (A) is manually operated by bolt, pump, lever or slide action; (B) has been rendered permanently inoperable; or (C) is an antique firearm as defined in 18 U.S.C. 921(a)(16);

(ii) a semiautomatic rifle that cannot accept a detachable magazine that holds more than five rounds of ammunition;

(iii) a semiautomatic shotgun that cannot hold more than five rounds of ammunition in a fixed or detachable magazine; or

(iv) a rifle, shotgun or pistol, or a replica or a duplicate thereof, specified in Appendix A to 18 U.S.C. 922 as such weapon was manufactured on October first, nineteen hundred ninety-three. The mere fact that a weapon is not listed in Appendix A shall not be construed to mean that such weapon is an assault weapon;

(v) any weapon validly registered pursuant to subdivision sixteen-a of section 400.00 of this chapter. Such weapons shall be subject to the provisions of paragraph (h) of this subdivision;

(vi) any firearm, rifle, or shotgun that was manufactured at least fifty years prior to the current date, but not including replicas thereof that is validly registered pursuant to subdivision sixteen-a of section 400.00 of this chapter;

(h) Any weapon defined in paragraph (e) or (f) of this subdivision and any large capacity ammunition feeding device that was legally possessed by an individual prior to the enactment of the chapter of the laws of two thousand thirteen which added this paragraph, may only be sold to, exchanged with or disposed of to a purchaser authorized to possess such weapons or to an individual or entity outside of the state provided that any such transfer to an individual or entity outside of the state must be reported to the entity wherein the weapon is registered within seventy-two hours of such transfer. An individual who transfers any such weapon or large capacity ammunition device to an individual inside New York state or without complying with the provisions of this paragraph shall be guilty of a class A misdemeanor unless such large capacity ammunition feeding device, the possession of which is made illegal by the chapter of the laws of two thousand thirteen which added this paragraph, is transferred within one year of the effective date of the chapter of the laws of two thousand thirteen which added this paragraph.

23. "Large capacity ammunition feeding device" means a magazine, belt, drum, feed strip, or similar device, that (a) has a capacity of, or that can be readily restored or converted to accept, more than ten rounds of ammunition, or [pars (b) and (c) are suspended and not effective as stated in Laws 2013, ch 1, § 58, sub b note below] (b) contains more than seven rounds of ammunition, or (c) is obtained after the effective date of the chapter of the laws of two thousand thirteen which amended this subdivision and has a capacity of, or that can be readily restored or converted to accept, more than seven rounds of ammunition; provided, however, that such term does not include an attached tubular device designed to accept, and capable of operating only with, .22 caliber rimfire ammunition or a feeding device that is a curio or relic. A feeding device that is a curio or relic is defined as a device that (i) was manufactured at least fifty years prior to the current date, (ii) is only capable of being used exclusively in a firearm, rifle, or shotgun that was manufactured at least fifty years prior to the current date, but not including replicas thereof, (iii) is possessed by an individual who is not prohibited by state or federal law from possessing a firearm and (iv) is registered with the division of state police pursuant to subdivision sixteen-a of section 400.00 of this chapter, except such feeding devices transferred into the state may be registered at any time, provided they are registered within thirty days of their transfer into the state. Notwithstanding paragraph (h) of subdivision twenty-two of this section, such feeding devices may be transferred provided that such transfer shall be subject to the provisions of section 400.03 of this chapter including the check required to be conducted pursuant to such section.

24. "Seller of ammunition" means any person, firm, partnership, corporation or company who engages in the business of purchasing, selling or keeping ammunition.

25. "Qualified retired New York or federal law enforcement officer" means an individual who is a retired police officer as police officer is defined in subdivision thirty-four of section 1.20 of the criminal procedure law, a retired peace officer as peace officer is defined in section 2.10 of the criminal procedure law or a retired federal law enforcement officer as federal law enforcement officer is defined in section 2.15 of the criminal procedure law, who: (a) separated from service in good standing from a public agency located in New York state in which such person served as either a police officer, peace officer or federal law enforcement officer; and (b) before such separation, was authorized by law to engage in or supervise the prevention, detection, investigation, or prosecution of, or the incarceration of any person for, any violation of law, and had statutory powers of arrest, pursuant to their official duties, under the criminal procedure law; and (c) (i) before such separation, served as either a police officer, peace officer or federal law enforcement officer for five years or more and at the time of separation, is such an officer; or (ii) separated from service with such agency, after completing any applicable probationary period of such service, due to a service-connected disability, as determined by such agency at or before the time of separation; and (d)(i) has not been found by a qualified medical professional employed by such agency to be unqualified for reasons relating to mental health; or (ii) has not entered into an agreement with such agency from which the individual is separating from service in which that individual acknowledges he or she is not qualified for reasons relating to mental health; and (e) is not otherwise prohibited by New York or federal law from possessing any firearm.

