An employee who had suffered for years from a static heart condition developed acute cardiac symptoms after struggling with the tail gate of a truck in which he was delivering merchandise. He died within a month. The episode of the truck constituted an accident and was causally related to his death. Feenberg v Cit Ro Mfg. Co., 10 A.D.2d 741, 198 N.Y.S.2d 631, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11179 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

The evidence was considered sufficient to show a causal relationship between death of decedent, who had a pre-existing heart condition, on the night following an extra hard day of work as routeman on a laundry truck, the day in question having been the busiest day of the week for him including delivery of laundry to a large chemical factory and reloading the truck again for the next day's deliveries with 65 to 70 bundles of clothes weighing about 30 pounds apiece, there being some medical testimony to support the conclusion that the heart attack resulted from the extra heavy work burden. Domash v Standard Coat, Apron & Linen Service, 11 A.D.2d 575, 201 N.Y.S.2d 142, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9925 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), aff'd, 9 N.Y.2d 889, 216 N.Y.S.2d 702, 175 N.E.2d 831, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1302 (N.Y. 1961).

Death was clearly compensable where an employee employed as a truck driver and delivery man suffered a coronary occlusion and died immediately after carrying cases of canned goods and three 100 pound bags of sugar from a truck down a flight of eight steps to make a delivery. Geoghan v Francis Leggett Premier Food, 12 A.D.2d 669, 207 N.Y.S.2d 688, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6727 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Where a routeman delivering dairy products started work an hour ahead of the usual time on the day before a holiday, because many more packages had to be delivered than usual, and experienced pain across his chest while lifting a 71 pound crate of cheese, which persisted the following day until he was hospitalized and diagnosed as suffering from a myocardial infarction, the evidence was sufficient to sustain a finding of causal relationship between his work and the infarction. Deutsch v H. & S. Dairy Products, Inc., 12 A.D.2d 845, 209 N.Y.S.2d 570, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13203 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

The evidence was sufficient to show causal relationship between a heart attack suffered by claimant and his employment where it appeared that on the day in question he was delivering and picking up bundles of laundry weighing from 40 to 50 pounds, it was a hot day, the heater of the truck with which he was working had become stuck and could not be turned off, and that, after continuing to work for awhile notwithstanding pains in his chest, he finally collapsed and was taken to a hospital. Greenberg v Standard Overall Co., 13 A.D.2d 565, 212 N.Y.S.2d 1, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12193 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

A finding that decedent's fatal coronary occlusion was attributable to his work activities was based on sufficient evidence where it appeared that his work day commenced at 8:00 a.m., the work consisted of home delivery of cases of beverages weighing about 40 pounds apiece and unloading empty cases on return of the truck to the warehouse, he complained of a pain in the back at about 3:00 p.m. and appeared pale and perspiring while unloading empty cases at about 5:00 p.m. Friedman v Famous Beverages, Inc., 16 A.D.2d 995, 229 N.Y.S.2d 302, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9070 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

With respect to death of a delivery man from heart attack immediately following alleged transfer of four 50 pound cartons from one truck to another, although there was no direct evidence that anyone saw decedent actually transfer the cartons an award of death benefits could be sustained on the basis of evidence that decedent frequently performed such work, was instructed to do so shortly prior to his death, and reported that he had "done it," shortly prior to his death. Wilkenfeld v Interstate Office Supply Co., 18 A.D.2d 740, 235 N.Y.S.2d 480, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6176 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Award held proper where decedent collapsed from acute heart failure immediately after trying to negotiate bulky carton through small doorway after carrying it on his shoulder from parking lot, where such collapse was from cumulative effect of exertion on that day beginning at 4 or 5 o'clock in the morning when decedent, a route salesman for wholesale bakers, began to pack bakery products to an aggregate of 250 pounds in weight into individual containers which he then loaded in to truck from which he made deliveries at some 30 stops on his assigned route, and his death occurred 3 days later when he returned to work for a brief time packaging his orders and loading the truck when he collapsed and died. Mandelblatt v Gold Star Baking Corp., 22 A.D.2d 966, 254 N.Y.S.2d 432, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2585 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964), aff'd, 16 N.Y.2d 974, 265 N.Y.S.2d 289, 212 N.E.2d 775, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1048 (N.Y. 1965).

Where claimant's decedent collapsed and died while pushing a hand truck loaded with approximately 300 pounds of fish and the record indicated that he had made approximately from 7 to 10 similar deliveries in the half hour prior to his death, his work also entailing lifting and handling heavy boxes, the court could not say that the board could not find this work to be strenuous and arduous. And where there was medical testimony that this effort was causally related to such death there was sufficient evidence on which the board could determine that an industrial accident was involved. Drews v Blue Ribbon Fish Co., 23 A.D.2d 927, 258 N.Y.S.2d 868, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4296 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

211. —Digging, excavating or shoveling

A laborer who worked at an excavation shoveling dirt into a truck and falls dead from acute dilation of the heart sustains an accidental injury under this section. Drake v Tillingham-Moyer Co., 255 A.D. 730, 6 N.Y.S.2d 819, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4936 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938).

Where claimant's intestate, a highway superintendent, died immediately after having shoveled mire away from the wheels of truck but where he had an incurable heart condition for five years prior to the incident, the evidence did not show that an accident in the form of severe or unusual strain, or of a catastrophic or extraordinary occurrence. Beaver v Collins, 263 A.D. 1033, 33 N.Y.S.2d 413, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7965 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

There is sufficient evidence of an accidental injury to sustain an award where the assistant janitor in an apartment house after throwing about a dozen shovels full of coal into the furnace, each weighing between 35 and 40 pounds, suffered a brain hemorrhage where there is medical testimony that the rupture of a blood vessel in claimant's brain was due to the extreme exertion he was engaged in. Bohm v L. R. S. & B. Realty Co., 264 A.D. 962, 37 N.Y.S.2d 173, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5553 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942), aff'd, 289 N.Y. 808, 47 N.E.2d 52, 289 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 808, 1943 N.Y. LEXIS 1204 (N.Y. 1943).

A laborer who works all day with a pick and shovel in a crouched and awkward position digging in an unfinished cellar requiring him to use extra exertion and who suffers a cerebral hemorrhage sustains an accidental injury under this section. Sepos v Van Epps Const. Co., 265 A.D. 1025, 38 N.Y.S.2d 939, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6673 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943).

Decedent suffering from existing hypertension, high blood pressure and cerebral arteriosclerosis, met his death as a result of an "accident" when while working as a shovel laborer digging a trench he suffered a cerebral hemorrhage. Claimant's regular work was common labor. Brancato v John W. Cowper Co., 282 A.D. 752, 121 N.Y.S.2d 813, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4875 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

A building janitor was found dead from a coronary occlusion in the basement of his building. There was no evidence of his activities prior to his death but there was evidence that about the time of his death, the decedent customarily stoked his furnace and that this was arduous labor. Award affirmed. Waskewicz v Diamond, 1 A.D.2d 861, 149 N.Y.S.2d 29, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6301 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Death award was proper where decedent's widow introduced hearsay testimony that decedent, while shoveling coal, felt a sharp pain, tried to get to another part of the plant but then fainted and minutes later was found lying on the floor. Even though decedent's work at the time of the accident was usual it could be a contributing or aggravating factor in his death. Hannes v U. S. Corrugated Fibre Box Co., 2 A.D.2d 615, 151 N.Y.S.2d 808, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5459 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Decedent, who had pre-existing heart disease was employed by country club on the golf course maintenance group. While pitching forkfuls of damp leaves onto a truck, which work was done in a short period of time, decedent collapsed and died. Such work was somewhat unusual as regarding his ordinary duties. Claimant's medical experts testified, not that any exertion would have been too much for decedent, but that specific work constituted overexertion. Finding of accident sustained. Gibalski v Elmira Country Club, 8 A.D.2d 883, 187 N.Y.S.2d 159, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8291 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Death of a night watchman as a result of an unwitnessed heart attack was compensable where the board found that, immediately prior to his death, the decedent had shoveled 150 to 200 pounds of coal to get up steam and moved a water pump weighing about 80 lbs. Oksman v Henry Quist Constr. Co., 9 A.D.2d 972, 193 N.Y.S.2d 718, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5658 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain a finding of the board that a coronary thrombosis and myocardial infarction were attributable to use of "an excessive amount of strength" by claimant in attempting to dislodge a pick which had stuck in frozen ground in which he was digging. Deutsch v Garey, 12 A.D.2d 830, 209 N.Y.S.2d 420, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13375 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Substantial evidence supported award of death benefits where decedent who had a history of a previous dissecting aneurysm and died of same complaint after working at shoveling sand into concrete mixer since a prior underlying physical condition does not preclude an award where there is substantial evidence that the work activities impinged on said condition. Dodson v Frank Vanecek & Son, 24 A.D.2d 787, 263 N.Y.S.2d 774, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3222 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Substantial evidence supported finding of Workers' Compensation Board that claimant town laborer suffered accidental injury arising out of and in course of employment where record showed that while raking and shoveling black top and operating roller at work, claimant experienced chest and arm pain, nausea and headaches, that he continued to experience discomfort during ensuing weekend, and that on Sunday of that weekend he was diagnosed as having suffered myocardial infarction, and claimant's physician testified that although 2-day delay between his work activity and apparent time of infarction was unusual, he was of opinion that claimant's work experience precipitated infarction. Hannold v Town of Fallsburg, 190 A.D.2d 914, 593 N.Y.S.2d 379, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1081 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1993).

212. —Emotional stress, generally

Undue anxiety, strain, and mental stress from work are frequently more devastating than a mere physical injury, and a compensation award may be sustained on the basis of mental strain arising in the course of, and out of, the employment and resulting in death from heart attack, without any physical impact. Klimas v Trans Caribbean Airways, Inc., 10 N.Y.2d 209, 219 N.Y.S.2d 14, 176 N.E.2d 714, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1089 (N.Y. 1961), vacated, Incres S.S. Co. v International Maritime Workers Union, 372 U.S. 24, 83 S. Ct. 611, 9 L. Ed. 2d 557, 1963 U.S. LEXIS 2396 (U.S. 1963).

A factory superintendent who suffered a fatal cerebral hemorrhage at home as the result of confusion, nervousness and concern for the property of his employer and for his own safety as the result of an attempt to salvage his employer's property during a flood suffers an accidental injury. Roberts v Kennedy Valve Mfg. Co., 274 A.D. 866, 82 N.Y.S.2d 195, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3729 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

There was ample evidence to sustain disability and death awards where it was shown that decedent, aged 39, was employed in conjunction with her husband as an apartment house superintendent when part of the coping along the roof of the building fell into the street, causing considerable commotion, whereupon deceased ran into the street and hurried around the area warning persons to stay away, becoming so alarmed and nervous in the process that she collapsed and was taken to a hospital, where her condition was diagnosed as hemiplegia, though she had no history of prior heart trouble, and died shortly thereafter following complications. Micallef v Harry Krischer-Blanner Realty Co., 10 A.D.2d 743, 197 N.Y.S.2d 545, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11183 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

The disability claim of a hotel elevator operator who continued to operate his elevator for two or three hours while the building was filled with smoke as the result of a fire, "under conditions of great tenseness and danger to his life," could properly be allowed on the basis of medical testimony that the hazards involved caused a psychic trauma resulting in massive hemorrhage from an ulcer. Schwartz v Hampton House Management Corp., 14 A.D.2d 936, 221 N.Y.S.2d 286, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7870 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

A sudden emotional experience resulting in physical disability can constitute an "accident" in course of employment, where fright and impulsive reactions are involved. Antonini v Progressive Electronics, 15 A.D.2d 842, 224 N.Y.S.2d 481, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11413 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

A heart attack sustained by a 32 year old truck driver was held to have resulted from an "accident" in course of employment where it followed fright sustained when he was dozing, with a co-employee driving the truck, and an electrical fire started under the dashboard of the truck causing flames, sparks and considerable smoke, in course of which claimant woke up and attempted to jump from the truck while it was traveling at 50 miles per hour, did not jump because he could not get the door open, then helped to extinguish the fire, and shortly thereafter sustained pains in his chest and difficulty in breathing. Antonini v Progressive Electronics, 15 A.D.2d 842, 224 N.Y.S.2d 481, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11413 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

The evidence was insufficient to sustain findings of the Board that death of the cantor of a synagogue from acute myocardial infarction, was caused by tension and emotional stress in course of his employment where it merely appeared that, prior to the heart attack, he had been conducting the choir for about two hours in preparation for a relgious service under strong lights and in an atmosphere somewhat oppressive because of absence of the usual air conditioning, and had some slight exchange of words with a member of the choir at one stage of the rehearsal. Gordon v Temple Beth El, 18 A.D.2d 855, 236 N.Y.S.2d 101, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4871 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963), aff'd, 14 N.Y.2d 742, 250 N.Y.S.2d 429, 199 N.E.2d 508, 1964 N.Y. LEXIS 1163 (N.Y. 1964).

Death of a night watchman on a construction site caused by cardiac hypertrophy could be found to be due to excessive anxiety and strain in course of his employment where it occurred on a very cold and blustery night during which better than 12 inches of snow fell and it appeared that he was found dead in the snow next morning after seeking police assistance because of presence of suspected marauders on the premises. Albarella v Glick Development, Inc., 19 A.D.2d 920, 244 N.Y.S.2d 107, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2969 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

While record in case where waiter suffered heart attack after a customer collapsed and died was sufficient to sustain an award of death benefits, the award could not be predicated upon board's finding of "emotional experience" without something more definitive than "weakness and inability to work" which did not meet the test of an emotional reaction sufficient to sustain award of death benefits. Nutik v Bienstock & Pollack, Inc., 24 A.D.2d 783, 263 N.Y.S.2d 740, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3215 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

A decision of the Workers' Compensation Board that claimant's decedent work related events were of a sufficient stressful nature to have directly precipitated the cardiovascular arrest from which he died would be upheld where there was substantial evidence to support the findings on the record which revealed that defendant had two previous heart attacks, he left early in the morning to travel to make a presentation and that he was concerned with the plan he was to present as he disagreed with it. Schwartz v Howard, Needles, Tannen & Bergendorf, 93 A.D.2d 930, 462 N.Y.S.2d 322, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17823 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1983).

Substantial evidence supported determination of Workers' Compensation Board that claimant, who was fired as correction officer after having physical confrontation with inmate who had threatened to sodomize his son (who was then incarcerated at facility where claimant worked), suffered from adjustment disorder with anxiety and depression which arose out of and in course of his employment, despite evidence that claimant had longstanding history of alcohol abuse and depression, as well as marital problems, where treating psychiatrist testified that claimant's adjustment disorder developed because he was angry, depressed and guilt-ridden about being his son's jailer and that neither claimant's alcohol abuse nor his marital problems were primary cause of his disability, and another psychiatrist testified that being his son's jailer contributed to claimant's depression and drinking, pointing out that prior to incident in question claimant had managed to function adequately despite his other problems. Beames v Warren County Sheriff's Dep't, 190 A.D.2d 877, 593 N.Y.S.2d 127, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 915 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1993).

213. —Emotional stress not found

Where a former 911 operator filed a claim for workers' compensation benefits alleging that work-related stress caused her to suffer depression and ultimately leave her job, and where the Workers' Compensation Board determined that the worker did not sustain an accidental work-related injury because the stress she was exposed to as a result of the rotating-shift schedule was not more than that normally encountered in the workplace, the Board's determination is supported by substantial evidence and is therefore binding on the courts. Leggio v Suffolk County Police Dep't, 96 N.Y.2d 846, 729 N.Y.S.2d 664, 754 N.E.2d 766, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 1498 (N.Y. 2001).

Evidence was insufficient to sustain an award in favor of a widow where the decedent died of a fatal heart attack while standing in line to make a bank deposit for his employer. Decedent was performing his usual duties and hospital records indicated that he had attacks of precardial pain for three months immediately preceding the fatal attack and that such attacks were usually brought on by tenseness and had no relation to physical exertion. Ledwith v Henry Birgel & Sons, Inc., 3 A.D.2d

Decedent, wardrobe mistress in a cafe, suffered a ruptured blood vessel in her brain. She had sewed a zipper in a costume of a showgirl in a hurry and under alleged tense circumstances and thereafter blacked out. She was totally disabled until her death. But there was no evidence of unusual physical exertion. And similar occurrences were common. So, the evidence did not establish an accident. Claim dismissed. Tillander v Latin Quarter Cafe, Inc., 9 A.D.2d 590, 189 N.Y.S.2d 239, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7457 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Findings of the Board in a heart case were inadequate and were based upon insufficient evidence to indicate that decedent, a deputy sheriff, had been undergoing extra exertion or more excitement than anyone else present at an accident scene when he collapsed and died of a heart attack while directing traffic. Woodworth v County of Onondaga-Sheriff's Dep't, 18 A.D.2d 729, 235 N.Y.S.2d 69, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6579 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Decedent's job activities did not require greater exertion than the ordinary wear and tear of life, although his duties as general office manager entailed considerable responsibility and his job entailed nervous tension because a superior was an "exacting man" and he had to climb a steep flight of 18 steps twice or more a day to get to his office, hence the evidence was insufficient to sustain an award of death benefits for death by heart attack. Maher v Agawan Aircraft Products, 22 A.D.2d 742, 253 N.Y.S.2d 395, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2942 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964), aff'd, 18 N.Y.2d 807, 275 N.Y.S.2d 388, 221 N.E.2d 917, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 1049 (N.Y. 1966).

The board's determination that no "accident" within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Law occurred is supportable by substantial evidence and must be sustained where the decedent expired from coronary arteriosclerosis and congenital hypoplasia allegedly arising from emotional stress over anticipation of an experimental meeting and dilemma over important materials from inventory stockpile as the tension to which decedent was subjected falls visibly short of the standard that the emotional strain be greater than that no which all workers are occasionally subjected without untoward result and the strain involved no more stress and strain than that experienced in the ordinary wear and tear of life. Mulholland v New York State Dep't of Public Works, 34 A.D.2d 1083, 312 N.Y.S.2d 687, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4268 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970), overruled, Rackley v County of Rensselaer, 141 A.D.2d 232, 535 N.Y.S.2d 137, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10905 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

The board's finding was supportable that an injury caused by emotional stress or strain may be found to be accidental within the purview of the Workmen's Compensation Law; its determination that the experience of the decedent imposed upon him great emotional stress and strain, far in excess of the usual wear and tear of life, that it resulted almost immediately in a ventricular fibrillation culminating in his demise, and that the work activity and fatal fibrillation constituted an accidental injury within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Law. Quill v Transport Workers Union, 35 A.D.2d 860, 315 N.Y.S.2d 254, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3585 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970), app. denied, 28 N.Y.2d 482, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 1728 (N.Y. 1971).

In proceeding for workmen's compensation death benefits, the evidence established that the emotional stress and strain to which the decedent, a 64-year-old license clerk whose clerical duties required him to work behind a counter reviewing automobile registrations and renewals, was subjected on the day he suffered heart attack was outside the regular routine of his clerical job and exceeded ordinary stress and strain to a degree that it went beyond a transient emotional experience and, in fact, constituted an industrial accident. Goldstone v New York State Dep't of Motor Vehicles, 57 A.D.2d 973, 394 N.Y.S.2d 99, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12263 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

A decision of the Workers' Compensation Board that the problems encountered by claimant on the day he suffered his heart attack during work, created a situation of emotional tension which was too stressful for claimant at that time, thereby precipitating an acute myocardial infarction would be reversed where there was nothing in the record demonstrating that claimant experienced extreme unusual stress, claimant described his work on that morning as routine duties and the employer produced a doctor who testified that claimant's condition was not work related but due to obesity, hypertension, and smoking. Gates v McBride Transp., Inc., 93 A.D.2d 938, 462 N.Y.S.2d 309, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17832 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), rev'd, 60 N.Y.2d 670, 468 N.Y.S.2d 101, 455 N.E.2d 660, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 3373 (N.Y. 1983).

Evidence supported finding by Workers' Compensation Board that stress created by claimant's job transfer was no more than that normally encountered in work environment, and thus was not compensable, where claimant, who was employed as showroom assistant for fabric and wall covering jobber, allegedly developed acute depression as result of his transfer from back showroom of employer to front showroom, where he had to deal with less knowledgeable retail customers. Block v Stroheim & Romann, 203 A.D.2d 833, 611 N.Y.S.2d 355, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4436 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 84 N.Y.2d 804, 617 N.Y.S.2d 138, 641 N.E.2d 159, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 2715 (N.Y. 1994).

Substantial evidence supported the Workers' Compensation Board's finding that the claimant did not suffer an accidental injury arising out of and in the course of her employment because the claimant's work-related stress that led to her anxiety, post-traumatic stress disorder, and depression did not exceed that which could be expected by a supervisor in a normal work environment. Matter of Cuva v State Ins. Fund, 144 A.D.3d 1362, 41 N.Y.S.3d 324, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7590 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2016).

214. —Severe emotional stress

The board's determination that claimant's coronary was causally related to her employment was supported by substantial evidence in all respects where there was medical evidence that claimant was subjected to severe emotional and psychic stress while employed by her employer and where the board also found that the stress claimant underwent culminated in a disabling coronary condition which constituted an accidental injury arising out of the course of her employment. Mekeel v Chester Nat'l Bank, 85 A.D.2d 806, 445 N.Y.S.2d 642, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16622 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981), app. denied, 56 N.Y.2d 507, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 5414 (N.Y. 1982).

Evidence supported board's decision that claimant did not suffer work-related accident or occupational disease and accordingly was not entitled to receive workers' compensation benefits, where she had significant history of childhood physical, sexual and emotional abuse, and experts disagreed as to what event or events (work-related or otherwise) caused her to fail to properly perform her work-related functions. Gullo v Southern Erie Clinical Servs., 258 A.D.2d 689, 687 N.Y.S.2d 440, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 957 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

In absence of contrary testimony, Workers' Compensation Board could not reject testimony of claimant's expert and fashion expert opinion of its own to conclude that claimant's stroke was not caused by work-related stress, but board could rule against claimant on causal relationship issue by finding that stress actually experienced at work was less that that assumed by his expert. Loftus v New York News, 279 A.D.2d 657, 719 N.Y.S.2d 314, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 62 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

Workers' compensation board properly denied a worker's claim for workers' compensation benefits; the evidence did not support the worker's claim that she sustained a psychiatric disability as a result of sexual harassment by a co-worker, and therefore did not sustain an accidental injury in the course of her employment as defined by N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 2. Curley v Allstate Ins. Co., 2 A.D.3d 995, 768 N.Y.S.2d 400, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13140 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

215. —Preexisting condition

The Board could properly disallow a claim for death benefits where proof showed that employee, while at work as a milk route salesman, died of a coronary thrombosis. The employee had put in long hours of labor and there was proof of mental and physical stress occasioned by circumstances attending the termination of a strike and medical proof was conflicting. Wade v Woodside Farms, Inc., 2 A.D.2d 625, 151 N.Y.S.2d 761, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5476 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Death of claimant's husband from heart attack was due to serious preexisting heart condition and was unrelated to his employment, and thus claimant was not entitled to workers' compensation benefits, where decedent had been previously diagnosed as suffering from congestive heart failure, his consulting cardiologist reported that he had short life expectancy and could die suddenly within next 2 months, his personal physician agreed and added that death could have occurred regardless of stress encountered by decedent during his employment, and another cardiologist opined that death resulted from advanced cardiomyopathy and ischemic heart disease, "most likely" sudden arrhythmia due to cardiomyopathy due to ischemia, and that, short of mental stress so severe as to have rendered decedent unable to perform his job (which was not shown), there was no causal connection between decedent's job stress and heart attack suffered at home on Saturday morning. Daniels v Wallach's Mens Store, 263 A.D.2d 909, 694 N.Y.S.2d 800, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8459 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

216. —Personnel decisions not sufficient

Workers' Compensation Board properly ruled that claimant did not sustain compensable injury for work-related stress stemming from her demotion and corresponding reassignment at her place of employment where she conceded that she could be "bumped back by the incumbent" to her former position, and although employer handled her demotion poorly, its actions did not rise to level of bad faith. Miles v State Ins. Fund, 267 A.D.2d 511, 698 N.Y.S.2d 561, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12483 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Workers' compensation board properly denied a worker's claim for workers' compensation benefits; the evidence supported a finding that the workers' psychiatric injury was a consequence of a lawful personnel decision involving the worker, and therefore the claim was barred by N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 2(7). Aubel v Price Chopper, 307 A.D.2d 691, 762 N.Y.S.2d 837, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8518 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

Based on the testimony presented, in was evident that the Workers' Compensation Board considered a defense posed by the employer's insurer, that decedent began exhibiting a pattern of mental deterioration long before several lawful personnel decisions were made, including his reassignment as a truck driver, and rejected the same. Potter v Curtis Lumber Co., 10 A.D.3d 819, 782 N.Y.S.2d 170, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11178 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2004).

217. —Mental illness

Evidence supported finding of Workers' Compensation Board that work stress caused claimant's underlying personality disorder to manifest itself, thereby disabling him, and that this was accidental injury arising in course of his employment, where claimant purchased debt-ridden company, he had to borrow heavily and use his personal funds to support business, his circumstances did not improve and he began having trouble coping, he was diagnosed as having anxiety and emerging reactive depression, he later attempted suicide, and his physician testified that his business problems led to his mental illness. La Mendola v Butler, 179 A.D.2d 862, 578 N.Y.S.2d 280, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 70 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992).

Substantial evidence supported determination that claimant's myocardial infarction arose out of and in course of his employment, and that he was therefore entitled to workmen's compensation benefits, where testimony indicated that stress was placed on claimant due to nature of his job, as well as decrease in business engendered by stock market crash in October 1987 and subsequent rumors that his employer might merge with another company, necessitating layoffs, and claimant's medical expert testified that infarction was caused in part by stress of employment. Greenbaum v MKI Sec., 189 A.D.2d 986, 592 N.Y.S.2d 841, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 79 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1993).

Evidence supported Workers' Compensation Board's finding that psychiatric problems of assistant to executive director of not-for-profit service agency providing educational services to developmentally disabled persons was compensable injury due to abnormal work-related stress where assistant's involvement in agency's expansion caused extremely tense situation as its financial difficulties mounted, assistant also had acrimonious relationship with his superiors regarding agency's operations, which caused him to be depressed and anxious, he was very troubled by deaths of 2 children in agency's care, and his 2 treating psychiatrists testified that he suffered from extreme anxiety, panic attacks, morbid thoughts, and preoccupation with death and that his psychiatric condition was causally related to his employment. Marillo v Cantalician Ctr. for Learning, 263 A.D.2d 719, 693 N.Y.S.2d 687, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8031 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Substantial evidence supported the Workers' Compensation Board's factual determination that the claimant's depressive condition was not compensable because the claimant's supervisors described normal oversight and monitoring practices undertaken to assist her in correcting deficiencies in and improving her performance, and the claimant failed to identify any unusual stressors or conduct that constituted harassment or bullying as alleged in her claim for benefits. Matter of Lanese v Anthem Health Servs., 165 A.D.3d 1373, 85 N.Y.S.3d 262, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6751 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2018).

218. —Emotional stress sufficient

Emotional stress sustained by a labor union vice-president, due to having to defend himself against charges of calling an unauthorized wildcat strike, without benefit of counsel during a hearing which lasted about 12 hours even after sustaining an attack several hours before the end of the hearing as the result of which he asked for, but was denied, a continuance, constituted an industrial accident in the light of medical testimony produced before the Board. Hamilton v Transport Workers Union, 21 A.D.2d 434, 251 N.Y.S.2d 104, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3322 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964), aff'd, 16 N.Y.2d 696, 261 N.Y.S.2d 892, 209 N.E.2d 550, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1292 (N.Y. 1965).

A board finding that pre-existing cardiac pathology and the strain and tension of being investigated and interrogated concerning alleged misconduct subjected decedent to such severe and undue emotional stress as to precipitate his fatal heart attack was insufficient to sustain an award of death benefits and the case must be remanded for further findings stating which of the alleged facts in evidence the board accepted as true. Ferreri v General Auto Driving School, Inc., 22 A.D.2d 718, 253 N.Y.S.2d 314, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3056 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

219. —Emotional stress; arguments

Death benefits could not properly be awarded in connection with death of an elevator operator who had suffered from heart disease and bronchial asthma for several years and died of a heart attack following an argument with the building superintendent as to operation of his elevator, such argument having involved no greater emotional strain or tension than workers generally are occasionally subjected to. Santacroce v 40 W. 20th Street, Inc., 10 N.Y.2d 855, 222 N.Y.S.2d 689, 178 N.E.2d 912, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 992 (N.Y. 1961).

An award of disability benefits for a heart attack sustained by claimant while having a 20-minute argument with his supervisor over failure to receive overtime pay was reversed for absence of sufficient evidence to show that emotional upset involved in the argument was such an occurrence as to amount to an "accident." Cramer v Barney's Clothing Store, 15 A.D.2d 329, 223 N.Y.S.2d 813, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11783 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962), aff'd, 13 N.Y.2d 711, 241 N.Y.S.2d 844, 191 N.E.2d 901, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 1152 (N.Y. 1963).

There was no basis for a board finding of "accidental" injury where it appeared that claimant was a sewing machine operator working on a piece basis and suffered a cerebral vascular disablement following a short argument with the shop foreman, which involved no physical violence, over his work assignment for the day, such arguments being common in that type of work. Zygler v Tenzer Coat Co., 19 A.D.2d 660, 240 N.Y.S.2d 543, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3650 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963), aff'd, 15 N.Y.2d

There was substantial evidence to sustain a finding of the Board that death of an employee was not due to accidental injury where, although decedent had a pre-existing heart condition at the time of being involved in an argument to which death was attributed, nothing indicated that the argument was either loud or excitable. Unterberg v New York State Dep't of Labor, 19 A.D.2d 668, 242 N.Y.S.2d 256, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3469 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

Although claimant had a pre-existing heart condition, the Board could find from the evidence that his total disability resulted from stress of strain during an altercation with a customer whom he thought was guilty of robbing the cash register of the store in which he worked and a later argument with his employer over the occurrence which lasted for several days. Chavkin v Rotter, 20 A.D.2d 158, 245 N.Y.S.2d 435, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2574 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

A conversation by claimant with his foreman which wound up in an "argument" following which claimant suffered a heart attack by virtue, as alleged, of the strain and excitement involved, did not amount to an accident in course of employment. Samolin v Trans World Airlines, Inc., 20 A.D.2d 160, 245 N.Y.S.2d 628, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2575 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

Where a shirt factory foreman died from a myocardial infarction June 19, 1967 and no claim asserting accidental injury was filed until two years later, then alleging that death was due to unusual exertion and severe emotional upset the day preceding the death supposed to have emanated from an alleged argument on that date, but the testimony was contradictory, questions as to whether the argument in question occurred and its nature and extent were within the exclusive province of the Board whose finding of no accidental injury could not be overturned. Rosenthal v Jac Sportswear, 20 A.D.2d 734, 246 N.Y.S.2d 888, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4375 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

Where a stroke suffered by a 61-year-old civil engineer who had a history of hypertension and cardiovascular problems while working on a railroad construction job in remote territory was allegedly brought on by an hour-long altercation over a radio phone concerning certain bridge settlement readings, and there was conflicting evidence as to intensity of the argument and as to causal relationship, determination of causal relationship was for the board as a question of fact, and its determination that insufficient causal relationship was shown should not be disturbed. Wilson v Tippetts-Abbott-McCarthy-Stratton, 22 A.D.2d 720, 253 N.Y.S.2d 149, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3059 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

While the board is justified in finding an accident where there is evidence of an aggravated and prolonged situation of emotional tension, it would not be justified in doing so in the case of an argument occurring in the course of the employment where such argument would be regarded by the average man as neither involving nor inducing emotional strain or tension greater than the countless differences and irritations to which all workers are occasionally subjected without untoward results. And in accordance with this principle a determination of the board that a heart attack suffered by the plaintiff's decedent, a private investigator, was not an industrial accident, was upheld by the Appellate Division. Connors v Secon Secur., Inc., 24 A.D.2d 674, 261 N.Y.S.2d 136, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3675 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 16 N.Y.2d 486, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 2201 (N.Y. 1965).

Finding of no causal relationship between work-induced argument and subsequent disabling coronary and neuropyschiatric conditions was supported by substantial evidence. Pinkus v Hod Carmel Kosher Provision Co., 24 A.D.2d 782, 263 N.Y.S.2d 853, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3211 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Finding that heart attack allegedly caused by work-induced argument with foreman did not constitute an accidental injury in that the episode did not involve emotional strain or tension greater than countless differences to which all workers are occasionally subjected, was supported by substantial evidence. Pinkus v Hod Carmel Kosher Provision Co., 24 A.D.2d 782, 263 N.Y.S.2d 853, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3211 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Stair climbing and altercation in the course of employment in fire station went beyond "irritations" usually associated with employment and constituted emotional stress and strain with respect to fireman that had to be equated with an industrial "accident" in determining compensability for subsequent cardiac disablement. Macinski v Johnson City, 57 A.D.2d 974, 394 N.Y.S.2d 101, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12264 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

Workers' Compensation Board properly determined that claimant sustained compensable injury where claimant, 56-year-old plumbing contractor with moderate degree of arteriosclerotic heart disease suffered acute coronary occlusion and myocardial infarction as consequence of his involvement in fierce telephone argument with competitor regarding recently acquired and important plumbing contract claimant had successfully bid on, which lasted 25 to 30 minutes, during which claimant screamed and swore, became infuriated, threw cast iron pipe and fittings about and complained of experiencing pain in chest and left arm, and where claimant looked pale and was highly nervous and perspiring, and where he was admitted to coronary care unit of hospital the following day and his cardiologist testified that severe emotional disturbance occasioned by argument precipitated myocardial infarction. Leone v Patrick Leone & Sons Plumbing & Heating, 119 A.D.2d 950, 501 N.Y.S.2d 221, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 55880 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

Workers' Compensation Board was free to accept employee's proof on disputed issues as to what actually transpired between employee's supervisor and employee on particular day, whether day's events constituted harassment and threats toward employee, and whether those events caused employee's stress, mental depression and nervousness to point of collapse, where employee and supervisor were only witnesses to incident, and each presented different account; employee's version supported board's finding of harassment and ruling that employee had suffered compensable mental injury precipitated by psychic trauma. Levine v United Parcel Service, 124 A.D.2d 381, 507 N.Y.S.2d 327, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 61395 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

Substantial evidence supported determination of Workers' Compensation Board that agitation and strenuous emotional experience which underlay heart attack suffered by claimant's decedent (union official) was work- related where it was acknowledged within union that decedent had been "carrying the load" for aging union local president, decedent had been promised promotion to presidency by head of union's international, and heart attack occurred after argument when decedent learned that head had failed to ask president to step down as planned. Fialkoff v Local 1102-RWDSU-AFL-CIO, 146 A.D.2d 891, 536 N.Y.S.2d 277, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 92 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

220. —Emotional stress; reprimand or criticism by employer

Where the Director of Maintenance and Engineering of an airline, then 33 years of age and with no prior known history of heart disease, died of a myocardial infarction following a period of unusual strain and emotional upset after being blamed by company officers for the condition of a plane which he was making extraordinary efforts to repair and get back into operation, including arguments over repair bills and threats of discharge, there was sufficient evidence to sustain an award of death benefits notwithstanding the lack of any incident in which physical injury was sustained. Klimas v Trans Caribbean Airways, Inc., 10 N.Y.2d 209, 219 N.Y.S.2d 14, 176 N.E.2d 714, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1089 (N.Y. 1961), vacated, Incres S.S. Co. v International Maritime Workers Union, 372 U.S. 24, 83 S. Ct. 611, 9 L. Ed. 2d 557, 1963 U.S. LEXIS 2396 (U.S. 1963).

An award for death benefits for heart failure could not be sustained on the basis of an emotional strain resulting from an "emotional episode" (decedent's attention had been called to errors which he would have to correct and which, it was said, "upset" him). Stang v J. Pechman & Co., 7 A.D.2d 245, 181 N.Y.S.2d 952, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9976 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), amended, 8 A.D.2d 665, 185 N.Y.S.2d 773, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9049 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

The evidence would not sustain a finding of the board that a mild cardial infarction on the part of claimant, a proofreader, was precipitated by heated arguments between him and his foreman relating to responsibility for uncorrected errors in certain proofs, where the testimony showed only two arguments, without use of inflammatory language, or anything amounting to shouting or threatening conduct on the part of the foreman. Coleman v Guide-Kalkhoff-Burr, Inc., 12 A.D.2d 554, 206 N.Y.S.2d 714, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7252 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), aff'd, 10 N.Y.2d 857, 222 N.Y.S.2d 689, 178 N.E.2d 912, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 993 (N.Y. 1961).

Record supported finding by Workers' Compensation Board that employee's accident arose out of and in course of employment where (1) employee testified that he was "totally devastated" by distribution of memorandum critical of his job performance, that he felt he was subjected to public ridicule and lost credibility as supervisor, and that he underwent psychiatric treatment, and (2) his psychiatrist testified that he was suffering from adjustment disorder in reaction to memorandum. Greene v Charles Freihofer Baking Co., 180 A.D.2d 980, 580 N.Y.S.2d 808, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2890 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992).

Claim arising from employer's alleged negligence in failing to follow its own policies and procedures in resolving sexual harassment complaints against plaintiff was not exempt from workers' compensation coverage under CLS Work Comp § 2(7) where plaintiff's injuries were not "solely mental," but included loss of income, injury to reputation and defense costs. Maas v Cornell Univ., 253 A.D.2d 1, 683 N.Y.S.2d 634, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 96 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), aff'd, 94 N.Y.2d 87, 699 N.Y.S.2d 716, 721 N.E.2d 966, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 3737 (N.Y. 1999).

Workers' Compensation Law Judge properly dismissed claimant's application for benefits arising out of his alleged psychiatric injury during his employment as projectionist at movie theater where his employer testified that he had no contact whatsoever with claimant during 2 days of his employment, his supervisor testified that he did not harass claimant although he did chide him for leaving projection booth during film showings and for drinking alcoholic beverages on job, and claimant's psychiatrist testified that he had been treated for psychiatric problems prior to employment in question. Kessler v Fairmont Theatre Inc., 262 A.D.2d 888, 692 N.Y.S.2d 500, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7477 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. dismissed, 93 N.Y.2d 1039, 697 N.Y.S.2d 567, 719 N.E.2d 928, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 2860 (N.Y. 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 756, 703 N.Y.S.2d 73, 724 N.E.2d 769, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 3959 (N.Y. 1999).

Death could not be considered accidental where it was caused by a heart condition of long standing, merely because it ensued on the night following an argument between decedent, an elevator operator, and a superintendent who told decedent he did not know how to take care of his car, although deceased suffered chest pains a few minutes after the argument, as there was nothing about the argument, according to the only witness, to cause greater strain or tension than workers are generally subjected to. Santacroce v 40 W. 20th Street, Inc., 9 A.D.2d 985, 194 N.Y.S.2d 541, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5302 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959), aff'd, 10 N.Y.2d 855, 222 N.Y.S.2d 689, 178 N.E.2d 912, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 992 (N.Y. 1961).

Claimant, staff nurse in hospital pediatric unit, was properly denied workers' compensation benefits for posttraumatic stress disorder after she was admonished by her supervisor for failing to document her intervention with patient on patient's chart since claimant's psychic injury was direct consequence of evaluation of her work by her supervisor, who acted in good faith; moreover, stress created by lack of sufficient staff and incident in question was no greater than that which other similarly situated workers experienced in normal job environment. Grace v Bronx Mun. Hosp. Ctr., 272 A.D.2d 799, 708 N.Y.S.2d 728, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5963 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Claimant was properly granted workers' compensation benefits based on psychic injury caused by work-related stress from additional work she was given and her supervisor's continued harassment. Keane v New York State Elec. & Gas Co., 272 A.D.2d 802, 708 N.Y.S.2d 726, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5972 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Workers' compensation board properly denied an employee's claim for benefits; the employee failed to give notice of an alleged compensable psychological injury to the employer as required by N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 18, and there was no indication that the employer had actual knowledge that the employee suffered a psychological injury based on an altercation with his supervisor which led to the employee's termination, and because it was significant that the terms "injury" and "personal injury" did not include an injury which was solely mental and was based on work related stress if such mental injury was a direct consequence of a lawful personnel decision involving a disciplinary action, work evaluation, job transfer, demotion, or termination taken in good faith by the employer, N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 2(7). Oberson v Bureau of Ferry Aviation & Transp., 303 A.D.2d 795, 756 N.Y.S.2d 333, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2198 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 507, 763 N.Y.S.2d 813, 795 N.E.2d 39, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 1705 (N.Y. 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1151, 124 S. Ct. 1148, 157 L. Ed. 2d 1045, 2004 U.S. LEXIS 706 (U.S. 2004).

221. —Employer caused stress sufficient

Uncontradicted evidence from an employee's psychiatrist that his severely disabled mental condition was the result of his viewing a newspaper account of his old conviction for robbery in his employer's personnel records, and was not related to a previous psychological problem, was sufficient to support the board's award of accidental disability benefits to the employee. Haydel v Sears, Roebuck & Co., 106 A.D.2d 759, 483 N.Y.S.2d 792, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 21690 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1984).

Employer's action of informing State Insurance Department of claimant's prior arrest for drug possession, against claimant's wishes, constituted lawful personnel decision undertaken in good faith where obtaining license from department was necessary requirement of claimant's employment, and failure to disclose relevant information to department could potentially jeopardize employer's own license; thus, workers' compensation claim predicated on stress associated with employer's decision was barred by CLS Work Comp § 2(7). Kinney v Prudential Ins. Co., 270 A.D.2d 781, 705 N.Y.S.2d 137, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3348 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

222. —Worry over job not sufficient

No compensable accident was sustained when a corporate executive suffered a heart attack at a horse race in California while there on employer's business. Claimant maintained that the decedent was under constant pressure to reduce cost of employer's business and was required to work long hours and do extensive traveling but no stress was shown to have occurred at the race track. Lesnik v National Carloading Corp., 309 N.Y. 958, 132 N.E.2d 326, 309 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 958, 1956 N.Y. LEXIS 1083 (N.Y. 1956).

Worry and anxiety resulting from one's work over a period of time are questionable bases for a compensation award. Garmissie v Pelham Painting Co., 12 A.D.2d 839, 209 N.Y.S.2d 578, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13197 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Where the foreman in charge of a painting job had been considerably concerned for a couple of months over the quality of paint being used on the job, and, in course of a tour of apartments painted with his immediate superior and a representative of the paint company and the general contractor, after climbing a number of flights of stairs, slumped and collapsed against a wall with indications that he might have become unconscious, was hospitalized, and died on the day following discovery of a laceration of the brain, the evidence was insufficient to sustain either that he died or that his condition was caused by the fall or by worry and anxiety about the job. Garmissie v Pelham Painting Co., 12 A.D.2d 839, 209 N.Y.S.2d 578, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13197 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

State trooper's work-related stress did not rise to level of compensable accident, and thus he was not entitled to workers' compensation benefits, where (1) he claimed that he was subjected to prolonged and unusual stress as result of his investigation of 3 gruesome traffic fatalities between 1983 and 1985, his perceptions of harassment and racial discrimination by his supervisors, job transfers in 1986 and 1992, rumored allegations of sexual harassment resulting in 1992 job transfer, and final incident in 1996 in which 2 other troopers allegedly laughed at him during routine traffic stop of their unmarked vehicle, (2) absent evidence of discrimination or harassment, trooper's perceptions of same were unfounded, (3) traffic fatalities and job transfers were nothing more than what would normally be experienced by state trooper during 15-year period, and (4) final incident was nothing more than usual irritation to which all employees occasionally are exposed. Charlotten v N.Y. State Police, 286 A.D.2d 849, 730 N.Y.S.2d 377, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8862 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

223. —Physical injury not found

Where a claimant suffered no physical injury in course of his employment, the Board could properly find that there was no basis for making an award of disability benefits by reason of a year's mental disability following emotional strain or stress suffered on an occasion when he was directed, by his employer, to take a fellow employee and friend to a hospital in a taxicab. Straws v Fail, 17 A.D.2d 998, 233 N.Y.S.2d 893, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6971 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962), app. denied, 12 N.Y.2d 647, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 1566 (N.Y. 1963).

A claimant who became incapcitated due to a mental condition causally related to his observation of a bloody bandage on the hand of a co-worker, who had injured his hand off the job site, did not sustain an industrial accident within the meaning of the Workers' Compensation Law. Claimant was not an active participant in the events which caused the injury, nor did he observe such events; claimant did not even see the injury itself. The mere fact that the mental injury was incurred by claimant while on the job did not render the injury compensable. Everett v A.S. Steel Rule Die Corp., 106 A.D.2d 181, 484 N.Y.S.2d 972, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 48397 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), aff'd, 66 N.Y.2d 683, 496 N.Y.S.2d 423, 487 N.E.2d 280, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 17237 (N.Y. 1985).

224. —Emotional stress; driving or traffic conditions

An award for disability due to heart attack was properly made and should be reinstated on the basis of substantial evidence to show that the injury was caused by emotional stress or strain, it appearing that claimant, who had a medical history of arteriosclerosis and diabetes, was returning home in his own car from a business mission and had to apply his brakes suddenly to avoid a collision with a car which suddenly entered the highway in front of him. Eckhaus v Adeck Stores, Inc., 11 N.Y.2d 862, 227 N.Y.S.2d 680, 182 N.E.2d 287, 1962 N.Y. LEXIS 1275 (N.Y. 1962).

School bus driver suffered her own "accidental injuries" as "active participant" within meaning of Workmen's Compensation Law when, while driving her bus, she came on automobile accident in which 2 school children known to her were killed, she remained at scene with her busload of children until emergency assistance arrived, and she later developed symptoms of post-traumatic stress disorder due to having witnessed aftermath of accident. Wood v Laidlaw Transit, Inc., 77 N.Y.2d 79, 564 N.Y.S.2d 704, 565 N.E.2d 1255, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 4419 (N.Y. 1990).

An award was sustained on proof that a taxicab driver had suffered a heart attack as a result of strain and emotional excitement caused by his efforts to avoid a collision with another cab. Wiltcher v National Transp. Co., 283 A.D. 977, 130 N.Y.S.2d 586, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5985 (N.Y. App. Div.), app. dismissed, 308 N.Y. 674, 124 N.E.2d 317, 308 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 674, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 1790 (N.Y. 1954).

A heart attack, sustained by a truck driver, was compensable where it was shown that, on the day of the attack, the road was slick with ice and decedent had to exert considerable physical effort to keep the truck from skidding. Napolitano v Fusco, 9 A.D.2d 802, 192 N.Y.S.2d 520, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6141 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Auto accident was sufficient to cause ventricular fibrillation and death as an autopsy showed no other competent cause of death and an injury caused by emotional stress and strain without presence of physical impact to the body may be found to be accidental within the purview of the Workmen's Compensation Law. Seymour v Sokolneck, 34 A.D.2d 1073, 312 N.Y.S.2d 323, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4251 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

Conclusion of Workers' Compensation Board that death of claimant's decedent was causally related to his work was supported by evidence in record, which included testimony showing that when door locks on his car jammed, decedent, extremely upset that he might miss business appointment, drove away holding driver's side door shut and was found shortly thereafter slumped over wheel, expert medical testimony indicating that stress caused by door lock problem was direct cause of decedent's death. Biller v State Ins. Fund, 186 A.D.2d 300, 587 N.Y.S.2d 793, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10602 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992).

225. —Firefighting activities

A gardener and farmer who in the course of putting out a brush fire on his employer's premises became exhausted from inhaling smoke and from the exertion, aggravating a dormant heart condition which resulted in his death some six months later suffers an accidental injury. Easer v Pratt, 261 N.Y. 628, 185 N.E. 767, 261 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 628, 1933 N.Y. LEXIS 1439 (N.Y. 1933).; See also Andrews v Emporium Forestry Co., 250 N.Y. 592, 166 N.E. 336, 250 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 592, 1929 N.Y. LEXIS 986 (N.Y. 1929).

The janitor of a school building suffered an accidental injury resulting in his death, where it appears that as a part of his duties he was required to go to the schoolhouse in case a fire alarm was sounded; that a fire alarm was sounded though in fact there was no fire, and the intestate was taken to the schoolhouse in an automobile; that, at the time, the intestate was suffering from chronic myocarditis; that he became greatly excited after reaching the school building, and, after walking about the building for a few minutes, dropped dead. Thompson v Binghamton, 218 A.D. 451, 218 N.Y.S. 355, 1926 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5957 (N.Y. App. Div. 1926).

The board could reasonably draw the inference that decedent died as the result of an accidental injury where he was employed as fire guard and died as the result of a cardiac attack after responding to a fire call. Godsman v Grumman Aircraft Engineering Corp., 268 A.D. 945, 51 N.Y.S.2d 368, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4339 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944), aff'd, 295 N.Y. 708, 65 N.E.2d 339, 295 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 708, 1946 N.Y. LEXIS 899 (N.Y. 1946).

A fire guard who died as the result of a cardiac attack after responding to a fire call resulting in unusual exertion and excitement, died as the result of an accidental injury. Godsman v Grumman Aircraft Engineering Corp., 268 A.D. 945, 51 N.Y.S.2d 368, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4339 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944), aff'd, 295 N.Y. 708, 65 N.E.2d 339, 295 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 708, 1946 N.Y. LEXIS 899 (N.Y. 1946).

The fact that no autopsy is held following a death allegedly due to a heart condition, and that decedent was only 39 years of age and had apparently been in prior good health, does not preclude a death benefit award upon a showing that, on the day of death, decedent while helping as a volunteer fireman, collapsed after running back and forth on various errands associated with fighting a fire and was pronounced dead upon arrival at a hospital. Fish v Smithville Volunteer Fire Co., 12 A.D.2d 573, 206 N.Y.S.2d 822, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7283 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

There was substantial evidence to sustain a finding of the board that disability and subsequent death of a volunteer fireman, 36 years of age, was causally related to accidental injury in course of his duties, where it appeared that he collapsed while fighting a fire in the hayloft of a barn and helping to hold a fire hose in smoke filled atmosphere, under conditions of unusual exertion, thereby bringing on a rupture of a pre-existing aneurysm of arteries at the base of his brain, which contributed to his death. Morrison v Canterbury Fire Dist., 13 A.D.2d 861, 214 N.Y.S.2d 518, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11061 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Where volunteer fireman suffered myocardial infarction caused by coronary thrombosis while responding to a fire, and where there was testimony that normal activities would not have caused fireman's death and that death was causally related to his activities as volunteer fireman, Workmen's Compensation Board was justified in finding that fireman was entitled to award of benefits for death which resulted in the line of duty. Hoff v Williston Park, 50 A.D.2d 631, 374 N.Y.S.2d 756, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12443 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

226. —Increased work load or tension

Claimant, a trial attorney for the State Insurance Fund, was entitled to compensation for heart attack, where report of impartial medical expert assigned by the Board, and the claimant's own expert, established that heart attack was directly related to unusual exertion and strain, undergone by the claimant for 7 weeks prior thereto, to wit, the unusual exertion of the increased activity as trial counsel. Schechter v State Ins. Fund, 6 N.Y.2d 506, 190 N.Y.S.2d 656, 160 N.E.2d 901, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1175 (N.Y. 1959).

Supermarket manager was not barred by exclusionary language of CLS Work Comp § 2(7) from receiving workers' compensation benefits on ground that his panic disorder was direct consequence of good faith personnel decisions inasmuch as employer's personnel decisions did not target him directly, but only contributed indirectly to his work-related stress by forcing him to work longer hours, take more responsibility, and manage store that was not performing well. DePaoli v Great A & P Tea Co., 94 N.Y.2d 377, 704 N.Y.S.2d 527, 725 N.E.2d 1089, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 81 (N.Y. 2000).

A claimant whose work load was increased in the month previous to his illness suffers an accidental injury, where while in the course of his work he experienced a pain in his chest, but after resting, he continued his work the remainder of the day and the following day at his home suffered coronary thrombosis. Carlin v Colgate Aircraft Corp., 276 A.D. 881, 93 N.Y.S.2d 791, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3671 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949), aff'd, 301 N.Y. 754, 95 N.E.2d 626, 301 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 754, 1950 N.Y. LEXIS 1045 (N.Y. 1950).

An increase in an executives work load immediately preceding his death cannot be made grounds for a claim for death benefits where the decedent, as a result of the increased work pressure, died of a coronary thrombosis while on vacation. O'Rourke v State Ins. Fund, 2 A.D.2d 616, 151 N.Y.S.2d 756, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5461 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

After an unusually hard day at the office, the manager of an unemployment field office felt emotionally upset and there was evidence that this upset brought about a heart attack. The court held that an increase in the tension of claimant's administrative work did not constitute an accident and reversed an award granting benefits. Ehrensal v New York State Div. of Employment, 2 A.D.2d 944, 156 N.Y.S.2d 472, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3977 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Decedent, employed as an afternoon chef in restaurant, substituted for morning chef and, while performing such duties, fell over and died of a coronary occlusion. The duties of morning chef were more strenuous than those of afternoon chef and shortly before his death decedent had become excited when customer rejected food. Award affirmed. Gonella v Eddie's Chop House, 5 A.D.2d 707, 168 N.Y.S.2d 666, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3497 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

For three weeks prior to his fatal seizure, decedent's work as manager of farm produce plant had been heavier than before and he performed more manual labor than his managerial duties had previously required. On day of heart attack, he had helped stack 100-pound bags of beans until he left in morning to go to post office. He became ill in restaurant while out. Medical experts testified that strenuous work aggravated underlying pathology and caused death. Work was sufficiently strenuous to require more than normal exertion. Evidence warranted finding of accidental causation. Everett v George W. Haxton & Son, Inc., 6 A.D.2d 927, 176 N.Y.S.2d 74, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5243 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

In the morning, decedent had helped to unload 50 to 60 steel drums weighing from 50 to 52 lbs. each. Then he had removed concrete flooring and excavated a hole into which he had helped move heavy machinery. After lunch, he loaded the broken concrete into a wheel barrel and, shortly after he had wheeled it away, he collapsed and died. On that day, he had a physical examination and had been found to be in good condition by the employer's doctor. Board properly found that, due to unusual exertion of his work, decedent had sustained a heart attack, which superimposed on a pre-existing heart disease, caused his death. Award affirmed. Moses v Steel Drum Co., 8 A.D.2d 864, 186 N.Y.S.2d 953, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8261 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Decedent, powerhouse engineer, because of inexperienced and unreliable fireman, was required to do unusual and extra work. Four days later he suffered a coronary occlusion which resulted in his death. Held: from the testimony of his widow and the union representative together with the medical evidence, the happening of an accident was established and also a causal relation between the accident and death. Hutton v Ford Motor Co., 9 A.D.2d 589, 189 N.Y.S.2d 448, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7454 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.2d 705, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1837 (N.Y. 1959).

The Board could properly find that claimant, who was one of its own referees, sustained an industrial accident when he suffered a stroke which left him partially paralyzed and had a prior history of ulcers and hypertension, on the basis of evidence that he was subjected to an emotional episode in a long argument with a crying woman at one hearing in the morning and then took over another referee's calendar which required him to walk fast from one hearing room to another, about a block apart, several times the same day, these two things occurring on the same day amounting to "unusual or excessive strain" in course of duty. Goodwin v New York State Workmen's Compensation Board, 20 A.D.2d 951, 249 N.Y.S.2d 63, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3937 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), aff'd, 15 N.Y.2d 508, 254 N.Y.S.2d 114, 202 N.E.2d 560, 1964 N.Y. LEXIS 897 (N.Y. 1964).

Evidence that, towards the end of June 1972, supervisory employee was engaged in a variety of physical activities for a period of two and one-half weeks while cleaning up store which had been damaged by flood and that he was under extraordinary mental strain during that period, that he thereafter complained of chest pains and was tired, pale and had no appetite, all contrary to his usual demeanor, that, in August 1974, while attending a conference required by his employer, he was found dead, that the cause of death was myocardial infarction and emphysema, and testimony that the myocardial infarction was the result of the strenuous work in June of 1972 was sufficient to sustain award of workmen's compensation benefits to employee's widow. Marincel v Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 50 A.D.2d 630, 374 N.Y.S.2d 753, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12440 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975), aff'd, 40 N.Y.2d 1032, 391 N.Y.S.2d 574, 359 N.E.2d 1368, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 3157 (N.Y. 1976).

Claimant, agency services representative with Department of Labor, was properly denied Workers' Compensation benefits where it was undisputed that event triggering her psychic injury was new manager's reassignment of claimant to particularly stressful work position, Workers' Compensation Board properly concluded that "no evidence (was) submitted that the actions taken by the employer were taken in bad faith," and claimant acknowledged that new manager had no ill feelings toward her and that employer did not "set out to harm or injure any of its employees." Mattoon v N.Y. State DOL, 284 A.D.2d 667, 727 N.Y.S.2d 702, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6237 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

Issue on appeal involved statutory construction and was not limited to substantial evidence where employer did not dispute Workers' Compensation Board's finding that claimant's mental injury was causally related to stress experienced in his new position, stress which was greater than that experienced in normal work environment, but rather employer contended that claimant's mental injury was results of his promotion to new position, which constituted lawful personnel decision under CLS Work Comp § 2(7). Brickner v N.Y. State DOT, 284 A.D.2d 829, 727 N.Y.S.2d 523, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6871 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001), app. denied, 98 N.Y.2d 601, 744 N.Y.S.2d 761, 771 N.E.2d 834, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 955 (N.Y. 2002).

227. —Lifting or carrying

An award will be allowed to the beneficiary of a decedent who died of acute cardiac dilatation caused from a blow on the chest and the strain of lifting thereafter, where the evidence shows that the decedent was injured in his regular employment. Kissell v Brink's Express Co., 244 A.D. 859, 279 N.Y.S. 756, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6851 (N.Y. App. Div. 1935).

An employee is entitled to compensation where he suffered an acute cardiac condition resulting from the unusual strain in lifting pails of hot tar in the regular course of his employment, where it appears that he was performing work of a more strenuous nature than for many years prior thereto and had never performed work of that nature before. Whittaker v A. Ratner & Co., 264 A.D. 969, 37 N.Y.S.2d 104, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5576 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

An employee suffers an accidental injury where he dies suddenly on returning to floor level after having assisted in lifting four by four timbers working on top of a boiler under which a fire was burning, even though there was evidence that on two previous occasions the employee had suffered attacks but called no physician. Mashaw v Fex, 266 A.D. 703, 40 N.Y.S.2d 153, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3951 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1943), aff'd, 292 N.Y. 541, 54 N.E.2d 385, 292 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 541, 1944 N.Y. LEXIS 1698 (N.Y. 1944).

A superintendent or farm manager suffers an accidental injury where, while pitching hay, in the course of his employment, he over exerted himself and was caused to suffer a strain and tearing pain in the chest resulting in his death. Crofts v Ledyard, 271 A.D. 1042, 68 N.Y.S.2d 603, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5758 (N.Y. App. Div.), app. dismissed, 296 N.Y. 999, 73 N.E.2d 575, 296 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 999, 1947 N.Y. LEXIS 1743 (N.Y. 1947).

A plant worker who "upended" a 480 pound drum of liquid soap and collapsed due to a heart attack suffers an accidental injury. Yager v Bennett Chemical Co., 272 A.D. 1090, 74 N.Y.S.2d 577, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5056 (N.Y. App. Div. 1947).

An award for reduced earning capacity was not supported by substantial evidence where the opinion of claimant's physician was vague and dislocated in reference to the findings of heart specialist. Hayes v S. Stroock & Co., 283 A.D. 578, 129 N.Y.S.2d 3, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4735 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

A death award was affirmed where a motion picture operator sustained pain in his chest from lifting motion picture film and died from a coronary occlusion. Proof showed that lifting of cans of film was not regular work. Sabasowitz v Gold Theatre, 283 A.D. 899, 130 N.Y.S.2d 121, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5690 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

While lifting some heavy objects to lay a carpet, a carpet layer felt acute pain in his stomach which developed into a perforated gastric ulcer requiring surgery. Substantial evidence supported Board finding that injury was accidental. Jennings v Simon Manges & Sons, Inc., 284 A.D. 1071, 136 N.Y.S.2d 15, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4600 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1954).

Award was improper where Compensation Board found that decedent was obliged to carry three one-pound bags on his shoulder thus causing a heart attack and immediate death but there was no evidence to support this finding as to necessity. Geoghan v Francis Leggett Premier Food, 285 A.D. 911, 137 N.Y.S.2d 506, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6092 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

A picture frame cutter with a pre-existing arteriosclerosis felt a pain near his heart while lifting a bulky 15 pound picture frame in the usual course of his work. Three days thereafter he was found suffering from a coronary occlusion. Held: compensation award affirmed. Bahn v S. Wolfensohn, Inc., 286 A.D. 902, 142 N.Y.S.2d 2, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4469 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

While an award for death allegedly due to rupture of the abdominal aorta from lifting heavy bundles in course of decedent's regular work could not be sustained on the basis of his widow's hearsay testimony as to the nature of his work and the effort involved, or because the injury was a rupture, the case was remanded for additional evidence. Platt v Lee Dyeing Co., 9 A.D.2d 799, 192 N.Y.S.2d 550, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6137 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

A heart attack was compensable where it was shown that the manager, though not normally doing manual labor, just prior to the attack carried cartons, weighing approximately 50 to 65 pounds, helped lift wooden crates weighing about 200 pounds, and engaged in a dispute with his employer over an inventory. Schwartz v Robin Hats, Inc., 9 A.D.2d 972, 193 N.Y.S.2d 689, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5659 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain a board finding that death of an employee was causally related to an incident in course of his employment whereby, during heavy lifting, he experienced severe pain in the groin which was diagnosed on medical examination as traumatic orchitis of a testicle, thereafter returned to work, after being discharged by a specialist as apparently recovered, finally resumed heavy lifting, and shortly thereafter suddenly died, an autopsy disclosing that death was due either to a coronary or pulmonary embolism. Gordon v Theodore Ficke, Inc., 15 A.D.2d 849, 224 N.Y.S.2d 596, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11423 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

With respect to an award made following death of an employee who was a compositor in a small printing shop as the postoperative effect of an operation for strangulated hernia, hearsay testimony of decedent's wife and doctor to the occurrence of an "accident" causing the hernia condition to reach proportions requiring the operation, as to decedent's having lifted something heavy and felt a sharp pain, was sufficiently corroborated by independent proof that decedent's job required lifting of heavy objects. Raskind v Speed Printing Co., 15 A.D.2d 975, 225 N.Y.S.2d 546, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10994 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Office manager's injury arose in course of her employment, and thus she was entitled to workers' compensation benefits, where delivery of computer equipment arrived at office at 5:15 p.m. in December, she offered to bring delivery man's 18-month-old son upstairs and give him cookie in office, rather than allow boy to be left alone in delivery van after dark, and she injured her back while carrying boy up stairs. Knaub v Realtime Bus. Sys., 251 A.D.2d 840, 674 N.Y.S.2d 799, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7355 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

228. —Lifting or carrying; arranging stock or merchandise

A saleswoman who was carrying boxes weighing about thirty pounds upstairs from the stockroom and experienced a sudden loss of vision in the left eye due to a tear of the eye's retina and choroid, suffers an accidental injury under this section. Rosch v M. Rappaport & Son, 269 A.D. 914, 57 N.Y.S.2d 580, 1945 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4447 (N.Y. App. Div. 1945).

A salesman in an antique shop, not accustomed to lifting and with a pre-existing heart condition, lifted a 200 pound piece of furniture and felt a pain in his chest which was thereafter diagnosed as a coronary infarction. Board's decision of a compensable accident affirmed. Greenfield v Antique Market, Ltd., 2 A.D.2d 618, 151 N.Y.S.2d 773, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5464 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Claimant was salesman of convertible beds. It was necessary for him to open and close beds and to pick up pillows weighing 20 lbs. each. For 2 days he had not been feeling well. On day he suffered coronary occlusion, claimant helped move piece of furniture weighing 200–250 lbs., unusual work for him, and on way home he had difficulty parking car. Held: there was substantial medical evidence to sustain finding of accident and causal relation. Eisenberg v Castro Convertibles, Inc., 5 A.D.2d 1022, 173 N.Y.S.2d 400, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6175 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

While lifting boxes of merchandise, claimant sustained a myocardial infarction with pains in chest. Board found that he had suffered aggravation due to unusual strain and exertion in moving boxes unassisted and that such exertion was an accident. Spector v Grossman, 6 A.D.2d 913, 175 N.Y.S.2d 597, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5220 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

A sales clerk employed in a retail variety store, who had a history of pre-existing back trouble, was not entitled to compensation on the ground that her duties required her to restock counters and arrange merchandise displays, where there was no evidence of any incident which could be regarded as an accident by the average man. Cunningham v Neisner Bros., Inc., 9 A.D.2d 965, 193 N.Y.S.2d 586, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5646 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

The evidence justified a compensation award where claimant, employed as a salesman, likewise had the duty of inspecting goods for shipment, such goods normally being brought in and suspended from a six-foot rack by other employees, but felt ill, and was diagnosed as having suffered an acute coronary thrombosis and myocardial infarction, after having helped lift the goods to the rack on a day when help was relatively short. Gordon v Cenu Fibres, 10 A.D.2d 655, 196 N.Y.S.2d 349, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11694 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

A death benefit award was upheld upon evidence that the deceased died as the result of a heart attack, having a previous heart condition, while engaged in taking inventory of a stock of heavy materials, including nail kegs weighing up to 100 pounds, cans of paint weighing from 10 to 20 pounds, and various hardware and lumber. Benowitz v Jacob Benowitz, Inc., 11 A.D.2d 593, 200 N.Y.S.2d 527, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9951 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

There was sufficient evidence to relate death of an employee to aggravation of a heart condition by overexertion in course of his employment where it appeared that decedent was a shoe salesman, and, business being slow on the day in question, spent most of the day shifting shoe boxes to various locations, ate very little and went to bed early upon returning home from work, collapsed while at work the next day, and an autopsy performed following his death established that the infarct related back to about the time of his overexertion. Farber v Harbor Shoes Co., 12 A.D.2d 578, 206 N.Y.S.2d 1011, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7319 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), rev'd, 10 N.Y.2d 875, 223 N.Y.S.2d 503, 179 N.E.2d 508, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1003 (N.Y. 1961).

An award of death benefits was sustained for death of a 36 year old employee from occlusive coronary arteriosclerosis, whose duties were primarily clerical, on the day following unusual exertion in preparing an order for shipment in pulling down a case containing stuffed toys weighing between 40 and 50 pounds and four feet by four feet in size from atop another case of the same size, on which occasion he felt a pain in his chest, stopped work, and sat down for awhile. Geschwer v Tee Jay Toys, Inc., 15 A.D.2d 615, 222 N.Y.S.2d 771, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6835 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

There was sufficient evidence to show causal relationship between the occasion when claimant, a saleslady, suffered a "horrible pain" while picking up a box from the basement floor of the employer's premises, which was immediately reported to her superior, was examined by a doctor the same night, and underwent surgery about a month later in course of which a herniated disc was removed from her spine. Messer v Leading Youth Center, Inc., 15 A.D.2d 841, 224 N.Y.S.2d 601, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11411 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

With respect to a fatal heart attack suffered by a store employee, the Board could find that it was not caused by an accident in course of his employment where the only testimony as to what he was doing at end before occurrence of the attack was that he was in the basement of the store "straightening up some stuff." Glass v Square Music & Sport Shop, 17 A.D.2d 1025, 234 N.Y.S.2d 475, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6734 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

An award will be denied claimant, where decedent after working for several hours unpacking merchandise suffered a seizure and shortly died of angina pectoris, and a physician testified that the work of unpacking the merchandise "could have" produced the angina. Frankel v National 5, 10 & 25 Cent Stores, 243 A.D. 841, 278 N.Y.S. 450, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8531 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 268 N.Y. 509, 198 N.E. 378, 268 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 509, 1935 N.Y. LEXIS 985 (N.Y. 1935).

229. —Lifting or carrying; loading or unloading

On conflicting medical testimony, death at age 28 of a warehouse helper from coronary sclerosis about one and one-half hours after starting to load a van with furniture some of which weighed up to 150 pounds with the help of another employee, almost immediately, could be related to the work he was doing and found compensable, notwithstanding an admitted prior bad heart condition, claimant's medical expert having testified that while something other than strenuous work might have caused the death he was reasonably certain that it was due to the work then being done. Carrasquillo v Santini Brothers-The Original, 13 N.Y.2d 245, 246 N.Y.S.2d 392, 196 N.E.2d 52, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 804 (N.Y. 1963).

Where claimant as chauffeur to an employer engaged in the trucking business was ordered to proceed to a pier and pick up freight for shipment and while engaged in this work handling a case weighing 1,100 pounds he felt unusual sensation in his chest, there was evidence to find that this unusual exertion caused a coronary occlusion which was compensable. Dugan v Hasman & Baxt, Inc., 263 A.D. 1031, 33 N.Y.S.2d 619, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7959 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 288 N.Y. 699, 43 N.E.2d 88, 288 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 699, 1942 N.Y. LEXIS 1539 (N.Y. 1942).

A truck driver who loaded his truck with cases of beer weighing from 36 to 50 pounds and while doing so felt a pain in his chest, whereupon he stopped and rested, and then resumed the loading, but collapsed and died from a coronary thrombosis while driving away from the brewery suffers an accidental injury, even though the work was the usual work of the employee. Weitz v Schreiber Brewing Co., 275 A.D. 973, 90 N.Y.S.2d 235, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5300 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

A well driller who died from a coronary occlusion shortly after loading heavy equipment on a truck, expending thereby an unusual amount of effort as compared with his regular duties, suffers accidental injuries. Lawrence v Howard Cranston & Son, 276 A.D. 789, 92 N.Y.S.2d 603, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3334 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

An employee who while engaged in the regular course of his employment, was caused to use unusual exertion while lifting milk boxes onto a truck which caused him to suffer a heart attack resulting in his death, sustains accidental injuries. Hauser v Sheffield Farms Co., 276 A.D. 800, 93 N.Y.S.2d 112, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3361 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

Claimant, employee of electrical contractor, carried several boxes of material weighing from 25 to 50 lbs. to his car to a plank leading to entrance of the house. He then became ill with a coronary thrombosis. Medical evidence supported finding that exertion of claimant's work brought on the attack. Stapleton v J. E. Hanson, Inc., 282 A.D. 1088, 126 N.Y.S.2d 73, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5885 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Where a truck driver, contrary to his usual practice, helped load a truck with metal forms and then died as a result of his unusual physical work, his death was compensable. Kraus v Marcus Decorating Co., 284 A.D. 914, 134 N.Y.S.2d 411, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4046 (N.Y. App. Div.), modified, 284 A.D. 994, 136 N.Y.S.2d 377, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4349 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

A death award was sustained where a general worker on a private estate died from cerebral hemorrhage after attack while unloading a truck of metal fence posts in the heat of the summer. Saari v Crawford, 284 A.D. 1079, 135 N.Y.S.2d 913, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4615 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

On day of death, decedent and another loaded 125 packages weighing 64 lbs. each, which work was usually performed by 3 or 4 men. Few minutes after completing job, decedent collapsed and died. Decedent had pre-existing heart condition. Autopsy showed recent occlusion. Award affirmed. Kelpin v Watts & Sons, 5 A.D.2d 722, 168 N.Y.S.2d 673, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3522 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957), app. denied, 4 N.Y.2d 675, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1377 (N.Y. 1958).

Decedent, employed as a longshoreman, had helped unload truck cargo consisting of bags of flour, sugar and heavy boxes of canned goods, usual rollers for work not being available. Coppolino v American Stevedores, Inc., 7 A.D.2d 668, 179 N.Y.S.2d 510, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4314 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Claimant, a landscape gardener, helped to load and unload 100-lb. bags of seed, 250-lb. bails of fertilizer and 200 to 300 lb. bails of peat moss and, thereafter, while using hand tools to loosen frozen soil, he sustained injuries including epidural hemorrhage. On operation, blood clot pressing on spinal cord was removed. Held: there was ample medical proof that claimant's work caused rupture of the blood vessel. An accident was properly found. An extraordinary effort need not be found to establish an accident in case of a natural rupture. Reed v Brookhiser, 8 A.D.2d 895, 186 N.Y.S.2d 815, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8311 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Death benefits were properly allowed where decedent, a meat truck driver, complained of inability to breathe and not feeling well while unloading quarters of beef and lamb from the truck and carrying them to a store 60 feet distant, sustaining a fatal heart attack a few hours later, as the work, though part of the job, was such as to involve more strain and exertion than the ordinary wear and tear of life. Johnson v Swift & Co., 10 A.D.2d 656, 196 N.Y.S.2d 330, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11697 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Unusual exertion constituting an accident justifying an award was found to exist where decedent, age 69, had for years been engaged in loading bundles of newspapers, weighing from 45 to 60 lbs., onto trains in railroad stations, which were normally transported along the train platform by means of an electric truck, but, on the date of his death, was carrying bundles up long flights of stairs and across a bridge and down another flight of stairs to reach trains on a different platform, in course of which he collapsed and died. Claim of Burke v New York World Tel. & Sun, 10 A.D.2d 742, 198 N.Y.S.2d 108, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11181 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Although the only thing exceptional about the work being done by a claimant at the time he suffered a heart attack, aside from his usual work in loading and unloading ice trucks and pushing around large cakes of ice, was that, just prior to the attack, he started lifting two 50-pound bags of crushed ice at the same time, a finding was warranted that the attack was compensable on the basis of extra exertion then engaged in. Wagner v City Products Corp., 11 A.D.2d 551, 199 N.Y.S.2d 807, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10183 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 11 A.D.2d 864, 205 N.Y.S.2d 1001, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8551 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

There being ample evidence that while decedent was engaged in his usual work of bundling, handling, and carrying newspapers in bundles weighing 55 pounds or better, he collapsed after carrying a bundle from his truck for some 150 feet, and that, on the following day, he was diagnosed as having an acute posterior wall myocardial infarct and coronary occlusion, from which he died some days later, it was proper to award compensation under the Act. Goodman v Egelhofer, 11 A.D.2d 832, 202 N.Y.S.2d 842, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8501 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Where the deceased employee worked as a warehouse foreman and it was not unusual for him to help load trucks, and there was evidence that he complained of being sick one morning after 15 minutes of loading bundles weighing 60 or 70 pounds, told his wife and son that he had gotten a pain in his chest from lifting at work, and died the same day as the result of a heart condition, medical testimony to causal relationship between his lifting and his death was sufficient to sustain an award of death benefits. Stefaniak v Chudy Paper Co., 12 A.D.2d 533, 206 N.Y.S.2d 704, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7226 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

The evidence was sufficient to sustain a finding by the board of causal relationship between a heart attack suffered by claimant, a carpenter, while helping to unload lumber from a truck, and his employment, where there was testimony that he suffered a pain in his arm and chest while helping with the unloading, although he continued with the work notwithstanding the pain. Katz v Greenberg Flooring, Inc., 13 A.D.2d 561, 211 N.Y.S.2d 922, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12186 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Where a truck driver suffered a fatal heart attack after lifting 16 rolls of plastic quilting weighing 55 to 60 pounds from a fork lift and stacking them in his truck, and an autopsy showed that death was due to acute coronary thrombosis and coronary sclerosis, on conflicting medical opinions the Board was justified in finding that death arose out of his employment. Wooster v Spector Mid States Freight System, 17 A.D.2d 884, 233 N.Y.S.2d 278, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7320 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

230. —Lifting or carrying; moving food, beverages, cooking supplies and the like

A bartender who pulls and lifts a heavy piece of ice and suffers a ruptured blood vessel followed by a cerebral hemorrhage and paralysis is accidentally injured. Lauer v Meenan, 255 A.D. 738, 6 N.Y.S.2d 873, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4967 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938).

An employee who was subjected to strain and exertion while lifting a large five gallon bottle of water weighing about sixty pounds for the purpose of placing it in a water cooler resulting in a cerebral vascular condition which ultimately caused his death suffers an industrial accident. Barnes v New York World's Fair 1939, 277 A.D. 819, 97 N.Y.S.2d 355, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3414 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

An employee suffers an accidental injury where the exertion of lifting milk bottles in the course of his regular occupation caused an ulcer to break open, necessitating an operation as a result of which the employee died. Feinberg v Sheffield Farms Co., 264 A.D. 967, 37 N.Y.S.2d 107, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5570 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

A baker sustains accidental injuries arising out of and in the course of his employment where he aggravates an underlying but unknown tubercular pathology by lifting a heavy box containing dough weighing over 100 pounds. Schroeder v F. G. Shattuck Co., 268 A.D. 944, 51 N.Y.S.2d 367, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4334 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944).

A stockroom clerk who ruptured a chronic ulcer while lifting a 100 pound bag of sugar while taking inventory suffers an accidental injury. Carney v General Cable Corp., 278 A.D. 868, 104 N.Y.S.2d 204, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5014 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951), aff'd, 303 N.Y. 885, 105 N.E.2d 108, 303 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 885, 1952 N.Y. LEXIS 1343 (N.Y. 1952).

A death award was proper where a fish cleaner at a retail fish counter helped move 15 boxes of fish the day before he died, was sick the next morning, but refused to stay home and then died the next morning. Raifer v Bankofsky, 283 A.D. 1126, 131 N.Y.S.2d 508, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6495 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Evidence that claimant did some "additional work" due to the absence of another employee and that, after carrying a case of champagne in his restaurant and hotel employment felt severe pains and was ill was insufficient to establish a reactivation of a former dormant tubercular condition where no proof suggested the nature of the "strain" or how it could be related in physiological causation to tuberculosis of the lung. Schorr v Commodore Catering, Inc., 284 A.D. 1009, 135 N.Y.S.2d 497, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4380 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Medical evidence constituted adequate proof of causal relationship between death of a waiter, following his collapse while serving a large wedding party, and the moving of various tables and carrying of heavy trays of food, some of them weighing between 45 and 50 pounds. Colone v Tavern on the Green, 21 A.D.2d 930, 251 N.Y.S.2d 129, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3367 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 14 N.Y.2d 487, 1964 N.Y. LEXIS 1853 (N.Y. 1964).

231. — —Causing heart condition

An award of death benefits to a widow and minor children will be affirmed where the husband, while assisting some of the employees and while lifting a bag of nuts weighing about 110 pounds, which was not his regular work, he strained himself and immediately collapsed and died two days later from coronary thrombosis. Bacher v Herschkowitz Bros., 245 A.D. 876, 282 N.Y.S. 172, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11349 (N.Y. App. Div. 1935).

An employee does not sustain an accident, where it was alleged that while carrying a case of eggs he suffered a heart attack, fell, and death resulted. Singer v Denman & Hernes, Inc., 249 A.D. 898, 292 N.Y.S. 564, 1937 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10097 (N.Y. App. Div. 1937).

A milkman who was compelled to lift a can of milk weighing about a hundred and thirty pounds into an ice box instead of swinging it in as was his usual practice and suffers a coronary thrombosis, sustains an accidental injury under this section. Anspach v Trieagle Dairies, Inc., 266 A.D. 703, 40 N.Y.S.2d 152, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3950 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943).

A baker who lifted a heavy box of dough and sustained a coronary occlusion suffers an accidental injury. Eizenman v

A manager of a pickle and sauerkraut business, whose duties normally called for no heavy work, but who was required by an unusual situation in the business to lift a basket of cucumbers weighing from fifty to fifty-five pounds suffers an accidental injury where he felt a stabbing pain in his chest at the time and died some six weeks later as the result of a coronary thrombosis which was associated with the lifting incident. Rose v Block & Guggenheimer, Inc., 277 A.D. 818, 97 N.Y.S.2d 357, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3412 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

Evidence sustained award for butcher who suffered a heart attack after lifting a hundred pound quarter of beef where his regular duties required him to wait on customers and to cut and sell portions of meat as ordered. Brilli v Brilli, 283 A.D. 905, 130 N.Y.S.2d 142, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5701 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Claimant, a 55-year-old chef, suffered a sharp pain in his chest on Thanksgiving Day when he carried a 50-lb. pan of turkey. He suffered a similar pain the next day when he lifted a sack of potatoes. On Sunday the pain recurred and he was hospitalized. Two months later he suffered a severe heart attack. Since there was ample evidence that claimant sustained a coronary thrombosis on Thanksgiving Day the award was sustained. Kostanek v Hotel Piccadilly Operating Co., 3 A.D.2d 785, 160 N.Y.S.2d 371, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6196 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Claimant, aged 64, was a counterman in a delicatessen store. When he carried a case of beer weighing about 35 lbs., he felt a sharp pain in his chest. Four days later he had a heart attack. Despite conflict in the medical testimony, there was substantial evidence to justify the award. Kass v Sixth Ave. Delicatessen, 3 A.D.2d 801, 160 N.Y.S.2d 138, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6086 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Board properly found that decedent, a wine steward, while lifting heavy cases of liquor and soda, experienced pains and other symptoms of cardiac distress and that these work activities caused unusual strain on heart, already weakened by pre-existing disease, resulting in acute myocardial infarction and death four days later. Evidence warranted conclusion, that although work might have been no more arduous than usual, it was sufficiently strenuous to require more than normal exertion. Pauson v Manger Vanderbilt Hotel, 7 A.D.2d 686, 179 N.Y.S.2d 252, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4340 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958), app. denied, 5 N.Y.2d 710, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 2006 (N.Y. 1959).

Claimant, an executive and part owner of defendant bakery, was entitled to compensation for a heart attack incurred from lifting two 100-pound bags of flour, pouring the flour into a tub, and then lifting the tub, which weighed about 40 pounds. Erde v Morris Erde, Inc., 9 A.D.2d 797, 192 N.Y.S.2d 784, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6134 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Where claimant a waiter in a restaurant, had to descend a stairway to a dressing room in the cellar, which involved lifting a trap door, requiring extra effort and exertion because the trap door was stuck, and was taken with severe pains in his chest and arms while holding up the trap door, on the basis of medical testimony that he suffered a heart attack a compensation award was justified. Basadonna v Maria Restaurant, 9 A.D.2d 798, 192 N.Y.S.2d 898, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6135 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

The evidence was sufficient to find accidental death due to heart attack precipitated by strenuous efforts of decedent's work as a baker on the day of his death, where these duties included preparation of dough in large mixing kettles which had to be carried by decedent and a helper about 15 feet and lifted to a table about 33 inches high, some of the kettles weighing as much as 105 pounds. Gostinsky v Diamond Bake Shop, 11 A.D.2d 847, 203 N.Y.S.2d 160, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8523 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Causal relationship between a fatal heart attack and employment was sufficiently established by evidence that deceased was a meat cutter whose work did not ordinarily involve heavy lifting, and, on the day in question, lifted a 150-pound quarter of beef from a hook and carried it elsewhere, following which a coworker found him sitting down in a back room, looking pale and moving slowly, to whom deceased stated he did not feel good and had eaten no lunch. Warga v H. C. Bohack Co., 12 A.D.2d 558, 206 N.Y.S.2d 740, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7258 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Where death resulted from a heart attack, there was sufficient evidence to sustain an award of death benefits where it appeared that, on the morning of the day in question, decedent, who worked in a liquor warehouse, was engaged in filling rush orders, requiring the handling and lifting of 15 to 20 cases of liquor weighing from 35 to 45 pounds each, and there was medical testimony that this precipitated the heart attack. Romanelli v Hueblein Liquor Co., 14 A.D.2d 980, 221 N.Y.S.2d 408, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7724 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

There was adequate testimony to support an award of death benefits where claimant's husband was a meat lugger in a packing plant and died three days after being sent to a hospital as the result of a heart attack and suffering pains while handling meat weighing from 150 to 300 pounds per piece in the absence of his helper. Kunkel v National Packing Co., 15 A.D.2d 695, 223 N.Y.S.2d 262, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12012 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain an award of death benefits in a heart case where it appeared that decedent was employed in a restaurant, the supplies of which were kept in a basement accessible by a narrow stairway with a low ceiling, complaint of a pain in his chest after moving some barrels around in the basement to get at a case of ketchup which he then carried up the steps, looked ill, and was perspiring freely, and died within three weeks later of an acute myocardial infarction. Nutis v Saloway's Restaurant, 16 A.D.2d 846, 227 N.Y.S.2d 591, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9974 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

The evidence was sufficient to sustain an award of benefits in a heart case where claimant testified to sustaining severe chest pains after removing a 100-pound bag of potatoes from the top of a five-foot stack and stumbling over another bag while attempting to place it on a hand truck, which incident was immediately reported to his foreman, notwithstanding he continued to work for better than a week longer before seeing a doctor. Barnett v Eber Bros. & Co., 17 A.D.2d 1001, 233 N.Y.S.2d 786, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6977 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

There was substantial evidence to sustain a finding of the Board that a myocardial infarction was brought on by claimant's strenuous activity in carrying a heavy pot of ice up the basement stairs of the restaurant in which he worked which brought on a pain in his chest and a dizzy spell. Uletas v Elliott, 18 A.D.2d 849, 236 N.Y.S.2d 487, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4862 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

232. —Lifting or carrying; moving machinery or equipment

With a pre-existing coronary sclerosis decedent, in October, 1946, held up a 500 pound shelf in the course of his employment for about 5 minutes and thereafter suffered a coronary occlusion. He returned to work in January, 1947, but suffered another attack in September, 1948. Yarkum v Rosenblum & Weller, 308 N.Y. 842, 126 N.E.2d 179, 308 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 842, 1955 N.Y. LEXIS 1099 (N.Y. 1955).

A superintendent who lifted a heavy oil burner and suffered abdominal pains which necessitated an operation suffers an accidental injury under this section. Kuehnen v Singer Arms Realty Corp., 255 A.D. 739, 6 N.Y.S.2d 865, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4969 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938).

A mechanic who lifted an electric chair weighing 200 pounds for the purpose of repairing it and felt a pain in his chest and subsequently develops symptoms of heart disease suffers an accidental injury where there is evidence that the strain was not customary in connection with the claimant's usual duties. Fitkalo v American Express Concessions, Inc., 261 A.D. 1023, 25 N.Y.S.2d 982, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8586 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

A shop foreman who lifts and moves a heavy die weighing about 150 pounds and suffers a rupture of a blood vessel in his brain sustains an accidental injury under the workmen's compensation law. Russell v James Ackroyd & Sons, 263 A.D. 771, 30 N.Y.S.2d 922, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4878 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

An award of workmen's compensation is proper where the claimant suffered a coronary thrombosis while lifting a case of material weighing from sixty to seventy pounds at the request of the foreman, which work he was not accustomed to performing and which subjected him to an unusual effort. Sheiner v Sheiner & Blum, Inc., 268 A.D. 841, 50 N.Y.S.2d 282, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3714 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944).

There is evidence sufficient to sustain an award where an employee was injured while lifting a heavy die and as a result of the strain suffered a ruptured ulcer of the stomach which necessitated an operation from which death resulted due to peritonitis. Bednarz v Buffalo Brake Beam Co., 268 A.D. 1074, 52 N.Y.S.2d 318, 1945 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5553 (N.Y. App. Div. 1945).

A tool grinder suffering from a pre-existing cardiac disease who lifted a machine fixture weighing 100 pounds and suffered an anginal attack is entitled to an award of compensation. Kaufman v Fairchild Engine & Airplane Corp., 272 A.D. 854, 70 N.Y.S.2d 417, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3913 (N.Y. App. Div. 1947).

A machine operator who in the course of his daily duties was required to lift 7 machines, each weighing about 100 pounds, suffers an accidental injury where while engaged in lifting the 6th machine, he felt a slight pain in his chest but continued to work until he had completed his quota, and retired to the washroom when the pain in his chest continued where the claimant was rendered unconscious from a condition diagnosed subsequently as coronary thrombosis. Rivers v Malone Bronze Powder Works, Inc., 277 A.D. 1071, 100 N.Y.S.2d 575, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4520 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

An award of death benefits was affirmed where an employee with a pre-existing coronary condition died as the result of a sclerosis suffered after he had been engaged in handling 50 pound pails while working on a step-ladder and medical proof showed a causal relationship between the work and the death. Olmstead v Perland Realty Corp., 1 A.D.2d 709, 146 N.Y.S.2d 894, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3720 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1955).

Board properly found that claimant, while packing electrical supplies weighing from 60 to 140 lbs., sustained accidental injuries in nature of myocardial infarction when he lifted exceptionally heavy box and felt severe pain in his chest. Board properly accepted medical testimony in report supporting causal relation. Frost v U. S. Electrical Supply Co., 8 A.D.2d 875, 186 N.Y.S.2d 904, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8279 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Decedent, who prepared dies while sitting at a machine, was directed to carry 12 dies, each weighing 17 pounds, through an aisle, which was 30-35 feet long. Dies had been heated to 1800 degrees and were carried with tongs held away from body. Work was unusual for claimant. Medical proof was that it subjected him to a strain which precipitated myocardial infarction from which he died. Award affirmed. Wheaton v Chevrolet-Buffalo Div. of General Motors Corp., 9 A.D.2d 591, 189 N.Y.S.2d 419, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7459 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.2d 706, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1854 (N.Y. 1959).