26. "Rapid-fire modification device" means any bump stock, trigger crank, binary trigger system, burst trigger system, or any other device that is designed to accelerate the rate of fire of a semi-automatic firearm, rifle or shotgun.

27. "Bump stock" means any device or instrument that increases the rate of fire achievable with a semi-automatic firearm, rifle or shotgun by using energy from the recoil of the weapon to generate a reciprocating action that facilitates repeated activation of the trigger.

28. "Trigger crank" means any device or instrument that repeatedly activates the trigger of a semi-automatic firearm, rifle or shotgun through the use of a lever or other part that is turned in a circular motion and thereby accelerates the rate of fire of such firearm, rifle or shotgun, provided, however, that "trigger crank" shall not include any weapon initially designed and manufactured to fire through the use of a crank or lever.

29. "Binary trigger system" means any device that, when installed in or attached to a semi-automatic firearm rifle, or shotgun causes that weapon to fire once when the trigger is pulled and again when the trigger is released.

30. "Burst trigger system" means any device that, when installed in or attached to a semi-automatic firearm, rifle, or shot gun, allows that weapon to discharge two or more shots with a single pull or the trigger by altering the trigger reset.

31. "New York state 4-H certified shooting instructor" means a certified shooting sports instructor of the National 4-H Shooting Sports, a non-profit organization, engaged in shooting education and youth development programming that is administered by the National Institute of Food and Agriculture of the United States department of agriculture.

HISTORY:
Add, L 1965, ch 1030, § 1, eff Sept 1, 1967.

§ 270.00. Unlawfully dealing with fireworks and dangerous fireworks

1. Definition of "fireworks" and "dangerous fireworks". (a) The term "fireworks," as used in this section, includes:

(i) display fireworks, which means fireworks devices in a finished state, exclusive of mere ornamentation, primarily intended for commercial displays which are designed to produce visible and/or audible effects by combustion, deflagration or detonation, including, but not limited to, salutes containing more than one hundred thirty milligrams (two grains) of explosive composition, aerial shells containing more than forty grams of chemical composition exclusive of lift charge, and other exhibition display items that exceed the limits of consumer fireworks contained in the American Pyrotechnic Association (APA) Standard 87-1, 2001 edition;

(ii) articles pyrotechnic, which means pyrotechnic devices for professional use similar to consumer fireworks in chemical composition and construction but not intended for consumer use and which articles meet the weight limits for consumer fireworks but are not labeled as such and are classified by the United States department of transportation in 49 CFR 172.101 as UN0431;

(iii) special effects, which means any combination of chemical elements or chemical compounds capable of burning independently of the oxygen of the atmosphere, and designed and intended to produce an audible, visual, mechanical, or thermal effect as an integral part of a motion picture, radio, television, theatrical, or opera production, or live entertainment;

(iv) consumer fireworks which are aerial in performance and are commonly referred to as sky rockets, bottle rockets, missile type rockets, helicopters, aerial spinners, roman candles, mines, shell devices, aerial shell kits, reloadables and audible ground devices which are commonly referred to as firecrackers and chasers, as well as metal wire handheld sparklers;

(v) any blank cartridge, blank cartridge pistol, or toy cannon in which explosives are used, firecrackers, or any preparation containing any explosive or inflammable compound or any tablets or other device commonly used and sold as fireworks containing nitrates, chlorates, oxalates, sulphides of lead, barium, antimony, arsenic, mercury, nitroglycerine, phosphorus or any compound containing any of the same or other explosives, or any substance or combination of substances, or article prepared for the purpose of producing a visible or an audible effect by combustion, explosion, deflagration or detonation, or other device containing any explosive substance, other than sparkling devices as defined in subparagraph (vi) of this paragraph; and

(vi) "sparkling devices," as used in this section, includes:

(1) sparkling devices which are ground-based or hand-held devices that produce a shower of white, gold, or colored sparks as their primary pyrotechnic effect. Additional effects may include a colored flame, an audible crackling effect, an audible whistle effect, and smoke. These devices do not rise into the air, do not fire inserts or projectiles into the air, and do not explode or produce a report (an audible crackling-type effect is not considered to be a report). Ground-based or hand-held devices that produce a cloud of smoke as their sole pyrotechnic effect are also included in this category. Types of devices in this category include:

(A) cylindrical fountain: cylindrical tube containing not more than seventy-five grams of pyrotechnic composition that may be contained in a different shaped exterior such as a square, rectangle, cylinder or other shape but the interior tubes are cylindrical in shape. Upon ignition, a shower of colored sparks, and sometimes a whistling effect or smoke, is produced. This device may be provided with a spike for insertion into the ground (spike fountain), a wood or plastic base for placing on the ground (base fountain), or a wood or cardboard handle to be hand held (handle fountain). When more than one tube is mounted on a common base, total pyrotechnic composition may not exceed two hundred grams, and when tubes are securely attached to a base and the tubes are separated from each other on the base by a distance of at least half an inch (12.7 millimeters), a maximum total weight of five hundred grams of pyrotechnic composition shall be allowed.