There was substantial evidence to sustain a board finding that claimant's coronary occlusion had causal relationship to his work as a cook in lifting some 50–60 pound kettles or pots on the day in question, following suffering of chest pains when he first reported to work that day. Kaufman v Jewish Memorial Hospital, 18 A.D.2d 726, 234 N.Y.S.2d 456, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6576 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

There was substantial evidence to sustain a board finding that claimant's myocardial infarction was causally related to his lifting metal forms of type for use in color printing, weighting about 40 pounds each, some 25 times in the course of a ten and one-half hour work shift. Brecher v Bigger Press, Inc., 18 A.D.2d 739, 235 N.Y.S.2d 671, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6172 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Evidence that decedent was engaged in moving 16 pound phonograph chassis at the rate of 121 per hour and placing them into cabinet sustained finding that death of decedent who suddenly collapsed and died of a coronary thrombosis after about one hour of such operation was compensable. Dalton v Olympic Radio, 30 A.D.2d 739, 291 N.Y.S.2d 524, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3590 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 22 N.Y.2d 644, 1968 N.Y. LEXIS 2061 (N.Y. 1968).

Death resulting from myocardial infarction precipitated by operation of punch machine, carrying 60 pounds of iron, and placement of 100 pound cutting machine on roof, all of which caused more than normal wear and tear of life, was compensable. Brown v Highways Displays Inc., 30 A.D.2d 892, 291 N.Y.S.2d 856, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3422 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1968), aff'd, 24 N.Y.2d 943, 302 N.Y.S.2d 580, 250 N.E.2d 68, 1969 N.Y. LEXIS 1271 (N.Y. 1969).

Where the claimant, who worked as a mechanic repairing time clocks and recorders, lifted a time clock weighing about 40 pounds off a wall, and in order to do so he had to stand about 18 inches from the wall and stretch out his arms to reach the clock, and suffered a heart attack, the evidence sustained the board's finding that the lifting of the clock while reaching over cartons involved more than normal exertion, created greater than the ordinary wear and tear of life, and precipitated the fatal cardiac episode and death. Weberman v Advance Time Recorder Co., 38 A.D.2d 636, 327 N.Y.S.2d 289, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2705 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1971).

233. —Lifting or carrying; removing trash, refuse and the like

There is proof sufficient to support a finding of an accidental injury where the claimant, a building service mechanic sustained injuries which aggravated a pre-existing heart condition while engaged in his regular employment and while lifting a heavy can of ashes, where there is direct medical testimony that the claimant's disability was the result of straining and exertion employed in the work in which he was engaged. Swanson v Harbold Realty Co., 262 A.D. 979, 30 N.Y.S.2d 1, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6766 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

A house superintendent who carried garbage baskets weighing from sixty to seventy pounds down stairs to the incinerator, and who on his last trip felt a burning sensation in his chest and cold perspiration and was found upon examination by a physician to be suffering from an acute coronary occlusion does not sustain an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment. Chiara v Villa Charlotte Bronte, Inc., 273 A.D. 834, 76 N.Y.S.2d 59, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4840 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 298 N.Y. 604, 81 N.E.2d 332, 298 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 604, 1948 N.Y. LEXIS 1175 (N.Y. 1948).

Claimant, a 71-year old man, was employed to clean employer's grounds. On a rainy day he bundled 90 to 100 pounds of refuse together and carried it 700 feet. Upon completing this task he felt shaky and weak and thereafter suffered a cerebral hemorrhage. Award affirmed. Lipiarz v International Milling Co., 285 A.D. 1092, 139 N.Y.S.2d 399, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6755 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

Claimant, superintendent of apartment building, felt sharp chest pain after taking 10 to 12 cans of refuse and 3 sacks of paper and boxes from basement up 11 steps to street level. Board properly found that weight of evidence indicated claimant sustained accident. Syvertson v Estate of Freudenberg, 7 A.D.2d 796, 181 N.Y.S.2d 56, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3720 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

The board could properly find accidental injury from evidence that claimant sustained a heart attack after moving eight barrels of ashes, each weighing 120 to 130 pounds, by rolling them to a flight of stairs and lifting each of them up eight steps, notwithstanding this was part of his regular work, as the strenuous exertion was immediately associated with the heart symptoms. Holly v Queensboro Corp., 9 A.D.2d 819, 192 N.Y.S.2d 664, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6172 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959), app. denied, 7 N.Y.2d 709, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1605 (N.Y. 1960).

An award of death benefits was sustained on the basis of testimony that decedent, a building superintendent, on the day preceding his death from a heart attack was engaged in carrying cans of old bricks up a flight of stairs and putting them on the sidewalk, in course of cleaning out an incinerator, and complained of not feeling well and having sharp pains in his chest. Stewart v

234. —Lifting or carrying; building materials, supplies and the like.

An express messenger with a pre-existing heart ailment who lifted a plank weighing about 150 pounds and suffered a fatal heart collapse three minutes later suffers an accidental injury. Golden v Railway Express Agency, Inc., 255 A.D. 735, 6 N.Y.S.2d 822, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4954 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938).

A metal lather who lifted an 80 pound plank overhead while erecting a scaffold and suffers a coronary attack sustains an accidental injury. Murphy v Seitz & Mader, 278 A.D. 622, 101 N.Y.S.2d 875, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4115 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

A truck driver who, being unsatisfied with the way the load of bricks he was carrying were arranged, participated in rearranging part of the load, moving 1000 to 1200 bricks weighing approximately five pounds each and who immediately thereafter was taken with a sudden pain over his heart and became unconscious suffering acute myocarditis suffers an accident arising in and out of the course of his employment. Seebold v Quaker Ridge Fuel & Supply Corp., 278 A.D. 730, 103 N.Y.S.2d 37, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4507 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

Work of building construction employee in carrying wooden planks over rough terrain and up and down a ramp, superimposed upon a pre-existing coronary insufficiency, subjected him to an unusual strain resulting in his death in the course of his employment. Luongo v Caristo Constr. Corp., 284 A.D. 1078, 135 N.Y.S.2d 821, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4613 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

A 62-year old laborer while carrying two or three bags of cement in a wheelbarrow felt a sharp pain in his chest. That evening his physician diagnosed decedent's condition as a coronary spasm and shortly thereafter decedent died of coronary thrombosis. Death benefits award sustained. Costa v Lustbader Co., 286 A.D. 1056, 144 N.Y.S.2d 860, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5120 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

On day decedent suffered fatal heart attack, he had been laying cinder blocks weighing 40 to 45 lbs. Work was strenuous and entailed greater exertion than ordinary wear and tear of life. There was evidence of acute infarction precipitated by strain of work on day of attack. Held: finding of accident sustained. Farrell v L. B. Constr. Corp., 5 A.D.2d 705, 168 N.Y.S.2d 725, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3494 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Decedent, an electrician, had pre-existing heart condition. Board properly found that, while engaged in installation of wall receptacles, which included lifting and bending heavy pipes, and due to unusual strain and exertion of working in cold, unheated barn with heavy dust and air, decedent sustained aggravation of heart condition resulting in death. Mathiez v Meyer, 6 A.D.2d 741, 174 N.Y.S.2d 340, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5813 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 5 N.Y.2d 705, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1567 (N.Y. 1958).

Decedent attempted to lift barrel of sand weighing over 300 pounds. There was substantial evidence to support finding that unusual strain, superimposed on pre-existing sclerotic condition of coronary arteries, caused injuries to his back, coronary strain and insufficiency which brought on his death. Held: Death was causally related to accident. Sutkowski v Prosperity Co., 7 A.D.2d 660, 179 N.Y.S.2d 166, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4299 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

There was substantial evidence to sustain a finding of accident and causal relation between death of an employee from a heart condition and some heavy lifting done by the employee in course of his work where it appeared that decedent, while employed as an apartment house superintendent, fell down stairs and fractured two ribs on December 22, 1955, thereafter required assistance from his son on the work, and on April 25, 1956, had occasion to move certain doors weighing 30 to 60 pounds to make a plumbing repair in course of which he dropped one of the doors and his son observed that he was red in the face and gasping for breath. Janitz v Evelyn Realty Co., 11 A.D.2d 822, 202 N.Y.S.2d 559, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8486 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Where claimant, after working for an hour and a half lifting rubber slabs weighing about 15 pounds each from a shoulder high platform and placing them on a scale four inches from the floor, at a speed varying from three to ten seconds each, suffered a pain in the chest, began to sweat, and became dizzy, which condition was diagnosed as due to an acute coronary thrombosis, the evidence was sufficient to show causal relation between the arduous nature of the work and the heart attack. Puccio v General Cable Corp., 13 A.D.2d 558, 211 N.Y.S.2d 966, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12178 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain an award of death benefits where decedent died on the job from an acute heart attack after transferring steel billets from one hot furnace to another, the billets weighing about 20 pounds apiece and transported by tongs 18 inches long holding it away from the body at arms' length because of its heat while being carried from 15 to 20 feet between furnaces. Evans v Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corp., 22 A.D.2d 838, 253 N.Y.S.2d 853, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2788 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

Workers' Compensation Board properly ruled, on millhand's motion for reargument, that even though he had been working since October 1992 under 20-pound lifting restriction due to severe arthritic spinal condition, he was able to effectively perform his job until June 1994 injury to his back from lifting aluminum pipes rendered him totally disabled; thus, apportionment did not apply. Peziol v VAW of Am., 245 A.D.2d 877, 667 N.Y.S.2d 70, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13402 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

235. —Lifting or carrying; home furniture, appliances and the like

Decedent had pre-existing arteriosclerosis. His employment included moving furniture. Five days before his death while moving furniture, including a large refrigerator and studio couch, he became ill, short of breath and complained of chest pains. Held: evidence supported finding that undue and extra effort brought on fatal heart attack. Riley v Dean of Ithaca, Inc., 5 A.D.2d 913, 170 N.Y.S.2d 901, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6735 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 5 A.D.2d 1019, 172 N.Y.S.2d 793, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6373 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958), app. denied, 4 N.Y.2d 677, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1460 (N.Y. 1958).

With respect to a condition diagnosed as a cerebrovascular accident, the evidence was considered sufficient to sustain an award where it appeared that on the preceding day claimant had been moving household furniture, much of which was very heavy, as a truck driver and mover from one residence to another when "his arm went to sleep on him" and finally "gave out," there being medical testimony that the heavy lifting would be sufficient to bring on the attack. Grear v P. J. Garvey Carting & Storage, Inc., 11 A.D.2d 582, 200 N.Y.S.2d 684, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9934 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

A question of fact was presented and there was sufficient evidence to sustain a finding of the Board that, notwithstanding a pre-existing cardiac condition, death of an employee 51 years of age was due to the strenuous nature of the work which he was doing where, after moving or helping to move some lamps, tables, and other furniture, he complained of pain and shortly thereafter collapsed and died. Connolly v Waldorf Astoria Corp., 12 A.D.2d 712, 208 N.Y.S.2d 758, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6257 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), app. denied, 9 N.Y.2d 610, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1673 (N.Y. 1961).

There was substantial evidence to sustain a finding of the Board that claimant's myocardial infarction was causally related to an industrial accident about a week before he actually quit working when his work required him to move a 300 pound piece of furniture about four feet after ascending four flights of stairs while carrying a 30 pound bundle, at which time he broke into a cold sweat and experienced chest pains. Alterowitz v Alba-De Luxe Upholstering Corp., 17 A.D.2d 1021, 234 N.Y.S.2d 389, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6727 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

The evidence was sufficient to sustain an award of death benefits with respect to an apartment house maintenance superintendent, 56 years of age, where it showed that on the day in question he was engaged in removing a refrigerator weighing between 100 and 200 pounds through crowded halls and down steps, which was not part of his regular duties, suffered chest pains, and died two days later. Bradshaw v Butler, 18 A.D.2d 853, 236 N.Y.S.2d 157, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4867 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

236. —Lifting or carrying; cases, boxes

An employee who on February 25th felt a pain in his back while lifting eighty pound boxes and had difficulty in breathing, having to stop work, but returned to work without having seen a doctor and continued to work until March 18th when he collapsed as he was pushing out a rack of meat, does not suffer an accidental injury where this activity did not require unusual exertion for him, and at the time he had an advanced pre-existing coronary arteriosclerosis and a myocardial infarct. Dworak v E. Greenbaum Co., 261 A.D. 1022, 25 N.Y.S.2d 829, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8581 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 287 N.Y. 555, 38 N.E.2d 224, 287 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 555, 1941 N.Y. LEXIS 2449 (N.Y. 1941).

Where a handyman, who had suffered no previous illness, was directed to pick up a box weighing from seventy-five to one hundred pounds, whereupon he immediately suffered a coronary occlusion, he suffers an accidental injury within the meaning of this section. Fine v Pioneer Sportswear Co., 262 A.D. 782, 27 N.Y.S.2d 397, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5839 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

An employee who suffers a coronary thrombosis as the result of lifting cases in the regular course of his employment sustains accidental injuries. Lowensberg v J. Gerber & Co., 272 A.D. 981, 72 N.Y.S.2d 845, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4489 (N.Y. App. Div. 1947).

Claimant, having a preexisting coronary sclerosis was entitled to compensation upon proof that while in the course of his employment and on a certain day he felt a pain in his chest which continued during the week and later on in the week upon lifting up a case there was sudden increase in the pain in his chest. Katz v Francis H. Leggett & Co., 282 A.D. 753, 121 N.Y.S.2d 824, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4877 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Proof of over-exertion resulting in a coronary thrombosis was not sufficient where it was based on the testimony of a single witness who, although answering affirmatively a question as to whether decedent had told him in substance that he had strained himself lifting a box, had previously admitted being confused and remembering only that decedent had complained of pain. Juda v Bond Clothes, Inc., 284 A.D. 4, 130 N.Y.S.2d 141, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3326 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Substantial evidence supported Workers' Compensation Board's decision that claimant's disability was caused entirely by 1988 back sprain from lifting boxes, rather than 50 percent by it and 50 percent by 1976 back injury from assault, where claimant was asymptomatic and actively and continuously employed for 11 years after 1976 injury, her position as shipping and receiving clerk required her to lift boxes weighing 50 pounds or more for 8 to 10 hours per day, she accomplished that task without incident until 1988, and physician who treated both 1976 and 1988 injuries rejected any connection between claimant's 1976 injury and her 1988 disability. August v Chromalloy R & T, 240 A.D.2d 966, 659 N.Y.S.2d 538, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6990 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. dismissed, 90 N.Y.2d 1007, 666 N.Y.S.2d 102, 688 N.E.2d 1384, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3637 (N.Y. 1997).

237. —Lifting or carrying; cloth, textiles and the like

A decision denying benefits to claimant who suffered a coronary occlusion was affirmed where claimant testified that he first felt a chest pain while lifting a 75 pound bolt of cloth but co-worker did not see this accident and said there was no reason for claimant to pick up any cloth. Hospital records disclosed that claimant had stated to physician that he felt a dull pain two days prior to the alleged accident. Plafker v P. & J. Lewis, Inc., 1 A.D.2d 711, 146 N.Y.S.2d 739, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3725 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1955).

Decedent, foreman in laundry, developed symptoms of heart attack during the afternoon. He died 2 weeks later from coronary condition and myocardial infarction. There were hearsay declarations by decedent to effect that, when he was lifting bag of wash, he felt sharp chest pains. There was testimony by co-employee that decedent lifted bundles of wet wash weighing 50 to 60 pounds nearly every day. That was some corroboration of the hearsay declaration. And there was medical testimony to sustain causal relation. Award affirmed. Svigals v Blue Diamond Laundry No. 1, Inc., 7 A.D.2d 800, 180 N.Y.S.2d 783, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3724 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Claimant, 62 years of age, and employed for many years as a supervising executive and foreman in a clothing factory, was entitled to compensation for a heart attack where, just prior thereto, he lifted several bundles of sleeves, each containing 40 to 45 sleeves, one at a time, carried them about nine feet to a table, and pushed the bundles along the table. Silverman v Calvert Coat Mfg. Co., 9 A.D.2d 973, 193 N.Y.S.2d 681, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5660 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

238. —Lifting or carrying; books, paper

The testimony of the president of the employer, disabled from a coronary occlusion, that he suffered a chest pain while moving two heavy rolls of paper in the course of his work could be disregarded by the Board as lacking credibility where, after the alleged accident, the claimant drove 120 miles, didn't see a physician until the following day, gave physician a history of "pain after dinner," the physician did not report until two months later, and employer's report was not filed until more than one month after the alleged accident. Zellner v Ulster Tissue Mills, Inc., 1 A.D.2d 710, 146 N.Y.S.2d 762, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3723 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1955), app. denied, 1 A.D.2d 793, 149 N.Y.S.2d 236, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6563 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956), app. denied, 1 N.Y.2d 641, 1956 N.Y. LEXIS 1339 (N.Y. 1956).

Claimant was employed as a hat packer and suffered an acute heart attack while working. Held: his testimony that in order to get at and remove a bundle of tissue paper which he described as having been broken or damaged, it was necessary to lift up 2 other bundles of tissue weighing about 150 pounds and as he did that he felt a pain in his chest and thereupon became acutely ill was not so incredible as to hold as a matter of law that there was no substantial evidence to sustain an award. Kaminsky v Oriole Hat Co., 4 A.D.2d 900, 166 N.Y.S.2d 801, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4289 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Board properly found that on November 19, 1954 decedent was subjected to unusual strain while lifting heavy inventory books causing him to suffer acute myocardial infarction. He was totally disabled until his death on April 9, 1955. Medical evidence adequately established causal relation between accident and death. Wasserman v Covington Fabrics Corp., 9 A.D.2d 554, 189 N.Y.S.2d 503, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7399 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Notwithstanding conflicts in testimony, there was sufficient medical testimony to sustain the Board's determination that augmentation of an existing heart condition was due to an accident in course of employment of claimant as a traveling auditor when he suffered sharp pains across his chest and quit work for the time being after carrying books of a client which weighed approximately 64 pounds from the basement to where he was working. Witten v Sargoy & Stein, 15 A.D.2d 617, 222 N.Y.S.2d 369, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6838 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

239. —Lifting or carrying; advertising materials

Perforation of a gastric ulcer, which the employee had had many years prior to the accident, by the strain of lifting a billboard is an accident. Clifford v R. K. O. Corp., 263 A.D. 914, 32 N.Y.S.2d 206, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7348 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

A salesman with high blood pressure suffered a compensable accident where, in the course of his employment, he did extensive traveling, lifted advertising bundles several times, suffered sharp pains during the day and died that night of a coronary occlusion.

Cramer v Sunshine Biscuits, Inc., 2 A.D.2d 719, 152 N.Y.S.2d 375, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5017 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

240. —Lifting or carrying; trunks, luggage, and the like

Where a deceased employee, about 68 years of age, employed as a messenger, was already suffering from a pre-existing heart condition when he slumped over dead while carrying a brief case containing documents weighing four to six pounds to a bank for delivery, the evidence was insufficient to show any accident to which death could be attributed and a compensation award was properly denied. Goldman v White & Case, 9 N.Y.2d 763, 215 N.Y.S.2d 71, 174 N.E.2d 744, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1411 (N.Y. 1961).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain death award for heart attack where private chauffeur, who had been under treatment for a heart condition for several years, was assisting a housekeeper in carrying an overseas case weighing between 70 and 75 pounds, a "few feet" to the trunk of an automobile, as a result of which he collapsed and died. Schuren v Wolfson, 30 N.Y.2d 90, 330 N.Y.S.2d 368, 281 N.E.2d 169, 1972 N.Y. LEXIS 1483 (N.Y. 1972).

Compensation is properly payable to a truckman who carried a heavy trunk up three flights of stairs and suffered a pneumothorax which activated a pre-existing pulmonary tuberculosis. De Simone v Railway Express Agency, Inc., 272 A.D. 987, 72 N.Y.S.2d 707, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4513 (N.Y. App. Div. 1947).

241. —Long work hours

A pipe threader suffering from arteriosclerosis who worked overtime on a rush job and was stricken with a heart attack sustains an accidental injury under this section. Kusel v Eastern Bridle Iron & Steel Corp., 258 A.D. 831, 115 N.Y.S.2d 569, 15 N.Y.S.2d 569, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7148 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939), aff'd, 283 N.Y. 671, 28 N.E.2d 400, 283 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 671, 1940 N.Y. LEXIS 1111 (N.Y. 1940).

An employee suffers an accidental injury where he suffers a heart attack brought on by working seven days a week from twelve to fourteen hours per day. Furtardo v American Export Airlines, Inc., 274 A.D. 954, 83 N.Y.S.2d 745, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4234 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

Decedent, laundry supervisor, had performed supervisory duties during maintenance work on Saturday. There was no proof that he lifted or moved any object. He left premises in early afternoon. When he arrived home in early evening, witness testified decedent said he didn't feel good, that he had picked up heavy basket and hurt himself. He died following day of heart attack. Claim dismissed. Ohriner v Jamaice Wet Wash Laundry Co., 5 A.D.2d 901, 170 N.Y.S.2d 931, 171 N.Y.S.2d 129, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6712 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Decedent, hearing reporter for Workmen's Compensation Board, had suffered from chronic rheumatic heart disease from age 7. Because of condition, employer permitted him to cease work early. On the day of alleged accident he worked longer than usual, felt "heart palpitations" during late afternoon and was tired when he finished. He continued to work for over 1 month and died during operation the following year. Decision denying death benefits affirmed. Slave v New York State Workmen's Compensation Board, 5 A.D.2d 905, 171 N.Y.S.2d 135, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6722 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 4 N.Y.2d 676, 174 N.Y.S.2d 1025, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1438 (N.Y. 1958).

Award in heart case affirmed where there was ample medical evidence that the injury was due to the strain of continuous work without sleep. Warner v R. K. David Moving & Storage, 32 A.D.2d 982, 302 N.Y.S.2d 169, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3523 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969).

Substantial evidence supported the Workmen's Compensation Board's finding that activities of the claimant had been strenuous and arduous where claimant, from early March to 3 June 1968, had performed strenuous work in getting the business operational, working long hours with no day off, and that on 2 June, while carrying a basket of balls he experienced chest pains but continued at work with recurring pain, and visited a doctor the following day only after experiencing severe pain while cutting grass. Lowy v Auto Baseball, Inc., 37 A.D.2d 1014, 325 N.Y.S.2d 376, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3096 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1971).

An employer who forced his employee to drive trucks for long hours with little sleep was liable as a self-insurer for the heart condition of the truck driver aggravated by working conditions which placed undue strain on the employee beyond the ordinary wear and tear of life. Ellis v Associated Transport, Inc., 39 A.D.2d 1002, 333 N.Y.S.2d 612, 1972 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4159 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1972).

242. —Operation of machinery or mechanical devices

Death benefit was properly awarded for death of a metal molder in a radiator factory who manipulated ladles with hard-turning handles and then died of myocardial infarction, coronary thrombosis and arteriosclerosis. Krupinski v U. S. Radiator Corp., 305 N.Y. 732, 112 N.E.2d 848, 305 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 732, 1953 N.Y. LEXIS 1263 (N.Y. 1953).

An award of disability and death benefits arising out of death of a garage employee was affirmed upon findings of the Board that his pre-existing rheumatic heart condition was aggravated by two to two and one-half hours' continuous work lubricating automobiles with a five-pound grease gun. Jessup v Jessup & Stevens Garage, 10 N.Y.2d 854, 221 N.Y.S.2d 736, 178 N.E.2d 437, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 991 (N.Y. 1961).

A bakery foreman who strained himself repairing a dough mixer and three days later suffered a coronary occlusion sustains an accidental injury. Leventhal v W. B. & V. Rye Bread Corp., 278 A.D. 622, 101 N.Y.S.2d 800, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4114 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

An employee suffering a coronary occlusion while engaged in operating the foot lever of a machine requiring 100 lbs of dead weight to depress suffered an accident within the meaning of this law where the operation of the machine was not a regular and continuous part of his work but used by him only 2 or 3 hours a day every 3rd or 4th week. Clayback v Globe Woven Belting Co., 282 A.D. 973, 125 N.Y.S.2d 493, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5602 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

An award was proper where a claimant, operating a cement smoothing machine, suffered a pain in his chest early in the morning but continued to work and was later found to have suffered a spontaneous pneumothorax. Mascali v Edison Concrete Corp., 283 A.D. 905, 130 N.Y.S.2d 11, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5700 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

A handyman was seen mowing employer's lawn with an old and heavy mower and shortly thereafter was found dead from a heart attack. There was evidence that the ground where the decedent was found was bumpy and rough and that with strain of pushing a mower over this ground was a causative factor of death. Award affirmed. Houghton v Robinson, 286 A.D. 904, 141 N.Y.S.2d 890, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4472 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

Claimant, who suffered from high blood pressure, was assigned to repair a machine, which necessitated his assuming a kneeling position. He collapsed and died shortly after. While the medical testimony was conflicting, there was substantial evidence that claimant's work caused a rise in his already high blood pressure, which resulted in a brain hemorrhage. Fisher v National Biscuit Co., 3 A.D.2d 786, 160 N.Y.S.2d 314, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6198 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), reh'g denied, 3 A.D.2d 960, 163 N.Y.S.2d 936, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5457 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957), app. denied, 3 N.Y.2d 706 (N.Y. 1957).

Decedent, a utility lineman, had climbed transmission tower of fifty feet in height. After using tenpound bolt cutter to sever wires, he suffered heart attack. Board found that due to unusual strain and arduous work together with underlying coronary condition, decedent had suffered coronary sclerosis with occlusion causing his death. Award affirmed. Bush v Empire Utility Constr., Inc., 7 A.D.2d 681, 179 N.Y.S.2d 246, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4331 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Where claimant had suffered a compensable back injury resulting in tearing of the annulus or cartilage in 1945, and thereafter, while in the armed services and later working for different employers, had further trouble with his back resulting in subsequent compensation claims, some of which were still pending and undetermined, a claim against a particular employer based upon his sudden feeling of a severe pain in his back and legs while operating a bulldozer, and merely sitting in the seat and driving the machine in the usual manner, failed to show anything in the nature of an accident upon which such a claim could be based. Hogan v Weldmaster Co., 11 A.D.2d 557, 199 N.Y.S.2d 873, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10191 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

To establish relationship of a heart attack to employment of a deceased employee, it is sufficient to show that he was the caretaker of a building and suffered the attack after polishing three floors of the building with an electric polisher weighing about 90 pounds without establishing that he showed evidence of pain at the exact moment he was lifting the machine. Webb v Twelve Pine Street, Inc., 12 A.D.2d 555, 206 N.Y.S.2d 1015, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7254 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain an award of death benefits in a heart case where the attack came on shortly after decedent reported for duty as reliefman on a manually operated "hand soaker" and worked for an hour and a half, as against the normal shift of only one-half hour on that job, lifting about 24 bottles every minute and a half from a conveyor belt and placing them on a table where a chain pulled them into the soaker. Miller v F & M Schaefer Brewing Co., 16 A.D.2d 718, 226 N.Y.S.2d 927, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10328 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

A finding was proper that the claimant while engaged in operating a 60 or 70 pound floor buffing machine experienced chest pains, that such arduous effort was more than ordinary wear and tear of life causing claimant to suffer a myocardial infarction and this constituted an accidental injury within the meaning of the law and the resulting disability was causally related to such accidental injury. Suarez v Owners Maintenance Corp., 35 A.D.2d 861, 315 N.Y.S.2d 219, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3590 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

Employee, who died from occlusive coronary artery sclerosis, did not die due to an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment on theory that the physical effort of his job requiring mopping and waxing hallways and elevators and polishing brass work was too strenuous, where decedent's work efforts did not involve excessive strain or unusual exertion, where any work activity was strenuous for decedent, and where death was caused by heart condition from which decedent had been suffering since 1955. Wallace v Rockefeller Constr. Ctr., 46 A.D.2d 956, 362 N.Y.S.2d 64, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3303 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974), app. denied, 36 N.Y.2d 643, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 2486 (N.Y. 1975).

Claimant proved that his psoriasis was causally related to his employment as heavy construction worker where (1) during such work, he sustained small burn to his hand that did not heal and was diagnosed as psoriasis, which ultimately affected his feet, knees, and elbows as well as his hands, (2) his treating dermatologist reported that pressure on claimant's extremities created by use of heavy tools and by other heavy work aggravated psoriasis and that condition was causally related to employment, (3) although employer's expert noted that psoriasis was genetic, that claimant was predisposed to that condition, and that it was difficult to determine causal relationship to claimant's work, same expert also noted that burn to claimant's hand might have started process, that working conditions might have aggravated it and caused it to persist, and that claimant never had psoriasis before he sustained burn while on job, and (4) thus, claimant's use of heavy tools was required distinctive feature of his employment that acted on his predisposition for psoriasis to cause disability that did not previously exist. McDonald v Danforth, 286 A.D.2d 845, 730 N.Y.S.2d 571, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8853 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

243. —Pushing or pulling, in general

An award of compensation was properly made where decedent employed to clean sewers had customarily operated a machine with which he removed sludge in buckets having a weight of 30 lbs. but while engaged in pulling an unusual weight of about 100 lbs. he suffered injuries and died therefrom. Bealer v Amherst, 303 N.Y. 963, 106 N.E.2d 55, 303 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 963, 1952 N.Y. LEXIS 1398 (N.Y. 1952).

There is an accidental injury where a shipping clerk suffers a coronary occlusion and myocardial infarction when attempting to move a steam boiler weighing seventeen hundred pounds in order to load other items on a truck. Goldstein v Bleiberg Plumbing Supplies, Inc., 265 A.D. 1024, 38 N.Y.S.2d 1007, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6671 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943).

An employee who collapsed and died shortly after pushing a hand truck weighing between 2000 and 2500 pounds in a room with a temperature of between 90 and 95 degrees is engaged in work which requires unusual effort and unusual strain and the employee's death was a natural result of accidental injuries which he sustained. Toole v Carborundum, 272 A.D. 850, 70 N.Y.S.2d 179, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3894 (N.Y. App. Div. 1947).

Heart attack sustained by a shoemaker who was engaged in pulling shoes from a wooden last was sustainable on proof that unusual strain was involved because the last had not been waxed for some time and therefore required greater than usual physical effort to remove. Rapisardi v Rialto Shoe Co., 282 A.D. 972, 125 N.Y.S.2d 617, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5600 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

An accident was associated as the cause of the claimant's disability where he, an auto mechanic, sustained a pain in his chest while trying to pull a tire off a truck notwithstanding proof that his heart condition was of long standing and he said nothing to the doctor when first treated for a coronary occlusion. Hurt v Burns Bros., 283 A.D. 907, 129 N.Y.S.2d 878, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5703 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Decedent with a pre-existing heart condition suffered a compensable accident when, while pushing a one thousand pound hand truck which caught in the crack of a floor he collapsed and the next day died of acute myocardial infarction. Handaly v Alfred Blayer & Co., 286 A.D. 1050, 144 N.Y.S.2d 831, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5111 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955), reh'g denied, 1 A.D.2d 792, 149 N.Y.S.2d 234, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6555 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956), app. denied, 1 N.Y.2d 641, 1956 N.Y. LEXIS 1330 (N.Y. 1956).

The uncorroborated testimony of a physician that decedent had told him that he had pushed a table containing a teletype machine away from his desk and felt a sharp chest pain which later developed into a fatal myocardial infarction was not sufficient to sustain an award. Aaron v Burnham & Co., 2 A.D.2d 93, 154 N.Y.S.2d 652, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4693 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

After moving a six hundred pound boiler, the decedent complained of chest pains and, two days later, while doing lighter work, died of a heart attack. Although the medical testimony was in conflict an award for death was affirmed. Rowan v O. G. Jenks Heating Co., 2 A.D.2d 738, 152 N.Y.S.2d 333, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5045 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 2 N.Y.2d 705, 1956 N.Y. LEXIS 1202 (N.Y. 1956).

Claimant suffered a myocardial infarction when he pulled a cart containing boxes weighing about 200 pounds, from a concrete floor to an elevated wooden floor. The cart ran on metal wheels and the testimony was that some of the wheels "stuck" as the claimant pulled it. Held: even though it was his usual work to pull the truck to the bench on the elevated wooden floor where he worked, evidence supported a finding that the strain imposed a heavier than usual physical task; that the wheels "stuck"; and that this was part of effort of getting the cart up to the level of the wooden floor and there was also sufficient medical evidence to associate the physical condition with this specific event as well as to justify a holding that the physical condition was so recent as to have been precipitated by that event. Kamiel v Orwasher Bakery, Inc., 4 A.D.2d 899, 166 N.Y.S.2d 828, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4288 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), reh'g denied, 5 A.D.2d 708, 168 N.Y.S.2d 942, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3499 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

On day of his death, decedent moved hand truck containing material weighing 300 to 350 lbs. across street and on return trip to employer's premises, while attempting to get hand truck onto sidewalk, he collapsed and died of a heart attack. Award affirmed. Fiedler v Grand Textile Corp., 5 A.D.2d 706, 168 N.Y.S.2d 625, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3495 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Decedent had stated to his physician that he had pushed teletype machine weighing 150 pounds shortly before he suffered a heart attack. Fellow employee testified that decedent moved machine on average of once per day, that moving it was severe effort and that sudden demands for machine required fast movement. That was sufficient proof of circumstances and other evidence in corroboration of hearsay statement. Award Affirmed. Aaron v Burnham & Co., 8 A.D.2d 891, 186 N.Y.S.2d 958, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8304 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 9 A.D.2d 601, 189 N.Y.S.2d 122, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10590 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959), app. denied, 7 N.Y.2d 705, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1815 (N.Y. 1959).

The evidence was sufficient to sustain a finding that a myocardial infarction was due to the tipping over of a heavy filing case with the top drawer falling upon claimant, a secretary, such drawer weighing 70 to 80 pounds, and striking her on the chest, causing unusual effort to heave and push the drawer and cabinet back into place. Wood v John C. Monroe, Inc., 12 A.D.2d 829, 209 N.Y.S.2d 339, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13374 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

The evidence was sufficient to show causal relationship between a heart attack causing disability six days after decedent pulled a dolly truck weighing 70 to 80 pounds up six steps and felt a pain in his chest, began to perspire, and had difficulty in breathing, which forced him to stop working. Fisher v Merrill Ann Creations, 13 A.D.2d 562, 212 N.Y.S.2d 18, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12187 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

A board finding was sustained that claimant's heart condition was aggravated by an "accident" in course of employment when, at age 51 and while employed as a waitress, with the duty of removing dirty dishes from tables and depositing them in a large plastic container beneath the counter, she experienced a "hurting sensation" in her chest in attempting to pull out the container, then full of dirty dishes, following a busy lunch period, and was later hospitalized and diagnosed as having a heart condition. Burke v Chef's Hat Restaurant, 16 A.D.2d 712, 226 N.Y.S.2d 955, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10317 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

An award of death benefits was sustained upon the finding that decedent's fatal cerebral hemorrhage was caused by exertion of pushing a heavy floor-washing machine upon an elevator, there being credible evidence to sustain such a finding. Vickers v Bryant Park Bldg., 16 A.D.2d 714, 226 N.Y.S.2d 860, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10322 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Question of causal relationship between an incident when claimant, a salesman of lighting equipment, on one occasion when testing some equipment for a customer moved a ladder weighing 40 to 50 pounds from one room to another and pushed a desk weighing 150 pounds three or four feet was one of credibility, and the Board's conclusion that claimant's testimony was an afterthought amounted to a finding that he did not suffer an accidental injury, which could not be overturned. Karp v Lustra Corp. of America, 17 A.D.2d 1014, 233 N.Y.S.2d 845, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6999 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Where the deceased was involved in pushing a vehicle known as a "concrete buggy" which weighed about 900 pounds up an incline when he suffered acute heart failure, such evidence obviously supported a finding of "excessive strain" and that decedent had suffered an accidental injury. Robinson v De Silva Contracting Corp., 32 A.D.2d 683, 299 N.Y.S.2d 658, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4085 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969).

244. —Pushing or pulling; automobile or automobile parts

One employed as a chauffeur, butler and houseman who pushed an automobile from the street into a driveway, up an incline and into a garage on his employer's premises and three to five minutes afterwards, suffering a coronary thrombosis, is entitled to an award of compensation although he had a pre-existing coronary disease. Herriott v Phillips, 254 A.D. 609, 2 N.Y.S.2d 844, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6724 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938).

An award is correctly granted where claimant suffered a cardiac injury while pushing an automobile from the path of another which was driven into the garage where he worked. Shaw v Browers Garage, Inc., 268 A.D. 946, 51 N.Y.S.2d 429, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4344 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944), aff'd, 295 N.Y. 709, 65 N.E.2d 339, 295 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 709, 1946 N.Y. LEXIS 900 (N.Y. 1946).

Claimant was entitled to recover compensation for a heart attack where the evidence showed that he was required to push and pull a damaged automobile for about one hour and a half under rush conditions and to pound out dents in a badly damaged fender with a 3-pound hammer from an awkward position. Strickland v Justice Motors, Inc., 9 A.D.2d 805, 192 N.Y.S.2d 517, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6148 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959), app. denied, 7 N.Y.2d 710, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1624 (N.Y. 1960).

On the basis of medical testimony and evidence that claimant, suffering from a heart condition, underwent unusual strain in tugging and pulling on a snagged automobile bumper following which he experienced severe chest pains, causal relationship between claimant's heart attack and the incident was sufficiently established. Williams v Bumper & Auto Plating, Inc., 16 A.D.2d 997, 229 N.Y.S.2d 731, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9073 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

245. —Reaching or stretching

An employee while painting a wall and ceiling in a hotel from a ladder stretched his right arm "all the way out" to reach a corner and suffered a disabling heart attack. A finding that injury was accidental due to unusual work and exertion is proper despite the arguments that there was no evidence to support findings of accidental injuries arising out of course of employment within meaning of subd 7 of this section. Ruby v Lustig, 299 N.Y. 759, 87 N.E.2d 672, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 759, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 1182 (N.Y. 1949).

Claimant, a field manager and supervisor in home construction business, removed metal arch and closed archway in house under construction. Although metal was light, claimant had to break plaster around arch with hammer and pull it out while reaching overhead with both hands. While so engaged he felt pain and subsequently was found to have sustained acute myocardial infarction which was related to stress of work by medical evidence. Award affirmed. Carr v Sturdy Built Homes, Inc., 6 A.D.2d 914, 176 N.Y.S.2d 19, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5222 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Disallowance of death benefits, claimed on the basis of death from coronary occlusion due to "overexertion" in course of work as an acting county attorney, was upheld, where the alleged overexertion consisted of climbing flights of stairs and reaching for books on high shelves allegedly precipitating a series of heart attacks, but no one accident or event could be singled out as the cause of the ultimate condition resulting in death. Gallagher v County of Oswego, 14 A.D.2d 463, 216 N.Y.S.2d 134, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10156 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

With respect to a heart attack suffered by claimant, employed as a sponger and presser, allegedly as the result of attempting to remove some 15 topcoats weighing about 60 pounds from an overhead rack and straining up to untangle them when the hangers caught, there was sufficient evidence to sustain the board's determination that claimant's heart condition was not due to an accident sustained in course of employment, the evidence being in conflict as to whether claimant worked at all on the day in question and that a sponger and presser did not handle more than one garment at a time, and these weighed only slightly more than one pound apiece. Dicasoli v Harry Irwin, Inc., 14 A.D.2d 477, 217 N.Y.S.2d 250, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9814 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 10 N.Y.2d 708, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 2137 (N.Y. 1961).

An award of death benefits in a heart case could be sustained on the basis of causal relationship to work done in course of employment as an apartment house superintendent in plastering a hole in the ceiling, which work required him to work standing on a step ladder with arms outstretched overhead and, after a short time, decedent complained of pains in his chest, but nevertheless returned to work to finish the job, and medical evidence that such work could have impaired his flow of blood and caused a myocardial anoxia. Cronberg v Lenmar Holding Corp., 17 A.D.2d 885, 233 N.Y.S.2d 370, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7322 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Award by board of death benefits upheld under evidence that decedent's employment activities on the date of his death which required him to manually operate an air hose with his arms either raised or at his side for a period of some 10 or 15 minutes, while on his back, in limited space underneath a still-warm ironer, were strenuous, required the expenditure of more than normal exertion and were a contributing factor in his death.

Guidera v Abelove's Laundry, 33 A.D.2d 1070, 307 N.Y.S.2d 501, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5528 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

An award was properly upheld where the claimant performed strenuous plastering work while standing on a scaffold and reaching overhead, which was unusual physical exertion more than the ordinary wear and tear of life, and which precipitated the congestive heart failure and constituted an accidental injury arising out of and in the course of employment. Farda v McKeown Plastering Co., 35 A.D.2d 863, 315 N.Y.S.2d 261, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3594 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

246. —Repair work

An apartment house superintendent, suffering from a preexisting heart condition, sustained an industrial accident when he suffered an occlusion after he had worked all afternoon attempting to fix a clogged drain which he had previously described as the worst obstruction he had ever seen. Tukschin v Sirata, 2 A.D.2d 717, 152 N.Y.S.2d 497, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5015 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Decedent, an oil burner serviceman and mechanic, was engaged in joining lengths of pipe which had previously been strung on basement ceiling when he suffered sudden chest pain. He continued his overhead work until found unconscious. He died from coronary insufficiency secondary to coronary sclerosis and stenosis. Record supported conclusions that work was sufficiently strenuous to require more than normal exertion. There was medical evidence that work precipitated his death. Award affirmed. Cuvelier v Fairbanks & Walvoord, 6 A.D.2d 920, 175 N.Y.S.2d 677, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5232 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Decedent, plumber, was working in tight corner on air conditioner and in so doing he exerted unusual strain and effort. Board properly found that his death that same afternoon was due to said unusual strain superimposed on pre-existing arteriosclerosis causing coronary occlusion. Award affirmed. Molinari v Dodge Plumbing Co., 7 A.D.2d 792, 181 N.Y.S.2d 1, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3715 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Award of death benefits in a heart case was sustained where it appeared that decedent was employed as a machinist foreman in a shop for repair of heavy machinery and died with a heart attack on the day following heavy and arduous work in reinstalling repaired parts of a ship's engine. Hochmuth v Dryden Machine Corp., 15 A.D.2d 691, 223 N.Y.S.2d 581, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12006 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

247. —Snow removal

A superintendent of an apartment house who complained of a pain in his chest while shoveling snow and died of heart disease sustains an accidental injury within this section. Kuchta v R. G. G. Corp., 269 A.D. 1007, 58 N.Y.S.2d 482, 1945 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5012 (N.Y. App. Div. 1945).

The fact that a church caretaker, while shoveling snow, was engaged in his customary duties did not exclude a finding that he was subjected to unusual strain on a particular occasion where the snow was exceptionally deep and had been packed and frozen and had to be thrown in chunks over high snow piles. Kneen v Vestal Methodist Church, 2 A.D.2d 614, 151 N.Y.S.2d 838, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5458 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Evidence that decedent, a gas station attendant, undertook on the day of his death to remove ice from in front of the station, used a snow shovel for chopping up ice and that his body was found near a drain cover from which was protruding a screw driver from which an inference could be drawn that the decedent was attempting to pry open a drain at the time of his fatal heart attack sustained a board's finding that the deceased sustained an industrial accident. Kozlowski v Rogers, 3 A.D.2d 873, 161 N.Y.S.2d 181, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5892 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Claimant, carpenter's helper, shoveled snow for employer for 2 days. He felt unusually tired after first day and next day felt pain on left side of back under his shoulder blade. On subsequent examination, it was concluded that he had spontaneous pneumothorax with collapse of lung. There was medical opinion that condition began when he was shoveling snow. Award affirmed. Los v Kidd-Kott Constr. Co., 7 A.D.2d 804, 181 N.Y.S.2d 62, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3732 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Relationship of a heart attack to employment was sufficiently established by evidence that claimant was a janitor among whose duties was the operation of a gasoline driven snow plow weighing about 610 pounds which was hand controlled and had to be turned around at the end of the parking lot, and, on the day he suffered the attack, had gone to work at six o'clock in the morning because of a snow storm which required the removal of eight to ten inches of wet snow. Jackson v Board of Education, 12 A.D.2d 542, 206 N.Y.S.2d 737, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7238 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

A heart specialist's testimony that claimant's physical effort in shoveling snow from a parking lot operated by him individually and as an officer and principal stockholder of a corporation, during which he felt drawing pains in his shoulders and his later efforts in moving around an old car, the steering wheel of which was hard to turn, during which he felt a pain in the chest and shoulders, was sufficient basis for a finding of relationship between a cardiac infarction and his employment. Grodsky v Front Street Parking, Inc., 13 A.D.2d 586, 212 N.Y.S.2d 212, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11949 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain an award of death benefits with respect to death of a building superintendent, 50 years of age, following several days of heavy snow shoveling to keep the sidewalks and entrances of the building clear from snow during a succession of snowstorms. Bleich v 63rd Bldg. Corp., 15 A.D.2d 584, 221 N.Y.S.2d 806, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7266 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Claim for workers' compensation benefits was properly denied where testimony by 2 physicians who examined claimant was sufficient to support finding that there was no nexus between his 1990 work-related back injury and his 1993 back injury incurred while shoveling snow at his residence. Baskerville v J.J. Keenan Constr. Corp., 245 A.D.2d 906, 666 N.Y.S.2d 848, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13582 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

248. —Standing, walking, running and the like

Decedent sustained no accidental injury and his death is not the result of such an injury, where decedent was a bellhop, and while standing with a bag and package in his hands waiting for an elevator, collapsed and died on the same day of coronary thrombosis and arteriosclerosis. Hyshiver v Hotel Laurelton, 246 A.D. 660, 283 N.Y.S. 285, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9604 (N.Y. App. Div. 1935).

An award is proper for death of an employee who suffered a fatal coronary occlusion while in the employer's business as the result of over exertion and strain caused by running several hundred feet while carrying a suitcase in order to catch a departing boat. Aldor v Atlas Commissary Co., 266 A.D. 928, 43 N.Y.S.2d 865, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5265 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943).

A carpet mill laborer who sustained a perforation of a preexisting gastric ulcer due to pushing a hand truck suffers an accidental injury. Ostrowski v Mohawk Carpet Mills, Inc., 275 A.D. 874, 88 N.Y.S.2d 865, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4849 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

Decedent was employed as bus driver. His bus broke down and he issued transfers to passengers. Decedent thereafter collapsed while walking on nearby gas station lot apparently to find telephone. There was no proof of any physical exertion or emotional strain. Held: finding of accidental causation was without support. McDaniel v Niagara Frontier Transit Co., 7 A.D.2d 682, 179 N.Y.S.2d 254, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4333 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

249. —Driving

Aggravation of the decedent's chronic heart condition by the strain of driving a bus and further aggravation, after an acute attack, from driving the relief bus back to the garage, constituted an accident. Verno v Schenectady R. Co., 283 A.D. 1128, 131 N.Y.S.2d 862, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6499 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Claimant, a taxicab driver, collapsed while on duty. His condition was diagnosed as coronary occlusion and myocardial infarction. His credibility was involved as to whether his work before attack was more arduous than usual. Medical testimony negated causal relation. Feldman v National Transp., 5 A.D.2d 1034, 173 N.Y.S.2d 343, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6190 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

250. —Telephoning

There is no accident where an employee whose duties were to observe fluctuations on the electrical indicators of his employer and to telephone necessary orders in the case of break-downs, where, nearly one hour after a break-down, the deceased while telephoning orders, fell back in his chair and died within a few minutes and it appeared upon a post mortem examination that his heart was twice the normal weight and that he had suffered from heart trouble for many years. O'Connell v Adirondack Electric Power Corp., 193 A.D. 582, 185 N.Y.S. 455, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5606 (N.Y. App. Div. 1920).

Evidence supported determination of Workers' Compensation Board that claimant was injured in course of her employment as collection assistant, where her work involved making phone calls and entering information into her computer, she twisted her body when she got up from her desk and her chair went sideways, and she was diagnosed as having acute sprain of her lower back that resulted in mild partial disability. Lehsten v NACM-Upstate NY, 236 A.D.2d 1, 663 N.Y.S.2d 687, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10890 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997), rev'd, 93 N.Y.2d 368, 690 N.Y.S.2d 506, 712 N.E.2d 673, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 818 (N.Y. 1999).

251. —Janitorial or handyman work

A janitor with pre-existing arteriosclerosis who washed smoke damaged walls and suffered a dizzy spell followed by hemiplegia suffers an accidental injury within the meaning of the workmen's compensation law. Rivenburg v Morris' Estate, 256 A.D. 869, 9 N.Y.S.2d 102, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5182 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

A janitor who lived on the premises and who was summoned home by telephone to attend to a flood and suffered a heart attack upon reaching the premises suffers an accidental injury. Boest v 1318 Kings Highway Corp., 268 A.D. 943, 51 N.Y.S.2d 353, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4330 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944).

There was sufficient substantial evidence to support a finding of causal relationship between death by heart disease and the work done by the employee shortly before where it appeared that, for two years prior to death, he was superintendent of a 62-family apartment house with a multitude of duties and for five or six months prior to his death he had no help, although he had requested it, and therefore was arising at 5 o'clock in the morning to take care of the boiler, clean and wax floors, and frequently complained to his wife of pains in his shoulders, arms and chest. Shefick v Lefrak, 11 A.D.2d 828, 202 N.Y.S.2d 410, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8495 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

252. —Working with ladders

There is no accidental injury within the meaning of this section where the only evidence is that the employer, while moving ladders felt something in his eye which he rubbed, about four hours later, while working on a scaffold, he felt a sharp pain in his eye, and after working a few days thereafter, the employee went to a hospital and was operated upon for a detachment of the retina, and further the employee's eye was originally myopic, there was proof that the myopia was a contributing cause of the detachment, and there was no proof that the employee fell or struck himself. Dengler v Doudera Decorating Co., 264 A.D. 982, 33 N.Y.S.2d 725, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5613 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1942).

On the basis of conflicting evidence as to casual relationship between an incident on November 12 when the employee suffered unusual exertion in attempting to keep an extension ladder from falling when it was caught in a gust of wind, his medical diagnosis as suffering coronary infarction made November 12, and ultimate death, an award of death benefits must be affirmed. De Carlo v Bergamini, 16 A.D.2d 1001, 229 N.Y.S.2d 276, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9079 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

253. —Blacksmithing

The commission is justified in making an award to the widow of an employee who, while engaged in bending heavy steel rods which required great physical effort, died suddenly through dilatation of the heart, and this although he may have had a previous cardiac lesion. Uhl v Guarantee Const. Co., 174 A.D. 571, 161 N.Y.S. 659, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8286 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

A blacksmith who had previously suffered from heart disease, and who collapsed and died as the result of a coronary occlusion while shoeing a horse, does not suffer accidental injuries in the nature of extreme and severe exertion and accordingly the death of the decedent was not accidental. La Fountain v La Fountain, 259 A.D. 1095, 21 N.Y.S.2d 193, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8126 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 284 N.Y. 729, 31 N.E.2d 199, 284 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 729, 1940 N.Y. LEXIS 1337 (N.Y. 1940).

Claimant, a blacksmith and machinist, collapsed while working and examination showed high blood pressure and coronary insufficiency. Next month while working he suffered other symptoms attributable to cardiac difficulty. Two months later he suffered coronary occlusion and subsequently died as a result thereof. There was medical evidence which causally related coronary occlusion to 2 earlier accidents. Award affirmed. Cianca v Reed Glass Co., 6 A.D.2d 920, 176 N.Y.S.2d 33, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5231 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

A finding of disability resulting from coronary insufficiency and myocardial infarction due to the effect of strenuous work activities upon claimant's pre-existing arteriosclerotic heart disease was sustained by sufficient evidence where it appeared that claimant, aged 74, was employed as a gardener and handyman on a country estate and suffered the attack in question after hauling around various heavy objects and doing some unusually strenuous work. Sczesniak v Whitney, 12 A.D.2d 366, 211 N.Y.S.2d 581, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12273 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

254. —Carpentry

Decedent, a carpenter, died as a result of coronary occlusion. He had been doing very light work before the morning coffee break at which time he complained of pain in chest. Decedent had been suffering from pre-existing generalized arteriosclerosis. On conflicting medical testimony, a Board found that his death was not compensable. Claim properly disallowed. Wilson v Brownell Constr. Co., 7 A.D.2d 674, 179 N.Y.S.2d 369, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4322 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

A finding that disability due to myocardial infarction was due to an accident was sustained where it appeared that at the time of suffering the attack the employee, a fur nailer, was using an extra amount of exertion in attempting to stretch a small skin to required dimensions. Kushner v Landau, Newman & Rosen, 13 A.D.2d 564, 211 N.Y.S.2d 744, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12192 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

255. —Installing fences, partitioning and the like

A stock and shipping clerk, required to help in partitioning space for additional quantities of merchandise, a duty requiring more exertion than that usually required of him, suffers an accidental injury where he sustains an acute attack of coronary thrombosis with myocardial infarction while doing this work. Bottke v Globe Stationery & Toy Co., 278 A.D. 621, 101 N.Y.S.2d 850, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4112 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

Decedent, whose employment on a public housing project involved no physical labor, was instructed to find someone to fence in an excavation. When he could find no one, he undertook the job himself. This involved digging holes and pounding fence posts with a large maul. Thereafter, he complained of tiredness. Three days later he was found dead. There was adequate medical testimony to associate the development of coronary thrombosis with the unusual physical work. Award affirmed. Savage v Binghamton Housing Authority, 3 A.D.2d 774, 160 N.Y.S.2d 209, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6180 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

256. —Other particular activities as overexertion

Where an employee had been subjected to unusual strain and exertion during his working hours in the week that preceded his disablement with a coronary occlusion and moved a large number of heavy objects after which he looked pale and weak on the day of his attack, he is properly awarded disability compensation and eventually death benefits even though the injury was not assignable to any accidental experience identified in space or time or to

A bookstore saleswoman who suffered a detached retina as the result of unusual exertion in her work over a considerable period of time prior to the day of her misfortune suffers an accidental injury. Carpenter v Sibley, Lindsay & Curr Co., 302 N.Y. 304, 97 N.E.2d 915, 302 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 304, 1951 N.Y. LEXIS 739 (N.Y. 1951).

A claimant disabled as the result of a heart attack brought on while he was engaged in the regular course of his employment as a supervising labor inspector and which was due to the pressure and strain of extraordinary and arduous work, suffers an accidental injury. Anderson v New York State Dep't of Labor, 275 A.D. 1010, 91 N.Y.S.2d 710, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5478 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

Award made for death caused by a ventricular fibrillation affirmed upon proof that decedent had previously suffered a heart attack and that just prior to suffering a second and fatal heart attack, he had in the course of his employment engaged in unusual exertion. Bingold v Krebs, 282 A.D. 786, 122 N.Y.S.2d 580, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4960 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Finding that employee with pre-existing heart condition died from natural causes was sustained where proof showed that after engaging in his ordinary duties during morning, he returned from lunch, collapsed on the job and died shortly thereafter. Meigh v Sperry Gyroscope Co., 284 A.D. 1074, 135 N.Y.S.2d 834, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4605 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

A supervisor of maintenance men with a pre-existing coronary disease suffered a compensable accident when he conducted two lecture sessions for maintenance men without the assistance he usually had and, after arriving home, collapsed from a coronary thrombosis and died nine days later. Cappozalo v New York City Housing Authority, 1 A.D.2d 709, 146 N.Y.S.2d 747, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3721 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1955).

Evidence supported the board's conclusion that the decedent, who died of a coronary thrombosis, had been subject to an unusual strain, which constituted an accident when the decedent cleaned out his employer's water well. Rambold v Whitney, 4 A.D.2d 906, 167 N.Y.S.2d 54, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4299 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 4 A.D.2d 991, 167 N.Y.S.2d 1020, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3863 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957), app. denied, 4 N.Y.2d 673, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1339 (N.Y. 1958).

According to his testimony, claimant, production manager of knitting mill, had been doing unusual, strenuous work on the morning he suffered a heart attack. Kravitz v Gates Knitting Mill, Inc., 5 A.D.2d 723, 168 N.Y.S.2d 639, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3523 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957), app. denied, 4 N.Y.2d 675, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1379 (N.Y. 1958).

Claimant, a field manager, did very little actual physical work. When his employer was to sell or liquidate a plant or business, he would go to the location and hire a crew to ready the premises. Preparing for such event, he fell ill and left the location. His condition was later diagnosed as coronary occlusion. Six months before, he had gone to his doctor who had diagnosed his then condition as coronary insufficiency. Held: the pre-existing condition was the sole cause of the coronary occlusion. Decision denying award affirmed. Perle v Industrial Plants Corp., 9 A.D.2d 594, 189 N.Y.S.2d 301, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7465 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

There was substantial evidence that an accident occurred where claimant testified that when he was laying brick in his capacity as a mason he felt a sharp pain as he stooped over to pick up a brick, there being medical opinion in the record that such an occurrence could bring on a "ruptured disc." Colangelo v B. S. Colangelo v B. S. McCarey Co., 13 A.D.2d 592, 212 N.Y.S.2d 466, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11956 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 9 N.Y.2d 613, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1774 (N.Y. 1961).

Although a claim for death benefits by the widow of the deceased vice-president of a corporation jointly owned and controlled by decedent and another involves conflicting testimony as to whether deceased sustained a heart attack while removing a bumper from a car, and likewise as to whether his death on the next day was due to that attack or that "accident," or was merely the culmination of a series of prior heart attacks, determination of credibility of witnesses being within the sole province of the Board, its finding of compensable accident must be sustained. Baum v B. & B. Auto Works, 15 A.D.2d 616, 222 N.Y.S.2d 559, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6837 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

A board finding, sustained by evidence, that decedent, a bookkeeper and cashier, was merely doing his normal work and did not sustain any "unusual stress or strain" which could constitute an accidental injury bringing on a heart attack, from which he died, was sustained. Roth v Model Pawnbrokers, 16 A.D.2d 841, 227 N.Y.S.2d 543, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9963 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 12 N.Y.2d 642, 1962 N.Y. LEXIS 1558 (N.Y. 1962).

There was ample evidence to sustain the board's finding in a heart case that the strenuous nature of claimant's work caused the attack, where it appeared that he was working with another painter painting about 85 ceilings a day, some of which were 16 feet high, when he sustained the attack. Savage v Michigan Mut. Liability Co., 17 A.D.2d 890, 233 N.Y.S.2d 496, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7329 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain a finding that claimant's disability from cerebral thrombosis was work-connected and brought on by stress and strain at age 47 where he was employed as sales manager by a dress manufacturer which required extensive travel with "tight" schedules to put on fashion shows for various department stores, had staged two such shows all by himself on the day before incurring disability, and suffered an emotional upset in air travel, etc. Lobman v Bernhard Altmann Corp., 19 A.D.2d 931, 244 N.Y.S.2d 425, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2882 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963), aff'd, 15 N.Y.2d 506, 254 N.Y.S.2d 113, 202 N.E.2d 559, 1964 N.Y. LEXIS 896 (N.Y. 1964).

257. —Effect of exertion which is employees' usual work

A laborer raking slag who suffers a heart attack while doing his usual work suffers an accidental injury where there is medical testimony that the effort of that work on that date precipitated the heart injury. Kayser v Erie County Highway Dep't, 276 A.D. 789, 92 N.Y.S.2d 612, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3332 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

Claimant (a bricklayer's helper who had a heart attack while carrying a 100 lb. bag of plaster across a sidewalk and down three or four steps to a basement) was subjected to unusual strain even though he was doing the work to which he had long been accustomed. Gioia v A. J. Courtmel Co., 283 A.D. 40, 126 N.Y.S.2d 94, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2975 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953), reh'g denied, 283 A.D. 677, 127 N.Y.S.2d 808, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4878 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

An award for a disability occasioned by a heart attack was sustained by evidence that claimant, a spotter in a retail cleaning store, pulled a heavy basket to the place where he did his work and when he straightened up felt a pain in his chest. Fact that claimant was doing work to which he was ordinarily accustomed did not bar a finding of unusual strain on the occasion in question. Rubin v Elite Store Cleaners, Inc., 283 A.D. 906, 130 N.Y.S.2d 58, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5702 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

A claimant could be subjected to unusual strain even though performing one of the easiet tasks of his day and performing only customary work. Thus, a structural iron worker sustained an industrial accident when he died of a coronary insufficiency while pulling a small truck. Commissioner of Taxation & Finance v M. H. Treadwell Co., 286 A.D. 906, 141 N.Y.S.2d 868, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4475 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

The decedent during the course of his work as a fruit store clerk suffered a coronary sclerosis. Although there was no proof that the work on that day was more arduous than that to which he was accustomed, there was medical proof that the day's work caused an unusual strain on the heart and, hence, death benefits could be awarded. Kosloff v Reifer, 2 A.D.2d 916, 156 N.Y.S.2d 463, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3928 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Death award was affirmed although attack occurred when decedent was engaged in work which was not more arduous than his customary work. Decedents job was to unload heavy rolls of paper from a freight car and the mere fact that he was performing his customary duties did not preclude a finding that he was subjected to unusual strain. Johnston v St. Regis Paper Co., 2 A.D.2d 916, 156 N.Y.S.2d 389, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3929 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956), reh'g denied, 3 A.D.2d 685, 159 N.Y.S.2d 956, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6640 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Decedent, a dock worker, accustomed to heavy work, collapsed while operating a gasoline pump. He had suffered from advanced coronary arteriosclerosis for many years and he died of arteriosclerosis. Award reversed. Lutjen v I. B. Miller Constr. Corp., 5 A.D.2d 898, 170 N.Y.S.2d 949 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

With respect to death by heart attack of a helper on a beer delivery truck, it appearing that he died immediately from a heart attack, already having a pre-existing heart condition, during a day when he was simply performing the usual heavy work of unloading cases of beer weighing from 45 to 50 pounds each, without any special occurrence in course of this work, there was no accident triggering the attack which would sustain an award. Di Cicco v Liebmann Breweries, Inc., 11 A.D.2d 613, 201 N.Y.S.2d 123, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9593 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Where there is medical testimony linking the heavy lifting which a deceased employee did on the day of his death from heart disease to his death, if the strain was more than the ordinary wear and tear of life it makes no difference that the lifting was part of decedent's normal work. Stefaniak v Chudy Paper Co., 12 A.D.2d 533, 206 N.Y.S.2d 704, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7226 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

It is now well settled that performance of one's customary duties does not preclude a finding that such activities themselves are sufficiently arduous to entail "greater exertion than the ordinary wear and tear of life." Pickhardt v C. H. Heist Ohio Corp., 20 A.D.2d 737, 246 N.Y.S.2d 850, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4382 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 14 N.Y.2d 484, 1964 N.Y. LEXIS 1739 (N.Y. 1964).

A board finding of cause of death as a heart condition, and that the heart condition was brought on by over-exertion, must evaluate causation from the viewpoint of the ordinary man and not in light of decedent's particular condition, and where the board finding is not so limited as to remove all doubt that the work in question was excessive only in light of decedent's diseased condition, the case will be remanded for proper findings. Estate of Rollo v Geneva Forge, Inc., 22 A.D.2d 726, 253 N.Y.S.2d 245, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2989 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

The fact that in part at least, the work activities were decedent's customary duties would not preclude a finding that they were sufficiently arduous to entail greater exertion than the ordinary wear and tear of life; award upheld where decedent's work on the day in question involved mowing of grass, trimming tree limbs, attempting to keep brush fires under control particularly considering that the temperature of the day was about 80 degrees. Dove v Skaneateles, 31 A.D.2d 679, 295 N.Y.S.2d 779, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2629 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1968), app. denied, 23 N.Y.2d 646, 1969 N.Y. LEXIS 2160 (N.Y. 1969).

Performance of one's customary duties does not preclude the finding that such activities themselves are sufficiently arduous to entail greater exertion than the ordinary wear and tear of life; heart attack was compensable. Sereno v A-1 Amusement Co., 31 A.D.2d 854, 297 N.Y.S.2d 8, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4648 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969).

Award in heart case upheld under evidence of decedent's strenuous work prior to the day of his death and on day in question. Miner v Chrysler Corp., 33 A.D.2d 523, 304 N.Y.S.2d 52, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3240 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969).

When a heart injury is brought on by overexertion in the course of daily work, it is compensable even though a preexisting pathology may have been a contributing factor, and excessive strain may be found to have existed although the work performed is of the same general type as that with which employee was regularly involved. O'Donnell v Moriah, 58 A.D.2d 702, 396 N.Y.S.2d 105, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12807 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

Injury sustained by clerical worker one day after returning from medical leave following valvuloplasty procedure to treat mitral valve stenosis, when she stood up from her desk, became dizzy and fell to floor, was caused by dizziness that occurred when performance of her regular duties acted on her preexisting condition which, in turn, made her susceptible to transient ischemic attacks. Castillo v Bank of Nova Scotia, 268 A.D.2d 906, 702 N.Y.S.2d 448, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 852 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

258. —Exposure to temperature extremes, wetness or the like as accidental injury

Meningitis pneumococcus contracted as the result of driving with one's head out of a window during a sleet storm is an accidental injury. Warring v Case-Kane, Inc., 258 A.D. 838, 15 N.Y.S.2d 647, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7175 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

Medical evidence held sufficient to support determination of board that claimant's gangrene and resulting amputation of leg at mid-thigh were attributable solely to arteriosclerosis and arterial insufficiency rather than to his exposure to cold and dampness in his employment as street sweeper for city. Carbone v New Rochelle, 23 A.D.2d 595, 256 N.Y.S.2d 683, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4860 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Workers' Compensation Board could properly find that employee suffered compensable accidental injury on basis of evidence that employee, who had preexisting arthritic condition resulting in loss of only 5 work days in preceding 2 ½ years, was subjected to seriously adverse climatic conditions which caused recurrent, totally disabling episodes of arthritis as result of accumulation of water in her workplace during one month and exposure to unseasonable cold during another; repeated trauma of exposure and onsets of severe aggravation were sufficiently time-definite to satisfy requirements of concept of accident. Lynch v Rockland County Dep't of Social Services, 124 A.D.2d 430, 507 N.Y.S.2d 529, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 61422 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

259. —Cold conditions

A janitor who reactivates dormant tuberculosis by walking across an open courtyard and back to fix a steam boiler on a cold day in the course of which he became drenched with perspiration is entitled to compensation. Leich v Borchard Affiliations, 256 A.D. 1019, 10 N.Y.S.2d 496, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5907 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

A plant patrolman who worked in extreme cold weather, traveling through heavy snow, and suffers an coronary occlusion, sustains an accidental injury under this section. Flammer v Bethlehem Steel Co., 268 A.D. 944, 51 N.Y.S.2d 258, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4331 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944), aff'd, 295 N.Y. 817, 66 N.E.2d 588, 295 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 817, 1946 N.Y. LEXIS 977 (N.Y. 1946).

Award of death benefits is properly made in favor of a widow and minor children where the deceased employee was engaged in the regular course of his employment when he suffered a coronary occlusion, which caused his death, while traveling through heavy snow and exposure to cold. Flammer v Bethlehem Steel Co., 268 A.D. 944, 51 N.Y.S.2d 258, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4331 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944), aff'd, 295 N.Y. 817, 66 N.E.2d 588, 295 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 817, 1946 N.Y. LEXIS 977 (N.Y. 1946).

An employee who in the regular course of his employment was required to search for escaped inmates and was exposed to inclement weather without adequate clothing, is entitled to compensation where he contracted a cold which lead to a severe case of influenza and which in turn reactivated dormant tuberculosis. Hills v Wassaic State School, 276 A.D. 1041, 95 N.Y.S.2d 274, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5649 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

Claimant, a meat wrapper, was required to handle cold and, on occasions, frozen meat. After several months, she noticed her fingers and hands became numb and swollen, accompanied by pain. But the record was clear that claimant's disability was due to disease and not accidental injury. Held: award reversed. Hoare v Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., 8 A.D.2d 561, 183 N.Y.S.2d 377, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9646 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Claimant, employed by a county department of health, was assigned to a mobile X-ray unit and required to sit outside and record information. It was very cold during the period she was performing such duties and she began to suffer pains in her stomach, chills and cramps. Condition was diagnosed as colitis. Held: the board properly found that claimant did not sustain an accident. There was no attempt to pinpoint particular incident. And there was no evidence of catastrophic emergent exposure. Foley v Rensselaer County Dep't of Health, 8 A.D.2d 894, 186 N.Y.S.2d 906, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8310 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

An award of benefits in a heart case was sustained on the basis of evidence that the coronary occlusion resulting in death was caused by arduous work in cutting trees in very cold weather with a heavy power saw and additional heavy work as a farmhand. Sullivan v Triple "D" Farm, 18 A.D.2d 942, 237 N.Y.S.2d 913, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4423 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

260. —Cold conditions; drafts

Where one opens a window to relieve a basement of furnace steam, receiving a chill is an accidental injury. Hocke v Emdee Management Corp., 269 N.Y. 592, 199 N.E. 687, 269 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 592, 1935 N.Y. LEXIS 883 (N.Y. 1935).; See also Rist v Larkin & Sangster, 171 A.D. 71, 156 N.Y.S. 875, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9442 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

A department store saleswoman who suffers Bell's palsy, a disease which is limited to one side of the face and is acute in onset, as the result of a draft caused by an electric fan suffers an accidental injury under the workmen's compensation law. Lurye v Stern Bros. Department Store, 275 N.Y. 182, 9 N.E.2d 828, 275 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 182, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1415 (N.Y. 1937).

An award of death benefits and funeral expenses should be made where a truck driver accidentally contracted pneumonia, from which death resulted, in course of his employment as a result of lying on the floor of a garage in a draft while working on a car. Robbins v Enterprise Oil Co., 278 N.Y. 611, 16 N.E.2d 123, 278 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 611, 1938 N.Y. LEXIS 1434 (N.Y. 1938).

Claimant, a bank clerk, sustained an industrial accident resulting in myositis where, following removal of a door near her desk, she was subjected for more than three months to a cold draft on her back from an air conditioner by reason of which she changed her posture by holding her neck and shoulders in a strained and awkward position and a few days later suffered spontaneous onset of pain in the cervical area from which her neck suddenly "collapsed." Greensmith v Franklin Nat'l Bank, 21 A.D.2d 576, 251 N.Y.S.2d 875, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3215 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964), aff'd, 16 N.Y.2d 973, 265 N.Y.S.2d 288, 212 N.E.2d 774, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1047 (N.Y. 1965).

261. —Cold conditions; frostbite or freezing

Where an employee of a coal dealer while carrying coal on a very cold and stormy day had all his fingers and toes frostbitten as a result of which ulcers developed on the third and fourth fingers of both hands, and the first and second fingers of the right hand had to be amputated, he will be deemed to have sustained accidental injuries arising out of his employment within the meaning of former § 3, subd. 7. Days v S. Trimmer & Sons, Inc., 176 A.D. 124, 162 N.Y.S. 603, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9048 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

The freezing of one's hands while engaged in a hazardous employment is an accident within the meaning of the Work. Comp. Law. Quick v Fred E. Illston Ice Co., 195 A.D. 676, 186 N.Y.S. 690, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4817 (N.Y. App. Div. 1921).

Claimant had pre-existing Buerger's disease, which had interfered with healing of condition of right great toe, when his right foot became frost-bitten while at work. Subsequently he underwent a series of operations culminating in amputation of right leg at midcalf. There was no proof that frostbite aggravated or accelerated the disease. Therefore, there was no substantial evidence that frostbite accident was related to ensuing condition of right leg and further there was no substantial evidence that there was permanent and total disability due to condition of right leg. Decision finding claimant entitled to award for permanent total disability reversed. Clara v Hartsdale Coal Co., 8 A.D.2d 549, 183 N.Y.S.2d 379, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9629 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

As against contention that the evidence to support a claim for injuries due to frostbite was incredible, based on an alleged fall sustained by claimant while carrying packages to an express office, rendering him unconscious so that he lay for some time in snow, the Board was entitled to find otherwise. Ingram v Gotham Originals, 19 A.D.2d 924, 243 N.Y.S.2d 876, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2976 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

262. —Cold conditions; work in or around refrigerators

Where one works in refrigerators, a chill is not an accidental injury. Lerner v Rump Bros., 241 N.Y. 153, 149 N.E. 334, 241 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 153, 1925 N.Y. LEXIS 532 (N.Y. 1925).; Doulin v Saratoga Springs, 261 N.Y. 558, 185 N.E. 737, 261 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 558, 1933 N.Y. LEXIS 1372 (N.Y. 1933).; and see also D'Oliveri v Austin, Nichols & Co., 211 A.D. 295, 207 N.Y.S. 699, 1925 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10617 (N.Y. App. Div. 1925).

The death of the decedent, whose employment required him to work in a refrigerator exposed to extreme cold causing him to suffer a heart attack, is caused by an accidental injury within the meaning of this section. Westbrook v Southside Sportsmen's Club, 299 N.Y. 748, 87 N.E.2d 669, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 748, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 1176 (N.Y. 1949).

A butcher, whose work required him to enter a refrigerator from time to time, and who as a result contracted lobar pneumonia suffers a disability due to an occupational disease or an accidental injury. Waxman v Paget, 264 A.D. 967, 37 N.Y.S.2d 169, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5572 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).; See also Wolfe v Brohman, 260 A.D. 816, 22 N.Y.S.2d 403, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4823 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940), aff'd, 285 N.Y. 635, 33 N.E.2d 557, 285 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 635, 1941 N.Y. LEXIS 1655 (N.Y. 1941).

A maintenance man who, in repairing a refrigerated storage box was required to make frequent trips between the inside of the box where the temperature was 40 and the outside where it was 75 contracting a respiratory infection which developed into pulmonary tuberculosis suffers a disease resulting from an accident where such exposure was unusual in that it was the longest period of time which the employee had been required to spend in the refrigerated box. Johnson v Gristede Bros., 278 A.D. 732, 103 N.Y.S.2d 39, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4510 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).;See also Bak v N. Kotok Fish Distributor, 261 A.D. 862, 24 N.Y.S.2d 752, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7805 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

Where confronted by conflicting medical theory as to causal relationship between claimant's exposure to refrigerated air causing Bell's palsy and a later-diagnosed condition of trigeminal neuralgia, substantial evidence of causality being adduced from claimant's neurosurgeon and also an impartial specialist warranted a finding of causality. Ruiz v Howard Johnson's, Inc., 22 A.D.2d 740, 253 N.Y.S.2d 320, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2939 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

263. —Cold conditions; work in unheated areas

Where a department store employee engaged in moving equipment to a new location in the store by use of an unheated elevator was attacked by chills after reaching home at night, and died a few days later of lobar pneumonia, the claim is properly dismissed in the absence of proof that deceased had suffered from an accidental injury or that his death was the result of an accidental injury. Westbrook v E. W. Edwards & Son, 288 N.Y. 718, 43 N.E.2d 96, 288 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 718, 1942 N.Y. LEXIS 1553 (N.Y. 1942).

A cold contracted by a state employee who was forced to work in an unheated office during a cold and rainy day, is not an accident, and no award may be made where he subsequently suffered heart attacks, in the absence of any evidence of causal connection between the exposure to low temperature and the disability. Schwalenstocker v Department of Taxation & Finance, 293 N.Y. 861, 59 N.E.2d 448, 293 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 861, 1944 N.Y. LEXIS 2283 (N.Y. 1944).

There is no evidence of an accidental injury within this subdivision, in a chill and respiratory infection, activating pre-existing rheumatic fever, brought on by working in an unheated office during an unusually cold day. Horn v Pals & Solow, 299 N.Y. 575, 86 N.E.2d 103, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 575, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 1039 (N.Y.), reh'g denied, 299 N.Y. 677, 87 N.E.2d 65, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 677, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 1122 (N.Y. 1949).

Compensation is properly payable to an elevator operator who was confined in the elevator an hour and a half when it stalled during which time he was subjected to a lower temperature than that of the factory, resulting in the reactivating of a pre-existing tuberculosis. Cook v International Paper Co., 244 A.D. 849, 279 N.Y.S. 539, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6810 (N.Y. App. Div. 1935).

264. —Hot or humid conditions

An award may be made under the law for the death of an employee as the result of sunstroke. Hernon v Holahan, 182 A.D. 126, 169 N.Y.S. 705, 1918 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7844 (N.Y. App. Div. 1918).

Compensation is properly payable where the claimant was employed in the repair of a boiler in 100 degree heat and while perspiring freely cold water escaped from a broken water pipe, as the result of which he contracted first a heavy cold and later tuberculosis. Kern v Premier Coal Sa. Device Corp., 246 A.D. 661, 283 N.Y.S. 281, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9608 (N.Y. App. Div. 1935).

A steam fitter who had a congenital aneurysm of the left cerebral artery suffers an industrial accident where he collapsed and died from the rupture of the left cerebral artery and a cerebral hemorrhage, after working in heat and confined space inside a boiler. Broderick v Liebmann Breweries, 277 A.D. 422, 100 N.Y.S.2d 837, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3076 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

Death benefits award was affirmed where deceased employee, engaged in cutting brush along the roadside in his employment as a highway maintenance man on a very hot and humid day, told a fellow employee "I feel dizzy," fell to the ground and died because of acute coronary insufficiency. Gallo v Islip Highway Dep't, 1 A.D.2d 706, 147 N.Y.S.2d 190, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3715 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1955).

The decedent, working in a hot and unventilated building at heavy work, suddenly collapsed and, before a physician could be summoned, died. No autopsy was performed and there were few objective signs to indicate the cause of death but a medical expert testified that in his opinion death had resulted from a coronary occlusion causally related to the work. This was sufficient upon which to base an award. Friss v A. D. Juilliard & Co., 2 A.D.2d 919, 156 N.Y.S.2d 627, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3932 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956), app. denied, 2 N.Y.2d 710, 1957 N.Y. LEXIS 1600 (N.Y. 1957).

A finding that death of an employee from coronary occlusion following a heart attack suffered after working longer hours than usual as truck driver and assisting other truckmen in loading and unloading trucks on an ususually warn and humid day, was accidental, based on aggravation of a prior heart condition, was sufficiently supported by evidence. Martinelli v Metropolis Trucking Co., 8 A.D.2d 551, 183 N.Y.S.2d 418, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9631 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959), aff'd, 8 N.Y.2d 806, 202 N.Y.S.2d 23, 168 N.E.2d 254, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1227 (N.Y. 1960).

It was permissible for the board to find that a heart attack causing death of an employee was precipitated by the environment and conditions of the work, unusual heat accentuated by surrounding steel construction, and the physical work being done, where it appeared that he was a ship fitter and suffered the heart attack while working on a day when the temperature ranged from 82 to 96 degrees and the humidity was high, notwithstanding the particular work which he was doing was not particularly arduous. Briskie v Island Dock, Inc., 11 A.D.2d 873, 203 N.Y.S.2d 368, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8402 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Disallowance of death and predeath disability benefits to the widow of a deceased employee was affirmed, on the basis of some evidence in the record to support findings of the Board that disability and death were not causally related to decedent's work activities on the day in question, where it appeared that he was 54 years of age and operating a grader for a road construction company on a very hot day when he quit work because of burning pains in his stomach and was diagnosed as having sustained a heat stroke, which was later discovered to involve a heart condition from which he died less than a month later, there being medical testimony that the heart condition from which he died was not causally related to the incident in question, notwithstanding other expert testimony to the contrary. Hendrix v Hendrickson Bros., 15 A.D.2d 690, 223 N.Y.S.2d 835, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12005 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

265. —Hot or humid conditions; heat prostration

Heat prostration is an accidental injury arising out of and in the course of the employment, if the nature of the employment exposes a workman to the risk of such injury. Hughes v Trustees of St. Patrick's Cathedral, 245 N.Y. 201, 156 N.E. 665, 245 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 201, 1927 N.Y. LEXIS 610 (N.Y. 1927).

A gardener who collapsed and died from heat prostration and mild myocarditis while cutting grass on an excessively hot and humid day suffers accidental injuries arising out of and in the course of his employment. Altieri v Morris, 275 A.D. 1009, 91 N.Y.S.2d 674, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5476 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949), aff'd, 301 N.Y. 522, 93 N.E.2d 77, 301 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 522, 1950 N.Y. LEXIS 876 (N.Y. 1950).

The evidence sustained a finding of accidental injuries arising out of and in course of employment where employee on an open hearth steel furnace suffered heat prostration, exhaustion and a coronary embolus while helping repair a broken down furnace. Commissioner of Taxation & Finance v Wickwire Spencer Steel Co., 279 A.D. 1124, 112 N.Y.S.2d 527, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6039 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

266. —Wet or damp conditions

An employee who was operating a crane when one of the timbers of the crane broke and to save himself from being hurt jumped into the river and as a result contracted a heavy cold and pleurisy which developed into pulmonary tuberculosis suffers a disease resulting from an accidental injury. Rist v Larkin & Sangster, 171 A.D. 71, 156 N.Y.S. 875, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9442 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

The death of a State game protector was caused by an accidental injury in the course of his employment where in removing a plug from a state boat to let the water out of it, he was compelled to work with his arm and shoulder under water and contracted lobar pneumonia which together with heart toxemia caused his death. Christian v State Conservation Com., 191 A.D. 635, 182 N.Y.S. 347, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4774 (N.Y. App. Div. 1920).

One who suffers a chill by working in a flooded basement and frequently going out into the cold weather sustains an accidental injury. Gicking v Mutual Life Ins. Co., 256 A.D. 869, 9 N.Y.S.2d 49, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5183 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

An employee who was required to work in wet clothing at the bottom of an excavation without the use of rubber boots, as a result of which he contracted pneumonia suffers an accidental injury. Brennan v Hockensmith Const. Co. (1939) 256 App Div 870, 9 NYS2d 62, affd (1939) 281 NY 703, 23 NE2d 538.; See also Lanphier v Air Preheater Corp., 278 N.Y. 403, 16 N.E.2d 382, 278 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 403, 1938 N.Y. LEXIS 1314 (N.Y. 1938).

An oil burner salesman, who in order to find certain measurements required was obliged to lie on a damp cement floor for about twenty five minutes, and upon finishing such measuring felt a pain in his left side and subsequently developed pneumonia, suffers a disease caused by an accident. Little v Chapin Co., 260 A.D. 817, 22 N.Y.S.2d 397, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4824 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

A taxi driver who, while about to enter his cab when answering a call, slipped and fell into a puddle of water, suffering a chill which resulted in lobar pneumonia, suffers an accidental injury. Karp v West 21st Street Holding Corp., 253 A.D. 851, 1 N.Y.S.2d 399, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8896 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938).

267. —Wet or damp conditions; working in the rain

Diphtheria contracted by an employee who was obliged to work in a damp pit and to go out in the rain thereby becoming cold and wet is not a disease naturally and unavoidably resulting from an accidental injury. Bixby v Cotswold Comfortable Co., 195 A.D. 659, 186 N.Y.S. 762, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4812 (N.Y. App. Div. 1921).

A gardener who worked in a rain storm cutting grass from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. and suffered a chill and felt a pain in his right leg and developed sciatica suffers an accidental injury, where he testified that he continued working in the rain because he had to complete his work or otherwise his employer would become angry. DOTOLA v HILL, 257 A.D. 868, 257 A.D. 870, 11 N.Y.S.2d 889, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8214 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1939).

Death of a truck driver could not be considered due to accident where he suffered a chill on a rainy day, a relief driver took him back to the plant in an open jeep, he contracted pneumonia, aggravating a tumor of the liver, and died. Vaughan v Bushwick Iron & Steel, 10 A.D.2d 659, 196 N.Y.S.2d 464, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11707 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), aff'd, 9 N.Y.2d 727, 214 N.Y.S.2d 343, 174 N.E.2d 328, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1457 (N.Y. 1961).

A disease, to be considered an accidental injury, the inception thereof must be assignable to a single act or particular occasion and must be assignable to something catastrophic or extraordinary; death resulting from pleurisy with lobar pneumonia contracted by employee after making deliveries in the rain and returning home "soaking wet" was not compensable. Lahey v Duso Auto Parts, Inc., 29 A.D.2d 1035, 289 N.Y.S.2d 434, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4161 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1968).

268. Fall or accidental injury, generally

A fall occasioned by a physical seizure with consequences that would not have occurred except for employment, constitutes an accident within the purview of the statute. Barath v Arnold Paint Co., 238 N.Y. 625, 144 N.E. 918, 238 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 625, 1924 N.Y. LEXIS 808 (N.Y. 1924).; Mausert v Albany Builders' Supply Co., 250 N.Y. 21, 164 N.E. 729, 250 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 21, 1928 N.Y. LEXIS 1492 (N.Y. 1928).

There must be something in the position or surroundings of the employee who suffers a fall, when the fall occurs, some risk specially assignable to the employment if the accident is to be compensable. Connelly v Samaritan Hospital, 259 N.Y. 137, 181 N.E. 76, 259 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 137, 1932 N.Y. LEXIS 917 (N.Y. 1932).

Injuries sustained as the result of a fall which is idiopathic, rather than accidental, are not compensable. Schreckenberger v Hall Baking Co., 11 A.D.2d 598, 200 N.Y.S.2d 764, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9959 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

An ordinary straight fall with no evidence that it is due to anything connected with the employment does not constitute a compensable accident. McCall v Wayne Liquor Corp., 19 A.D.2d 758, 241 N.Y.S.2d 811, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3274 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963), aff'd, 15 N.Y.2d 929, 259 N.Y.S.2d 150, 207 N.E.2d 196, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1512 (N.Y. 1965).

Workers' Compensation Board properly found causal relationship between welder's back injury and his slip during his employment, despite medical report indicating lack of causal relationship, where conflicting medical evidence on that issue entitled board to find report incredible. Byrne v Fall Fitting, Inc., 266 A.D.2d 684, 698 N.Y.S.2d 78, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11397 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

269. —Conditions of job or workplaces as cause of fall

An employee is entitled to compensation where his duties required him to be on the stone entrance steps to his employer's building and he fell thereon and was injured; it is immaterial whether or not he received any trauma or suffered any other accident before he fell or whether the fall was caused entirely by natural causes. Lauer v Y. M. & W. H. A., 266 A.D. 42, 43 N.Y.S.2d 549, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3486 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943).

Where a claimant in the regular course of her employment tripped on a coat hanger on the floor in a fur stock room and struck her head against a garment rack sustaining thereby a detachment of the upper retina of the right eye, there was evidence sufficient to sustain an award although there was a conflict in the testimony as to whether the claimant had told the store nurse that she had struck her head. Rivere v Martin's, 282 A.D. 1086, 126 N.Y.S.2d 187, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5881 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Placing of a drinking fountain on a platform four inches high, and raising it to this extent higher than it would otherwise have been above the concrete floor, could not, under the authorities, be considered the creation of an added risk, so as to render compensable damages sustained from what was otherwise a purely accidental fall sustained in approaching the drinking fountain. Hughes v Acme Steel & Malleable Iron Works, 11 A.D.2d 563, 200 N.Y.S.2d 185, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10197 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Claims adjuster for insurance company was entitled to workers' compensation for back injury sustained in unwitnessed accident which occurred when adjuster attempted to climb down from roof of fire damaged house onto chair he had set on top of barrel, notwithstanding investigator's conclusion that chair could not have been placed on barrel, and therefore that accident could not have happened in way described, since investigator's testimony did not rise to level of substantial evidence sufficient to overcome heavy burden provided by presumption contained in CLS Work Comp § 21 that unwitnessed accident occurring within time and place limits of employment is presumed to have arisen out of and in course of employment. Farrell v CNA Ins. Co., 149 A.D.2d 843, 540 N.Y.S.2d 362, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4873 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

270. —Effect of non-work related condition contributing to fall

An automobile mechanic's helper who fell from a small platform while sanding the roof of an automobile, fracturing his skull, suffers an industrial accident, even though there is some testimony that he may have been subject to epileptic seizures. Thomas v Pine Auto Service, 275 A.D. 737, 87 N.Y.S.2d 233, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4250 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

Where deceased employee suffered a non-work connected heart attack and fell to the floor where he died of the heart condition and a skull fracture there was no compensable accident unless, in falling, he struck an object on the way down. Since the proof on that point was confused, the matter was remitted for further proceedings. Goldman v Bondson Press, 1 A.D.2d 706, 146 N.Y.S.2d 917, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3716 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1955).

While at work, a draftsman, with a congenital aneurysm of a cerebral artery, sneezed and sat down on his stool which thereupon swiveled and caused him to fall to the floor and strike his head which fall caused a rupture of the aneurysm. Held: the fall was an industrial accident and an award in favor of the claimant was proper since the employer's swivel stool entered into the causation of the action as well as the claimant's own physiological condition. Stern v Electrol, Inc., 4 A.D.2d 110, 164 N.Y.S.2d 682, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5110 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 3 N.Y.2d 707, 1957 N.Y. LEXIS 1396 (N.Y. 1957).

Claimant did not sustain an industrial accident where he had previously suffered a non-industrial injury to his knee and where he testified, a few months later, that going upstairs in his employer's premises he twisted the knee and that when he brought his leg up in moving on the stairs it gave way and threw him. Gray v Williams Press, Inc., 4 A.D.2d 920, 166 N.Y.S.2d 876, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4323 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

With respect to a claim for head injuries, allegedly suffered when claimant fell and bruised his head against the side of a barrel, suffering a subarachnoid hemorrhage, a finding of the board that the fall was due to an accident in course of employment, rather than to fainting due to the hemorrhage, was sustained on the basis of some support in the evidence. Hayman v Kenberry Bake Shop, Inc., 12 A.D.2d 532, 206 N.Y.S.2d 628, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7225 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

In connection with injuries sustained by a messenger for a law firm who fell while on duty and fractured his hip, there was sufficient evidence to sustain a finding that the fall was accidental, although it was unwitnessed, as against employer's contention that claimant was an epileptic and his fall was caused by an epileptic seizure, none of the symptoms of such a seizure having been evident. Tigue v Proskauer, Rose, Goetz & Meaklin, 15

A.D.2d 711, 223 N.Y.S.2d 590, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12036 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Workers' Compensation Board properly awarded benefits to elevator operator who fell into empty elevator shaft, despite fact that he was severely intoxicated at time, where city elevator inspector testified that he inspected elevator following claimant's accident and concluded that parking device was defective, inspector issued violation requiring that elevator be shut down until condition was remedied, and both elevator inspector and elevator inspection consultant retained by claimant testified that properly functioning parking device would have prevented claimant from opening elevator door when car was not present. Villapol v American Landmark Mgmt., 271 A.D.2d 882, 706 N.Y.S.2d 773, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4659 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

271. —Aggravation of preexisting condition as result of fall

An award may be sustained where a chef died as the result of pulmonary tuberculosis which had been aggravated by a blow on the chest caused by falling on a pot of spaghetti. Kolokotroni v Oyster Bay Restaurant, 277 A.D. 822, 96 N.Y.S.2d 863, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3426 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

Award was proper where employee suffering a pre-existing osteomyelitis slipped while engaged in putting a 15–20 pound roller into a printing press thereby causing a sprain of his back. Huth v American Book-Knickerbocker Press, Inc., 285 A.D. 1102, 139 N.Y.S.2d 362, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6772 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

The decedent fell in the course of his employment and subsequently developed hemiparesis and complete aphasia. Thereafter, he died of a brain tumor which had metastasized from a pre-existing lung cancer. There was medical proof that the fall had either activated or aggravated the development of the tumor and a death award was affirmed. Eliades v Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co., 2 A.D.2d 618, 151 N.Y.S.2d 771, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5465 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), reh'g denied, 2 A.D.2d 823, 154 N.Y.S.2d 1018, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4446 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956), app. denied, 2 N.Y.2d 707, 1956 N.Y. LEXIS 1248 (N.Y. 1956).

Claimant, who suffered from a degenerative arthritic condition, fell at work and injured his back. He had never complained about his back prior to the accident, but thereafter he was unable to do heavy work. His physician testified that the injury aggravated the existing arthritic condition. Although the medical testimony was in conflict, this constituted sufficient evidence to support award. Boyea v Chapin, 3 A.D.2d 780, 160 N.Y.S.2d 50, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6189 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

The board made an award to a claimant on the basis that as a result of a fall the claimant suffered contusions of the left chest wall which aggravated a pre-existing cardiac asthma condition. But the only medical testimony relating to the pre-existing condition was that of a doctor who testified that the basis of his conclusion was that "the man claims he never had any trouble before his accident". Held: such a basis was insubstantial as proof of either pre-existence or aggravation. Way v Minrob Realty Corp., 8 A.D.2d 866, 186 N.Y.S.2d 743, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8263 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Claimant sustained injuries as a result of a fall. It was found that a disability continued by reason of an aggravation of a pre-existing degenerative arthritis. Any relevant presumption or inference of continuance of condition until contrarily proven was overcome when 3 doctors stated that claimant had recovered from the effects of accidental injuries. Award reversed and case remitted. Galvin v Bethlehem Steel Co., 9 A.D.2d 564, 189 N.Y.S.2d 309, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7415 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Board properly found that decedent, a carpenter, fell from a ladder and sustained injuries which aggravated a pre-existing heart condition causing immediate death. The unwitnessed fall was clearly established. And there was substantial medical evidence as to causal relation. Silverman v Roth, 9 A.D.2d 591, 189 N.Y.S.2d 311, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7458 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

There was sufficient medical testimony to sustain a disability award based upon activation and aggravation of a pre-existing rheumatoid arthritis by a fall sustained by plaintiff when a ladder "walked out" from under him while he was installing electrical equipment in an 18-foot high ceiling. McCoy v Bochow, 16 A.D.2d 722, 226 N.Y.S.2d 867, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10333 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

A board finding that tuberculosis resulting from an accidental injury sustained by decedent nine years earlier when he fell against a wheelbarrow sustaining fractures of several ribs and activating a pre-existing quiescent pulmonary tuberculosis was sufficiently sustained by evidence. Crawford v Poirier & McLane Corp., 17 A.D.2d 675, 230 N.Y.S.2d 462, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8494 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 12 N.Y.2d 641, 1962 N.Y. LEXIS 1531 (N.Y. 1962).

272. —Other particular circumstances; fall as accident

A painter who falls twice from a scaffold in the performance of his work, once when the scaffolding broke and once when stepping down from the scaffold suffers an accidental injury arising out of and in the course of his employment where a medical examination disclosed a fracture of the skull. Barath v Arnold Paint Co., 190 A.D. 885, 190 A.D. 886, 178 N.Y.S. 876, 1919 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4132 (N.Y. App. Div. 1919), aff'd, 238 N.Y. 625, 144 N.E. 918, 238 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 625, 1924 N.Y. LEXIS 808 (N.Y. 1924).

A fall due to loss of balance on a crowded sidewalk is an accident. Unger v New York Sportwear Co., 243 A.D. 659, 277 N.Y.S. 765, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7514 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 268 N.Y. 651, 198 N.E. 540, 268 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 651, 1935 N.Y. LEXIS 1119 (N.Y. 1935).

An employee engaged in laying tile on iron girders at an elevation 40 feet above the ground suffers an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment where after lifting one of the heavy tiles into place the employee uttered a yell and he was observed grasping in the air endeavoring to save himself from falling. Moore v Federal-American Cement & Tile Co., 258 A.D. 1011, 16 N.Y.S.2d 872, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8636 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

Awards made to employee on psychiatric proof that stomach pains were a result of an accident where employee fell from second floor window and suffered a comminuted fracture of right pubic bone was affirmed over claim that psychiatrist who made report had declined to appear for cross-examination because of ill health. Another psychiatrist who had approved the report was available for cross-examination but employer did not request his appearance. Underwood v Whitney, 282 A.D. 783, 122 N.Y.S.2d 468, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4953 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Decedent, general maintenance man for owner of apartment buildings, fell down flight of stairs on employer's premises suffering injuries which resulted in his death. Tenant testified she had asked decedent to repair window and that he fell when carrying window sash to second floor. Sash was found at foot of stairs after accident. Award affirmed. Board not barred from accepting tenant's testimony because she had made prior inconsistent statements. Barbuto v B & M Niagara Corp., 5 A.D.2d 894, 171 N.Y.S.2d 137, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6701 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Board was entitled to find that fall which resulted in claimant's injury occurred while he was cutting a steel beam in the course of usual work and not after he had been told by employer to quit because he was intoxicated. However, claimant denied drinking any alcoholic beverage and presumption was that injury did not result solely from intoxication. Award affirmed. Bramer v Laratonda, 8 A.D.2d 876, 186 N.Y.S.2d 1001, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8280 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain an award based on disability due to a herniated vertebral disc where it appeared that claimant, a carpenter, sustained a laceration in his left thigh when a saw which he was using kicked back, causing him to fall backwards upon his left hip and back, notwithstanding the lack of any complaint by claimant of injuries sustained or pain suffered other than from the saw laceration for a considerable period of time. Stagliano v Polera & Sons Constr. Corp., 12 A.D.2d 546, 206

Evidence held sufficient to sustain a finding that death was caused by an accidental fall while carrying steel rods down a steep ramp, notwithstanding the medical examiner gave the cause of death as coronary sclerosis. Hallas v Carlin Crimmins Atlas, 12 A.D.2d 675, 207 N.Y.S.2d 702, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6740 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), app. denied, 9 N.Y.2d 610, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1680 (N.Y. 1961).

The evidence would sustain a finding that a violent fall on a subway stairway by a salesman, followed by coronary occlusion and myocardial infarction from which he died, was compensable. Friedman v Fada of New Jersey, Inc., 12 A.D.2d 866, 209 N.Y.S.2d 936, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13038 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), reh'g denied, 13 A.D.2d 609, 214 N.Y.S.2d 712, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11844 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961), app. denied, 9 N.Y.2d 613, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1755 (N.Y. 1961).

On the basis of evidence that claimant suffered an industrial accident resulting in a cerebral concussion and other injuries on February 5, but returned to work February 11, notwithstanding continuance of headaches and dizziness, and, on June 7, fell to the floor while at work and thereby incurred a totally disabling right hemiplegia, the Board could find that the fall was because of a dizzy spell which related to the first accident and that the resulting disability related back to that accident. Scherf v White Plains Iron Works, 13 A.D.2d 570, 211 N.Y.S.2d 736, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12204 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Regardless of claimant's competency to testify by reason of severe head injury sustained in a fall, his history of the accident as contained in the physician's report, buttressed by evidence of occasional presence of coke in the area of the fall, constituted substantial evidence from which the Board could determine that the fall was accidental and in course of employment due to slipping on a piece of coke while obtaining a drink of water. Hughes v Acme Steel & Malleable Iron Works, 17 A.D.2d 886, 233 N.Y.S.2d 700, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7323 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962), app. denied, 12 N.Y.2d 645, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 1509 (N.Y. 1963).

273. —Other particular circumstances; fall not accident

Death of an employee who, while walking through an alleyway, in course of his employment, was seized with an epileptic fit and fell striking his head on the pavement, which caused his death, is not compensable under the Workmen's Compensation Law. Andrews v L. & S. Amusement Corp., 253 N.Y. 97, 170 N.E. 506, 253 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 97, 1930 N.Y. LEXIS 805 (N.Y. 1930).

The evidence was insufficient to sustain findings of the board that claimant, while approaching a drinking fountain upon a platform four inches high, stumbled on a piece of coke, falling backward off the platform and striking his head upon the floor, where there was no direct evidence as to how or why he fell and the medical testimony indicated that the fall was due to an epileptic seizure rather than to accident causing the fall. Hughes v Acme Steel & Malleable Iron Works, 11 A.D.2d 563, 200 N.Y.S.2d 185, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10197 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

The evidence would not sustain a finding that the injury arose out of an accident in course of employment where it merely appeared that claimant, a bakery truck driver, was staggering and appeared to be "dazed" when he climbed into his truck, after which he apparently fell backwards off the seat and was found frothing at the mouth with a condition diagnosed as subarachnoid hemorrhage and subdural hematoma. Schreckenberger v Hall Baking Co., 11 A.D.2d 598, 200 N.Y.S.2d 764, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9959 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Death of a 72-year-old liquor salesman could not be considered accidental where it merely appeared that he was found lying face up and dead on the sidewalk outside a tavern at about 5:00 A.M., where the sidewalk was smooth, dry and free from obstructions and there was no evidence that he was struck by anything or accidentally tripped. McCall v Wayne Liquor Corp., 19 A.D.2d 758, 241 N.Y.S.2d 811, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3274 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963), aff'd, 15 N.Y.2d 929, 259 N.Y.S.2d 150, 207 N.E.2d 196, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1512 (N.Y. 1965).

Testimony of nearby employees and 2 physicians, along with conflicting medical testimony and questions of claimant's credibility (carrier's main contention was that claimant staged accident since he was about to be terminated), provided substantial evidence to support Workers' Compensation Board's finding that claimant did not sustain causally related disability as result of his fall at place of employment. Grucza v Waste Stream Tech., 252 A.D.2d 901, 676 N.Y.S.2d 336, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8712 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

274. —Accidental fall as cause of other injuries or conditions

Causal relation was established by proof that two months before claimant sustained a subarachnoid hemorrhage and a left hemiplegia, he had fallen from an airplane jig 8 or 9 feet from the floor and struck his head. Risley v Grumman Aircraft Engineering Corp., 284 A.D. 918, 134 N.Y.S.2d 319, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4053 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

An award for permanent partial disability for alleged back, leg and hip injuries when a sign painter fell 6 feet was reversed where there was no substantial evidence to support the Board's finding of causal connection between the accident and the pathology in claimant's left leg and hip, and other lumbosacral sprain of the lower back. Episcopo v General Outdoor Advertising Co., 4 A.D.2d 973, 167 N.Y.S.2d 609, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3910 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

One physician testified that claimant's fall, in which she struck her face, could have produced cerebral incident and hemiplegia, although he gave it as his opinion that accident did not cause condition. Only other physician testified against causal relation. Award reversed. Frisbie v Boffer Business Service, 5 A.D.2d 1038, 173 N.Y.S.2d 148, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6199 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Board properly found causal relation between condition of renal tuberculosis of February 14, 1954 and accident sustained on February 15, 1945, in which accident claimant's foot was injured. Claimant had had tuberculosis of ankle prior to accident. Dawson v Preston Pastry Shop, 6 A.D.2d 910, 175 N.Y.S.2d 593, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5216 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

On conflicting medical testimony, Board properly found causal relation between accident in which claimant fell striking his left breast and subsequent carcinoma of breast. Avesato v Morell-Brown, Inc., 7 A.D.2d 796, 180 N.Y.S.2d 897, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3721 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Decedent, a tailor, fell while at work and sustained an injury to his head. There was hearsay statement by decedent that he struck his head on his machine as he fell. Claim filed prior to death stated that he hit his head on the floor and an amended complaint stated that he hit his head on the machine. There was medical evidence that the location of the laceration on the skull suggested a fall against the machine or another object. Held: there was sufficient proof to support the hearsay statement. And there was sufficient evidence to establish causal relation between the injury and death 9 months later to a malignant brain tumor where such evidence showed that the injury accelerated the progress of the disease. Baumstein v Siegel & Alenikoff, Inc., 9 A.D.2d 572, 189 N.Y.S.2d 431, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7428 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.2d 705, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1820 (N.Y. 1959).

Decedent fell from a ladder striking his head against a steam pipe sustaining subarachnoid hemorrhage with hemiplegia which resulted in his death. Decedent had suffered from hypertension prior to the fall. Held: the medical evidence sustained finding that the fall caused his condition. Race v Garlock Packing Co., 9 A.D.2d 576, 189 N.Y.S.2d 438, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7435 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Causal relationship between an employee's death, immediately caused by a complication in connection with a ruptured gall bladder, and the injuries sustained when he fell from a scaffold and sustained a fractured skull and brain injury more than a year before, resulting in his admission to a mental institution where his condition continued to deteriorate, was sufficiently established by undisputed testimony that his mental condition was such, prior to death, that he could sense no pain or indicate to physicians the location of any area of distress, wherefore his bladder condition remained undiscovered and without treatment or corrective procedure until it was too late to do anything about it. Daugherty v Midland Painting Co., 14 A.D.2d 961, 221 N.Y.S.2d 70, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7907 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Testimony of two doctors to a causal relation between a possible protruded lumbar disc, diagnosed by one of them in 1958, following a fall suffered by claimant at her home in which she sustained a back injury, and the original injury sustained by a fall resulting in a low back injury in course of employment in 1955, was sufficient to sustain a board finding of continuing causal related disability. Sweatt v Fleahman, 14 A.D.2d 964, 220 N.Y.S.2d 968, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7912 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

275. Exposure to fumes, dusts or gasses as accident

An electrician who became ill from inhaling coal gas and died from pulmonary tuberculosis primarily caused by the gas poisoning suffers a disease which naturally and unavoidably results from an accidental injury. O'Dell v Adirondack Electric Power Co., 223 N.Y. 686, 119 N.E. 1063, 223 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 686, 1918 N.Y. LEXIS 1397 (N.Y. 1918).

The inhalation of poisonous factory fumes is an accident under this section. Gray v Semet-Solvay Co., 231 N.Y. 518, 132 N.E. 870, 231 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 518, 1921 N.Y. LEXIS 820 (N.Y. 1921).

Inhalation of bromide of methyl gas from a refrigerating machine is accidental. Senoff v Savage Arms Corp., 261 N.Y. 627, 185 N.E. 767, 261 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 627, 1933 N.Y. LEXIS 1438 (N.Y. 1933).; See also Michelfelder v Van Alstyne, 245 N.Y. 569, 157 N.E. 860, 245 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 569, 1927 N.Y. LEXIS 730 (N.Y. 1927).

An injury to a dye factory employee by sulphuric oxide fumes is not accidental. Rosenthal v National Aniline & Chemical Co., 216 A.D. 588, 215 N.Y.S. 621, 1926 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9278 (N.Y. App. Div. 1926).; See also Richardson v Greenberg, 188 A.D. 248, 176 N.Y.S. 651, 1919 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8099 (N.Y. App. Div. 1919).

Death from bronchitis caused by fumes from a trench containing ammonia and chloride of lime is accidental. McNiven v Highland Hospital, 231 A.D. 782, 246 N.Y.S. 744, 1930 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7705 (N.Y. App. Div. 1930).

A foreman in a printing plant who suffered a coughing spell and hemorrhage as the result of exposure to metal fumes which reactivated a pre-existing tuberculosis is entitled to an award of compensation. Kogan v Schoen Printing Co., 276 A.D. 935, 94 N.Y.S.2d 257, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5190 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

Claimant, a solderer, fell from stool, where she was working shortly after eating pork sandwich for lunch and sustained injuries. The claimant denied attributing fall to effect of sandwich and asserted she became sick from soldering fumes. There was testimony that such fumes were present at time and medical testimony related fall to inhalation of fumes. Award affirmed. Zachhuber v Republic Aviation Corp., 7 A.D.2d 685, 179 N.Y.S.2d 349, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4336 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain a compensation award based upon a finding that claimant's gastric ulcer was causally related to his employment where it appeared that, while employed as a school custodian, he undertook removal of varnish from the gymnasium floor using a varnish remover containing a high percentage of toxic agents, and, on the third day, suddenly felt chest pains and developed gastro-intestinal bleeding. Gero v Board of Education, 14 A.D.2d 620, 218 N.Y.S.2d 145, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9393 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

The Workers' Compensation Board properly awarded benefits for a continued causally-related disability where claimant's exposure to milk dust during the course of his employment at a dairy resulted in an accidental aggravation of his pre-existing condition of cystic fibrosis. Kedjierski v Dellwood Dairy, 87 A.D.2d 924, 450 N.Y.S.2d 61, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16446 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1982).

Board improperly determined that claimant was incapacitated as result of "accident" where claimant suffered from dormant allergy which was exacerbated by remodeling of area where he worked, which released large quantities of dust into atmosphere, causing definitive allergic reaction diagnosed as "allergic rhinitis," since claimant did not suffer from preexisting disease, irritating agents were absorbed into his system through normal channels of entry, and their absorption was incidental to natural and normal bodily processes. Vernoia v National Council on Compensation Ins., 147 A.D.2d 863, 538 N.Y.S.2d 85, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1965 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 74 N.Y.2d 608, 545 N.Y.S.2d 104, 543 N.E.2d 747, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 2369 (N.Y. 1989).

Evidence supported denial of benefits by Workers' Compensation Board where claimant alleged that she acquired sensitivity to chemicals as result of exposure at her workplace, but physician testified that, although claimant appeared to be sensitive to various chemicals, no such chemicals were present in areas in which she worked. Archer v IBM Corp., 212 A.D.2d 948, 623 N.Y.S.2d 340, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2102 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1995).

Claimant, member of employer's hazardous waste emergency response team, sustained compensable injury when he was exposed to toxic chemicals while working to contain spill from overturned gasoline truck, which caused him to suffer blood disorder known as myelodysplastic syndrome. Schulman v Lederle Lab., 232 A.D.2d 684, 648 N.Y.S.2d 55, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10036 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

Although Workers' Compensation Law does not define "dust disease," term refers to diseases of lungs classified as pneumoconiosis—for example, silicosis, chalicosis, anthracosis, and siderosis. Matott v St. Joe's Lead, 245 A.D.2d 907, 666 N.Y.S.2d 849, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13622 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Miner's claim for workers' compensation benefits for partial disability based on occupational lung disease allegedly due to exposure to dust, fumes, and oil did not suffer from "dust disease," for which partial disability was excluded from coverage under CLS Work Comp former § 39, where medical experts who testified for both parties essentially agreed that miner suffered from chronic bronchitis, and expert for employer specifically found no evidence of pneumoconiosis. Matott v St. Joe's Lead, 245 A.D.2d 907, 666 N.Y.S.2d 849, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13622 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Time-definite component of accidental injury rule was satisfied, and thus dietary aide was entitled to workers' compensation benefits, even though her injury was gradual, where her preexisting allergic sensitivities and pulmonary condition were aggravated from 1987 to 1991 by her employer's expectation that she regularly walk through rising chemical fumes and pour water into drains backed up with chemicals. Baxter v Bristol Myers, 251 A.D.2d 753, 672 N.Y.S.2d 970, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6760 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Workers' Compensation Board had authority to rescind Board panel's decision finding that claimant had established claim for "sick building syndrome," and there was nothing improper in panel's decision to reverse its decision, even though claimant offered findings and testimony of several physicians, each of whom indicated that claimant's symptoms were caused or exacerbated by poor air quality at work, where none of those physicians were able to identify specific allergen(s) allegedly present in, and exclusive to, claimant's work environment which caused her symptoms, and employer's physician and toxicologist testified that claimant was allergic to house dust, molds, trees, grasses, weeds, and dust mites, all of which could not be confined exclusively to workplace. Nicholson v Mohawk Valley Cmty. College, 274 A.D.2d 677, 711 N.Y.S.2d 542, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7799 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Although seasonal auditor's exposure to paint fumes in course of her employment was accidental injury, she did not suffer any continuing disability attributable to that accident for purposes of workers' compensation where (1) 2 medical experts who examined her on behalf of State Insurance Fund testified that her symptoms were physical manifestations of anxiety disorder rather than result of her exposure to environmental contaminants at work, (2) auditor's treating physician confirmed that auditor suffered from history of delusional and anxiety disorder with psychotic features, including conversion of mental stress into physical complaints, and (3) several of auditor's experts acknowledged possibility that liver dysfunction, which was one of her symptoms, was caused by known side effects of antipsychotic medication administered to her during stay at psychotic hospital. Gannon v New York State Dep't of Taxation & Fin., 275 A.D.2d 869, 713 N.Y.S.2d 576, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9469 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Evidence supported Workers' Compensation Board's conclusion that no airborne substance other than paint fumes might have caused seasonal auditor's disability where (1) there was no evidence that building in which she was working contained any air contaminants other than paint fumes, (2) although auditor claimed that many of her symptoms first appeared after pesticides were sprayed in building in 1990, her application for benefits was based only on 1992 inhalation of paint fumes, and there was no indication that she suffered from any causally related medical problem before 1992, and (3) auditor was unable to identify particular contaminant or toxin other than paint fumes to which she was exposed during course of her employment. Gannon v New York State Dep't of Taxation & Fin., 275 A.D.2d 869, 713 N.Y.S.2d 576, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9469 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Substantial evidence supported an administrative determination that the worker's long-term exposure to hazardous substances used in the employer's gear-cutting operations caused the tumor that deprived him of speech; therefore, it was compensable as an occupational disease within the meaning of N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 2(15). Oliver v Chicago Pneumatic Tool Co., 289 A.D.2d 796, 735 N.Y.S.2d 214, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12297 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

276. —Carbon monoxide fumes

Inhalation of carbon monoxide is an accident under this section. Michelfelder v Van Alstyne, 245 N.Y. 569, 157 N.E. 860, 245 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 569, 1927 N.Y. LEXIS 730 (N.Y. 1927).; Reichard v H. H. Franklin Mfg. Co., 223 A.D. 797, 228 N.Y.S. 17, 1928 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7140 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 249 N.Y. 525, 164 N.E. 570, 249 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 525, 1928 N.Y. LEXIS 861 (N.Y. 1928).

An employee may be said to have sustained accidental injury where he worked for two and a half hours on an automobile of his employer in proximity to a ramp over which cars entered and left the garage exposing him to carbon monoxide fumes, and became nauseated and sick. Demeny v Gerard, 260 A.D. 820, 22 N.Y.S.2d 446, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4832 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).; See also Cantor v Elsmere Garage, 214 A.D. 351, 212 N.Y.S. 327, 1925 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10518 (N.Y. App. Div. 1925).

Where decedent, employed as a grader machine operator in road construction work, was found dead in his employer's garage in a truck in which the motor was running and the heater on with the door of the garage closed, death being due to carbon monoxide poisoning, the body being found about an hour and a half before he was expected to begin work, a finding that death arose out of and in the course of his employment was sustained on the ground that he was supplied a key to the garage and had apparently taken his grader there to service it before starting work. Grennell v Driveway Paving Co., 12 A.D.2d 676, 208 N.Y.S.2d 172, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6742 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

277. Particular diseases, infections or injuries as resulting from accidents

An award is proper where an employee suffered an accidental injury which activated and accelerated a dormant disease resulting in mental derangement and through irrational conduct contracted bronchitis followed by pneumonia which resulted in his death. Malgieri v General Electric Co., 258 N.Y. 620, 180 N.E. 358, 258 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 620, 1932 N.Y. LEXIS 1284 (N.Y. 1932).

Truck which claimant was operating hit concrete abutment. Claimant struck his head in back, had wind knocked out of him and had nausea. Thereafter, he had headaches and dizzy spells and his condition was diagnosed as multiple sclerosis. On conflicting medical testimony as to whether traumatic injuries could aggravate or precipitate multiple sclerosis and whether or not trauma experienced here was severe enough to aggravate claimant's condition, Board properly found that multiple sclerosis was causally related to accident. Stella v Mancuso, 7 A.D.2d 673, 179 N.Y.S.2d 169, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4321 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain an award for a knee condition, notwithstanding claimant admittedly sustained a prior injury to the knee dating back to boyhood, where he testified that while engaged in a wrecking operation and descending some stairs he twisted his leg and, on the following day, it was "all swelled up." Shisko v Associated Wreckers, Inc., 16 A.D.2d 856, 227 N.Y.S.2d 697, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9908 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

The question of whether or not a workmen's compensation claimant who sustained a compensable injury to his hand in 1957 was a malingerer in asserting subsequent disability for more than a year with several hospitalizations and staying away from work most of the time, was, on the basis of conflicting medical testimony, for the Board, and its determination could not be interfered with. Foster v Daystrom Furniture Div. Daystrom, Inc., 18 A.D.2d 745, 235 N.Y.S.2d 521, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6187 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Damage to claimant's artificial limb, unaccompanied by other physical injury was not accidental "injury" and claimant was not entitled to workmen's compensation benefits. Hackett v Almor Corp., 46 A.D.2d 261, 362 N.Y.S.2d 209, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3282 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

Electrician who hanged himself in suicide attempt after being discharged from employment failed to demonstrate that his injury was not "solely mental" within meaning of CLS Work Comp § 2(7), and thus injury was not compensable, although he suffered physical injuries to his neck and heart; suicide attempt itself was clearly not compensable, and thus complications resulting therefrom could not be compensable either. Dockum v Syroco Inc., 260 A.D.2d 688, 687 N.Y.S.2d 759, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3294 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 811, 695 N.Y.S.2d 540, 717 N.E.2d 699, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 1902 (N.Y. 1999).

Injuries caused by eating food containing glass in the employer's restaurant for employees is an accidental injury which arose out of and in the course of the employment within the meaning of subd. 7 of this section. Schier v James J. McCreery & Co., 13 N.Y.S.2d 546, 1939 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2070 (N.Y. App. Term 1939).

278. —Abdominal injury

A groom who rides a green saddle horse and suffers a ruptured intestine sustains accidental injuries within the meaning of this section. Coleman v Phipps, 255 A.D. 909, 7 N.Y.S.2d 754, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5836 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938).

Appendicitis and abscesses, necessitating an operation are diseases or infections resulting from an accident, where the claimant in the regular course of his employment in opening a road with a snow plow, stepped into a track in the snow, slipped and fell and in trying to extricate himself suffered injuries in the nature of a traumatic appendix from which the injuries in question followed. Wilson v Covert, 262 A.D. 984, 30 N.Y.S.2d 34, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6781 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

An award of death benefits was proper where a "piece goods man," handling bolts of cloth, grabbed his stomach, told a co-worker "I got hurt in my stomach", told doctor and others he was hit by a falling bolt of cloth and medical testimony conflicted as to whether death was caused by blow or carbon tetrachloride poisoning. Hunter v Goodstein Bros., 2 A.D.2d 387, 156 N.Y.S.2d 699, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3888 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

For 3 years or more, claimant's work as janitress included moving heavy cans of ashes. While lifting can, it slipped and claimant felt that everything dropped. It was found she was suffering from prolapse of uterus. Board was justified on record on finding that accident occurred. However, due to conflicting medical evidence as to causal relationship, board referred question to impartial expert who was of opinion that lifting and straining over a period of time had induced the condition. And on such testimony the board would have also been justified in finding that claimant had suffered an occupational disease. Burek v Domur Realty Corp., 7 A.D.2d 822, 181 N.Y.S.2d 45, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3759 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

279. —Animal or insect bites

An award for the death of a traveling salesman is proper where it is conceded that his death was caused by disease resulting from the sting of a mosquito, prevalent in the region in which he was traveling on a mission for his employer. Lepow v Lepow Knitting Mills, Inc., 288 N.Y. 377, 43 N.E.2d 450, 288 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 377, 1942 N.Y. LEXIS 1000 (N.Y. 1942).

An employee is entitled to compensation for a disease resulting from an accidental injury where he was bitten by a cat and, though the physical injuries suffered therefrom were trivial, developed such a fear of being stricken with rabies that he became a psychoneurotic. Kalikoff v John Lucas & Co., 271 A.D. 942, 67 N.Y.S.2d 153, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5310 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 297 N.Y. 663, 76 N.E.2d 324, 297 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 663, 1947 N.Y. LEXIS 1136 (N.Y. 1947).

Phlebitis migrans as the result of a bite from an insect is a disease resulting from an accidental injury. Richmond v Mass & Brizt, 275 A.D. 879, 88 N.Y.S.2d 682, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4862 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

Death from a bee sting, incurred while deceased, a plumber, was out on a job repairing some plumbing for his employer, was due to an "accident." Webster v Mason, 13 A.D.2d 355, 217 N.Y.S.2d 290, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9778 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

280. —Back injuries

A brick layer who sustained an injury to his back while stooping to pick up a brick sustains an accidental injury. Werner v Psaty & Fuhrman, Inc., 264 A.D. 801, 34 N.Y.S.2d 631, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4785 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 289 N.Y. 670, 45 N.E.2d 172, 289 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 670, 1942 N.Y. LEXIS 1240 (N.Y. 1942).

A claimant employed as a slip stitcher on neck ties who bent over and twisted to pick up some ties which had fallen on the floor, suffers injuries thereby which are accidental. Solomon v Cravat Creators, 270 A.D. 870, 60 N.Y.S.2d 321, 1946 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4373 (N.Y. App. Div. 1946).

A die finisher injures his back as the result of an industrial accident, where he suffered a sprain of the lower lumbar muscles as the result of lifting an object during the course of his work. Erhardt v Ushco Mfg. Co., 272 A.D. 853, 70 N.Y.S.2d 182, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3906 (N.Y. App. Div. 1947).

Evidence that a power press operator, while lifting a sheet of metal into a power press, sustained accidental injuries in the nature of a lumbosacral sprain with sudden pain and that he was subject to a series of traumas in the course of his work which either caused his present condition or aggravated an underlying condition resulting in disability was sufficient to sustain an award. Nicoletti v S. H. Pomeroy Co., 283 A.D. 1129, 131 N.Y.S.2d 699, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6500 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Evidence sustained award for claimant who was employed as a clerk, elevator operator and bell hop in a hotel and who became disabled as a result of a lower back condition due to a series of traumas to the spine from lifting and carrying the bags of guests. De Bella v Hotel Windsor, 284 A.D. 919, 134 N.Y.S.2d 389, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4057 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Claimant, while engaged in heavy lifting, sustained a back injury which aggravated a pre-existing osteoarthritic condition. Award for total disability to a certain date sustained but award for partial disability thereafter reversed and remanded on question of whether partial disability was the result of natural progress of the pre-existing condition or was due to aggravation caused by the accident. Canty v American Brake Shoe Co., 284 A.D. 1077, 135 N.Y.S.2d 800, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4611 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Claimant suffered a back injury while attempting to lift a felled tree. An orthopedist reported no evidence of disability but a psychiatrist testified that claimant was totally disabled by a "neurotic stress reaction" caused by the accident. The psychiatrist intimated that a lump sum settlement would help the patient as much as anything, and the larger the better. Such testimony cannot be made the basis of a finding of continued disability. Award reversed. Raymond v Bolzar Builders, Inc., 3 A.D.2d 800, 160 N.Y.S.2d 13, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6084 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

While claimant was pushing cart containing 300 lbs. of electrical equipment, he felt his back snap. Held: board properly found that he sustained accident resulting in back injuries. Unusual strain need not be shown where effort of usual work produces condition. Sorace v General Electric Co., 5 A.D.2d 711, 168 N.Y.S.2d 770, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3504 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

After an orthopedist had re-examined the claimant and reported that in his opinion claimant's partial back disability continued, the carrier showed the doctor motion pictures of claimant climbing ladders, carrying loads, etc. Doctor then wrote the carrier that claimant could do any type of work. The record did not show that the Board ever got a copy of this letter. Thereafter, the same doctor re-examined claimant and again said the disability continued. An award for the continuing partial disability was sustained. Even if the doctor's impressions from the movies (not in the record) were technically admissible, there was enough evidence to sustain the award from the later physical exam. Cutting v John W. Cowper Co., 7 A.D.2d 348, 183 N.Y.S.2d 171, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9621 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Claimant was entitled to compensation for the aggravation of a pre-existing back condition where, while carrying a heavy tray of food to the dining room and in the process of stepping down one step, she felt a sharp pain in her back and had to have assistance in setting the tray down on a stand. Lindsay v Nowrocki, 9 A.D.2d 977, 193 N.Y.S.2d 676, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5667 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain a finding of accidental injury to claimant, resulting in a cervical strain occurring on a specific date while claimant was using an iron in the employer's laundry, resulting in "repeated traumas" on and after that date. Wheeler v Lynn Shirt Co., 15 A.D.2d 697, 223 N.Y.S.2d 271, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12016 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), aff'd, 12 N.Y.2d 741, 234 N.Y.S.2d 220, 186 N.E.2d 417 (N.Y. 1962).

Lumbosacral strain and abdominal muscle strain were not compensable where claimant's condition gradually developed with no element of suddenness, nothing catastrophic nor any accident which could be regarded as an accident by the common man. Bruzdowski v Coleco Industries, Inc., 30 A.D.2d 886, 291 N.Y.S.2d 447, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3490 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1968).

Sufficient medical reports in testimony by claimant as to the manner of the happening of the accident and the injuries sustained supported findings of the board that claimant did have a continuing causally related disabling condition of her back. Harris v Jewish Family Service, 34 A.D.2d 1078, 312 N.Y.S.2d 208, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4259 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

Medical evidence supported finding of workmen's compensation board that nurse, in standing over patients in a bent position and when necessary physically restraining them as they were under anesthesia, sustained an accidental injury to her back which arose out of and in course of her employment. Kort v Ingrasci, 46 A.D.2d 715, 360 N.Y.S.2d 304, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3774 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

Heavy equipment operator proved that he sustained accidental work-related back injury entitling him to workers' compensation where he testified in detail as to circumstances leading to collapse of seat of truck that he was driving, his testimony was corroborated by that of coworker who was present at time of injury, and orthopedist testified that, during course of treatment, operator related to him that he had injured his back when truck seat collapsed. Musso v Earth Movers, 240 A.D.2d 846, 659 N.Y.S.2d 105, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6703 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Workers' compensation claimant proved that his 1987 disability was causally related to his 1985 accident, despite contrary opinion of orthopedist who first treated him, where orthopedist diagnosed claimant as having recurrent back pain and conceded that back injury could be exacerbated over time, orthopedist had refused to treat claimant further unless he received payment, and claimant was later treated by chiropractor who testified that claimant had chronic lumbosacral myalgia with sciatic neuritis, that claimant was totally disabled as result of 1985 accident, and that his diagnosis was made with reasonable medical certainty, assuming that history related by claimant was correct. Musso v Earth Movers, 240 A.D.2d 846, 659 N.Y.S.2d 105, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6703 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Benefits were properly denied on finding that claimant did not sustain work-related injury during her employment with day treatment program, although she testified that she injured her back while trying to restrain 200-pound male patient, where coworker testified that claimant complained of back pain before incident occurred and made no mention of injuries after incident. Lewis v New York State Dep't of Mental Retardation & Developmental Disabilities, 257 A.D.2d 813, 687 N.Y.S.2d 438, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 383 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

281. —Back injuries; ruptured or herniated disc

A gasoline station attendant who bent down to place a tool on a low cabinet shelf and was taken with a severe sharp pain in the lower part of his back when he tried to straighten up, is entitled to compensation where his injury was diagnosed as possible herniation of the intervertebral disc in the lumbar vertebrae and medical evidence established that the accident was a competent producing cause of the injury. Strong v J. B. Lang Engine & Garage Co., 263 A.D. 1032, 268 A.D. 1032, 33 N.Y.S.2d 467, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7962 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

Where a nurse experienced a severe pain in her back, later diagnosed as a lumbosacral sprain and a ruptured intervertebral disc, when she lifted a broken sterilizer, her injury was compensable although she gave no history of the accident until a much later time. Velazco v St. Luke's Hospital, 284 A.D. 910, 134 N.Y.S.2d 303, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4040 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Claimant, a hog cutter for meat wholesaler, was taken with pain in shoulder while splitting hogs and was unable to straighten up. He did not tell his doctor about the accident until he was admitted to hospital about 2 weeks later. A ruptured intervertebral disc was found and an operation was performed. Held: there was substantial evidence to support the finding of an accident and that the injury was caused by an accident. Forst v Bergen Meat Co., 8 A.D.2d 554, 183 N.Y.S.2d 716, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9634 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), modified, 8 A.D.2d 749, 183 N.Y.S.2d 716, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8730 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

The claimant was entitled to compensation for a ruptured disc where the evidence showed that, on a specified date, he felt a sharp pain on the left side of his back and down the leg after handling heavy bags of seed. Fegatilli v Gardner Seed Co., 9 A.D.2d 975, 193 N.Y.S.2d 526, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5664 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Evidence held sufficient to sustain a finding that disability due to a herniated disc was attributable to an occasion when claimant, working in a shipyard, had to jump quickly, to avoid being struck by a cable which slipped, and felt a sharp pain in his back. Lewis v Rostrom Shipyard, Inc., 12 A.D.2d 831, 209 N.Y.S.2d 328, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13377 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

In a workers' compensation case, a worker, who experienced pains in her leg that eventually radiated to her back, was properly determined to have sustained a compensable injury, where she first experienced pain during the course of lifting heavy carburetors, where the repetitive work resulted in a gradual increase in pain, and where the worker's tardy notice to her employer was properly excused in that the tardiness did not aggravate the injury or hinder the employer in the preparation of its defense. Cortese v Rochester Products Div., G.M.C., 91 A.D.2d 802, 458 N.Y.S.2d 58, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19697 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1982).

Substantial evidence supported Workers' Compensation Board's decision that claimant with lower back injury and limited education did not have total industrial disability where medical evidence proved that claimant was capable of being employed, albeit not in his former employment, and although vocational services office identified various occupations that were suitable for claimant, he did not attempt to find employment in many of those areas. Gaff v North Star Trucking, 242 A.D.2d 758, 661 N.Y.S.2d 852, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8532 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 803, 668 N.Y.S.2d 558, 691 N.E.2d 630, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4197 (N.Y. 1997).

Claimant sustained continuing disability causally related to altercation at work and thus was entitled to workers' compensation benefits where (1) his treating physician, based on examination of claimant and MRI results indicating cervical herniation, disc bulges, and muscle spasms, diagnosed claimant with lumbar radiculopathy, (2) physician noticed no improvement in claimant's condition during nearly 11-month period of treatment, (3) physician concluded that claimant was totally disabled as result of altercation at work and that there was possibility that injuries were permanent, and (4) claimant testified that he was unable to work and that he was receiving continued medical treatment. Escala v Cecilware Corp., 275 A.D.2d 868, 713 N.Y.S.2d 779, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9481 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Record contained substantial evidence supporting the New York Workers' Compensation Board's factual findings that a claimant sustained a causally related disability pursuant to N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 2(15); the claimant presented competent medical evidence that his herniated cervical disc and torn rotator cuff were caused by his labor as a transfer operator pushing stacks of cardboard weighing 300 to 500 pounds, eight to 10 hours a day, five days a week, for 15 years. Baker v Weyerhaeuser, 19 A.D.3d 850, 796 N.Y.S.2d 740, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6753 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2005).

282. —Blood

Evidence that claimant's heavy manual labor caused the breaking down of scars in claimant's leg bringing about a reactivation of an underlying osteomyelitis was sufficient to support an award for a permanent partial disability due to accidental injury. Jones v Curran & Co., 33 A.D.2d 525, 303 N.Y.S.2d 541, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3243 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969).

283. —Bone diseases or disorders

Workers' compensation board properly awarded benefits to an employee for a compensable occupational disease pursuant to N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 2(15); the employee proved by substantial evidence that a bone spur was caused by the employee's work as a nurse, which required extensive walking. Aldrich v St. Joseph's Hosp., 305 A.D.2d 908, 759 N.Y.S.2d 603, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5827 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

284. —Burns

A Roman Catholic priest sustained accidental injuries in the nature of third-degree burns in his bedroom. He was on twenty-four hour duty. There was no proof as to the origin of the fire. The presumptions under § 21 apply and the award was proper. Ronan v St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church, 279 A.D. 960, 111 N.Y.S.2d 155, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5425 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

The finding that burns suffered by decedent when his clothing caught fire from welding spark in course of employment set up infection which was transmitted to kidneys, and that diseased condition of kidneys was factor in causation of employee's death was supported by substantial medical evidence. Garner v Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corp., 6 A.D.2d 363, 176 N.Y.S.2d 734, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5004 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

285. —Cancer

A factory worker who is struck in the left breast by a steel stringer and three weeks later underwent surgery for breast cancer suffers a disease or infection accelerated by or resulting from an accident. Roth v Curtiss-Wright Corp., 269 A.D. 916, 57 N.Y.S.2d 459, 1945 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4453 (N.Y. App. Div. 1945).; See also Feldheimer v National Biscuit Co., 270 A.D. 966, 61 N.Y.S.2d 849, 1946 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4879 (N.Y. App. Div. 1946).

While moving lumber for his employer, claimant was accidentally struck in the right shin bone by a beam. As a result of an old injury, he had suffered from chronic osteomyelitis of the right tibia. Evidence was sufficient to find aggravation of both the pre-existing chronic osteomyelitis and the underlying carcinoma necessitating amputation of his leg. Matheson v Skisland, 283 A.D. 907, 129 N.Y.S.2d 873, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5704 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Left index finger of claimant, a carpenter, was amputated because of malignant melanoma. He testified that he had hit finger with hammer but had made no note of exact date. From evidence in history given doctor, board could draw inference that particular incident occurred in August, 1953. There was substantial medical evidence that traumas aggravated pre-existing dormant melanoma. Award affirmed. Bodnar v Donald E. Davis, Inc., 5 A.D.2d 894, 170 N.Y.S.2d 941, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6702 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

While lifting, claimant experienced a sharp pain and he then sustained a back injury of some kind. Medical report suggested a low back sprain. He then developed symptoms of a disc herniation. An operation disclosed a spinal cord tumor which had pre-existed the accident and which had not been aggravated by it. Compensation was properly denied after the date of operation. Mendygral v Lismore Bar & Grill, 7 A.D.2d 137, 180 N.Y.S.2d 953, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3683 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958), reh'g denied, 7 A.D.2d 958, 182 N.Y.S.2d 1023, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9933 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959), aff'd, 8 N.Y.2d 823, 202 N.Y.S.2d 325, 168 N.E.2d 392, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1237 (N.Y. 1960).

Decedent, employed in moving business, experienced severe pain in back when weight of refrigerator, which he was helping to move, was unexpectedly caused to go against him. Condition was diagnosed as lumbo sacral sprain. Thereafter, he was admitted to hospital several times for treatment of multiple myeloma from which he subsequently died. On conflicting medical testimony, Board properly found that accident aggravated pre-existing but quiescent multiple myeloma which disabled decedent and caused his death. Herring v Great Kills Moving & Storage, Inc., 7 A.D.2d 797, 180 N.Y.S.2d 846, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3722 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958), app. denied, 6 N.Y.2d 705, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1696 (N.Y. 1959).

Evidence sustained award of death benefits where decedent's dermatologist opined that decedent's death from metastasized carcinoma was result either of aggravation of preexisting melanoma, or of melanoma directly caused by trauma decedent suffered 20 months prior to his death when he dropped 150-pound piece of sheet iron on his great toe, which was later amputated for malignant melanoma, notwithstanding that different opinion was expressed by carrier's expert; it is not function of Appellate Division to weigh conflicting testimony of medical experts. Ham v Rumsey Sheet Metal, Inc., 125 A.D.2d 810, 510 N.Y.S.2d 28, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 63018 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

Appeals court affirmed a worker's compensation board decision, based on an employer's insurer's expert internal medical testimony, that (1) found a 27-year auto body repairer's exposure to chromium and talc was not the cause of his stomach cancer as it was more linked with lung cancer, and (2) that denied his claim. Stromski v Jefferson Auto Body, 1 A.D.3d 643, 766 N.Y.S.2d 606, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11578 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

286. —Cerebral hemorrhage, apoplexy

An award for disablement by cerebral apoplexy or psychoneurosis due to fright is proper. Pickerell v Schumacher, 242 N.Y. 577, 152 N.E. 434, 242 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 577, 1926 N.Y. LEXIS 1113 (N.Y. 1926).

Claimant, employed as a superintendent and janitor of a building owned by employer, suffered an aneurysm which produced a cerebral hemorrhage caused by strain and exertion expended in carrying ashes from the cellar to the street level. Award was properly affirmed over an argument by the employer that there was no "extra effort" and accident. Moberg v 335 Lefferts Ave. Corp., 305 N.Y. 786, 113 N.E.2d 300, 305 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 786, 1953 N.Y. LEXIS 1295 (N.Y. 1953).

A kitchen worker who scalded his right hand attempting to secure silverware from boiling water and suffered a cerebral hemorrhage sustains a disease accelerated by or resulting from an accident. Desimono v Caruso Spaghetti Place, 271 A.D. 760, 64 N.Y.S.2d 590, 1946 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2884 (N.Y. App. Div. 1946).

Decedent, while driving truck, was involved in collision. He died some time later of cerebral hemorrhage. There was medical testimony to support finding that collision precipitated hemorrhage. Award affirmed. Gray v Sforza, 5 A.D.2d 897, 170 N.Y.S.2d 949, 170 N.Y.S.2d 965, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6708 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

The survivors of an artificial insemination technician apparently struck in the chest by a cow's head while attempting to read her ear tag were properly awarded death benefits upon evidence from a pathologist of a clot of several days duration corresponding to the day of the work accident. Stone v N. Y. Artificial Breeders' Co-op., Inc., 33 A.D.2d 524, 303 N.Y.S.2d 537, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3241 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 25 N.Y.2d 742, 1969 N.Y. LEXIS 1929 (N.Y. 1969).

Claimant's stroke arose out of and in course of employment as truck driver, and thus he was entitled to workers' compensation benefits, where (1) he was under treatment for hypertension which was controlled by medication, (2) he began to feel weak and dizzy while loading heavy equipment onto his truck, and symptoms worsened throughout day, but he struggled to make several stops before returning to terminal, reporting himself as sick and going home, (3) on following morning, he collapsed in bathroom and was admitted to hospital where condition was diagnosed as stroke, (4) his regular physician opined that causal connection existed between heavy work and stroke, and (5) chief of hospital renal division opined that heavy lifting can increase blood pressure and lead to stroke. Film v Holmes Transp., 147 A.D.2d 831, 537 N.Y.S.2d 929, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1592 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

287. —Circulatory; vascular

Claimant sustained injuries to right foot. He had pre-existing peripheral vascular disease impairing circulation in both legs. Evidence of permanence of defect and of inability of claimant to perform usual work, coupled with physician's testimony that he could not state that claimant had recovered from effects of injury, were sufficient to sustain award for periods after certain date. Sakalian v Morgan Laundry, Inc., 7 A.D.2d 790, 180 N.Y.S.2d 795, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3713 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

288. —Dermatitis

A fur cutter who accidently cut his finger resulting in an infection for which disability he received an award, and who suffered skin disease after returning to work, suffers a disease arising from an accidental injury and is entitled to a second award for the skin disease. Hechtenthal v Eisenberg & Halberstadt, 256 N.Y. 566, 177 N.E. 143, 256 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 566, 1931 N.Y. LEXIS 1146 (N.Y. 1931).

Contraction of dermatitis gradually from sulphuric acid of automobile batteries is not accidental under this section. Wright v Used Car Exchange, 221 A.D. 154, 223 N.Y.S. 245, 1927 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6396 (N.Y. App. Div. 1927).

Where claimant was employed as an iron worker and in the course of his employment, chipping concrete, pieces of concrete flew into his eye, and he threw his head backward and the back of his head struck against a metal strut, as the result of which he sustained a total loss of vision, such total loss of vision was due to an accidental injury. Kees v Michael Flynn Mfg. Co., 260 A.D. 967, 23 N.Y.S.2d 221, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5634 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

A salesman who was struck in the region of the nose by a falling can of peaches and became blind in the right eye several months later suffers a disease resulting from accident. De Stefano v Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co., 265 A.D. 896, 37 N.Y.S.2d 991, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6375 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

Though a stereotyper's work with his employer ended with his retirement at age 65, he was nonetheless entitled to an award for partial disability for occupational contact dermatitis where there was evidence of his intention and desire to continue his usual occupation insofar as his condition would permit. Cronin v Union Bag & Paper Corp., 284 A.D. 1079, 135 N.Y.S.2d 877, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4616 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Claimant was required to cease work because of contact dermatitis of hands arising out of work as baker. Awards for occupational disease were made and case was closed. Thereafter, case was reopened on report of dermatologist that subsequent flare-up of claimant's condition was attributable in part to previous contact dermatitis. Further award of temporary partial disability affirmed. Tarquinio v Duvernoy Bakeries, Inc., 6 A.D.2d 914, 176 N.Y.S.2d 13, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5221 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Claimant was working with acetylene torch and sparks entered his eye causing slight burn and abrasions. Subsequently he was referred to specialist and eye was removed. On testimony of claimant and 2 physicians, board was warranted in finding accident and causal relation. Suschinski v Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corp., 5 A.D.2d 903, 171 N.Y.S.2d 173, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6714 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 4 N.Y.2d 677, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1448 (N.Y. 1958).

Claimant, a demonstrator of cosmetics, was filing false fingernails which created dust. Inhaling of dust caused her to sneeze violently after which she felt pain in left eye. Subsequent examination disclosed detached retina. She admitted she did not tell of sneezing episode until questioned by doctors later. Award affirmed. Everett v Remington Associates, Inc., 5 A.D.2d 1036, 173 N.Y.S.2d 358, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6195 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Claimant, cashier at pari-mutuel race track, testified that "something blew in my eye" as he stopped to pick up a worksheet which had blown from a table. On record, it could not be held as a matter of law that there was no substantial evidence of foreign substance blowing in claimant's eye. Low v Greater New York Asso., 8 A.D.2d 862, 186 N.Y.S.2d 972, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8257 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

290. —Gangrene or amputation of limbs

An employee suffers an accidental injury where he steps on an upholstery tack which penetrated into the point of his great toe, causing chills, fever and gangrene of the toe necessitating the amputation of that member, and which caused an infection to spread to the leg which ultimately resulted in the amputation of that leg. Block v Oldsmobile North Shore Motor Sales Corp., 277 A.D. 818, 97 N.Y.S.2d 137, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3411 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950), aff'd, 302 N.Y. 680, 98 N.E.2d 481, 302 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 680, 1951 N.Y. LEXIS 846 (N.Y. 1951).

The claimant, suffering from diabetes, sustained a blister on his foot while tarring a roof. The blister apparently recovered but thereafter a lesion broke out and gangrene developed necessitating the amputation of claimant's leg. There was medical proof of causal relationship. Award for permanent loss of use of leg affirmed. Sliwinski v Sacred Heart R. C. Church, 1 A.D.2d 856, 148 N.Y.S.2d 889, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6291 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Evidence sustained an award of disability compensation and death benefits where the attending physician testified that original accident, in which decedent sustained injury to his great toe of his right foot, had aggravated a pre-existing diabetes, which in turn gave rise to gangrenous condition and which injury also had aggravated pre-existing arteriosclerosis, producing circulatory insufficiency from which death ultimately resulted. Delvecchio v Thomas Crimmins Contracting Co., 3 A.D.2d 618, 157 N.Y.S.2d 1000, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3432 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

On substantial medical evidence, board properly determined that as result of puncturing his right leg with nail on employer's premises, claimant, who had pre-existing diabetes and arterial sclerosis suffered aggravation of circulatory disease necessitating prolonged bed rest which in turn further stagnated circulation of both legs and resulted in occlusion and thrombosis of arteries of both legs, all of which resulted in chronic ulcer on right leg and unstable right ankle, and that, as a result of these injuries, he fell and injured toes of left leg requiring the amputation and ultimate loss of lower left leg. Award for loss of part of left leg affirmed. Penn v Black River Valley Club, 7 A.D.2d 669, 179 N.Y.S.2d 335, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4315 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Board properly found that claimant, while handling hams by means of hook with a wooden handle, sustained an accidental injury in the nature of a blister on his finger, the medical and surgical treatment of which aggravated pre-existing angiosarcoma of the finger which ultimately had to be amputated. Kehl v Smokemasters, Inc., 8 A.D.2d 563, 183 N.Y.S.2d 517, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9648 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

There being evidence sufficient to sustain a finding that claimant sustained an injury in course of employment by dropping a baffle plate on his right big toe, although there was evidence that claimant suffered from pre-existing diabetes and severe sclerotic changes, all of which contributed to disability sustained after amputation of the toe, a disability award was sustained. Korzeniewski v Kellogg, 12 A.D.2d 570, 206 N.Y.S.2d 985, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7279 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

There was substantial evidence to sustain a finding that claimant sustained an accidental injury to his foot in course of his employment as a porter when a door fell on it, causing scratches and bleeding, which augmented a pre-existing arteriosclerotic condition which led to later amputation of most of his leg. Solnoitz v Manju Associates, Ltd., 16 A.D.2d 725, 226 N.Y.S.2d 768, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10338 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Where a 69 year old warehouseman testified to removing cartons of dishes from a "flat" truck weighing up to 100 pounds, and that, on June 19, one of the containers fell from his shoulder and struck his left instep, this was sufficient basis for a board finding that a subsequent gangrenous condition of his left foot, requiring amputation, was necessitated by the accident in question, in conjunction with pre-existing diabetes and arteriosclerosis, although claimant failed to report the accident or developments following it for more than a month. Tierney v Independent Warehouse Co., 16 A.D.2d 844, 227 N.Y.S.2d 548, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9970 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

There was substantial evidence to support a board finding that amputation of claimant's leg was not due to an industrial accident or causally related to any incident in his employment where, according to his testimony, the initial injury which occurred on May 20, 1961 was due to fall of a pipe on his left foot, which he did not report to his employer because he was afraid of losing his job, and the subsequent injury was due to a visitor stepping upon his foot when, acting as doorman, he held the door open for the visitor's entrance. Potapchuk v Kalda Constr. Co., 21 A.D.2d 943, 251 N.Y.S.2d 387, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3309 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

Where employee worked in a wet area and his shoes became wet and stiff and the following day he felt an irritation and burning sensation on his left fourth toe as the result of the wet, tight and pinching shoes, which condition worsened and resulted in amputation of left leg below the knee due to gangrene, finding that claimant sustained an accidental injury arising out of and in the course of his employment was sustained although claimant had a pre-existing vascular disease. Bumpus v Eastern Greyhound Bus Corp., 30 A.D.2d 733, 291 N.Y.S.2d 540, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3580 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1968).

The Veterans' Administration hospital records and the testimony of two physicians was held to be substantial evidence in support of the Workmen's Compensation Board finding of a causal relationship between the accidental injury to the claimant's left foot and the gangrenous condition which gave rise to the claim. Nadell v North Shore Flushing, Inc., 35 A.D.2d 758, 314 N.Y.S.2d 960, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3729 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970), app. denied, 28 N.Y.2d 481, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 1674 (N.Y. 1971).

Evidence supported ruling by Worker's Compensation Board that claimant sustained compensable injury where (1) claimant, who was employed to direct truckers depositing trash at city dump, contended that he stepped on something that penetrated his shoe and that his foot thereafter became swollen and painful, requiring him to seek medical attention, which resulted in his hospitalization, (2) radiologist's report concluded that there might be "a foreign body" in claimant's foot, (3) gangrene developed, requiring amputation of claimant's lower leg, and (4) claimant's surgeon stated that, if history given by claimant as to piece of metal penetrating his shoe was correct, there was "a definite causal relationship" between claimant's injury and his disability. Lapine v Beacon, 145 A.D.2d 888, 536 N.Y.S.2d 222, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13779 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

Where an employee did not produce evidentiary material showing a violation of the safety standards in N.Y. Comp. Codes R. & Regs. tit. 12, §§ 23-8.1(i), 23-8.2(b)(2)(iii), there was not a legitimate claim under N.Y. Lab. Law § 241(6); however, because the defenses to the third-party's N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 11 claim were insufficient, summary judgment was not available and the complaint could be amended in accordance with N.Y. C.P.L.R. 3025(b). Field v New York Univ., 764 N.Y.S.2d 810, 1 Misc. 3d 559, 2003 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1203 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2003).

291. —Head or brain injuries

On a Thursday, claimant was struck by a steel rod in the course of his employment. No cut or bruise resulted and claimant worked that day and the following day without complaint. Ten days later he was found in a state of confusion and incoherence and diagnosis showed a subdural hematoma and a skull fracture. Award affirmed where there was no evidence of a subsequent accident. Mitchell v Delham Constr. Co., 285 A.D. 1103, 139 N.Y.S.2d 494, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6773 (N.Y. App. Div.), reh'g denied, 285 A.D. 1196, 141 N.Y.S.2d 831, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7143 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain a finding that death by suicide related back to brain injury sustained by decedent when he fell from a ladder following an electric shock, thereafter suffering loss of speech, convulsive seizures, and inability to continue to work or enjoy the normal pleasures of life in progressive stages until he finally shot himself. McIntosh v E. F. Hauserman Co., 12 A.D.2d 406, 211 N.Y.S.2d 482, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12278 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), aff'd, 10 N.Y.2d 892, 223 N.Y.S.2d 513, 179 N.E.2d 514, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 927 (N.Y. 1961).

The Board's determination that claimant did not suffer an accident in course of employment resulting in a condition later diagnosed as subdural hematoma would not be interfered with where the testimony was conflicting and the only evidence of accident sustained was plaintiff's allegation that he bumped his head on a truck while picking up a bag of laundry, became dizzy and felt nauseated, but nevertheless continued working the remainder of the day. Brenner v Utilities Laundry, Inc., 14 A.D.2d 626, 218 N.Y.S.2d 300, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9402 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Causal relationship between claimant's fall and his resulting medical condition was supported by (1) testimony of claimant (diabetic) that he fell when entering his office in morning and had no memory of rest of day until late afternoon, and (2) testimony of medical expert that claimant suffered head trauma in fall, producing prolonged stuporous or comatose condition during which he was unable to eat food necessary to keep him out of hypoglycemia, and that he therefore lapsed into insulin-induced hypoglycemia, causing brain damage. Watson v Ebasco Services, 140 A.D.2d 747, 527 N.Y.S.2d 628, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4727 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

Substantial evidence supported Workers' Compensation Board's finding that claimant was totally disabled as result of severe mental impairment caused by June 1981 accident where claimant was unable to return to his position as mechanic after being electrocuted, although he did return to his employment for short time to attend classes before being laid off, and examining psychiatrist's testimony and report proved that claimant was unable to be gainfully employed as of January 1988 and that any future prognosis of improvement was guarded. Uhler v A&P, 242 A.D.2d 754, 661 N.Y.S.2d 859, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8530 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

292. —Heart disorders

Claimant, who was suffering from a pre-existing heart disease is entitled to an award for injuries received where he was struck in the chest near the heart by a bony substance when lifting a piece of beef from a hook. Firtle v Isidore Kaplin, Inc., 246 A.D. 882, 285 N.Y.S. 23, 1936 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9966 (N.Y. App. Div. 1936).

An employer will be required to make payment into the special fund where the employee's death resulted from heart collapse and fibrosis of the lungs, after his resistance had been lowered and his heart weakened by two previous accidents. Kelly v New York S. Railways, 262 A.D. 924, 28 N.Y.S.2d 846, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6497 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

An employee of a wholesale baking company who while inside an oven cleaning it, was struck on the head by a falling grate causing him to become unconscious and resulting in the aggravation and acceleration of an unknown pre-existing endocarditis causing his death the same day, suffers a compensable injury. Sansbuary v Your Baking Co., 269 A.D. 917, 57 N.Y.S.2d 472, 1945 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4458 (N.Y. App. Div. 1945).

Death benefits award was proper where decedent had a rheumatic heart and in 1950, while lifting a carton suffered a back and hip injury and a hernia which caused him to be hospitalized. He thereafter died of heart disease in 1951. His stipulation at a compensation hearing prior to his death that "the cardiac condition was unrelated" was not binding on his widow. Tyrell v Railway Express Agency, Inc., 286 A.D. 1054, 144 N.Y.S.2d 833, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5117 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

On February 2, 1949, decedent, 72 years of age, sustained contusions of right thigh and multiple fractures of pelvis. Awards were paid until December 17, 1954 when he became permanently disabled from arteriosclorotic heart disease, fractures having healed. On medical testimony, Board properly found there was no causal relation between accident and disability after 1954 date. Hayes v Mid State Body Co., 6 A.D.2d 928, 175 N.Y.S.2d 636, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5245 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Claimant, employed as office cleaning woman, was frightened by person she thought was prowler although intruder turned out to be her forelady. She was almost immediately stricken with severe chest pain. Her condition was thereafter diagnosed as coronary arterial insufficiency. Held: injury resulting from fright alone is compensable accident. Award affirmed. Pukaluk v Insurance Co. of North America, 7 A.D.2d 676, 179 N.Y.S.2d 173, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4324 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Where medical evidence was introduced that claimant's condition was the result of progression of a pre-existing arteriosclerotic heart condition, no attempt was made to assert a claim until several months after its occurrence, and claimant's version of occurrences at the time is incredible, the Board can properly find that there was no accident, no notice, and no causal relation. Pergola v Manhattan Beach Jewish Center, 20 A.D.2d 943, 248 N.Y.S.2d 954, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3926 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

Workers' Compensation Board properly determined that claimant sustained compensable injury where claimant, 56-year-old plumbing contractor with moderate degree of arteriosclerotic heart disease suffered acute coronary occlusion and myocardial infarction as consequence of his involvement in fierce telephone argument with competitor regarding recently acquired and important plumbing contract claimant had successfully bid on, which lasted 25 to 30 minutes, during which claimant screamed and swore, became infuriated, threw cast iron pipe and fittings about and complained of experiencing pain in chest and left arm, and where claimant looked pale and was highly nervous and perspiring, and where he was admitted to coronary care unit of hospital the following day and his cardiologist testified that severe emotional disturbance occasioned by argument precipitated myocardial infarction. Leone v Patrick Leone & Sons Plumbing & Heating, 119 A.D.2d 950, 501 N.Y.S.2d 221, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 55880 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

Court would affirm decision by Workers' Compensation Board denying benefits to widow of decedent, who died following cerebral vascular accident (CVA) while not at work, despite testimony of widow's medical expert who stated that decedent's death was causally related to CVA which decedent suffered at work approximately 2 ½ years earlier, since carrier's expert concluded there was no causal connection between decedent's work activity and fatal CVA, and that conclusion was supported by impartial expert. Stiso v Hallen Constr. Co., 135 A.D.2d 974, 522 N.Y.S.2d 383, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52871 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987).

Sheriff's death at home from cardiac arrhythmia was causally related to his employment, and thus his widow was entitled to workers' compensation death benefits, where (1) during 3 months before his death, he became increasingly irritable because of job-related stress arising from numerous pending lawsuits, some of which named him personally, and frustration at not being able to perform his duties due to political controversy, and (2) medical experts, who reviewed various job-related stresses in sheriff's life, testified that stress was one cause of his cardiac arrhythmia. Ayers v Tioga County Sheriff's Dep't, 240 A.D.2d 819, 658 N.Y.S.2d 533, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6553 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

293. —Heart disorders; heart attack

An award to an employee who suffered a severe cold and bronchitis and a coronary occlusion during an attack of coughing is improper in the absence of any evidence of causal relation between the exposure to low temperatures in the course of his employment and his disability resulting from heart attacks, one of which occurred some fifteen days after the exposure and another over a year later. Schwalenstocker v Department of Taxation & Finance, 293 N.Y. 861, 59 N.E.2d 448, 293 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 861, 1944 N.Y. LEXIS 2283 (N.Y. 1944).

Decision of Workers' Compensation Board that decedent's fatal heart attack was compensable accident, arising out of and in course of his employment, was supported by substantial evidence where it had been shown that decedent had history of heart disease and hypertension and that he was severely distraught on day before his death because he had been told by his employer that he was being dismissed, in addition to expert testimony that notification of dismissal was "major stress factor" resulting in "ventricular instability, subsequent fibrilation" and, ultimately, death. Black v Metropolitan Tobacco, 71 N.Y.2d 989, 529 N.Y.S.2d 272, 524 N.E.2d 873, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 687 (N.Y. 1988).

Mental stress is accidental where an employee was called as a witness for his employer in court, subjected to exhaustive cross examination and suffered an immediate coronary occlusion. Church v Westchester County, 253 A.D. 859, 1 N.Y.S.2d 581, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8931 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938).

Scaffold builder and bricklayer's helper who received traveling expenses and monthly trip home, injured on construction job in Virginia. Cioti v William M. Moore Bldg. Corp., 269 A.D. 913, 57 N.Y.S.2d 552, 1945 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4444 (N.Y. App. Div. 1945).

After lifting a case weighing 150 lbs. felt pain in his left shoulder and across his chest and almost two years thereafter died as a result of arteriosclerosis and posterior wall myocardial infarction. There was sufficient medical opinion as to causal relationship. Chenier v H. W. Rohlfs & Son, 282 A.D. 792, 122 N.Y.S.2d 463, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4970 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

A death award for a diver was proper where it appeared that he was working in the Hudson River trying to raise a sunken barge when he had a heart attack. Decedent was neither a seaman nor a member of a ship's crew and his work bore no relation to navigation as that word is understood in its usual sense. Hence, jurisdiction by the board did not interfere with the uniform application of maritime law. Schacht v Nicolaisen, 283 A.D. 902, 129 N.Y.S.2d 871, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5696 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

A bricklayer was struck on the shin by a fellow worker's shovel and was thereafter nervous and excited. Two days later, while working, he died of a myocardial infarction. Award affirmed. Gordon v E. F. Hickey Co., 285 A.D. 916, 137 N.Y.S.2d 415, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6100 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

Decedent, a truck driver, was injured in an automobile accident in course of employment. He was thrown from truck and sustained injuries to face, right arm, back, chest and right shoulder. Thirty days after accident he died of coronary thrombosis. Medical question was presented for Board as to length of time for formation of thrombosis, ranging from 48 hours to 6 weeks. Causal relation between accident and death properly found. Palmero v Samuel Gallucci & Sons, Inc., 6 A.D.2d 911, 176 N.Y.S.2d 95, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5219 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958), aff'd, 5 N.Y.2d 529, 186 N.Y.S.2d 255, 158 N.E.2d 834, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1420 (N.Y. 1959).

Where claimant testified that, while working as a cutter in a meat plant, in course of his employment he was pushing meat suspended on hooks from a ceiling runner weighing from 600 to 700 pounds, and that two sections of meat twisted and struck him on the arm and chest, causing him to experience a pain in the left arm and chest, immediately following which he suffered an acute anteroseptal infarction, the incident was sufficiently identified in time and place to permit the board to find that the heart condition was due to an accident. Hilliard v Armour & Co., 11 A.D.2d 869, 203 N.Y.S.2d 159, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8398 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. dismissed, 8 N.Y.2d 708, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1846 (N.Y. 1960).

Death of a sales director, 53 years of age, from lobar pneumonia bringing on a fatal heart attack, could be attributed to an accident in course of employment where it appeared that for 20 years he had had one lung completely collapsed and slight fibrosis in the other resulting in susceptibility to asthma and his work caused him to make a airplane trip from London to South Africa in course of which he was subjected to high altitudes which, according to medical testimony, caused difficulty in breathing and greater susceptibility to infection. Brocklebank v Union Carbide International Co., 17 A.D.2d 1009, 234 N.Y.S.2d 69, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6992 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962), aff'd, 13 N.Y.2d 1036, 245 N.Y.S.2d 604, 195 N.E.2d 313, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 897 (N.Y. 1963).

Upon appeal from a decision of the Workmen's Compensation Board, it was held evidence sustained the Board's finding that work performed by a city employee while sanding roads on an overtime day, after having been struck on the shoulder by a large garage door spring that broke loose, precipitated his fatal heart attack. Gannon v Poughkeepsie Dep't of Public Works, 27 A.D.2d 777, 277 N.Y.S.2d 16, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4903 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1967).

Evidence supported determination that state police officer's death from heart attack was result of progressing natural disease and unrelated to work, rather than result of industrial accident when officer, while under pressure and apprehensive, moved some packages to substation storeroom. Rockburn v New York State Police, 46 A.D.2d 951, 361 N.Y.S.2d 757, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3296 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

In a workers' compensation case involving a boilermaker who suffered a series of heart attacks, the board properly ruled that the boilermaker had a permanent, causally related, partial disability where there was substantial evidence to support the finding that strain precipitated a heart attack, even though superimposed on a pre-existing pathology from a previous heart attack, and where the board's resolution of the sharp medical dispute on causation was well within its province. Underdown v Treadwell Corp., 89 A.D.2d 661, 453 N.Y.S.2d 109, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17783 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1982).

In a workers' compensation case involving a rag picker operator who suffered a heart attack and later died, disability and death were properly found to be causally related to an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment where the deceased operator's son and wife testified that deceased told them that it was hard for him to get certain materials out of a room as required in his employment, where the son tried to pull the materials out of the room and stated that they were "really heavy," and where medical testimony stated that deceased's work activity on the day in question "was a direct invitant" to his heart attack. Hart v Fiber Conversion, Inc., 89 A.D.2d 665, 453 N.Y.S.2d 102, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17788 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1982).

In a workers' compensation case based on a heart attack suffered by an employee who was lifting a steel plate weighing more than 100 pounds, disability and subsequent death of the employee were properly determined to have been causally related to the industrial accident in the nature of a heart attack in view of direct probative medical evidence to support the board's determination. Danko v Long Island University, 89 A.D.2d 668, 453 N.Y.S.2d 101, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17792 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1982).

Death benefits were properly denied on basis that worker's fatal myocardial infarction was not caused by work-related activities, although worker's widow testified that worker participated in heavy physical labor at work and worker's physician, who had been treating him for high blood pressure and symptoms of angina and coronary disease, testified that worker died from myocardial infarction "possibly occasioned by physical activity on the job," since worker had been instructed not to participate in any physical work, and labor foreman testified that worker did not perform any strenuous work or make any complaints of ill health on day he died. Tangredi v GAF Constr. Corp., 125 A.D.2d 811, 509 N.Y.S.2d 916, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 63019 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

Workers' Compensation Board correctly found that death of employee was work related where (1) employee died of heart attack while walking to appointment with company attorney after he had lunch with employer's production manager, and (2) record contained evidence of stressful nature of employee's job and particular stress experienced during week of employee's death, as well as walking in extremely cold weather conditions. Rose v Brickel Ass'n, 159 A.D.2d 782, 551 N.Y.S.2d 1001, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2203 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1990).

Workers' Compensation Board's denial of claim for death of attorney was supported by expert's opinion that his acute vascular event or stroke was caused by his untreated obesity and hypertension, despite conflicting expert testimony that condition resulted from work-related stress. Connelly v Charles M. Connelly Assocs., 241 A.D.2d 572, 660 N.Y.S.2d 76, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7246 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 810, 666 N.Y.S.2d 99, 688 N.E.2d 1381, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3630 (N.Y. 1997).

Finding of causal relationship between claimant's employment as police officer and his suffering of myocardial infarction was supported by evidence that, on day before his attack, he was required to participate in 6-hour, karate-type defensive training course, and by conflicting medical testimony as to whether training course precipitated attack. Masi v Town of Clarktown, 260 A.D.2d 889, 688 N.Y.S.2d 799, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4211 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

294. —Hernia

A hernia resulting from strain while lifting a box of clay weighing 700 pounds or more, is an accidental injury within the meaning of this section. Jordan v Decorative Co., 230 N.Y. 522, 130 N.E. 634, 230 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 522, 1921 N.Y. LEXIS 858 (N.Y. 1921).; See also Ball v Ocean Distributors (1937).

A person who gets a blister on his hand while in the course of his employment, which finally results in blood poisoning, is entitled to compensation. Scoville v Tolhurst Mach. Works, 193 A.D. 606, 184 N.Y.S. 608, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5615 (N.Y. App. Div. 1920), aff'd, 231 N.Y. 510, 132 N.E. 867, 231 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 510, 1921 N.Y. LEXIS 661 (N.Y. 1921).

A sheet metal worker who injured his hand and died three weeks later of general septicemia suffers a disease resulting from an accident under this section. Voelz v Bethlehem Steel Co., 255 A.D. 733, 6 N.Y.S.2d 758, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4946 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938).

Evidence sustained a death award for a pipefitter who developed severe abdominal pains after lifting a heavy tank and who was thereafter taken to the hospital where he was found to have a hopeless acute intestinal obstruction with intestinal strangulation and gangrene. Medical proof given by experts and family physician differed as to pre-existence of herniation and effect of lifting thereon. Bellamy v Carrier Corp., 284 A.D. 1012, 135 N.Y.S.2d 334, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4383 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Claimant's work involved removing and replacing tires. He testified that on a particular day he had removed over 100 tires each weighing 100 lbs. or more. When he went home he noticed hernia for first time. Finding of accident on that day sustained. Costello v B. F. Goodrich Co., 5 A.D.2d 1034, 173 N.Y.S.2d 319, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6191 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 5 N.Y.2d 705, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1547 (N.Y. 1958).

In March, 1949, while working, decedent suffered left inguinal hernia for which he was awarded compensation and the case was closed in September, 1949. In November, 1953, while recovering from operation for strangulated hernia, decedent was taken with severe pains in abdomen and died. Autopsy showed cause of death was perforated stomach ulcer. Board properly disallowed widow's claim for death benefits on finding of no causal relation between accident or operation and death. As to award for disability from October 29, 1953 to November 2, 1953, Special Fund for Reopened Cases was properly discharged as the case was reopened within 7 years of the accident. 1953 order of referee instructing that case be reopened and placed on calendar with death cause was sufficient even though there had been no formal reopening. And, even if the June, 1956 decision be considered as the reopening, then award for 1953 disability was beyond the 2-year period preceding application for compensation for which fund could be held liable. Carpenter v Port Henry, 8 A.D.2d 568, 183 N.Y.S.2d 467, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9655 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

There being no evidence of any accident or single incident occurring in course of claimant's employment at operating a "hand screw machine" which could have caused him to suffer a sudden pain in his chest and a hiatus hernia, his condition was not compensable. Rosenberg v Scintilla Div., 12 A.D.2d 551, 206 N.Y.S.2d 710, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7249 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

There was evidence sufficient to sustain an award of death benefits where it appeared that decedent sustained an uncontrollable hernia of inordinate size as the result of an accidental blow in the abdomen, making surgery inadvisable because of a heart condition and thereby hastening his death, which occurred some eight years later. Dawson v North Hudson Woodcraft Corp., 12 A.D.2d 708, 209 N.Y.S.2d 8, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6252 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), app. denied, 9 N.Y.2d 610, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1674 (N.Y. 1961).

An award of both disability and death benefits was sustained on the basis of testimony that decedent, while at work, picked up a heavy crate and thereafter felt a sharp pain, went home and stayed in bed for three days until a doctor diagnosed his condition as an irreducible hernia, and defendant died shortly following an operation to reduce the hernia in course of which a perforated appendix turned up, in connection with all of which a blood clot developed causing a cerebrovascular attack from which decedent died ten days later. Celia v Elks Club, Inc., 14 A.D.2d 938, 221 N.Y.S.2d 377, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7872 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Where the only evidence before the Board indicated that claimant experienced a sharp pain in the left groin while doing some heavy moving in connection with his work and which was diagnosed as an acute traumatic left inguinal herniation, it could properly disallow compensation for a hernia on the right side which was not discovered until claimant, sometime later, was undergoing an operation for the left side hernia, and then repaired. Klumock v Yonkers Constr. Co., 18 A.D.2d 1121, 239 N.Y.S.2d 210, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4027 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

There was adequate evidence to support a board finding that claimant suffered an accidental injury when, while stretching to reach and clean an overhead lighting fixture, he felt a sharp pain in his groin like "a bundle coming out" and later required surgery for hernia notwithstanding prior injury sustained by claimant in the same area and an earlier hernia operation on the same side. Pfeiffer v Glens Falls Ins. Co., 19 A.D.2d 681, 241 N.Y.S.2d 451, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3492 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

The fact that there is testimony concerning a specific incident does not necessarily require the Board to classify a hernia as an accidental injury, as an inguinal hernia may be an occupational disease, in which case the issue of its occupational causation is factual, within the province of the Board to determine, and will not be overturned if supported by substantial evidence. Silver-

Where the evidence indicates that occupational strains produced the bilateral hernia which led to the employee's death and did not merely aggravate a pre-existing hernia, an occupational disease under subdivision 7 is adequately established. Boccia v New York, 24 A.D.2d 727, 263 N.Y.S.2d 59, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3389 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965), aff'd, 18 N.Y.2d 804, 275 N.Y.S.2d 387, 221 N.E.2d 917, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 1048 (N.Y. 1966).

295. —Infectious diseases

An employee engaged in weighing hides on piers, which hides constitute cargoes unloaded from vessels, who, while handling dirty and diseased hides, was infected by anthrax germs through an abrasion in his hand, previously sustained while handling hides covered with wet salt, sustains an accidental injury. Hiers v John A. Hull & Co., 178 A.D. 350, 164 N.Y.S. 767, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5784 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

Glanders is a disease which, when contracted without previous accidental injury occurring in the course of the employment, cannot be classed under the Work. Comp. Law as an accidental injury arising out of and in the course of the employment. Richardson v Greenberg, 188 A.D. 248, 176 N.Y.S. 651, 1919 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8099 (N.Y. App. Div. 1919).

A matron in a children's institution who was stricken with scarlet fever four days after attending a child afflicted with the disease suffers an accidental injury. Gaites v Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children, 251 A.D. 761, 295 N.Y.S. 594, 1937 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7409 (N.Y. App. Div. 1937), aff'd, 277 N.Y. 534, 13 N.E.2d 461, 277 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 534, 1938 N.Y. LEXIS 1027 (N.Y. 1938).

Contracting of poliomyelitis as a result of being sneezed at by a fellow nurse can properly be found to have resulted from an accident. Gardner v New York Medical College, 280 A.D. 844, 113 N.Y.S.2d 394, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3879 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952), aff'd, 305 N.Y. 583, 111 N.E.2d 644, 305 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 583, 1953 N.Y. LEXIS 1172 (N.Y. 1953).

A school teacher who taught a class of 32 pupils whose average age was six years and was exposed to an epidemic of mumps which broke out in the school because of her close contact with her pupils suffered a compensable industrial "accident" when she contracted the disease and wound up with encephalitis affecting her brain which disabled her for nine months, there being no evidence to overcome the presumption of compensability under § 21. McDonough v Whitney Point Cent. School, 15 A.D.2d 191, 222 N.Y.S.2d 678, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6802 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Typhoid fever contracted from drinking water furnished by the employer, which had become contaminated and polluted through its negligence, may constitute an accidental injury within the meaning of subd. 7 of this section but the inception thereof must be assignable to a determinating or single act identified in space of time. Scheerens v E. W. Edwards & Son, 232 N.Y.S. 557, 133 Misc. 616, 1929 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 642 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1929).; See also O'Neil v Carley Heater Co., 218 N.Y. 414, 113 N.E. 406, 218 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 414, 1916 N.Y. LEXIS 1082 (N.Y. 1916).

296. —Infectious diseases; tuberculosis

Substantial evidence supported Workmen's Compensation Board's determination that persistent impacts of coughing by inmate working closely with corrections officer over a period of three or four months with officer's gradual succumbing to tuberculosis was compensable accident under Workmen's Compensation Law. Middleton v Coxsackie Correctional Facility, 38 N.Y.2d 130, 379 N.Y.S.2d 3, 341 N.E.2d 527, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 2297 (N.Y. 1975).

A worker who crushed a finger and suffered an infection which activated a dormant tubercular condition suffers a disease or infection accelerated by or resulting from an accident within the meaning of this section. Salli v Standard Wrecking & Salvage Co., 254 A.D. 789, 4 N.Y.S.2d 70, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7623 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938).

A nurse who contracted tuberculosis as a result of being exposed to tubercular patients is entitled to compensation. McDonough v Flushing Hospital & Dispensary, 266 A.D. 937, 43 N.Y.S.2d 889, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5291 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943).; See also Bukofsky v Flushing Hospital & Dispensary, 266 A.D. 937, 43 N.Y.S.2d 890, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5292 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943).

An employee who suffered an aggravation of a pre-existing pulmonary tuberculosis by reason of an operation for occupational hernia suffers a disease resulting from an accident within the meaning of this section. Steinberg v Supreme Coat Makers, Inc., 271 A.D. 762, 64 N.Y.S.2d 469, 1946 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2892 (N.Y. App. Div. 1946).

Student nurse was exposed to tuberculosis at a state hospital while she was in the employ of Crouse Hospital and although her claim for disability was not timely filed, award was affirmed where it appeared that Crouse Hospital had furnished free medical and hospital care to claimant before the expiration of the time limitations. Pogue v Crouse Irving Hospital, 281 A.D. 931, 119 N.Y.S.2d 842, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3796 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Award was proper where nurse was X-rayed in January and results were negative but in May X-ray revealed a tubercular infection and claimant had attended patients who were later found to be suffering from tuberculosis. Hayes v St. Mary's Hospital, 285 A.D. 914, 137 N.Y.S.2d 409, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6097 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

Proof that claimant worked as a laboratory porter at a hospital and contracted tuberculosis during the period of his employment and that there were at least three tubercular patients in the hospital during this period and that their sputum was examined in the laboratory where claimant worked and that claimant was required to handle unsterilized tubes was sufficient to support a finding that tuberculosis was an occupational disease contracted in the course of employment. Holmes v Beth El Hospital, 286 A.D. 1055, 144 N.Y.S.2d 768, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5118 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

297. —Infectious diseases; venereal disease

A nurse who pricked her finger while attending an infant afflicted with congenital syphilis and became infected with the disease suffers a disease resulting from an accident under this section. Waterman v Jamaica Hospital, 257 A.D. 1087, 14 N.Y.S.2d 636, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9203 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

Gonorrheal infection of the eye suffered by a hospital interne while attending a patient afflicted with venereal disease is accidental. Turitto v St. Mary's Hospital, 257 A.D. 1094, 14 N.Y.S.2d 647, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9224 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

298. —Joint injury

A drill press operator who developed a ganglion following a blow on her hand suffers a disease or infection accelerated by or resulting from an accident under this section. Schell v Haskett Tool & Engineering Co., 270 A.D. 970, 62 N.Y.S.2d 37, 1946 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4894 (N.Y. App. Div. 1946).

Claimant sustained injury to knee in course of employment and 9 days later his knee "locked" while he was engaged in activity unrelated to employment. Disability was result of torn cartilage. Award affirmed. Moquist v Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corp., 5 A.D.2d 910, 170 N.Y.S.2d 944, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6730 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

If claimant's septic arthritis resulted from a work-connected accident it is clearly compensable even if the accident aggravated a condition of nonindustrial origin to the point of disability. Ellis v Armour & Co., 31 A.D.2d 690, 295 N.Y.S.2d 842, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2618 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1968).

299. —Mental injury

Claimant suffered a spinal injury in the course of his employment and thereafter developed a manic-depressive psychosis. Disability award was made even though psychosis could not have resulted from trauma where a physician testified that it could have been caused by over anxiety about accident, hospitalization and narrow escape from death. Griffiths v Shaffrey, 308 N.Y. 729, 124 N.E.2d 339, 308 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 729, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 1816 (N.Y. 1954).

A laborer who developed dementia praecox following a back injury which was discovered by physicians only a considerable time after it was incurred and which entailed long litigation accompanied by extreme privation is entitled to compensation for his consequent disability. Rodriguez v New York Dock Co., 256 A.D. 875, 9 N.Y.S.2d 264, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5211 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

An award is proper to a meat cutter and loader who suffered a deep laceration over his eye resulting in injuries in the nature of traumatic hysteria and neurosis when an overhead iron roller jumped the rail and struck him in the forehead. McGuirk v J. J. Harrington & Co., 262 A.D. 980, 30 N.Y.S.2d 68, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6770 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

Workers' Compensation Board did not err in deciding that the claimant did not sustain a compensable injury and in denying her claim for workers' compensation benefits because there was no basis to disturb the Board's factual determination that the claimant's work-related stress did not exceed that which could be expected in her normal work environment and that the genesis of the exacerbation of her mental injuries was her involvement in a disciplinary proceeding taken in good faith and not her interactions with coworkers upon returning to work. Matter of Novak v St. Luke's Roosevelt Hosp., 148 A.D.3d 1509, 50 N.Y.S.3d 631, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2437 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2017).

300. —Muscle, tissue damage

Testimony by an employee that in the course of his duties he frequently hit his screw driver with his hand does not justify a finding of an injury caused by an accident where the bruise on the palm of his hand developed into a frog felon resulting in disability. Woodruff v R. H. Howes Const. Co., 228 N.Y. 276, 127 N.E. 270, 228 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 276, 1920 N.Y. LEXIS 934 (N.Y. 1920).

301. —Reaction to toxins or chemicals

Reaction as the result of an injection of anti-toxin constitutes an accidental injury within the meaning of the workmen's compensation law where the injection was made by the employer's physician on the employer's premises and under the employer's direction. Sanders v Children's Aid Soc., 238 A.D. 746, 265 N.Y.S. 698, 1933 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9609 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 262 N.Y. 655, 188 N.E. 107, 262 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 655, 1933 N.Y. LEXIS 1184 (N.Y. 1933).

Where decedent was employed as a helper to a workman in charge of cleaning furniture in which work a poisonous cleaning fluid was used and which had been placed by the workman in charge in a soft drink bottle, and the decedent took a drink out of the bottle, his death caused thereby resulted from an industrial accident and an award was proper. Kononchuk v National House Cleaning Contractors, Inc., 278 A.D. 475, 105 N.Y.S.2d 881, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3842 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

Bookkeeper employed in a dark office who becoming sleepy and looking tired on a hot day, drank a combination of Coca-cola and inhaled the contents of a benzedrine inhaler was injured in an accident in the course of her employment when she sustained a cerebral hemorrhage from her draught. Fishman v S. W. Layton, Inc., 284 A.D. 165, 130 N.Y.S.2d 656, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3365 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

There was sufficient evidence in the record to warrant a finding that death of a painter arose out of his employment where he was found unconscious following a fall in course of his employment with his clothes and body saturated with spilled benzine; and an exploratory operation of his brain was undertaken in the belief that a brain tumor might be involved; but no such tumor was found, and he died as the result of excessive bleeding resulting from the operation, there being some testimony that the benzine poisoning was what led to the mistaken diagnosis and surgical procedure. Kestenbaum v Dunrite Painting Co., 12 A.D.2d 695, 207 N.Y.S.2d 917, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6775 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), aff'd, 10 N.Y.2d 838, 221 N.Y.S.2d 728, 178 N.E.2d 430, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 979 (N.Y. 1961).