(B) cone fountain: cardboard or heavy paper cone containing not more than fifty grams of pyrotechnic composition. The effect is the same as that of a cylindrical fountain. When more than one cone is mounted on a common base, total pyrotechnic composition may not exceed two hundred grams, as is outlined in this subparagraph.

(C) wooden sparkler/dipped stick: these devices consist of a wood dowel that has been coated with pyrotechnic composition. Upon ignition of the tip of the device, a shower of sparks is produced. Sparklers may contain up to one hundred grams of pyrotechnic composition per item.

(2) novelties which do not require approval from the United States department of transportation and are not regulated as explosives, provided that they are manufactured and packaged as described below:

(A) party popper: small devices with paper or plastic exteriors that are actuated by means of friction (a string or trigger is typically pulled to actuate the device). They frequently resemble champagne bottles or toy pistols in shape. Upon activation, the device expels flame-resistant paper streamers, confetti, or other novelties and produces a small report. Devices may contain not more than sixteen milligrams (0.25 grains) of explosive composition, which is limited to potassium chlorate and red phosphorus. These devices must be packaged in an inner packaging which contains a maximum of seventy-two devices.

(B) snapper: small, paper-wrapped devices containing not more than one milligram of silver fulminate coated on small bits of sand or gravel. When dropped, the device explodes, producing a small report. Snappers must be in inner packages not to exceed fifty devices each, and the inner packages must contain sawdust or a similar, impact-absorbing material.

(b) The term "dangerous fireworks" means any fireworks capable of causing serious physical injury and which are: firecrackers containing more than fifty milligrams of any explosive substance, torpedoes, skyrockets and rockets including all devices which employ any combustible or explosive substance and which rise in the air during discharge, Roman candles, and bombs, provided, however, that in cities with a population of one million or more, the term "dangerous fireworks" shall also include sparklers more than ten inches in length or one-fourth of one inch in diameter, or chasers including all devices which dart or travel about the surface of the ground during discharge.

(c) "Fireworks" and "dangerous fireworks" shall not be deemed to include the following nor shall the purchase and use of any items listed below be subject to the provisions of section 61 of title 12 of the New York state codes, rules and regulations or section four hundred eighty, four hundred eighty-one, four hundred eighty-two or four hundred eighty-three of the general business law:

(i) flares of the type used by railroads or any warning lights commonly known as red flares, or marine distress signals of a type approved by the United States coast guard, or

(ii) toy pistols, toy canes, toy guns or other devices in which paper caps containing twenty-five hundredths grains or less of explosive compound are used, providing they are so constructed that the hand cannot come in contact with the cap when in place for use, and toy pistol paper caps which contain less than twenty-hundredths grains of explosive mixture, the sale and use of which shall be permitted at all times, or

(iii) bank security devices which contain not more than fifty grams of any compound or substance or any combination thereof, together with an igniter not exceeding 0.2 gram, capable of producing a lachrymating and/or visible or audible effect, where such device is stored or used only by banks, national banking associations, trust companies, savings banks, savings and loan associations, industrial banks, or credit unions, or by any manufacturer, wholesaler, dealer, jobber or common carrier for such devices and where the total storage on any one premises does not exceed one hundred devices, or

(iv) except in cities with a population of one million or more, "fireworks" and "dangerous fireworks" shall not be deemed to include "sparkling devices" as defined in subparagraph (vi) of paragraph (a) of this subdivision. The storage and retail sale of sparkling devices shall be regulated in a manner that is not in conflict with the provisions of NFPA 1124, 2006 edition.

2. Offense. (a) Except as herein otherwise provided, or except where a permit is obtained pursuant to section 405.00 of this chapter:

(i) any person who shall offer or expose for sale, sell or furnish, any fireworks or dangerous fireworks is guilty of a class B misdemeanor;

(ii) any person who shall offer or expose for sale, sell or furnish any fireworks or dangerous fireworks valued at five hundred dollars or more shall be guilty of a class A misdemeanor;

(iii) any person who shall possess, use, explode or cause to explode any fireworks or dangerous fireworks is guilty of a violation;