Court would sustain finding that claimant did not sustain accidental injury in course of her employment, despite her assertion that she suffered from, inter alia, headaches, dizziness, nausea, and slurred speech due to poor ventilation system at her workplace, where she had been experiencing those symptoms for 15 years, her treating physician for prior 11 years diagnosed her with chronic fatigue syndrome and testified that he found nothing remarkable on examining claimant, and it was not until after claimant filed her application for workers' compensation benefits that she suffered injury diagnosed as "sick building syndrome." Rakowski v New York State DOL, 243 A.D.2d 1020, 663 N.Y.S.2d 428, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10867 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997), app. denied, 91 N.Y.2d 807, 669 N.Y.S.2d 260, 692 N.E.2d 129, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 185 (N.Y. 1998).

Workers' Compensation Law Judge should have permitted teacher to change theory of her claim from occupational disease to accidental injury where employer was aware that claim was predicated upon injuries allegedly resulting from teacher's exposure to noxious fumes from nearby bathrooms and poor ventilation in room in which she taught, and thus employer was not prejudiced. In re Claim of Leventer, 257 A.D.2d 903, 684 N.Y.S.2d 658, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 476 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

302. —Skin diseases or infections

An infection of fingers while cleaning a urinal, the fingers having been previously cut at home, is an accident under this section. Horrigan v Post-Standard Co., 224 N.Y. 620, 121 N.E. 872, 224 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 620, 1918 N.Y. LEXIS 1022 (N.Y. 1918).

The contracting of poison ivy is an accidental injury within the meaning of this section. Plass v Central N. E. R. Co., 226 N.Y. 449, 123 N.E. 852, 226 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 449, 1919 N.Y. LEXIS 889 (N.Y.), aff'd, 226 N.Y. 569, 123 N.E. 852, 226 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 569, 1919 N.Y. LEXIS 916 (N.Y. 1919).

A fur cutter who accidently cut his finger resulting in an infection for which disability he received an award, and who suffered skin disease after returning to work suffers a disease arising from an accidental injury and is entitled to a second award for the skin disease. Hechtenthal v Eisenberg & Halberstadt, 256 N.Y. 566, 177 N.E. 143, 256 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 566, 1931 N.Y. LEXIS 1146 (N.Y. 1931).

A photograph developer whose work required that she dip her hands in a chemical solution many times a day resulting eventually in gangrene of the finger does not suffer an accidental injury because the contract made by the employee between her hand and the solution was voluntary and intentional and the injuries resulted from no occurrence which was referable to any particular moment of time which is definite. Jeffreyes v Charles H. Sager Co., 198 A.D. 446, 191 N.Y.S. 354, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8118 (N.Y. App. Div. 1921), aff'd, 233 N.Y. 535, 135 N.E. 907, 233 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 535, 1922 N.Y. LEXIS 942 (N.Y. 1922).

Contraction of dermatitis gradually from sulphuric acid of automobile batteries is not accidental under this section. Wright v Used Car Exchange, 221 A.D. 154, 223 N.Y.S. 245, 1927 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6396 (N.Y. App. Div. 1927).

A laborer who sustained a laceration of the thumb which resulted in an infection and malignant endocarditis suffers a disease or infection resulting from an accident within the meaning of this section. McCarthy v Worthington Pump & Machinery Corp., 254 A.D. 612, 2 N.Y.S.2d 839, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6738 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938).

Though a stereotyper's work with his employer ended with his retirement at age 65, he was nonetheless entitled to an award for partial disability for occupational contact dermatitis where there was evidence of his intention and desire to continue his usual occupation insofar as his condition would permit. Cronin v Union Bag & Paper Corp., 284 A.D. 1079, 135 N.Y.S.2d 877, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4616 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Claimant suffered from condition diagnosed as traumatized plantar wart with ulceration, complicated by obesity, diabetes, mellitus, diabetic arteriosclerosis and endarteritis. He claimed that walking required of him in employer's retail furniture store was contributing factor to an aggravation of condition. Held: claimant did not sustain accident and did not incur an occupational disease. Rotenberg v Diamond Bedding & Upholstering Co., 5 A.D.2d 709, 168 N.Y.S.2d 654, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3501 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

303. —Tetanus

Where claimant contracted tetanus through cutting his hand while changing an automobile wheel in the course of his employment, such injury is compensable. Rado v Bell Wein Service Station, 262 A.D. 983, 30 N.Y.S.2d 28, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6779 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

An award of compensation is proper to iron worker in a structural steel factory who died of tetanus which developed from an accidental injury to a finger. Davis v Harris Structural Steel Co., 269 A.D. 915, 57 N.Y.S.2d 586, 1945 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4449 (N.Y. App. Div. 1945).

304. Multiple accidents

Death or increase and prolongation of disability by further accident caused by weakness, illness, or disease assignable to the original accident is compensable. Malgieri v General Electric Co., 258 N.Y. 620, 180 N.E. 358, 258 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 620, 1932 N.Y. LEXIS 1284 (N.Y. 1932).; See also Ruzsjak v Metal Stamping Co., 259 N.Y. 575, 182 N.E. 187, 259 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 575, 1932 N.Y. LEXIS 1055 (N.Y. 1932)., and Anderson v Babcock & Wilson Co., 256 N.Y. 146, 175 N.E. 654, 256 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 146, 1931 N.Y. LEXIS 1036 (N.Y. 1931).

Back injury cases should be in a category by themselves because, once injured, there is the ever-present danger of recurrence and the question then arises as to whether the subsequent incident was a new accident, an aggravation of an existing condition, or an incident associated with the primary injury. Hogan v Weldmaster Co., 11 A.D.2d 557, 199 N.Y.S.2d 873, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10191 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Where the board found that the victim of an accident which occurred on August 30 of one year, suffered another accident on December 6 of the following year, it was held that there was substantial evidence to support such finding. Davis v Albert Acan X-Ray Solutions, Inc., 24 A.D.2d 676, 261 N.Y.S.2d 172, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3678 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Determination by Workers' Compensation Board that claimant's disability was causally related to first of his 2 accidents was supported by psychiatrist's testimony that claimant suffered from conversion disorder that rendered him permanently and totally disabled, that both accidents contributed to disorder and resulting disability, and that psychiatrist was unable to apportion disability between them, although other medical evidence supported position that claimant's earlier injury was not causally related to his disability. Howell v Langie Fuel Serv., 241 A.D.2d 568, 659 N.Y.S.2d 355, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7212 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

305. —Recurrence of original injury

An award of compensation will be affirmed for injuries to the sacroiliac region of the back though many years before the claimant had recovered an award for an injury in the same general region of his back but recovered from the first injury and worked for several years thereafter. Moosman v Yorkdale Printing Co., 263 A.D. 913, 32 N.Y.S.2d 152, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7345 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

A steamfitter who had sustained a compensable wrist fracture in 1945 was entitled to compensation when in 1950 as a result of occupational aggravation and an exacerbation of the generative arthritic changes he was again disabled while working for a new employer. Walling v H. J. Bareham & Son, 285 A.D. 366, 137 N.Y.S.2d 589, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5488 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1955).

Claimant suffered an industrial accident in 1942 which resulted in a leg wound with cellulitis. In 1949, he again struck this leg and developed ulceration. The Board determined that the second accident caused a recurrence of the condition which resulted from the industrial accident and granted award. Affirmed. Sportelli v Troyan, 286 A.D. 906, 142 N.Y.S.2d 185, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4476 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

Claimant sustained injuries to his back in July, 1953 accident. He did not return to work until September, 1954. On January 7, 1955 an accident occurred to his back causing him to stop work again. On substantial evidence, Board properly decided that there had been no new accident, that disability was due to 1953 accident and that award for disability between March 26, and September 12, 1954 and for reduced earnings thereafter until January 7, 1955, should have been made. Claimant's statement that he was unable to return to work until September, 1954 was entitled to consideration since all the doctors conceded that claimant had received serious injury. Bonsteel v Skyline Products, Inc., 8 A.D.2d 873, 186 N.Y.S.2d 781, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8276 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.2d 705, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1822 (N.Y. 1959).

306. —Injury in the course of moving about after first accident

Where a claimant in the course of his employment received an injury to his right foot and thereafter while walking with a crutch fell, fracturing his left hip, an award for the second injury is proper in spite of the contention that there was no causal relation between the first and second accidents. Chiodo v Newhall Co., 254 N.Y. 534, 173 N.E. 854, 254 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 534, 1930 N.Y. LEXIS 1118 (N.Y. 1930).

Where a riveter sustained injuries to both hands requiring heavy bandages and was therefore unable to check a fall at home, the injuries resulting from the fall are consequential and are compensable. Murray v Interborough Rapid Transit Co., 253 A.D. 848, 1 N.Y.S.2d 324, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8888 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938).

Where a lineman was paralyzed by an accident and subsequently fatally injured by a taxicab while returning in a wheel chair from a visit with a friend, his death is not consequential to his original injury and is not compensable. Baker v Niagara Falls Power Co., 256 A.D. 865, 9 N.Y.S.2d 79, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5176 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

Where a claimant sustained a broken leg from an industrial accident and while still disabled and using crutches, stepped out of an automobile, slipped and stepped harder than he should on his injured leg and broke it in the same place again, the second injury was due to the original accident and compensation is properly payable therefor. Hall v Chapman, 257 A.D. 1091, 14 N.Y.S.2d 666, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9214 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

An employee suffered an industrial accident resulting in the amputation of his left leg and, 4 ½ years later, while walking upon a city sidewalk, stepped into a hole, fell, was operated on again and died. Held: an award of death benefits was proper. The accident and subsequent death were consequential to the injury sustained in the industrial accident. Cresci v Mike Krasilousky Trucking Co., 5 A.D.2d 569, 172 N.Y.S.2d 322, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6441 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 4 N.Y.2d 677, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1468 (N.Y. 1958), overruled, McDowell v La Voy, 63 A.D.2d 358, 408 N.Y.S.2d 148, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11350 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1978).

Where a restaurant worker slipped on the floor while lifting or moving plates and later slipped again on her way home after seeing her employer's physician, allegedly because she was in such pain that she didn't "know where she was going," and later medical examination disclosed a dislocation of the shoulder joint, the ultimate shoulder dislocation was sufficiently attributable to the first mishap. Kearney v Shattuck, 12 A.D.2d 678, 207 N.Y.S.2d 722, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6744 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Workers' compensation claimant employed as carpentry supervisor proved that he sustained consequential injury to his back as result of his limping gait after log fell on his foot where (1) his treating orthopedic surgeon attributed claimant's back pain to "gait abnormality" adopted to compensate for injured foot, (2) neurosurgeon considered claimant's back pain to be "secondary" to his foot injury, and (3) physician specializing in physical and rehabilitation medicine found "direct relationship" between claimant's back pain and his limping gait. Traver v Rickkard Constr. Co., 286 A.D.2d 808, 730 N.Y.S.2d 361, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8632 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

307. —Injury in the course of medical treatment for first accident

Where death or aggravation of a disability results from further accident or transmissible disease due to or incidental to medical care and treatment necessitated by the original accident or injury is compensable. Lofstedt v United States Gypsum Co., 258 N.Y. 222, 179 N.E. 473, 258 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 222, 1932 N.Y. LEXIS 1175 (N.Y. 1932).; Pecorella v John Bartenbach, Inc., 249 N.Y. 610, 164

N.E. 603, 249 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 610, 1928 N.Y. LEXIS 969 (N.Y. 1928).; Huhn v Gehnrich Indirect Heat Oven Co., 250 N.Y. 568, 166 N.E. 327, 250 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 568, 1929 N.Y. LEXIS 956 (N.Y. 1929).

An award of death benefits is proper, where a pressman suffered the loss of four fingers on each hand while operating a press and he fell while in his bathroom bathing his hands in hot water to relieve his pain in accordance with the instructions of his physician some fourteen months after the original accident, the fall resulting in general paralysis. Ruzsjak v Metal Stamping Co., 259 N.Y. 575, 182 N.E. 187, 259 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 575, 1932 N.Y. LEXIS 1055 (N.Y. 1932).

A fall caused by disease contracted in the course of employment is accidental where the employee was enroute to a doctor at the direction of the employer for treatment of the disease. Goldberg v 954 Marcy Corp., 276 N.Y. 313, 12 N.E.2d 311, 276 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 313, 1938 N.Y. LEXIS 1191 (N.Y. 1938).

To establish that death resulted from an injury, it is not sufficient to prove that a person received an injury; that an operation was performed on account thereof, and that, after he had apparently recovered from the effect of the operation and anaesthetic, he died from disease which existed before the injury. Tucillo v Ward Baking Co., 180 A.D. 302, 167 N.Y.S. 666, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8145 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).. Vanecek v Greeley Square Bldg. Corp., 278 A.D. 869, 104 N.Y.S.2d 214, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5015 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).; But see Thomas v B. & F. Polishing Co., 278 A.D. 880, 104 N.Y.S.2d 294, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5044 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

Where an employee who had suffered an injury to his foot took a bicholoride of mercury tablet which he intended to put into hot water to bathe his foot by mistake when during the night he thought he was taking a sedative tablet to ease the pain in his foot, he suffers an accidental injury for which compensation is payable. Brown v New York State Training School for Girls, 256 A.D. 767, 11 N.Y.S.2d 849, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4841 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

Where an employee was killed in a collision while returning from the doctor's office for treatment of injuries sustained three weeks earlier, his death is consequential to the original injury and is compensable. John v Fairmont Creamery Co., 268 A.D. 840, 50 N.Y.S.2d 253, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3711 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944).

Death benefits are properly payable where the deceased employee immediately became disabled as the result of a hernia, contracted due to the nature and in the course of his employment, that necessitated an operation which was a producing cause of tuberculosis that subsequently resulted in the employee's death. Gordon v John J. Casale, Inc., 275 A.D. 734, 87 N.Y.S.2d 167, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4244 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

In 1935, decedent sustained a right inguinal hernia which was surgically corrected. In 1941 he sustained a recurrence thereof with a new left inguinal hernia, both of which were repaired. In 1950, he sustained an umbilical hernia and a recurrence of both inguinal hernias which were repaired. In 1953 decedent underwent operations for repair of inguinal hernias, which operations indirectly caused his death. Held: there was no relationship between the umbilical hernia and the inguinal hernias. So, the umbilical hernia had nothing to do with decedent's death. Therefore, there was no basis for charging 50 percent of award to the carrier in 1950. Estate of Holmes v J. C. Penny Co., 9 A.D.2d 563, 189 N.Y.S.2d 377, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7414 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Where claimant, a diabetic, sustained an injury to his right foot in 1954 during course of his employment and one toe became infected and, in 1955, while employed by another employer, did excessive walking resulting in formation of a blister on the left foot which ulcerated, resulting in further disability, on the basis of medical evidence that a trauma will readily create a blister in a diabetic, an award could be sustained against both employers, the excessive walking in the second employment being an "accident." Walters v U. S. Vitamin Corp., 11 A.D.2d 280, 203 N.Y.S.2d 401, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8393 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), aff'd, 10 N.Y.2d 924, 223 N.Y.S.2d 874, 179 N.E.2d 713, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 946 (N.Y. 1961).

There was substantial evidence to sustain a board finding that an accident occurred when decedent fell backward in a sitting position, aggravating a preexisting back condition so as to require surgery, complications of which necessitated a further operation resulting in death. Copeland v Joseph Cucci Constr. Co., 19 A.D.2d 666, 241 N.Y.S.2d 109, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3465 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

Workers' Compensation Board properly ruled that claimant sustained compensable consequential injury where she was injured while on her way to her own physician for treatment of prior compensable injury. Font v New York City Bd. of Educ., 170 A.D.2d 928, 566 N.Y.S.2d 754, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2447 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1991).

308. —Injury caused by weakness, dizziness or other condition attributable to first accident

If a dizzy spell resulting in a fall from a ladder causing the employee's death was the result of an original injury suffered in the course of the employment, the employee's wife is entitled to death benefits, whether or not the employee was negligent in climbing the ladder. Colvin v Emmons & Whitehead, 216 A.D. 577, 215 N.Y.S. 562, 1926 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9275 (N.Y. App. Div. 1926).

A claimant who underwent surgery upon his knee as the result of a fall is entitled to an award for disability resulting from a second fall caused by weakness of the knee which had not yet completely healed, the second fall occurring when the employee was following medical advice to get up and around. Prentice v Weeks, 239 A.D. 227, 267 N.Y.S. 849, 1933 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8006 (N.Y. App. Div. 1933), aff'd, 264 N.Y. 507, 191 N.E. 538, 264 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 507, 1934 N.Y. LEXIS 1548 (N.Y. 1934).

Where a doorman was re-employed after the amputation of his leg as the result of an accident in the course of his employment and suffered further injury when the artificial leg gave way, the second accident is compensable. McNaught v Louris Amusement Corp., 270 A.D. 100, 58 N.Y.S.2d 515, 1945 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2810 (N.Y. App. Div. 1945), app. denied, 270 A.D. 781, 59 N.Y.S.2d 906, 1946 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3905 (N.Y. App. Div. 1946).

In 1945, decedent sustained an accident which made his left leg weak and clumsy. In 1948, as a result of this weakness, he suffered a fall which required him to use crutches. Shortly thereafter, while walking down a flight of stairs, decedent fell and suffered fatal injuries. The last fall was attributable to the first accident. Dickerson v Essex County, 2 A.D.2d 516, 157 N.Y.S.2d 94, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3820 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

In September, 1955, claimant sustained a compensable fracture of his right leg. In January, 1956, while walking on a sidewalk, he slipped on ice and sustained a further fracture of the right leg. On the day of the second fall, he had a stiff ankle, walked with a cane and was wearing a double elastic bandage. Board properly found second fracture to be natural and unavoidable result of prior accident. Boice v Frank W. O'Connell, Inc., 8 A.D.2d 558, 183 N.Y.S.2d 534, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9640 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Death of claimant's husband was not causally related to compensable accidental injuries where after the accident decedent had experienced frustrations which led to overeating and inactivity causing his weight to balloon to over 300 pounds, where that increase in weight had caused higher blood pressure and shortness of breath, where an intestinal bypass operation had been performed to reduce decedent's weight, and where the direct cause of death was complications resulting from the surgery. Bauman v Lord Electric Co., 79 A.D.2d 806, 435 N.Y.S.2d 98, 1980 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14216 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1980).

Claimant sustained consequential injury entitling him to workers' compensation benefits where his compensable injury rendered his left leg susceptible to "giving out," and he sustained consequential paraplegia condition when he stood up out of seat on tree stand and his left leg gave out, causing him to fall and injure himself; claimant's actions in using tree stand while hunting were not rash or irresponsible, based on his medical condition prior to fall, but were reasonable activity for him to be engaged in. Pellerin v New York State Dep't of Corrections, 215

A.D.2d 943, 627 N.Y.S.2d 147, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5609 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1995), app. denied, 87 N.Y.2d 806, 640 N.Y.S.2d 878, 663 N.E.2d 920, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 32 (N.Y. 1996).

309. —Other successive injuries or accidents

Claimant injured his back in 1950 and injuries continued to cause him trouble. In 1955, while still wearing brace, claimant, carrying 8 quarts of milk in container, stepped down from his truck and experienced sharp pain in lower back. Proof of circumstances of alleged second accident resolved itself around history given by claimant to doctor. Held, record was substantial and credible as to sufficiency of happening of second accident. Award affirmed. Giordano v Hudson Dairy Co., 6 A.D.2d 936, 175 N.Y.S.2d 846, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5258 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

In 1947, claimant fell from ladder, injuring his coccyx, leg and knee. In a 1948 accident, he injured elbow and heel. Thereafter, he became disabled due to cervical intervertebral disc lesion and protrusion. As to disc injury, Board was justified in finding that medical proof established causation in 1947 accident and that evidence tending to relate claimant's condition to 1948 accident by way of aggravation was without probative force. Halperin v R. Salzstein & Co., 6 A.D.2d 942, 175 N.Y.S.2d 788, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5265 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

In November, 1949, as a result of a compensable accident, claimant sustained a fractured skull, cerebral concussion and shock. In May, 1951 he sustained further injuries in a fall which was not compensable. Subsequently he was admitted to the hospital in a mentally confused state. On medical evidence Board concluded that cause of 1951 accident was a cerebral hemorrhage which was not related to the 1949 accident. Bellotti v Salvio, 8 A.D.2d 552, 183 N.Y.S.2d 413, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9632 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 8 A.D.2d 664, 185 N.Y.S.2d 760, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9044 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959), app. denied, 6 N.Y.2d 707, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1751 (N.Y. 1959).

Decedent had suffered permanent heart damage in an industrial accident. Thereafter, he died when a truck he was driving left the road and struck a tree. Death was due to a heart attack. Held: the Board properly found that decedent sustained a heart attack and as a result lost control of the truck and, therefore, there was no industrial accident. But an award against the carrier on the first industrial accident on finding that death was result of heart condition sustained in the first accident was affirmed. Gehlhardt v Storch Trucking Co., 8 A.D.2d 560, 183 N.Y.S.2d 452, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9644 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Where a deceased employee suffered a compensable heart attack in 1955 and a fatal heart attack in 1958 after returning to work in a partially disabled condition on a shorter work day basis, the Board could find that death was due to the prior heart attack, notwithstanding conflicting medical testimony. La Pierre v Club 42, 18 A.D.2d 1114, 238 N.Y.S.2d 1015, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4013 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 13 N.Y.2d 594, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 1910 (N.Y. 1963).

Employer and carrier failed to sustain their burden of proving that claimant suffered permanent preexisting impairment based on medical evidence demonstrating that she had carpal tunnel surgery in 1984 and neck injury in 1989, where claimant testified that she returned to work each time with no restrictions and that, prior to her 1990 work-related injury, she was having no problems with her neck or wrist. Chadwick v Millinkrodt Anesthesia Prods., 264 A.D.2d 953, 697 N.Y.S.2d 171, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9557 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Evidence supported board's ruling that claimant's loss of earnings was causally related to back injury which he sustained while lifting bundle of copper pipes in course of his employment as counter person, rather than his various other physical ailments, although he had continued to work as counter person until he was discharged 6 months later due to his failure to learn certain terminology necessary to perform his duties and he subsequently obtained new employment, where he was ultimately discharged from his new employment because his physician advised against working assigned 12-hour shift, and he was unable to secure new employment within his medical restrictions. Pulcastro v N & S Supply Co., 270 A.D.2d 737, 705 N.Y.S.2d 121, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3111 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

310. —Apportionment of award between employers and insurers

Where an employee fell and fractured a segment of her sacrum and one of the discs of her spine and some two years later became disabled when the spinal disc became protruded, by which time the employer had switched to a new insurance carrier, apportionment of the award against the new carrier is improper where it does not appear that the employee was subject to any unusual strain or effort sufficient to justify a finding of a second accident, mere frequent bending over in the ordinary course of the employment being insufficient. Kobinski v George Weston, Ltd., 302 N.Y. 432, 99 N.E.2d 227, 302 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 432, 1951 N.Y. LEXIS 715 (N.Y. 1951).

Where an employee had two accidents some eight years apart, and the second accident aggravated the herniated disc pathology he suffered as the result of the first accident necessitating an operation an award apportioning two thirds of disability to the second accident and one third to the first accident will be sustained. Richardson v Marinette Paper Co., 273 A.D. 932, 77 N.Y.S.2d 919, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5319 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

Where an injury sustained in 1945 as the result of a fall from which the employee suffered a fracture of the wing of the right ilium, fracture of the right ischium and contusion of the right thigh and hip contributed to the employee's disability along with a lumbosacral strain suffered when the employee was employed by a new employer, an award of benefits computed by dividing responsibility equally between the two employers is proper. Frederick v Odenbach Shipbuilding Corp., 278 A.D. 882, 104 N.Y.S.2d 548, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5050 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

Where an employee sustained back injuries on two separate occasions and subsequently developed a back disability and there was conflicting medical testimony as to whether the disability related to one or both of the prior accidents, the Board could properly determine that the disability resulted wholly from the first accident. O'Loughlin v Community Home Constr. Co., 2 A.D.2d 909, 156 N.Y.S.2d 455, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3918 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Where a disability resulted from two separate accidents, the Board could allocate to each accident 50 percent of the disability. Medical experts were unable to allocate the percentage of disability between the accidents Conklin v Arden Farms Dairy Co., 2 A.D.2d 910, 156 N.Y.S.2d 765, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3919 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956), aff'd, 3 N.Y.2d 860, 166 N.Y.S.2d 308, 145 N.E.2d 24, 1957 N.Y. LEXIS 943 (N.Y. 1957).

Decision and award finding disability causally related to both accidents of June and October, 1950 and charging each carrier equally was reversed. The decision was supported by substantial evidence insofar as it found that aggravation of pre-existing condition was result of first accident but finding that second accident contributed to aggravation was unsupported. And Workmen's Compensation Law § 13(b) being limited to employees injured outside the state was inapplicable. Calkins v Champion Container Corp., 5 A.D.2d 906, 170 N.Y.S.2d 854, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6723 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Claimant injured his back in 1952 while working for different employer and injury continued to trouble him. There was substantial evidence to sustain new back injury in 1955 while working for appellant employer. Held: Award for second injury affirmed. Scavo v Frank D'Aprile, Inc., 7 A.D.2d 679, 179 N.Y.S.2d 161, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4329 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958), amended, 8 A.D.2d 927, 188 N.Y.S.2d 963, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8039 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

In October, 1953, claimant fell injuring her back and left leg for which she received compensation. In March, 1954 she fell injuring her back and right leg for which she received compensation. Held: it was properly decided that claimant's subsequent disability was caused by both accidents. Award affirmed. The testimony of Board doctor, who qualified his statements as to disability from second injury, constituted substantial evidence. Qualification went to weight of his testimony only. Lawrence v St. Mary's Hospital, 8 A.D.2d 558, 183 N.Y.S.2d 523, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9641 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Where claimant, while working for one employer, was crushed in the pelvis and given a schedule award for 20 percent loss of use of one leg, which was paid, and, four years later while working for a different employer, received a back injury resulting in disability which medical testimony attributed to both accidents, the second award was properly prorated between the two employers without allowing credit to the first one for compensation already paid in respect of the earlier injury. Mohr v Julius D. Braasch, Inc., 9 A.D.2d 802, 192 N.Y.S.2d 850, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6142 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959), reh'g denied, 10 A.D.2d 586, 195 N.Y.S.2d 627, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12348 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), app. denied, 7 N.Y.2d 710, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1649 (N.Y. 1960).

Evidence held sufficient to sustain finding of board that, following an initial back injury suffered in employment by claimant in 1953, each of three subsequent back injuries sustained in subsequent employment by the claimant, together with the initial injury, contributed equally to his final disability, warranting assessment of the award 25 percent against each. Britton v Ruberoid Co., 12 A.D.2d 566, 206 N.Y.S.2d 707, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7270 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

There being conflicting medical testimony as to the extent to which each of five industrial accidents contributed to claimant's disability apportionment of liability among the various carriers presented a question of fact, the resolution of which by the Board rested on substantial evidence. Sika v Pepper Bros. Contracting Co., 18 A.D.2d 730, 234 N.Y.S.2d 276, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6580 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Where a claimant is partially disabled as the result of back injuries sustained in one employment and one accident in 1959 and further injuries sustained in a different employment and different accident in 1960, the Board may validly apportion partial disability thereafter between the two accidents where there is substantial medical evidence to sustain such a finding. Perfetto v Terminal System, Inc., 20 A.D.2d 742, 246 N.Y.S.2d 894, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4393 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

Where claimant sustained four compensable back injuries and the board found that one-half of the overall disability was causally related to the first accident and one-half causally related in equal proportions to the other three accidents, the action of the board in attempting to impose the minimum rate in each of the cases while apportioning the overall disability award was error. Kudrick v Republic Aviation Corp., 34 A.D.2d 613, 308 N.Y.S.2d 793, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5284 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

In a workers' compensation case, the board properly ruled that claimant had a permanent, total, causally-related disability and that the employer and carrier were not entitled to an apportionment of claimant's disability between his compensable accident and his underlying psychiatric disorder, where claimant suffered from a pre-existing psychiatric disorder that was dormant and not disabling, and where his accident resulted in the activation of that condition. Podlish v McGraw Edison Co., Food Equipment Div., 89 A.D.2d 712, 454 N.Y.S.2d 40, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17842 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1982).

311. —Apportionment of award; recurrence or aggravation of original injury

An employee who after an accidental fracture of a bone refractured the same bone in lifting a heavy timber while in the employ of a second employer, the original fracture not having completely knitted, suffers two accidental injuries and the award resulting from the second accident should be apportioned equally between the two employers. Anderson v Babcock & Wilson Co., 256 N.Y. 146, 175 N.E. 654, 256 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 146, 1931 N.Y. LEXIS 1036 (N.Y. 1931).

Where claimant sustained a sprained back in 1950, and in 1952, while working for two different employers, he suffered two more "catches" in his back, the resulting disability should have been charged to the 1950 employer alone. Meade v Atlantic Refining Co., 1 N.Y.2d 905, 154 N.Y.S.2d 964, 136 N.E.2d 909, 1956 N.Y. LEXIS 785 (N.Y. 1956).

Where a claimant originally suffered a fracture in May and in the following September the original fracture again parted as the claimant took hold of a crank handle, the insurer at the time of the first accident must bear the entire liability. Phillips v Holmes Express Co., 190 A.D. 336, 179 N.Y.S. 400, 1919 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4108 (N.Y. App. Div. 1919), aff'd, 229 N.Y. 527, 129 N.E. 901, 229 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 527, 1920 N.Y. LEXIS 724 (N.Y. 1920).

Where a plumber sustained a displaced intervertebral disc in a 1936 employment accident and in 1945 after doing heavy work for a second employer, developed symptoms of the displaced disc and as the result of both the original accident and the work done for the second employer, suffered a "ruptured intervertebral disc" for which surgery became necessary early in 1946, apportionment of a disability award equally between the employers based on a finding of occupational aggravation of the original back injury is proper. Paradiso v Vuozzo, 277 A.D. 802, 96 N.Y.S.2d 796, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3375 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

Where an employee suffered a right lumbosacral sprain in April while lifting heavy drums and in the following October suffered a recurrence of the original injury while lifting the tailboard of a truck, an award apportioning the award between the two carriers on the basis of a finding that the disability was caused equally by the two accidents will be sustained. Zuk v McGuire Bros., Inc., 277 A.D. 956, 99 N.Y.S.2d 617, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3985 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

Where an employee originally suffered a sacroiliac strain working for his first employer and, after compensation had been paid, the condition improved to such an extent that the employee's doctor advised him to try light work whereupon he took a job with a new employer carrying bags of coal and re-strained his back causing a new disability, an award of compensation for the second disability will be apportioned between the employers. Quick v Levine, 278 A.D. 879, 104 N.Y.S.2d 397, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5042 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), modified, 278 A.D. 988, 104 N.Y.S.2d 397, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5453 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1951).

Where a claimant worked for the same employer who had a number of carriers covering his employment, the carrier on the risk in 1949 and 1952 was properly charged for claimant's disability where he had a series of recurring hernias, each of which was found by the Board to be an occupational disease. Clarke v Rochester Folding Box Co., 283 A.D. 1126, 131 N.Y.S.2d 570, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6496 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

After the claimant suffered a back injury he continued to work, doing lighter work until he was laid off. Thereafter, he gained new employment and when he attempted to do heavy work his back began to hurt and he was thereafter disabled for several months. The second employer was not liable for compensation because the claimant suffered no accident under that employ but merely a recurrence of the consequences of his prior accident. Frazer v Walter Kidde Constr., Inc., 2 A.D.2d 727, 152 N.Y.S.2d 369, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5027 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Claimant suffered accident resulting in back injuries in September, 1954 and August, 1955. There was adequate medical evidence to support finding that claimant's disability subsequent to 1955 accident was attributable to both accidents. Award charging one-half of liability to appellants, employer and carrier at time of second accident affirmed. Goodman v Margolis, 8 A.D.2d 864, 187 N.Y.S.2d 145, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8260 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Where claimant experienced chest pains while moving heavy material on April 27 for one employer, and later sustained a heart attack while painting a ceiling for another employer, the evidence was held to sustain findings of the board that the second job aggravated a condition arising from the heavy lifting on the prior one, warranting apportionment of compensation between the two employers. Brooks v Ridgeway, 9 A.D.2d 795, 192 N.Y.S.2d 694, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6130 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

A disability award for a back injury suffered in 1959 could properly be apportioned back to a prior back injury in 1957, on the basis of the medical testimony. Chadburn v Drachman Demolition Co., 17 A.D.2d 1008, 233 N.Y.S.2d 902, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6990 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Where claimant, who had sustained back injury in non-work related automobile accident in 1984, reinjured and exacerbated back injury when she slipped and fell on floor in her place of employment in 1986, resulting in total disability, Workers' Compensation Board properly refused to apportion responsibility between 2 accidents, since record demonstrated that claimant functioned effectively following first accident until she was reinjured at work. Di Fabio v Albany County Dep't of Social Services, 162 A.D.2d 775, 557 N.Y.S.2d 688, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7208 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1990).

Workers' Compensation Board properly refused to apportion responsibility for laborer's disability between on-the-job back injury and 2 prior surgeries where he was able to continue working subsequent to surgeries, and it was only after last injury that he was prevented from returning to regular employment. Williams v Boll, 184 A.D.2d 881, 585 N.Y.S.2d 538, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8004 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992).

Workers' Compensation Board correctly determined that apportionment was inappropriate, and properly denied employer's request to expand issue of whether injuries sustained by claimant in noncompensable 1975 automobile accident contributed to her low-back injury arising from work-related accident in 1995, where claimant had worked for employer without incident for "at least a few years" prior to 1995 accident, she was asymptomatic with regard to any low back problems during that period, and she had no compensable lost time prior to 1995 accident. Woods v Marriott Corp., 285 A.D.2d 906, 728 N.Y.S.2d 819, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7628 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

312. —Other matters

Although claimant's claim was closed in 1945 because of his failure to appear, the Board reopened the case in 1948 and then, on conflicting testimony, found that as a result of the original accident claimant suffered injuries in the nature of a muscle spasm, limitation of motion in the lumbo-sacral junction and possibly a ruptured intervertebral disc. Tutokey v Carborundum Co., 284 A.D. 1076, 136 N.Y.S.2d 16, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4609 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954), reh'g denied, 285 A.D. 987, 139 N.Y.S.2d 264, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6385 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

Claimant had sustained an injury in 1937. In 1954, he sustained a further injury (twisting and stretching involved in placing a movie reel into a projector machine above his head justified finding of an accident). However, discharge of special disability fund was error necessitating reversal. Between the 2 accidents, claimant was under constant medical care, had to use cane while walking, needed taxi to transport himself to and from work, needed assistance to climb 3 steps into projection room and lost sight of right eye, all of which demonstrated obvious permanent conditions which were likely to be hindrances or obstacles to employment. Fact that claimant did regular work from 1937 to 1954 was not determinative. Simon v Columbia Pictures Corp., 8 A.D.2d 563, 183 N.Y.S.2d 326, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9649 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), amended, 8 A.D.2d 910, 187 N.Y.S.2d 1004, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8091 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Where claimant, who had been employed as a presser for many years and also as a bricklayer on a seasonal basis, sustained accidental injuries while working as a bricklayer on June 9, 1953, in connection with which an award was made and compensation paid until July 12, 1954, but asserted, upon return to work as a presser prior to the latter date that he could not resume work as a bricklayer because of dizziness when working at heights, and had likewise sustained two prior nonindustrial accidents, there being a sharp conflict of evidence as to any causal relationship between the industrial accident and the dizziness, a finding of the board that there was no such relationship would be affirmed. Tumbiolo v Salvatore Amondres Constr. Co., 12 A.D.2d 531, 206 N.Y.S.2d 968, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7223 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Where it was argued that claimant's condition was attributable to later accident rather than to one referred to in his claim, and testimony supporting such claim was attacked as being inconclusive, it was held that such testimony met test of Ernest v Boggs Lake Estates, Inc. 12 NY2d 414, 240 S2d 153, 190 NE2d 528, and hence that resolution of factual dispute was for board and court found no basis to disturb its determination. Hoffman v Plaza Hotel, 23 A.D.2d 604, 256 N.Y.S.2d 521, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4876 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Determination of Workers' Compensation Board that claimant's right wrist carpel tunnel syndrome was not made materially and substantially greater by reason of preexisting impairment of his left hand was unsupported by record, which contained medical report indicating that prior left hand injury forced claimant to perform constant and repetitive activities involved in his work as inspector almost entirely with right hand; matter would be remitted for further findings on issue of liability of Special Disability Fund. Foos v Bausch & Lomb, Inc., 181 A.D.2d 951, 581 N.Y.S.2d 458, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4147 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992).

Upon finding that claimant was entitled to workers' compensation benefits for chronic bronchitis unrelated to his exposure to asbestos, board correctly concluded that self-insured employer was not entitled to offset of future compensation payments against proceeds of claimant's settlement of action against asbestos manufacturers because, inasmuch as compensation award was not based on same injury as settlement of third-party action, there was no double recovery and no reason to shift burden from self-insured employer to asbestos manufacturer. Murphy v New York City Police Dep't, 270 A.D.2d 733, 704 N.Y.S.2d 749, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3122 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

313. Causal relationship between accident and injury

Where the chain of causation between an accidental injury and ultimate disability remains unbroken, the injured employee is entitled to the statutory compensation provided by the Work. Comp. Law for ultimate disability resulting from accidental injury. Parchefsky v Kroll Bros., Inc., 267 N.Y. 410, 196 N.E. 308, 267 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 410, 1935 N.Y. LEXIS 1233 (N.Y. 1935).

An award of death benefits is proper on the ground that the employee's death resulted from an accidental injury, even though the accident occurred some eight years prior to the employee's death. Eizenman v Newman, 275 A.D. 736, 87 N.Y.S.2d 154, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4249 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

To be compensable, death from a heart attack has to result directly and naturally from an accidental injury. Gorkin v Gorkin's Meat Market, 33 A.D.2d 727, 305 N.Y.S.2d 178, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2802 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969).

In absence of contrary testimony, Workers' Compensation Board could not reject testimony of claimant's expert and fashion expert opinion of its own to conclude that claimant's stroke was not caused by work-related stress, but board could rule against claimant on causal relationship issue by finding that stress actually experienced at work was less that that assumed by his expert. Loftus v New York News, 279 A.D.2d 657, 719 N.Y.S.2d 314, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 62 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

314. —Discovery or aggravation of unrelated conditions

Where an employee was admitted to a hospital for an infection in his finger and while there developed delirium tremens and died therefrom an award of compensation was reversed and the claim dismissed upon the ground that there was no substantial evidence to sustain the finding that the employee's death resulted from an accidental injury suffered while he was engaged upon his work. Robbins v Frohlich, 303 N.Y. 987, 106 N.E.2d 65, 303 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 987, 1952 N.Y. LEXIS 1415 (N.Y. 1952).

Where a painter suffered a fracture of the pelvis as the result of a fall, and after three months in the hospital gangrenous appendicitis developed necessitating an operation which resulted in his death and the medical evidence establishes that the appendicitis was not a result of the accident, that the deceased would have recovered from the accident were it not for the appendicitis, and the appendicitis would not have been fatal except for the condition resulting from the accident, the accident was a contributing and indirect cause of death, an award of compensation is proper. Chambers v Universal Advertising Corp., 253 A.D. 854, 1 N.Y.S.2d 497, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8903 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938).

Where an employee fell from a ladder, suffering a head injury and an operation performed to determine the extent of his injury revealed a brain tumor which was not the result of the accident and which was removed, an award of compensation is properly payable where the employee died as the result of the operation. Vanecek v Greeley Square Bldg. Corp., 278 A.D. 869, 104 N.Y.S.2d 214, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5015 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

An operation for a bilateral inguinal hernia contracted in the employment was followed by post-operative pneumonia and, considerably later, a condition diagnosed as multiple sclerosis. This condition was causally related to the disability, operation and pneumonia. Pipero v Klar, 279 A.D. 960, 111 N.Y.S.2d 156, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5427 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

A death benefit award was proper where after a 1946 injury to decedent's thumb, employer ordered a medical examination wherein it was discovered decedent had had a hernia since 1940 apparently aggravated by lifting in the course of his employment. Hence, an operation was advised and was apparently successfully performed but decedent died shortly thereafter of delirium tremens. Nichols v Colonial Beacon Oil Co., 284 A.D. 581, 132 N.Y.S.2d 72, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3445 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

An award was sustained where there was substantial medical evidence that an accident to the decedent which occurred while he was working under a heavy press, aggravated a pre-existing "reactive depression" which necessitated the final electric shock treatment which caused the decedent's death. Rose v Newsday Newspaper, Inc., 4 A.D.2d 918, 167 N.Y.S.2d 6, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4320 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957), app. denied, 4 N.Y.2d 673, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1340 (N.Y. 1958).

Decedent sustained injury. He immediately felt pain in back and under right knee. He was found to be suffering from amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, a rare disease attacking spinal cord and nervous system for which neither cause nor cure was known. There was medical evidence that accident aggravated pre-existing disease and was contributing factor to death. Award affirmed. Rizzio v Liberty Dressing Co., 5 A.D.2d 902, 170 N.Y.S.2d 931, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7411 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 4 N.Y.2d 677, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1447 (N.Y. 1958).

Where claimant felt a sharp pain in his back while lifting a sack of flour on February 24, 1953, and, when treatment for a sprain did not relieve the pain, further medical investigation disclosed the presence of a block at the spine which turned out to be a tumor when an exploratory operation was performed October 20, 1953, with permission of the employer's insurance carrier, but the medical testimony established that the tumor had been developing for more than five years and was not accelerated by the back sprain, disallowance of benefits for postoperative care was proper. Mendygral v Lismore Bar & Grill, 7 A.D.2d 137, 180 N.Y.S.2d 953, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3683 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958), reh'g denied, 7 A.D.2d 958, 182 N.Y.S.2d 1023, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9933 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959), aff'd, 8 N.Y.2d 823, 202 N.Y.S.2d 325, 168 N.E.2d 392, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1237 (N.Y. 1960).

While lifting heavy handrail, claimant felt pain in his back. Pain persisted and tests for herniated discs were negative. Decedent was then referred to psychiatrist who prescribed shock treatments. As reaction to such treatment it was found that decedent suffered paraplegia. Further x-rays showed almost complete destruction of certain vertebrae. Condition of vertebrae was found on surgery to be due to metastatic neoplasm. Decedent died from spread of neoplasm. Held: it could be found that injury to lower back and cause of treatment resulting therefrom accelerated development of underlying bone pathology thereby advancing time of decedent's death. Sampson v Alco Products, Inc., 7 A.D.2d 663, 179 N.Y.S.2d 155, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4304 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958), app. denied, 5 N.Y.2d 710, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1997 (N.Y. 1959).

Although there was a conflict of medical testimony as to causal relationship between a fall suffered by decedent on September 23, 1955, when he slipped on oil in the cellar of an apartment house where he was a superintendent, striking his lower chest forcibly when he hit the edge of a concrete pit and suffered acute pain, following which he was hospitalized and under medical treatment with continued pain in the gastric region until operated on in March of 1956, when a large ulcer was discovered, and he died from peritonitis as the result of a surgical accident in trying to resect the ulcer, there was substantial evidence to sustain a finding of causal relationship and a compensation award. Badillo v 1215 Grand Concourse Corp., 8 A.D.2d 899, 187 N.Y.S.2d 54, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8316 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959), aff'd, 8 N.Y.2d 919, 204 N.Y.S.2d 164, 168 N.E.2d 835, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1145 (N.Y. 1960).

The evidence was sufficient to sustain a disability award following amputation of a leg where there was enough to support a finding that, in attempting to prevent certain spoilage, which he was taking from a basket and placing in a steel truck, from falling to the floor, claimant accidentally struck the leg at, or near, a point where there was already a highly malignant type of tumor subject to aggravation by trauma. De Angelo v American Can Co., 11 A.D.2d 571, 200 N.Y.S.2d 614, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9920 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Testimony of medical experts that a head injury sustained by an employee in 1951 "possibly," "probably" or "could," have accelerated or aggravated her pre-existing tuberculosis condition, so as to cause her death in 1955 from tuberculosis, was sufficient to sustain an award of death benefits. Ernest v Boggs Lake Estate, Inc., 15 A.D.2d 698, 223 N.Y.S.2d 361, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12017 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962), aff'd, 12 N.Y.2d 414, 240 N.Y.S.2d 153, 190 N.E.2d 528, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 1211 (N.Y. 1963).

Where the claimant became paraplegic as a result of a meningioma, a slow growing tumor on his spine, and the operating surgeon who removed such tumor testified to a causal relationship between the first of two industrial accidents and the aggravation or acceleration of such tumor but also stated that he would discount the second of such accidents as causing such aggravation or acceleration, his testimony constituted substantial evidence for the sole responsibility of the insurance carrier at the time of the first accident. Flanagan v Stella D'Oro Biscuit Co., 23 A.D.2d 912, 258 N.Y.S.2d 907, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4275 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Finding of Workmen's Compensation Board that claimant's arteriosclerotic heart disease was aggravated by his work-related talcosis to extent that he was totally disabled was supported by substantial evidence. McIntosh v International Talc Co., 57 A.D.2d 671, 393 N.Y.S.2d 628, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11699 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

315. —Heart problems as caused by accidental injury or treatment thereof, generally

An award made to an elevator operator upon the theory that he was suffering from valvular heart disease rendering him unable to work, as a result of the falling of an elevator which he was operating, must be reversed, where it appears that no causal relation is shown to have existed between the accident and the valvular disease of the heart, and that there is no evidence that the claimant had heart disease until about seven months after the accident. Ryan v Vandam Warehouse Co., 208 A.D. 189, 203 N.Y.S. 447, 1924 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5007 (N.Y. App. Div. 1924).

Death may be found to have resulted from an accidental injury where a truck driver, in very poor condition physically, was struck in the leg by a falling typewriter case, and developed recurrent attacks of severe erysipelas of the leg which in turn developed a condition of toxemia which affected the heart and eventually caused death. Frazee v United States Trucking Corp., 276 A.D. 802, 93 N.Y.S.2d 340, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3366 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

A heart attack may be caused by an extraordinary physical exertion which occurred three days previously. Leventhal v W. B. & V. Rye Bread Corp., 278 A.D. 622, 101 N.Y.S.2d 800, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4114 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

While on the premises of his employer, decedent struck his head on a door sustaining a small cut over his eye for which he received treatment. Later that day, he was taken to a hospital where his condition was diagnosed as myocardial infarction which resulted in his death. Held: decision that there was no causal relation between employment and cardiac condition and resulting death affirmed. Batemarco v New York Times Co., 9 A.D.2d 569, 189 N.Y.S.2d 516, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7422 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), reh'g denied, 9 A.D.2d 699, 191 N.Y.S.2d 559, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6887 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Dismissal of a heart attack claim by the Board would not be reversed where it was based upon acute pains allegedly suffered by claimant, co-owner of an incorporated retail haberdashery shop, while carrying a form and coat weighing 35 pounds to be used for window display. Botwinick v Arnolds Men Shop, Inc., 12 A.D.2d 868, 210 N.Y.S.2d 87, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13040 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Where the medical testimony was conflicting as to whether an employee's death in 1958 was causally related to a compensable heart accident suffered by him in 1953, and it appeared that he had been paid full compensation benefits for permanent disability in the interim, an award of death benefits was sustained. Patterson v Vreeland, 16 A.D.2d 722, 226 N.Y.S.2d 713, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10334 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Whether a particular event constitutes an industrial accident is to be determined, not by any legal definition, but by the commonsense viewpoint of the average man, and it cannot be said that the ordinary work of an automobile mechanic is, per se, sufficiently strenuous to bring on a fatal heart attack. Hawthorne v Eagle Delivery Truck Renting Corp., 20 A.D.2d 824, 247 N.Y.S.2d 448, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4262 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

Upon conflicting medical testimony as to causal relationship between a 1957 industrial accident and claimant's death by coronary artery disease in 1960 the Board could make an award of death benefits to decedent's widow and child. Adamski v New York State Workmen's Compensation Board, 21 A.D.2d 715, 249 N.Y.S.2d 476, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3836 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

Determination of board that decedent's death was causally connected with heart attack for which he received compensation 11 years before, held to be fully supported by substantial evidence. Gracie v C. E. Halback Co., 23 A.D.2d 612, 256 N.Y.S.2d 352, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4825 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Award for heart attack affirmed upon evidence of causal relationship between claimant's work and his heart attack. Nicolas v August Luchow, Inc., 32 A.D.2d 1004, 302 N.Y.S.2d 182, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3463 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 25 N.Y.2d 741, 1969 N.Y. LEXIS 1897 (N.Y. 1969).

Heart attack causally related to stress and anxiety brought about by employer's conduct in challenging employee's compensation claim is compensable where employer continues to resist paying disability benefits after hearing officers have ruled in favor of employee in several decisions. Turdo v New York City Dep't of Sanitation, 117 A.D.2d 861, 498 N.Y.S.2d 575, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 53135 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 68 N.Y.2d 609, 508 N.Y.S.2d 1025, 500 N.E.2d 874, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 21226 (N.Y. 1986).

Workers' Compensation Board properly denied claim for death benefits, despite conflicting medical testimony as to whether decedent's heart attack occurred while he was working or whether it had actually begun earlier that morning before he arrived at work, where cardiologist who treated decedent at hospital on day of his death testified that because decedent's chest pains reportedly began when he awoke at 5:00 a.m. to 5:15 a.m. and continued all morning, heart attack began prior to time he started work, and cardiologist also testified that decedent's abnormally high "CPK" readout from 10:45 a.m. blood test was indicative of myocardial infarction that had begun 4 to 6 hours earlier, and hospital records prepared on day of incident supported cardiologist's testimony. Becker v Stryco Constr. Co., 252 A.D.2d 843, 675 N.Y.S.2d 450, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8582 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Claim for workers' compensation benefits was properly denied, even though claimant submitted report and affirmation of expert who opined that decedent's death from fatal heart attack was causally related to his employment as newspaper delivery person, where Workers' Compensation Board found such evidence conclusory and equivocal and, instead, accepted opinion of employer's expert, who concluded that decedent's death was result of coronary thrombosis superimposed on chronic atherosclerotic change unrelated to his work. Estate of Hertz v Gannett Rochester Newspapers, 272 A.D.2d 814, 709 N.Y.S.2d 222, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5940 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

When a worker suffered a fatal heart attack on the job, and a workers' compensation law judge (WCLJ) found the heart attack was not causally related to the worker's employment, under N.Y. Comp. Codes R. & Regs. tit. 12 § 300.13(g), the Workers' Compensation Board could reject new evidence submitted to it when the worker's widow sought review of the WCLJ's decision, because the widow did not give an excuse for her failure to present this evidence to the WCLJ. Manley v Mun. Hous. Auth. of Utica, 306 A.D.2d 602, 759 N.Y.S.2d 710, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6359 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

316. — —Subsequent heart attacks as caused by prior job related attack

Evidence was insufficient to establish a causal relation between an accidental injury sustained by decedent in 1951 when he fell from a ladder and injured his left shoulder, left arm and right ankle and his subsequent death in 1953 as a result of a coronary occlusion following a second extensive abdominal operation for ulcers. La Bella v Rayold Foods, Inc., 4 A.D.2d 901, 166 N.Y.S.2d 849, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4291 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Causal relation between accident of December 18, 1949, resulting in coronary occlusion with myocardial infarction, and second coronary occlusion and myocardial infarction on May 15, 1955, resulting in death on same day properly found. Wachsstock v Skyview Transp. Co., 5 A.D.2d 1028, 173 N.Y.S.2d 405, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6184 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

In June, 1952, decedent, while working in course of employment, suffered accident which was diagnosed as a myocardial infarction for which he was compensated. After a short time he returned to the same work but continued under care of physician. In July, 1956, while riding home with fellow employee, he suffered further heart disorder resulting in his death. Medical evidence as to causal relation was conflicting. Decision of no causal relation affirmed. Nierenberg v Clover Leaf Paint & Varnish Co., 7 A.D.2d 773, 179 N.Y.S.2d 920, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4092 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

In absence of medical proof that claimant's disability following second heart attack was related to first heart attack, there was no substantial evidence to sustain a finding by the Board. Award reversed. Berger v Bodner Bakery, 8 A.D.2d 861, 186 N.Y.S.2d 884, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8256 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Where decedent suffered an accidental injury arising out of and in course of employment on May 1, 1955, resulting in a coronary occlusion for which he was given an award at reduced earnings, but it was not disputed that he had theretofore suffered infarctions due to an arteriosclerotic condition not induced by his work, it was within the Board's power to award death benefits following his death in 1959 while sitting in a chair viewing television on the basis of medical testimony that his death was causally related to the 1955 accidental injury. Syvertson v Estate of Freudenberg, 16 A.D.2d 721, 226 N.Y.S.2d 852, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10332 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Upon the issue of whether a particular heart attack by a taxi driver was brought on by unusual exertion, an earlier heart attack having been determined to be compensable, causal relationship was a question of fact for determination by the Board and its determination that the second attack was not brought on or caused by the first or by the amount of driving done by claimant on the day on which it occurred the Board could find that it did not, notwithstanding inconsistency in so finding after finding the original attack was compensable. Lerner v Terrycab Co., 20 A.D.2d 615, 245 N.Y.S.2d 565, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2612 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

Where in 1961 as a result of operation for hernia caused by compensable industrial accident decedent sustained myocardial infarction, and subsequently died in 1964 following a new coronary thrombosis and myocardial infarction, board's acceptance of medical testimony of causal relationship between accidental injury in 1961 and death in 1964 was upheld. Petit v Buckley School, 28 A.D.2d 1052, 284 N.Y.S.2d 117, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3187 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1967).

The evidence supported the board's finding that there was no causal relationship between claimant's current coronary insufficiency and injury sustained while on the job a year and a half preceding hospitalization for heart ailment where claimant continued to work for most of the intervening period. Di Giovanni v Rheingold Breweries, 40 A.D.2d 1047, 338 N.Y.S.2d 674, 1972 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3095 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1972).

317. — —Insufficient relation back to prior incident or injury

A finding that a heart condition was causally related to an injury suffered which required the amputation of four fingers is proper, where there is medical opinion associating the circulatory disturbances with the accident and the testimony of both the employee and that of his fellow employees placed the onset of the cardiac symptoms at or shortly after the time of the injury. Hamilton v Lenz & Riecker, Inc., 274 A.D. 1079, 85 N.Y.S.2d 567, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6141 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

In course of employment in 1949, decedent fell and struck his head on machine. Because of persistent pains in head, he subsequently stopped work, was admitted to hospital in 1953 and died in 1955. On admittance to hospital, diagnosis was psychosis with cerebral arteriosclerosis which death certificate state to be noncontributory. Cause of death was stated as arteriosclerotic heart disease. Held: accident aggravated pre-existing arterial sclerosis so as to precipitate psycosis which was factor in death and causally related thereto. Ramos v Wolf Die Cutting Co., 7 A.D.2d 686, 179 N.Y.S.2d 270, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4341 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain causal relationship between an acute myocardial infarction and a fall from a ladder sustained by claimant on the same day where it appeared that the ladder from which he fell likewise fell and struck claimant on the chest, following which he immediately felt chest pains and became very sick. De Luca v Garrett & Co., 12 A.D.2d 569, 206 N.Y.S.2d 839, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7277 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), app. denied, 9 N.Y.2d 609, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1625 (N.Y. 1961).

Death of an employee in 1957 from a cardiac condition attributed to an industrial accident in 1950 was sufficiently related back to the accident to sustain an award of death benefits where, following the accident, he was given a disability award for myocardial infarction and was thereafter under medical care continuously until his death. Rothenberg v Le Huray & Co., 12 A.D.2d 678, 207 N.Y.S.2d 946, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6746 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Where the evidence indicated that the work activities of the deceased in responding to an emergency call involved acute exertion and undue excitement which contributed to the cardiac failure and the death, award affirmed. Stubbs v Great Neck Estates, 35 A.D.2d 863, 315 N.Y.S.2d 101, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3598 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970), app. denied, 28 N.Y.2d 483, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 1749 (N.Y. 1971).

318. —Sufficient relation back to prior incident or injury

Medical evidence justified decision of the board disallowing a claim for death benefits on the ground that decedent's death from a coronary occlusion was not related to an industrial accident some 13 years before his death. Kappes v Remington Rand, Inc., 3 A.D.2d 611, 157 N.Y.S.2d 1010, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3420 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956), app. denied, 3 A.D.2d 799, 161 N.Y.S.2d 581, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6218 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Decedent suffered back injury in course of employment. Several days later he suffered heart attack and died. Decision disallowing claim for death benefits affirmed. Reilly v Consolidated Edison Co., 5 A.D.2d 1027, 173 N.Y.S.2d 421, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6182 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Claimant suffered fractured rib while working. X-ray indicated that fracture had healed. Thereafter, claimant complained of pain in area of fractured rib. Physicians who had examined and treated claimant stated that he had completely recovered from fracture and that he was suffering from hypertensive heart condition in no way related to accident and that pain was caused by heart condition. Award reversed for want of evidence for causal relation. Fiore v Wilson & Greene Lumber Co., 7 A.D.2d 798, 180 N.Y.S.2d 820, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3723 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Death from a heart attack is not a natural and ordinary result of a back injury sustained 15 years previously. Gorkin v Gorkin's Meat Market, 33 A.D.2d 727, 305 N.Y.S.2d 178, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2802 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969).

319. —Cancer as caused or aggravated by accidental injury

An award of compensation is improper where a woman employed in a department store fainted while pulling out a large drawer which fell on her chest, and after working some seven months, was operated on for breast cancer, but later returned to her work at which she continued until she resigned because of a disagreement with her superior and there is no evidence that the claimant is not perfectly able to perform the services required of her. Schapiro v Wanamaker, 197 A.D. 810, 189 N.Y.S. 343, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7562 (N.Y. App. Div. 1921).

A finding that breast cancer suffered by a dress examiner resulted from striking her left breast against an iron rack after tripping is proper. Mesibov v Sears, Roebuck & Co., 275 A.D. 734, 87 N.Y.S.2d 180, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4243 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

An award for death benefits should be reversed and death claim dismissed where claim was based upon death from cancer while deceased was hospitalized for a back injury. No substantial evidence substantiated the award where attending physician, operating surgeon and medical examiner all agreed that cancer was unrelated to accident and only evidence to contrary was opinion evidence of a doctor who had never seen decedent. Backstrom v Turner Const. Co., 284 A.D. 368, 132 N.Y.S.2d 126, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3404 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

An industrial accident in which decedent suffered a herniated lumbar disc which required subsequent hospitalization and operation was not a cause of his death 2 months later from metastatic carcinoma. Medical proof was not sufficiently clear to permit a finding of causal relationship. Du Cennois v Daisy Dairy, Inc., 286 A.D. 923, 142 N.Y.S.2d 880, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4523 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

Evidence supported a denial of compensation where decedent, a neon sign worker, died several months after falling from a ladder and there was medical opinion that there was no causal connection between the fall and his subsequent death from carcinoma. Finley v Higger Sign Co., 3 A.D.2d 617, 158 N.Y.S.2d 44, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3430 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Evidence was not sufficient to sustain a finding that an accident, whereby an employee struck his head upon a door jam in the course of his employment, aggravated the employee's underlying brain tumor and that there was any causal relation between the blow and his subsequent death after an operation. Kornblum v S & S Produce, Inc., 4 A.D.2d 719, 163 N.Y.S.2d 776, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5129 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Decedent's claim was based on purported aggravation of a carcinoma of the stomach from accidental causation when a truck moved while decedent was lifting and trying to hold a carton. Held: evidence was sufficient to show causal relationship. Morrello v S. H. Kress & Co., 6 A.D.2d 929, 176 N.Y.S.2d 42, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5247 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Under conflicting medical testimony as to whether the trauma resulting from a fall could have aggravated an existing breast cancer, which eventually resulted in death, weight of the evidence was for the Board and an award of disability and death benefits would not be upset. Smith v Durham Aircraft Service, Inc., 11 A.D.2d 552, 200 N.Y.S.2d 76, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10184 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

There being substantial medical evidence to support a finding of the board of causal relationship between disability and death of a jewelry salesman from a malignant tumor on his leg, and subsequent spread of the malignant condition, and the occasion on which his leg was struck by a swinging door operated under spring tension, resulting in sharp pain, an award of compensation and death benefits would not be overturned. Lefkowitz v Silverstein, 11 A.D.2d 841, 203 N.Y.S.2d 122, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8514 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

An award of death benefits was sustained, as being supported by substantial medical testimony, where decedent died from cancer on May 18, 1958, notwithstanding the cancerous condition of his right lung was discovered in June, 1957, an operation to remove the cancer then being deemed inadvisable, though it would have prolonged his life could it have been performed, because of the already existing cancerous condition of his left lung due to an accident sustained in 1956 which aggravated a preexisting emphysema. Lighter v I. Freeman & Sons, Inc., 14 A.D.2d 470, 217 N.Y.S.2d 799, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9791 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain board findings that an accidental back injury aggravated an existing spinal cord sarcoma, accelerating its growth and resulting in hastening decedent's death, warranting awards of disability and death benefits. Mattfield v Ward Baking Co., 14 A.D.2d 942, 221 N.Y.S.2d 224, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7878 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

There was sufficient medical testimony to support findings of the Board that death of an employee from lung cancer seven years after being struck on the left breast by falling timbers while at work, aggravating a pre-existing tumor and causing an amputation of the left breast to remove the tumor after it became cancerous, was causally related to the accident. Smith v County of Erie, 15 A.D.2d 585, 221 N.Y.S.2d 756, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7267 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain a finding of causal relationship between a 1954 heart accident and decedent's subsequent death in 1959 due to cancer where it appeared that, after the deceased's 1954 heart attack, he was awarded disability compensation, subsequently suffered an unrelated heart attack, was determined in 1957 to be suffering from cancer for which an operation was imperative to prolong his life, but suffered a pulmonary edema while awaiting the operation which made his condition so critical that the operation was never performed and later died from the cancer. Murray v Direen Operating Co., 15 A.D.2d 851, 224 N.Y.S.2d 571, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11426 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

It being conceded that the operation following which decedent eventually died from a pre-existing cancerous condition had no relationship to a precedent accident in course of his employment in which he suffered merely a bruise, but was performed merely by reason of a false diagnosis, death was not compensable. Sicker v Karl Schroll & Associates, Inc., 19 A.D.2d 925, 244 N.Y.S.2d 20, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2979 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

Board in exercise of its prerogative to determine credibility and conflicts of proof, held amply warranted in finding that preexisting malignant condition was aggravated by accidental injury in question, and could accept a part of any medical opinion without accepting whole. Jackson v Aarlin Realty Co., 23 A.D.2d 598, 256 N.Y.S.2d 354, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4865 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Where taxicab driver was injured by an automobile accident in the course of his employment and sustained injuries therein resulting in a partial paralysis of all four extremities with loss of bowel and bladder function and control, followed by confinement in various hospitals until his sudden death about a year and a half later which an autopsy found to be caused by annular stenosing carcinoma of the sigmoid colon with infarction and perforation with fecalperitonitis and there was ample medical proof that a loss of sensation in the lower bowel due to the quadriplegia masked the symptoms of the disease thus preventing its diagnosis in time to perform needed surgery, there was substantial evidence to support the board's finding that the death was causally related to the industrial accident. Namanowich v En Operating Corp., 23 A.D.2d 912, 258 N.Y.S.2d 937, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4274 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965), aff'd, 17 N.Y.2d 642, 269 N.Y.S.2d 140, 216 N.E.2d 342, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 1514 (N.Y. 1966).

Where the record disclosed a sharp difference of medical opinion based largely on the role of injury in the etiology of cancer, as to whether a trauma resulting from stepping into a hole in the aisle of defendant's airplane caused or aggravated a malignant tumor of the testis, the court could not say that in the exercise of its fact-finding power the board's reliance on the proof favoring such causation lacked rational support in the record. Daniels v American Airlines, Inc., 24 A.D.2d 677, 261 N.Y.S.2d 169, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3679 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Evidence supported determination that workers' compensation claimant sustained compensable injury where (1) claimant struck his head on metal bar and was stunned, but did not lose consciousness, (2) 2 months later, claimant noticed swelling in area of blow to head and sought medical attention, and (3) claimant underwent surgery for removal of large benign meningioma tumor; although neurosurgeon who performed surgery and employer's consultant testified that meningioma was not causally related to blow to head, claimant's physician testified that injury possibly aggravated preexisting small lesion and theorized that hemorrhage could have caused growth of tumor. Perry v Georgia Pac. Corp., 195 A.D.2d 658, 599 N.Y.S.2d 333, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6901 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1993).

Evidence supported determination that workers' compensation claimant sustained compensable injury where (1) claimant struck his head on metal bar and was stunned, but did not lose consciousness, (2) 2 months later, claimant noticed swelling in area of blow to head and sought medical attention, and (3) claimant underwent surgery for removal of large benign meningioma tumor; although neurosurgeon who performed surgery and employer's consultant testified that meningioma was not causally related to blow to head, claimant's physician testified that injury possibly aggravated preexisting small lesion and theorized that hemorrhage could have caused growth of tumor. Perry v Georgia Pac. Corp., 195 A.D.2d 658, 599 N.Y.S.2d 333, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6901 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1993).

Despite conflicting medical evidence as to whether workers' compensation claimant's form of cancer (multiple myeloma) could be caused by formaldehyde exposure, sufficient factual predicate for finding of causation was provided by claimant's experts, who were (1) former toxicologist for County Health Department, who had conducted investigation into claimant's formaldehyde exposure, (2) specialist in occupational medicine, (3) specialist in immunology, and (4) claimant's family physician. Morrell v Onondaga County, 238 A.D.2d 805, 656 N.Y.S.2d 512, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4143 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 808, 664 N.Y.S.2d 269, 686 N.E.2d 1364, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 3100 (N.Y. 1997).

320. —Mental deterioration; personality changes, depression and the like

While expressly refraining from deciding whether an occurrence arising out of and in course of employment which causes psychological trauma may in any case be compensable in the absence of physical injury sustained by claimant, a holding by the Appellate Division reversing a compensation award made by the Workmen's Compensation Board to a taxi driver who suffered a type of schizophrenia after his cab struck a pedestrian, without any physical injury sustained by claimant, was affirmed. Chernin v Progress Service Co., 9 N.Y.2d 880, 216 N.Y.S.2d 697, 175 N.E.2d 827, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1298 (N.Y. 1961).

An award to a claimant who was struck on the head by a furnace poker on November 30th, 1938 and who on April 8th, 1939 was taken to the hospital suffering from a traumatic psychosis of the traumatic personality disorder type is proper as against the employer's contention that there was no causal relation. Curry v Prudence Bonds Corp., 264 A.D. 798, 34 N.Y.S.2d 670, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4776 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

Evidence was insufficient to sustain an award based on theory that injury to an employee's left leg was a precipitating factor in development of employee's subsequent psychotic condition observed a few months after injury. Jarecki v John T. Clark & Son, 3 A.D.2d 612, 157 N.Y.S.2d 994, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3422 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Claimant sustained an accident in 1941 resulting in the amputation of his left arm below the elbow. And in 1950 he was committed to a state mental institution. Psychiatrist at the hospital testified that the 1941 accident was a factor in precipitating mental illness, which was first observed by claimant's father and brother in 1948 and 1948. Held: award affirmed. Edmonds v Kalfaian & Son, Inc., 9 A.D.2d 551, 189 N.Y.S.2d 456, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7395 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

In 1945, in the course of his employment, decedent became weak and dizzy and his condition was diagnosed as a ruptured blood vessel of the brain and left hemiplegia resulted. He was paid compensation for total disability until his death in 1954. In the interval his condition grew worse and he developed mental changes. On conflicting medical testimony Board properly found that death was causally related to accident. Heybrouck v Forst Packing Co., 9 A.D.2d 555, 189 N.Y.S.2d 359, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7401 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Where claimant was employed as an assembler in an appliance factory and was struck on the head by a fragment of a grinding wheel when the wheel broke, causing a deep laceration in the right parietal region of her head, and not long thereafter was diagnosed by a qualified neurologist as suffering a post-concussion syndrome, later developing headaches and personality changes so that she was finally given a 50 percent disability rating by the board, it could not be said that there was no substantial evidence to relate the disability back to the accident of the preceding year. Landro v Delco Appliance Div. General Motors Corp., 11 A.D.2d 590, 200 N.Y.S.2d 530, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9945 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

There was substantial evidence to sustain a compensation award to a claimant on the basis of his progressive mental deterioration and loss of memory following injury sustained when an explosion in his employer's plant blew out portions of a wall which struck claimant on the head and elsewhere on the body causing various severe contusions. Russo v Art Steel Co., 14 A.D.2d 605, 218 N.Y.S.2d 407, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9380 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Evidence supported finding of Workmen's Compensation Board that claimant's mental disability denominated as conversion hysteria resulted from original compensable injury to claimant's wrist. Knief v Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., 30 A.D.2d 748, 291 N.Y.S.2d 463, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3603 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1968).

Evidence supported determination of Workers' Compensation Board that claimant's mental disorder was not precipitated by his employment as mental hygiene therapy aide, or by patient abuse investigation in which he was charged with withholding information, where claimant's psychiatrist acknowledged that there was nothing about claimant's job that would naturally contribute to his neurosis, and psychiatrist who testified for workers' compensation carrier did not reach conclusive diagnosis and did not find that claimant's work caused his disability; employment-related psychological disorder does not, ipso facto, qualify as occupational disease for compensation purposes. Patnode v Rome Developmental Center, 150 A.D.2d 868, 540 N.Y.S.2d 899, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5461 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Evidence supported board's finding that claimant sustained accidental psychic injury arising out of and in course of her employment, where claimant testified that she was suffering from stress and anxiety due to incidents of sexual harassment at her workplace, and both claimant's and employer's medical experts testified that claimant was suffering from posttraumatic stress disorder which was causally related to those incidents. Brown v Alos Micrographics Corp., 150 A.D.2d 888, 540 N.Y.S.2d 911, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6199 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Accountant's mental injury did not result from any employment-related "accident," and thus he was not entitled to workers' compensation benefits, where (1) testimony of insurer's psychiatric expert supported finding that stress precipitating accountant's mental disorders was not product of harassment but of ordinary workplace irritations, (2) that conclusion was corroborated by accountant's medical expert, who diagnosed him as having paranoid personality, which is condition characterized by baseless belief that one is being persecuted or harassed, and (3) accountant's personnel file disclosed that he repeatedly had made unsubstantiated accusations of discrimination and unfair treatment when in fact his own disruptive behavior or documented shortcomings had led to actions complained of. Hernandez v Domino Sugar Corp., 245 A.D.2d 680, 664 N.Y.S.2d 892, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12572 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Police officer was not entitled to compensation for depression where the officer's major depressive illness was brought about by ongoing frustration he perceived in his police work, which did not by itself rise to the level of compensability, along with the trauma of his brother's arrest, the officer's disciplinary action for insubordination, and the officer's leaving of his wife. Youngs v Vill. of Penn Yan, 291 A.D.2d 852, 737 N.Y.S.2d 186, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 985 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 2002).

A workers' compensation board properly denied a worker's claim for workers' compensation benefits, because while the board erred in determining that the claim was barred by N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 2(7) as there was no indication in the record that the worker's stress was caused as a direct consequence of him being disciplined, evaluated, transferred, demoted, or terminated, substantial evidence in the record supported the board's determination that the stress encountered by the worker was no greater than that which usually occurred in the normal work environment, and that there was no causal connection between the worker's panic disorders and depression and any work stressors. Matter of Mason v Reunion Indus. Inc., 32 A.D.3d 633, 820 N.Y.S.2d 168, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9942 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

321. —Mental deterioration; suicide

After claimant suffered accident in course of employment, he came home, after a stay at a hospital during which time he was frightened and depressed, and committed suicide. Proof was held sufficient to show that he suffered mental derangement in the nature of disease caused by accident and leading to suicide. Death benefit award affirmed. Maricle v Glazier, 307 N.Y. 738, 121 N.E.2d 549, 307 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 738, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 1464 (N.Y. 1954).

Suicide is the proximate and direct result of accidental injuries where the decedent was injured while delivering packages for his employer when he slipped and fell on icy steps and struck his head, suffering injuries in the nature of a traumatic psychosis, changes in brain function, concussion of the brain, change of personality, confusion, dizziness and a sense of pushing forward, as well as frequent crying spells. Lockwood v Luckey Platt & Co., 267 A.D. 930, 46 N.Y.S.2d 937, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5562 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944).; See also Delinousha v National Biscuit Co., 248 N.Y. 93, 161 N.E. 431, 248 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 93, 1928 N.Y. LEXIS 1228 (N.Y. 1928).

A finding by the board that a psychosis and melancholia was induced by a fall suffered by an employee which rendered him disabled until the date of his suicide will be sustained where there is expert opinion indicating a causal relation, even though the suicide did not occur until eight years after the original injury. Commissioner of Taxation & Finance v Hedstrom-Spaulding, Inc., 272 A.D. 857, 70 N.Y.S.2d 362, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3926 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, McGovern v Curran, 297 N.Y. 479, 74 N.E.2d 184, 297 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 479, 1947 N.Y. LEXIS 988 (N.Y. 1947).

Where the deceased employee sustained an injury in the course of his employment which required the amputation of part of his left hand and several months later he committed suicide, a finding that the injury and operation caused the decedent to become restless, nervous, and depressed causing his ultimate suicide, is improper where there is no finding or medical testimony to sustain the finding that the decedent was suffering from a mental derangement in the nature of a disease. Wessells v Lockport Cotton Batting Co., 275 A.D. 733, 87 N.Y.S.2d 186, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4238 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1949).

A death benefit award should be reversed where records show that in a compensable accident in 1947, decedent suffered a head injury but no claim was made of mental derangement until after 1949 when decedent (after assaulting his wife) committed suicide. Records show that although 1947 accident caused a change in personality of decedent from cheerful to moody, decedent was of an unstable and assaultive disposition prior to the accident. Seal v Effron Fuel Oil Co., 284 A.D. 795, 135 N.Y.S.2d 231, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3501 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Decedent was involved in an automobile accident in the course of his work. Thereafter he suffered from sleeplessness, headaches, and dizziness and developed suicidal tendencies. Within six months he committed suicide. The issue of causal connection was in the realm of fact, and the proof was sufficient to sustain the award. Levita v Plymouth Rock Provision Co., 3 A.D.2d 784, 160 N.Y.S.2d 59, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6194 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

The medical testimony was sufficient to sustain a causal connection between an accident whereby the employee sustained serious head injuries allegedly causing him to develop a severe depression and his subsequent death where he either jumped or fell from a hospital window. Nohe v Sheffield Farms Co., 4 A.D.2d 711, 163 N.Y.S.2d 455, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5121 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

For an accidental injury to be held to be the cause of a suicidal act, it must be proved that the act was the product of some form of mental disease, which resulted from the injury. Estate of Vernum v State University of New York College of Forestry, 4 A.D.2d 722, 163 N.Y.S.2d 727, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5132 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Evidence supported a finding that an accident in the nature of a myocardial infarction did not cause insanity or mental disease which, in turn, caused the employee's suicide and hence, death benefits were denied. Estate of Vernum v State University of New York College of Forestry, 4 A.D.2d 722, 163 N.Y.S.2d 727, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5132 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Evidence was insufficient to support a finding that decedent's fall from a ladder caused a cerebral concussion and other injuries and that these injuries and his discharge from employment resulted in a depression, suicidal tendencies and mental derangement in the nature of a disease which caused his death by suicide about 4 months after the accident. Hence, an award for death benefits was reversed. Tycz v New York Tel. Co., 4 A.D.2d 991, 168 N.Y.S.2d 19, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3864 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Decedent was injured in 1941. Following accident he was partially or totally disabled at times. He became depressed and dangerous to himself and in 1951 underwent psychiatric treatment. Psychiatrist testified that there was association between accident and mental illness and awards were made. Held: there was sufficient proof that mental condition was cause of decedent's suicide in 1954. Deitz v William H. Bumstead, Inc., 5 A.D.2d 739, 168 N.Y.S.2d 669, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3549 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Decedent sustained accident and thereafter was in almost constant pain until his death by suicide while intoxicated. He had been drinking excessively to kill pain. Claimant's medical experts testified to brain derangement produced by accident. Held: there was substantial evidence that death by suicide was the result of injury. Kelly v Sugarman, 5 A.D.2d 1023, 173 N.Y.S.2d 41, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6176 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 5 N.Y.2d 705, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1557 (N.Y. 1958).

In view of sharply conflicting medical testimony as to whether suicide of a town policeman related back to an accidental back injury sustained some six years previously, which required an operation and was followed by increasing pain and suffering, or was induced by grief over the death of a sister and general mental derangement, allowance by the Board of a claim for death benefits must be sustained. Consula v Harrison, 16 A.D.2d 848, 227 N.Y.S.2d 585, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9977 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), aff'd, Consula v Town of Harrison, 11 N.Y.2d 647, 1962 N.Y. LEXIS 2035 (N.Y. 1962).

Sufficient evidence could be found in an independent specialist's opinion of causal relationship between a blow on the head received in course of employment by decedent in 1946 and his suicide in 1958, in the light of diagnosis of the blow as causing a concussion of the brain and his subsequent medical history and mental symptoms, to sustain an award of death benefits. Falso v National Wiring & Protective Co., 17 A.D.2d 667, 230 N.Y.S.2d 164, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8717 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Where an employee apparently commits suicide by taking an overdose of barbiturates several years after the last of two industrial accidents, both serious in nature and involving pain, an award of death benefits cannot be sustained by a board finding that decedent developed a depressed state leading to death by suicide as the result of the prior injury, since death by suicide is compensable only where there is evidence of brain derangement or psychosis attributable to prior compensable accidents. Franzoni v Loew's Theatre & Realty Corp., 22 A.D.2d 741, 253 N.Y.S.2d 505, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2941 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

Board applied incorrect legal standard in ruling that work related injury, even if significant contributing factor in decedent's emotional decline and ensuing suicide, was legally insufficient to sustain award of benefits because diagnosis of claimant was severe depression rather than "psychosis" or "derangement of the mind"; decision was reversed and matter remitted to Workers' Compensation Board for further proceedings. Altes v Petrocelli Elec. Co., 270 A.D.2d 767, 704 N.Y.S.2d 372, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3100 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Psychologist's opinion, based on information provided by claimant and her attorney following decedent's suicide, was insufficient to sustain claimant's burden of establishing that causal relationship existed between decedent's employment as police officer and his depressive condition and resulting suicide Musa v Nassau County Police Dep't, 276 A.D.2d 851, 714 N.Y.S.2d 545, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10461 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

322. —Eye injuries or disorders

Evidence that a claimant, whose right eye had been enucleated and who had some light perception and light projection in his left eye, lost light perception and light projection in left eye as a result of an accident in the course of his employment was sufficient to establish an award. Trillas v Weimet Film Co., 306 N.Y. 779, 118 N.E.2d 599, 306 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 779, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 1127 (N.Y. 1954).

Treating opthalmologist's testimony relating hemorrhages to emotional confrontations at work supported board's finding that a prolonged state of anxiety and an overwrought emotional condition, with the precipitant effects of 2 emotional episodes, caused the hemorrhages and resulting disability and that the hemorrhages were industrial accidents. Snyder v N.Y. State Comm'n for Human Rights, 31 N.Y.2d 284, 338 N.Y.S.2d 620, 290 N.E.2d 821, 1972 N.Y. LEXIS 1001 (N.Y. 1972).

There is no disease resulting from an accident where a painter suffering from myopia felt something in his eye while carrying a ladder and some four hours later while working on a scaffold felt a sharp pain in his eye and later was found to have a detached retina where there was proof that the myopia was a contributory cause of the detachment and the claimant did not in any way fall or strike himself. Dengler v Doudera Decorating Co., 264 A.D. 982, 33 N.Y.S.2d 725, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5613 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1942).

A finding that loss of vision in one eye was not caused by lifting heavy tools by a toolmaker whose work was not usually so strenuous will be sustained, where there is medical evidence of lack of causal connection. Fisher v Savage Arms Corp., 266 A.D. 704, 40 N.Y.S.2d 138, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3956 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943).

Evidence sustained finding that retinal detachment in claimant's left eye resulting in a total loss of vision in that eye from an accident which occurred when he bumped his head against a pipe fitting while engaged as an engineer in a hotel. Cann v Half Moon Hotel, 283 A.D. 839, 129 N.Y.S.2d 76, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5467 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

In the course of claimant's precision work, she constantly used a microscope with her left eye. After complaining of nervousness and frustration, she suddenly lost the central vision of her right eye. There was evidence that the injury was caused by a spasm which might have occurred in an artery in any part of her body and this in turn was the result of nervous and emotional tension. An impartial expert said that there was no causal connection between claimant's nervous condition and her work, but this was contradicted by other doctors. Under these circumstances the denial of the claim was affirmed. Pennelli v Delco Appliance Div., 3 A.D.2d 779, 160 N.Y.S.2d 389, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6187 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Claimant and two other co-workers testified that while the claimant was at work he struck his head against a valve. Two months later he consulted a specialist who diagnosed his ailment as a detached retina and claimant promptly advised his employer of the diagnosis and the employer filed a report of injury, stating that claimant had suffered an injury to his left eye as a result of hitting his head on a valve. Held: a decision disallowing the claim by the board must be remanded since it is not clear whether the finding was based on the fact that the claimant did not sustain an accidental injury arising out of or in the course of his employment or whether on the basis of the medical testimony, there was no causal connection between the blow on the head and the detachment of the retina. Wolff v S. Jaralomon & Co., 4 A.D.2d 923, 166 N.Y.S.2d 936, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4329 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957), app. denied, 5 A.D.2d 797, 170 N.Y.S.2d 316 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

A denial of a rehearing was approved where an insurance carrier wanted to show a 1955 report of claimant's physician that flare-up of eye condition was not attributable to original accident after referee had found in 1956 a 65 percent loss of vision on medical proof then unchallenged by carrier. Lu Core v Hooker Electrochemical Co., 6 A.D.2d 624, 179 N.Y.S.2d 965, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4047 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

The board was justified in finding no association between a blow on the head by a metal hatch and cataract in both eyes, in view of the testimony of a physician that there was no causation between the blow and the development of a cataract and that, on review of the medical literature, he had not been able to find a report of such a case. Guerriera v Universal Terminal Stevedore Co., 9 A.D.2d 984, 194 N.Y.S.2d 566, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5300 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

With respect to a claim for loss of sight of both eyes as the result of splashing detergent into the right eye while washing dishes in course of the claimant's employment, findings of the Workmen's Compensation Board, supported by some medical testimony, that infection spread from the eye in which the detergent was splashed to the other eye, resulting in loss of sight of both, was sustained, notwithstanding the reviewing court regarded most of the medical testimony as overwhelming against such a causal relationship. Brooks v Temple Sinai, 11 A.D.2d 550, 199 N.Y.S.2d 776, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10181 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), aff'd, 9 N.Y.2d 917, 217 N.Y.S.2d 88, 176 N.E.2d 98, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1232 (N.Y. 1961).

An award by the Workmen's Compensation Board, made upon a finding of acute conjunctivitis, central keratitis, and acute iritis resulting from traumatic injury which occurred when dust and dirt entered the claimant's eye, was sustained on a basis of some substantial evidence to support it, notwithstanding a conflict in medical testimony. Ruiz v Clever Idea Co., 11 A.D.2d 823, 202 N.Y.S.2d 405, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8487 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 8 N.Y.2d 708, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1864 (N.Y. 1960).

There was sufficient medical testimony to support a finding of the Board that claimant's loss of vision in one eye was the result of physical strain when he lifted one end of a heavy timber and his left eye "went black." Seeger v Syracuse Rendering Co., 15 A.D.2d 604, 222 N.Y.S.2d 416, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6980 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

A finding of no causal relation between claimant's getting a particle of sawdust under his eyelid while at work and subsequent enucleation of the eye was sustained where it merely appeared that claimant rubbed his eye for awhile and eventually went to a doctor to have the foreign substance removed after the sawdust entered under his eyelid, but, at time of the accident, had long been suffering from a chronic eye disease resulting from an accident 22 years before. Gural v Kandu Cleaning Corp., 15 A.D.2d 621, 222 N.Y.S.2d 380, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6845 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Medical testimony was sufficient to relate claimant's loss of vision in his left eye, for which medical treatment was not sought until January 13, 1961, as causally connected to a blow sustained by claimant on the bridge of his nose by a hot steel cable on October 12, 1960. Campanini v Colorado Fuel & Iron Corp., 21 A.D.2d 927, 250 N.Y.S.2d 1011, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3363 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 14 N.Y.2d 487, 1964 N.Y. LEXIS 1849 (N.Y. 1964).

Where compensation claimant's medical witness did not voice any opinion on causal relationship between dust or dirt entering claimant's eye during the course of his employment as a porter and claimant's eye injury, diagnosed as toxoplasmosis choroidoretinitis, and loss of vision but withheld any professional judgment as to the causal relationship and compensation carrier's expert testified that there could be no causal relationship between eye injury and dust or dirt entering claimant's eye, Workmen's Compensation Board committed reversible error in affirming referee's conclusion that claimant suffered 55 percent causally related loss of vision. Beltran v Allied Maintenance Corp., 45 A.D.2d 795, 357 N.Y.S.2d 162, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4634 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

323. —Falls as accidental or due to disease

Where the decedent dislocated his shoulder and subsequently suffered another fall resulting in his death, and the death certificate, signed by a person who had never seen the decedent in his life, stated that the cause of death was chronic heart disease, and where the decedent's own physician and widow both testified that the decedent had never had heart trouble, the presumption raised by the certificate is conclusively overcome. Nestor v Pabst Brewing Co., 191 A.D. 312, 181 N.Y.S. 477, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4709 (N.Y. App. Div. 1920).

While working in the kitchen of a private school, decedent fell, striking his head on the floor and sustained injuries in the nature of ecchymosis about the right eye, laceration of the scalp and a right subdural hematoma. The evidence sustained a finding that the injuries were accidental and not due to a natural cause of pathology. Department of Taxation & Finance v Kew Forest School, 279 A.D. 959, 111 N.Y.S.2d 218, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5424 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

The board properly exercised jurisdiction where decedent, who had an engineer's license but whose work was predominantly that of a night watchman and maintenance man in connection with the employer's fleet of tugboats, fell into the water in some unknown manner and was drowned. Evans v Henjes Marine, Inc., 279 A.D. 962, 111 N.Y.S.2d 92, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5431 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

Whether decedent, employed as an electrician, fell from a stepladder six feet high as the result of a heart attack or fell and suffered a heart attack as a result of the fall was a matter of pure speculation and an award was improper. Commissioner of Taxation & Finance v Jordan Bros., Inc., 279 A.D. 1123, 112 N.Y.S.2d 552, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6038 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

Death award affirmed upon proof that decedent while employed as a night watchman fell on the fourth floor of building and in an injured condition, in the dark, and after his eyeglasses had been broken, groped his way to the basement floor which fall and exertion resulted in an overextension of decedent's heart. McKinley v Wilson Bros., 282 A.D. 791, 122 N.Y.S.2d 538, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4969 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Medical opinion supported the finding that the fall of a laborer while unloading a coal car in the course of his employment aggravated a pre-existing arthritic condition of his back. Simon v Daystrom Corp., 283 A.D. 1124, 131 N.Y.S.2d 480, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6491 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Evidence justified award to delivery boy who used his own bicycle and who fell while attempting to recover it from a thief. Snyder v Hirsch, 284 A.D. 820, 132 N.Y.S.2d 61, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3558 (N.Y. App. Div.), reh'g denied, 284 A.D. 856, 134 N.Y.S.2d 176, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3755 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

The only reasonable conclusion from the evidence was that the death of a crane operator who was found hanging out of his crane cab with his head dragging on the floor resulted from a heart attack and that he had thereafter fallen. Hence, award reversed and remanded to determine whether shock of striking floor and being dragged contributed materially to his death. Loverich v Colorado Fuel & Iron Corp., 4 A.D.2d 725, 163 N.Y.S.2d 548, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5137 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Decedent, who had high blood pressure and heart condition, was employed to guard barges. While walking around barge on a cat walk extinguishing lanterns, decedent fell between 2 barges. Autopsy indicated that he had not drowned but had died of coronary occlusion. Board found that decedent had accidentally fallen into water and that heart attack had been precipitated by fright. Having thus found accidental fall, finding of causal relation between fall and heart attack was supported. Saunders v Merritt Chapman & Scott Corp., 5 A.D.2d 709, 168 N.Y.S.2d 914, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3502 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Appellant's medical expert testified that decedent fell from ladder because of cerebral arteriosclerosis and that subsequent death was result of arteriosclerosis of vessels of brain and was unrelated to any accident. Testimony of claimant's medical witness was inconclusive and self-contradictory. Award reversed. Kirby v Macombs-Inwood Realty Corp., 5 A.D.2d 1040, 173 N.Y.S.2d 403, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6204 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Where death was due to arteriosclerosis of the coronary arteries with myocardial infarction, there were no eyewitnesses to the occurrence, and the only evidence was that decedent was a carpenter working on an eight-foot high ceiling, in course of which work he stood on a platform of boards mounted on horses with cross pieces usable as steps, and was found dead with his head wedged between two studs, one leg on the step of the horse and the other extending upward supported by the horse, without any cuts, bruises, or other external signs of injury, no injury resulting from the fall from which it could be inferred that the fall came first and the impact hastened death could be based upon speculation of a medical witness to that effect, and the only permissible conclusion was that death came from natural causes and was not related to his employment. Fishman v Lousan General Constr. Corp., 11 A.D.2d 887, 202 N.Y.S.2d 795, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8421 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), aff'd, 10 N.Y.2d 919, 223 N.Y.S.2d 872, 179 N.E.2d 712, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 943 (N.Y. 1961).

Where claimant suffered a fall while at work and thereafter it was found that he had sustained a fracture of the right femur it was proper for the board in the exercise of its fact finding power to accept the testimony of two experts and the reasonable inferences to be drawn therefrom to the effect that the fracture was caused by Paget's disease and occurred before the fall and to reject that of another expert to the effect that it was caused not by such disease but by some prior twisting action of leg. Hailstork v Cayuga County Council, Inc., 22 A.D.2d 978, 254 N.Y.S.2d 753, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2535 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

324. —Effect of preexisting conditions on causal relationship

Where the claimant's husband died of pneumonia which was medically associated with a surgical operation for a double hernia and there is evidence of a fall having some association with the hernia, and of complaints of inguinal pain caused in the course of employment, but, there is undisputed proof of the existence of a double hernia nearly a year before the operation and that neither the employee nor his surgeon regarded the condition as traumatic or accidental in origin, the claim will be disallowed as not being due to occupation or the nature of the husband's employment. Link v Hygrade Food Products Co., 277 A.D. 812, 96 N.Y.S.2d 849, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3397 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

Award made to brewery worker for a condition known as Dupuytren's contracture reversed where proof showed that the disease had been contracted as early as 1946 and did not become disabling until 1951 and claimant did not work for present employer during period May, 1947 to September, 1949. Boyd v F. & M. Schaefer Brewing Co., 282 A.D. 785, 122 N.Y.S.2d 491, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4957 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Substantial evidence did not support finding of aggravation of a pre-existing arthritis or intervertebral disc from an unreported fall. Sikes v Crawford Furniture Corp., 284 A.D. 819, 132 N.Y.S.2d 205, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3556 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Where a claimant was struck on his right leg by a falling tree in the course of his employment there was substantial evidence that there was no causal relation between this accident and a subsequent amputation of parts of both of his legs where it was undisputed that claimant suffered a pre-existing circulatory disease of long standing. Beintema v Islip Highway Dep't, 4 A.D.2d 921, 166 N.Y.S.2d 633, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4327 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Decision denying claim on ground no causal relation existed between accident and loss of claimant's legs affirmed. Claimant had pre-existing circulatory disease which board found, on competent medical proof, was responsible for gangrene in both legs necessitating amputation. Beintema v Islip Highway Dep't, 5 A.D.2d 908, 170 N.Y.S.2d 936, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6725 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Where claimant was president and executive technical director of the corporate employer, and, as president, himself filed a report of accident allegedly sustained by him three or four months previously, consisting of a back injury sustained in attempting to turn a valve, but there was evidence of medical treatment for a back condition prior to date of the alleged incident, the Board's holding that he did not sustain an industrial accident in course of his employment was sustained. Wetchler v Camel, Lead, Color & Chemical Co., 12 A.D.2d 567, 206 N.Y.S.2d 850, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7271 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Where it appeared in connection with a claim for a back condition requiring surgery that claimant had a pre-existing back condition prior to the occurrence of the alleged incident in course of employment, and sustained back pain while shoveling snow at home after the alleged incident, the Board was justified in finding that either the alleged accident in course of employment did not occur or that it was not the cause of disability. Van De Walker v Syracuse Bowling Center, 16 A.D.2d 728, 226 N.Y.S.2d 771, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10345 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Where it was undisputed that decedent, prior to his original industrial accident, had an advanced arteriosclerotic condition in both legs, there was substantial evidence to sustain a board finding that causal relationship existed between the accident which necessitated amputation of his right leg October 26, 1956, and his death from heart stoppage during a second operation to amputate the left leg on February 26, 1959, by reason of gangrene developing there, too, on the basis of extra strain put on the left leg following amputation of the right. Carter v C. & L. Restaurant & Grill, Inc., 19 A.D.2d 676, 241 N.Y.S.2d 106, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3484 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

Finding of board that claimant's disability was due solely to her pre-existing low back condition and not to her work activities held to be based on substantial evidence. Di Marco v New York State Motor Vehicle Bureau, 23 A.D.2d 898, 258 N.Y.S.2d 905, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4258 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

The board properly found an accidental injury where a workman's fall and consequent back injury in the course of his employment was caused by the workmen's ankle giving way, which had been weakened by a prior injury suffered on another employer's premises. Brewer v Thomas Foundry, Inc., 39 A.D.2d 992, 333 N.Y.S.2d 438, 1972 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4242 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1972).

An award of benefits for a six-week period commencing when the claimant underwent surgery for the repair of a right inguinal hernia and a left hydrocele would be affirmed, where there was substantial evidence to support the board's finding that the claimant's disability was a result of the aggravation of pre-existing conditions and that the aggravation was directly related to the claimant's employment, and where during the period preceding disablement claimant's conditions neither required frequent medical attention nor interfered with the claimant's ability to work. Kuczkowski v Bethlehem Steel Corp., 90 A.D.2d 612, 456 N.Y.S.2d 166, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18680 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1982), aff'd, 58 N.Y.2d 946, 460 N.Y.S.2d 533, 447 N.E.2d 81, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 2896 (N.Y. 1983).

Despite employee's claim that her nose bleeds resulted from her employer's air conditioning system, which allegedly aggravated her preexisting environmental sensitivities, Workers' Compensation Board properly found that normal air flow in employee's office did not create seriously adverse environmental condition and that her reaction to it was not accidental injury where (1) employer's evidence rebutted presumptions in CLS Work Comp § 21, (2) employer's medical expert disputed employee's diagnosis of multiple chemical and environmental sensitivities, found no physiological cause for her condition, and opined that she was capable of working, and (3) no unusual environmental condition or extraordinary event was alleged to have caused injury. Friedlander v New York City Health & Hosp. Corp., 246 A.D.2d 937, 667 N.Y.S.2d 847, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 750 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Death of claimant's decedent was properly found not to be causally related to work-related hand injury some 4 months previously where expert medical evidence revealed that decedent had been intravenous drug user and alcohol abuser for several years prior to his death, specialist in fields of forensic medicine and pathology testified that decedent's death was result of alcohol-induced hepatitis which led to cardiorespiratory failure, and that he saw no evidence of infection which might have led to decedent's demise, there was no report of infection in decedent's hospital records, and expert concluded that decedent's death resulted from liver failure and was unrelated to his previously injured hand. Ozga v Pathmark Stores, Inc., 252 A.D.2d 727, 675 N.Y.S.2d 437, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8197 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Although seasonal auditor's exposure to paint fumes in course of her employment was accidental injury, she did not suffer any continuing disability attributable to that accident for purposes of workers' compensation where (1) 2 medical experts who examined her on behalf of State Insurance Fund testified that her symptoms were physical manifestations of anxiety disorder rather than result of her exposure to environmental contaminants at work, (2) auditor's treating physician confirmed that auditor suffered from history of delusional and anxiety disorder with psychotic features, including conversion of mental stress into physical complaints, and (3) several of auditor's experts acknowledged possibility that liver dysfunction, which was one of her symptoms, was caused by known side effects of antipsychotic medication administered to her during stay at psychotic hospital. Gannon v New York State Dep't of Taxation & Fin., 275 A.D.2d 869, 713 N.Y.S.2d 576, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9469 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

325. — —Accidental injury merely activates dormant preexisting condition

An employee is entitled to compensation where he accidently sustained an injury which aggravated an existing spinal arthritic condition. Darnley v General Drop Forge, 272 A.D. 985, 72 N.Y.S.2d 716, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4505 (N.Y. App. Div. 1947).; See also Finkelday v Henry Heide, Inc., 193 A.D. 338, 183 N.Y.S. 912, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5550 (N.Y. App. Div. 1920), aff'd, 230 N.Y. 598, 130 N.E. 909, 230 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 598, 1921 N.Y. LEXIS 877 (N.Y. 1921).

Award for amputation of arm was affirmed where record showed that claimant worked with a steam iron as a presser and frequently received burns from the iron and that the repeated burns together with a congenital condition rendering the arterial vessels in the arm fragile were the inducing causes of the rupture of inter osseus artery. Neilson v Michael Stern & Co., 282 A.D. 793, 122 N.Y.S.2d 472, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4971 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

There being substantial evidence indicating that an accident in 1945, suffered by a professional dancer during a rehearsal when he experienced a pain in his back while lifting another dancer and collapsed, with the other dancer falling upon him, aggravated a congenital existing condition of spondylolisthesis, a finding of causal relationship warranting a disability award would not be reversed. Schun v U. S. O. Camp Shows, Inc., 11 A.D.2d 829, 203 N.Y.S.2d 141, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8496 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 8 N.Y.2d 709, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1866 (N.Y. 1960).

The evidence would sustain a disability award for a back condition where it showed that claimant had a long time arthritic spine condition and it was determined that, following a particular accident, he had a lumbar sacral strain, then, on the occasion in question, felt a pain in his back while lifting a garbage can in course of his duties which caused him to yell "Ouch" and drop the can. Berrios v Park Sulgrave, Inc., 12 A.D.2d 706, 208 N.Y.S.2d 1019, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6249 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Evidence that meter maid had no preexisting disability, although the cavus foot condition which led to her disability did exist at the time that she was hired, demonstrated that she was merely predisposed to an occupational disability at the time she was hired and that the disability was the result of activation of a dormant condition rather than aggravation of a previously active condition so that meter maid who became unable to continue in her employment due to pain in her feet was entitled to benefits for an occupational disease. Strouse v Endicott, 50 A.D.2d 635, 374 N.Y.S.2d 764, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12447 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

Substantial evidence supported finding that while workmen's compensation claimant had no preexisting disability, his duties as vibrating machine operator served to activate previously dormant condition, i.e., osteoarthritis, and resulted in his disability, warranting award of benefits by the Workmen's Compensation Board. Greer v Green Island Contracting Corp., 54 A.D.2d 996, 387 N.Y.S.2d 936, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14957 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976).

Workers' Compensation Board properly ruled that claimant sustained occupational disease based on aggregation of preexisting back condition where claimant testified that her back condition had neither prevented her from waitressing in past nor previously manifested itself in form of total right-side numbness, and her chiropractor testified that distinctive features of claimant's work exposed her to "repetitive occupational microtrauma," which aggravated her pre-existing condition to point of total disability. Jarvis v Stewart Airport Diner, 271 A.D.2d 816, 706 N.Y.S.2d 508, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4434 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

326. — —Accidental injury found where claimant fully recovered from prior injury

The evidence warranted a finding of independent accident to claimant in suffering a severe lumbo-sacral sprain while bending over to pick up a pail of water where, prior to this incident, he had been engaged in moving heavy furniture, as against the contention that the condition was due to two previous back injuries sustained by claimant while working for another employer, it appearing that he had fully recovered from the prior injuries to such extent as to resume performance of heavy work. Regan v Inter-City Cleaning Co., 14 A.D.2d 622, 218 N.Y.S.2d 195, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9396 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

327. —Effect of preexisting conditions on causal relationship; diabetes

Where a wine cask fell on the left leg of a diabetic employee causing injuries so severe that he had to discontinue work and go to bed and thereafter suffered vomiting spells, a death award was affirmed where the medical proof showed that the accident had forced the employee to discontinue exercise and the vomiting had caused dehydration and as a result thereof, together with pain and emotional disturbance, the employee's sugar tolerance had been lowered so that diabetic acidosis and coma was precipitated. Moniot v Empire State Wine Co., 282 A.D. 899, 124 N.Y.S.2d 880, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5367 (N.Y. App. Div.), reh'g denied, 282 A.D. 1080, 126 N.Y.S.2d 923, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5869 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Claimant, who had been suffering from diabetes and from an impairment in circulation related to that disease, sustained an injury when a steel plate weighing some 200 pounds was dropped on his left foot. Morano v Marine Basin Co., 4 A.D.2d 903, 166 N.Y.S.2d 831, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4294 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 3 N.Y.2d 709, 1957 N.Y. LEXIS 1457 (N.Y. 1957).

A condition is nonetheless the result of an "accident" because the person who suffers it had a preexisting physical weakness or disability which made the "accident" more likely to occur or its consequences worse. Thus where a diabetic salesman injured his right foot in one employment which caused him to favor that foot in subsequent walking in a later employment, and was more susceptible to blisters by reason of his diabetic condition, his sustaining of a blister on the left foot by reason of excessive walking, which became infected, was a compensable industrial accident. Walters v U. S. Vitamin Corp., 11 A.D.2d 280, 203 N.Y.S.2d 401, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8393 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), aff'd, 10 N.Y.2d 924, 223 N.Y.S.2d 874, 179 N.E.2d 713, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 946 (N.Y. 1961).

There was sufficient medical testimony to sustain a finding of compensability for death of an employee as causally related back to cutting his finger on a slicing machine on September 26, although he had been a diabetic for at least five years prior to the incident, where it appeared that there was considerable bleeding from the cut and he went to a hospital where the cut was treated, then was sent home by his employer where he arrived pale and weak, suffered a "mild cerebrovascular accident" next morning in the bathroom, resulting in partial paralysis, and died on November 4 following a succession of convulsive seizures. Jamieson v Passarelli, 15 A.D.2d 854, 224 N.Y.S.2d 454, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11431 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), modified, 15 A.D.2d 967, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11151 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

A finding by the Board that claimant sustained no accidental injury must be sustained upon a record showing that, while working as a general laborer, on a certain date he got "a shoe full of dirt and sand" and discovered, while taking a bath that evening, that a particle of dirt or grit had become imbedded in his big toe for which he sought and obtained medical attention about two weeks later, the toe infection having aggravated an underlying diabetic condition, notwithstanding some medical testimony that there was causal relationship between the shoe full of dirt and the eventual serious infection. Finn v Merritt, Chapman & Scott, 20 A.D.2d 731, 246 N.Y.S.2d 839, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4371 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

Where diabetic condition existed in claimant before time of alleged accidental injury, burden of proof is upon him to establish such injury connected with employment. Wood v Colonial Tavern & Restaurant, 22 A.D.2d 984, 254 N.Y.S.2d 767, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2501 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964), app. denied, 15 N.Y.2d 486, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1891 (N.Y. 1965).

Fact that claimant's pre-existing diabetic condition aggravated effect of accident is not dispositive. Hoffman v Plaza Hotel, 23 A.D.2d 604, 256 N.Y.S.2d 521, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4876 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Workers' compensation claimant's diabetes, diagnosed in 1994, was attributable to preexisting obesity and not to 1986 back injury where (1) insurer's physician indicated that, within 3 months after back injury, claimant was 100 pounds over normal weight and thus was morbidly obese at that time, and (2) claimant's treating physician testified that form of diabetes suffered by claimant is attributable to genetic predisposition compounded by obesity and sedentary lifestyle. A'Gard v Major Builders Corp., 273 A.D.2d 519, 708 N.Y.S.2d 736, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6438 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

328. —Effect of preexisting conditions on causal relationship; heart condition

Where defendant's claimed that the medical testimony was speculative and that the real cause of the death of claimant's decedent was a pre-existing coronary pathology rather than the unusual and strenuous work effort found by the board, the testimony was found sufficient under Ernest v Boggs Lake Estates, Inc., 12 N.Y.2d 414, 240 N.Y.S.2d 153, 190 N.E.2d 528, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 1211 (N.Y. 1963).; Drews v Blue Ribbon Fish Co., 23 A.D.2d 927, 258 N.Y.S.2d 868, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4296 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

While in his employment, decedent, who was suffering from a heart ailment, fell backwards into a vat of hot acid and was burned. He died over two years later. The Workmen's Compensation Board's finding that the injuries aggravated his pre-existing heart condition and hastened his death was sustained by medical evidence. Falco v Ross Galvanizing Works, Inc., 279 A.D. 959, 111 N.Y.S.2d 4, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5423 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

Decedent was a house painter and 70 years of age at the time of his death and had been suffering from a pre-existing diseased aorta. On the day of his death he had been engaged in his trade by way of shellacking the top of a garage door and while doing so he felt a pain in the right side of his neck, was taken home and died within a few hours. An autopsy revealed that the cause of his death was a ruptured aorta, there being an irregular tear in the aorta about 2 inches in length. Held: award affirmed because there was a finding of causal connection between decedent's work and the rupture of his aorta. Sawatzki v Friedman, 4 A.D.2d 907, 166 N.Y.S.2d 920, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4302 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 3 N.Y.2d 710, 1957 N.Y. LEXIS 1478 (N.Y. 1957).

Decedent, a plumber, was engaged in heavy and laborious work on the day of his death. After lunch he was found sitting against a wall with his eyes closed and on arrival of ambulance to hospital, he was found to be dead. Cause of death was "rheumatic heart disease, acute congestive failure". He had suffered from rheumatic heart fever some years before. Board properly found that death was not related to decedent's employment activities. Bobb v Weaderhorn Constr. Co., 8 A.D.2d 888, 186 N.Y.S.2d 814, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8300 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.2d 705, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1821 (N.Y. 1959).

With respect to a heart attack suffered by a 57 year old trailer truck driver while unloading a consignment of 2400 cartons of concentrated grape juice after making a 400 mile drive during the preceding night to point of delivery, whether the heart attack resulted from natural progression of a pre-existing vascular disease or was brought on by the overexertion involved in unloading the shipment was a question of fact, and the Board's finding of causal relationship, being sustained by substantial evidence, would not be upset. Abbott v Bedford Products Div., Nat'l Dairy Products Corp., 15 A.D.2d 31, 221 N.Y.S.2d 840, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7345 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Although claimant a policeman, had suffered some prior medical disability and already had a heart condition as the result of non-occupational activity, where he had continued to perform his full duties until he suffered a myocardial infarction in trying to subdue a recalcitrant prisoner on June 9, 1955, the Board was not bound to attribute part of his disability to the pre-existing condition, there being adequate evidence connected to the particular incident in course of his employment. Stell v Newark, 15 A.D.2d 840, 224 N.Y.S.2d 573, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11410 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

With respect to claim for death benefits in connection with cab driver's death on January 28, 1957 after being involved in automobile accident on December 24, 1956 in which he sustained injuries aggravating a pre-existing heart condition, testimony of decedent's physician that while he was "less than positive" as to relationship of the accident to death he did have a "reasonable certainty" that the accident was a contributing factor was sufficient to sustain an award. Best v L. J. F. Corp, 20 A.D.2d 743, 246 N.Y.S.2d 791, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4395 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

In a workers' compensation case, a claim for benefits was properly denied where claimant alleged that poor working conditions, coupled with the fact that he was required to spot-clean garments with toxic fluids, either caused or aggravated a pre-existing pulmonary condition, and where claimant had a long history of medical treatment for his pulmonary condition, including a hospitalization within one year of his employment, at which time his condition was shown to be progressive and deteriorating. Compensation is not payable for the aggravation of a previous active condition; to be compensable, the pre-existing condition must be dormant and nondisabling, and some distinctive feature of the employment must cause disability by activating the condition. Hollander v Valor Clothers, Inc., 91 A.D.2d 731, 457 N.Y.S.2d 1002, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19617 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1982).

Determination by Workers' Compensation Board that fatal heart attack suffered by claimant's husband was causally related to his work activities as bulldozer operator was supported by testimony of designated specialist who stated that "emotional stress was obviously present since the decedent was involved in using a municipally owned bulldozer to free a privately owned bulldozer under the immediate supervision of his boss. This emotional distress may be considered as an aggravating factor superimposed upon his severe underlying coronary disease, sufficient to produce infarction or ventricular dysrhythmia with sudden death." Bilow v Chateaugay, 151 A.D.2d 845, 542 N.Y.S.2d 819, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7504 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

County sheriff's department desk sergeant's myocardial infarctions were causally related to his employment and thus compensable accidents under Workers' Compensation Law, even though employer presented testimony of cardiologist that those infarctions resulted solely from preexisting coronary artery disease, where sergeant's cardiologist and internist both opined that those infarctions were caused in part by extremely stressful conditions of sergeant's work, and fact that preexisting condition also might have contributed to infarctions did not require different conclusion. Geed v Sullivan County Sheriff's Dep't, 266 A.D.2d 594, 697 N.Y.S.2d 772, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11210 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Forklift operator's death did not arise out of and in course of his employment, and thus claimant was not entitled to workers' compensation death benefits, where (1) decedent died of cardiac arrest as result of myocardial infarction about 3 hours after 35-minute surgery on 2 fingers to relieve work-related condition, (2) no problems arose during surgery, (3) decedent had history of diabetes, hypertension, vascular occlusive disease, and coronary artery disease that resulted in myocardial infarction 5 years before surgery, (4) decedent sought medical attention for chest pain less than 2 weeks before surgery and experienced shortness of breath on night before surgery, and (5) report and testimony of impartial medical specialist showed that although compensable hand injury and resulting surgery furnished occasion for inadequate recovery room treatment of decedent's deteriorating preexisting cardiac condition, neither hand injury nor surgery caused his death. Wallace v Nestles Chocolate Co., 286 A.D.2d 851, 730 N.Y.S.2d 378, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8859 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

329. —Effect of alcohol or drug use on causation

A finding that an injury arose out of and in the course of employment will be sustained against a contention that the injury was caused by the employee's intoxication, where there is no competent or conclusive proof to sustain the contention and the accident was unwitnessed. Barnhill v Henry Steers, Inc., 263 A.D. 1034, 33 N.Y.S.2d 433, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7967 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

In the course of his work decedent struck his head on a steam pipe and sustained a contusion and an injury to the right eardrum. X-rays were negative for fracture, and he lost no time from work. Three weeks later, after returning from a tavern at 4 A.M., he apparently did some more drinking. His wife observed him attempting to adjust a gas refrigerator at 6:30 A.M. Later he was found dead. The gas valve was open and the gas pipe apparently had been sawed off. Autopsy showed a 65 percent saturation of carbon monoxide in the blood and the presence of "2-plus" alcohol in the brain, also a fracture of the skull and brain contusions. The theory of the board in granting an award was that the injury to the brain caused headaches and pain, as a result of which decedent changed his drinking habits, thus so dulling his perceptions as to permit absorption of a lethal dose of carbon monoxide. The medical testimony in support of this attenuated theory rested on mere speculation. The award was reversed. Boechmann v Yorkville Electric Co., 3 A.D.2d 771, 160 N.Y.S.2d 412, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6176 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

A death benefit award was affirmed where the decedent, after sustaining a painful finger injury which required partial amputation, took an overdose of barbiturates which caused his death. Bruning v Sheffield Farms Co., 8 A.D.2d 241, 187 N.Y.S.2d 666, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8002 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

An award of death benefits was affirmed with respect to death of an automobile salesman while driving a demonstration car belonging to his employer, although the accident occurred about 10:40 P. M. and consisted in the car leaving the highway and striking a utility pole while decedent was driving it alone, after reporting to his employer that he was going to display the car to a prospective customer, the accident occurring on the direct route to decedent's home from the location of the prospective customer, notwithstanding an autopsy disclosed alcohol present in the brain of decedent to the extent of 0.291 percent. Cliff v Dover Motors, Inc., 11 A.D.2d 841, 202 N.Y.S.2d 914, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8515 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), aff'd, 9 N.Y.2d 891, 216 N.Y.S.2d 703, 175 N.E.2d 831, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1303 (N.Y. 1961).

330. —Board as finder of fact

Where there is evidence from which conflicting inferences might reasonably be drawn, the finding of the board must prevail. Gordon v New York Life Ins. Co. (1950) 300 NY 652, 90 NE2d 898, reh den (1950) 300 NY 742, 92 NE2d 318.; Henry v Sisters of Poor of St. Francis, 263 A.D. 919, 32 N.Y.S.2d 146, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7366 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

Whether an accident happened is a fact jurisdictional in its character, and must be established by the evidence. Pinto v Chelsea Fibre Mills, 196 A.D. 221, 186 N.Y.S. 748, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5505 (N.Y. App. Div. 1921).

Where the testimony was confused, contradictory and inconsistent in respect of whether a tile setter, assisting in the placing of a monument, slipped while helping to set a heavy monument up on its base and sustained injuries in the nature of a herniated disc, an award was reversed and the matter remitted to the Board. Capierseo v Bonsignore, 283 A.D. 976, 130 N.Y.S.2d 596, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5983 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

The issue being factual in nature, and the medical testimony as to causal relation reasonably clear, the board was upheld in making a death award where deceased died of a heart ailment about six months after submitting to surgery for repair of a recurrent hernia sustained as a result of his employment. He had a heart condition at the time of submitting to the operation, but was nevertheless given a spinal anesthesia together with pentothal, and increased heart symptoms developed four days after the operation; but this did not preclude tracing death back to his employment. Spear v Brockway Motor Co., 9 A.D.2d 799, 192 N.Y.S.2d 766, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6138 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

With respect to an alleged industrial accident suffered by claimant while in his father's employ, to the occurrence of which only the claimant and his mother testified, determination and credibility of their testimony was within the province of the Board, and its rejection of the testimony must be affirmed. Millefiore v U. S. Casualty Co., 16 A.D.2d 1015, 229 N.Y.S.2d 701, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9100 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Where there is conflicting medical testimony as to causal relationship between a deceased employee's employment and death from a subarachnoid hemorrhage, choice of which medical opinions should be accepted resides in the Board. Olsen v Underhill Constr. Corp., 20 A.D.2d 601, 245 N.Y.S.2d 574, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2590 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963), app. denied, 14 N.Y.2d 482, 1964 N.Y. LEXIS 1656 (N.Y. 1964).

Whether given activities by an employee constitute sufficient strain to bring on a heart attack presents an issue of fact within the province of the Board, and so is the question of causal relationship where its determination requires analysis of medical testimony. Pickhardt v C. H. Heist Ohio Corp., 20 A.D.2d 737, 246 N.Y.S.2d 850, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4382 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 14 N.Y.2d 484, 1964 N.Y. LEXIS 1739 (N.Y. 1964).

Finding that claimant sustained 20 percent causally related loss of vision of his left eye from subacute conjunctivitis caused by acid splashed in his eyes and subsequent exposure of his eyes to fumes, upheld although contrary to finding of board's impartial specialist and of most of the other expert witnesses, since the board is not bound to follow the views of its impartial specialist and in the exercise of its fact-finding power it may properly accept testimony of one expert and reject that of others despite their numerical superiority. Kuehnhold v Yardney Electric Corp., 22 A.D.2d 980, 254 N.Y.S.2d 607, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2538 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964), app. denied, 15 N.Y.2d 484, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1803 (N.Y. 1965).

It was properly within province of board to choose between the conflicting medical opinions as to causal relationship between occlusion of internal carotid artery with aphasia and hemiparesis and underlying arteriosclerosis of deceased claimant who fell while performing his employment of removing boats from lake. Ostlind v Feldman, 42 A.D.2d 656, 345 N.Y.S.2d 682, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4050 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1973).

331. —Board as finder of fact; review of board determinations

Where general practitioner said that decedent's death from coronary thrombosis was causally related to a heart attack sustained on the job several years before and specialists with cardiograms said that death was due to a pre-existing coronary sclerosis rather than to his work, Appellate Division should not have reversed death award and dismissed the claim. Yarkum v Rosenblum & Weller, 308 N.Y. 842, 126 N.E.2d 179, 308 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 842, 1955 N.Y. LEXIS 1099 (N.Y. 1955).

Where a finding of the commission that the deceased came to his death by reason of a personal injury which arose out of his employment was a reasonable inference from the evidence, such a finding is conclusive on appeal from the award made. Tirre v Bush Terminal Co., 172 A.D. 386, 158 N.Y.S. 883, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6033 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

A finding that phlebitis migrans resulted from an insect bite will be sustained where there was substantial medical evidence to sustain such a finding. Richmond v Mass & Brizt, 275 A.D. 879, 88 N.Y.S.2d 682, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4862 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

A finding of want of causal relation will not be sustained where an employee claimed to have sustained an accidental injury to his toe by dropping a garbage can thereon from which gangrene and incipient Berger's disease developed and his death resulted from pulmonary embolism following treatment when there is medical testimony that death was directly attributable to the accident, and no medical opinion to the contrary. Plucinski v Rores Luncheonette, 277 A.D. 803, 96 N.Y.S.2d 773, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3377 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

An award was affirmed where evidence supported a finding that exposure to cold during course of employment of truck driver, who had a peripherovascular disease which impaired the circulation, was cause of gangrene requiring amputation of toe. Heer v James Thompson & Son, 3 A.D.2d 619, 157 N.Y.S.2d 1013, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3434 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

It is discretionary with the Board as to whether it will grant an application for rehearing. And the courts will not disturb the Board's exercise of its discretion unless the Board was arbitrary and capricious. Lu Core v Hooker Electrochemical Co., 6 A.D.2d 624, 179 N.Y.S.2d 965, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4047 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

The board's allowance of death benefits was a factual determination which, being founded upon substantial evidence, was not subject to review, where it was based upon the report of an impartial specialist to whom the case was referred, after receipt of conflicting medical testimony as to whether death was attributable to a pre-existing heart condition, and the specialist reported that decedent, though he had worked regularly during his adult life, while suffering from rheumatic heart disease, also reported that events occurring during his employment produced arrhythmia, producing blood clots which eventually brought about death. Levine v Rosen, 10 A.D.2d 206, 198 N.Y.S.2d 14, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11170 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Where it merely appeared that decedent collapsed and died in a ditch which he was digging on the first day of his employment for the employer and that the cause of death given on his death certificate was cerebral thrombosis, and the medical testimony was in contradiction as to whether the work being done by decedent contributed to and caused his death, a question of fact was presented and disallowance of death benefits by the board would not be overturned. Alves v Edward J. Petrillo, Inc., 11 A.D.2d 820, 202 N.Y.S.2d 809, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8483 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Where claimant became ill while performing heavy work in his employment and his condition was diagnosed as coronary occlusion and posterior myocardial infarction, the medical proof being sufficient to find either way on the question of relationship of his work to his condition, a decision adverse to claimant would not be interfered with. Nissen v Cory, 12 A.D.2d 868, 210 N.Y.S.2d 9, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13042 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

A finding of the Board that death was due to congestive heart failure tracing back to an earlier compensable myocardial infarction sustained in course of employment could not be disturbed where the record presented the usual conflict of medical evidence with respect to causal relationship. Watch v Warwick Valley Contractors, Inc., 16 A.D.2d 998, 229 N.Y.S.2d 178, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9076 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Findings of the Board that decedent's death was not caused by accidental injury, dealing with whether decedent was doing his usual work at the time in question or was engaged in unusual or strenuous work, were considered to reflect misapprehension as to the present rule of liability, and the Board's decision was accordingly reversed and remitted for further consideration. Sawtell v Columbia Box Board Mills, Inc., 16 A.D.2d 1018, 229 N.Y.S.2d 508, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8843 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. dismissed, 12 N.Y.2d 644, 1962 N.Y. LEXIS 1633 (N.Y. 1962).

With respect to a back injury sustained by claimant in course of employment as the cause of continuing disability more than two years later, a board determination that there was causal relationship, based on conflicting medical testimony, must be confirmed. Weber v Warren, 17 A.D.2d 888, 233 N.Y.S.2d 366, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7326 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

On the basis of conflicting medical testimony, a board decision that claimant's purported back injury not causally related to the incident must be affirmed, suffered while removing clinkers from a boiler was not causally related to the incident must be affirmed. Stoudenmyre v Eagan Real Estate, Inc., 17 A.D.2d 891, 233 N.Y.S.2d 287, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7330 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962), app. denied, 12 N.Y.2d 649, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 1638 (N.Y. 1963).

Questions of credibility as to occurrence of an accident alleged to have resulted in a compensable injury are strictly within the province of the Board, irrespective of the referee's determination, and the board's decision cannot be overturned where supported by substantial evidence. Scarpullo v Alba Barber Shop, 18 A.D.2d 1122, 238 N.Y.S.2d 1007, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4029 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

Where claimant had suffered a compensable ankle fracture and contended that subsequent cardiac attack was due to pulmonary embolism caused by embolus released from site of his ankle fracture when cast was removed and that therefore heart attack and resultant disability were compensable, and expert medical testimony was conflicting in its conclusions, decision of board finding no causal relation between ankle fracture and heart disability was sustained on appeal on ground that questions of credibility, reasonableness, and weight of conflicting testimony were for board. Ostroff v Fein-Schlosberg, Inc., 22 A.D.2d 974, 254 N.Y.S.2d 551, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2528 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

Death benefits upheld under evidence that decedent and an ambulance driver at a race track lifted a jockey to a stretcher, and then lifted the jockey and the stretcher into the ambulance, and further that when the ambulance arrived at the first aid station, they lifted the jockey and the stretcher from the ambulance and carried them a distance of 10 feet, the decedent, a few minutes later, collapsing and dying, and there was competent medical proof that the exertion involved could not be separated from decedent's death; that the lifting under the circumstances was "excessive strain" and, therefore, it could not be said that the board could properly find that the work involved more strenuous exertion than the ordinary wear and tear of life and was thus an accident. Lyman v Pinkerton Nat'l Detective Agency, 33 A.D.2d 937, 306 N.Y.S.2d 285, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5836 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

The board properly determined that decedent lifted shafts while working and that the effort expended in lifting the shafts was unusual and strenuous and this exertion superimposed on the pre-existing coronary artery disease aggravated the pre-existing disease and contributed to his death which was causally related thereto. Cavage v Spaulding Fibre Co., 35 A.D.2d 862, 315 N.Y.S.2d 255, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3592 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

332. —Board as finder of fact; consistency in findings

The courts have no power to compel the Workmen's Compensation Board to be consistent in its decisions. Thus, even though the proof in favor of an accident was stronger than that presented in many cases in which the Board had granted awards, a decision denying death benefits where the employee had died of a coronary occlusion after being engaged in strenuous work was affirmed. Szatkowski v Bethlehem Steel Co., 1 A.D.2d 716, 147 N.Y.S.2d 93, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3733 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1955).

A truck driver, after driving for about twelve hours, was found off the road suffering from severe coronary sclerosis from which he soon died. Although there was medical opinion evidence associating the work with the death, the board denied death benefits. The board order was affirmed but the court pointed out that there were many other cases which seemed less surely supported. Deblaker v Channel Master Corp., 1 A.D.2d 910, 149 N.Y.S.2d 519, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5954 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 2 A.D.2d 716, 153 N.Y.S.2d 617, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5008 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956), app. denied, 2 N.Y.2d 705, 1956 N.Y. LEXIS 1180 (N.Y. 1956).

The Appellate Division is powerless to compel the Board to be consistent in its decisions, or to interfere, as long as each decision is supported by substantial evidence. Schwarz v Benedict & Benedict, 21 A.D.2d 921, 251 N.Y.S.2d 175, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3353 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

333. —Evidentiary matters

A court reviewing opinion evidence as to aggravation of an existing condition by an industrial accident should not reject testimony of nonlawyer witnesses merely because they include such words as "possibly," "probably," and "could," but should look to the whole record and determine whether it exhibits substantial evidence of aggravation. Ernest v Boggs Lake Estates, Inc., 12 N.Y.2d 414, 240 N.Y.S.2d 153, 190 N.E.2d 528, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 1211 (N.Y. 1963).

Where the claim that an accident occurred on the premises of the employer finds support only in the declarations of the deceased, an award cannot be allowed. Jack v Morrow Mfg. Co., 194 A.D. 565, 185 N.Y.S. 588, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9326 (N.Y. App. Div. 1921).; See also McHale v Sheffield Farms Co., 193 A.D. 541, 184 N.Y.S. 576, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5592 (N.Y. App. Div. 1920).

A death claim based upon unusual extra exertion and strain was reversed and remitted to the Board where it was claimed that the decedent, a guard, had run after and chased some disorderly children from a parking lot but there was no affirmative evidence that decedent had been running. Fallon v American Sugar Refining Co., 282 A.D. 910, 124 N.Y.S.2d 897, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5384 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Medical testimony as to causal relationship of a finger contusion with a subsequent neuropathy could be disregarded where it was based upon evidence of no prior injury to the finger and subsequent evidence showed that claimant had injured and treated the same finger on several prior occasions. Berrafato v Grinnell Co., 2 A.D.2d 722, 152 N.Y.S.2d 503, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5021 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Where decedent, employed as collector on instalment contracts, was killed at midnight while driving his automobile, evidence that, just prior to the accident, decedent was driving in a zigzag and erratic manner, did not require a finding that intoxication was the sole cause of the accident, there being substantial evidence that it arose out of and in course of employment. Pierce v Grolier Soc., Inc., 9 A.D.2d 968, 193 N.Y.S.2d 672, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5652 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959), reh'g denied, 10 A.D.2d 654, 197 N.Y.S.2d 445, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11691 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), app. denied, 7 N.Y.2d 711, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1668 (N.Y. 1960).

Where testimony of claimant and another as to how the alleged accident occurred is not inherently incredible, the board is not bound to reject it because certain hospital records contain no history of trauma. Urbancik v Roseman Estates, Inc., 11 A.D.2d 554, 199 N.Y.S.2d 775, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10187 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

A cardiac pathology, first definitely discovered in February, 1957, when claimant went to the hospital suffering from a fractured rib, could not be attributed to a fall sustained by claimant, then 61 years of age, on September 7, 1956, when he lost his balance while pulling materials weighing approximately 200 pounds, but was diagnosed as having only a sprained back and ordered to rest for awhile, where the only medical testimony tending to link the eventual heart condition to the earlier fall was indefinite and based upon erroneous hypothesis. Stewart v Merganthaler Linoytype Co., 11 A.D.2d 592, 200 N.Y.S.2d 917, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9950 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

A coroner's diagnosis, from examination of the body of a deceased employee before rigor mortis had set in and the circumstances surrounding decedent's death, that the cause of death was coronary occlusion, constituted a proper and permissible expert opinion as to cause of death. Webb v Twelve Pine Street, Inc., 12 A.D.2d 555, 206 N.Y.S.2d 1015, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7254 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Where the only evidence of injury sustained in course of employment was claimant's own testimony that she felt a pain in her arm while putting a hat on a block and pulling it hard in course of her employment, but proof submitted by the employer showed that there was no report or discussion of any injury at the time of the alleged occurrence, a board finding, overruling a referee's decision, denying compensation, must be affirmed. Monjica v Marlene Modes, Inc., 12 A.D.2d 688, 207 N.Y.S.2d 937, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6764 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Where a decedent's sudden death in 1956 was found to be due to an original accident in 1947 as the result of which he suffered a coronary occlusion, such finding was not open to attack where it was supported by substantial medical evidence, notwithstanding opinion evidence to the contrary. Weinberger v Belmont Electric Co., 13 A.D.2d 884, 215 N.Y.S.2d 195, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10714 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Credibility of claimant's testimony as to sustaining a back injury in course of employment was for the Board to decide, where he continued working after the alleged accident without complaining of it at the time of its alleged occurrence or mentioning it to his doctor when later treated for a back condition. Reidy v Herman H. Schwartz, Inc., 14 A.D.2d 949, 221 N.Y.S.2d 184, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7889 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

With respect to a back injury alleged to have been sustained by claimant on June 6 when he lifted and carried two heavy grocery cases, it appearing that claimant thereafter continued to work until June 14, there being no evidence of any complaints of pain or injury between those dates, and there being substantial discrepancies in claimant's testimony, it was within the province of the Board to refuse to credit claimant's testimony and disallow his claim for accidental injury. Kruk v Forest Hills Hospital, 14 A.D.2d 952, 221 N.Y.S.2d 379, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7893 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

While actual proof is not required to uphold the validity of medical opinion as to causal relationship between an accident and subsequent impaired condition of the claimant, such an opinion, to be given any weight, must be based upon some degree of medical certainty and is insufficient to sustain an award where the physician rendering it merely says that the question of causal relations cannot be answered affirmatively or negatively. Marino v Hawkins Auto Sales, Inc., 17 A.D.2d 895, 233 N.Y.S.2d 626, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7336 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

A medical expert's testimony is not to be regarded as not amounting to substantial evidence in support of a finding of the Commission, because "conjectural" in nature, where the "conjecture" consisted in admitted lack of knowledge of all details of what occurs in a certain type of brain injury, but the answer was nevertheless a flat statement of medical opinion. Bochkarev v Henry's Landscaping Service, 18 A.D.2d 1113, 238 N.Y.S.2d 994, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4011 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 13 N.Y.2d 595, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 1921 (N.Y. 1963).

Although use by medical experts of expressions such as "possibly," "probably," or "could," does not necessarily brand their testimony as speculative on the question of causal relationship, a finding of such relationship cannot be sustained where, on the entire record, no opinion in claimant's favor affirmatively appears. Falconer v Proto Tool Co., 19 A.D.2d 926, 244 N.Y.S.2d 52, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2980 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

An employer's report under the requirement of § 110, containing detailed and considered admissions concerning the industrial accident, may be regarded as corroboration of the decedent's hearsay declarations which are admissible under § 118 if corroborated by "circumstances" and "other evidence", and on this basis the Appellate Division held that the board acted within the purview of its fact-finding power and on substantial evidence in finding that the accident arose out of the employment. Laine v Rula Corp., 24 A.D.2d 675, 261 N.Y.S.2d 182, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3677 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Medical expert's opinion testimony that decedent's striking head on doorknob was causally related to subsequent heart attack, met test that although there could not be certainty in such a case, professional judgment was that causality could and should be assumed and acted upon although in the nature of things it could never be scientifically proven or disproven. Greene v Westbury Fashions, Inc., 24 A.D.2d 784, 263 N.Y.S.2d 738, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3216 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965), app. denied, 17 N.Y.2d 417, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 1676 (N.Y. 1966).

In Workers' Compensation proceeding in which claimant alleged that she was discharged as result of absences caused by work-related back injury, board did not err in considering 2 medical reports included in employer's review application which indicated that claimant had been treated during relevant time frame for ailments unrelated to back injury for which she sought benefits, although claimant was not afforded opportunity to cross-examine authors of reports, since reports merely evidenced absenteeism and were not offered to contradict claim of work-related back injury. McQueen v New York City Health & Hosp. Corp., 154 A.D.2d 789, 546 N.Y.S.2d 235, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12692 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Workers' compensation board panel did not abuse its discretion in directing that claimant be evaluated by impartial specialist where claimant's development of Parkinson's disease as early as his late 40s was quite unusual, and specialist's testimony undoubtedly aided panel in understanding complexities of claimant's illness and any correlation that might have existed between that disease and his injury to his arm while lifting heavy object at work. DeBlasio v New York City Dep't of Highways, 246 A.D.2d 837, 668 N.Y.S.2d 280, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 546 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Substantial evidence supported the Workers' Compensation Board's finding that the claimant failed to submit credible, competent medical evidence of a causally-related occupational disease because the claimant's orthopedist offered no causation opinion and the claimant's physical medicine rehabilitation physician failed to correlate any of the claimant's medical conditions with the performance of any specific repetitive work duties. Matter of Glowczynski v Suburban Restoration Co., Inc., 174 A.D.3d 1236, 104 N.Y.S.3d 438, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5823 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2019).

334. —Sufficiency of evidence of causation in particular cases; back injuries

Where the claimant sustained a back strain and a contusion of the hip in a fall from a ladder, for which he received compensation, and about two years later filed a claim for a second award for a hernia alleged to have resulted from the same accident, such claim representing the first mention of the existence of the hernia, a second award is improper where there is no evidence to show that the hernia was received at the time of the accident or that it was not received before or subsequent to that time. McCarthy v Globe Automatic Sprinkler Co., 196 A.D. 619, 188 N.Y.S. 118, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5577 (N.Y. App. Div. 1921).

Where a taxicab driver stooped to read his meter and as he did so felt a snap in his back, straightening up with considerable difficulty, there is evidence to support a finding of causal relation where 4 months after the injury he was operated upon and a herniated disc was removed, even though the injury at the time was diagnosed as a sprain. Rosenberg v Netherland Cab Co., 269 A.D. 914, 57 N.Y.S.2d 551, 1945 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4445 (N.Y. App. Div. 1945).

Causal relationship between a herniated disc and a fracture of the tenth rib was established by proof that claimant sustained the latter injury while pulling a hand truck on an icy roadway when he slipped and fell striking the right side of his chest against the handles of the truck and then falling directly on his buttocks. Raley v E. I. Du Pont De Nemours & Co., 283 A.D. 1130, 131 N.Y.S.2d 552, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6501 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Evidence was insufficient to establish that a reporter suffered an accident resulting in lumbosacral myofascial when she allegedly stood on the marble floor of a courthouse corridor for 11 hours while a jury was deliberating a case she was covering. Robinson v News Syndicate Co., 3 A.D.2d 879, 161 N.Y.S.2d 275, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5903 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

While lifting heavy table in August, 1952, claimant suffered severe back sprain. In May, 1953, claimant complained of pain in left kidney region. In August, 1953, he was hospitalized for acute prostatitis. Claimant's attending physician expressed opinion that both conditions were result of accident. Award affirmed. Burlingham v Onondaga County Park & Regional Planning Board, 5 A.D.2d 895, 170 N.Y.S.2d 935, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6704 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Claimant sustained injuries to his back in industrial accidents in May and November, 1952. Although preponderance of medical testimony appeared to be against causal relation, one physician testified that in June of 1955 he found claimant to be suffering from disabling back condition and that both accidents were causally related to the condition. Held: there was substantial evidence sufficient to sustain finding of causally related disability after June 17, 1955. Award affirmed. Rogers v F. D. Rich Co., 8 A.D.2d 555, 183 N.Y.S.2d 453, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9635 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Claimant injured his back while inserting spring in a truck in the course of his employment. While doctor's report indicated causal relation between accident and claimant's subsequent condition, the doctor testified at the hearing that he could not see how the injury described to him could have caused the condition which claimant had 3 years later and that it was impossible for him to say that there was causal connection. Held: Board properly determined that there was no further causally related disability. Phillip v C & M Auto Spring Co., 9 A.D.2d 571, 189 N.Y.S.2d 243, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7425 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), reh'g denied, 9 A.D.2d 699, 191 N.Y.S.2d 914, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6889 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Medical testimony was considered sufficient to support a finding by the board that claimant, while carrying a heavy bucket of syrup, "twisted, snapped and sprained his foot and sustained accidental injuries to his back" causing disablement due to spondylolisthesis. Nofi v American Chicle Co., 9 A.D.2d 966, 193 N.Y.S.2d 509, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5647 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959), app. denied, 7 N.Y.2d 710, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1634 (N.Y. 1960).

The existence of a lumbosacral "strain" as basis for a compensation claim of itself suggests the occurrence of some definite event bringing about the condition, and the evidence can be considered sufficient to sustain an award notwithstanding testimony of the claimant is not precisely clear and definite as to date of the occurrence, if he testifies to hurting his back on a specific occasion, resulting in a type of pain not theretofore suffered from prior arthritis, etc., while lifting a piece of steel furniture weighing 75 pounds with his back to do certain spot welding. Lillis v Hard Mfg. Co., 13 A.D.2d 598, 212 N.Y.S.2d 451, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11965 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961), aff'd, 11 N.Y.2d 867, 227 N.Y.S.2d 683, 182 N.E.2d 289, 1962 N.Y. LEXIS 1279 (N.Y. 1962).

A finding of no accident and no causal relation between a back sprain suffered by claimant and his employment was based on sufficient evidence, notwithstanding testimony that claimant's knees buckled under him when a fellow employee placed two 100-pound bags of salt upon his shoulder, where it appeared that he continued to work following this occurrence and did not experience pain until two weeks later or consult a physician for almost five months, the board not being bound to credit testimony concerning the incident. Wessels v Fulton County Highway Dep't, 13 A.D.2d 847, 214 N.Y.S.2d 766, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11040 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

There was sufficient medical testimony to causal relationship between a herniated disc, allegedly tracing back to September 14, 1954, when claimant experienced a sharp pain in her back while lifting and carrying bunches of gladioli while working as supervisor in her employer's warehouse, and a subsequent operation resulting in removal of a herniated disc, following medical diagnosis, to sustain a finding of compensability, notwithstanding claimant was involved in two automobile accidents between the incident in question and the operation. Moore v Snyder, 15 A.D.2d 838, 224 N.Y.S.2d 436, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11405 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Where claimant's occupational history involved bending, lifting, carrying and handling various weights throughout his 20-year employment, it was held that there was substantial evidence to sustain the board's determination that the herniated disc which he suffered at the end of that period was incurred in the course of his employment. Ross v Kollsman Instrument Corp., 24 A.D.2d 670, 261 N.Y.S.2d 186, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3668 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 16 N.Y.2d 485, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 2151 (N.Y. 1965).

There was substantial evidence to support finding that claimant's intervertebral disc problem, which was diagnosed in 1972, was causally related to 1965 industrial accident, in which claimant fell from ladder while he was cleaning an electrostatic spray booth and sustained injuries described as abrasion and contusion of right leg from ankle to hip, with claimant testifying that he started to have trouble with his leg and back three or four months after he fell off the ladder and that in April of 1966 he was hospitalized with a diagnosis of chronic low back strain and radiculitis. Giovinazzo v General Motors Corp., Fisher Body Div., 46 A.D.2d 825, 360 N.Y.S.2d 508, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3702 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

In a workers' compensation case, a worker, who experienced pains in her leg that eventually radiated to her back, was properly determined to have sustained a compensable injury, where she first experienced pain during the course of lifting heavy carburetors, where the repetitive work resulted in a gradual increase in pain, and where the worker's tardy notice to her employer was properly excused in that the tardiness did not aggravate the injury or hinder the employer in the preparation of its defense. Cortese v Rochester Products Div., G.M.C., 91 A.D.2d 802, 458 N.Y.S.2d 58, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19697 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1982).

Determination by Workers' Compensation Board that claimant's disability was not attributable to work-related accident was supported by (1) testimony of treating physician who stated that claimant informed him that his back condition predated accident, that claimant had not sought physician's services until approximately 6 years after accident, and that he did not believe that claimant's back condition was causally related to accident, (2) medical report of physician who treated claimant immediately following accident in which it was noted that claimant "made an uneventful recovery...no permanent damage is to be [expected]," and (3) fact that there was no claim for lost time during approximately 6-year period after claimant returned to work following accident. Kapogiannis v Vassar College, 141 A.D.2d 947, 530 N.Y.S.2d 293, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6843 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

Evidence supported determination that claimant suffered permanent partial disability as result of back injury causally related to work accident, although specialist to whom he was referred attributed his continuing discomfort to unrelated arthritic changes to his back and hip, where his treating physician rejected any connection between his disabling back condition and his arthritic hip, and another specialist linked his condition to aggravations of his otherwise asymptomatic lumbar spinal arthritis by work accidents. Walker v Fred H. Low & Son, Inc., 154 A.D.2d 853, 546 N.Y.S.2d 711, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13414 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Evidence supported determination that claimant sustained causally related disability due to back injury suffered on job, even though he had had 2 back surgeries prior to job injury, where he was able to continue and function in his job as blacktop laborer subsequent to such surgeries. Williams v Boll, 184 A.D.2d 881, 585 N.Y.S.2d 538, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8004 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992).

Board properly disallowed disability claim where claimant did not complain of lower back pain until 16 months after accident, employer's expert testified that claimant's back injury was not causally related to accident, and 2 of claimant's own experts were unable to state that accident and back problems complained of 16 months later were causally related. Di Liberto v Hickory Farms, 236 A.D.2d 663, 653 N.Y.S.2d 192, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1105 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Typesetter did not sustain accident or occupational disease entitling her to workers' compensation benefits, even though she claimed back injury due to prolonged sitting in awkward position at work, where she lost no time from work before being fired, she did not stop work due to any work-related medical condition, and she first sought medical treatment after being fired. Audouin v Economist Intelligence Unit, 263 A.D.2d 689, 693 N.Y.S.2d 695, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8001 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Workers' Compensation Commission properly denied benefits to a claimant because he failed to establish that a compensable work-related accident occurred or that timely notice of the injury was given to the employer where he was unable to remember which coworkers he told about the injury to his back or if he told his supervisor how the injury occurred, it was approximately six months after he sought medical attention for his injury that his medical records reflected that he attributed the injury to the alleged work-related incident, and the claimant gave incomplete, non-responsive, and contradictory answers regarding his medical treatment, medication, and prior injuries on a workers' compensation questionnaire form. Matter of Aldea v Damari Installations Corp., 172 A.D.3d 1852, 100 N.Y.S.3d 443, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4246 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2019).

335. —Sufficiency of evidence of causation in particular cases; heart problems

Where the janitor of an apartment house became ill while bailing water from a clogged sewer out of the basement and died three days later from coronary sclerosis which a physician testified was caused by physical exertion in connection with said bailing of water, compensation will be allowed. Hut v Lejack Holding Corp., 262 A.D. 978, 30 N.Y.S.2d 35, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6764 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

Decedent, employed as chef foreman by restaurant, did no heavy physical work. While in kitchen reading some papers he suffered fatal heart attack. He had suffered series of heart attacks prior thereto. There was proof that kitchen was busy and that decedent had been working hard. Held: accidental death was not established. Bruman v Horn & Hardart Co., 5 A.D.2d 895, 170 N.Y.S.2d 857, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6703 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

On medical testimony, referee's decision holding that decedent died as result of acute myocardial infarction on March 21, 1954, which death was causally related to injury sustained in automobile accident January 7, 1953, which arose out of and in the course of employment, properly affirmed. Fournier v Merchants & Business Mens, Inc., 6 A.D.2d 728, 174 N.Y.S.2d 311, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5792 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 5 N.Y.2d 705, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1552 (N.Y. 1958).

Denial of death benefits in connection with death of construction electrician from heart attack which occurred shortly after climbing up and down the stairs of one 12-story building and one 7-story building in quick succession, on ground of want of causal relationship and uncertainty of medical testimony, reversed and cause remitted for re-evaluation of testimony. Dunn v H. A. Collman Electric Co., 20 A.D.2d 747, 246 N.Y.S.2d 801, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4322 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

Finding of Workmen's Compensation Board that there was insufficient evidence that decedent who collapsed and died from heart attack while sitting on a bench before the start of the day's work had engaged in strenuous work activities on or about the day of death and that decedent did not sustain an accidental injury was based upon substantial evidence in the record. Parker v Long Lake, 49 A.D.2d 992, 374 N.Y.S.2d 150, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11322 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

Claimant's myocardial infarction was a compensable accident where substantial evidence supported Board's finding that claimant suffered his infarction due to the employer's drastic reduction in the number of employees and the reduction furloughs which produced increased pressures and tensions. Ball v Benjamin Electric Corp., 84 A.D.2d 593, 444 N.Y.S.2d 221, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15698 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981).

Testimony of claimant's treating physician (internist) provided ample support for determination of Workers' Compensation Board that claimant (bus driver) suffered myocardial infarction causally related to his increased efforts during months of transit strike, despite testimony of 2 cardiologists who found no causal relationship, where claimant had previously suffered compensable heart attack in course of employment, and internist testified that claimant sustained myocardial infarction shortly after he and his wife had brought food to bus terminal for striking workers of rival bus line and that claimant had suffered permanent damage to his heart as result. Curtis v Adirondack Trailways, 146 A.D.2d 900, 536 N.Y.S.2d 279, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 91 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Determination of Workers' Compensation Board that decedent's fatal heart attack was causally related to stress of physical therapy session he had undergone several hours earlier in connection with rehabilitation for earlier compensable injury was supported by (1) testimony of claimant's medical consultant, who had reviewed written report of decedent's physical therapist which detailed exercise regimen decedent engaged in on day in question, and thus was qualified to offer opinion on causation, and (2) claimant's testimony that when she picked decedent up after therapy session, he was pale, breathing very heavily, looked like he might faint, and stated "They gave me very heavy therapy today." Capon v Grumman Corp., 156 A.D.2d 803, 549 N.Y.S.2d 220, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15536 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

In workers' compensation proceeding brought by state trooper who asserted that his heart attack was caused by stress on his job from being pressured to write more tickets, and also by chopping wood, which he stated he did to lose weight as dictated by his supervisor, board's finding that claimant's own action in cutting wood for personal reasons precipitated heart attack, not job stress, was supported by evidence that claimant's supervisor did not order claimant to engage in specific activity of wood-chopping, that claimant was chopping wood primarily to further secondary financial gain unrelated to his employment, and that claimant had given no prior indication that he was especially upset at work or that he was under any greater strain than his fellow officers. Cooley v New York State Police, 158 A.D.2d 828, 551 N.Y.S.2d 412, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1721 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1990).

Workers' Compensation Board improperly rejected unanimous conclusion of the only 2 medical experts to offer opinion as to lack of causal relationship between claimant's employment and myocardial infarction which disabled him; by concluding that constant high stress of employment aggravated preexisting heart condition over time, constituting repeated trauma which created causal relationship between employment and disability, board's decision lacked support of substantial evidence in record. Doersam v Oswego County Dep't of Social Services, 171 A.D.2d 934, 566 N.Y.S.2d 978, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3313 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1991), aff'd, 80 N.Y.2d 775, 587 N.Y.S.2d 283, 599 N.E.2d 687, 1992 N.Y. LEXIS 5044 (N.Y. 1992).

Substantial evidence supported determination by Workers' Compensation Board that there was causal connection between myocardial infarction and claimant's employment where claimant testified that he experienced pain in his chest and arms after he had run up hill and twice around burning building, and had twice climbed fence, while investigating fire in his capacity as fire investigator; fact that other preexisting conditions may also have contributed to infarction did not require different result. Sturtevant v Broome County, 188 A.D.2d 893, 591 N.Y.S.2d 631, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14636 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992).

Death of claimant's decedent from myocardial infarction was properly found not to be causally related to his employment where employer's consulting cardiologist testified that myocardial infarction was caused solely by pre-existing risk factors, including heavy cigarette smoking and family history of heart disease, decedent's treating internist was unable to state with reasonable degree of medical certainty that decedent's work contributed to his death, and decedent's co-worker testified that, despite fact that decedent had been working long hours as diesel mechanic for several weeks prior to his death, he had not been assigned to perform any particular strenuous or stressful tasks and was completing paperwork at his desk for most of morning on day of his death. Wilson v Reddy Constr. Co., 272 A.D.2d 806, 709 N.Y.S.2d 639, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5973 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 875, 714 N.Y.S.2d 707, 737 N.E.2d 950, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3440 (N.Y. 2000).

336. — —Arteriosclerosis, artery disease or other preexisting condition

Claimant collapsed and died while wheeling a hand truck at his work. An autopsy indicated that the cause of death was occlusive coronary arteriosclerosis. It was not clear whether his work on the day in question was any heavier than usual. Medical testimony was insufficient to sustain an award. Some of it indicated that claimant might have died from the ordinary strains of life, while other testimony indicated the possibility of a causal connection. Hanafan v P. Callahan, Inc., 3 A.D.2d 786, 161 N.Y.S.2d 318, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6197 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Where claimant's deceased was employed as a bakery routeman and after what was known in the trade as a "hard stop" because after taking articles from the truck it was necessary to walk a considerable distance into the store to make deliveries and then to return to the truck, he suffered what was diagnosed as an acute myocardial infarction but the autopsy revealed that there was an underlying arteriosclerotic heart disease, held that the medical testimony set forth in the opinion constituted substantial evidence to sustain the finding of the board that the work the decedent was doing on the date of the accident was of sufficient strain to cause the heart attack and contributed to the death which occurred approximately two weeks later. Luftig v Stevenson Pie Co., 23 A.D.2d 920, 258 N.Y.S.2d 875, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4284 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965), aff'd, 18 N.Y.2d 734, 274 N.Y.S.2d 345, 221 N.E.2d 171, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 1105 (N.Y. 1966).

Medical testimony that employee died of "occlusive coronary arteriosclerosis and probably fatal coronary insufficiency," attributed to claimant's work effort, supported finding that death resulted from an industrial accident. Conti v State Warehouse, Inc., 29 A.D.2d 1041, 289 N.Y.S.2d 453, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4168 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1968).

Evidence supported findings that employee's activities in removing and replacing casters under piano weighing 500 pounds had been sufficient to produce an accidental injury and that death of employee who had been suffering from arteriosclerotic heart disease had been causally related to the accident of the same day, in workmen's compensation case brought by widow of deceased carpenter who while performing his duties suffered heart attack, collapsed and was pronounced dead on arrival at hospital. Peterson v Koral Bros., Inc., 54 A.D.2d 998, 387 N.Y.S.2d 935, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14959 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976).

A Workers' Compensation Board determination that a claimant had not sustained a compensable heart injury would be sustained, where testimony by the carrier's cardiological consultant that the claimant had a common case of progressive coronary artery disease, not causally related to the emotional stress of his employment, constituted substantial evidence to sustain the board's decision. Boscaino v Montefiore Medical Center, 90 A.D.2d 611, 456 N.Y.S.2d 168, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18679 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1982).

Workers' compensation award for stroke suffered at work was supported by substantial evidence where claimant gave detailed and coherent account of events leading to sudden paralysis of his left side, plaintiff's medical expert testified that disability was causally related to employment, and carrier's medical expert acknowledged that physical exertion by individual with arteriosclerotic heart disease might precipitate stroke. Abercrombie v Ryder Maintenance Corp., 165 A.D.2d 926, 560 N.Y.S.2d 367, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11056 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1990).

Claimant was properly awarded benefits based on presumption contained in CLS Work Comp § 21 where decedent's cause of death was listed as cardiopulmonary arrest secondary to suspected pulmonary embolism, claimant testified as to long hours worked by decedent since his promotion to police chief 7 months earlier and stress he experienced as result of personnel and budget issues, and employer offered no alternative explanation for his collapse or proof that his death was unrelated to his employment. Sullivan v Canton Police Dep't, 285 A.D.2d 850, 728 N.Y.S.2d 300, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7503 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

337. — —Related to or triggered by physical exertion

Board finding of causal relationship between worker's myocardial infarction and single incident of carrying flat consisting of sheets of paper 36 inches long by 28 inches wide on which photographic negatives were laid out and weighing 15 pounds a distance of 20 feet to work table was not supported by substantial evidence in absence of showing in the record that worker's activity was carried on for substantial period. Kane v Canal Offset Plate Service, Inc., 24 A.D.2d 810, 263 N.Y.S.2d 818, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3121 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Finding that act of referee employed by Workmen's Compensation Board in lifting file folders weighing over 40 pounds was sufficiently strenuous to require more than normal exertion and that such effort precipitated a coronary insult which developed into a myocardial infarction from which referee succumbed constituted sufficient evidence of death due to accidental injury. Gioscia v Workmen's Compensation Board, 28 A.D.2d 1067, 284 N.Y.S.2d 149, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3125 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1967), app. denied, 21 N.Y.2d 641, 1968 N.Y. LEXIS 1714 (N.Y. 1968).

Workmen's Compensation Board's finding of accident and causal connection in respect to claimant's myocardial infarction was supported by substantial evidence, including proof that claimant was engaged in packing ballbearings for shipment and lifting filled boxes with varying weights of 100 to 150 pounds or more. Montini v Marlin-Rockwell Div. of TRW, Inc., 50 A.D.2d 1017, 376 N.Y.S.2d 714, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12006 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

338. — —Emotional stress and strain

Physician's undisputed opinion that claimant's disabling heart condition, because of tension, aggravation and anxiety in claimant's work activity and duties "could have" brought on his original coronary attack and claimant's testimony detailing work activities were sufficient to sustain determination that claimant's injury arose out of and in the course of his employment as an investigator for the state police. Rivard v New York State Police State Campus, 46 A.D.2d 34, 360 N.Y.S.2d 976, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3627 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

Since, in proceeding for workmen's compensation death benefits, two doctors gave as their view that the emotional stress, strain and tension endured by decedent, a 64-year-old license clerk whose duties required him to work behind a counter reviewing automobile registrations and renewals, on the day he suffered heart attack were causative factors of the attack, the Workmen's Compensation Board's finding of causal relationship was supported by substantial evidence. Goldstone v New York State Dep't of Motor Vehicles, 57 A.D.2d 973, 394 N.Y.S.2d 99, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12263 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

Determination that death of claimant's decedent, who collapsed while at work, was causally related to his employment was supported by (1) claimant's testimony that conditions of decedent's new position proved stressful to him, that he was required to work several hours of overtime at least twice per week, that he became nervous and quiet at home, experienced difficulty sleeping and began to smoke a "little" more despite lung condition, that overtime delayed decedent's use of home inhalation machine, causing his lungs to become congested, and that decedent was "tired" on day before he died, and (2) testimony of claimant's medical expert who stated that decedent suffered cardiac-related death precipitated by stress at work. Kavanaugh v Empire Mut. Ins. Group, 151 A.D.2d 885, 542 N.Y.S.2d 859, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8115 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

339. — —No evidence of working

Decedent, who had suffered angina attacks 2 days before his death and had been told at hospital that he would have to have complete bed rest or he would not live long, collapsed and died from coronary insufficiency while resting at work during noon hour. Board's finding of accident unwarranted and claim dismissed. Purport of testimony was that any exertion would have been overexertion for the decedent. O'Brein v Ronneberg, 8 A.D.2d 880, 186 N.Y.S.2d 725, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8287 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

A board finding that decedent's work as a truck mechanic involved activity more than the ordinary wear and tear of life and that it could be inferred that such work was strenuous involving long working hours and prolonged fatigue would not sustain a finding of accidental injury resulting in fatal heart attack where there was no evidence that decedent was engaged in performance of his usual duties when he suddenly died. Hawthorne v Eagle Delivery Truck Renting Corp., 20 A.D.2d 824, 247 N.Y.S.2d 448, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4262 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

340. — —Hearsay declaration

There was no evidence to sustain a finding that a school janitor, found dead in the boiler room, had slipped or fallen on loose paper. But he suffered from an incurable heart condition with cerebral complications and it might be found that his work was unusually heavy and the undue strain caused his death. The matter was remitted to the Workmen's Compensation Board. Tobin v Board of Education, 279 A.D. 1123, 112 N.Y.S.2d 762, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6036 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

Where employee died as a result of myocardial infraction, his hearsay declarations that he felt a pain in his chest while moving furniture were corroborated by evidence that a tenant in an apartment house where he was employed had called his home and that decedent appeared ashy white and perspiring one hour after starting work. Fath v 1095 Park Ave. Corp., 285 A.D. 1094, 139 N.Y.S.2d 317, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6758 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

A bank porter, during a flood, performed heavy work for long hours. Several days later he died of a coronary occlusion. Death benefits award was affirmed over contention that medical testimony presupposed that decedent suffered chest pains during the interval between his work and death and this supposition rested entirely upon the uncorroborated hearsay declaration of the decedent to his wife. Schulz v Handi-Man Co., 286 A.D. 903, 142 N.Y.S.2d 180, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4471 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

341. —Sufficiency of evidence of causation in particular cases; thrombosis, phlebitis and circulatory problems

Decedent fell while descending ladder from a 13-foot scaffold and later died. Autopsy revealed cause of death as a spontaneous subarachnoid hemorrhage and rupture of aneurysm of Circle of Willis. Hospital records noted a bluish swelling over decedent's eye. Medical examiner stated there was no causal relationship but claimant's doctor testified that the nature of the work (decedent's usual work), the elevation and the trauma showed a causal relationship. Award affirmed. Patane v E. B. Carley & Co., 283 A.D. 764, 128 N.Y.S.2d 69, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5177 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Death benefits award was affirmed where claimant suffered a leg injury which resulted in cellulitis and about a month thereafter claimant developed a localized perinephritic involvement of the kidney area and died as a result of a pulmonary embolism due to thrombo phlebitis. There was conflicting medical evidence as to causal relationship. Weinstein v Draper Clothes, Ltd., 285 A.D. 1101, 139 N.Y.S.2d 365, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6770 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

An award was affirmed where the medical evidence warranted a finding by the board of causal relation in a case involving a retail store salesman who died from multiple pulmonary abscesses approximately 4 months after he had been seriously injured by 3 men who entered the store, for purpose of robbery. Steigman v Non-Pareil Men's Shop, 3 A.D.2d 620, 158 N.Y.S.2d 7, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3435 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Claimant was not entitled to recover compensation for thrombosis of the internal carotid artery where there was medical opinion to the effect that the artery symptoms would not have occurred in the time sequence described by the claimant, and medical history attributed to claimant showed that he described to at least two doctors the onset of his symptoms as associated with activities entirely unrelated to his work. Smith v Bogold Bros., Inc., 9 A.D.2d 988, 194 N.Y.S.2d 872, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5306 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Where the claimant, a dental assistant, testified that she suddenly experienced severe pain in her legs, and her consulting surgeon testified that the constant striking of her legs against objects in her employer's office was a competent producing cause of the phlebitis from which he found her to be suffering, there was substantial evidence supporting the finding of the workmen's compensation board that the claimant had sustained an accidental injury within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Law. Stein v Schneider, 34 A.D.2d 1062, 312 N.Y.S.2d 95, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4231 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

There was ample medical evidentiary support for finding of Workmen's Compensation Board that claimant, who received injury to his back, left leg and left elbow in a fall, had a continuing total disability from phlebitis and pulmonary emboli which were causally related to fall at work two years previously. Thomas v International Harvester Co., 57 A.D.2d 670, 393 N.Y.S.2d 620, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11698 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

Decedent's death from stroke at work was not causally related to his work activities as computer programmer. Broder v City of New York, 239 A.D.2d 781, 657 N.Y.S.2d 473, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5268 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 90 N.Y.2d 805, 663 N.Y.S.2d 511, 686 N.E.2d 223, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 2941 (N.Y. 1997).

Claimant sustained accidental injury arising out of and in course of his employment and thus was entitled to workers' compensation benefits where (1) he presented evidence that he was insulin-dependent diabetic who had worked as machine operator for more than 15 years without similar incident and that he developed phlebitis in his leg in April 1994 caused by prolonged standing on concrete floor in performance of his job duties, (2) his physician testified that claimant's work environment contributed to aggravation of his medical condition to extent that by September 1994 he was totally disabled and unable to continue his employment, and (3) employer's internist agreed that claimant was "permanently and markedly" disabled and acknowledged that persistent standing had worsened claimant's condition, particularly cellulitis, although he attributed only 10 percent of disability to "the aggravation of long periods of standing." Ochsner v New Venture Gear, 273 A.D.2d 715, 710 N.Y.S.2d 443, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7446 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000), app. dismissed, 96 N.Y.2d 731, 722 N.Y.S.2d 797, 745 N.E.2d 1019, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 144 (N.Y. 2001).

342. —Sufficiency of evidence of causation in particular cases; tuberculosis

Evidence was insufficient to support an award in a proceeding brought by a nurse against employer-hospital on the theory that she had contracted tuberculosis while attending an obstetrical patient who was suffering from active tuberculosis. Goettel v United Hospital, 3 A.D.2d 612, 158 N.Y.S.2d 50, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3423 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

An award to a nurse who attributed her tuberculosis to infection in the course of her employment as a student in a hospital was reversed where the only proof that she came in contact with tubercular patients was her own opinion evidence. Maher v St. Mary's Hospital, 3 A.D.2d 875, 161 N.Y.S.2d 243, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5897 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

In course of training as student nurse at appellant hospital, claimant came into contract with tuberculosis patients and, prior to graduation, she began feeling tired and restless. Thereafter, while associated with another hospital, she was found to be suffering from tuberculosis. Award affirmed. Gentiluomo v Rockville Minor Surgery Hospital, 7 A.D.2d 658, 179 N.Y.S.2d 492, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4297 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Where claimant was employed as a laundryman whose duties required him to carry soiled bed linen, shirts, underwear, and other articles of clothing received from private households, physicians' offices, the laboratory of a pathologist, other commercial laundries, and a neighborhood hospital, and he developed tuberculosis of lymph glands resulting in operation, evidence of his attending and operating physicians that he became infected with tuberculosis from such articles of laundry through laceration of his hand, must be accounted substantial although there was no direct evidence of presence of tubercular bacilli in articles handled by him. Kornegay v Franklin Laundry, 23 A.D.2d 601, 256 N.Y.S.2d 434, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4872 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 15 N.Y.2d 487, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1926 (N.Y. 1965).

Mere establishment of exposure to an allegedly tubercular prison inmate could not sustain finding that guard who contracted tuberculosis sustained an accidental injury within meaning of Workmen's Compensation Law. Middleton v Coxsackie Correctional Facility, 45 A.D.2d 903, 357 N.Y.S.2d 732, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4381 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974), rev'd, 38 N.Y.2d 130, 379 N.Y.S.2d 3, 341 N.E.2d 527, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 2297 (N.Y. 1975).

343. —Sufficiency of evidence of causation in particular cases; lung diseases or conditions

An iron molder who fractured a rib, developed a pleuritic rub and died two months later of bronchial pneumonia suffers a disease resulting from an accident under this section. De Marco v Townsend Mach. Corp., 264 A.D. 969, 37 N.Y.S.2d 97, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5578 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

Speculative opinion of general practitioner that decedent's death from terminal pneumonia was causally related to the injury sustained six years earlier, as a result of which, decedent became inactive and was a prey to sedentary pneumonia was to tenuous to be regarded as substantial evidence. Thompson v Patterson, 284 A.D. 820, 132 N.Y.S.2d 545, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3557 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

An award for death benefits was sustained where there was substantial medical proof as to the existence of corpulmonale due to silicosis, contracted in the course of employment, and as to causal relation of such condition to death. Orzell v Straight Line Foundry & Machine Corp., 3 A.D.2d 615, 158 N.Y.S.2d 58, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3426 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

The Board's determination that death was causally related to the accident was proper on the basis of lay and medical testimony that decedent died during a coughing spell and had chronic bronchitis, causally related, from the date of his accident to the date of his death, and which was a contributory factor in the decedent's death. Fleming v George N. Flinn Corp., 35 A.D.2d 863, 315 N.Y.S.2d 253, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3595 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970), app. denied, 28 N.Y.2d 482, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 1719 (N.Y. 1971).

Testimony of physician specializing in pulmonary diseases provided evidence to support finding of Workers' Compensation Board that claimant's death was causally related to his established occupational disease of asbestosis, despite existence of compelling contrary evidence, where physician opined that claimant would still have been alive but for his exposure to asbestos based on claimant's medical records and documented findings of pleural thickening and pulmonary fibrosis. Riganti v South Mall Constr., 210 A.D.2d 818, 620 N.Y.S.2d 581, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13260 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1994).

Claimant failed to show that he sustained an occupational disease, as his exposure to a type of mold was not attributable to a distinctive aspect of his job, and that type of mold was so common that both medical experts acknowledged that he could have been exposed to it anywhere at any time. Matter of Connolly v Covanta Energy Corp., 123 A.D.3d 1394, 1 N.Y.S.3d 404, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8995 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2014), app.

344. —Sufficiency of evidence of causation in particular cases; cancer

Death benefits award was improper where employee died as a result of cancer. Although employee was receiving compensation for a heart ailment and physician testified that the heart condition hastened his death, the evidence was speculative and did not establish a causal relationship. Riehl v Amherst-Dept. of Highways, 308 N.Y. 212, 124 N.E.2d 287, 308 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 212, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 936 (N.Y. 1954).

Workers' Compensation Board properly denied benefits for widow of worker who died of lung cancer, because of failure to prove causal relationship, where widow's 2 experts assumed that worker had been exposed to ink, paper dust and solutions, but there was no evidence to establish his work environment or chemicals to which he was exposed, and third expert concluded that worker's cancer was caused by smoking. Freitag v New York Times, 260 A.D.2d 748, 687 N.Y.S.2d 809, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3660 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Substantial evidence supported the Workers' Compensation Board's decision that the claimant, a former firefighter, was not entitled to workers' compensation benefits because the conflicting medical opinions, including the prevalence of prostate cancer and the other possible explanations for the claimant contracting the condition, did not establish a causal relationship between the claimant's employment and his prostate cancer. Matter of Tucker v City of Plattsburgh Fire Dept., 153 A.D.3d 984, 59 N.Y.S.3d 609, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5954 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 30 N.Y.3d 906, 93 N.E.3d 1210, 70 N.Y.S.3d 446, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 3300 (N.Y. 2017).

345. —Sufficiency of evidence of causation in particular cases; head injury

An employee who sustained a blow on his head and subsequently developed sleeping sickness is not entitled to an award for the disease. Donovan v Alliance Electric Co., 195 A.D. 678, 186 N.Y.S. 813, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4818 (N.Y. App. Div. 1921).

Claimant was injured in accident while operating a taxicab. He suffered cerebral concussion, post-concussion headache and contusions to left side of face and left shoulder. He received compensation and, thereafter, case was closed. Subsequently, he was found to be suffering from recurrent attacks of dizziness and impaired sensation and weakness of grip in right arm and case was reopened. Held: board properly found on substantial evidence that claimant's disability was causally related to the accident. Campana v Hogan, 7 A.D.2d 815, 180 N.Y.S.2d 1005, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3750 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958), app. denied, 5 N.Y.2d 711, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 2023 (N.Y. 1959).

Evidence sustained decision of workers' compensation board that head injuries and posttraumatic stress syndrome were causally related to accident where surgical instrument polisher fell to cement floor after he became dizzy and light-headed from inhaling acid vapors while cleaning surgical instruments with muriatic acid. Bolek v George Tieman & Co., 216 A.D.2d 608, 627 N.Y.S.2d 175, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5843 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. dismissed, 86 N.Y.2d 886, 635 N.Y.S.2d 951, 659 N.E.2d 774, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 4469 (N.Y. 1995).

346. —Sufficiency of evidence of causation in particular cases; apoplexy, stroke

The evidence was insufficient to establish any accident or causal relationship between death of an employee about two years after sustaining a cerebral vascular injury, or stroke, one morning when he was then 69 years of age and employed as a doorman and elevator operator in an apartment building, notwithstanding he had been suffering from hypertension and arteriosclerosis for many years and from headaches and dizziness while at work, and it appeared that, on the morning in question, he was complaining of headaches and dizziness before even starting to work and collapsed after merely collecting some newspapers in the lobby for delivery to tenants. Von Der Lin v 635 Park Ave. Corp., 9 A.D.2d 982, 194 N.Y.S.2d 805, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5297 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959), aff'd, 8 N.Y.2d 950, 204 N.Y.S.2d 182, 168 N.E.2d 848, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1083 (N.Y. 1960).

Evidence that laborer sustained cerebral hemorrhage while working on construction project and died the following day, along with medical evidence, permitted finding that death was accident, and sustained award of death benefits. Goff v John Bogdan & Son, 55 A.D.2d 806, 390 N.Y.S.2d 261, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15607 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976).

Record supported determination that death of claimant's decedent (due to intercranial pontine hemorrhage, or stroke) was causally related to his employment as Commissioner of New York State Workers' Compensation Board, based on undisputed testimony that he was under significant job pressures during week before his death, undisputed evidence that he was obese and suffered from hypertension and arteriosclerosis, and conflicting medical evidence as to actual cause of his death. Kroeger v New York State Workers' Compensation Bd., 222 A.D.2d 912, 635 N.Y.S.2d 112, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13322 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1995), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 801, 644 N.Y.S.2d 688, 667 N.E.2d 338, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 1059 (N.Y. 1996).

347. —Sufficiency of evidence of causation in particular cases; bone fractures or disease

Decedent suffered an accident which arose out of and in the course of his employment when he fell and sustained fractures of the hip. He was thereafter consigned to bed, continued to lose weight until he was unable to walk alone and died 2 ½ years later from generalized arteriosclerosis, arteriosclerotic renal disease. Held: an award was sustained where the record contained substantial medical evidence to sustain the board's finding that the accidental injuries started a chain of events and complications that eventually caused his death. Sheil v Railway Express Agency, Inc., 4 A.D.2d 908, 166 N.Y.S.2d 673, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4304 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Although three doctors were of the opinion that there was no causal relation between a fall suffered by claimant in April, 1953, in which she struck her left hip, and a subsequent condition which became apparent in 1956 when she consulted a surgeon concerning pains in her hip and X-rays disclosed destruction and degeneration of the head of the femur and a secondary fracture of the rim of the acetabulum which required surgery, the surgeon's testimony that the fracture could have resulted from the 1953 trauma was considered sufficient to sustain a compensation award. Mantell v Ohrbach's, Inc., 10 A.D.2d 759, 197 N.Y.S.2d 563, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11204 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), aff'd, 9 N.Y.2d 721, 214 N.Y.S.2d 339, 174 N.E.2d 325, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1454 (N.Y. 1961).

348. —Sufficiency of evidence of causation in particular cases; joint

A claimant was not entitled to compensation for the consequent injuries from a compensated disability where the proximate cause thereof was not his physical condition but his own temerity in persisting in operating an automobile with knowledge that his knee might lock. In 1948 and 49 Claimant sustained injuries to his right leg, compensable under the Compensation Law, and as a result, his knee acquired a tendency to "lock" whenever undue weight was placed upon the leg. Although he knew that knee might lock by operation of automobile foot brake, claimant continued to operate his car until, one day, as a result of the locked knee he was unable to stop his car, struck a tree and sustained injury. Sullivan v B & A Const., Inc., 307 N.Y. 161, 120 N.E.2d 694, 307 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 161, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 989 (N.Y. 1954).

Medical proof of causal relationship between osteoarthritic condition and injury incurred when claimant lifted rack of shoes weighing more than 100 pounds was sufficient to sustain board's finding. Casa v Genesco Inc., 24 A.D.2d 809, 263 N.Y.S.2d 938, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3120 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965), aff'd, 18 N.Y.2d 732, 274 N.Y.S.2d 170, 220 N.E.2d 812, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 1104 (N.Y. 1966).

349. —Sufficiency of evidence of causation in particular cases; chest

The death of an employee may be found to have been caused by an injury over a month prior to his death where at the time of the original injury the employee was pitching hay and overexerted himself, suffering at the time a strain and a tearing pain in his chest. Crofts v Ledyard, 271 A.D. 1042, 68 N.Y.S.2d 603, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5758 (N.Y. App. Div.), app. dismissed, 296 N.Y. 999, 73 N.E.2d 575, 296 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 999, 1947 N.Y. LEXIS 1743 (N.Y. 1947).

Evidence was insufficient to show a causal relation between a trauma to claimant's chest which disabled him from work for two days in 1959 and a spontaneous left pneumothorax 18 months later, where the only evidence in that regard was testimony of a single doctor that there was some possibility of causality but no reasonable medical probability. Shapiro v Coca Cola Bottling, Inc., 22 A.D.2d 717, 253 N.Y.S.2d 177, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3053 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

350. —Sufficiency of evidence of causation in particular cases; ulcer

Decedent died from post-operative peritonitis resulting from radical gastroenterostomy. The impartial specialist reported that the ulcer which led to death was caused by trauma of accident. Award affirmed. Badillo v 1215 Grand Concourse Corp., 8 A.D.2d 899, 187 N.Y.S.2d 54, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8316 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959), aff'd, 8 N.Y.2d 919, 204 N.Y.S.2d 164, 168 N.E.2d 835, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1145 (N.Y. 1960).

Where it was not disputed that claimant, on November 13, 1958, sustained a work-connected injury resulting in an ulcer on his left ankle, and the question was one of continuing causally related partial disability following an operation on the injured ankle, the medical testimony was sufficient to sustain an award from February 4, 1959, to April 13, 1960, for reduced earnings. Pearce v Central School Dist., 16 A.D.2d 992, 229 N.Y.S.2d 122, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9057 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

351. —Sufficiency of evidence of causation in particular cases; suicide

Workers' Compensation Board did not err in concluding that decedent's death by suicide arose out of and in course of his employment as business manager with local office of labor union where expert medical evidence (including testimony and report of impartial specialist in psychiatry) demonstrated that, despite absence of any prior manifestations of mental illness, decedent's frustration, concern and sense of loss due to merger of 2 local offices caused or contributed to his progressive depressive illness, and that his suicide was "significant feature" of his depressive illness. Miller v IBEW Local 631, 237 A.D.2d 641, 654 N.Y.S.2d 460, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2254 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Entirely speculative testimony by decedent's treating psychiatrist was insufficient to support Workers' Compensation Board's conclusion that death in 1988 from drug overdose was causally related to decedent's 1978 injury during his employment as building superintendent when he was shot by unidentified assailants, where psychiatrist was not familiar with details of decedent's drug use history or particular circumstances of his death, he offered no medical hypothesis to substantiate his conclusion that drug overdose was caused by decedent's ongoing depression, and psychiatrist's opinion was based on nothing more than general theory that depression can, and often does, cause afflicted person to commit suicide or engage in self-destructive behavior. Ayala v DRE Maintenance Corp., 238 A.D.2d 674, 656 N.Y.S.2d 71, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3732 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), aff'd, 90 N.Y.2d 914, 664 N.Y.S.2d 256, 686 N.E.2d 1350, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 4808 (N.Y. 1997).

352. —Sufficiency of evidence of causation in particular cases; other diseases or conditions

An employee suffering from a fibroid uterus was not entitled to compensation when after she fell down a flight of stairs sustaining bruises and contusions she began hemorrhaging. Although one physician casually testified that the fall had something to do with the hemorrhaging the Board could properly find that evidence of causal relationship was too speculative. Gebhardt v Bickford's Inc., 285 A.D. 1093, 139 N.Y.S.2d 351, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6757 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

Decedent, in course of employment, was struck in shins and fell on his left side. He died 8 days later and autopsy showed that primary cause of death was heart disease and disease of blood vessels, but also that there were injuries to spleen and pancreas of traumatic origin. Held, accident could have produced latter conditions and there was adequate proof that those injuries accelerated death. Horan v Berlanti Constr. Co., 5 A.D.2d 917, 171 N.Y.S.2d 897, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6446 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Decedent was found unconscious in men's room of employer's store. During subsequent brain operation no evidence of trauma or old blood clots was found. Surgeon testified that trauma had nothing to do with death. Held: the board properly found that the weight of evidence failed to support the finding of an accident. Fromer v Stern Bros., 8 A.D.2d 868, 186 N.Y.S.2d 752, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8267 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.2d 705, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1832 (N.Y. 1959).

An award of death benefits was justified where decedent died eight days after being hospitalized as the result of injuries sustained when struck by a car while he was standing beside his truck, notwithstanding deceased was shown to have been a heavy drinker and the death certificate stated cause of death as chronic alcoholism with delirium tremens, on the basis of substantial evidence that the accident, plus drugs necessarily administered at the hospital, precipitated the delirium tremens. Eisele v Triangle Utilities, Inc., 9 A.D.2d 967, 193 N.Y.S.2d 706, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5649 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain a decision of the board finding causal relationship between injuries sustained by claimant when he fell from a subway platform on January 17, 1955 and a later 25 percent disability, notwithstanding some conflict in the medical testimony. Cole v Petry Dental Laboratory, 11 A.D.2d 823, 203 N.Y.S.2d 213, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8488 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 8 N.Y.2d 708, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1838 (N.Y. 1960).

Substantial evidence supported the Workmen's Compensation Board's decision in awarding a widow death benefits that the decedent had been engaged in arduous work and his death in an industrial accident resulted from it. Bowman v W. F. Simmons, Inc., 37 A.D.2d 1013, 325 N.Y.S.2d 358, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3094 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1971), app. denied, 29 N.Y.2d 488, 1972 N.Y. LEXIS 2252 (N.Y. 1972).

Evidence was insufficient to support finding of causal relation between workman's initial accident, when he was struck on right ankle by falling lumber, and subsequent gangrenous infection which led to amputation of leg. Whitaker v Sunset Queens, Inc., 49 A.D.2d 998, 374 N.Y.S.2d 402, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11335 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

Substantial evidence supported Workmen's Compensation Board's determination that compensable accident occurred when employee, a lawyer, was asphyxiated as he attempted to control attack of vomiting while he was having business dinner with two fellow employees who were working on same case; while there was some evidence that employee had consumed substantial quantity of alcohol prior to and during dinner, Board was not required to conclude that employee's activities were so unreasonable as to render accident solely due to personal acts. Cole v Union Carbide Corp., 50 A.D.2d 623, 374 N.Y.S.2d 741, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12427 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

Evidence which included testimony by physician who treated workmen's compensation claimant that claimant had fever and other symptoms of organic origin when claimant was hospitalized for injury sustained when claimant collapsed in his office supported determination that claimant's injury was not causally related to stress and strain of work and, therefore, was not compensable. Gangl v New York State Div. of Veteran Affairs, 55 A.D.2d 754, 389 N.Y.S.2d 450, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15535 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976).

A claimant who became incapcitated due to a mental condition causally related to his observation of a bloody bandage on the hand of a co-worker, who had injured his hand off the job site, did not sustain an industrial accident within the meaning of the Workers' Compensation Law. Claimant was not an active participant in the events which caused the injury, nor did he observe such events; claimant did not even see the injury itself. The mere fact that the mental injury was incurred by claimant while on the job did not render the injury compensable. Everett v A.S. Steel Rule Die Corp., 106 A.D.2d 181, 484 N.Y.S.2d 972, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 48397 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), aff'd, 66 N.Y.2d 683, 496 N.Y.S.2d 423, 487 N.E.2d 280, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 17237 (N.Y. 1985).

Award of benefits for permanent partial disability would be remitted for further proceedings to determine cause of worker's loss of earnings where (1) no inference existed that loss of earnings was attributable to worker's disability, since he had continued working after accident until discharged for misconduct 4 years later, and (2) worker failed to offer specific evidence that he had been refused later employment as result of his disability. Dudlo v Polytherm Plastics, 125 A.D.2d 792, 509 N.Y.S.2d 899, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 63007 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986), overruled in part, Matter of Zamora v New York Neurologic Assoc., 19 N.Y.3d 186, 947 N.Y.S.2d 788, 970 N.E.2d 823, 2012 N.Y. LEXIS 893 (N.Y. 2012).

Evidence supported decision of Workers' Compensation Board which attributed claimant's disability solely to industrial accident, and thus apportionment did not apply, where claimant was asymptomatic and actively employed prior to accident; fact that bone debris removed during surgery on claimant's injured ankle emanated from preexisting condition was not dispositive since ultimate question is whether claimant's employment affected prior condition so as to cause disability which did not previously exist. Zanetti v Orange & Rockland Utilities, Inc., 132 A.D.2d 761, 517 N.Y.S.2d 323, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49279 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987).

Substantial evidence supported determination of Workers' Compensation Board that claimant had no disability causally related to her previous injury where board, faced with conflicting medical evidence, chose to credit doctors' opinions which discounted subsequent causally related disability. Ehrlich v Chock Full O'Nuts Corp., 146 A.D.2d 878, 536 N.Y.S.2d 276, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 88 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Evidence supported determination of Workers' Compensation Board that claimant had permanent total psychiatric disability causally related to 1979 industrial accident, although board also concluded that claimant was not physically disabled after March 10, 1980, where claimant's psychiatrist testified that claimant's psychiatric disability was in part due to physical disability resulting from industrial accident, and although psychiatrist offered opinion that claimant was still physically disabled, he stated unequivocally on cross-examination that his opinion regarding claimant's psychiatric disability would be same even if board were to find him no longer physically disabled. Boiano v Delma Engineering Corp., 154 A.D.2d 762, 546 N.Y.S.2d 209, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12403 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Evidence supported board's determination that claimant's disability was causally related to his employment as supermarket cashier, notwithstanding conflicting medical opinions and fact that claimant previously suffered from growth hormone deficiency resulting in "epiphysis," which kept ball of his hip joint from properly connecting his hip to femur of his leg, where 2 chiropractors opined that claimant's job duties caused both slippage of claimant's femoral epiphysis and chronic low back pain that allegedly developed after surgery to correct slippage. Stewart v P & C Food Mkts., 236 A.D.2d 667, 653 N.Y.S.2d 438, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1113 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Substantial evidence supported workers' compensation board's decision that claimant's Parkinson's disease was unrelated to his injury to his arm while lifting heavy object at work, even though claimant's neurologist stated that arm injury "greatly contributed to the development of [claimant's] Parkinsonian symptoms," where record contained conflicting medical testimony, and board was free to resolve conflict in favor of employer. DeBlasio v New York City Dep't of Highways, 246 A.D.2d 837, 668 N.Y.S.2d 280, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 546 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Evidence supported Workers' Compensation Board's conclusion that no airborne substance other than paint fumes might have caused seasonal auditor's disability where (1) there was no evidence that building in which she was working contained any air contaminants other than paint fumes, (2) although auditor claimed that many of her symptoms first appeared after pesticides were sprayed in building in 1990, her application for benefits was based only on 1992 inhalation of paint fumes, and there was no indication that she suffered from any causally related medical problem before 1992, and (3) auditor was unable to identify particular contaminant or toxin other than paint fumes to which she was exposed during course of her employment. Gannon v New York State Dep't of Taxation & Fin., 275 A.D.2d 869, 713 N.Y.S.2d 576, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9469 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Substantial evidence supported did not support the Workers' Compensation Board's decision finding that the claimant sustained a causally-related occupational disease because the proof failed to demonstrate that the claimant's shoulder injury was attributable to repetitive movements associated with moving heavy wheelbarrow loads of asphalt or performing other manual duties during his short period of employment as a laborer with the highway department. Matter of Yonkosky v Town of Hamburg, 158 A.D.3d 860, 69 N.Y.S.3d 899, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 633 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2018).

Substantial evidence supported the Workers' Compensation Board's determination that the claimant, a school bus driver, sustained an occupational disease of the neck and the right shoulder because the claimant complained of neck and right shoulder pain well before she filed her claim, and there was no indication that the medical opinions of the claimant's treating physicians were based upon false medical histories. Matter of DiGennaro v Greece Cent. Sch. Dist., 184 A.D.3d 917, 125 N.Y.S.3d 182, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3288 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2020).

Substantial evidence did not support the Workers' Compensation Board's decision that the claimant suffered compensable injuries because, inter alia, the claimant, a village's police chief, was in an accident while driving his police vehicle on the third day of a personal trip, was not in the course of returning to work or attending to any other police matter at the time of his accident, and, thus, failed to demonstrate the requisite causal nexus between the accident and his employment. Matter of Love v Village of Pleasantville, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8159 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2020).

VIII. Wages

353. In general

Under Workmen's Compensation Law §§ 2, 13, 37–39, the Board may properly fix the date of disablement for a sufferer from an occupational disease as the date when he first received medical treatment and thus impose liability upon the carrier for the cost of medical treatment after that date even where the employee continues work without loss of earnings. Ryciak v Eastern Precision Resistor, 12 N.Y.2d 29, 234 N.Y.S.2d 207, 186 N.E.2d 408, 1962 N.Y. LEXIS 888 (N.Y. 1962).

Village, which was paying benefits to retired firemen pursuant to CLS Gen Mun § 207-a, was not entitled to reimbursement out of firemen's unpaid installments of workers' compensation benefits since (1) CLS Work Comp §§ 25 and 30 provide only for reimbursement of "wages," (2) CLS Gen Mun § 207-a does not characterize benefit payments as "wages," and (3) firemen were not rendering services to village at time they received payments, but were in fact retired. Harzinski v Endicott, 126 A.D.2d 56, 512 N.Y.S.2d 525, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 41030 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987).

Substantial evidence supported Workers' Compensation Board's award of 66 ⅔ percent of claimant's former average weekly wage of $409.83 where there was medical testimony as to nature and degree of his permanent partial disability and other testimony as to vocational opportunities and corresponding salaries available to him. Weinhart v Motors Holding, 245 A.D.2d 577, 664 N.Y.S.2d 889, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12611 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Workers' Compensation Board properly awarded claimant benefits of $308.43 per week, based on actual average weekly wage of $462.65, for temporary total disability for certain periods and $400 per week, based on average weekly wage expectancy rate of $600, for permanent partial disability for other periods where board did not reclassify injury as permanent partial disability from date of injury, but rather expressly delineated those periods in which claimant was temporarily totally disabled and those in which he was permanently partially disabled, and expert medical opinion supported use of total disability rate for part of award; future wage expectancy under CLS Work Comp § 14(5) applies only to award for permanent partial disability. Dinger v K-Mart Corp., 246 A.D.2d 946, 667 N.Y.S.2d 860, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 735 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998), overruled in part, Fox v Crosbie-Brownlie Inc., 284 A.D.2d 42, 728 N.Y.S.2d 838, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7826 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

Employer would not be heard to argue that agreed wage expectancy rate should not have been used until workers' compensation claimant reached age of 25 where employer had agreed that any award would be based on wage expectancy provisions of CLS Work Comp § 14(5). Prior v Wegmans Food Mkts., 246 A.D.2d 951, 667 N.Y.S.2d 852, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 736 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

CLS Work Comp § 2(9), which defines term "wages" and sets forth minimum wage provision, did not apply in determining volunteer worker's wage under CLS Work Comp 15(6)(a). Gast v Ozanam Hall of Queens, 259 A.D.2d 862, 687 N.Y.S.2d 450, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2331 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Regardless of whether Workers' Compensation Board is computing disability or death benefit, date of original occurrence causing injury, not date of worker's death, applies in calculating appropriate average weekly wage. House v International Talc Co., 261 A.D.2d 687, 689 N.Y.S.2d 552, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4702 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Board properly calculated average weekly wage under CLS Work Comp § 14 based solely on job held by claimant on date of disablement fixed by board, despite ruling that his occupational hearing loss was attributable to his employment with successive employers, as CLS Work Comp § 2(9) defines "wage" as compensation under contract of hiring in force "at the time of the accident" and, under CLS Work Comp § 38, claimant's "accident" occurred on date of disablement fixed by board. Lesperance v Gulf Oil Co., 287 A.D.2d 839, 731 N.Y.S.2d 535, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9749 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001), app. denied, 98 N.Y.2d 647, 745 N.Y.S.2d 504, 772 N.E.2d 607, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 1056 (N.Y. 2002).

354. Particular forms of remuneration as wages

The payment of small sums as gratuities or the promise to pay same does not constitute the payment of wages as defined by this section. Ferro v Leopold Sinsheimer Estate, Inc., 256 N.Y. 398, 176 N.E. 817, 256 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 398, 1931 N.Y. LEXIS 1073 (N.Y. 1931).

Gratuities or tips received by employees cannot be considered as wages unless so understood by the parties in making the contract of employment. Ferro v Leopold Sinsheimer Estate, Inc., 256 N.Y. 398, 176 N.E. 817, 256 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 398, 1931 N.Y. LEXIS 1073 (N.Y. 1931).

The right to compensation is not affected by profits from claimant's business conducted by himself and his wife, equal to former wages. McCann v McCormack's Garage, Inc., 203 A.D. 387, 197 N.Y.S. 19, 1922 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7206 (N.Y. App. Div. 1922).

Remuneration by way of refreshments is sufficient consideration to support the relationship of employee and employer. Boehm v D. A. Sokol Hall Holding Corp., 274 A.D. 954, 83 N.Y.S.2d 729, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4235 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

An auditor who was required to travel extensively during the major part of the year and received in addition to a fixed weekly salary reimbursement for his living and transportation expenses while at work away from his home may not include in computing his compensation, his reimbursement for transportation expenses but living expenses may be properly included. Le Voff v Gompers & Blau, 278 A.D. 878, 104 N.Y.S.2d 326, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5039 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

Where claimant was injured while making a delivery of lumber for employer's lumber business and using the employer's truck but was not on payroll and had no agreement about wages but did some work for employer in exchange for use of some storage facilities, the use of the storage facilities was a thing of value within the definition of "wages". Rhodes v G. H. Crandall Co., 4 A.D.2d 451, 167 N.Y.S.2d 101, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4273 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957), app. denied, 4 N.Y.2d 674, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1353 (N.Y. 1958).

Where a partial disability claimant had been employed only three days a week as a relief district circulation manager for a newspaper, which work required use of his own automobile in covering a six to seven mile route, for which he was paid $5 daily wage and $11 weekly for use of his own car, that part of the car allowance attributable to operating expense could not properly be considered "wages" within the contemplation of subd. 9 of this section. Weingarten v Democrat & Chronicle, 19 A.D.2d 566, 239 N.Y.S.2d 980, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3816 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

Weekly payments claimant received from his business constituted earnings for his nonsupervisory work as mechanic, and did not constitute profits of his S corporation. Joyce v European Auto Serv., 226 A.D.2d 952, 641 N.Y.S.2d 175, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3966 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

Because an injured worker's rate of pay was unaffected by whether the worker's children attended the school where the worker was employed, a panel of the Workers' Compensation Board properly concluded that a tuition remission received by the worker was not "wages" within the meaning of N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 2(9). Matter of Blackwelder v Faith Heritage School, 27 A.D.3d 1004, 811 N.Y.S.2d 225, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3555 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

Workers' Compensation Board properly ruled, inter alia, that the payments made to a recipient of public assistance during his work experience program (WEP) assignment constituted wages under the Workers' Compensation Law because public assistance benefits paid to WEP participants fulfilled the intent of the Social Services and Workers' Compensation Laws, and providing effective awards for injured participants also benefited those who hosted WEP participants by ensuring that workers' compensation was their exclusive remedy for injuries sustained in the workplace. Matter of Covert v Niagara County, 172 A.D.3d 1686, 102 N.Y.S.3d 131, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3888 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2019), app. denied, 34 N.Y.3d 910, 141 N.E.3d 957, 119 N.Y.S.3d 72, 2020 N.Y. LEXIS 185 (N.Y. 2020).

355. Reduction in pay or loss of earnings

Claimant fell, striking his back, and sustained herniation of nucleus and pulposus between last lumbar and first sacral vertebra. On conflicting evidence, Board properly found that claimant's refusal to submit to operation to remove affected disc was not unreasonable. So an award for reduced earnings was affirmed. Viggiano v Pullman Co., 7 A.D.2d 800, 181 N.Y.S.2d 52, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3725 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Claimant caught in a crane, received fractured cervical vertebrae and laceration of scalp. Subsequently, he returned to regular work although suffering from permanent partial disability. Claimant testified that he had been paid on a piecework basis and at a flat rate for "extra" work after work. After accident, he was unable to perform "extra" work. Board having made previous finding of reduced earnings based on permanent partial disability and in view of medical testimony and testimony of claimant, board was justified in finding causal relations between injury and related period of disability. However, as to reduced earnings, there was no testimony of actual "extra" work during the period of disability and whether it was due to physical inability or economical conditions. Henneman v Endicott Johnson Corp., 8 A.D.2d 922, 187 N.Y.S.2d 156, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8028 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

On the basis of testimony that only economic considerations caused a reduction in claimant's pay, such reduction was not compensable. Winber v Gottlieb Adorn Printing Co., 19 A.D.2d 913, 244 N.Y.S.2d 39, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2955 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

Where claimant suffered a work-connected disability which thereafter limited his ability to continue his previous employment and the employer transferred him to lighter work, an arrangement which continued for more than five years, at which time claimant asserts that the employer said that he could no longer pay him the same wages and suggested that claimant apply for social security benefits for which he was then eligible and offered him part-time employment if he would do so but there was also evidence that claimant voluntarily decided to work half-days and apply for social security because by so doing he would have to work only half as much and would suffer only a $10 reduction in pay, it was held that the board's finding that claimant's loss of earnings was attributable to a desire to partially withdraw from the labor market rather than to disability, was supported by substantial evidence. Van Buren v American Towels Supply Co., 23 A.D.2d 897, 258 N.Y.S.2d 952, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4256 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

If reduced earnings are caused solely by economic conditions, age or any factor other than his disability, the claimant is not entitled to an award of compensation, but if the disability causes or contributes to the reduced earnings then an award may be made. Lovell v Berman's Motor Express, 35 A.D.2d 765, 315 N.Y.S.2d 49, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3663 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

Laborer who sustained back injury which made him unable to work was not entitled to benefits for lost wages subsequent to time he became 65 where union regulations would not permit him to accept work after attaining such age, as workmen's compensation benefits were not intended to supplement retirement income. Mazziotto v Brookfield Constr. Co., 40 A.D.2d 245, 338 N.Y.S.2d 1001, 1972 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2980 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1972).

Workers' Compensation Board's award of reduced earnings benefits to prosthodontist for temporary partial disability due to hepatitis infection was supported by substantial evidence where no dispute existed as to precipitous drop in claimant's wages resulting from physical impact of his infection and where employer and its insurer disputed amount of preaccident average weekly wage as calculated by insurer's expert only after stipulating to that amount in prior hearing on claim for temporary total disability benefits. Hallarman v A. Hallarman & Hallarman, P. C., 124 A.D.2d 458, 507 N.Y.S.2d 558, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 61438 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

Finding that workers' compensation claimant sustained mild permanent partial disability and could not return to his prior work permitted inference of resulting lost wages. Meisner v UPS, 243 A.D.2d 128, 675 N.Y.S.2d 164, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7336 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998), app. dismissed, 93 N.Y.2d 848, 688 N.Y.S.2d 494, 710 N.E.2d 1093, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 68 (N.Y. 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 757, 703 N.Y.S.2d 74, 724 N.E.2d 770, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 4009 (N.Y. 1999).

Reduced earnings award of workers' compensation benefits may properly be denied where reduced earning capacity is due to age, general economic conditions, or other factors unrelated to disability. Meisner v UPS, 243 A.D.2d 128, 675 N.Y.S.2d 164, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7336 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998), app. dismissed, 93 N.Y.2d 848, 688 N.Y.S.2d 494, 710 N.E.2d 1093, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 68 (N.Y. 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 757, 703 N.Y.S.2d 74, 724 N.E.2d 770, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 4009 (N.Y. 1999).

Part-time employee was entitled to reduced earnings award under CLS Work Comp § 15(3)(w) and (5-a) where he sustained mild permanent partial disability precluding resumption of his previous employment, but not otherwise limiting number of hours that he could work, he obtained new part-time employment at lower hourly rate, and there was no evidence that he had opportunity to work more than 25 hours per week or that his diminished earning capacity was self-imposed. Meisner v UPS, 243 A.D.2d 128, 675 N.Y.S.2d 164, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7336 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998), app. dismissed, 93 N.Y.2d 848, 688 N.Y.S.2d 494, 710 N.E.2d 1093, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 68 (N.Y. 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 757, 703 N.Y.S.2d 74, 724 N.E.2d 770, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 4009 (N.Y. 1999).

Part-time employee would be entitled to reduced earnings award under CLS Work Comp § 15(5-a) where he sustained mild permanent partial disability precluding resumption of his previous employment, but not otherwise limiting number of hours that he could work, and he obtained new part-time employment at lower hourly rate—even if there were evidence that he had opportunity to work more than 25 hours per week or that his diminished earning capacity was self-imposed. Meisner v UPS, 243 A.D.2d 128, 675 N.Y.S.2d 164, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7336 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998), app. dismissed, 93 N.Y.2d 848, 688 N.Y.S.2d 494, 710 N.E.2d 1093, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 68 (N.Y. 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 757, 703 N.Y.S.2d 74, 724 N.E.2d 770, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 4009 (N.Y. 1999).

Workers' Compensation Board, which classified claimant as having permanent partial disability, properly found that he did not suffer loss of earning capacity under CLS Vol Fire Ben § 3(8) where he returned to his regular job duties as electrician following both accidents, his chiropractor did not impose any restrictions on his work subsequent to first accident, at time of second accident, claimant had different employment entailing assembly of electrical components at work bench, which he stated did not require any heavy lifting, and it was not until about one year later when claimant's back condition was exacerbated that chiropractor imposed restrictions on lifting and bending; claimant's testimony that such limitations precluded him from applying for higher paying and more physically demanding positions was irrelevant as to whether he suffered loss of earning capacity under Volunteer Firefighters' Benefit Law. Griffo v Onondaga Hill Volunteer Fire Dep't, 256 A.D.2d 858, 681 N.Y.S.2d 835, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13578 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Evidence supported board's conclusion that claimant's loss of earnings after July 14 was attributable to factors unconnected to back injury she sustained while working as nursing home food service director, where she never complained to employer that her back injury interfered with her work, she continued working until July 14 when she was discharged for poor performance unrelated to her injury, she did not seek new work until 5 months after her termination, she subsequently applied for workers' compensation benefits alleging that her work-related injury rendered her unable to secure new work, and medical evidence credited by board indicated that she suffered mild disability that did not restrict her ability to perform kitchen duties. Holman v Hyde Park Nursing Home, 268 A.D.2d 705, 701 N.Y.S.2d 516, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 251 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

IX. Children and Dependents

The term "dependents" is a word of art referring to a defined group of persons who may claim the compensation award. Lappin v National Container Corp., 37 N.Y.S.2d 800, 179 Misc. 109, 1942 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2102 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1942).

Federal court would adopt New York law in determining whether minor children were in fact the illegitimate issue of a deceased seaman. In re Industrial Transp. Corp., 344 F. Supp. 1311, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13235 (E.D.N.Y. 1972).

357. Child

Death benefits may be awarded to a child begotten after the accident. Crockett v International R. Co., 176 A.D. 45, 162 N.Y.S. 357, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8982 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

The fact that a child was born after the date of the accident does not preclude a finding of dependency, since the Workmen's Compensation Law does not require that children be dependent as of the time of the accident. Thompson v Thomashoff Press, Inc., 31 A.D.2d 848, 297 N.Y.S.2d 254, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4640 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969).

Evidence of welfare payments on behalf of an infant does not establish non-dependency within the meaning of the definition of "child" in subdivision 11 of § 2 of the Workmen's Compensation Law. Thompson v Thomashoff Press, Inc., 31 A.D.2d 848, 297 N.Y.S.2d 254, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4640 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969).

Child whose paternity was unknown and who was born prior to time her mother commenced living with employee was not entitled to recover death benefits upon death of employee under provision of Workmen's Compensation Act awarding benefits to a child and defining child as including an acknowledged illegitimate child dependent upon employee, even though employee in last will and testament referred to child as one of his beloved children. Hagley v Browns of Bellport, 45 A.D.2d 546, 360

N.Y.S.2d 103, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3734 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

358. —Adopted or foster child

Death benefits may not be awarded to a child dependent upon a parent of its foster parents. Winkler v New York Car Wheel Co., 181 A.D. 239, 168 N.Y.S. 826, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9165 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

In defining the word "child" the Legislature did not intend to exclude offspring of natural parents merely because of their adoption by third persons. Shulman v N. Y. Bd. of Fire Underwriters, 15 A.D.2d 700, 223 N.Y.S.2d 312, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12020 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Where adoption proceedings had been instituted prior to the decedent's accident, but the adoption proceedings were not completed until after the accident, the infant was not entitled to workmen's compensation benefits. Landon v Motorola, Inc., 38 A.D.2d 18, 326 N.Y.S.2d 960, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2636 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1971).

359. —Illegitimate

Children born of an illegal second marriage, having been acknowledged by deceased, are dependents. Battalico v Knickerbocker Fireproofing Co., 250 A.D. 258, 294 N.Y.S. 481, 1937 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8317 (N.Y. App. Div. 1937).

The statutory specification of an "acknowledged illegitimate child dependent upon the deceased" as used in subdivision 11 of this section, includes such a child born posthumously. Kluss v Levene's Son, Inc., 269 A.D. 801, 55 N.Y.S.2d 108, 1945 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3912 (N.Y. App. Div. 1945).

An acknowledged illegitimate child dependent is entitled to death benefits. Bamberg v Irving's Auto Repair Shop, 3 A.D.2d 247, 160 N.Y.S.2d 611, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6143 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Death benefits were properly made to three minor children of decedent though there was no existing valid marriage between the decedent and the mother of the children, where it was established that they all lived together as a family and the children were supported by the decedent. Herring v Great Kills Moving & Storage, Inc., 7 A.D.2d 797, 180 N.Y.S.2d 846, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3722 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958), app. denied, 6 N.Y.2d 705, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1696 (N.Y. 1959).

There was substantial evidence to support Workmen's Compensation Board's disallowance of death benefit claim on behalf of child since there was no evidence to indicate that decedent during his lifetime had made the necessary acknowledgement that he was the father of the unborn child for which benefits were sought by child's mother. Preamious Parks v Rex Roofing Co., 53 A.D.2d 748, 384 N.Y.S.2d 231, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13521 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976).

No distinction is made between an acknowledged child born out of wedlock and one not so acknowledged; neither inherits from the putative father. In re Vincent's Estate, 71 N.Y.S.2d 165, 189 Misc. 489, 1947 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2527 (N.Y. Sur. Ct. 1947).

360. —Stepchild

An award of compensation to a stepchild of a common law marriage is proper. Brooks v Owen P. Williams Constr. Co., 261 N.Y. 679, 185 N.E. 789, 261 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 679, 1933 N.Y. LEXIS 1488 (N.Y. 1933).

Although respondent was a child born out of wedlock to the widow of decedent and decedent was not her father, she is nevertheless a stepchild, within the terms of subd. 11. Larsen v Harris Structural Steel Co., 230 A.D. 280, 243 N.Y.S. 654, 1930 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8595 (N.Y. App. Div. 1930).

A step-child actually dependent upon a step-father is entitled to compensation even though the step-child's divorced father is living and liable for his support. Shanley v Slattery Contracting Co., 232 A.D. 860, 248 N.Y.S. 774, 1931 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15838 (N.Y. App. Div. 1931).; See also Brooks v Owen P. Williams Constr. Co., 261 N.Y. 679, 185 N.E. 789, 261 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 679, 1933 N.Y. LEXIS 1488 (N.Y. 1933).

An award of death benefits in favor of a step-son is proper where the step-son was dependent upon the employee for support. Urban v Nolan Machinery Co., 273 A.D. 1042, 78 N.Y.S.2d 712, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5878 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

Where employee commenced living with woman at time she was mother of child and employee and child's mother never entered legal marriage, child was not stepchild of employee and thus could not recover benefits upon employee's death under provision of Workmen's Compensation Act allowing recovery of benefits by stepchild of covered employee. Hagley v Browns of Bellport, 45 A.D.2d 546, 360 N.Y.S.2d 103, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3734 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

Although workman had not actually supported stepchild for some seven years prior to his death, there was substantial evidence to support a finding of "dependency" entitling the stepchild to workmen's compensation death benefits where workman had actually supported the child for the five years he and her mother had lived together and was under a court order, which was in existence at time of his death, to provide support payments for the child, notwithstanding that he made payments under such order only for a short period in 1965. McMillan v Police Dogs, Inc., 52 A.D.2d 369, 384 N.Y.S.2d 36, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12031 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976).

361. —Grandchild

Death benefits are proper to a child dependent upon a grandparent, even though its parent offered out of spite to support it. In re Yeople, 182 A.D. 438, 169 N.Y.S. 584, 1918 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7880 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 223 N.Y. 687, 119 N.E. 1087, 223 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 687, 1918 N.Y. LEXIS 1398 (N.Y. 1918).

An illegitimate grandchild of a deceased employee is entitled to the payment of benefits under the workmen's compensation law. Sheppard v Demps, 266 A.D. 45, 43 N.Y.S.2d 682, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3487 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943), app. dismissed, 291 N.Y. 773, 53 N.E.2d 242, 291 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 773, 1944 N.Y. LEXIS 2026 (N.Y. 1944), app. dismissed, 294 N.Y. 689, 60 N.E.2d 843, 294 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 689, 1945 N.Y. LEXIS 886 (N.Y. 1945).

Dependent stepgrandchildren were entitled to benefits in an award for death benefits. Chaney v George Campbell & Co., 5 A.D.2d 704, 168 N.Y.S.2d 796, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3492 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

362. Parents

In determining the issue of dependency as to the claimants, who were the parents of the deceased employee, the board may base its findings upon evidence as to the domestic burdens and obligations which, without fault or extravagance on their part, produced a situation which had rendered necessary the financial aid they received from the deceased employee for several years prior to her death and which evidence could reasonably be said to continue the dependency status of the parents for the periods and to the degree for which the awards in question were made. Kaiser v U. S. O. Camp Shows, Inc. (1945) 269 App Div 915, 57 NYS2d 503, affd (1946) 296 NY 532, 68 NE2d 606.; See also Mulraney v Brooklyn Rapid Transit Co., 190 A.D. 774, 180 N.Y.S. 654, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4246 (N.Y. App. Div. 1920).

No fair showing of dependency was made on proof that claimant, the mother of the decedent, was living with her husband, receiving money from him and that the decedent was 29 years old, unmarried and lived with both his parents and occasionally paid for food, etc. Rosenberg v Ellenville Steam Laundry, Inc., 283 A.D. 901, 130 N.Y.S.2d 144, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5693 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Decision of Workers' Compensation Board awarding death benefits to deceased worker's aged mother was supported by substantial evidence and in harmony with liberal construction of Workers' Compensation Law where mother's testimony as to amount of support provided by decedent to meet her total needs was more creditable than incomplete estimate provided by her surviving son; lack of itemization of her household, medical and other needs did not bar board's finding, and it was reasonable for board to conclude that loss of decedent's contribution had detrimental effect on mother. Giglia v Berger Industries, 127 A.D.2d 959, 512 N.Y.S.2d 563, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 43442 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987).

363. Spouse

A wife is entitled to compensation as a dependent even though she married the injured employee after the accident. Crockett v

International R. Co., 176 A.D. 45, 162 N.Y.S. 357, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8982 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

Where claimant was a registered nurse employed by appellant hospital, experienced certain cramp-like pain in the calf of her leg and a backache, etc., at 3:00 A. M. one night while at home and next morning was required to assist in bathing, etc., a 200 pound patient and a half hour later experienced pains in her right leg and thigh and later pains in her back so intense as to require cessation of duties, subsequently diagnosed as a herniated disc, medical testimony concerning pre-existence of the disc herniation and its aggravation by the subsequent exertive work was sufficient to support a board finding of compensability. Waldo v Johnstown Hospital, 20 A.D.2d 947, 248 N.Y.S.2d 980, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3932 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

364. Other persons as dependents

An illegitimate half-sister of a deceased employee who was actually dependent upon the deceased is entitled to a death benefit award. Stoehrer v Lampert, 285 A.D. 85, 136 N.Y.S.2d 32, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3284 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

X. Insurance Carrier

An insurance carrier which has received and retained premiums on a policy issued in protection of a membership corporation operating as a country club, and of its employees, while engaged in the business of "forestry and logging," cannot object to payment of indemnity upon the ground that club had no right to engage in said occupations for pecuniary gain. Uhl v Hartwood Club, 177 A.D. 41, 163 N.Y.S. 744, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5200 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 221 N.Y. 588, 116 N.E. 1000, 221 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 588, 1917 N.Y. LEXIS 1449 (N.Y. 1917).

Workers' compensation carrier for employer of injured police officer was entitled to workers' compensation lien for amount expended by it in excess or $50,000 out of $75,000 settlement where $50,000 limit on first-party benefits for basic economic loss from personal injury arising from use or operation of motor vehicle, under CLS Ins §§ 5102(a) and 5104(a) applied as specifically referenced in CLS Work Comp § 29(1-a), and to hold otherwise would result in double recovery for officer and his wife, which result was not intended by § 29(1-a). Kesick v Ulster County Self Ins. Plan, 245 A.D.2d 752, 665 N.Y.S.2d 454, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12970 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

In proceeding under CLS Work Comp § 29(5) for judicial approval of workers' compensation settlement nunc pro tunc, petitioners' misconstruction of applicable law was not reasonable excuse for their 8-month delay in applying for judicial approval where they claimed that, even though they were specifically advised otherwise, they were unaware of rights of workers' compensation insurer to lien on any judgment in third-party action and to approve any settlement. Gilson v National Union Fire Ins. Co., 246 A.D.2d 897, 668 N.Y.S.2d 287, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 528 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

In proceeding under CLS Work Comp § 29(5) for judicial approval of workers' compensation settlement nunc pro tunc, prejudice to workers' compensation insurer resulting from petitioners' 8-month delay in applying for judicial approval was shown where petitioners had potential claim for compensation benefits in excess of $50,000. Gilson v National Union Fire Ins. Co., 246 A.D.2d 897, 668 N.Y.S.2d 287, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 528 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Supreme Court did not abuse its discretion in denying application under CLS Work Comp § 29(5) for judicial approval of workers' compensation settlement nunc pro tunc where petitioners did not have reasonable excuse for their 8-month delay in applying for judicial approval, and resulting prejudice to workers' compensation insurer was shown. Gilson v National Union Fire Ins. Co., 246 A.D.2d 897, 668 N.Y.S.2d 287, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 528 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Substantial evidence supported Workers' Compensation Board's decision that self-insured employer's carrier had reserved employer's right to credit against claimant's future benefit awards where board could reasonably have interpreted carrier's written consent—notifying claimant that it intended to seek reimbursement for amounts paid to her in excess of $50,000 settlement—as express reservation of its right to credit against future awards of compensation benefits. Whitcomb v Xerox Corp., 246 A.D.2d 947, 667 N.Y.S.2d 849, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 730 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Where, in a workers' compensation case, two third-party administrators handled the case at various times on behalf of a carrier, and there was some confusion as to which carrier handled the case at a given time, the carrier was the real party in interest, under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law §§ 2(12) and 54(2), and there was no dispute that it was properly noticed and represented by counsel throughout the proceeding, so if there was any failure to notify one of the administrators of a hearing, it did not require reversal of the Workers' Compensation Board's decision. Wilson v Chi. Bridge & Iron, 2 A.D.3d 1004, 768 N.Y.S.2d 405, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13147 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

Since a workers' compensation carrier is clearly and unambiguously not included within the statutory definition of an employer (Workers' Compensation Law, § 2, subd 3), and the terms "employer" and "insurance carrier" are, in most cases, set out separately and referred to as separate entities throughout the statute, such insurance carrier may not be equated with the employer for purposes of the employer's immunity from common-law tort liability. (Workers' Compensation Law, § 11.) Had it been the intent of the Legislature to exempt insurance carriers from third-party common-law liability, it could have done so expressly or by unmistakable inference. Cline v Avery Abrasives, Inc., 96 Misc. 2d 258, 409 N.Y.S.2d 91, 1978 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2591 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1978).

Excess workers' compensation insurance carrier was entitled to summary judgment declaring that $1 million limit on employer's liability coverage under policy issued to self-insured employer was legally valid and enforceable, and that it was therefore not obligated to provide unlimited coverage in underlying personal injury action, where employer was self-insured with permission of Chair of Workers' Compensation Board, and had obtained policy in accordance with Workers' Compensation Law and 12 NYCRR § 316.2. Oneida Ltd. v Utica Mut. Ins. Co., 178 Misc. 2d 572, 679 N.Y.S.2d 887, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 519 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1998).

Statement contained in self-insured employer's umbrella policy, that "In New York State, Employer's Liability is not applicable when New York Workers' Compensation Law applies," was not specific disclaimer of umbrella coverage for employer's liability coverage under excess policy obtained by self-insured from another carrier, and thus carrier that issued umbrella policy was obligated to provide coverage for any liability exceeding $1 million up to $10 million coverage limit in umbrella policy. Oneida Ltd. v Utica Mut. Ins. Co., 178 Misc. 2d 572, 679 N.Y.S.2d 887, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 519 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1998).

Although the board was not mandated to direct the liquidation bureau to make an Aggregate Trust Fund (ATF) deposit, N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 27(2) gave the board discretion to direct any "insurance carrier" to make an ATF deposit; however, remittal was necessary because the board specifically premised its holding on a finding that this was a mandatory case. Matter of Turdo v Dellicato Vineyards, 73 A.D.3d 143, 900 N.Y.S.2d 156, 2010 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2675 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2010).

Insurer has right to charge premiums for independent contractors of employer if there is reasonable risk that Workers' Compensation Board would hold that such persons are employees rather than independent contractors. Insurance Department, Opinions of General Counsel, Opinion Number 05-03-15.

XI. Manufacture, Construction and Operation

The definition of manufacture contained in subdivision 13 includes the designing, planning or inspecting of electrical wiring layouts by a draftsman. Gramlich v Board of Education, 272 A.D. 965, 71 N.Y.S.2d 609, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4413 (N.Y. App. Div. 1947), aff'd, 297 N.Y. 349, 79 N.E.2d 437, 297 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 349, 1948 N.Y. LEXIS 844 (N.Y. 1948).

XII. Injury Occurring Out of State; Injury to Employee of Out of State Employer

367. In general

Benefits under the New York Compensation Act may, in an appropriate case, be awarded for injuries occurring outside this state. Post v Burger & Gohlke, 216 N.Y. 544, 111 N.E. 351, 216 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 544, 1916 N.Y. LEXIS 1521 (N.Y. 1916).; Smith v Heine Safety Boiler Co., 224 N.Y. 9, 119 N.E. 878, 224 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 9, 1918 N.Y. LEXIS 850 (N.Y. 1918).; Cameron v Ellis Const. Co., 252 N.Y. 394, 169 N.E. 622, 252 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 394, 1930 N.Y. The test is the place where the employment is located. If the employment outside the state is of a transitory nature and incidental to general employment in New York, the New York Act applies; but it does not apply to injuries in course of employment at a fixed place outside the state. Cameron v Ellis Const. Co., 252 N.Y. 394, 169 N.E. 622, 252 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 394, 1930 N.Y. LEXIS 636 (N.Y. 1930).; Flinn v Remington Rand, Inc., 277 N.Y. 641, 14 N.E.2d 199, 277 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 641, 1938 N.Y. LEXIS 1104 (N.Y. 1938).; Bauss v Consolidated Chimney Co., 270 A.D. 70, 58 N.Y.S.2d 717, 1945 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2803 (N.Y. App. Div. 1945).

With respect to out-of-state employments and accidents, jurisdiction of the New York Workmen's Compensation Board is governed by the facts of the particular case. McMains v Trans World Airlines, Inc., 18 A.D.2d 956, 237 N.Y.S.2d 812, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4345 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 13 N.Y.2d 593, 240 N.Y.S.2d 1025, 190 N.E.2d 905, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 1866 (N.Y. 1963).

Rights of parties are governed by the law under which workmen's compensation benefits are accepted. In re Estate of O'Connor, 21 A.D.2d 333, 250 N.Y.S.2d 696, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3598 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1964).

While there is no hard and fast rule for determining jurisdiction applicable to all workmen's compensation cases, the issue as to employment location is ordinarily governed by the facts of the particular case. And it is not necessary for the board to find that the employer has a fixed location within the State where there is sufficient evidence in the record to demonstrate that the claimant spent most of his actual working time within the boundaries of the State and that the accident happened therein. Rhodes v Mushroom Transp. Co., 23 A.D.2d 421, 261 N.Y.S.2d 340, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3521 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965), aff'd, 18 N.Y.2d 464, 276 N.Y.S.2d 873, 223 N.E.2d 334, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 949 (N.Y. 1966).

368. Sufficient contacts test, generally

Board has jurisdiction if facts presented show sufficient significant contacts with New York that it can reasonably be said that employed is in New York. Rutledge v Al. G. Kelly & Miller Bros. Circus, 24 A.D.2d 521, 260 N.Y.S.2d 136, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4007 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965), aff'd, 18 N.Y.2d 464, 276 N.Y.S.2d 873, 223 N.E.2d 334, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 949 (N.Y. 1966).

Determination as to employment's location is governed by the facts of the particular case and if sufficient significant contacts with New York appear so that it can reasonably be said that the employment is located in New York then the Workmen's Compensation Board has jurisdiction. Atkinson v Marquette Mfg. Co., 24 A.D.2d 795, 263 N.Y.S.2d 927, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3231 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

If sufficient significant contacts with New York appear so that it can reasonably be said that the employment is located in that state, when the workmen's compensation board has jurisdiction; but neither this nor any other single factor constitutes a fixed, invariable touchstone by which the presence or absence of jurisdiction in any particular case may be determined. Atkinson v Marquette Mfg. Co., 24 A.D.2d 795, 263 N.Y.S.2d 927, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3231 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

The "sufficient contacts" standards enable New York to take jurisdiction under the Workmen's Compensation Law if there are "adequate" contacts in the state, despite the fact that another state may have contacts also. Rappa v Malan Constr. Co. of Koppers Co., 33 A.D.2d 846, 305 N.Y.S.2d 1012, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2600 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969).

The criterion of a "fixed location" has been replaced with a broader standard, the test being whether there are sufficient significant contacts with New York so that it could reasonably be said that the employment is located in such state. Rappa v Malan Constr. Co. of Koppers Co., 33 A.D.2d 846, 305 N.Y.S.2d 1012, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2600 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969).

Pennsylvania's worker's compensation law applied to action arising from work-related injury to New York resident employed by Pennsylvania subcontractor performing work in Pennsylvania, even though general contractor was New York corporation and choice-of-law issue involved loss-allocating rule which would favor application of New York law, since (1) subcontractor contracted with general contractor to perform work in Pennsylvania and hired plaintiff from Pennsylvania local union hall, (2) relevant collective bargaining agreement provided that employer was to provide workers' compensation insurance in Pennsylvania, (3) plaintiff applied for and received benefits under Pennsylvania law, (4) Pennsylvania legislature had clearly expressed its interest in having its workers' compensation law apply to all industrial accidents occurring within its state, (5) New York's interests in seeing that its injured resident receive benefits was satisfied, and (6) Pennsylvania law was neither anachronistic nor unfair. Roach v McGuire & Bennett, Inc., 146 A.D.2d 89, 539 N.Y.S.2d 138, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2823 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

369. Employee of out of state employer injured in the course of work in New York

An action for negligence cannot be maintained in New York for injury to or death of an employee of an out of state employer, where the employer's applicable workmen's compensation law covers the claim. Barnhart v American Concrete Steel Co., 227 N.Y. 531, 125 N.E. 675, 227 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 531, 1920 N.Y. LEXIS 868 (N.Y. 1920).

Painter working for Pennsylvania employer, widow's claim having been denied by Pennsylvania Commission. McMahon v Gretzula, 238 A.D. 877, 262 N.Y.S. 793, 1933 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10536 (N.Y. App. Div. 1933).; McMahon v Gretzula, 242 A.D. 742, 274 N.Y.S. 992, 1934 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7097 (N.Y. App. Div. 1934), aff'd, 267 N.Y. 573, 196 N.E. 586, 267 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 573, 1935 N.Y. Mason rebuilding partitions as employee of New Jersey corporation. Grasso v Donaldson-Reynolds, Inc., 254 A.D. 913, 5 N.Y.S.2d 643, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8276 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 279 N.Y. 584, 17 N.E.2d 449, 279 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 584, 1938 N.Y. LEXIS 844 (N.Y. 1938).

Workman on demolition job for Pennsylvania corporation which had secured compensation under Pennsylvania statute but was uninsured in New York. Adams v Max Solomon Co., 265 A.D. 427, 39 N.Y.S.2d 492, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6315 (N.Y. App. Div.), reh'g denied, 266 A.D. 759, 41 N.Y.S.2d 956, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4288 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943).

Carpenter employed by Massachusetts corporation sent to New York to work on bridge construction job. Lane v Fitzgerald Const. Co., 265 A.D. 1026, 39 N.Y.S.2d 61, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6675 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943).

Bricklayer, resident of Illinois, killed in fall from chimney under construction by Illinois employer. Bauss v Consolidated Chimney Co., 270 A.D. 70, 58 N.Y.S.2d 717, 1945 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2803 (N.Y. App. Div. 1945).

Where employer was a California corporation maintaining a warehouse in New Jersey to supply a chain of retail stores in New York City, employee whose chief duty was to make deliveries from the warehouse to the chain of stores was employed in this state and Compensation Board had jurisdiction to make award of death benefits where employee was involved in a fatal accident in this state. Coyle v Safeway Stores, Inc., 281 A.D. 933, 119 N.Y.S.2d 617, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3799 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Although a decedent was hired in New Jersey, was paid, resided, started days operations, received instructions and reported to New Jersey he was none the less employed in New York for purposes of the Compensation Law where his employer did business in New York and decedent's job was to deliver beer to employers customers in New York. Cafiero v P. Ballantine & Sons, 1 A.D.2d 527, 151 N.Y.S.2d 862, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5422 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 2 N.Y.2d 705, 1956 N.Y. LEXIS 1178 (N.Y. 1956).

Where the claimant, a resident of Pennsylvania, was a truck driver employed by a Pennsylvania Corporation, which employment took him from the terminal in Pennsylvania to various locations in New York and eventually back to the terminal and he was injured within New York when the truck he was operating left the highway and as a result of the accident he was hospitalized and received medical attention in New York before returning to Pennsylvania, the finding of the board that "the employer's conduct of its business constituted its doing business at a fixed location in New York State and that claimant's work was so connected with the conduct of the employer's business in New York to support a finding that claimant's employment was located in New York" was sustained on the ground that the facts showed sufficient significant contacts with the State of New York so that it could be reasonably said that employment for compensation purposes was located here and accordingly the board had jurisdiction. Rhodes v Mushroom Transp. Co., 23 A.D.2d 421, 261 N.Y.S.2d 340, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3521 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965), aff'd, 18 N.Y.2d 464, 276 N.Y.S.2d 873, 223 N.E.2d 334, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 949 (N.Y. 1966).

370. —Temporary or transitory work in state

A resident of Pennsylvania in the employ of a Pennsylvania firm detailed to drill an oil well across the border in New York. Claimant's work was transitory where he was employed in New York and paid from New York and was injured in Maryland and later in New Jersey; and jurisdiction is in New York. Kjersgaard v F. H. Sparks Co., 280 A.D. 1009, 116 N.Y.S.2d 782, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4558 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

Employer was engaged in cutting lumber by use of a portable mill which was moved from tract to tract. For 2 or 3 years employer had cut timber in New York but following claimant's rehiring, mill was moved to Pennsylvania where claimant was injured when a tree fell across his back. Claimant lived in New York and his expenses back and forth to Pennsylvania were paid by the employer. The board properly determined that the work was transitory. The insurance policy of the employer referring only to the location of the office-residence of the employer, but stating that it covered any injury sustained in the U. S. or Canada covered the Pennsylvania injury. Acceptance by carrier of additional premium on policy after accident estopped it from denying coverage, in view of the fact that it was aware of the accident and nevertheless rendered bill for premium based on inclusion of claimant's salary. Decision affirmed but appeal was not on such an unmeritorious issue that a penalty should be added under § 23. Brueser v Blackman, 8 A.D.2d 872, 186 N.Y.S.2d 709, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8275 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 9 A.D.2d 601, 189 N.Y.S.2d 121, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10613 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959), app. denied, 7 N.Y.2d 705, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1824 (N.Y. 1959).

Employer, with its principal office in New York City, operated a large business with plants in many states. Decedent was hired in

New York, was paid from New York office by checks drawn on New York bank and at time of accident was temporarily assigned for training in Virginia. He was required to live near his work and was paid an allowance toward expenses in addition to his salary. He was subject to reassignment from New York. Held: the Board properly assumed jurisdiction. Decedent died as a result of injuries received in an automobile accident while on the way from temporary living quarters to his job site. Held: injuries resulting in death arose out of and in the course of employment. Houghton v Babcock & Wilcox Co., 9 A.D.2d 575, 189 N.Y.S.2d 436, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7433 (N.Y. Claimant employed by New York employer to paint railroad bridges in various locations in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, the injury being suffered in Pennsylvania. Vatouios v Markakis, 273 A.D. 832, 76 N.Y.S.2d 61, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4834 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 298 N.Y. 733, 83 N.E.2d 143, 298 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 733, 1948 N.Y. LEXIS 1286 (N.Y. 1948).

Employee working in Pennsylvania as a shovel oiler in connection with highway construction, employer maintaining its principal office in New York. Introne v Carbisello, 273 A.D. 934, 77 N.Y.S.2d 898, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5329 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

Carpenter injured on a construction job in Maine who was hired in New York to work both in and out of the state by a New York corporation whose employees were covered by a compensation policy written in New York. Hawco v William Neill Constructors, Inc., 275 A.D. 878, 88 N.Y.S.2d 640, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4861 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

New York Workmen's Compensation Board did not have jurisdiction where the claimant, a plumber, worked in New York for his employer for 5 or 6 years and then went to New Jersey and was hired there for a project for which the employer was the contractor on a job that was to last for 2 years. Claimant was on employer's New Jersey payroll, was paid on the basis of the local union scale, was under the supervision of the New Jersey foreman and deductions for unemployment insurance under the New Jersey law were made from his wages, upon which, also, the employer paid to appellant-carrier a premium for workmen's compensation insurance covering New Jersey employment. Gubner v Malan Plumbing Co., 3 A.D.2d 620, 158 N.Y.S.2d 310, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3436 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

373. Injury arising from out of state work incidental to New York employment

Injuries arise out of and in course of employment of an employee where his contract of employment was consummated in New York and his work outside of state emanated from and was supervised by his employer's New York office and was transitory and incidental and in advancement of his employer's interests and work. Flinn v Remington Rand, Inc., 277 N.Y. 641, 14 N.E.2d 199, 277 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 641, 1938 N.Y. LEXIS 1104 (N.Y. 1938).

The Workmen's Compensation Board should not have concluded that work of claimant, a Pennsylvania resident, in Indiana was incidental to a New York employment and should not have awarded compensation where claimant had been working for a Pennsylvania employer who made an agreement with a New York Corporation to act as field manager and supply all labor, the New York corporation was to pay all wages, the employer instructed claimant to go to New York where he worked for several weeks and claimant was thereafter sent to Indiana where he was injured. Cradduck v Hallen Co., 304 N.Y. 240, 107 N.E.2d 61, 304 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 240, 1952 N.Y. LEXIS 735 (N.Y. 1952).

The Workmen's Compensation Board has jurisdiction in case of an injury to an employee whose work occasionally takes him outside the state as an incident to the employer's business within the state, where the employee lives and has been hired. Baldi v Interstate Motor Freight System, 277 A.D. 959, 99 N.Y.S.2d 635, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3994 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).; Gardener v Horseheads Const. Co., 171 A.D. 66, 156 N.Y.S. 899, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9449 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

374. Employee of New York employer assigned to fixed or permanent out of state location

Employee, resident of Canada injured in gravel pit operated in Canada by a Massachusetts corporation in connection with highway construction in New York. Cameron v Ellis Const. Co., 252 N.Y. 394, 169 N.E. 622, 252 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 394, 1930 N.Y. LEXIS 636 (N.Y. 1930).

Policeman on building operation of New York corporation. Copeland v Foundation Co., 256 N.Y. 568, 177 N.E. 143, 256 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 568, 1931 N.Y. LEXIS 1148 (N.Y. 1931).

Painter engaged in painting an industrial plant in New Jersey. Amaxis v N. A. Vassilaros, Inc., 258 N.Y. 544, 180 N.E. 325, 258 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 544, 1931 N.Y. LEXIS 800 (N.Y. 1931).

Carpenter on construction job in the Virgin Islands. Jensen v Boudin Contracting Corp., 258 A.D. 1009, 16 N.Y.S.2d 869, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8631 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 283 N.Y. 572, 27 N.E.2d 437, 283 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 572, 1940 N.Y. LEXIS 1024 (N.Y. 1940).

Mechanic sent to job to work under local superintendent, killed after working five months, employer having secured the payment of compensation under West Virginia statute. Florio v Delbalso Const. Co., 264 A.D. 965, 37 N.Y.S.2d 144, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5564 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

Painter painting a New Jersey pier at the wage scale prevailing in New Jersey; employer insured under the New Jersey Workmen's Compensation Law. Van Beck v Allied Cleaning Contractors, Inc., 266 A.D. 806, 41 N.Y.S.2d 327, 1943 N.Y. App. Div.

LEXIS 4556 (N.Y. App. Div.), app. dismissed, 291 N.Y. 660, 51 N.E.2d 935, 291 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 660, 1943 N.Y. LEXIS 1758 (N.Y. 1943).

Longshoreman on New Jersey pier. Raiola v Union Stevedoring Corp., 268 A.D. 837, 50 N.Y.S.2d 242, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3699 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944).

Aircraft engineer returning from official visit to New York plant of Pennsylvania employer. Sehlmeyer v Brewster Aeronautical Corp., 271 A.D. 853, 65 N.Y.S.2d 837, 1946 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3410 (N.Y. App. Div. 1946).

Bridge painter fatally injured on an eight month job in Maryland for which he was specially hired under contract of employment entered into in New York city. Stephens v Hudson Maintenance Co., 274 A.D. 1077, 85 N.Y.S.2d 505, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6133 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

With respect to a death benefits claim based on death of one employed by a comedian as a drummer in the comedian's night club act and killed in a traffic accident en route from New York to Las Vegas, sufficient contacts with New York were shown to give rise to jurisdiction in this state where the hiring was here, the employer's office was here, travel expenses to and from the out-of-state location were paid, the decedent was a resident of New York, and compensation coverage was procured by his employer here. Maisel v Berle, 11 A.D.2d 831, 202 N.Y.S.2d 562, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8500 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), reh'g denied, 11 A.D.2d 961, 206 N.Y.S.2d 568, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8118 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

A determination by the board that the claimant was hired to work exclusively in Nebraska and Iowa and that such control, if any, as emanated from New York employer, was insufficient to confer New York State jurisdiction, was supported by substantial evidence that at the time of the accident the work which claimant was performing was at a fixed geographic area outside of the state of New York and he could not avail himself of the benefits of the Workmen's Compensation Law. Spomer v Westron Corp., 35 A.D.2d 621, 312 N.Y.S.2d 730, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4120 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970), app. denied, 28 N.Y.2d 481, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 1674 (N.Y. 1971).

375. Employees subject to direction or control from New York office

A claimant employed in New York and controlled from New York is a New York employee unless he has a fixed place of employment in the sense that he stays at one location as opposed to a position of mobility, even though such employment be entirely without the state of New York. Baduski v S. Gumpert Co. (1951) 277 App Div 591, 102 NYS2d 297, app dismd (1951) 302 NY 702, 98 NE2d 491.; to the same effect, see Roth v A. C. Horn Co. (1941) 262 App Div 922, 28 NYS2d 808, affd (1941) 287 NY 545, 38 NE2d 221.; Goddard v Taylor Instrument Co., 245 A.D. 876, 282 N.Y.S. 182, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11348 (N.Y. App. Div. 1935).

Claimant was hired in New York by the then director emeritus of museum owned by appellant foundation. There was proof that appellant had authorized the director to hire a secretary and that claimant's work was related to Foundation which paid claimant's salary and made the usual deductions therefrom. A finding that claimant was employee of appellant was adequately supported. Although the accident occurred in Connecticut, hiring was in New York from which it was dominated. Test of New York employment is to have sufficient contracts with state so that it can reasonably be said that employment is located here. Award affirmed. Carlson v Solomon R. Guggenheim Foundation, 8 A.D.2d 892, 187 N.Y.S.2d 46, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8307 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), modified, 8 A.D.2d 912, 187 N.Y.S.2d 46, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8103 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

A finding that the New York Workmen's Compensation Board had jurisdiction because the claimant was engaged in New York employment at the time of injury was sustained where it appeared that he was originally employed on a day-by-day basis as a laborer to take care of elephants at the winter quarters of a circus in Florida, he came to New York City with the circus where it had a fixed-week engagement, and, during that time, and when injured, was being paid by, and working under supervision of, the New York office of the circus. Herman v Ringling Bros. Barnum & Bailey, 10 A.D.2d 745, 197 N.Y.S.2d 538, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11185 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

There being substantial evidence that a deceased employee was hired in New York and supervised from the Buffalo office of his employer, the New York Workmen's Compensation Board had jurisdiction of a claim for death benefits where more than half of his working time was spent in New York State, notwithstanding he lived in Erie, Pennsylvania, and operated from his home there and the accident in which he was killed occurred within a few blocks of his home. O'Connor v Johnson & Johnson, 12 A.D.2d 846, 211 N.Y.S.2d 1, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13204 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 9 N.Y.2d 611, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1708 (N.Y. 1961).

Claimant had sufficient significant contacts with New York State to be considered a New York employee rather than an Indiana employee where, although the home office of his employer company was in Indianapolis, he was district manager for New York State generally and New England and subject to direction out of the New York City office, and, at the time of the accident in question, he was headed in the general direction of Boston on direct orders from the New York office. Armstrong v Aero Mayflower Transit Co., 14 A.D.2d 958, 221 N.Y.S.2d 225, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7903 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

The fact that injuries sustained by an employee occur outside of New York State is not conclusive as to whether his claim is, or is not, compensable under New York law, and other factors must be taken into consideration such as the place of hiring, the place from which the employment was controlled, place of residence of the employee, place from which the compensation insurance was secured, and the place from which the employer paid employee's out-of-state expenses. Tuffarella v Erie R. Co., 17 A.D.2d 484, 236 N.Y.S.2d 503, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6238 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1962), aff'd, 13 N.Y.2d 1045, 245 N.Y.S.2d 769, 195 N.E.2d 454, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 847 (N.Y. 1963).

Where decedent was hired in New York to work in Mississippi on one job location, New York had jurisdiction over a workman's compensation claim under evidence that the deceased was a New York resident at the time of his hiring which occurred in New York, he lived temporarily in Mississippi with his wife and children in a rented trailer some distance from the construction site, the decedent was returned to New York for burial and his widow returned with her children to live in New York after her husband's death, the employer had its permanent, primary office in New York where financial operations were conducted, and assets controlled, establishing that base of operations was in New York, decedent was paid according to the union wage scale prevailing in New York, he received payment from the employer for his transportation expenses from New York to Mississippi, where both the work performed and the payrolls were subject to supervision by the New York office. Rappa v Malan Constr. Co. of Koppers Co., 33 A.D.2d 846, 305 N.Y.S.2d 1012, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2600 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969).

The New York Workers' Compensation Board properly determined that sufficient significant contacts with New York existed to justify its jurisdiction over decedent's claim where decedent's employer, a publisher, had its principal office in Albany, New York with editorial, marketing and international sales offices in New York City, where decedent was originally interviewed by the area sales manager in Tulsa, Oklahoma but was not hired until he was interviewed and approved by the marketing staff in the New York office, where decedent's quotas were fixed by the New York office, where all sales orders were sent by decedent directly to the Albany office, and where all commissions, bonuses and other compensation, as well as the reimbursement of expenses, came from the Albany office. Stacy v Matthew Bender Co., 86 A.D.2d 913, 448 N.Y.S.2d 532, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15587 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1982).

In workers' compensation action, questions of dependency and contribution are questions of fact and appellate court should not disturb Workers' Compensation Board's determination unless there is no substantial evidence to support it. Giglia v Berger Industries, 127 A.D.2d 959, 512 N.Y.S.2d 563, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 43442 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987).

376. Sales representatives of New York employers

Salesman, resident of Iowa, hired at employer's plant in Rochester, New York, who was killed in automobile accident in Missouri: Hospers v J. Hungerford Smith Co., 230 N.Y. 616, 130 N.E. 916, 230 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 616, 1921 N.Y. LEXIS 894 (N.Y. 1921).

Salesman, resident of Colorado, hired by mail from New York, who was fatally injured in automobile accident in Colorado. Ayers v Dunn Pen & Pencil Co., 244 N.Y. 557, 155 N.E. 895, 244 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 557, 1927 N.Y. LEXIS 1088 (N.Y. 1927).

Salesman, resident of North Carolina, hired by correspondence from New York, who was injured in automobile accident in Virginia. Wagoner v Brown Mfg. Co., 249 A.D. 886, 292 N.Y.S. 599, 1937 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10073 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 274 N.Y. 593, 10 N.E.2d 567, 274 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 593, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 981 (N.Y. 1937).

District sales manager in charge of Georgia office, hired at employer's plant in New York, who was killed in automobile accident in Georgia. Flinn v Remington Rand, 251 A.D. 578, 297 N.Y.S. 899, 1937 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7001 (N.Y. App. Div. 1937), aff'd, 277 N.Y. 641, 14 N.E.2d 199, 277 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 641, 1938 N.Y. LEXIS 1104 (N.Y. 1938).

Traveling salesman, out of state resident, whose territory was entirely outside of New York where the employer had one of its main offices in which the claimant was hired and from which he received orders, instructions and his compensation. Baduski v S. Gumpert Co., 277 A.D. 591, 102 N.Y.S.2d 297, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5643 (N.Y. App. Div.), app. dismissed, 302 N.Y. 702, 98 N.E.2d 491, 302 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 702, 1951 N.Y. LEXIS 867 (N.Y. 1951).

The New York Workmen's Compensation Board had no jurisdiction over a death claim where the decedent was employed as an advertising space salesman with his territory in parts of Illinois, Iowa and Missouri and his employer, a New York corporation had its principal place of business in New York since direct control of and all instructions to the decedent were not solely within the jurisdiction of the New York office. Alexander v United Newspaper Magazine Corp., 4 A.D.2d 890, 167 N.Y.S.2d 109, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4277 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957), aff'd, 5 N.Y.2d 820, 181 N.Y.S.2d 214, 155 N.E.2d 123, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 720 (N.Y. 1958).

Decedent, a salesman, was hired in New York and was assigned territory outside the State. He was fatally injured in accident on Alabama highway. Compensation Board properly found that decedent's work was transitory and not conducted at fixed point outside New York and properly made award to widow by reason of decedent's death. Evidence showed he was on direct route to New York City to attend sales meeting. Beauchamp v McGraw-Hill Publishing Co., 6 A.D.2d 450, 179 N.Y.S.2d 163, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4276 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958), app. denied, 5 N.Y.2d 710, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1984 (N.Y. 1959).

Salesman who covered Ohio but reported directly to his employer in, and was paid directly from Buffalo. Burton v Ziegler Pharmacal Corp., 9 A.D.2d 811, 192 N.Y.S.2d 509, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6158 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Where deceased was a sales manager supervising other employees and worked out of his New York home, employer was qualified to do business in New York and required deceased to locate in New York area, finding that New York Workmen's Compensation Board had jurisdiction was supported by substantial evidence, and having become a factual finding, Appellate Division was without power to disturb it. Atkinson v Marquette Mfg. Co., 24 A.D.2d 795, 263 N.Y.S.2d 927, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3231 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

377. Sales representatives of out of state employers covering New York territory

Fact that decedent sales manager was subject to ultimate control of Minnesota home office was less significant than ordinarily would be case in determining whether New York Workmen's Compensation Board had jurisdiction over claim for death benefits in view of fact that decedent was himself a supervisory employee. Atkinson v Marquette Mfg. Co., 24 A.D.2d 795, 263 N.Y.S.2d 927, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3231 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

378. Other particular applications

An employee, who had from time to time worked for both a New Jersey and a New York corporation which were organized to do waterproofing and steam cleaning of buildings and were both entirely owned by a single stockholder and who had not worked for either corporation for 10 months prior to working for the New Jersey corporation was employed in New York and hence, the New York Workmen's Compensation Board had jurisdiction. Nashko v Standard Water Proofing Co., 4 N.Y.2d 199, 173 N.Y.S.2d 565, 149 N.E.2d 859, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1066 (N.Y. 1958).

Where the claimant was hired at the New York office of his employer as an overseas representative and was stationed in England and France during the course of his employment, but employer paid for return transportation to New York and paid living expenses of employee while abroad, there was sufficient evidence to justify the jurisdiction of New York to make a compensation award. Longshore v United Seamen's Service, Inc., 1 A.D.2d 714, 146 N.Y.S.2d 791, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3730 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1955).

An employee's injuries arose out of and in course of his employment by a New York firm where he was hired by the firm for training to take a position with a Chicago corporation in which the partners were principal stockholders, paid during the training period by the partners, and injured in a Pennsylvania automobile accident while en route to Chicago in his own car per instructions to take up his job there. Solow v Regency Thermographers, Inc., 16 A.D.2d 859, 227 N.Y.S.2d 989, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9704 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

The facts disclosed sufficient contacts with New York to warrant assumption of jurisdiction by the Workmen's Compensation Board where it appeared that claimant was hired by a New York partnership at the request of an Illinois corporation in which the partners were principal stockholders, to be employed by such corporation in Chicago, and, following two weeks training for the job at the New York plant, for which he was paid by the New York firm, departed for Chicago in his own car to take up his employment there and was severely injured en route in a Pennsylvania automobile accident. Solow v Regency Thermographers, Inc., 16 A.D.2d 859, 227 N.Y.S.2d 989, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9704 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

The New York Workmen's Compensation Board could properly take jurisdiction of a claim for death benefits in behalf of the widow of an airline pilot who was killed in a Brazilian crash of a German airliner, having been specially assigned to the German airline by his employer corporation, which had headquarters at Kansas City, where decedent was originally hired, but thereafter assigned at various different times to various bases or "domiciles," his last such assignment being to Idlewild, his employment having substantial connection with New York State. McMains v Trans World Airlines, Inc., 18 A.D.2d 956, 237 N.Y.S.2d 812, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4345 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 13 N.Y.2d 593, 240 N.Y.S.2d 1025, 190 N.E.2d 905, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 1866 (N.Y. 1963).

Evidence supported administrative finding that claimant's decedent was out-of-state employee where he had moved to Florida with no intention of returning to New York, and was injured while overseeing construction of his employer's new plant in Florida. Lupoli v Serve-Queen, Inc., 130 A.D.2d 844, 515 N.Y.S.2d 629, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 46855 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987).

8. Employer liability for injury to employees rendering emergency aid

9. —Fire fighting activities

The director of Wassaic State School has no authority to direct employees of the institution to fight fires off the premises. Employees obeying such direction would not be covered by workmen's compensation if injured. 1944 NY Ops Atty Gen June 5.

Employees in the fire department of institutions under the jurisdiction of the Department of Correction, who are directed to fight fires off the premises pursuant to a mutual assistance arrangement as provided in § 6-c of the Correction Law, are covered by Workmen's Compensation. 1947 NY Ops Atty Gen April 21.

Derivation Notes: Substance transferred from § 2 and substance of former § 3 transferred to § 2.

Editor's Notes: Laws 1935, ch 327 added new Group 20 to § 3 without specifying sub. 1.).

Laws 1975, ch 1054 amended the effective date of L 1974, ch 1053 from September 1, 1974 to April 1, 1975.

Laws 2019, ch 105, § 1, eff January 1, 2020, provides:

Section 1. This act shall be known and may be cited as the "farm laborers fair labor practices act".

Laws 2019, ch 105, § 2, eff January 1, 2020, provide:

§ 2. Legislative findings and intent.

1. The legislature finds that agriculture is one of New York's leading and most important industries, resulting in over $5 billion annually and making New York a global leader in many crops and agricultural products. Agriculture plays an essential role in the continued economic growth and vitality of New York state. According to the United States Department of Agriculture's 2017 Agricultural Census, 98% of New York's farms are family owned and these farms contributed $2.4 billion to the state's GDP in 2017.

2. The legislature further finds that the success of New York's robust agriculture industry is due to the collaborative work between farmers and farm laborers. However, farm laborers are one of the few classes of employees that are not covered by the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act or the National Labor Relations Act (NLRA), denying these valuable employees the same basic labor protections and the right to collective bargaining that almost all other private sector workers enjoy. Despite regularly working 50, 60, 70 or even more hours a week doing arduous and difficult work, often with heavy equipment, pesticides, fertilizers and other dangerous materials and in sometimes hazardous situations, farm laborers remain excluded from collective bargaining statutes and the right to a day of rest, overtime and other labor protections that are in place at the state and/or federal level for other workers.

3. The legislature further finds that this industry is subject to unique and unpredictable factors including climate and weather, pricing and market requirements, seasonal harvests, immigration, and various federal and state laws, rules and regulations that directly impact farmers and require a unique balance and application of traditional labor protections to ensure farm laborers have a voice in their own terms and conditions of employment and access to basic labor protections while also creating adaptability and responsiveness to the unique circumstances of farm operations.

4. The legislature further finds that the labor standards included in this bill are intended solely for the purposes of transitioning into a modern structure of rights and benefits for farm laborers that achieve harmonious labor relations and stability of operations in the agricultural industry and are not intended for any other industry or sector of the economy.

Laws 2019, ch 105, § 25, eff January 1, 2020, provides:

§ 25. This act shall take effect January 1, 2020; provided, however that the provisions of section nine of this act shall take effect January 1, 2021.

Amendment Notes The 2018 amendment by ch 476, § 10, substituted "firefighters" for "firemen" twice in the second sentence of 1 (Group 17).

The 2019 amendment by ch 105, § 10, deleted "other than farm laborers" following "employees" in 1 (Group 14-a); and deleted "employed during any part of the twelve consecutive months beginning April first of any calendar year preceded by a calendar year in which the cash remuneration paid to all farm laborers aggregated twelve hundred dollars or more" following "laborers" in 1 (Group 14-b).

I. Generally

1. In general; purpose

The purpose of the Work. Comp. Law is the regulation of industrial occupations involving special hazards. Freess v Kleinau, 190 A.D. 131, 179 N.Y.S. 347, 1919 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4088 (N.Y. App. Div. 1919).

Compensation is required only if there be one or more employees, for without employees there is not employer and, of course, no need for insurance coverage nor any useful purpose served in carrying any such coverage. Martinez v Ficano, 28 A.D.2d 215, 284 N.Y.S.2d 270, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3051 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1967), app. denied, 21 N.Y.2d 642, 1968 N.Y. LEXIS 1739 (N.Y. 1968).

2. Construction

Employees carrying on work in a charitable institution come within the provisions of group 18 of this section and, unless they fall within the excepted classes, are covered by it provided they are employed "under any contract of hire, express or implied, oral or written." Hall v Salvation Army, 261 N.Y. 110, 184 N.E. 691, 261 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 110, 1933 N.Y. LEXIS 1262 (N.Y. 1933).

In determining whether particular persons or classes are covered it is necessary to consider the statute as a whole and the purposes embodied in its enactment. Goldstein v State, 281 N.Y. 396, 24 N.E.2d 97, 281 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 396, 1939 N.Y. LEXIS 1024 (N.Y. 1939).

Former § 2 from which this section is derived was construed as follows: First: If the employee's duties were exclusively or predominantly within the enumerated employment and he was injured while doing work fairly within the scope of the ordinary and customary fulfillment of such duties, he has a rightful claim even though the particular act he was doing when the mishap befell him would not of and by itself ordinarily come within the wording of the statute. Second: But where an employee's duties do not come exclusively or predominantly within the category of enumerated employments and only incidentally does he do work fairly falling within that category, his right to remuneration must hinge on a finding that he sustained injury while actually and momentarily doing the work named in the statute. Gleisner v Gross & Herbener, 170 A.D. 37, 155 N.Y.S. 946, 1915 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5127 (N.Y. App. Div. 1915).

Former § 2 did not require that the nature of a compensable injury must be such as to present a visible or external sign. Fowler v Risedorph Bottling Co., 175 A.D. 224, 161 N.Y.S. 535, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8257 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

The Work. Comp. Law is compulsory in character and applies only to the so-called hazardous employments which are expressly designated in former § 2 (now § 3). Express mention of the occupations embraced in the several groups of hazardous employments necessarily excludes employments not there mentioned. Maloney v Levy & Gilliland Co., 176 A.D. 470, 163 N.Y.S. 505, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5158 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917), aff'd, 223 N.Y. 631, 119 N.E. 1057, 223 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 631, 1918 N.Y. LEXIS 1333 (N.Y. 1918).

Minors were not exempted from the benefits of former § 2. Ide v Faul & Timmins, 179 A.D. 567, 166 N.Y.S. 858, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7428 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

The word "employed" as used in this section clearly refers to the contract of employment and not the quantum of past performance. Trachtenberg v Rosenblum, 24 A.D.2d 1062, 265 N.Y.S.2d 574, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2683 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

3. Hazardous employment, generally

The disability or death of an employee for which compensation is awarded must arise out of and in the course of his employment in a hazardous occupation: employment and hazardous occupation go together. Schweitzer v Thompson & Norris Co., 229 N.Y. 97, 127 N.E. 904, 229 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 97, 1920 N.Y. LEXIS 660 (N.Y. 1920).

An employee to be entitled to compensation is no longer required to be himself engaged at the time of the accident in hazardous work. It is sufficient that he is an employee in such hazardous business. Europe v Addison Amusements, Inc., 231 N.Y. 105, 131 N.E. 750, 231 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 105, 1921 N.Y. LEXIS 615 (N.Y. 1921).; Spang v Broadway Brewing & Malting Co., 182 A.D. 443, 169 N.Y.S. 574, 1918 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7882 (N.Y. App. Div. 1918).; Pierson v Interborough Rapid Transit Co., 184 A.D. 678, 172 N.Y.S. 492, 1918 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6636 (N.Y. App. Div. 1918), aff'd, 227 N.Y. 666, 126 N.E. 920, 227 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 666, 1920 N.Y. LEXIS 891 (N.Y. 1920).; Cummings v Underwood Silk Fabric Co., 184 A.D. 456, 171 N.Y.S. 1046, 1918 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6137 (N.Y. App. Div. 1918).

The determining factor in an award of compensation is whether the claimant was engaged in a hazardous occupation within the employment classified in sub 1 of § 3 of the act, and if it found that he was so engaged an award is proper even though the principal business of the employer was not a hazardous employment within the Workmen's Compensation Law. Gramlich v Board of Education, 297 N.Y. 349, 79 N.E.2d 437, 297 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 349, 1948 N.Y. LEXIS 844 (N.Y. 1948).

The fact that on the day of the accident and for a long time theretofore claimant had not been doing any of the more dangerous parts of his work is of no consequence. The test is simply whether his employment can be found in § 3. Gramlich v Board of Education, 297 N.Y. 349, 79 N.E.2d 437, 297 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 349, 1948 N.Y. LEXIS 844 (N.Y. 1948).

The phrase "hazardous employment" as used in this section does not carry a meaning identical to that implied by the phrase as used in the Workmen's Compensation Law § 2 subd 4. Chilk v New York, 26 A.D.2d 425, 275 N.Y.S.2d 167, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2982 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1966), aff'd, 22 N.Y.2d 661, 291 N.Y.S.2d 358, 238 N.E.2d 748, 1968 N.Y. LEXIS 1404 (N.Y. 1968).

The essential nature of the work, rather than the designation given to the employment, is the controlling factor in determining whether an occupation is embraced within any particular group of this section. People ex rel. Levy v Sommerville, 4 N.Y.S.2d 793, 167 Misc. 89, 1938 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1633 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1938).

The employer's liability law expressly provides that it shall not apply to employers and employees in hazardous occupations as defined by this section. Taswell v General Matt Co., 30 N.Y.S.2d 145, 1941 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2233 (N.Y. City Ct. 1941).

4. Liability as between general and special employers, subcontractors and the like

Employees may look to either their general employer or their special employer or to both, for compensation for injuries due to occupational hazards. Dennison v Peckham Road Corp., 295 N.Y. 457, 68 N.E.2d 440, 295 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 457, 1946 N.Y. LEXIS 801 (N.Y. 1946).

Employed by a sub-contractor, claimant was injured while driving his automobile in Pennsylvania. He had been employed by sub-contractor to supervise part of sub-contract given employer by contractor on Pennsylvania hospital. Plaintiff was working on plans in New York City and construction of hospital had not started at time of accident. Sub-contractor had no compensation insurance and thereafter became bankrupt. An award against the contractor was proper. De Stefano v Consolidated Tile Co., 308 N.Y. 721, 124 N.E.2d 336, 308 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 721, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 1812 (N.Y. 1954).

A contractor, subject of whose contract is a hazardous employment under sub 1, group 3, of this section, has a nondelegable duty to employees working out that project, and he is chargeable with payment of compensation even though the injury was sustained by a sub-contractor's employee. Passarelli v Baker & Yettman, Inc., 241 A.D. 639, 269 N.Y.S. 203, 1934 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8546 (N.Y. App. Div. 1934).

The work being done by a workman at the time he was injured being hazardous in nature within the definition of this section, the obligation to secure payment of compensation was imposed upon the contractor who had borrowed his services for the time being from his regular employer, as being his special employer for the time being. Nyholm v Cauldwell-Wingate Co., 12 A.D.2d 802, 209 N.Y.S.2d 1016, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13271 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1961).

General employee of elevator company was not, as matter of law, special employee of company's sub-contractor at time of injury, barring him from bringing suit against sub-contractor, where employee had been assigned by company to work with sub-contractor in drilling hole at construction site, utilizing company blueprints and specifications; notwithstanding that employee testified before trial that it was his job to assist sub-contractor in all work, question of fact remained as to whether company relinquished to sub-contractor right to direct and control employee in performance of work. Kinney v Kuhn, 122 A.D.2d 569, 504 N.Y.S.2d 948, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 59851 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1986).

County was liable for payment of Workers' Compensation benefits, even though county economic opportunity program (CEOP) supervised claimant's day-to-day activities, where claimant received no wages from CEOP and instead received public assistance benefits, reimbursement for work-related expenses, and lunch allowance from county, number of hours claimant worked was dependent on size of her public assistance grant, county required claimant to complete time sheets and submit other related paperwork, only county could determine whether proffered excuse by claimant for work absence was acceptable, and county retained power to monitor and evaluate worksite. Hughes v Steuben County Self-Insurance Plan, 248 A.D.2d 757, 669 N.Y.S.2d 716, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2218 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

5. Exclusivity of remedy

Where the Work. Comp. Law fails to impose liability on an employer to provide compensation for the injury or death of an employee, damages may be sought in an action at law. Barrencotto v Cocker Saw Co., 266 N.Y. 139, 194 N.E. 61, 266 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 139, 1934 N.Y. LEXIS 896 (N.Y. 1934).

An objection that a nurse was debarred from prosecuting a tort action against the city because of the exclusive applicability of the Workers' Compensation Law will be overruled, where the city failed to plead that defense and a motion at the trial to amend the answer in that respect was denied. Volk v New York, 284 N.Y. 279, 30 N.E.2d 596, 284 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 279, 1940 N.Y. LEXIS 835 (N.Y. 1940), limited, Garcia v Iserson, 42 A.D.2d 776, 346 N.Y.S.2d 572, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3696 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1973), overruled, Garcia v Iserson, 33 N.Y.2d 421, 353 N.Y.S.2d 955, 309 N.E.2d 420, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1700 (N.Y. 1974).

Employee of partnership has no right to institute tort action against individual member of that partnership on claim that he was injured through the negligence of the member. Minsky v Baitelman, 281 A.D. 910, 120 N.Y.S.2d 86, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3748 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Negligence action arising out of an automobile accident was properly dismissed under rule 107 of the Rules of Civil Practice where the accident occurred in the course of plaintiff's employment and therefore, the court had no jurisdiction of the subject matter of the action. Carriero v Iovino, 281 A.D. 1052, 121 N.Y.S.2d 127, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4302 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Action against employer for failure to furnish adequate medical treatment for injuries suffered in course of employment, for furnishing incompetent nurse, for fraud and deceit, and for breach of contract dismissed. Inasmuch as all the alleged causes of action arise from an injury suffered in the course of employment and are based upon employer's negligence, plaintiff's sole remedy is under the Workmen's Compensation Law. Young v International Paper Co., 282 A.D. 750, 122 N.Y.S.2d 39, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4871 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

The state would be entitled to summary judgment that a correction officer, who was injured in a prison uprising and who accepted workers' compensation benefits after the Workers' Compensation Board issued a notice concluding that the officer's injury was accidental, had elected his remedy and was foreclosed from maintaining an action at law for intentional tort against the state on the basis that his injuries had been intentionally inflicted by other state employees, where the officer never sought administrative review of the board's determination. Smith v State, 91 A.D.2d 1181, 459 N.Y.S.2d 155, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16532 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't), aff'd, 59 N.Y.2d 718, 463 N.Y.S.2d 439, 450 N.E.2d 245, 1983 N.Y. LEXIS 3082 (N.Y. 1983).

The Workers' Compensation Law did not preclude an action at law by an employee against her employer's compensation carrier where the allegations as to the carrier's persistent, protracted refusal to make payments of authorized or ordered benefits, and as to its dilatory tactics, harassment and arbitrary rejection of requests for authorization for treatment, went significantly beyond the kind of wrongful refusal by an insured to pay benefits constituting only a breach of the insurance contract and could be the basis of recovery for intentional tort or for fraudulent breach of an ensurer's duty of good faith and fair dealing. De Marco v Federal Ins. Co., 99 A.D.2d 114, 472 N.Y.S.2d 464, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16527 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1984).

Intentional tort can give rise to cause of action outside purview of Workers' Compensation Law only if facts demonstrate intentional or deliberate act by employer or coemployee directed at causing harm to complaining employee. Bulis v Di Lorenzo, 142 A.D.2d 707, 531 N.Y.S.2d 107, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7993 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1988).

Court improperly granted defendants' summary judgment motion on ground that award of Workers' Compensation benefits barred instant claim for sexual discrimination by plaintiff against her employers where workers' compensation award resulted solely from attempted videotaping of plaintiff by co-worker while she was in company locker room, and did not implicate alleged, intentional activities of company officer in subjecting her to hostile work environment by directing inappropriate sexual remarks and jokes toward her, and making demands on her for sexual relations in exchange for forgiving loan. Hanford v Plaza Packaging Corp., 284 A.D.2d 179, 727 N.Y.S.2d 407, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6182 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2001), app. denied, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9220 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't Sept. 25, 2001).

As the result of amendments effected to this section, subd. 1, gr. 19, and § 51, in 1941, a nonhazardous employee of an employer who has secured compensation is in the same position as a hazardous employee with respect to exclusiveness of compensation benefits. Murphy v Elmwood Country Club, Inc., 51 N.Y.S.2d 260, 183 Misc. 332, 1944 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2491 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1944).

If an employee has suffered injury or a disease for which the workmen's compensation law provides compensation, his sole remedy is under that law; he may not maintain an action for damages, unless the employer failed to provide compensation as required by law. Schwartz v Queensboro Farm Products, Inc., 78 N.Y.S.2d 863, 191 Misc. 778, 1948 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2337 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1948).

Pursuant to New York City, N.Y., Code § 3-204.3, New York City Council members were governmental employees within the coverage of the New York Workers' Compensation Law; therefore, a workers' compensation award was the only remedy available to a surviving parent of a council member shot to death in city hall. Davis v City of New York, 805 N.Y.S.2d 800, 10 Misc. 3d 234, 234 N.Y.L.J. 68, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2085 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2005), aff'd, 35 A.D.3d 240, 824 N.Y.S.2d 709, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14736 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2006).

Remedy under the Workmen's Compensation Law is exclusive only against the employer; one may proceed at common law against third persons whose negligence caused injury. Williams v Hartshorn, 57 N.Y.S.2d 895, 1945 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2364 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1945), aff'd, 270 A.D. 875, 61 N.Y.S.2d 127, 1946 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4404 (N.Y. App. Div. 1946).

An award by the compensation board, having jurisdiction of the matter, deprives the court of any right to relitigate the same issue and hence, the court would have no jurisdiction of a common law action against an employer where the employee contended that the accident did not arise in the course of his employment because it did not happen upon the employer's premises and happened in the free time assigned for the noon meal. Sedore v Sayre, 119 N.Y.S.2d 204, 1953 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1522 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1953).

Where plaintiff is entitled to compensation under Workmen's Compensation Law as a result of agreement made at time of employment in a foreign country that compensation would be determined under this law, an action at law against employer for damages cannot be maintained. Such an agreement is not contrary to our public policy. Conway v Hamilton Overseas Contr. Corp, 120 N.Y.S.2d 672, 1953 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1665 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1953), aff'd, 283 A.D. 1011, 131 N.Y.S.2d 443, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6113 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

In an action for personal injuries based on an employer's alleged violation of Labor Law, § 299, where the complaint is sufficiently broad to allow proof of injuries compensable under this section and ¶ 65, defense of this Workmen's Compensation Law is properly pleaded. Kolenko v Certain-Teed Products Corp., 20 F. Supp. 920, 1937 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1503 (D.N.Y. 1937).

6. Causal connection between hazard and injury

To charge an employer with liability under the Workmen's Compensation Law, the court must be able to see that the hazards which accompanied the duties of the employee have turned against him to his loss and damage; if there is only a casual or remote connection between a hazard of the employment and the loss liability is not established. Glatzl v Stumpp, 220 N.Y. 71, 114 N.E. 1053, 220 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 71, 1917 N.Y. LEXIS 941 (N.Y. 1917).

A workman killed while doing nonhazardous work for his employer under contract and in time outside of his regular employment is not entitled to an award. Kender v Reineking, 228 N.Y. 240, 126 N.E. 713, 228 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 240, 1920 N.Y. LEXIS 928 (N.Y. 1920).

Where the conditions of the employment, including the location of the place of work, constitute a factor which in combination with other conditions produces an accidental injury, the risk of injury is incident to the employment, even though the risk of a similar injury is no greater in that employment than otherwise. Connelly v Samaritan Hospital, 259 N.Y. 137, 181 N.E. 76, 259 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 137, 1932 N.Y. LEXIS 917 (N.Y. 1932).

Where compensation claimant's medical witness did not voice any opinion on causal relationship between dust or dirt entering claimant's eye during the course of his employment as a porter and claimant's eye injury, diagnosed as toxoplasmosis choroidoretinitis, and loss of vision but withheld any professional judgment as to the causal relationship and compensation carrier's expert testified that there could be no causal relationship between eye injury and dust or dirt entering claimant's eye, Workmen's Compensation Board committed reversible error in affirming referee's conclusion that claimant suffered 55 percent causally related loss of vision. Beltran v Allied Maintenance Corp., 45 A.D.2d 795, 357 N.Y.S.2d 162, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4634 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

Substantial evidence supported the Workers' Compensation Board's determination that the employee's death did not arise out of or in the course of his employment because the employee was not, at the moment of his passing, engaged in travel or work-related activity for his employer and the employee did not regularly perform work for the employer at home such that the employee's residence achieved the status as a place of employment or "part of the employer's premises." Matter of Pittner v St. Gobain Corp., 144 A.D.3d 1348, 41 N.Y.S.3d 319, 2016 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7592 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2016), app. denied, 29 N.Y.3d 919, 86 N.E.3d 562, 64 N.Y.S.3d 670, 2017 N.Y. LEXIS 2695 (N.Y. 2017).

Substantial evidence supported did not support the Workers' Compensation Board's decision finding that the claimant sustained a causally-related occupational disease because the proof failed to demonstrate that the claimant's shoulder injury was attributable to repetitive movements associated with moving heavy wheelbarrow loads of asphalt or performing other manual duties during his short period of employment as a laborer with the highway department. Matter of Yonkosky v Town of Hamburg, 158 A.D.3d 860, 69 N.Y.S.3d 899, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 633 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2018).

7. Effect of illegal nature of employment or working conditions on employer liability

The fact that a claimant was employed in violation of the Labor Law is no defense to the payment of compensation. Ide v Faul & Timmins, 179 A.D. 567, 166 N.Y.S. 858, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7428 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

In an action for personal injuries based upon an employer's alleged violation of Labor Law § 299, where the complaint is sufficiently broad to allow proof of injuries compensable under this section and § 65, defense of this Workmen's Compensation Law is properly pleaded. Kolenko v Certain-Teed Products Corp., 20 F. Supp. 920, 1937 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1503 (D.N.Y. 1937).

That decedent was required to work under hazardous conditions constituting a direct violation of the Labor Law did not make the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Law inapplicable as a complete defense to an action against the employer. Curran v Mackay Radio & Tel. Co., 123 F. Supp. 83, 1954 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3668 (D.N.Y. 1954).

Where the injury is intentional the Workmen's Compensation Act does not apply. Curran v Mackay Radio & Tel. Co., 123 F. Supp. 83, 1954 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3668 (D.N.Y. 1954).

8. Burden of proving exemption from liability or coverage

An employer and his surety, contesting an award to an employee under former § 2, group 30 were under burden of showing that at time of injury employee was not working at hazardous employment, if such be their contention. Kohler v Frohmann, 167 A.D. 533, 153 N.Y.S. 559, 1915 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8295 (N.Y. App. Div. 1915).

An employer, claiming exemption from liability, assumes the burden of establishing it does not come within the provisions of the workmen's compensation statute. Gordon v International Executive Service Corps, 32 A.D.2d 688, 299 N.Y.S.2d 922, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4051 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 25 N.Y.2d 738, 1969 N.Y. LEXIS 1763 (N.Y. 1969).

Whether or not an employer has brought itself within the coverage of the Workmen's Compensation Act by complying with § 50 and subdivision 1 group 19 of this section, the burden is upon the employer who affirmatively plead and prove compliance with §§ 50 and 51. Murphy v Elmwood Country Club, Inc., 50 N.Y.S.2d 331, 1944 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2320 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1944).

Where an employee was not engaged in a hazardous employment the employer must affirmatively prove compliance with the voluntary provisions of this section in order to make recourse to the benefits of the compensation law the employee's exclusive remedy for injuries. Arnold v Wright, 79 N.Y.S.2d 720, 1948 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2460 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1948).

9. Extension of coverage to other employments or employees

A bricklayer employed to repair the plant of a company engaged in lithographing and printing, a business classified as hazardous under former § 2, group 40, is entitled to compensation for injuries resulting from the fall of a scaffold. Dose v Moehle Lithographic Co., 221 N.Y. 401, 117 N.E. 616, 221 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 401, 1917 N.Y. LEXIS 1314 (N.Y. 1917).

Any employer, not within the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Law, or who has in his employ an employee not so included, and the employees of any such employer, may be their joint election, elect to become subject to its provisions; there is no express limitation that such election is effective only where the employment is in a business conducted for pecuniary gain, and no such limitation should be implied. Queck-Berner v Macy, 240 N.Y. 341, 148 N.E. 543, 240 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 341, 1925 N.Y. LEXIS 739 (N.Y. 1925).

Group 18 securing compensation to workmen in "all other employments" is intended for the protection of industrial employees and not municipal employees. Stoerzer v New York, 267 N.Y. 339, 196 N.E. 281, 267 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 339, 1935 N.Y. LEXIS 1221 (N.Y. 1935).

While a minor employee may be deemed sui juris for the purpose of making an election to accept workmen's compensation coverage, to make such an election binding it is necessary that the employer comply with § 51 as to posting a notice of compliance, and a notice stating coverage to be only as to hazardous employments does not infer an election to accept coverage by an employee in a nonhazardous employment. Warney v Board of Education, 290 N.Y. 329, 49 N.E.2d 466, 290 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 329, 1943 N.Y. LEXIS 1086 (N.Y. 1943).

Award for death of policeman employed by Westchester County Park Commission was proper where the County paid a specific premium for coverage of policeman for it must be presumed from such payment that "appropriate action" was taken to include employees within Workmen's Compensation coverage. Chabala v County of Westchester, 308 N.Y. 1012, 127 N.E.2d 857, 308 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 1012, 1955 N.Y. LEXIS 1241 (N.Y. 1955).

Where a person in the business of moving heavy machinery was engaged by a paper company carrying on a hazardous business to install an engine, the installation is incidental to the conduct of the paper manufacturing business. McNally v Diamond Mills Paper Co., 178 A.D. 342, 164 N.Y.S. 793, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5789 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917), rev'd, 223 N.Y. 83, 119 N.E. 242, 223 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 83, 1918 N.Y. LEXIS 1159 (N.Y. 1918).

A person injured through the negligence of a fellow servant while engaged at farm labor is subject to the Workmen's Compensation Law, where he and his employer jointly elected under former § 2 to become subject thereto. Caldana v Buezenburg, 206 A.D. 183, 200 N.Y.S. 468, 1923 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7172 (N.Y. App. Div. 1923).

The provisions of this section (sub 1, group 19) are that an employer may bring employment not specifically listed as hazardous within the coverage of the statute "by securing compensation to his employee." In immediate context of this language, it is also provided that a municipal corporation may bring its employees or officers not specifically listed in hazardous classifications within coverage by "appropriate action" of the legislative or governmental body. Hence, death award for county policeman killed in Parkway accident was sustained where county had provided compensation coverage for him even though claimant would also be entitled to benefits under New York State Retirement System. Chabala v Westchester County, 284 A.D. 341, 132 N.Y.S.2d 353, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3397 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954), aff'd, 308 N.Y. 1012, 127 N.E.2d 857, 308 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 1012, 1955 N.Y. LEXIS 1241 (N.Y. 1955).

An executive who contracted with and whose activities were controlled by a nonprofit organization which aided overseas companies by furnishing managerial and technical assistance was an employee of the organization and thus eligible for compensation when injured while performing duties assigned on a three-month project in Panama. Pointing out the employing organization had elected to secure compensation coverage for some of its employees, the court held that pursuant to provisions of Workmen's Compensation Law § 54(4) all employees were deemed to be covered. Gordon v International Executive Service Corps, 32 A.D.2d 688, 299 N.Y.S.2d 922, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4051 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 25 N.Y.2d 738, 1969 N.Y. LEXIS 1763 (N.Y. 1969).

Claimant, a beautician, was a store employee, even though he was working in a shop operated by a licensee on store premises, where the evidence indicated store control, the hiring process and the right of discharge. Bianculli v Times Square Stores, Inc., 34 A.D.2d 696, 309 N.Y.S.2d 542, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5085 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

An amendment to group 18, which extends the provisions of the statute to "all other employments" includes the employees of a charitable corporation not operating for pecuniary gain. Brooklyn Children's Aid Soc. v Industrial Board of Dep't of Labor, 240 N.Y.S. 70, 136 Misc. 379, 1930 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1033 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), aff'd, 231 A.D. 845, 246 N.Y.S. 907, 1930 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8332 (N.Y. App. Div. 1930).

The 1941 Amendment to group 19 of this section appears to abrogate all rights theretofore granted to a nonhazardous employee to elect not to be covered by workmen's compensation secured by his employer. Murphy v Elmwood Country Club, Inc., 51 N.Y.S.2d 260, 183 Misc. 332, 1944 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2491 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1944).

In view of the provisions of group 19 of subdivision 1 of this section a charitable corporation not operating for pecuniary gain may bring an employment that is not listed in this section within the coverage of this chapter by securing compensation for its employees. Monteleone v Center Storage Warehouses, Inc., 68 N.Y.S.2d 369, 1946 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3367 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1946).

10. Coverage of domestic servants, household workers and the like

Domestic servants may by action of the employer under group 19 of this section, and under § 50 be brought under the Act. Fostner v Morawitz, 215 A.D. 176, 213 N.Y.S. 202, 1926 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10932 (N.Y. App. Div. 1926).

Under subd. (1), group 12, of this section, effective in cities of 40,000 or more, claimant was within the coverage of this act as a domestic worker rather than a "governess" where she took the employment pursuant to a newspaper ad for a woman to take care of a seven-year old girl in exchange for room and board but testified that she regularly performed housework and was paid a weekly wage in addition to board and room. Schmeiser v Wnuk, 18 A.D.2d 752, 235 N.Y.S.2d 430, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6203 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

The provisions of this section with respect to required carriage of workmen's compensation insurance by employers of domestics in "cities and villages" of 40,000 or more population are inapplicable to such an employer in a township of more than 40,000 population, and a domestic employee of such an employer, being ineligible for workmen's compensation benefits, when sued in a common-law action for damages by an injured domestic servant is entitled to raise the defense of contributors negligence by plaintiff who has the burden of proving freedom therefrom. Curtis v Eide, 19 A.D.2d 507, 244 N.Y.S.2d 330, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2871 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1963).

A householder, as such, is not required to carry compensation insurance, since he is not within the definition of "employment" in subd. Carroll v Kay, 30 Misc. 2d 526, 219 N.Y.S.2d 892, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2725 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1961).

A householder as such does not carry on a business for pecuniary gain within subd 5 of § 2. Carroll v Kay, 30 Misc. 2d 526, 219 N.Y.S.2d 892, 1961 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2725 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1961).

Although it was not mandatory for an employer to provide workmen's compensation insurance for a part-time domestic worker for less than 48 hours per week, he could, if he so elected, bring her within the coverage of the Workmen's Compensation law by voluntarily securing a compensation policy covering her, as provided in group 19 of subd. 1 of this section, and, by so doing, make recovery for injuries sustained by her on the job available only under the Compensation Law. Weiss v Laffman, 43 Misc. 2d 653, 251 N.Y.S.2d 833, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1568 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1964).

In insureds' action seeking coverage for liability for workers' compensation benefits to their live-in housekeeper who was injured in course of her employment, wherein insureds maintained that they voluntarily elected to cover housekeeper and thus brought her within class of workers covered by Workers' Compensation Law for purposes of endorsement provided for in their homeowners' insurance policy, ambiguity in endorsement arose because it was unclear whether second condition of endorsement (whether insured's employee was one for whom workers' compensation benefits "must be provided") was satisfied by existence of endorsement itself. Haber v St. Paul Guardian Ins. Co., 137 F.3d 691, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 2416 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1998).

New York State Insurance Law does not require insurance policy, which provides comprehensive personal liability insurance on one, 2-, 3-, or 4-family owner-occupied dwelling, to include workers' compensation coverage for domestic worker who works fewer than 40 hours per week for same policyholder. Insurance Department, Opinions of General Counsel, Opinion Number 03-05-22.

Policyholder under comprehensive personal liability insurance for one, 2-, 3-, or 4-family owner-occupied dwelling may obtain workers' compensation coverage for domestic worker if policyholder elects to secure compensation to such employee by (1) "insuring and keeping insured the payment of such compensation in the state fund," or (2) "insuring and keeping insured the payment of such compensation with any stock corporation, mutual corporation or reciprocal insurer authorized to transact the business of workmen's compensation insurance in the state." Insurance Department, Opinions of General Counsel, Opinion Number 03-05-22.

11. Laches, estoppel and the like

Apportionment under workmen's compensation is not equitable remedy, and doctrine of laches is inapplicable. Milletich v International Terminal Operating Co., 57 A.D.2d 660, 393 N.Y.S.2d 468, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11686 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 42 N.Y.2d 810, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 3910 (N.Y. 1977).

Absent any evidence that prior employers of workmen's compensation claimant or their carriers changed their position or took any action in reliance on conduct of last employer in not raising issue whether claim for occupational disease was time-barred, equitable principles of estoppel would be inappropriate. Milletich v International Terminal Operating Co., 57 A.D.2d 660, 393 N.Y.S.2d 468, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11686 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 42 N.Y.2d 810, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 3910 (N.Y. 1977).

II. Principal Business Of Employer, Generally

12. Necessity that hazardous business be principal occupation

An employee of a person engaged in the manufacture of machinery whose duty it is to inspect machinery which he has sold and who customarily does so after it is put in place at the different plants where it has been installed, is engaged in a hazardous employment of his master, and injuries incurred in the course of inspection are compensable. Benton v Fraser, 219 N.Y. 210, 114 N.E. 43, 219 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 210, 1916 N.Y. LEXIS 813 (N.Y. 1916).

An accidental injury to a watchman is compensable although the plant was not in operation and the employee did nothing else for the employer but watch. Fogarty v National Biscuit Co., 221 N.Y. 20, 116 N.E. 346, 221 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 20, 1917 N.Y. LEXIS 1262 (N.Y. 1917).. Cf. Kehoe v Consolidated Tel. & Electrical Subway Co., 176 A.D. 84, 162 N.Y.S. 481, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9009 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

Claimant who was injured while engaged as a telephone switchboard operator and receptionist in the employ of the board of water supply, a board or department of New York city principally engaged in the hazardous business of projecting and building extensions to the water supply system of New York city and at times in operating a portion of the distribution system which carries water in part to private consumers, is engaged in a hazardous business. Leahy v New York, 285 N.Y. 443, 35 N.E.2d 34, 285 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 443, 1941 N.Y. LEXIS 1483 (N.Y. 1941).

Workmen's compensation is not only available for employees of municipal corporations actually working at hazardous employment, but also for all of the employees of any municipal corporation whose principal business is that of conducting a hazardous employment. Gramlich v Board of Education, 297 N.Y. 349, 79 N.E.2d 437, 297 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 349, 1948 N.Y. LEXIS 844 (N.Y. 1948).

A salesman who, in the course of his work selling dresses, went into a room on the same floor where they were being manufactured, to obtain a completed garment for exhibition to a customer was not engaged in the "manufacture of . . . women's clothing, . . . " within the meaning of former § 2 group 38. Lyon v Windsor, 173 A.D. 377, 159 N.Y.S. 162, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6530 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

A traveling salesman who, at the time he was injured in a public bus, was engaged in his regular occupation of going from place to place for the purpose of selling goods, is not entitled to recover under the Work. Comp. Law, for though, under former § 2, group 32, his employer was engaged in a hazardous employment, he was not so engaged. Mandel v A. Steinhardt & Bro., 173 A.D. 515, 160 N.Y.S. 2, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7575 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

Where an employer makes photographic cameras, which business was hazardous under former § 2, group 23, an employee working in the payroll department and whose work was largely clerical is engaged in a hazardous employment. Joyce v Eastman Kodak Co., 182 A.D. 354, 170 N.Y.S. 401, 1918 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5045 (N.Y. App. Div. 1918), aff'd, 231 N.Y. 634, 132 N.E. 918, 231 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 634, 1921 N.Y. LEXIS 806 (N.Y. 1921).

13. Hazardous employment incidental to nonhazardous business

The right of a country club, as a membership corporation or association, to become an "employer" in a hazardous employment is recognized by former § 3, subds. 3 and 4. Uhl v Hartwood Club, 177 A.D. 41, 163 N.Y.S. 744, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5200 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 221 N.Y. 588, 116 N.E. 1000, 221 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 588, 1917 N.Y. LEXIS 1449 (N.Y. 1917).

Award could not be made under former § 2, group 22, which at the time of the accident included "operation and repair of stationary engines," where repair of a gas engine was merely incident to an occupation which the law at that time did not regard as hazardous. Tillburg v McCarthy & Townsend, 179 A.D. 593, 166 N.Y.S. 878, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7432 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

A carpenter regularly employed by a department store to work in and about the store, in the line of his trade, is engaged in a hazardous employment incidental to the employer's nonhazardous business, and entitled to workmen's compensation for an injury received in an elevator in the building on leaving his work for the day. Alterman v A. I. Namm & Son, 190 A.D. 76, 179 N.Y.S. 584, 1919 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4073 (N.Y. App. Div. 1919), aff'd, 229 N.Y. 640, 129 N.E. 940, 229 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 640, 1920 N.Y. LEXIS 845 (N.Y. 1920).

14. Employees performing nonhazardous duties in hazardous businesses

One employed exclusively as a farm laborer does not come within the workmen's compensation law merely because his employer operated a hazardous employment as his major business interest so long as the employee did no work there. Pestlin v Haxton Canning Co., 274 A.D. 144, 80 N.Y.S.2d 869, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3029 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948), aff'd, 299 N.Y. 477, 87 N.E.2d 522, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 477, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 959 (N.Y. 1949).

The department of purchase of the city of New York, which as an incident to its functions maintains storage facilities does not have as its principal function a hazardous occupation as defined in this section and accordingly an employee not personally engaged in a hazardous employment is not entitled to workmen's compensation. Clyde v New York, 275 A.D. 161, 89 N.Y.S.2d 105, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3733 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

A municipal employee is not made eligible for workmen's compensation under this section as the employee of one whose principal business is carrying on a hazardous employment merely because an incidental function of the bureau in which she is employed is storage and warehousing described as a hazardous occupation in Group 13 of subd. 1 of § 3 of the Workmen's Compensation Law. Clyde v New York, 275 A.D. 161, 89 N.Y.S.2d 105, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3733 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

III. Construction, Maintenance And Care Of Buildings

15. Ownership and operation of buildings; real estate business

The business of owning and operating apartment houses is not a hazardous employment under Work. Comp. Law. Sheridan v P. J. Groll Const. Co., 218 N.Y. 633, 112 N.E. 568, 218 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 633, 1916 N.Y. LEXIS 1128 (N.Y. 1916).

Where the business of the employer was real estate management, sales and insurance, and claimant worked in the office, the employment was not "hazardous" as involving "care of buildings," within subd. 1 group 2 of this section. Kaye v Duff & Brown, Inc., 13 A.D.2d 594, 212 N.Y.S.2d 562, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11959 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

16. Building maintenance, repair, cleaning and the like

Injuries to carpenters, regularly and permanently employed by department stores and other non-hazardous businesses are compensable. Mulford v A. S. Pettit & Sons, 220 N.Y. 540, 116 N.E. 344, 220 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 540, 1917 N.Y. LEXIS 1000 (N.Y. 1917).. See also Alterman v A. I. Namm & Son, 190 A.D. 76, 179 N.Y.S. 584, 1919 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4073 (N.Y. App. Div. 1919), aff'd, 229 N.Y. 640, 129 N.E. 940, 229 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 640, 1920 N.Y. LEXIS 845 (N.Y. 1920).

An apartment house superintendent, who incidently to his employment made ordinary repairs on the building, and who was injured in a fall from a stepladder while engaged in cutting away part of a door, is not engaged in a hazardous employment carried on by his employer for pecuniary gain at the time of his injury; nor is such work either "structural carpentry" or "construction, repair and demolition of buildings." Schmidt v Berger, 221 N.Y. 26, 116 N.E. 382, 221 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 26, 1917 N.Y. LEXIS 1263 (N.Y. 1917).

Accidental injuries to workers who are casually employed to repair or improve buildings in which are conducted occupations enumerated in § 3(1) or to install machinery in these buildings are compensable. McNally v Diamond Mills Paper Co., 223 N.Y. 83, 119 N.E. 242, 223 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 83, 1918 N.Y. LEXIS 1159 (N.Y. 1918).. See also Dose v Moehle Lithographic Co., 221 N.Y. 401, 117 N.E. 616, 221 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 401, 1917 N.Y. LEXIS 1314 (N.Y. 1917)., and Bargey v Massaro Macaroni Co., 218 N.Y. 410, 113 N.E. 407, 218 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 410, 1916 N.Y. LEXIS 1081 (N.Y. 1916).

The owner of tenement houses who collected the rents and attended to the repairing of the houses is engaged in "maintenance and care of buildings for pecuniary gain" and is an employer whose employment is hazardous; a workman engaged by him to assist in such work is engaged in a hazardous occupation during the hours of which he was employed for and in such work, but when he undertakes to do different and unrelated work for the same employer which was not hazardous within the meaning of the statute, his legal representatives are not entitled to an award because he was killed by an accident while doing such work. Kender v Reineking, 228 N.Y. 240, 126 N.E. 713, 228 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 240, 1920 N.Y. LEXIS 928 (N.Y. 1920).

A landlord must secure compensation for a person who cares for the furnace of a two family house in return for a reduction in rent for his suite in the premises. People v Livingston, 292 N.Y. 634, 55 N.E.2d 508, 292 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 634, 1944 N.Y. LEXIS 1790 (N.Y. 1944).

A neighbor employed by a farmer to make repairs on his barn, who was injured by the collapse of staging used while placing slate on the roof, is not entitled to compensation. Coleman v Bartholomew, 175 A.D. 122, 161 N.Y.S. 560, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8265 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

A janitor who, while engaged in cleaning windows, fell to the street is entitled to an award, even though his employment was incidental to the employer's nonhazardous business of operating apartment houses. Zubradt v Shepard's Estate, 180 A.D. 20, 167 N.Y.S. 306, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8065 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

A person who from time to time bought real estate where the buildings were run down and improved them, selling them for a profit if a favorable opportunity presented itself, and who purchased a certain piece of property which he deeded to his wife and made over into a three family house, his family living in the lower floor thereof, cannot be said to be engaged in the construction, repair and demolition of buildings or any other employment declared hazardous under the workmen's compensation law where, the claimant who had been employed to kalsomine the walls of the parlor in the apartment on the lower floor was requested to put a little plaster on a rough spot in the ceiling, such work not being done with reference to fitting the house for sale, although the house would have been sold if a satisfactory price was offered. Hungerford v Bonn, 183 A.D. 818, 171 N.Y.S. 280, 1918 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6017 (N.Y. App. Div. 1918).

The fact that a kalsominer found it necessary to smooth ceiling and fill small hole with plaster in order to properly do his work, does not bring his employer within the hazardous business of plastering for profit. Hungerford v Bonn, 183 A.D. 818, 171 N.Y.S. 280, 1918 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6017 (N.Y. App. Div. 1918).. See also Morris v Muldoon, 190 A.D. 689, 180 N.Y.S. 319, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4223 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 229 N.Y. 611, 129 N.E. 928, 229 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 611, 1920 N.Y. LEXIS 816 (N.Y. 1920).

This section covers the janitor of a school building in his duties as janitor but not as custodian of children on the school grounds. Bailey v School Dist., 204 A.D. 125, 198 N.Y.S. 247, 1923 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9428 (N.Y. App. Div. 1923).

17. Structural carpentry

An apartment house superintendent, who incidently to his employment made ordinary repairs on the building, and who was injured in a fall from a stepladder while engaged in cutting away part of a door, is not engaged in a hazardous employment carried on by his employer for pecuniary gain at the time of his injury; nor is such work either "structural carpentry" or "construction, repair and demolition of buildings." Schmidt v Berger, 221 N.Y. 26, 116 N.E. 382, 221 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 26, 1917 N.Y. LEXIS 1263 (N.Y. 1917).. See also Gleisner v Gross & Herbener, 170 A.D. 37, 155 N.Y.S. 946, 1915 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5127 (N.Y. App. Div. 1915).

Casual engagement of a carpenter by the hour to repair a store or office does not make the proprietor of the store or office one engaged in structural carpentry so as to render the employment hazardous. Geller v Republic Novelty Works, 180 A.D. 762, 168 N.Y.S. 263, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9102 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

The words "structural carpentry" in former § 2, group 2, did not include an isolated act of planing wood. Alterman v A. I. Namm & Son, 190 A.D. 76, 179 N.Y.S. 584, 1919 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4073 (N.Y. App. Div. 1919), aff'd, 229 N.Y. 640, 129 N.E. 940, 229 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 640, 1920 N.Y. LEXIS 845 (N.Y. 1920).

18. Installation of pipes, boilers and the like

Lifting of a radiator to connect it up for heating purposes is not heating engineering nor installation and the covering of pipes or boilers within the meaning of former § 2, group 42 as it existed January, 1916, and hence the superintendent of an apartment house injured by fall of radiator, which he was moving from storeroom to apartment, is not entitled to compensation for such injury occurring before that date. Kammer v Hawk, 221 N.Y. 378, 117 N.E. 576, 221 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 378, 1917 N.Y. LEXIS 1310 (N.Y.), reh'g denied, 222 N.Y. 585, 118 N.E. 1064, 222 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 585, 1917 N.Y. LEXIS 909 (N.Y. 1917).

The installation of water tanks is not the "installation of . . . boilers, engines or heavy machinery." Maloney v Levy & Gilliland Co., 176 A.D. 470, 163 N.Y.S. 505, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5158 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917), aff'd, 223 N.Y. 631, 119 N.E. 1057, 223 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 631, 1918 N.Y. LEXIS 1333 (N.Y. 1918).

19. Other activities

An employee of the board of education charged with designing, drafting and inspecting in connection with construction, additions to, alterations and maintenance of schoolhouses and who in the course of such duties was occasionally sent out into the field to render inspection service in the course of which the employee was required to climb stepladders, uncover electrical boxes, count wires, follow circuits, and use various tools is engaged in work which could be termed hazardous employment under the coverage of the statute. Gramlich v Board of Education, 297 N.Y. 349, 79 N.E.2d 437, 297 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 349, 1948 N.Y. LEXIS 844 (N.Y. 1948).

An award against the employer's insurance carrier and a finding that the claimant was injured while performing work incidental to work covered by the policy was unfounded, where the claimant was injured while she was, at the direction of her employer, cleaning the employer's private apartment, which was in the same building as the business premises, during her regular working hours; where the policy issued to the employer classified the employer's operations as "Retail Stores", stated that the insured was not conducting other operations, and expressly excluded domestic service or employment from coverage "unless required by law". Jones v Howland Costume Co., 26 A.D.2d 714, 271 N.Y.S.2d 336, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3768 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1966), aff'd, 19 N.Y.2d 841, 280 N.Y.S.2d 405, 227 N.E.2d 319, 1967 N.Y. LEXIS 1548 (N.Y. 1967).

IV. Excavation And Highway Construction

20. In general; excavation

It is not reasonable to suppose that the insertion of the word "excavation" among hazardous occupations meant every minor excavation which was incidental to other work. Morris v Muldoon, 190 A.D. 689, 180 N.Y.S. 319, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4223 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 229 N.Y. 611, 129 N.E. 928, 229 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 611, 1920 N.Y. LEXIS 816 (N.Y. 1920).

An employee of a city who was injured while working in construction of a road from a city hospital to the public highway is within subd. 1 groups 13 and 17. Hughes v Buffalo, 208 A.D. 682, 203 N.Y.S. 391, 1924 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5117 (N.Y. App. Div. 1924).

21. Construction of bridges, tunnels and subways

New York city, in constructing a subway under the supervision of the public service commission, is engaged in a hazardous employment under former group 13 of this section. Sexton v Public Service Com., 180 A.D. 111, 167 N.Y.S. 493, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8109 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

Remedy for the death of one who was killed in the construction of the New York-New Jersey vehicular tunnel is under Workmen's Compensation Law. Sullivan v Booth & Flinn, Ltd., 202 N.Y.S. 807, 122 Misc. 288, 1924 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 653 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), aff'd, 209 A.D. 897, 205 N.Y.S. 954, 1924 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9712 (N.Y. App. Div. 1924).

Where a county continued its highway work throughout the year, in that during the winter months it manufactured road material and repaired machinery and equipment, such employment was not seasonal. Hogan v Onondaga County, 221 A.D. 636, 225 N.Y.S. 57, 1927 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6526 (N.Y. App. Div. 1927).. See also Kittle v Kinderhook, 214 A.D. 345, 212 N.Y.S. 410, 1925 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6847 (N.Y. App. Div. 1925).

The work of a laborer employed by a contractor in constructing highways is seasonal work, where it appears that the period of the year during which highway construction work is carried on is substantially from middle of April until first of December. Damm v Schreier Contracting Co., 235 A.D. 478, 257 N.Y.S. 705, 1932 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7994 (N.Y. App. Div. 1932).

V. Operation Of Vehicles

23. In general

A driver of an open motor truck who suffered a right facial paralysis known as "Bell's Palsy" suffers an occupational disease under this section. Nayor v Harwick Trucking Corp., 283 N.Y. 62, 27 N.E.2d 434, 283 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 62, 1940 N.Y. LEXIS 938 (N.Y. 1940).

24. Loading, alighting, maintenance and related activities

The operation of a wagon or truck referred to in former § 2, group 41 related to anything incident to the employment such as loading and unloading of wagon, and necessary care and attention to the wagon and horse. Costello v Taylor, 217 N.Y. 179, 111 N.E. 755, 217 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 179, 1916 N.Y. LEXIS 1298 (N.Y. 1916).; 218 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 59, 218 N.Y. 59, 112 N.E. 571, 218 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 59, 1916 N.Y. LEXIS 1042 (N.Y. 1916), 218 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 59, 218 N.Y. 59, 112 N.E. 571, 218 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 59, 1916 N.Y. LEXIS 1042 (N.Y. 1916).

An employee whose duties included acting as both a driver and delivery man and who drove a meat delivery wagon and occasionally delivered meat to places near the market on foot, is not injured in the course of a hazardous employment where he fell while on his way on foot to deliver a package of meat. Newman v Newman, 218 N.Y. 325, 113 N.E. 332, 218 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 325, 1916 N.Y. LEXIS 1076 (N.Y. 1916).

A teamster employed by a person in the "business of carting and dray work" who, after operating a truck during the day, returned to the stable and was fatally injured while he was putting his horse into a stall, met his death in the course of his employment of operating a truck within the meaning of former § 2 group 41. Smith v Price, 168 A.D. 421, 153 N.Y.S. 221, 1915 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8233 (N.Y. App. Div. 1915).

A driver of a truck employed to collect dirt from the streets of a city, a hazardous employment under former § 2 group 41, who while so engaged stepped on a rusty nail in a board lying in the street while he was in the act of getting upon his wagon, may be deemed to have been injured in the course of his hazardous employment. Putnam v Murray, 174 A.D. 720, 160 N.Y.S. 811, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10417 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

A day laborer employed in working and moving a threshing machine which his employer takes through the country, stopping from place to place to thresh for farmers for compensation, who was injured while putting the machine in the barn is engaged in the operation of a vehicle, a hazardous employment within the meaning of former § 2 group 41. White v Loades, 178 A.D. 236, 164 N.Y.S. 1023, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5842 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

A village street commissioner and policeman who for his own convenience, was riding in the vehicle of a truckman not in the employ of the village, and injured while alighting from said vehicle, is not entitled to an award. Spinks v Marcellus, 180 A.D. 732, 168 N.Y.S. 69, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9049 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

Former § 2, group 41 contemplated operation of vehicles as the principal business or occupation of the employer for pecuniary gain, and does not cover an injury resulting from incidental loading of a wagon. Casterline v Gillen, 182 A.D. 105, 169 N.Y.S. 345, 1918 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7838 (N.Y. App. Div. 1918).

25. Particular implements as vehicles

An implement drawn by a horse and used to scrape snow from ice intended to be harvested and which also when loaded is turned over and used as sled to carry snow to the place where it is to be dumped was a "vehicle" within the meaning of former § 2, group 41, as it stood prior to the amendment of 1916. Berg v Hetzler Bros., 179 A.D. 551, 166 N.Y.S. 830, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7425 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917), aff'd, 222 N.Y. 645, 119 N.E. 1031, 222 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 645, 1918 N.Y. LEXIS 1531 (N.Y. 1918).

A combined thresher and cleaner drawn from place to place by horses was not a "vehicle," within the meaning of former § 2, group 41, after the horses have been detached and it was being operated as a stationary machine. Vincent v Taylor Bros., 180 A.D. 818, 168 N.Y.S. 287, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9112 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

26. Particular activities as vehicle operation

A teamster drawing sand from a pit is engaged in a hazardous employment within the meaning of former § 2, grs. 19 and 41. In re State Workmen's Compensation Com., 218 N.Y. 59, 112 N.E. 571, 218 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 59, 1916 N.Y. LEXIS 1042 (N.Y. 1916).

Dependents of a salesman engaged in a nonhazardous business, who was struck and killed by a railroad train while riding a motorcycle furnished by his employer to take orders and collect accounts, are entitled to compensation under the provision of former § 2 group 4. Mulford v A. S. Pettit & Sons, 220 N.Y. 540, 116 N.E. 344, 220 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 540, 1917 N.Y. LEXIS 1000 (N.Y. 1917).

A workman employed by a farmer who also sold farm implements and machinery is engaged in a hazardous occupation within the meaning of sub 1, group 7 of this section, where such workman was required to operate a gasoline vehicle with the knowledge and consent of his employer. Commissioner of Taxation v Phillips, 283 N.Y. 673, 28 N.E.2d 401, 283 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 673, 1940 N.Y. LEXIS 1112 (N.Y. 1940).

27. —Chauffeur

A private chauffeur employed in New York city and killed while in the course of his employment is covered by group 12. Sullivan v Valentine, 275 N.Y. 569, 11 N.E.2d 757, 275 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 569, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1550 (N.Y. 1937).

A chauffeur employed to operate a delivery truck and also a touring car belonging to his employer which was used primarily for the pleasure and convenience of the employer's family, although occasionally used to deliver goods when the truck was being repaired, who received injuries while repairing the touring car where it was being used to take home a household servant of the employer, is not, at the time of receiving such injuries, engaged in a hazardous employment carried on by his employer for pecuniary gain, within the meaning of the workmen's compensation law. Wincheski v Morris, 179 A.D. 600, 166 N.Y.S. 873, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7430 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

VI. Manufacture And Handling Of Foods

28. Activities incidental to food handling business

A carpenter, employed by a company engaged in manufacturing macaroni, a business within former § 2, group 33, to make repairs and improvements to one of its buildings is not an "employee" engaged in hazardous business within meaning of Work. Comp. Law. Bargey v Massaro Macaroni Co., 218 N.Y. 410, 113 N.E. 407, 218 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 410, 1916 N.Y. LEXIS 1081 (N.Y. 1916).

A night watchman employed in a bakery whose duties consisted of patrolling the bakery's buildings at night, is within the coverage of the workmen's compensation law. Fogarty v National Biscuit Co., 221 N.Y. 20, 116 N.E. 346, 221 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 20, 1917 N.Y. LEXIS 1262 (N.Y. 1917).

One employed by a cheese manufacturer solely for the purpose of harvesting ice for use in the business, and who is not required to do any work in connection with the manufacture of cheese, is not engaged in a "hazardous employment," and is not entitled to an award for loss of fingers which were frozen while he was engaged in his employment. Aylesworth v Phoenix Cheese Co., 170 A.D. 34, 155 N.Y.S. 916, 1915 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5116 (N.Y. App. Div. 1915).

An employee is not entitled to compensation on the ground he was engaged in the preparation of foodstuffs within the meaning of group 8 of subdivision 1 of this section, where he was injured while carrying a basket of ensilage to feed cattle on his employer's farm, even though the employer operated a pasteurizing plant. Laduke v Martin (1941) 261 App Div 344, 25 NYS2d 622, affd (1941) 287 NY 546, 38 NE2d 221.. See also Davis v Ryan, 262 A.D. 982, 30 N.Y.S.2d 17, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6775 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941), aff'd, 287 N.Y. 778, 40 N.E.2d 646, 287 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 778, 1942 N.Y. LEXIS 1794 (N.Y. 1942).

29. Preparation and handling of meat

The making of sausage meat by means of an electric meat chopper was a hazardous employment within the meaning of former § 2, group 30. Kohler v Frohmann, 167 A.D. 533, 153 N.Y.S. 559, 1915 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8295 (N.Y. App. Div. 1915).

A butcher employed at a hotel to cut up and prepare meat for delivery to cooks as ordered, was not engaged in a hazardous occupation within the meaning of former § 2, group 30 which did not cover ordinary preparation of food for cooking purposes. De La Gardelle v Hampton Co., 167 A.D. 617, 153 N.Y.S. 162, 1915 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8220 (N.Y. App. Div. 1915).

Prior to the enactment of L 1916 c 622, which included meat markets in former § 2, group 30, a person employed in a retail meat market who was injured while grinding meat in a machine for a customer, was not engaged in a hazardous employment and was not entitled to an award. Pietha v Murdter, 174 A.D. 764, 161 N.Y.S. 661, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8287 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).. See also Newman v Newman, 218 N.Y. 325, 113 N.E. 332, 218 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 325, 1916 N.Y. LEXIS 1076 (N.Y. 1916).

There was substantial evidence from which the Board could find that the disease from which a butcher died, pemphigus acutus, though rare, was an occupational disease. De Tura v Eastern Meat Markets, Inc., 14 A.D.2d 953, 221 N.Y.S.2d 188, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7894 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

30. Other particular activities

A school child employed in a school cafeteria and who received by way of remuneration a fifteen cent lunch is not engaged in a hazardous occupation within the meaning of the workmen's compensation law. Warney v Board of Education, 290 N.Y. 329, 49 N.E.2d 466, 290 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 329, 1943 N.Y. LEXIS 1086 (N.Y. 1943).

Where an employer maintained a meat market and also during the summer carried on a separate business of selling fruit in another building, a person who was employed solely in the fruit store where she sustained injuries is not entitled to award under Work. Comp. Law upon theory that her services were incidental to meat business of her employer. Wood v Papaw, 193 A.D. 529, 184 N.Y.S. 686, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5588 (N.Y. App. Div. 1920).

Where a claimant who has long been employed as a waiter and whose routine work required lifting and carrying of laden trays weighing about 30 pounds contracts a bilateral inguinal hernia, the Board can find that he has a compensable occupational disease where there is medical testimony that his occupation could produce such a condition. Svolos v Flatbush Plaza Restaurant, 21 A.D.2d 703, 249 N.Y.S.2d 250, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3863 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

VII. Storage

The business of owning and operating a loft building is not one of the hazardous employments embraced within the terms of the Work. Comp. Law. People ex rel. Lehigh & N. Y. R. R. Co. v Sohmer, 218 N.Y. 632, 112 N.E. 1070, 218 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 632, 1916 N.Y. LEXIS 1126 (N.Y. 1916).

32. Activities unrelated to storage business

Although an employer engaged in storing fruits and produce was engaged in a hazardous business within the meaning of former § 2 group 29, a person employed as a buyer, who was injured in an automobile accident while on a purchasing trip in a foreign state, is not entitled to compensation for the work in which he was engaged had no connection with the storage business. Sickles v Ballston Refrigerating Storage Co., 171 A.D. 108, 156 N.Y.S. 864, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9436 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

33. Maintenance of inventory incidental to wholesale or retail business as storage

A company engaged in retail trade, operating five and ten-cent stores and handling only a comparatively small stock of goods, replenished from day to day by incoming shipments, and storing goods merely as an incident to carrying on of its retail business, was not conducting warehouse or storage place within the meaning of former § 2, group 29. Walsh v F. W. Woolworth Co., 180 A.D. 120, 167 N.Y.S. 394, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8080 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

Where a retail coal dealer operating a plant consisting of three buildings containing twenty-eight compartments for different kinds of coal, having capacity of between 10,000 and 12,000 tons, is not holding his stock or any part thereof with reference to any future requirements of the market, but is offering same for sale in the ordinary course of his business, said dealer was not engaged in "employment" of "storage" within meaning of former § 2, group 29, and hence, claim for death of employee, injured prior to amendment of 1917 to former § 2, group 19 so as to include coal yards, should be dismissed. In re Roberto, 180 A.D. 143, 167 N.Y.S. 397, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8081 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

Where an employer was carrying on the business of a produce dealer limited to a few domestic fruits and vegetables, for pecuniary gain, and whatever of storage was involved in the transaction was incident to the business of dealing in produce, and there was a sign over the premises reading "wholesale vegetable and fruit market," said employer cannot be deemed to have been carrying on the business of "storage of all kinds and storage for hire," within the meaning of former § 2, group 29. Dugan v Harry J. McArdle, Inc., 184 A.D. 570, 172 N.Y.S. 27, 1918 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6579 (N.Y. App. Div. 1918), aff'd, 225 N.Y. 668, 122 N.E. 879, 225 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 668, 1919 N.Y. LEXIS 1198 (N.Y. 1919).

VIII. Longshore Work; Construction and Repair of Vessels

It was not necessary to re-enact former § 2, groups 8 and 10, as re-enacted by L 1918, c 249, which specified "Longshore work, including loading or unloading of cargoes" as one of the hazardous occupations, so as to make them effective as of October 6, 1917, the date of the amendment of the Federal Judicial Code giving to claimants in admiralty and maritime cases rights and remedies under the Work. Comp. Law of any state; the state statute came into force the moment the amendatory act of Congress was passed. Cimmino v John T. Clark & Son, 184 A.D. 745, 172 N.Y.S. 478, 1918 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6631 (N.Y. App. Div. 1918).

Where plaintiff alleges that he was injured while in defendant's employ as a longshoreman he places himself within former § 2, group 10, and his remedy is exclusively under § 11, unless he can show that his employer has failed to secure payment of compensation to plaintiff and his dependents as provided by statute. Campoccia v Panama R. Co., 181 N.Y.S. 14, 110 Misc. 116, 1920 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1212 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.), set aside, 182 N.Y.S. 807, 1920 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1502 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1920).

The New York Workmen's Compensation Act is unconstitutional as applied to the case of longshoremen employed by a steamship company engaged in interstate transportation by sea, who was injured while on board a vessel unloading at her wharf in navigable waters in New York. Southern Pacific Co. v Jensen, 244 U.S. 205, 37 S. Ct. 524, 61 L. Ed. 1086, 1917 U.S. LEXIS 1628 (U.S. 1917).

35. Relationship with other laws

Claimant, injured in 1944 while working on a pile driver, filed a compensation claim and the claim was disallowed with the consent of the claimant when the employer denied jurisdiction on the ground that the accident took place in navigable waters. In the meantime, the employer started payments under the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Act and continued them until claimant started an action in Supreme Court for damages under the Jones Act. The employer then moved in federal court and that court restrained all further proceedings and held, after a trial, that claimant was not a seaman. More than seven years after the accident, claimant sought to reopen compensation claim. The claimant was not bound by the seven years statute of limitations by virtue of Civil Practice Act § 23. But Civil Practice Act § 24 does not apply to compensation cases. Moreover, the court held that there was here a waiver of the time limitations. Luoma v Spearin, Preston & Burrows, Inc., 282 A.D. 612, 126 N.Y.S.2d 543, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4537 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953), aff'd, 307 N.Y. 728, 121 N.E.2d 544, 307 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 728, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 1458 (N.Y. 1954).

Where claimant's injury occurred while he was driving piles for the extension of a pier at a boat club on the Hudson River, his work was not so directly related to navigation or commerce that it was excluded from coverage under the New York Workmen's Compensation Law and such claim was not covered solely by the Longshoreman's and Harbor Workers' Act. Simis v Curran, 31 A.D.2d 697, 295 N.Y.S.2d 817, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2570 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1968).

The New York workmen's compensation law may be applied to the accidental injury of a longshoreman while engaged upon the dock in unloading a vessel lying in navigable waters, without working material prejudice to the general maritime law; and this is true whether awards under the act are made as upon implied agreements or otherwise. State Indus. Comm'n v Nordenholt Corp., 259 U.S. 263, 42 S. Ct. 473, 66 L. Ed. 933, 1922 U.S. LEXIS 2481 (U.S. 1922).

The extension of federal jurisdiction under the 1972 amendments to the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, 33 USCS §§ 901 et seq., does not supplant but only supplements state compensation law so that a state may validly apply its worders' compensation scheme to land-based injuries that fall within the coverage of the Act. Sun Ship, Inc. v Pennsylvania, 447 U.S. 715, 100 S. Ct. 2432, 65 L. Ed. 2d 458, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 50 (U.S.), reh'g denied, 448 U.S. 916, 101 S. Ct. 37, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1179 (U.S. 1980).

In interpreting the federal Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, the federal courts will adopt the New York decisions as they existed at the time of the enactment of the federal law but interpretations subsequent to adoption, while perhaps entitled to respectful consideration, are persuasive only and not binding. Iacone v Cardillo, 208 F.2d 696, 1953 U.S. App. LEXIS 3945 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1953).

36. Particular activities as longshore work

An employee of a contractor engaged in searching for rags among rubbish delivered by wagons at a city dump not for the purpose of preparing refuse for shipment, and not having anything to do with the removal thereof, is not engaged in "longshore work" which was declared to be a hazardous employment by former § 2, group 10. Tomassi v Christensen, 171 A.D. 284, 156 N.Y.S. 905, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9451 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

A company engaged in supplying watchmen to steamship companies for the sole purpose of guarding their cargoes is not engaged in providing longshoremen, nor is the watchman furnished a longshoreman, nor is the occupation of such watchman a hazardous employment. Oberg v W. J. McRoberts & Co., 175 A.D. 1, 161 N.Y.S. 934, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8332 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

An employee engaged in weighing hides on piers, which hides constitute cargoes unloaded from vessels, was engaged in a hazardous employment within the meaning of former § 2, group 10. Hiers v John A. Hull & Co., 178 A.D. 350, 164 N.Y.S. 767, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5784 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

A stevedore acting as a runner and checker, injured by chalk blowing into his eye while upon a vessel in navigable waters in pursuance of his duties, is engaged in a maritime contract and the state industrial commission has no jurisdiction. Zampiere v William Spencer & Son Corp., 194 A.D. 576, 185 N.Y.S. 639, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9329 (N.Y. App. Div. 1921).

A gas company employee required to assist in moving stoves and ranges in the company's building, and to and from its wagons, occasionally riding thereon to buildings occupied by customers, who was injured when the tail board of a wagon from which he was removing a stove gave way causing him to fall, is not engaged in "longshore" work. Gutheil v Consolidated Gas Co., 158 N.Y.S. 622, 94 Misc. 690, 1916 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1332 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1916).

37. Construction and repair of vessel

Workmen's compensation board may take jurisdiction over accident suffered by elevator constructor's helper while engaged in the installation of an elevator on a vessel where the work was not so directly connected with navigation or commerce and application of local law would interfere with essential uniformity of general maritime law. Payment by carrier of maximum compensation allowed under Longshoremen's Compensation Act did not amount to an estoppel where no formal jurisdiction was assumed by the Federal Compensation Commission. Seeler v Otis Elevator Co., 281 A.D. 140, 120 N.Y.S.2d 325, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3085 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

In an action by a longshoreman, who was employed by a stevedoring company and who sustained a work-related injury while working aboard a vessel when he attempted to place a securing bolt in the proper position while he and other employees were placing covers over the vessel with the aid of a crane which had been leased to stevedoring company by crane company, a third-party complaint by the crane company against the stevedoring company for contribution and indemnification was properly dismissed, where the stevedoring company had paid workers' compensation benefits to the employee, so as to preclude a claim for contribution, and where there was no evidence of an express or implied contract by the stevedoring company to indemnify the crane lessor. Magno v Waterman S.S. Lines, 89 A.D.2d 958, 454 N.Y.S.2d 105, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18205 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1982).

An employee who was injured while standing on the floor of so-called "graven dry dock," at work on the keel of a vessel lying therein, has a remedy under the Workmen's Compensation Law. Manufacturers' Liability Ins. Co. v Hamilton, 222 N.Y.S. 394, 129 Misc. 665, 1927 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 907 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1927).

"Construction and repair" of vessels as used in former § 2, group 9 comprehends a case where decedent was employed by a transport company to install bulkheads in a vessel belonging to a steamship company, which was lying at a dock in New York city. O'Brien v Luckenbach S. S. Co., 293 F. 170, 1923 U.S. App. LEXIS 1590 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1923).

IX. State Employees

A state employee is not entitled to maintain an action under the Jones Act even though he received injuries during the course of his employment on the navigable waters of the United States. Maloney v State, 2 A.D.2d 195, 154 N.Y.S.2d 132, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4627 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1956), aff'd, 3 N.Y.2d 356, 165 N.Y.S.2d 465, 144 N.E.2d 364, 1957 N.Y. LEXIS 896 (N.Y. 1957).

Workmen's Compensation Law § 3(1)(16) applies only to persons employed by the state but for some reason paid by a municipal corporation or other political subdivision. Edwards v Board of Education, 32 A.D.2d 690, 299 N.Y.S.2d 991, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4014 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969).

39. Inmates or residents of state institutions

Inmates of correctional institutions are not employees of the State of New York so as to be entitled to workmen's compensation benefits for injuries sustained while working within the institutions. Reid v New York State Dep't of Correctional Services, 54 A.D.2d 83, 387 N.Y.S.2d 589, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13617 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976), app. denied, 42 N.Y.2d 808, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 3853 (N.Y. 1977).

Mentally handicapped children engaged in a school work training program are not within the coverage of the Workmen's Compensation Law. 1962 Ops St Compt #1035.

40. Firefighters

One who has become an employee of the state of New York by command of a forest ranger in connection with fighting a forest fire is covered by workmen's compensation. Jones v State, 269 A.D. 920, 57 N.Y.S.2d 582, 1945 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4473 (N.Y. App. Div. 1945).. See also 1930 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 350.

41. State police, state militia and the like

A private of the state militia engaged in active service is not an employee of the state within the meaning of the workmen's compensation law. Goldstein v State, 281 N.Y. 396, 24 N.E.2d 97, 281 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 396, 1939 N.Y. LEXIS 1024 (N.Y. 1939).

42. Employees of state boards, commissions, authorities and the like

A state assemblyman is not an "employee" of the state and is not entitled to the Workmen's Compensation benefits. Toomey v New York State Legislature, 1 A.D.2d 41, 147 N.Y.S.2d 239, 1955

N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3702 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1955), aff'd, 2 N.Y.2d 446, 161 N.Y.S.2d 81, 141 N.E.2d 584, 1957 N.Y. LEXIS 1159 (N.Y. 1957).

Claimant, employed by State Division of Housing as construction inspector, was employee of division where division maintained exclusive control over manner and method of inspections and reports were made to the division, even though claimant was paid on a fee basis from a fund created by deposits by developers. De Stefano v State, Div. of Housing, 41 A.D.2d 801, 341 N.Y.S.2d 707, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4880 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 32 N.Y.2d 613, 1973 N.Y. LEXIS 2030 (N.Y. 1973).

43. Employees paid by or connected with municipal bodies

A recording clerk in the office of the register of the county of New York is not a state employee, and is not entitled to workmen's compensation under the provisions of group 16, for a personal injury received in the course of and arising out of his employment. Miller v State, 279 N.Y. 74, 17 N.E.2d 773, 279 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 74, 1938 N.Y. LEXIS 798 (N.Y. 1938).

An employee in the office of the board of elections of New York City is an employee of the state within sub 1, group 16 of this section. Daly v Board of Elections, 254 A.D. 914, 5 N.Y.S.2d 633, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8282 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938), aff'd, 279 N.Y. 743, 18 N.E.2d 689, 279 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 743, 1939 N.Y. LEXIS 910 (N.Y. 1939).

An investigator employed by the welfare department of the city of New York is not a state employee for whom the city is liable to pay compensation under group 16 of subdivision 1 of this section. Long v New York, 276 A.D. 799, 93 N.Y.S.2d 176, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3359 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949), aff'd, 302 N.Y. 681, 98 N.E.2d 482, 302 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 681, 1951 N.Y. LEXIS 847 (N.Y. 1951).

X. Municipal Employees

Group 17 makes the coverage of municipal employments coextensive with that of private employments covered by the statute. Leahy v New York, 285 N.Y. 443, 35 N.E.2d 34, 285 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 443, 1941 N.Y. LEXIS 1483 (N.Y. 1941).; Gramlich v Board of Education, 297 N.Y. 349, 79 N.E.2d 437, 297 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 349, 1948 N.Y. LEXIS 844 (N.Y. 1948).

Under former § 3, sub 3 and former § 2, group 43, New York city was liable under the Workmen's Compensation Law, if it was engaged in a hazardous business irrespective of the definition of the word "employment" in former § 3, sub 5. Sexton v Public Service Com., 180 A.D. 111, 167 N.Y.S. 493, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8109 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

State Insurance Fund was properly required to pay claim as if workmen's compensation insurance policy had been in effect prior to employee's death where State Fund was obligated to furnish insurance upon receipt of letter that municipality required insurance for employees about to engage in hazardous work, and where delay in issuance of policy until after death of employee was due to fund's failure to follow established procedures for issuance of such policies. Denisi v Parks, 42 A.D.2d 642, 345 N.Y.S.2d 163, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4108 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1973).

Where a city becomes a self insurer and complies with subdiv. 1, group 19, of this section and also § 50, the employee and employer are brought within the act for all purposes and the employer is entitled to the benefits of the additional cause of action allowed by § 13, subdiv. (c) which entitles it to recover any amounts paid for medical treatment. New York v Steers & Menke, 4 N.Y.S.2d 292, 167 Misc. 566, 1937 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1212 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1937), aff'd, 254 A.D. 669, 4 N.Y.S.2d 992, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7039 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938).

Municipal employees performing governmental functions do not come within the provision of the Workmen's Compensation Law. New York v Steers & Menke, 4 N.Y.S.2d 292, 167 Misc. 566, 1937 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1212 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1937), aff'd, 254 A.D. 669, 4 N.Y.S.2d 992, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7039 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938).

45. Members of fire and police forces

A city fire department is not operated for pecuniary gain, and a city fireman, while putting out a fire in the course of his employment as such, was not within former § 2, group 42. Krug v New York (1921) 196 App Div 226, 186 NYS 727, disapproved on other grounds by Buckley v New York (1982) 56 NY2d 300, 452 NYS2d 331, 437 NE2d 1088.; see also Millard v Townsend, 204 A.D. 132, 197 N.Y.S. 702, 1923 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9429 (N.Y. App. Div. 1923).

A member of the water supply police force is not an "employee" within the Work. Comp. Law, and he was not made such under former § 2, group 41 because when injured he was riding a motor cycle in going to pay a telephone bill. Kahl v New York, 198 A.D. 30, 189 N.Y.S. 547, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8035 (N.Y. App. Div. 1921).

Claimant, a paid city firefighter who was injured in 1981, was not entitled to workers' compensation benefits because the city had not extended coverage under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 3(1)(19) to firefighters in a 1933 resolution but only indicated that the resolution was intended to comply with a statutory requirement that the city secure the payment of workers' compensation claims; not until 1984 was a resolution passed that extended coverage to all city officers, employees, and officials. Matter of Wiley v City of Watertown Fire Dept., 39 A.D.3d 975, 833 N.Y.S.2d 740, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4448 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

Members of an incorporated fire company in answering calls may be included in the self insurance plan provided by the town in which such districts are located as a participating unit of such plan; such members of an incorporated volunteer fire company are to be considered as employees of the participating town for the purpose of inclusion within the self insurance plan. 1946 Ops St Compt 403.

City paid firemen are not within the coverage of this chapter unless the governing body of the city provides for such coverage by appropriate action. 1953 Ops St Compt File #6173.

Board of fire commissioners may by appropriate action provide workmen's compensation coverage for fire district officers and insure against the liability thus imposed. 1953 Ops St Compt File #6284.

Village may provide workmen's compensation coverage for its paid firemen and insure against the liability thus imposed. 1953 Ops St Compt File #6307.

Members of the police force of the Port Washington Police District may be covered by workmen's compensation pursuant to Group 19 of sub 1 of this section. 1954 Ops St Compt File #6506.

A city may provide workmen's compensation coverage for auxiliary policemen whose activities are sponsored and authorized by the local office of civil defense. 1961 Ops St Compt #440.

46. —Relationship with other compensation provisions

Policemen of New York city do not need the protection of the Work. Comp. Law because compensation is assured to them by an independent statute Ryan v New York, 228 N.Y. 16, 126 N.E. 350, 228 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 16, 1920 N.Y. LEXIS 901 (N.Y. 1920), overruled in part, Buckley v New York, 56 N.Y.2d 300, 452 N.Y.S.2d 331, 437 N.E.2d 1088, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3423 (N.Y. 1982).

Where a village affirmatively brought its firemen under the protection of § 50, sub 3-a, death benefits to such firemen were limited thereby and could not be awarded under sub 1, group 19 of this section. Wiltse v Owego, 262 A.D. 570, 31 N.Y.S.2d 110, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5427 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941), aff'd, 288 N.Y. 519, 41 N.E.2d 928, 288 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 519, 1942 N.Y. LEXIS 1372 (N.Y. 1942).

Liability compensation for the death or injury to volunteer firemen begins only where the special statutory liability provided in Gen Mun L § 205 ends, and no liability arises against the fire company or fire district for compensation benefits until these had exceeded the amount for which the town was liable under a judgment of the county court. Schraeder v Mendon Volunteer Fire Co., 278 A.D. 986, 105 N.Y.S.2d 895, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5449 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

Where an award of $3000 was made to the widow of a volunteer fireman under the General Municipal Law (§ 205) and an award of $10 a week death benefits was made under the Workmen's Compensation Law, and the employer was liable for only 104 weeks compensation because decedent had pre-existing cardiac condition, the employer must make payment for 104 weeks at end of 300 weeks. Grimes v Albion, 279 A.D. 486, 111 N.Y.S.2d 319, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4702 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

The amount recovered by a volunteer fireman injured while attempting to answer a fire alarm, under General Municipal Law § 205, should be deducted from an award for total disability. Brundage v Westons Mills Volunteer Fire Dep't, 1 A.D.2d 854, 149 N.Y.S.2d 3, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6290 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Police officer employed by town which chose to have workmen's compensation insurance for its police officers was eligible for workmen's compensation benefits even though the municipality paid him his regular salary during his disability and compensation carrier paid his medical expenses. McKay v West Seneca, 51 A.D.2d 373, 381 N.Y.S.2d 892, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11084 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976), rev'd, 41 N.Y.2d 931, 394 N.Y.S.2d 637, 363 N.E.2d 361, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 1995 (N.Y. 1977).

Paid or volunteer firemen answering a call to a federal reservation or installation are protected under the applicable provisions of the General Municipal Law and Workmen's Compensation Law. 1949 Atty Gen March 7.

47. Civil defense employees

Towns and villages must provide workmen's compensation coverage for employees engaged in civil defense activities in the course of their employment. 1952 Ops St Compt Jan 17.

The Workmen's Compensation coverage provided for Civil Defense volunteers does not cover them in case of injury or while engaged in emergency work in connection with a natural disaster unless the appropriate civil defense authorities have authorized such work as a training or practice civil defense activity. 1955 Ops St Compt File #7424.

A local director of civil defense may be brought within the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Law by action of the governmental body having jurisdiction over the area which he controls. 1956 Ops St Compt File #7977.

48. Inspectors and investigators

A claimant employed in the department of markets in the city of New York as an inspector in the weights and measures division is not within the coverage of the workmen's compensation law where his work did not require that he work in public markets, although he did occasionally test weights and measures there and he was injured while on the world's fair grounds. Dolan v New York, 289 N.Y. 663, 45 N.E.2d 169, 289 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 663, 1942 N.Y. LEXIS 1234 (N.Y. 1942).

An inspector in the department of public markets, weights and measures in New York City, is not entitled to a disability award for injuries suffered in the municipal market where it appears that, while her duties required her to be in the market at the time of the accident, her occupation was not that of persons engaged in work in markets within the purview of subdiv. 1, group 14 of this section, since her presence in the market was simply incidental to her work. Hayes v New York, 256 A.D. 111, 9 N.Y.S.2d 39, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4649 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 280 N.Y. 743, 21 N.E.2d 517, 280 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 743, 1939 N.Y. LEXIS 1552 (N.Y. 1939).

An investigator for the New York city department of welfare is not engaged in a hazardous employment nor is the city of New York department of welfare principally engaged in a hazardous employment under this section. Long v New York, 276 A.D. 799, 93 N.Y.S.2d 176, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3359 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949), aff'd, 302 N.Y. 681, 98 N.E.2d 482, 302 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 681, 1951 N.Y. LEXIS 847 (N.Y. 1951).

A veterinarian attached to the health department with the title of inspector among whose duties was to examine meat at a certain market is not engaged in a hazardous employment as listed by this section. New York v Steers & Menke, 4 N.Y.S.2d 292, 167 Misc. 566, 1937 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1212 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1937), aff'd, 254 A.D. 669, 4 N.Y.S.2d 992, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7039 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938).

A veterinarian attached to the health department is not brought within the workmen's compensation law because he was working in a meat market where his presence was simply an incident in his work of inspecting meat which could just as well have brought him to many places outside the market. New York v Steers & Menke, 4 N.Y.S.2d 292, 167 Misc. 566, 1937 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1212 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1937), aff'd, 254 A.D. 669, 4 N.Y.S.2d 992, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7039 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938).

49. Home relief recipients assigned to work for municipality

Persons assigned to work pursuant to Social Welfare Law, § 164 are employees of assigning municipality and entitled to workmen's compensation benefits where such municipality has brought all employees within coverage of such law. 1951 Ops St Compt File #5019.

50. Crossing guards, playground directors and school employees

Employment of workmen by a school district is covered by group 17. Bailey v School Dist., 204 A.D. 125, 198 N.Y.S. 247, 1923 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9428 (N.Y. App. Div. 1923).

A playground director who had to do some work as a laborer in the maintenance of grounds, his injury occurring while shoveling clay, is engaged in a hazardous employment. Kaufman v New York, 270 A.D. 967, 62 N.Y.S.2d 1, 1946 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4883 (N.Y. App. Div. 1946).

"Crossing guards" employed by city at street intersections near schools may be provided workmen's compensation coverage by appropriate action of governing board of city. If such action is taken in a city which participates in county self-insurance plan, such coverage would be provided by the plan. 1953 Ops St Compt File #6434.

51. Sheriffs and deputies

A deputy sheriff who is injured or killed while working on a criminal matter is within the coverage of the Workmen's Compensation Law. 1961 Ops St Compt File #23.

Group 17 of this section extends Workmen's Compensation Law coverage to sheriffs, under-sheriffs, and duly appointed regular deputies of the sheriff, and a County Mutual Self-Insurance Plan is liable for payment of benefits. 1961 Ops St Compt File #23.

52. Other employees

A physician employed by the department of correction of New York City may not be granted compensation by the state industrial board under group 18; employees of a municipal corporation are not covered thereby. Stoerzer v New York, 267 N.Y. 339, 196 N.E. 281, 267 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 339, 1935 N.Y. LEXIS 1221 (N.Y. 1935).

A ledger clerk employed in the department of purchase in the City of New York whose work involved the entry of orders and making records of payments for purchases by various departments of the city government is not engaged in a hazardous employment. Clyde v New York, 275 A.D. 161, 89 N.Y.S.2d 105, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3733 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

A public health nurse in a tubercular clinic operated by the New York City Department of Health is engaged in a hazardous employment under subdivision 1, groups 14 and 15 of this section. Hogans v New York, Department of Health, 278 A.D. 620, 101 N.Y.S.2d 910, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4110 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

Claimant was accidentally injured in assisting some employees of the Village of Rouses Point in launching a float, in the course of the village's operation and maintenance of a "recreation project". Claimant was an elected trustee of the village. He was supervising the work wherein he was injured as a duly appointed representative of the governing body of the village, and his injury was an incident arising therefrom. Thus his injury arose out of and in the course of his work as an elected trustee of the village. An award was proper. Langlois v Rouses Point, 280 A.D. 1005, 116 N.Y.S.2d 793, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4551 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

"Removal of snow" is one of the enumerated hazardous employments in which compensation is payable for injuries or death, and a city carrying on that employment is liable for such compensation. Castle v North End Contracting Corp., 21 A.D.2d 8, 248 N.Y.S.2d 95, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4181 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964), limited, Bellefeuille v City & County Sav. Bank, 43 A.D.2d 335, 351 N.Y.S.2d 738, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5833 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

Probation officer assigned to work on conciliation cases, interviewing the parties, and presenting cases before the Family Court, was eligible to receive workmen's compensation benefits under this section, since the workmen's compensation board properly found that he was an employee of the city under group 16 of subdivision (1) of this section, notwithstanding adoption of Article VI of the New York State Constitution and the enactment of Article 7-A of the Judiciary Law. Chilk v New York, 26 A.D.2d 425, 275 N.Y.S.2d 167, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2982 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1966), aff'd, 22 N.Y.2d 661, 291 N.Y.S.2d 358, 238 N.E.2d 748, 1968 N.Y. LEXIS 1404 (N.Y. 1968).

A business machine operator for the Bureau of Supplies of the Board of Education of the City of New York who was injured in a fall was not a city employee for purposes of Workmen's Compensation Law coverage. Edwards v Board of Education, 32 A.D.2d 690, 299 N.Y.S.2d 991, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4014 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969).

An action brought by the plaintiff, administrator of a county hospital, against the defendant, county treasurer, who also served as a treasurer of the hospital, after plaintiff passenger and defendant driver were involved in a motor vehicle accident during the course of their employment, is dismissed on the ground that the court lacked jurisdiction because the parties were in the same employ and, accordingly, plaintiff's exclusive remedy was a claim for workers' compensation; since the hospital is a department of the county, and since the plaintiff is an employee of the hospital, he must also be considered an employee of the county, and is, therefore, a "fellow employee" of the defendant, who is a county employee in that he is treasurer of the county. Moreover, while as a matter of law, elected county treasurers are public officers and not generally employees of the county, the Legislature has provided otherwise. Lane v Flack, 73 A.D.2d 65, 425 N.Y.S.2d 648, 1980 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9718 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1980), aff'd, 52 N.Y.2d 856, 437 N.Y.S.2d 78, 418 N.E.2d 671, 1981 N.Y. LEXIS 2180 (N.Y. 1981).

A village may not recognize a claim for compensation for personal injuries sustained by a trustee while performing his duties when the trustee has already received a workmen's compensation award for his injuries. 1961 Ops St Compt #308.

XI. Teachers and Educational Institutions

53. In general

A local board of education does not conduct a hazardous employment. Gramlich v Board of Education, 297 N.Y. 349, 79 N.E.2d 437, 297 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 349, 1948 N.Y. LEXIS 844 (N.Y. 1948).

Former § 2, group 44 refers to employment and by its terms excludes schoolteachers or other employees outside of the enumerated class. Beeman v Board of Education, 195 A.D. 357, 187 N.Y.S. 213, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4746 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 231 N.Y. 624, 132 N.E. 914, 231 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 624, 1921 N.Y. LEXIS 793 (N.Y. 1921).

A teacher at a state school is covered by the workmen's compensation law as an employee of the state. Robison v State, 263 A.D. 240, 32 N.Y.S.2d 388, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6857 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

54. Teachers engaged in experiments, manual training or use of tools or machinery

A schoolteacher in carrying on chemical experiments prescribed by the Educ. Law is not engaged in a hazardous employment within the meaning of the Work. Beeman v Board of Education, 195 A.D. 357, 187 N.Y.S. 213, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4746 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 231 N.Y. 624, 132 N.E. 914, 231 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 624, 1921 N.Y. LEXIS 793 (N.Y. 1921).

One engaged in manual teaching for a religious, charitable educational institution is not covered by workmen's compensation in view of the provision of group 18 of subdivision 1 of this section excluding persons "engaged in a teaching or nonmanual capacity". Jones v Schenectady Boys Club, Inc., 276 A.D. 879, 93 N.Y.S.2d 764, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3667 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

Teacher of applied science in vocational and technical school whose duties required him to demonstrate the uses of hydraulic presses, motors and electric circuit levers as well as conducting many chemical experiments, was within enumerated teaching specialties defined by this section and evidence was sufficient to establish that he was a teacher of "industrial or trade subjects" as well as subjects "requiring, for instruction purposes, use of tools or machinery for which protective, guarding or safety devices are required by the Labor Law"; and further that his employment was "hazardous" by definition of the section. Blackman v New York, 29 A.D.2d 720, 286 N.Y.S.2d 639, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4829 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1968).

Inasmuch as Work Comp Law § 3(1)(Group 20) was enacted to allow New York City shop teachers engaged in hazardous activities to seek workers' compensation when injured while performing their duties until such time as they came within the provisions of their retirement plan, the ordinance amendment that provided that teachers could be retired for accidental disabilities for which there was no minimum service requirement rendered the instant claimant elegible for retirement under the teachers' retirement system when injured, and therefore excluded him from obtaining benefits under the Workers' Compensation Law. Davis v New York City Bd. of Education, 85 A.D.2d 815, 445 N.Y.S.2d 626, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16633 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981), aff'd, 57 N.Y.2d 988, 457 N.Y.S.2d 244, 443 N.E.2d 492, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3835 (N.Y. 1982).

Trade and manual arts teachers in New York City may be awarded compensation benefits provided they are not eligible for retirement; phrase "eligible for retirement" means membership in class of those entitled to apply for benefits and person entitled to apply for retirement benefits is precluded from receipt of compensation benefits. Georgopoulos v New York City Bd. of Education, 112 A.D.2d 633, 492 N.Y.S.2d 154, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 55886 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1985).

55. Miscellaneous

Teacher's allergy to hydrocarbons which is exacerbated when she is assigned classroom in new building which is under construction does not constitute occupational disease, since allergy to hydrocarbons is not one of generally recognized risks of teaching profession, but is instead hazard of being in one particular building. Dando v Binghamton Bd. of Education, 111 A.D.2d 1060, 490 N.Y.S.2d 360, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 50291 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1985).

When a student was injured while acting as a student teacher at one of a school district's schools, and sued the district for personal injuries, the law was not so clear, under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law §§ 2(4), 3(1) (Group 20-a) (Group 22), as to allow the trial court to determine, as a matter of law, that the student's suit was barred by workers' compensation immunity, under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law §§ 11, 29(6), and such a decision should have awaited a determination by the Workers' Compensation Board. Santigate v Linsalata, 304 A.D.2d 639, 759 N.Y.S.2d 100, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3976 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2003).

Unless the accident is compensable under the Workmen's Compensation Law, and except in certain city school districts, a teacher or other employee may not be compensated by a school district for loss of personal property. 1969 Ops St Compt File #15.

XII. Business Employing Four Or More Operatives Or Workmen

56. In general

The words "workmen or operatives," as used in subd. Gilmore v Preferred Acc. Ins. Co., 283 N.Y. 92, 27 N.E.2d 515, 283 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 92, 1940 N.Y. LEXIS 917 (N.Y. 1940).

For an employer's operations to fall within the coverage of this act because more than eight employees are engaged in the business, there must be such number of people doing manual work, not counting administrative or inspection employees. Kaye v Duff & Brown, Inc., 13 A.D.2d 594, 212 N.Y.S.2d 562, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11959 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

The rights of employers under the Fourteenth Amendment are not violated by the extension of the workmen's compensation law to all employments in which 4 or more workmen or operatives (farm laborers and domestic servants excepted) are regularly employed, which is construed by the state courts as including all other employees of the same employer and employed in the same business with such workmen and operatives, though at places remote from their work. Ward & Gow v Krinsky, 259 U.S. 503, 42 S. Ct. 529, 66 L. Ed. 1033, 1922 U.S. LEXIS 2495 (U.S. 1922).

57. Regular employment

Under gr. 18 it is not necessary that four men should be employed during the entire year in order that the employer come within the provisions of the law. It is sufficient if such employment continues through a reasonably definite period of time and is not casual. Adams v Ross, 230 A.D. 216, 243 N.Y.S. 464, 1930 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8582 (N.Y. App. Div. 1930).

Clerks opening boxes once or twice a week, and not at the same time, are not regularly employed within the purview of gr. 18, which covers regular employment only. Cohen v Rosalsky, 230 A.D. 604, 246 N.Y.S. 299, 1930 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8693 (N.Y. App. Div. 1930), aff'd, 256 N.Y. 649, 177 N.E. 177, 256 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 649, 1931 N.Y. LEXIS 1246 (N.Y. 1931).

58. Coverage of employees not classified as operatives or engaged in hazardous aspect of employment

The widow of an employee, not a "workman" or "operative", within the meaning of the statute, who was killed while engaged in the business of the employer for whom 4 "workmen" or "operatives" were working at the time, is entitled to an award under the statute. Europe v Addison Amusements, Inc., 231 N.Y. 105, 131 N.E. 750, 231 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 105, 1921 N.Y. LEXIS 615 (N.Y. 1921).

All employees of a "hazardous employment" were within the protection of the Workmen's Compensation Law irrespective of whether their particular duties brought them within the hazard of the employment. Krinsky v Ward & Gow, 193 A.D. 557, 184 N.Y.S. 443, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5596 (N.Y. App. Div. 1920), aff'd, 231 N.Y. 525, 132 N.E. 873, 231 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 525, 1921 N.Y. LEXIS 678 (N.Y. 1921).

Where an employer who conducts newsstands in various stations of a rapid transit company in New York city distributes periodicals to the said stands by means of trucks and there are more than 4 "workmen or operatives" within the meaning of the second group 45 of former § 2, as well as many other employees who cannot be classified as workmen or operatives, a person in the latter class employed as a salesman at a newsstand who was injured in the course of his employment is entitled to an award. Krinsky v Ward & Gow (1920) 193 App Div 557, 184 NYS 443, aff'd (1921) 231 NY 525, 132 NE 873, aff'd (1922) 259 US 503, 66 L Ed 1033, 42 S Ct 529, 28 ALR 1207.. See also Ray v Union News Co., 198 A.D. 149, 189 N.Y.S. 486, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8057 (N.Y. App. Div. 1921).

59. Particular employees as workmen or operatives

A claim for compensation for the death of a lawyer employed as an investigator and claim adjuster, who, in course of his employment, while walking on a sidewalk, was struck by a bicycle, will be dismissed, because deceased was not engaged in a hazardous occupation and was not a workman or operative within the coverage of sub 1, group 18 of this section. Gilmore v Preferred Acc. Ins. Co., 283 N.Y. 92, 27 N.E.2d 515, 283 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 92, 1940 N.Y. LEXIS 917 (N.Y. 1940).

A brokerage house employing clerks, salesmen and stenographers, and messengers whose duties consist of running errands and carrying packages to and from banks and also in doing some manual labor, was not within second group 45 of former § 2. Westbay v Curtis & Sanger, 198 A.D. 25, 189 N.Y.S. 539, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8034 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 232 N.Y. 555, 134 N.E. 569, 232 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 555, 1921 N.Y. LEXIS 587 (N.Y. 1921).

A cook, waiter, counterman, and general utility man in a lunch room, were workmen or operatives, within the second group 45 of former § 2. Jurman v Hebrew Nat'l Sausage Factory, 198 A.D. 456, 191 N.Y.S. 339, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8120 (N.Y. App. Div. 1921).

A cashier in a combination lunch room and delicatessen store was not a workman or operative within the second group 45 of former § 2. Jurman v Hebrew Nat'l Sausage Factory, 198 A.D. 456, 191 N.Y.S. 339, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8120 (N.Y. App. Div. 1921).

XIII. Miscellaneous Occupations

60. Cemetery employees

One employed in a cemetery in connection with the digging of a grave and the burial of a body is exposed by his employment to the hazard of being struck by lightning. Giovine v United Hebrew Cemetery, 263 A.D. 772, 30 N.Y.S.2d 929, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4880 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

A rabbi engaged by a cemetery association to say prayers for such of its patrons as might desire such service is not an employee within the meaning of group 18 of subdivision 1 of this section. Israeli v Wellwood Cemetery Ass'n, 271 A.D. 855, 66 N.Y.S.2d 28, 1946 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3415 (N.Y. App. Div. 1946).

61. Decorating, upholstering and the like

A person employed by a dealer in antique furniture, pictures, bric-a-brac, etc., who was sent out at times to hang pictures sold by his employer and who was injured while so engaged, was not "decorating" a building under former § 2, group 42 as it stood prior to the amendment made in 1916 and is not entitled to an award. Grasell v Broadhead, 175 A.D. 874, 162 N.Y.S. 421, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10445 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

The occupation of carpet layer was not within former § 2, group 16, declaring upholstering to be hazardous employment, such group being a manufacturing group or one in which machinery and tools and manufacturing conditions exist. Stradar v Stern Bros., 184 A.D. 700, 172 N.Y.S. 482, 1918 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6633 (N.Y. App. Div. 1918).

Then-15 year old boy who worked on weekends for a farmer and was directed in his tasks by the farmer was a "farm employee" for workers' compensation purposes and was entitled to coverage for a work-related accident on the farm where the farmer had sold cattle from the farm in the past and contemplated doing so in the future. Taylor v Kranichfeld, 2 A.D.3d 1099, 769 N.Y.S.2d 335, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13517 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

62. Farming and farm labor

A neighbor employed by a farmer to make repairs on his barn who was injured by a collapse of staging used for placing slate on the roof is not entitled to compensation because he was a farm laborer. Coleman v Bartholomew, 175 A.D. 122, 161 N.Y.S. 560, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8265 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

A man who travels through the country with a threshing machine, stopping from place to place to thresh for farmers for compensation, is not engaged in farming and his employees are not farm laborers. White v Loades, 178 A.D. 236, 164 N.Y.S. 1023, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5842 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

Where a building contractor purchased a farm for the purpose of improving the same and eventually reselling it at a profit, and with no intention of carrying on farming operations, a person employed by him to help in making such improvements is not a farm laborer and is entitled to an award for injuries received by a fall from a ladder while engaged in picking apples from a tree which he had been ordered to prune, which work was being done not for the purpose of marketing the fruit but for the sole purpose of improving the appearance of the place. O'Dell v Bowman, 189 A.D. 386, 179 N.Y.S. 592, 1919 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4675 (N.Y. App. Div. 1919).

Labor incidental to the operation of a farm is not a hazardous employment under the workmen's compensation law. Baum v Welden, 267 A.D. 1032, 48 N.Y.S.2d 305, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6097 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1944).

Seasonal workers were joint employees of a membership corporation organized as an agency to secure such employees for its fourteen members engaged in vegetable growing. Diaz v Ulster Vegetable Growers Co-op., Inc., 282 A.D. 426, 123 N.Y.S.2d 321, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4486 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953), aff'd, 306 N.Y. 859, 118 N.E.2d 916, 306 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 859, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 1186 (N.Y. 1954).

On appeal from a decision of the board finding that claimant had contracted an occupational disease known as "farmer's lung" which made him susceptible to infection and the development of bronchopneumonia it was held that there was substantial medical evidence from which the board could properly so find. Burger v Yandik, 24 A.D.2d 673, 261 N.Y.S.2d 588, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3672 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Then-15 year old boy who worked on weekends for a farmer and was directed in his tasks by the farmer was a "farm employee" for workers' compensation purposes and was entitled to coverage for a work-related accident on the farm. Taylor v Kranichfeld, 2 A.D.3d 1099, 769 N.Y.S.2d 335, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13517 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

63. Installation, operation or repair of electrical lines, appliances or the like

A moving picture machine is not an "appliance" within the meaning of that term as used in former § 2, group 12 relating to construction, installation, repair or operation of electric light and electric power lines, dynamos or appliances, although the picture machine is driven by an electric motor. Balcom v Ellintuch & Yarfitz, 179 A.D. 548, 166 N.Y.S. 841, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7426 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

An electrician in a grain terminal building is included in group 7 of subdivision 1 of this section. Lawton v Port of New York Authority, 276 A.D. 81, 92 N.Y.S.2d 714, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3117 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

64. Lumbering, logging, and woodcutting

While lumbering and logging are hazardous occupations, a farm hand engaged in such occupations is not covered by the workmen's compensation law. Brockett v Mietz, 184 A.D. 342, 171 N.Y.S. 412, 1918 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6032 (N.Y. App. Div. 1918).

One employed as a chore or barn man around the headquarters of a lumber operator, to look after horses and assist around the boarding house, was engaged in a hazardous occupation under former § 2 group 14 where he was injured as the result of a fall while going from the boarding house to the store, where, at the time of the injury, the plant was temporarily inactive but fully manned. Posey v Moynehan, 195 A.D. 440, 186 N.Y.S. 753, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4772 (N.Y. App. Div. 1921).

Where a farmer has a power saw to supply fire wood for his neighbors and himself, and an employee, as incidental to his regular duties, assists in operation of the saw and is injured thereby he cannot receive compensation on the theory that the farmer is engaged in the hazardous woodsawing business under group 18. McAllister v Cobb, 237 A.D. 674, 263 N.Y.S. 349, 1933 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10696 (N.Y. App. Div. 1933).

A farmer engaged in a lumbering operation on land which he neither owned nor rented which was quite distinct and apart from his usual farm operations, is subject to the workmen's compensation law where an employee, who was not a regular farmhand, was injured while engaged in the operation. Jorgensen v Beach, 277 A.D. 960, 99 N.Y.S.2d 669, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3995 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

65. Porters, pages, bellboys and the like

An award of compensation is proper to a page boy in a hotel who was killed through the accidental discharge of a revolver by a co-employee. Brozovich v Hotel Pennsylvania, 259 N.Y. 514, 182 N.E. 160, 259 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 514, 1932 N.Y. LEXIS 985 (N.Y. 1932).

In view of group 14 the workmen's compensation law covers work as a pullman porter, unless some applicable act of Congress has already covered the field. Taylor v New York C. R. Co., 294 N.Y. 397, 62 N.E.2d 777, 294 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 397, 1945 N.Y. LEXIS 765 (N.Y.), reh'g denied, 294 N.Y. 977, 63 N.E.2d 711, 294 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 977, 1945 N.Y. LEXIS 1151 (N.Y. 1945), cert. denied, 326 U.S. 786, 66 S. Ct. 470, 90 L. Ed. 477, 1946 U.S. LEXIS 2931 (U.S. 1946).

Employment at a hotel, having more than fifty rooms, as a bellboy, working from twelve midnight to seven A. M. was a hazardous employment under former § 2. Watkinson v Hotel Pennsylvania, 195 A.D. 624, 187 N.Y.S. 278, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4806 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 231 N.Y. 562, 132 N.E. 889, 231 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 562, 1921 N.Y. LEXIS 719 (N.Y. 1921).

66. Prison guards or keepers

A member of the police force detailed to service at a police station where his chief duties were to guard the prisoners and keep a part of the building in order did not thereby become entitled to compensation as an employee of a state municipal corporation employed as a turnkey under group 44 of former section 2 or as a janitor under group 42 of that statute. Ryan v New York, 228 N.Y. 16, 126 N.E. 350, 228 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 16, 1920 N.Y. LEXIS 901 (N.Y. 1920), overruled in part, Buckley v New York, 56 N.Y.2d 300, 452 N.Y.S.2d 331, 437 N.E.2d 1088, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3423 (N.Y. 1982).

A county sheriff is engaged in a hazardous employment under this section as a "gasoline vehicle operator" and a "keeper of a prison maintained by a municipal corporation". Brigham v Allegany County, 263 A.D. 458, 33 N.Y.S.2d 479, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6915 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942), aff'd, 289 N.Y. 794, 47 N.E.2d 49, 289 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 794, 1943 N.Y. LEXIS 1197 (N.Y. 1943).

A court attendant, injured while escorting prisoner from detention pen to a courtroom, was not covered by the compensation law on the theory that such attendants were within coverage of law because they were employed as keepers or guards in a prison under sub 1, group 15, as it read in 1952. Carpenter v New York, 284 A.D. 467, 132 N.Y.S.2d 153, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3426 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

67. Retail business employees

A person employed in a retail department store at a time when such business was not classified as a hazardous employment and engaged in loading hand trucks was not engaged in a hazardous employment under former § 2, group 41. Holtz v Greenhut & Co., 175 A.D. 878, 162 N.Y.S. 359, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8983 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

A person employed in a retail drug store who was injured while opening a window to let out fumes after compounding harmless medicine for sale to customers of the store was not engaged in a hazardous undertaking within the Workmen's Compensation Law. Freess v Kleinau, 190 A.D. 131, 179 N.Y.S. 347, 1919 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4088 (N.Y. App. Div. 1919).

A non-insured employer who operates a farm, a retail feed business and a trucking business is not liable for an injury received by his sole employee who performed work in connection with each of the employer's enterprises where the employee was injured while carrying a bag of feed from the feed store to a customer's car, not then being engaged in the trucking business, and the employer was not engaged in the storage business, the operation of a retail feed business not being classified as a hazardous employment. Harter v Andrus, 259 A.D. 942, 19 N.Y.S.2d 1017, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7376 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

68. Other occupations

Where a man, who was employed as a handy man by a corporation engaged in the business of "drugs and chemical supplies," was killed while in the course of his employment, in the absence of substantial evidence to the contrary, the compensation commission is entitled to presume under § 21 that the employer was engaged in the hazardous business of manufacturing drugs and chemicals as defined in former § 2, group 28. In re Larsen, 218 N.Y. 252, 112 N.E. 725, 218 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 252, 1916 N.Y. LEXIS 1064 (N.Y. 1916).

Employees carrying on work in a charitable institution come within the provisions of group 18 of this section and, unless they fall within the excepted classes, are covered by it providing they are employed "under any contract of hire, express or implied, oral or written." Hall v Salvation Army, 261 N.Y. 110, 184 N.E. 691, 261 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 110, 1933 N.Y. LEXIS 1262 (N.Y. 1933).

The board was justified in making an award under former § 2, group 20, to a claimant injured while handling plate glass on mere proof that he was injured in the occupation listed. McQueeney v Sutphen & Hyer, 167 A.D. 528, 153 N.Y.S. 554, 1915 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8294 (N.Y. App. Div. 1915).

The captain of a "lighter" may fairly be said to be engaged in its "operation" continuously from the beginning to the end of a round trip, including loading and unloading of the craft, so long as he works upon it. Edwardsen v Jarvis Lighterage Co., 168 A.D. 368, 153 N.Y.S. 391, 1915 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8262 (N.Y. App. Div. 1915).

An employee assisting in driving sheeting to be used in a jetty extending into the ocean for the protection of bathers on a waterfront, the sheeting being a form of piling, was deemed to have been engaged in "pile driving" within former § 2, group 11. Mazzarisi v Ward & Tully, 170 A.D. 868, 156 N.Y.S. 964, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9459 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

Mere dumping of refuse, which may contain material valuable as fertilizer, did not make dump a "garbage disposal plant" within the meaning of former § 2, group 28, and an employee engaged in searching for rags and other articles of value among the rubbish is not employed in the manufacture of fertilizers or upon a garbage disposal plant connected with such manufacture within the meaning of said group. Tomassi v Christensen, 171 A.D. 284, 156 N.Y.S. 905, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9451 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

Where the claimant's son, employed as a process server, claims adjuster and investigator in the claim department of a street railway company, had served a subpoena and while returning to his office, riding upon one of the defendant's cars, a fellow passenger accidentally stepped upon his foot, severely bruising it, requiring amputation of two toes, and resulting in gangrenous diabetes, causing the employee's death, an award of compensation may not be made, for, though the employee of the defendant at the time of the injury, claimant's son was not engaged in any hazardous work as defined by former § 2 group 1. In re Brown, 173 A.D. 432, 159 N.Y.S. 1047, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6676 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

Where the superintendent of wholesale routes for a dairy company left his employer's place of business to go upon a route for the purpose of instructing a new driver and was killed by an automobile while on his way to the route, he was not engaged in a hazardous occupation at the time of his death. Balk v Queen City Dairy Co., 184 A.D. 631, 172 N.Y.S. 471, 1918 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6627 (N.Y. App. Div. 1918).

A night engineer in a piano factory was an employee in a hazardous employment under the terms of former § 3, subdiv. 4 (now § 2). Nulle v Hardman Peck & Co., 185 A.D. 351, 173 N.Y.S. 236, 1918 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7539 (N.Y. App. Div. 1918).

While ice harvesting was hazardous employment under former § 2, group 25, where the work carried on by plaintiff was not for the pecuniary gain of his employer within former § 3, subd. 5, he is not within the protection of the Work. Comp. Law, and his contributory negligence bars recovery. Mullen v Little, 186 A.D. 169, 173 N.Y.S. 578, 1919 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5543 (N.Y. App. Div. 1919).

Mere wholesale dealing in dress trimmings was not a hazardous occupation within the meaning of former § 2, groups 37 and 38. Kass v Hirschberg, Schutz & Co., 191 A.D. 300, 181 N.Y.S. 35, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4706 (N.Y. App. Div. 1920).

Claimant was not "engaged in a hazardous employment" when he was walking along one of the highways of Newark, New Jersey, and doing nothing to advance the interests of his employer. Keller v Reis & Donovan, Inc., 195 A.D. 45, 185 N.Y.S. 741, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4693 (N.Y. App. Div. 1921), limited, MacClelland v Dodge Bros., 233 A.D. 504, 253 N.Y.S. 773, 1931 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11345 (N.Y. App. Div. 1931).

A "dolly" which was a platform supported by very small wheels and used to truck boxes is a hand truck within the meaning of subd. 1, gr. 7 of this section. Manigault v W. H. Beaumont & Son, 227 A.D. 259, 237 N.Y.S. 370, 1929 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6407 (N.Y. App. Div. 1929).

Claimant, a lawyer, worked part-time for an express company where he injured his back handling a trunk. He was 75 percent permanently disabled from 4/26/47 to 4/11/52 when he was still disabled. On /47, he left express company and practiced law until /50 when he became Schenectady's assistant corporation counsel. Board properly held that claim did not come within Workmen's Compensation Law § 15(5), but erred when it excluded evidence of claimant's earnings as an attorney after May 3, 1947. Earnings as assistant corporation counsel (a covered employment) should have been considered on reduced earning capacity. Weiss v Railway Express Agency, Inc., 283 A.D. 288, 127 N.Y.S.2d 296, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4667 (N.Y. App. Div.), app. denied, 283 A.D. 986, 130 N.Y.S.2d 910, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6009 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Claimant, a commissioned minister, injured while operating a baling machine was entitled to compensation because at the time of the injury he was engaged in hazardous employment and did not fall within the exclusionary provision for commissioned ministers. Geddes v Salvation Army, 37 A.D.2d 640, 322 N.Y.S.2d 439, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3744 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1971).

Back injury sustained by licensed practical nurse while lifting invalid patient from chair in patient's private home was compensable under Workmen's Compensation L. where evidence that patient's daughter issued directions, obtained replacement assistance, paid claimant's wages, and exercised right to discharge claimant, established an employer-employee relationship. Boggs v Bennett, 42 A.D.2d 1005, 348 N.Y.S.2d 220, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3397 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1973).

Employees of beauty parlors are included within the group of hazardous employees under the category of barbershops. Miller v Garford Laboratories, Inc. (1939) 172 Misc 567, 16 NYS2d 279, affd (1941) 262 App Div 838, 29 NYS2d 507, affd (1942) 289 NY 715, 46 NE2d 343.. See also People ex rel. Levy v Sommerville, 4 N.Y.S.2d 793, 167 Misc. 89, 1938 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1633 (N.Y. Spec. Sess. 1938).

The occupation of a golf caddy is not a hazardous occupation within the meaning of subdivision 1 of this section. Murphy v Elmwood Country Club, Inc., 50 N.Y.S.2d 331, 1944 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2320 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1944).

A stenographer or secretary is not an employee entitled to compensation for injuries received in her employment under workmen's compensation law. Arnold v Wright, 79 N.Y.S.2d 720, 1948 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2460 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1948).

XIV. Occupational Diseases Generally

An occupational disease is one which results from the nature of the employment; by nature is meant, not those conditions brought about by the failure of the employer to furnish a safe place to work, but conditions to which all employees of a class are subject, and which produce the disease as a natural incident of a particular occupation, and attach to that occupation a hazard which distinguishes it from the usual run of occupations and is in excess of the hazard attending employment in general. Goldberg v 954 Marcy Corp., 276 N.Y. 313, 12 N.E.2d 311, 276 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 313, 1938 N.Y. LEXIS 1191 (N.Y. 1938).; Ligiecki v E. I. Dupont De Nemours & Co., 46 F. Supp. 266, 1942 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2499 (D.N.Y. 1942).

An ailment does not become an occupational disease merely because it is contracted on the employer's premises in the course of the employment; it must be one which is commonly regarded as natural to, inhering in, or an incident of the work in question. Harman v Republic Aviation Corp., 298 N.Y. 285, 82 N.E.2d 785, 298 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 285, 1948 N.Y. LEXIS 795 (N.Y. 1948).

An occupational disease is one arising from the conditions to which all employees of a class are subject and which produces the disease as a natural incident of a particular occupation as distinguished from and exceeding the hazard and risk of ordinary employment. Champion v W. & L. E. Gurley, 299 N.Y. 406, 87 N.E.2d 430, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 406, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 950 (N.Y. 1949).; Lawton v Port of New York Authority, 276 A.D. 81, 92 N.Y.S.2d 714, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3117 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

An "occupational disease" is an ailment which is the result of a distinctive feature of the kind of work performed by the claimant and others similarly employed, and not an ailment caused by the peculiar place in which a particular claimant happens to work or caused by ordinary contact with a fellow employee. Paider v Park East Movers, 19 N.Y.2d 373, 280 N.Y.S.2d 140, 227 N.E.2d 40, 1967 N.Y. LEXIS 1585 (N.Y. 1967).

"Occupational disease" under CLS Work Comp § 3(2) is restricted to medical conditions resulting from ordinary and generally recognized risks incident to particular occupation, and derives from very nature of employment, not specific condition peculiar to employee's place of work. Mack v County of Rockland, 71 N.Y.2d 1008, 530 N.Y.S.2d 98, 525 N.E.2d 744, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 714 (N.Y. 1988).

The fact that a risk may be common to all mankind does not disentitle a workman to compensation under the Work. Comp. Law if, in the particular case, the risk is accentuated by the incidents of the employment. Rosmuth v American Radiator Co., 201 A.D. 207, 193 N.Y.S. 769, 1922 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6287 (N.Y. App. Div. 1922).

The concept of occupational disease comes into play when special nature of the work exposes the general run of people more or less alike to the incidence of a particular disease, contraction of which may be general in time of occurrence and not dependent on a particular happening or event. Walters v U. S. Vitamin Corp., 11 A.D.2d 280, 203 N.Y.S.2d 401, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8393 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), aff'd, 10 N.Y.2d 924, 223 N.Y.S.2d 874, 179 N.E.2d 713, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 946 (N.Y. 1961).

In order to sustain an award when a disease, not the natural and unavoidable result of employment, is developed during the course of employment, it must be established that the inception of the disease is assignable to a determinate or single act, identified in space or time and assignable to something catastrophic or extraordinary. Di Marco v State University of New York, 39 A.D.2d 623, 331 N.Y.S.2d 47, 1972 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4777 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1972).

Evidence indicating higher incidence of vascular disease among diabetics was insufficient to establish any causal connection between employee's preexisting diabetes and final, fatal episode of cardiac failure. Marmorale v Long Horn Restaurant, 57 A.D.2d 978, 394 N.Y.S.2d 105, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12269 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

Workers' Compensation Board's denial of claim, concluding that claimant's development of consequential anxiety disorder as result of noncompensable asbestosis did not constitute accident or occupational disease, would be reversed and matter remitted for further proceedings since claimant's entitlement to compensation depended not on compensability of asbestosis alone but whether claimant was totally disabled by 2 inseparable causative agents, one of which was asbestosis, and Board did not determine extent of claimant's disability or inseparability of asbestosis and anxiety disorder. Fonda v Cambridge Filter Corp., 272 A.D.2d 787, 708 N.Y.S.2d 514, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5946 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

In order for a mental or psychiatric disorder to qualify as an occupational disease within the meaning of N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 3(2), first, the causation must be to the exclusion of all other agents, natural to and inherent in the job; second, the injured employee must not be idiopathic, i.e., singularly vulnerable to the hazard that is a concomitant of the work in question. Leggio v Suffolk County Police Dep't, 289 A.D.2d 710, 733 N.Y.S.2d 656, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12030 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

70. Construction

The legislature did not intend to make compensation benefits for diseases as inclusive or as broad as those for accidental injuries; accordingly if a workman suffers an injury, he has but to show that his injury arose "out of and in the course of his employment", but if he is disabled by disease, he must go further and prove that his disablement was the result of an "occupational" disease. Harman v Republic Aviation Corp., 298 N.Y. 285, 82 N.E.2d 785, 298 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 285, 1948 N.Y. LEXIS 795 (N.Y. 1948).. See also Champion v W. & L. E. Gurley, 299 N.Y. 406, 87 N.E.2d 430, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 406, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 950 (N.Y. 1949).

A communicable disease contracted from a fellow employee in the course of normal business association within the plant is not an occupational disease within the meaning of this section. Harman v Republic Aviation Corp., 298 N.Y. 285, 82 N.E.2d 785, 298 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 285, 1948 N.Y. LEXIS 795 (N.Y. 1948).; Schwartz v Queensboro Farm Products, Inc., 78 N.Y.S.2d 863, 191 Misc. 778, 1948 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2337 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1948).

In view of ¶ 28 of subdivision 2 of this section, occupational diseases are not limited to those listed by name in this section. Champion v W. & L. E. Gurley, 299 N.Y. 406, 87 N.E.2d 430, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 406, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 950 (N.Y. 1949).

A predisposition to an occupational disease does not prevent a claimant from having the benefit of workmen's compensation if the employee develops what would ordinarily be such a disease. D'Angelo v Loft Candy Corp., 33 A.D.2d 1077, 307 N.Y.S.2d 721, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5469 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970), aff'd, 28 N.Y.2d 573, 319 N.Y.S.2d 614, 268 N.E.2d 326, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 1583 (N.Y. 1971).

An action may be maintained against an employer for an occupational disease acquired prior to the effective date of the amendment making such disease compensable where the complaint admits that there was no exposure to the disease since the effective date of the amendment. Sandonato v Carborundum Co., 19 F. Supp. 655, 1936 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1589 (D.N.Y. 1936).

71. Effect on common law action

An employee who contracts an occupational disease listed cannot maintain a common law action in negligence against his employer, notwithstanding he has suffered no disability and no award can be made to him. Repka v Fedders Mfg. Co., 239 A.D. 271, 267 N.Y.S. 709, 1933 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8019 (N.Y. App. Div. 1933), aff'd, 264 N.Y. 538, 191 N.E. 553, 264 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 538, 1934 N.Y. LEXIS 1575 (N.Y. 1934).

The 1935 amendment which added "any and all occupational diseases" to the enumeration of occupational diseases in subdivision 2 of this section did not bar a common law right of action which became vested before its effective date, September 1, 1935. Schwartz v Queensboro Farm Products, Inc., 78 N.Y.S.2d 863, 191 Misc. 778, 1948 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2337 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1948).

72. Communicable diseases

Where hospital nurse contracted staphylococcus infection of the middle ear, her close contact in caring for infected patient was a special type of work exposure to which all nurses so engaged are subjected and met the essential test of occupational disease and her award of benefits was supported by substantial evidence. Furchtsam v Binghamton General Hospital, 24 A.D.2d 786, 263 N.Y.S.2d 746, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3220 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Although a communicable disease such as infectious hepatitis, when contracted by a hospital employee is an occupational disease under ¶ 29 of subd 2 of § 3 of the Workmen's Compensation Law, an award cannot be sustained in the absence of proof that the employee was exposed to the disease in the course of his employment. Esposito v N. Y. S. Willowbrook State School, 38 A.D.2d 985, 329 N.Y.S.2d 355, 1972 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5243 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1972).

73. Non occupational conditions caused or aggravated by occupational disease

A dependent of a section laborer employed by a railroad company, who, while mowing grass on the employer's right of way, was poisoned by ivy so severely that it resulted in blood poisoning which led to congestion of the lungs and death, is entitled to an award of compensation. Plass v Central N. E. R. Co., 169 A.D. 826, 155 N.Y.S. 854, 1915 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5093 (N.Y. App. Div. 1915), rev'd, 221 N.Y. 472, 117 N.E. 952, 221 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 472, 1917 N.Y. LEXIS 1326 (N.Y. 1917).

Where a crane operator sustained a left hernia and the surgeon also repaired an existing right hernia, an award of compensation is proper when death ensues from embolism. Natello v Hockensmith Contracting Co., 259 A.D. 769, 18 N.Y.S.2d 338, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6587 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

Compensation is properly payable where an employee died from pulmonary tuberculosis which followed an operation for the repair of an occupational hernia. Gordon v John J. Casale, Inc., 275 A.D. 734, 87 N.Y.S.2d 167, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4244 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

Where a molder developed bronchial pneumonia following an operation for a gall bladder infection and died, compensation is properly payable where silicosis contracted by the employee from exposure to silica sand during his employment contributed to the illness and death. Lucarelli v General R. S. Co., 276 A.D. 799, 93 N.Y.S.2d 387, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3357 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

After a hernia operation made necessary by an occupational injury, decedent died from a blood clot. Though the medical evidence was in conflict, there was ample evidence to support a finding that decedent died of a pulmonary embolism which was due to the operation. Barry v Arthur J. Barry, Inc., 282 A.D. 1088, 126 N.Y.S.2d 166, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5886 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

The mere employment of a claimant as a nurse was not sufficient to prevent a disability award on the ground that the employment had caused an aggravation of a uterine prolapse where there was no recognizable link between the disease and some distinctive feature of the employment. Clancy v Henry, 2 A.D.2d 737, 152 N.Y.S.2d 860, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5044 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Test of occupational disease is not met where disability is caused by aggravation of a condition not occupational in nature, and where there was no evidentiary showing that claimant's pre-existing arthritic condition was such as would ordinarily constitute an occupational disease, his subsequent disability from either heart disease or degenerative arthritis of the spine could not properly be found to be due to occupational disease. Dorman v New York State Dep't of Public Works, 22 A.D.2d 725, 253 N.Y.S.2d 243, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2986 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

Where the board can properly find that an occupational disease activated or contributed to the contraction of a non-occupational condition so that both are linked to the employment, the resulting disability is compensable. Burger v Yandik, 24 A.D.2d 673, 261 N.Y.S.2d 588, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3672 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

The aggravation of the underlying condition of spondylolisthesis can constitute an industrial accident. However, in order to find an accident there must be an element of "suddenness" in either the cause of the disability or the result thereof. Rogers v General Aniline & Film Corp., 33 A.D.2d 1074, 307 N.Y.S.2d 589, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5533 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

The aggravation of a condition not occupational in nature cannot be considered an occupational disease. Solomon v Gannett Co., 34 A.D.2d 699, 309 N.Y.S.2d 470, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5089 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

For purposes of determining an employee's entitlement to compensation for disability caused by condition resulting from his employment, it is immaterial whether claimant's duties precipitated condition or merely aggravated previous asymptomatic underlying condition. Lopez v Hercules Corrugated Box Corp., 50 A.D.2d 1048, 377 N.Y.S.2d 745, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12052 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

74. Aggravation of preexisting conditions

Where a preexisting physical condition is aggravated by employment to the point of disability, an occupational disease may result even though some, or none, of the employees have the underlying disease and do not suffer the disabling aggravation. Hence, a man who has a nonoccupational illness aggravated by his employment suffers, in that aggravation, an "occupational disease" within the scope of this section. Hence an award was properly made to an employee-officer of an ice company who suffered from an arteriosclerotic disease of the feet, which condition was aggravated into a permanently disabling occupational disease by reason of his going in and out of the ice plant's cold and damp cold rooms. Griffin v Griffin & Webster, Inc., 283 A.D. 145, 126 N.Y.S.2d 672, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2996 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Fact that work would probably not have caused the disability were it not for an original noncompensable injury is not a bar to an award for the full consequences. The employer takes the employee as he finds him, and, where pre-existing conditions renders a subsequent disability greater, an award for the full disability may be sustained. Hence, sprain of wrist of compensation referee from turning over file papers was compensable where he had previously sprained his wrist pushing a car while not in the course of his employment. Miller v State Ins. Fund, 284 A.D. 1071, 136 N.Y.S.2d 51, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4601 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Aggravation of a condition not occupational in nature is not an occupational disease. So, an award for claimant (a gas converter) was dismissed where gas exposure allegedly accelerated tuberculosis. Although claimant's occupation may have aggravated preexisting tubercular condition the claimant did not suffer from an accidental injury and/or occupational disease. Goldberg v Conversions & Surveys, Inc., 6 A.D.2d 563, 180 N.Y.S.2d 358, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3893 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

The board properly authorized medical treatment for coronary insufficiency upon a finding that it was due to aggravation of pre-existing hypertension and diabetes by working conditions in the industry. Fabb v Fifth Ave. Coach Lines, Inc., 10 A.D.2d 653, 196 N.Y.S.2d 366, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11690 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

The mere aggravation of a pre-existing condition by usual work does not constitute an occupational disease. Rosenberg v Scintilla Div., 12 A.D.2d 551, 206 N.Y.S.2d 710, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7249 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Disability caused solely by aggravation of a pre-existing condition is compensable if the pre-existing condition is occupational in nature—if the particular exposure would initially cause such a disease were there no pre-existing condition, so as to establish occupational disease generally. Oliveri v Rudolph Faust, Inc., 33 A.D.2d 1090, 308 N.Y.S.2d 49, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5462 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 26 N.Y.2d 613, 1970 N.Y. LEXIS 1835 (N.Y. 1970).

A disability is compensable when it originates in a work-connected trauma which aggravates or precipitates the symptoms of a pre-existing condition, whether or not of industrial origin, and testimony by medical witnesses that schistosomiasis of spinal cord was aggravated by back injury while employee was attempting to lift sofa and the finding that it was the precipitent cause of the injury, was supportable. Garcia v Gallo Original Iron Works, Inc., 34 A.D.2d 1077, 312 N.Y.S.2d 467, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4258 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

The test for the existence of an occupational disease within the meaning of the Workers' Compensation Law, is "whether the employment acts upon a disease or condition in such a manner as to cause a disability which did not previously exist. Thus, the Workers' Compensation Board properly found that a worker became disabled from an occupational disease as a result of his employment by a self-insured employer where the facts proven supported the Board's finding that the claimant's work environment aggravated a pre-existing bronchitis and asthma condition resulting in a disabling obstructive pulmonary disease which the Board found to be an occupational disease within the meaning of the Workers' Compensation Law, where the record contained conflicting medical evidence which the Board resolved in favor of the claimant in the exercise of its fact-finding power, and where the worker's case was aided by the presumption that his occupational disease was due to his employment, in the absence of credible evidence to the contrary. Di Nicola v Crucible Steel, Inc., 83 A.D.2d 735, 442 N.Y.S.2d 582, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15049 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 54 N.Y.2d 609, 1981 N.Y. LEXIS 4563 (N.Y. 1981).

Fact that claimant suffered aggravation of pre-existing asymptomatic non-occupational binocular keratitissicca by exposure to cigarette smoke at place of employment did not establish occupational disease under Workers' Compensation Law since there was no distinctive feature in nature of her work as psychiatric social worker that could have caused or aggravated her disease. Mack v County of Rockland, 128 A.D.2d 922, 512 N.Y.S.2d 732, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 44598 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987), aff'd, 71 N.Y.2d 1008, 530 N.Y.S.2d 98, 525 N.E.2d 744, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 714 (N.Y. 1988).

Uncontradicted testimony of workers' compensation claimant, who was totally disabled as result of chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, that he was unaware of and unaffected by any pulmonary problems before onset of his disability in 1993 was sufficient to prove that his preexisting condition was dormant and not disabling. Cocco v New York City DOT, 266 A.D.2d 634, 697 N.Y.S.2d 751, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11217 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Claimant was not entitled to workers' compensation benefits where her multiple sclerosis played a factor in causing her mental disability. Leggio v Suffolk County Police Dep't, 289 A.D.2d 710, 733 N.Y.S.2d 656, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12030 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

75. Evidence of occupational cause of disease

An award was sustained on evidence that claimant had for three weeks in December, 1949 been obliged to lift and move

10-pound cartons which had caused bursitis and that in January, 1950 she experienced pain but continued to work until March, 1951 for the same employer but in a different capacity. At that time, as a result of bursitis, her shoulder and arm bones had calcified. The change of work was held not to be a change in employment within the meaning of § 40. Frank v Freedman Die Cutters, Inc., 306 N.Y. 935, 119 N.E.2d 608, 306 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 935, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 1233 (N.Y. 1954).

Award was denied to claimant suffering from a rare paralytic disease contracted from contact with mice where claimant testified that there were mice both in his apartment and in his place of work and it was impossible to induce medical testimony showing where the disease was acquired. Durlacher v Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., 308 N.Y. 924, 127 N.E.2d 81, 308 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 924, 1955 N.Y. LEXIS 1162 (N.Y. 1955).

Where the only medical testimony in support of a relationship between the disease causing death and conditions found in trades and businesses which the decedent had followed for a long period of years, is to the effect that such conditions might "possibly" cause the disease, it is not sufficient to sustain an award for death from occupational disease. Miller v National Cabinet Co., 8 N.Y.2d 277, 204 N.Y.S.2d 129, 168 N.E.2d 811, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1076 (N.Y. 1960).

Evidence that a 70-year-old man who, during course of his work in sanding metallic doors, was required to lift and turn the doors which weighed from 50 to 100 pounds about 60 times a day was not sufficient to support a finding that the claimant suffered an occupational disease of sacroiliac sprain. Sackris v Dahlstrom Metallic Door Co., 3 A.D.2d 961, 163 N.Y.S.2d 129, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5460 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

To establish occupational disease definite proof was necessary to show that disease was common hazard to which all employees in the same kind of employment would be exposed and further, that the disease was actually contracted in employment. Mere aggravation of disease not occupational in character is insufficient to establish occupational disease. So, an award to claimant, chef in supper club for 6 years, for occupational disease in nature of emphysema of right lung was reversed and claim remitted. Medical testimony not of substantial character to sustain theory that claimant's condition was occupational disease contracted in his employment. Smith v Sports Room Supper Club, 7 A.D.2d 809, 181 N.Y.S.2d 130, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3739 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Workers' compensation claimant's exposure to noxious substances as bridge painter for employer acted on his preexisting but dormant pulmonary condition to cause disability that did not previously exist where (1) claimant's work included sandblasting, paint stripping, and spraying red lead paint, (2) expert attributed claimant's poor pulmonary reserve to chronic inhalation of noxious substances at work, and (3) although expert acknowledged that chronic pulmonary obstructive disease is often result of "the composite of many things," including smoking, he testified that exposure to noxious substances in course of claimant's work was causative factor. Cocco v New York City DOT, 266 A.D.2d 634, 697 N.Y.S.2d 751, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11217 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Workers' Compensation Board properly ruled that claimant, who suffered from asbestos-related lung disease, did not sustain occupational disease where buildings in which he worked housed extensive system of steam pipes wrapped in asbestos insulation, and such insulation, in turn, would flake off and settle on surrounding surfaces; under circumstances, hazard to which claimant was exposed stemmed not from distinctive feature of his employment as therapy aide, but rather from his work environment in general. Demers v St. Lawrence Psychiatric Ctr., 271 A.D.2d 857, 706 N.Y.S.2d 251, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4416 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Workers' Compensation Board properly ruled that claimant did not sustain occupational disease, even though her treating physicians and employer's workers' compensation insurance carrier agreed that she suffered from multiple chemical sensitivity attributable to her exposure to environmental toxins, where their conclusions on nature of causal relationship were based on unsubstantiated assumption that environmental contaminants actually existed at claimant's workplace, senior industrial hygienist who performed air quality analysis in subject building reported that air sampling test results for all contaminants were below permissible limits, and another industrial hygienist, who was also toxicologist, examined building, medical records, and air quality test results and opined that building contained no environmental contaminants that would cause any significant or permanent adverse health effects. Marks v County of Tompkins, 274 A.D.2d 764, 711 N.Y.S.2d 554, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8102 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

76. —Time lapse between exposure and discovery of disease

Employer is not liable for death of employee from silicosis occurring within 5 years after last injurious exposure where period of continuous disability did not occur within one year from the date of the last exposure. Kazia v Woodcrest Const. Co., 282 A.D. 580, 125 N.Y.S.2d 433, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4528 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Where the occupational disease suffered by claimant is an insidious and slow developing process, such as caisson disease, time lapse between last exposure and discovery of the disease is not controlling, and the fact that claimant has already ceased work by that time and elected to receive social security benefits is not decisive of his right to compensation. Meyers v Walsh Constr. Co., 12 A.D.2d 371, 211 N.Y.S.2d 590, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12275 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

77. Apportionment of risk between multiple carriers

A question of fact was presented as to whether claimant's disablement from an occupational disease arose while one of two carriers was on the risk. Russo v Despatch Shops, Inc., 280 A.D. 1008, 116 N.Y.S.2d 788, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4556 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), modified, 280 A.D. 1030, 116 N.Y.S.2d 788, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4603 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1952).

Carrier on risk at time of disablement would become responsible for award for occupational disease contracted in same employment for same employer unless it were found that there was no injurious exposure during carrier's period of coverage. Bakke v Ira S. Bushey & Son, 5 A.D.2d 909, 171 N.Y.S.2d 192, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6729 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Decedent worked for 27 years in and about hard coal mines of Pa. He was employed as a fireman for about 3 months at college where there was a certain amount of coal dust in air of furnace room. Three impartial specialists attributed death to pulmonary disease due to his work in coal mines. Award based on finding that death was due to disease related to employment as fireman reversed and claim dismissed. There was substantial evidence to overcome the presumption of § 47. Gorsky v New York, 7 A.D.2d 762, 179 N.Y.S.2d 977, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4081 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958), aff'd, 9 N.Y.2d 739, 214 N.Y.S.2d 350, 174 N.E.2d 333, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1466 (N.Y. 1961).

XV. Chemical Poisoning

78. Conditions caused by exposure to benzol or benzene

A death award was proper where employee, a chemist, after working for four employers over a period of thirteen years, died of a plastic anemia. The award was made against first employer where records showed that employee was exposed to benzene compound during such employment and that such exposure could have been the cause of death. Zaepfel v E. I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., 309 N.Y. 962, 132 N.E.2d 327, 309 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 962, 1956 N.Y. LEXIS 1085 (N.Y.), reh'g denied, 1 N.Y.2d 859, 1956 N.Y. LEXIS 1457 (N.Y. 1956).

The statutory protection found in subd. 2 par. 8 of this section against benzol poisoning, a long established industrial occupational disease, has no application where it appears that the cause of death was leukemia, the cause of which disease is unknown, and not aplastic anemia. Miller v National Cabinet Co., 8 N.Y.2d 277, 204 N.Y.S.2d 129, 168 N.E.2d 811, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1076 (N.Y. 1960).

Where a death benefit claim was based upon the theory that death of the employee, in 1950, could have resulted from an occupational disease, he having been employed as a piano finisher and in associated work since 1928, using varnish removers utilized by each of five employers and each containing a chemical known as benzene or "benzol," but he died from leukemia, the cause of which disease was admitted by all medical witnesses to be unknown, the evidence was insufficient to sustain a finding of any causal connection between his employment and his death. Miller v National Cabinet Co., 8 N.Y.2d 277, 204 N.Y.S.2d 129, 168 N.E.2d 811, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1076 (N.Y. 1960).

A pressman employed by a printing company who suffers benzol poisoning suffers an occupational disease. McLaughlin v Alco Gravure Div. of Publication Corp., 268 A.D. 839, 50 N.Y.S.2d 246, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3706 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944).

A referee's determination (made on conflicting medical testimony) that an employee's exposure to benzol was a competent producing cause of his death from leukemia was affirmed. And the award was properly apportioned between 2 carriers successively insuring the employer during the period of decedent's employment where disablement did not incur until after decedent had changed his employment and was the result of a protracted exposure to benzol. Miller v National Cabinet Co., 8 A.D.2d 281, 188 N.Y.S.2d 29, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8008 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959), rev'd, 8 N.Y.2d 277, 204 N.Y.S.2d 129, 168 N.E.2d 811, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1076 (N.Y. 1960).

Where the extent of decedent's exposure to benzol was not sufficiently developed, the matter was remitted for further proof. Decedent had become disabled as a result of adenocarcinoma of the bladder. Collins v National Aniline Div., Allied Chemical & Dye Corp., 8 A.D.2d 900, 186 N.Y.S.2d 979, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8320 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

An award for death benefits was properly granted by the board for the death of a research chemist from a rare disease known as myeloid metaplasia of the spleen. There was substantial evidence that this disease is associated with exposure to benzol and that the chemist was exposed to vapors of solvents and benzol during the period of his employment. Friedman v General Aniline & Film Corp., 9 A.D.2d 820, 192 N.Y.S.2d 794, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6175 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

There was substantial evidence to sustain a finding of death from occupational disease where decedent died of cerebral vascular hemmorrhage precipitated by acute myelogenous leukemia after working for three and one-half years as a stitching machine operator in a shoe factory in connection with which he came in contact with minimal amounts of benzol while occasionally working on goods still wet with a paste containing benzol and from application of the paste within about 20 feet from where he worked. Berman v Werman & Sons, 14 A.D.2d 631, 218 N.Y.S.2d 315, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9407 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

79. Lead poisoning

An employee of an art shop who became disabled from lead poisoning suffers an occupational disease. Fayette v Brush Studio & Art Shop, 261 A.D. 1023, 26 N.Y.S.2d 70, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8585 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

One who suffers lead poisoning in the course of his employment working as a sprayer spraying picture frame moldings with paint lacquers and varnish is entitled to an award of workmen's compensation. Guarnera v Radio Picture Frame Co., 267 A.D. 843, 45 N.Y.S.2d 745, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5071 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944).

There was substantial evidence to sustain a finding of disability by occupational disease with respect to a linotype operator who worked for 32 years about two feet from a pot of molten lead, exposed to the fumes from it, and contracted emphysema and chronic bronchitis. Muench v John L. Schoenfeld Co., 12 A.D.2d 847, 209 N.Y.S.2d 659, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13205 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

80. Conditions caused by exposure to nitric, sulphuric, hydrochloric and other acids

An occupational disease following continuous washing of spinach resulting from the presence of sulphide acid in spinach and celery, comes under ¶¶ 9 and 27 of subd. 2. Jacobson v Cohen, 244 A.D. 855, 279 N.Y.S. 750, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6835 (N.Y. App. Div. 1935).

Medical testimony supported a finding of the board that a nasal and pulmonary involvement, consisting of a basilar bilateral emphysema, chronic rhinitis and sinusitis, as a result of exposure to fumes from nitric, sulphuric and hydrochloric acids and cyanide used in work of polishing metals, constituted an occupational disease resulting from the nature and conditions of employment to which all employees of the same class were subject. Ciampa v Tripp Plating Co., 3 A.D.2d 621, 158 N.Y.S.2d 18, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3437 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Upon review of medical testimony, it was held not to rise to the level of such substantial evidence of causal relationship between decedent's work in a plumbing speciality factory department where certain acids and solutions, including nickel sulphate and chromic acid, were used, and his inhalation of fumes therefrom over a 40-year period, disability and death having resulted from lung cancer and he being, among other things, a heavy cigarette smoker. Amoroso v Tubular & Cast Products Mfg. Co., 17 A.D.2d 1003, 233 N.Y.S.2d 909, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6981 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962), aff'd, 13 N.Y.2d 992, 244 N.Y.S.2d 787, 194 N.E.2d 694, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 874 (N.Y. 1963).

81. Conditions caused by nitrous fumes

Where the board found that the nature of the claimant's disability was coveyed by the inclusive category of bronchitis and pneumonitis of a chemical nature due to exposure to toxic nitrogenous gases in his employment as a farmhand by reason of his work in silos, constituting in the board's view an occupational disease under subd 2(29) of the above statute, and the defendants contended that the record lacked evidence of the presence of toxic nitrous fumes on the employer's premises, the board was warranted in finding fumes present where (1) the claimant had reported to a specialist in pulmonary diseases gases which he described as "steam" and had previously reported to a hospital "fumes" emanating from the silage and the onset of significant symptoms on each exposure, (2) the specialist said that claimant "in all likelihood had repeated exposures to irritant nitrogen gas in a silo", (3) the hospital's final diagnosis of claimant's condition was silo filler's disease (held by the board to be an occupational disease under subd 2(10) of the above statute) "presumably related to exposure either to fungi, dust or nitrogen dioxide", and (4) the agricultural college bulletin upon which defendants' arguments were largely based clearly admitted the possibility of the production of nitrogenous gases under facts and circumstances such as existed on the employer's farm during the period of claimant's alleged exposure. Moody v Payne, 23 A.D.2d 919, 258 N.Y.S.2d 870, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4283 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

82. Conditions caused by paint, lacquer and similar fumes

Asthma and bronchiectasis suffered by an employee whose job was spraying automobiles with a lacquer-nitroglycerine preparation, are occupational diseases. Koprda v Cadillac Motor Car Div., 258 A.D. 765, 14 N.Y.S.2d 751, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6803 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

One employed as a spray painter and striper, who became disabled by reason of a lung condition described as chronic bronchitis with pulmonary fibrosis suffers an occupational disease. Shaw v International Postal-Supply Co., 274 A.D. 957, 83 N.Y.S.2d 675, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4243 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

There was sufficient medical testimony to support a finding that claimant's exposure to lacquers and a thinner kept in open containers upon a table about 12 feet from her, for use by a fellow worker during some six years of employment, was the cause for disability due to toxic hepatitis. Zecca v J. Levinsohn & Co., 12 A.D.2d 676, 208 N.Y.S.2d 5, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6741 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), app. denied, 9 N.Y.2d 610, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1657 (N.Y. 1961).

83. Conditions caused by automotive exhaust, welding and the like

A finding of occupational disease could not be sustained where it appeared only that claimant was a taxicab dispatcher, working in offices located in garages where he was exposed to exhaust and paint fumes, and contracted emphysema, there being no proof that emphysema is a disease which is a common hazard for taxicab dispatchers. Ashley v Mardon Operating Corp., 9 A.D.2d

Evidence supported findings that claimant, a welder, suffered from occupational disease, in that exposure to heat and fumes produced pulmonary disease, and that disease was not a dust disease even though molecular iron and silica were also introduced into lung tissue. Zambito v Curtiss Wright Corp., 44 A.D.2d 856, 354 N.Y.S.2d 737, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5126 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

Fibrosis of the lungs suffered by a garage worker is not an occupational disease where the causative factor is gases and fumes created by welding operations, and the employee is limited to a common law action against the employer for failing to provide him with a safe place to work. Converse v State, 55 N.Y.S.2d 922, 185 Misc. 162, 1945 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1955 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1945).

A milk route man who was assigned a truck which, by reason of its defective condition, permitted noxious impurities, fumes and smoke to enter the employee's respiratory tract and lungs and induced pneumoconiosis, does not suffer an occupational disease within the meaning of this section. Schwartz v Queensboro Farm Products, Inc., 78 N.Y.S.2d 863, 191 Misc. 778, 1948 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2337 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1948).

84. Conditions caused by exposure to carbon tetrachloride

Disability arising from the inhalation of carbon tetrachloride fumes while washing stencils with a solution of that chemical is compensable. Pettinato v New York, 259 A.D. 944, 19 N.Y.S.2d 945, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7382 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

Where employee claimed to have been exposed to carbon tetrachloride in 1948 and thereafter, subsequent to 1949, claimed he suffered a disability from the effects of such poisoning, the Board was justified in finding that the 1948 condition was temporary only and that there was no relationship between that temporary condition and the claimed disability of 1949. Banikowski v American Locomotive Co., 282 A.D. 1084, 126 N.Y.S.2d 54, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5878 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

85. Conditions caused by exposure to other chemicals and fumes

In an action to recover damages from plaintiff's former employer alleging that the employer wantonly and maliciously exposed plaintiff to chemical substances which increased the likelihood that plaintiff would contract bladder cancer in the future, plaintiff's "injury" stemmed from exposure to industrial chemicals while in the course of her employment and was an occupational disease within the meaning of the Workers' Compensation Law for which she had already received benefits, and therefore a common-law personal injury action was unavailable to her. Mylroie v GAF Corp., 55 N.Y.2d 893, 449 N.Y.S.2d 21, 433 N.E.2d 1269, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3096 (N.Y. 1982).

Claimant who seeks compensation because he suffers from an occupational disease within subd. 2, in that his disease was caused by anilin poisoning, is not entitled to an award, since his work required him to handle furs after they had been dyed, and, he was not engaged in a process involving the use of anilin. Sokol v Stein Fur Dyeing Co., 216 A.D. 573, 216 N.Y.S. 167, 1926 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9273 (N.Y. App. Div. 1926).

The evidence was held sufficient that the continuing conditions from which the claimant was found to be suffering were caused or aggravated by his exposure to toxic fumes in his employment as a "slop washer" in a dyeing and printing business although there was a conflict in the medical testimony as to whether claimant's pulmonary congestion, acute shortness of breath, coronary insufficiency and acute heart dilation were related to the inhalation of the fumes. Hahn v Bloom Screen Print Co., 284 A.D. 1010, 135 N.Y.S.2d 278, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4381 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1954).

In view of the presumption of this section, employee's death from a septic sore throat and toxic myocarditis was compensable as an occupational disease where claimant worked in a plant handling various chemicals including hydrogen peroxide, a highly volatile substance. Matthews v General Electric Co., 2 A.D.2d 623, 151 N.Y.S.2d 825, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5474 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Claimant was found to be suffering from bronchial condition, occupational disease, caused by inhalation of irritant fumes from heated chemicals. Held: there was medical proof that condition continued to cause disability and was permanent. Decision and award for continuing disability affirmed. Mathews v Inter-Chemical Corp., 5 A.D.2d 914, 170 N.Y.S.2d 898, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6737 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Various processes on which claimant worked gave off smoke and irritating fumes from open tanks containing acid and chemicals. Claimant testified that they caused him to cough violently and to raise blood. On substantial evidence, the Board properly found that the claimant contracted irritative bronchitis, an occupational disease, because of the nature of his work and that such disease activated inactive tuberculosis. Bazzini v Washburn Wire Co., 8 A.D.2d 556, 183 N.Y.S.2d 515, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9636 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

A finding of occupational disease could not be sustained where it appeared only that claimant was a taxicab dispatcher, working in offices located in garages where he was exposed to exhaust and paint fumes, and contracted emphysema, there being no proof that emphysema is a disease which is a common hazard for taxicab dispatchers. Ashley v Mardon Operating Corp., 9 A.D.2d 826, 192 N.Y.S.2d 927, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6184 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Where medical testimony was not based upon speculation or surmise, as to whether claimant's disability from peripheral neuritis or some similar condition the precise diagnosis for which was unknown, was causally related to his work for some years in lowering metal products into a tank of trichloroethylene, there was sufficient basis to sustain a finding by the Board that the condition was due to occupational disease. Hassell v Oxford Filing Supply Co., 16 A.D.2d 534, 230 N.Y.S.2d 866, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8640 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Upon conflicting testimony a decision of the Compensation Board determining that hemiplegia and paralysis, together with burns on the face of decedent, were causally related to an accident of June 4, 1959, when a 200 pound barrel of freon gas slipped and fell as decedent was attempting to lift it and some of the gas leaked out and entered his mouth, an award of death benefits was sustained notwithstanding testimony that decedent had a preexisting hypertension and vascular disease. Crowl v Martins Dep't Store, 16 A.D.2d 995, 229 N.Y.S.2d 137, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9069 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

There was substantial evidence to justify an award for disability that cancer of the bladder was causally related to the worker's occupation and exposure to finished dyes. Smith v Humboldt Dye Works, Inc., 34 A.D.2d 1041, 312 N.Y.S.2d 612, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4329 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

Even though level of carbon disulphide chemical in the air around claimant's work place was reported by the New York State Division of Industrial Hygiene as below the recommended threshold level, board's finding that permanent disability diagnosed as peripheral neuropathy resulting from carbon disulphide poisoning was an occupational disease was supported by evidence that claimant was exposed to such chemical during his 37 years of employment, and that claimant's attending physician had treated one other employee of plant for carbon disulphide poisoning. Murphy v Beaunit Fibers, Inc., 42 A.D.2d 1009, 348 N.Y.S.2d 210, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3403 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1973).

In an action by an employee against her employer to recover damages for future manifestation of bladder cancer, the trial court correctly granted the employer's motion to dismiss the complaint where it was apparent that the "injury" complained of stemmed from exposure to industrial chemicals while in the course of employment and, as such, was an occupational disease within the meaning of Work Comp Law § 3, and where a common-law personal injury action was therefore unavailable to the employee. Mylroie v GAF Corp., 81 A.D.2d 994, 440 N.Y.S.2d 67, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11738 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981), aff'd, 55 N.Y.2d 893, 449 N.Y.S.2d 21, 433 N.E.2d 1269, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3096 (N.Y. 1982).

Determination by Workers' Compensation Board that claimant was totally disabled by asthma caused by unavoidable exposure to acetone while assembling plastic boxes with cement at her workplace was supported by substantial evidence consisting of circumstances present in workplace, medical experts' conclusions that claimant was fully disabled from pursuing her occupation as cementer, and claimant's lack of qualifications for other work. Moore v RPM Industries, Inc., 144 A.D.2d 135, 534 N.Y.S.2d 463, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10134 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

XVI. Dermatitis And Skin Conditions

Prior to the 1930 amendment to this section, dermatitis was not an occupational disease under subdiv. 2. Wright v Used Car Exchange, 221 A.D. 154, 223 N.Y.S. 245, 1927 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6396 (N.Y. App. Div. 1927).

The mere fact that a seborrheic skin type is not an occupational disease does not make the disabling dermatitis non-occupational. Pacifico v Treadway Inns Corp., 33 A.D.2d 1069, 307 N.Y.S.2d 277, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5526 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 26 N.Y.2d 612, 258 N.E.2d 730, 1970 N.Y. LEXIS 1805 (N.Y. 1970).

87. Particular incidents of dermatitis

A rash suffered by a cook, whose work included the general cooking and preparation of foodstuffs and the handling of large amounts of poultry is not an occupational disease where there is no proof that she sustained her rash as the result of acids or oils from the chickens. Kluger v Celian Mansion, Inc., 262 A.D. 784, 27 N.Y.S.2d 309, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5843 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

An employee in the fur business who was required to handle dyed furs and, as the result thereof suffered an infection which resulted in dermatitis, suffers an occupational disease. Cogas v Gordon Fur Co., 267 A.D. 843, 45 N.Y.S.2d 764, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5068 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944).

Dermatitis suffered by a taxicab driver resulting from handling a plastic steering wheel and the handling of money is occupational. Lucker v National Transp. Co., 273 A.D. 1043, 78 N.Y.S.2d 716, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5880 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

An employee working on a synthetic rubber product, who suffered dermatitis venenata caused by his exposure to the chemicals used in the particular synthetic rubber, suffers an occupational disease, and is entitled to an award. Cutting v Hewitt Rubber Co., 274 A.D. 1080, 85 N.Y.S.2d 677, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6145 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 300 N.Y. 598, 89 N.E.2d 883, 300 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 598, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 1457 (N.Y. 1949).

The board may properly find that turpentine used by the claimant in his work as a glass driller was spilled on his arms and legs which produced dermatitis venenata on his hands and arms and aggravated an unrelated hemostatic dermatitis in his legs. Fink v Bibi & Co., 276 A.D. 1045, 95 N.Y.S.2d 681, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5664 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

Evidence, in workmen's compensation case, supported finding that disabling condition suffered by claimant, diagnosed as keratosis punctata and causing painful eruptions on hands and feet, constituted a compensable occupational disease. Lopez v Hercules Corrugated Box Corp., 50 A.D.2d 1048, 377 N.Y.S.2d 745, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12052 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

Workers' compensation award for auto mechanic's early retirement due to occupational dermatitis was adequately supported by testimony of treating physician as to deteriorating condition of mechanic's skin from exposure to grease and oil at his job, especially since employer and carrier offered no medical proof in opposition and failed to show that mechanic was not exposed to oil and grease at his job. Fletcher v Ray Weil Chevrolet Corp., 135 A.D.2d 964, 522 N.Y.S.2d 373, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52864 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987).

88. Multiple exposures and successive episodes of dermatitis

Death benefits are barred where an occupational disease is not contracted within 12 months previous to date of disablement. Decedent died on December 10, 1952 as a result of treatment received for dermatitis condition. Board found that decedent had become disabled on August 14, 1952. He had exhibited symptoms of dermatitis as far back as 1941. However, when he ceased work as bricklayer, condition cleared up. Therefore, each attack was independent episode and it was immaterial that decedent had suffered from dermatitis before. Further, there was evidence that last contact causing dermatitis was much greater than theretofore. Thus finding supported that condition which led to claimant's death was contracted within 12-month period. Award affirmed. Silverman v Sam Ralph Constr. Co., 5 A.D.2d 710, 168 N.Y.S.2d 910, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3503 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957), reh'g denied, 5 A.D.2d 796, 170 N.Y.S.2d 307, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7078 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958), app. denied, 4 N.Y.2d 676, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1422 (N.Y. 1958).

Claimant was required to cease work because of contact dermatitis of hands arising out of work as baker. Awards for occupational disease were made and case was closed. Thereafter, case was reopened on report of dermatologist that subsequent flare-up of claimant's condition was attributable in part to previous contact dermatitis. Further award of temporary partial disability affirmed. Tarquinio v Duvernoy Bakeries, Inc., 6 A.D.2d 914, 176 N.Y.S.2d 13, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5221 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Claimant became disabled on October 22, 1954 by reason of dermatitis contracted in respondent's employment. Respondent's carrier paid compensation to June 4, 1956. On that date claimant entered the employ of appellant and worked until June 15, 1956. Board found flare-up of condition during period of employment by appellant and made award for period from June 15, 1956 to August, 1956 against appellant and an award for period subsequent to August 14, against both employers. Doctor reported that as of August 13 eruption was much better and that claimant had returned to status quo. Held: there being no evidence relating to disability after August 14 to employment by appellant, award was reversed and the matter remitted. Casteneda v Herzl Textile Dyers, Inc., 8 A.D.2d 889, 186 N.Y.S.2d 982, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8302 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Where claimant, a clerk-typist, worked successively for three different employers and contracted occupational dermatitis on both hands in her first employment through use of ditto paper and ditto cream, for which she received a disability award followed by closing of her case, the same sequence took place following her second employment, and these awards were reopened in connection with her claim against the third employer, there was sufficient medical testimony to sustain a finding by the Board that claimant had a continuing causally related disability due equally to all three claims. Benson v Grey Advertising Agency, 15 A.D.2d 701, 223 N.Y.S.2d 451, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12023 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Where a claimant suffered the occupational disease of dermatitis in two different employments, in the first, by exposure to oil, and in the second, by exposure to cement, and had since worked for several other employers, the employer in whose employment claimant was exposed to cement, on which exposure claimant's claim was based, was entitled to apply for apportionment of liability among the various other employers, if he could make the necessary showing. Kaleita v Evans Greenaway, Inc., 15 A.D.2d 979, 225 N.Y.S.2d 580, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10999 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

A 66 ⅔ percent partial disability award was reversed, after apportionment between two successive employers on a 60-40 basis, the award being founded on dermatitis initially developed in a first employment as a tile setter but which cropped up again following employment as a porter in the second employer's office building after exposure to cement dust and detergents in cleaning-up operations, for want of substantial evidence to show the percentage of partial disability found. Martinbianco v Banowit, 18 A.D.2d 732, 234 N.Y.S.2d 643, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6516 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

89. Extent of disability

Where the parties concede that a cafeteria worker is entitled to temporary compensation for disability resulting from dermatitis but the record is devoid of medical evidence to the effect that the disability will be permanent, the award for permanent partial disability must be reversed and the matter remanded. Bosco v General Electric Co., 3 A.D.2d 781, 160 N.Y.S.2d 43, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6190 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Evidence relating dermatitis venenata, caused by contract with wool and other substances, to employment was substantial. However, findings of disability and reduced earning capacity, on which award was predicated was not supported. Case remitted for further proof as to claimant's condition and earning capacity. Fiorella v Empire Worsted Mills, Inc., 7 A.D.2d 657, 179 N.Y.S.2d 172, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4296 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

XVII. Lint And Dust Diseases; Silicosis

90. In general

The purpose of former article 4-A was to remove from the coverage of ¶ 28 of this section silicosis and similar dust diseases, and to set up a separate schedule of compensation payments in a lesser sum for total disability or death resulting from that type of disease; the provisions of that article were designed and intended to embrace within their scope only the diseases of the normal pneumoconiosis classification, such as silicosis or chalicosis, anthracosis, siderosis and similar diseases. Lawton v Port of New York Authority, 276 A.D. 81, 92 N.Y.S.2d 714, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3117 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

Whether disability is the result of an occupational disease under par. 29 of subd. 2 of this section, or should be classified as a dust disease under par. 28, is to be determined by the nature of the disease, not by its cause, and mere exposure to dust without proof that that caused the disease, or that disability is due to a disease of the pneumoconiosis classification, does not require the board to determine that the disability is due to dust disease. Miller v Colonial Sand & Stone Co., 11 A.D.2d 824, 203 N.Y.S.2d 107, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8489 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Although bronchiectasis has sometimes been found to be an occupational disease, a board finding of a definite link between occupation and exposure and aggravation of a pre-existing bronchiectasis is not the equivalent of finding a link between employment and the particular disease and will not suffice to sustain an occupational disease award. Lounsbury v United States Gypsum Co., 21 A.D.2d 957, 251 N.Y.S.2d 226, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3227 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

The dust diseases mentioned in subdivision 2 paragraph 28 of this section include only those of the pneumoconiosis group, such as silicosis, anthracosis, and siderosis, and where no diagnosis of silicosis or pneumoconiosis could be made, an award was properly made under subdivision 2 paragraph 29. Nick v William J. Meyer Co., 26 A.D.2d 878, 274 N.Y.S.2d 311, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3210 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1966).

The dust diseases mentioned in ¶ 28 include only those in the pneumoconiosis group such as silicosis, anthracosis and siderosis. Viskovich v Robert A. Keasbey Co., 36 A.D.2d 665, 318 N.Y.S.2d 257, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4742 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 29 N.Y.2d 483, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 2132 (N.Y. 1971).

Although Workers' Compensation Law does not define "dust disease," term refers to diseases of lungs classified as pneumoconiosis—for example, silicosis, chalicosis, anthracosis, and siderosis. Matott v St. Joe's Lead, 245 A.D.2d 907, 666 N.Y.S.2d 849, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13622 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Miner's claim for workers' compensation benefits for partial disability based on occupational lung disease allegedly due to exposure to dust, fumes, and oil did not suffer from "dust disease," for which partial disability was excluded from coverage under CLS Work Comp former § 39, where medical experts who testified for both parties essentially agreed that miner suffered from chronic bronchitis, and expert for employer specifically found no evidence of pneumoconiosis. Matott v St. Joe's Lead, 245 A.D.2d 907, 666 N.Y.S.2d 849, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13622 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

The court cannot say as a matter of law that pneumoconiosis is a dust disease. Schwartz v Queensboro Farm Products, Inc., 78 N.Y.S.2d 863, 191 Misc. 778, 1948 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2337 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1948).

Laws 1935 chapter 254 amending this section made silicosis a compensable disease for the first time; the amendment does not bar a right of action which became vested before its effective date. Schwartz v Queensboro Farm Products, Inc., 78 N.Y.S.2d 863, 191 Misc. 778, 1948 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2337 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1948).

An employee suffering personal injuries caused by harmful dust and vapors in the plant suffers injuries resulting from "occupational disease" as distinguished from accidental injury. Ligiecki v E. I. Dupont De Nemours & Co., 46 F. Supp. 266, 1942 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2499 (D.N.Y. 1942).

91. Limitation of recovery to cases of total disability

The Workmen's Compensation Law was a complete bar to actions brought by employees wherein they charged their employer with violations of the Labor Law in that no dust removal devices had been supplied, as a result of which they suffered from a condition known as partially disabling silicosis. The legislature acted within its constitutional powers when it restricted Workmen's Compensation benefits to totally disabled silicosis sufferers. Cifolo v General Electric Co., 305 N.Y. 209, 112 N.E.2d 197, 305 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 209, 1953 N.Y. LEXIS 826 (N.Y.), cert. denied, 346 U.S. 874, 74 S. Ct. 124, 98 L. Ed. 382, 1953 U.S. LEXIS 1577 (U.S. 1953).

Claimant suffered heart attack and, while hospitalized, X-ray revealed presence of pulmonary fibrosis due to silicosis. Board found that silicosis together with underlying cardio vascular condition caused claimant to be totally and permanently disabled. But, under § 39 compensation is not payable for partial disability due to silicosis. So, in view of finding that silicosis was only partially disabling, award for permanent total disability reversed and matter remanded. Iodice v General Abrasive Co., 5 A.D.2d 707, 168 N.Y.S.2d 809, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3498 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Compensation is payable for total disability or death resulting from silicosis or other dust diseases (Workmen's Compensation Law, § 3, subd. 2, par. 28) but not for partial disability resulting therefrom (§ 39). However, if the silicosis or other dust disease combined with another condition results in total disability, a total disability award can be made. Piragowski v National Sugar Refining Co., 11 A.D.2d 824, 202 N.Y.S.2d 611, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8490 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

The provision in par. 28 of subd. 2 of this section that compensation is payable for total disability or death resulting from silicosis or other dust disease will sustain an award if the silicosis contributes to or aggravates another condition and the combination results in total disability, but a silicosis award cannot be sustained where silicosis in no way contributes to the other condition which is partially at least the cause of total disability. Chatman v Acme Steel & Malleable Iron Works, 16 A.D.2d 726, 226 N.Y.S.2d 965, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10341 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Where disability is due to silicosis or other dust disease, the employee is entitled to compensation benefits only when the dust disease results in total disability. Rogala v John Deere Plow Co., 31 A.D.2d 867, 297 N.Y.S.2d 877, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4628 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969).

To establish right to compensation for occupational disease of silicosis, claimant must establish total disability and silicosis does not have to be sole cause of such disability. Smith v Ingersoll-Rand Co., 50 A.D.2d 988, 376 N.Y.S.2d 262, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11957 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

92. Conditions caused by exposure to lint or dust from cotton, wool or the like

An asthmatic condition may be occupational in nature when there has been exposure to irritants to which claimant is allergic, and a compensation award was accordingly affirmed upon a showing that claimant had worked for 29 years for the same employer at a type of work which necessitated her coming in contact with wool used in men's clothing, first experienced trouble in her chest from swimming in cold water about two years before her claim for compensation was filed, and, in 1956, was out of work because of an asthmatic condition. Bichowsky v Hickey Freeman Co., 11 A.D.2d 877, 203 N.Y.S.2d 486, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8409 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Finding that bronchial condition of rug salesman and handler was caused by exposure to lint and dust was supported by substantial evidence and was sufficient to sustain an award for an

Substantial evidence supported finding of occupational disease, pneumoconiosis derived from 10 years' employment in dusty atmosphere where decedent sorted clippings of silk, wool, and cotton fabrics collected from garment industry, on sharply divided medical testimony. Minutello v M. Storelli & Co., 24 A.D.2d 815, 263 N.Y.S.2d 872, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3129 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965), app. denied, 17 N.Y.2d 418, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 1682 (N.Y. 1966).

Decision of board that occupational disease of byssinosis, which was causally related to claimant's employment as a sewing machine operator, aggravated pre-existing conditions thus rendering claimant totally disabled was substantiated by the evidence. The court pointed out that the record contained only a conflict in medical testimony and the board having chosen between the conflicting opinions, each based on the same facts, would be affirmed in its decision. Grisanti v Rugby Knitting Mills, Inc., 40 A.D.2d 1047, 338 N.Y.S.2d 914, 1972 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3094 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1972).

93. Conditions caused by exposure to flour, yeast and other baking supplies

A baker who becomes disabled as the result of asthma contracted by exposure to lard fumes, flour and other ingredients used in his occupation as a baker suffers an occupational disease. Chalmers v Case, 265 A.D. 897, 37 N.Y.S.2d 858, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6377 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

Where a millwright foreman in a flour mill largely performed his duties in a carpenter shop where he was not especially affected by dust, but at times worked in other portions of the mill where there was exposure to flour dust, coughing up dust and dirt in his saliva, and worked some five months on a construction job in a grain elevator where he was exposed to grain dust, there is a sufficient record on which to find that his disability was an occupational disease resulting from exposure to dust. Eckert v Commander Larabee Mfg. Co., 278 A.D. 623, 101 N.Y.S.2d 860, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4117 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

Claimant, a baker for 42 years, was entitled to compensation for the occupational disease of bronchial asthma, due to exposure to dust, fumes, fire, molds, and yeast. Mayr v Price, 9 A.D.2d 801, 192 N.Y.S.2d 752, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6140 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Where a baker was afflicted with asthma prior to employment, contracted emphysema, a lung ailment, in course of his employment, and finally suffered a fatal heart attack, death benefits were payable on the basis of a showing that the cardiac death was influenced by the asthmatic emphysema condition. Wannemacher v Wannemacher Baker, Inc., 9 A.D.2d 835, 192 N.Y.S.2d 696, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6199 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959), reh'g denied, 10 A.D.2d 589, 195 N.Y.S.2d 628, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12357 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), app. denied, 7 N.Y.2d 711, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1655 (N.Y. 1960).

While the diseases pulmonary fibrosis and emphysema are not, of themselves, occupational diseases related to bakers, baker's asthma is an occupational hazard of the work, and where there is medical testimony sufficient to show that fibrosis and emphysema resulted from such asthma the Board can properly link back an award of death benefits to disablement resulting from exposure to flour dust in the plant of the last employer prior to occurrence of disability. Morrocco v Mohican Stores, Inc., 17 A.D.2d 684, 230 N.Y.S.2d 526, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8487 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962), aff'd, 13 N.Y.2d 1015, 245 N.Y.S.2d 595, 195 N.E.2d 306, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 886 (N.Y. 1963).

An occupational disease award for bronchial asthma and bronchitis suffered by claimant, a pizza chef through exposure to flour, was sustained on the record, notwithstanding claimant's record of a continuous series of new physical conditions for which he had sought and received compensation. Maniscalco v Pizza Chef, Inc., 17 A.D.2d 884, 233 N.Y.S.2d 291, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7319 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

An occupational disease award for asthma incurred by a baker as the result of exposure to certain things to which he was allergic in course of employment by three successive employers could properly be apportioned among the three employers, being based upon increased sensitivity in each such employment. Erazo v Brandlers Bakery, 22 A.D.2d 718, 253 N.Y.S.2d 186, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3054 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

Bronchial asthma was an occupational disease of 59-year-old bakery worker who was exposed in his work activities to oil, flour, and dust. Suarez v Zampieri Bros., 42 A.D.2d 1013, 348 N.Y.S.2d 201, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3408 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1973).

94. Conditions caused by exposure to grain dust

Emphysema, bronchitis and asthma suffered by an electrician in a grain elevator are organic diseases caused by the employee's exposure to grain dust, to which he was allergic, and these diseases are occupational within the meaning of ¶ 28 of this section as distinguished from diseases in the silicosis group. Lawton v Port of New York Authority, 276 A.D. 81, 92 N.Y.S.2d 714, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3117 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

Proof justified finding that a grain elevator houseman and power operator suffered an occupational disease in the form of bronchial asthma from exposure to grain dust. Miller v International Milling Co., 283 A.D. 1123, 131 N.Y.S.2d 584, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6490 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

95. Other dust diseases

Where it appeared that a deceased employee had worked for some 27 years in and about hard coal mines, the evidence was insufficient to sustain a finding that his death, from coal miner's disease, following three months of subsequent employment as fireman at a college, was due to the latter employment. Gorsky v New York, 9 N.Y.2d 739, 214 N.Y.S.2d 350, 174 N.E.2d 333, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1466 (N.Y. 1961).

Interstitial fibrosis of the lungs could not be associated with claimant's employment in a plant with a heavy dust environment notwithstanding that other employees developed similar symptons although not similarly diagnosed. Unanimity of medical opinion to the affect that there is not observable or acceptable correlation between exposure to fiberglass dust and interstitial pulmonary fibrosis warranted denial of benefits. Shannon v Grumman Aircraft, 29 N.Y.2d 786, 327 N.Y.S.2d 71, 277 N.E.2d 190, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 991 (N.Y. 1971).

Claimant had been employed for seven years in handling fluorescent tubes containing beryllium. The work exposed claimant to beryllium dust and she became totally disabled due to pulmonary beryllium granulomatosis. All of the evidence in the record sustains contention and there is no evidence to the contrary, that claimant's disability arose from a dust disease and that employer is entitled to reimbursement for payments made in excess of 260 weeks under paragraph (ee) of subdivision 8 of § 15 of the Workmen's Compensation Law. Rechani v Tube Light Eng. Co., 280 A.D. 1005, 116 N.Y.S.2d 830, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4550 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

Evidence sustained finding by Board that printing pressman suffered a disabling attack of bronchial asthma from exposure to shop dust which caused a temporary aggravation of a pre-existing allergic condition and that the underlying sensitivity of the claimant remained constant and did not require reopening of 6 closed cases involving similar exposure. Laine v Commanday Roth, Inc., 284 A.D. 1070, 135 N.Y.S.2d 879, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4599 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Supreme Court of New York, Appellate Division, Third Department holds that where there is medical evidence that a workers' compensation claimant's disability is due, at least in part, to the existence of a dust disease, a separate claim is not necessary for a non-dust disease under § 3(2)(30) arising from workplace asbestos exposure, as the dust disease diagnosis will take precedence and the claim should be established under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 3(2)(29); accordingly, the New York Workers' Compensation Board did not err in ruling that the claimant sustained a work-related occupational disease under § 3(2)(29) where he simultaneously suffered from dust disease due to asbestosis and non-dust disease due to asbestos-related pleural disease. Matter of Fama v P & M Sorbara, 29 A.D.3d 170, 811 N.Y.S.2d 202, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2902 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. dismissed, 7 N.Y.3d 783, 820 N.Y.S.2d 544, 853 N.E.2d 1112, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 1776 (N.Y. 2006).

96. Proof of causation

The mere coincidence of employment in a plant with a heavy dust environment and claimant's developing illness, the "speculative conclusion" by claimant's physician that there was possible causation, and the equivocal fact that other employees developed similar symptoms although not similarly diagnosed, were insufficient to sustain board's conclusion that interstitial fibrosis was causally related to employment. Shannon v Grumman Aircraft, 29 N.Y.2d 786, 327 N.Y.S.2d 71, 277 N.E.2d 190, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 991 (N.Y. 1971).

An award of compensation for asthma as an occupational disease is proper where seizures took place during work and there is medical opinion that the asthma was due to exposure at work as against a contention by the employer that asthma is not characteristic of the employee's work. Horvath v Wickwire Spencer Steel Co., 275 A.D. 1014, 91 N.Y.S.2d 709, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5490 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

Decedent died from lung cancer. Claimant's medical testimony considered it likely that growth of tumor was accelerated by decedent's exposure to dust in employment. Employer's expert denied causal connection between work and death, as did impartial specialists. Held: Board properly denied death benefits. Yarak v Magnesia Asbestos Insulation Co., 7 A.D.2d 667, 179 N.Y.S.2d 158, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4312 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958), app. denied, 8 A.D.2d 664, 185 N.Y.S.2d 760, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9043 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Decedent, foreman and helper in employer's plant, developed cough. There was conflicting medical testimony as to whether exposure to dusts in employment aggravated his condition resulting in total disability in 1947 and death in 1952. Held: decision that disability and death were not caused by working conditions affirmed. Young v Onondaga Supply Co., 7 A.D.2d 670, 179 N.Y.S.2d 329, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4316 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Where claimant's attending physician, a specialist in internal medicine, testified unequivocally that claimant's emphysema and chronic bronchitis were causally related to his work and were produced by the inhalation of dust and other irritants at work, there was sufficient evidence to support the Workmen's Compensation Board's finding that the nature of the claimant's occupation was such that he was exposed to irritants such as dust and fumes, and because of such exposures in his occupation developed emphysema and chronic bronchitis, occupational diseases within the meaning of subdivision 2 paragraph 29 of this section. Nick v William J. Meyer Co., 26 A.D.2d 878, 274 N.Y.S.2d 311, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3210 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1966).

Substantial evidence, including testimony of a specialist in chest diseases that there was a causal relationship between the decedent's silicosis condition and his death, was sufficient to support determination of Workmen's Compensation Board that decedent's death was causally related to a compensable occupational disease so as to entitle his widow to an award of death benefits. Ricapito v Haskel, 51 A.D.2d 1069, 380 N.Y.S.2d 803, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11899 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976).

97. Proof of silicosis

The evidence was sufficient to sustain a disability award on account of silico-tuberculosis where it showed that claimant was employed as foreman of a machine room where greeting cards were finished, had been so employed for 12 years, and his job involved keeping the machines running and cleaning the dust from them, which included dust and silica from a substance known as "glitter" which was used to decorate the cards. Amato v R. R. Heywood Co., 12 A.D.2d 536, 206 N.Y.S.2d 626, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7230 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain an award by the Board for permanent total disability found to be due to silicosis causally related to claimant's last employment where it appeared that for 13 years immediately preceding disablement he was employed as track foreman engaged in laying and maintenance of rails in an underground railroad in the last employer's gypsum mine, there exposed to considerable quantities of silica dust, and there was medical testimony that his disability resulted from a combination of silicosis and emphysema. Groff v National Gypsum Co., 18 A.D.2d 481, 239 N.Y.S.2d 738, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3802 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 13 N.Y.2d 596, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 1963 (N.Y. 1963).

A permanent and total disability award by reason of silicosis could be made against claimant's last employer notwithstanding a long prior exposure to silica dust, or even the medical presence of silicosis, during employment elsewhere. Filipowicz v De Laval Separator Co., 19 A.D.2d 665, 241 N.Y.S.2d 295, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3463 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

The Board could properly find that a disability claimant, whose claim was based upon silicosis, was exposed to injurious dust hazard during his last employment giving rise to his disablement in 1958, where he had then been engaged in handling sheet rubber on which powdered talc was used which contained a high percentage of magnesium silicate. Filipowicz v De Laval Separator Co., 19 A.D.2d 665, 241 N.Y.S.2d 295, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3463 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

There was sufficient medical testimony, although conflicting, to sustain an award for silicosis as an occupational disease, notwithstanding opinions varied as to the precise nature of the disease. Teamer v American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corp., 20 A.D.2d 739, 247 N.Y.S.2d 66, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4386 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 14 N.Y.2d 484, 1964 N.Y. LEXIS 1717 (N.Y. 1964).

Where it appeared that claimant had worked for 20 years as a bricklayer in repairing and rebuilding of furnaces constructed of refractory bricks conceded to contain siliceous materials, the Board could find that he was subjected to injurious exposure to silica in course of employment causing him to contract silicosis. Schul v National Carbon Div. Union Carbide Co., 20 A.D.2d 936, 249 N.Y.S.2d 281, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3916 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 14 N.Y.2d 489, 1964 N.Y. LEXIS 1910 (N.Y. 1964).

Substantial evidence supported Workmen's Compensation Board's finding that employee was disabled by silicosis on May 25, 1960 despite fact that he returned to work and remained there until November, 1971. Smith v Ingersoll-Rand Co., 50 A.D.2d 988, 376 N.Y.S.2d 262, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11957 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

98. —Effect of time of exposure

A complaint states a good cause of action for damages suffered from contracting silicosis, as of Aug. 31, 1935, where it is alleged that the last injurious exposure and the last employment forming the basis of plaintiff's claim occurred prior to Sept. 1, 1935, when silicosis first became compensable, and that no claim for damages is made by reason of exposure or injuries suffered subsequent to Aug. 31, 1935. Mnich v American Radiator Co., 263 A.D. 573, 34 N.Y.S.2d 16, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6948 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 289 N.Y. 681, 45 N.E.2d 333, 289 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 681, 1942 N.Y. LEXIS 1257 (N.Y. 1942).

The proof showed that decedent's death occurred within five years following continuous disability from an occupational disease (silicosis) and the award under § 67 of former article 4-A was proper. Tirelli v Contractors for Dry Docks, 280 A.D. 1004, 116 N.Y.S.2d 828, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4548 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

The board has found that disability was not due to exposure or other recent work for the employer, but due to silicosis contracted before the enactment of the statute authorizing payment of compensation for silicosis as an occupational disease. The statute expressly excluded prior exposures from the compensation it afforded. Upon this factual finding, the silicosis which caused the disability of claimant is not compensable as a matter of law. Juniak v General Electric Co., 280 A.D. 1010, 116 N.Y.S.2d 809, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4560 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

A complaint in an action against a foundry by one continuously in its employment from 1919 until his discharge in 1935, grounded on the employer's failure to ventilate the premises properly whereby he contracted silicosis, is not vulnerable to objection that the cause of action is barred by subdivision 2, group 28, or by art. 4-A. Mutolo v Utica General Jobbing Foundry, 292 N.Y.S. 14, 161 Misc. 327, 1936 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1558 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1936).

99. Date of disablement

In occupational disease case, Workmen's Compensation Board may properly fix date of disablement at time of need of medical care and before any actual loss of wages. Smith v Ingersoll-Rand Co., 50 A.D.2d 988, 376 N.Y.S.2d 262, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11957 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

XVIII. Tuberculosis

The fact that in certain cases pulmonary tuberculosis has been determined to be an occupational disease resulting from the employment involved, does not obligate the workmen's compensation board to make a similar finding in all cases of pulmonary tuberculosis. McSweeney v Hammerlund Mfg. Co., 275 A.D. 447, 90 N.Y.S.2d 347, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3793 (N.Y. App. Div.), reh'g denied, 275 A.D. 1005, 91 N.Y.S.2d 520, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5457 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

101. Tuberculosis contracted by health care employees

A finding that an interne suffering from tuberculosis has sustained an occupational disease will be sustained, where the evidence indicates that in the course of his work the interne attended tubercular patients, served on ambulance duty for forty-eight hours without relief, and acted as house surgeon, which involved more work than the general duties of an interne, and which required the interne to be on duty day and night for considerable period. Vanore v Mary Immaculate Hospital, 260 A.D. 820, 22 N.Y.S.2d 350, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4834 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940), aff'd, 285 N.Y. 631, 33 N.E.2d 556, 285 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 631, 1941 N.Y. LEXIS 1652 (N.Y. 1941).

A nurse or a student nurse who becomes disabled because of tuberculosis due to the nature of her employment is entitled to compensation. McDonald v New York, 265 A.D. 1026, 39 N.Y.S.2d 2, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6674 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943).; McDonough v Flushing Hospital & Dispensary, 266 A.D. 937, 43 N.Y.S.2d 889, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5291 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943).; Bukofsky v Flushing Hospital & Dispensary, 266 A.D. 937, 43 N.Y.S.2d 890, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5292 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943).; Hill v Samaritan Hospital, 273 A.D. 828, 75 N.Y.S.2d 718, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4818 (N.Y. App. Div.), modified, 298 N.Y. 182, 81 N.E.2d 79, 298 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 182, 1948 N.Y. LEXIS 817 (N.Y. 1948).; Kilby v Charles S. Wilson Memorial Hospital, 278 A.D. 273, 104 N.Y.S.2d 410, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3791 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

Tuberculosis contracted by a head nurse in a hospital causally related to her employment is compensable, where the nurse had an unrelated tuberculosis history. Simola v New York, 271 A.D. 942, 67 N.Y.S.2d 113, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5311 (N.Y. App. Div. 1947).

An award of compensation is proper where the claimant contracted tuberculosis while employed as a nurse in an institution of the employer which was maintained solely for the treatment of tuberculosis patients. Lord v Rocky Crest Sanitorium, 274 A.D. 955, 83 N.Y.S.2d 778, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4237 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

Tuberculosis contracted by a laboratory technician who was exposed in the course of her employment to live tubercle bacilli and sputum specimens containing them, is an occupational disease. Lyden v United Hospital, 275 A.D. 877, 88 N.Y.S.2d 743, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4859 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

Tuberculosis contracted by a hospital worker from a diseased patient or contaminated equipment is a compensable occupational disease. Lachowicz v Albany Medical Center Hospital, 30 A.D.2d 1004, 294 N.Y.S.2d 186, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3115 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1968).

Evidence that the claimant, a nurse, was actually assigned to the chest clinic where tubercular patients were treated and that on other occasions she was called upon to work in the chest clinic was substantial evidence, according to the court, to support the Board's determination that the claimant contracted tuberculosis as the result of her exposure to tubercular patients in the chest clinic even though there was no evidence that the claimant came in actual close contact with a specific patient who was diagnosed as suffering from tuberculosis. Thus the court held that there was sufficient evidence to support the Workmen's Compensation Board finding that the claimant contracted tuberculosis as an occupational disease while engaged as a nurse at her employer's clinic. Muldavin v Union Health Center, 35 A.D.2d 766, 314 N.Y.S.2d 827, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3668 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

102. Tuberculosis contracted by contact with infected co-workers

Tuberculosis contracted by a bookkeeper while working alongside a tubercular co-employee who was also a bookkeeper was not an occupational disease within the meaning of this section. Buckley v Gallagher Bros. Sand & Gravel Corp., 300 N.Y. 447, 92 N.E.2d 38, 300 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 447, 1950 N.Y. LEXIS 847 (N.Y. 1950).. See also Harman v Republic Aviation Corp., 298 N.Y. 285, 82 N.E.2d 785, 298 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 285, 1948 N.Y. LEXIS 795 (N.Y. 1948).

Contraction of tuberculosis by truck driver from his helper by reason of occupying the cab of the truck with helper over a considerable period of time is not an occupational disease compensable under this section. Paider v Park East Movers, 19 N.Y.2d 373, 280 N.Y.S.2d 140, 227 N.E.2d 40, 1967 N.Y. LEXIS 1585 (N.Y. 1967).

A switchboard operator who suffers pulmonary tuberculosis as the result of using the same mouth piece and other switchboard equipment as was used by a second switchboard operator who was suffering from tuberculosis, suffers an occupational disease. Mason v YWCA of New York City, 271 A.D. 1042, 68 N.Y.S.2d 510, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5763 (N.Y. App. Div. 1947).

Claimant, employed as laboratory technician and manufacturer of dyes, worked in close contact with technician suffering from active tuberculosis and both used same pipette in testing dye development process. Evidence also that flask containing chemical compound exploded in claimant's face and that resulting fumes would increase chance of infection of tuberculosis. Held: award properly made for occupational disease. Hovancik v General Aniline & Film Corp., Ansco Div., 8 A.D.2d 171, 187 N.Y.S.2d 28, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8208 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

103. Tuberculosis caused or activated by work conditions

Denial of an award will be reversed, where the claimant, a counterman and a clerk in a wholesale meat market, presented proof that pulmonary tuberculosis was due to the nature of his employment in that from ten to thirty times a day he entered a cold storage room where the meat was kept. Bishop v Comer & Pollock, Inc., 251 A.D. 492, 297 N.Y.S. 946, 1937 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6983 (N.Y. App. Div. 1937).

Tuberculosis suffered by one employed by a cast traffic sign corporation as a molder resulting from exposure to gas and fumes in such employment is an occupational disease within the purview of subdivision 2, group 28 of this section. Huffman v Cast Traffic Sign Corp., 258 A.D. 1013, 16 N.Y.S.2d 949, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8642 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

A truck washer and greaser who worked continually around water in an unheated garage is entitled to compensation, where he became disabled because he suffered from a far-advanced bi-lateral pulmonary tuberculosis, an occupational disease which he contracted due to the nature of his employment. Moore v Colonial Sand & Stone Co., 261 A.D. 857, 24 N.Y.S.2d 751, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7791 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

Where a claimant, who was assigned to the duty of operating a degreasing machine which required him to clean machine parts in a tank containing carbon tetrachloride, had an arrested case of pulmonary tuberculosis when he began his employment, he suffers an occupational disease where his exposure to tetrachloride fumes reactivated his tubercular condition and caused disability. O'Neil v American Locomotive Co., 276 A.D. 1043, 95 N.Y.S.2d 678, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5659 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

Aggravation of a condition not occupational in nature is not an occupational disease. So, an award for claimant (a gas converter) was dismissed where gas exposure allegedly accelerated tuberculosis. Although claimant's occupation may have aggravated preexisting tubercular condition the claimant did not suffer from an accidental injury and/or occupational disease. Goldberg v Conversions & Surveys, Inc., 6 A.D.2d 563, 180 N.Y.S.2d 358, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3893 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Claimant handled boxes of frozen fish requiring him to go in and out of freezers continuously. Board found that claimant sustained accident in the nature of pneumonia, which, together with the effect and nature of his work, resulted in activation of quiescent tuberculosis and that pneumonia and tuberculosis constituted disease. Held: award reversed. Theory of disease induced by accident was negated. Conroy v Rupert Fish Co., 8 A.D.2d 553, 183 N.Y.S.2d 332, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9633 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

The evidence was sufficient to sustain an award for disability due to tuberculosis of the spine, based on aggravation of a dormant tubercular condition as the result of accidental back injuries, where claimant's doctor testified in detail to existence of tubercle bacilli in the spine which, in his opinion, had been dormant until activated by the trauma of accidental injury, notwithstanding failure of X-ray tests to disclose their presence. Scibetta v Colorado Fuel & Iron Corp., 9 A.D.2d 796, 192 N.Y.S.2d 841, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6131 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

104. —Work conditions which lead to silicosis or asbestosis

A miner assigned to drilling and blasting duties suffers an occupational disease when he becomes disabled as the result of pulmonary tuberculosis where his employment exposed him to wet and cold conditions, fumes, gases and improper ventilation, even though the disease was imposed upon a silicotic condition of the lungs, which however was not disabling. Webster v St. Joseph Lead Co., 264 A.D. 800, 34 N.Y.S.2d 729, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4781 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

Claimant, asbestos pipe coverer for 25 years, developed symptoms of tuberculosis and thereafter was also found to have asbestosis. Proof was sufficient to sustain an award for total disability because, although proof as to whether asbestosis alone was disabling, was too vague to sustain finding, there was proof that it became so in conjunction with related condition of tuberculosis. Muldoon v Charles S. Woods Co., 8 A.D.2d 888, 186 N.Y.S.2d 907, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8299 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.2d 706, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1868 (N.Y. 1959).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain a compensation award for tuberculosis where, although it appeared that claimant was not exposed to that disease in course of employment, he was exposed to free silica for more than 60 days, which was a contributing factor to his disability under medical opinion that the presence of silicosis unfavorably affects the course of tuberculosis or renders an individual more susceptible to the latter disease. Dozier v Republic Steel Corp., 12 A.D.2d 868, 209 N.Y.S.2d 884, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13039 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 9 N.Y.2d 611 (N.Y. 1961).

Because the Workers' Compensation Board's original finding of "asbestos related disease" was imprecise and inconsistent with the medical evidence, the Board properly determined that an employee, who was exposed to both dust and non-dust asbestos while on the job, was entitled to benefits under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 3(2)(30), and that the Special Funds Conservation Committee had to reimburse the employer under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law §§ 3(2)(29), 15(8)(ee); separate claims for the diseases were unnecessary. Matter of Dallas v Consol. Edison, 27 A.D.3d 907, 811 N.Y.S.2d 207, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2900 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

XIX. Other Conditions and Diseases

105. Arthritis

An award of compensation for occupational disease is proper where an employee working as an all around man in a produce market was required to handle fruit and produce which had been iced and frozen and had to enter a refrigerator and otherwise work in cold and wet surroundings as a result of which his hands became wet, cold and frozen and which ultimately caused him to suffer from rheumatoid arthritis. Peloso v D'Alessio Bros., 298 N.Y. 582, 81 N.E.2d 111, 298 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 582, 1948 N.Y. LEXIS 1160 (N.Y. 1948).

The Workmen's Compensation Board properly based an award upon a finding that claimant suffered from an osteo-arthritis condition of both knees as an occupational disease. Rocha v Otis Elevator Co., 279 A.D. 829, 109 N.Y.S.2d 266, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4972 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

A sewer in a clothing factory who contracted osteoarthritis was not entitled to compensation where the undisputed medical evidence was to the effect that such a disease would not ordinarily be an occupational disease. Schreiber v Grossman & Spiegel, 9 A.D.2d 974, 193 N.Y.S.2d 671, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5663 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Finding of Workmen's Compensation Board that rheumatoid arthritis was occupationally caused, attributable to claimant's job, involving the daily winding and cutting of thousands of coils, despite testimony that the exact cause of such disease is unknown. Guardi v General Electric Co., 30 A.D.2d 738, 291 N.Y.S.2d 457, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3589 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 22 N.Y.2d 644, 1968 N.Y. LEXIS 2068 (N.Y. 1968).

106. Back, disc and spine disorders

A claimant with a congenital defect of his spine did not sustain a compensable occupational disease where the nature of the work in which he was engaged was not such as to produce disabilities among the rank and file of men. Detenbeck v General Motors Corp., 309 N.Y. 558, 132 N.E.2d 840, 309 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 558, 1956 N.Y. LEXIS 1053 (N.Y. 1956).

Where a plumber was originally injured in 1936 while carrying a bath tub, suffering a displaced intervertical disc, and some nine years later while doing other heavy work, the employee brought about symptoms of the displaced disc which had been caused by the original accident, the second injury is an occupational disease. Paradiso v Vuozzo, 277 A.D. 802, 96 N.Y.S.2d 796, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3375 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

A claim based on traumatic conversion hysteria was sustained on proof that carpenter in 1947 while carrying a keg of nails fell and tore a muscle in his back and sustained other injuries although there was other evidence that plaintiff was consciously malingering. Cioffi v William Crow Constr. Co., 284 A.D. 1076, 136 N.Y.S.2d 20, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4610 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain a finding that a herniated cervical disc was an occupational disease where it appeared that claimant was of short stature, had worked for two years as an X-ray file clerk which required her to lift and file various objects involving twisting of her body and reaching and stretching, had suffered no previous back trouble, but on a certain date felt a sharp pain in her neck which necessitated stopping work about two weeks thereafter, following which her condition was diagnosed as a herniated cervical disc. Mullarkey v New York Hospital, 13 A.D.2d 584, 211 N.Y.S.2d 748, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12246 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961), aff'd, 11 N.Y.2d 898, 228 N.Y.S.2d 238, 182 N.E.2d 618, 1962 N.Y. LEXIS 1210 (N.Y. 1962).

A herniated disc is an occupational disease within the meaning of subd 2(29) of the above statute. Ross v Kollsman Instrument Corp., 24 A.D.2d 670, 261 N.Y.S.2d 186, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3668 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 16 N.Y.2d 485, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 2151 (N.Y. 1965).

A domestic worker's claim that a tubercular back condition was aggravated in two compensable accidents and that she had a continuing causally related disability was supportable through testimony of attending physician, consultant and impartial specialist. Gordon v Gluckson, 34 A.D.2d 1070, 312 N.Y.S.2d 268, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4246 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

107. Cassion disease

Claimant, a "sand hog," was entitled to compensation for caisson disease, on the strength of his physician's testimony that he had contracted that disease and failure of a physician employed by the employer to state, unequivocally, that he did not, notwithstanding a report filed by the latter, who did not testify, stating that the weight of evidence would be in favor of an idiopathic lesion. Daniels v Mason, Johnson & MacLean, 9 A.D.2d 812, 192 N.Y.S.2d 654, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6159 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Where the diagnosis resulting in discovery that claimant had caisson disease was not made until approximately 20 years after his last contact with compressed air, during which period he had been gainfully employed at other work which did not bring him in contact with compressed air, and finally attained age 70, started to draw social security benefits, and retired entirely from work, his condition is not compensable in the absence of proof that his physical condition resulting from the disease was responsible for his ceasing work. Meyers v Walsh Constr. Co., 12 A.D.2d 371, 211 N.Y.S.2d 590, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12275 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

With respect to a claim for disability due to aseptic necrosis, resulting from caisson disease, there being ample evidence to establish that claimant's bone damage was the cumulative effect of a series of exposures while working for different employers for different periods of time, an application by the last employer to have the award apportioned back against prior employers in proportion to the amount of time claimant was exposed in each employment, was properly granted. Doherty v Grow Constr. Co., 14 A.D.2d 957, 221 N.Y.S.2d 9, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7901 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

The evidence was considered insufficient to show causal relationship between caisson disease diagnosed in a taxi driver in March, 1959, where he had last worked under compressed air October 1, 1956, and theretofore for a period of from December, 1954, to the latter date without any evidence of disability, and had only once before worked under compressed air for only a six-months' period in 1946. Green v S. A. Healy Co., 15 A.D.2d 704, 223 N.Y.S.2d 724, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12026 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

108. Depuytren's contracture

Dupuytren's contracture of the hand is an occupational disease. Jodlowski v Empire Milk Trucking Corp., 261 A.D. 1030, 26 N.Y.S.2d 69, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8601 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

A finding that Dupuytren's contracture is an occupational disease where suffered by a chef is proper, where the medical testimony clearly created a question of fact that while all chefs are not susceptible to the disease, the nature of the occupation will produce the disability in a person who has the latent tendency. Stahl v Walton Delicatessen Restaurant, 276 A.D. 1044, 95 N.Y.S.2d 621, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5660 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

Compensation was properly denied to a claimant who had contracted Dupuytren's disease while in the employ of a brewery. Claimant first noticed physical symptoms of the disease during his employment but continued to work until the brewery closed. Later he sought but did not obtain other employment. He did not receive medical treatment until over one year after the brewery had closed and then he filed a claim for compensation. The award was properly reversed and the claim remitted for further proof. Curran v Metropolis Brewing, 282 A.D. 1078, 126 N.Y.S.2d 592, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5865 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Board properly disregarded equivocal aspects of testimony and accepted doctor's report in which he found disability in both hands, Dupuytren's contracture, due to claimant's occupation. Since claimant had been continuously employed by same employer during entire period, 12-month limitation provided in § 40 was inapplicable. McKiernan v Schaefer Brewery Co., 5 A.D.2d 900, 170 N.Y.S.2d 937, 171 N.Y.S.2d 129, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6711 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

During 26-year period of employment for employer or its predecessors, claimant was required to exert pressure on palms of hands while manipulating iron bars and sledge hammers and to open and close valves by hand. There was substantial evidence establishing that Dupuytren's contracture, occupational disease, of both hands was caused and aggravated by nature of employment. Award affirmed. Carson v New York City Transit Authority, 7 A.D.2d 667, 179 N.Y.S.2d 305, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4311 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Claimant, electrician, was required to use pressure on his hands. He became disabled from Dupuytren's contracture, which was properly found to be occupational disease. Predisposing tendency of claimant to disease would not prevent award. Nardo v Rheinstein Constr. Co., 7 A.D.2d 689, 179 N.Y.S.2d 396, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4345 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958), app. denied, 5 N.Y.2d 709, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1973 (N.Y. 1959).

An award for the occupational disease of Dupuytren's contracture properly affirmed where the link between the disease and the claimant's occupation was repeated trauma to the hands. The Board could properly determine that the disease was occupational in nature. Sheehy v Doyle, 8 A.D.2d 267, 187 N.Y.S.2d 584, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8006 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.2d 706, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1874 (N.Y. 1959).

During period of employment before disablement, plaintiff lifted heavy sections of railroad tracks, used drills and worked as a rigger handling iron rails and rope guide lines. Board properly resolved conflicting medical theories in favor of claimant determined that he was suffering from Dupuytren's contracture which was occupational in nature. Divers v Mason, Johnson & MacLean, 8 A.D.2d 923, 187 N.Y.S.2d 22, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8029 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Decision and award for disability due to Dupuytren's contracture found to be occupational disease caused by claimant's work as porter in lifting and carrying pails and other heavy objects and in working with brooms and mops, whereby constant pressure was applied to palms of hands, affirmed. Rogan v Charles F. Noyes, Inc., 10 A.D.2d 765, 197 N.Y.S.2d 758, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11211 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 8 N.Y.2d 705, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1760 (N.Y. 1960).

The evidence was sufficient to sustain a partial disability award by reason of occupational disease due to suffering "Dupuytren's contracture" of both hands following employment by the same employer for a period of 12 years at duties involving the heavy use of hands, where claimant first noticed difficulty in use of his hands in 1948, though he continued working until August 6, 1951, when he was discharged for other reasons. White v Iroquois Gas Corp., 11 A.D.2d 572, 200 N.Y.S.2d 497, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9921 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), aff'd, 10 N.Y.2d 869, 223 N.Y.S.2d 501, 179 N.E.2d 506, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1000 (N.Y. 1961).

Obviously, not all cases involving Dupuytren's contracture are necessarily compensable, and the fact that claimant's activities involved use of his hands is not controlling, it being the function of the Board, in each case, to determine whether causal relationship has been established on the basis of evidence presented. Hickey v Ardale Bldg. Corp., 15 A.D.2d 837, 224 N.Y.S.2d 939, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11403 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

An accidental injury claim, based upon disability due to Dupuytren's contracture, could properly be allowed on conflicting medical proof where there was substantial evidence that a single trauma, due to piercing of the hand by a nail some 11 months earlier, produced the disabling condition. Reardon v Jarcho Bros., 22 A.D.2d 838, 253 N.Y.S.2d 783, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2787 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964), app. denied, 15 N.Y.2d 483, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1779 (N.Y. 1965).

109. Eye disorders

Workers' Compensation Board had proper legal basis to deny claim of psychiatric social worker who suffered aggravation of preexisting eye disorder as result of exposure to cigarette smoking while working in poorly ventilated room, since claimant's injury was caused solely by environmental conditions of her work place, not by any distinctive feature of occupation of psychiatric social worker. Mack v County of Rockland, 71 N.Y.2d 1008, 530 N.Y.S.2d 98, 525 N.E.2d 744, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 714 (N.Y. 1988).

An operator of motion picture machines whose duties involved the adjustment and repair of carbon arcs and carbons of lamps and who suffered cataracts of both eyes due to the intense glare of arc lights to which he was subjected by his work suffers an occupational disease under this section. Eckstein v Loew's, Inc., 268 A.D. 1073, 52 N.Y.S.2d 500, 1945 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5547

There was substantial evidence to sustain a finding that bilateral cataracts which developed on the eyes of a ceramic engineer during 14 years exposure to infra-red radiation from furnaces and kilns constituted a compensable occupational disease. Rogers v Scintilla Div., 15 A.D.2d 698, 223 N.Y.S.2d 588, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12018 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

110. Foot disorders

The rubbing of the claimant's shoe on his foot, involving continuous friction, is not an industrial process and his disability therefor is not the result of an occupational disease within the purview of subdiv. 2 of this section. Nielsen v Fireman's Fund Indem. Co., 239 A.D. 239, 268 N.Y.S. 189, 1933 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8009 (N.Y. App. Div. 1933).

Where claimant was employed as a dancing instructress and developed a callous formation by the continuous friction of her shoe against the heel of the left foot, and an ulcer formed beneath the callous, and a staphylococcus albus infection followed, causing disability, such disability resulted from the nature of claimant's employment. Hussey v Murray, 261 A.D. 1025, 25 N.Y.S.2d 852, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8590 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

Compensation claimant with pre-existing susceptibility to "flat feet" required in the course of his employment to push a hand truck carrying 50 gallon barrels of paste across a concrete floor suffered an occupational disease where the condition of his feet were aggravated by the nature of the work. Townsend v Union Bag & Paper Co., 282 A.D. 968, 125 N.Y.S.2d 360, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5594 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953), aff'd, 307 N.Y. 710, 121 N.E.2d 537, 307 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 710, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 1451 (N.Y. 1954).

Claimant suffered from condition diagnosed as traumatized plantar wart with ulceration, complicated by obesity, diabetes, mellitus, diabetic arteriosclerosis and endarteritis. His claim proceeded on theory that walking required of him in employer's retail furniture store was contributing factor to an aggravation of condition. Held: on evidence, board was warranted in finding that claimant did not sustain accident and did not occur an occupational disease. Rotenberg v Diamond Bedding & Upholstering Co., 5 A.D.2d 709, 168 N.Y.S.2d 654, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3501 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

111. Hernia

A hernia, caused by a constant twisting and straining of the body of a workman in the course of his employment, is an occupational disease within the meaning of subd. 2 of this section, and an award for disability caused thereby is proper. Foster v Gillinder Bros., Inc., 278 N.Y. 348, 16 N.E.2d 360, 278 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 348, 1938 N.Y. LEXIS 1307 (N.Y. 1938).

Disablement is cessation of work due to occupational disease and is controlling as to commencement of compensation. Although claimant was found to be suffering from left inguinal hernia in June, 1953, he returned to work and was not totally disabled until December, 1954. Board properly found claimant suffered occupational disease and established date of disablement as December, 1954. Failure to pay compensation until January, 1955 was error and should be corrected. Miner v Duchess Fabrics, Inc., 8 A.D.2d 549, 183 N.Y.S.2d 383, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9628 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Where there was medical testimony that a rupture sustained by claimant could be considered as of a slowly developing nature and caused by his work, and no direct testimony as to date of commencement of the initial rupture, the Board could determine that the hernia was occupationally caused rather than accidentally caused, imposing liability on the insurance carrier who had the risk in 1958 rather than one which assumed the risk in 1969. Makowski v Darling & Co., 18 A.D.2d 1120, 239 N.Y.S.2d 9, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4024 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 13 N.Y.2d 594, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 1899 (N.Y. 1963).

112. Radiation related disorders

Where death of a theoretical physicist was attributed to acute myeloblastic leukemia allegedly brought on by exposure to radiation in about one year's work for the employer, testimony of a single expert witness was insufficient to sustain an award of benefits, where the hypothetical question put to the expert assumed a much higher degree at time of exposure to radiation than the established facts warranted. Besner v Walter Kidde Nuclear Lab, 18 A.D.2d 952, 237 N.Y.S.2d 585, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4444 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

An award of death benefits from acute myeloblastic leukemia was proper in view of decedent's good health prior to his employment, where the record disclosed that decedent was exposed to radiation for a substantial part of two periods and the testimony of medical experts was to the effect that there was no "safe" dosage of radiation because each individual reacts differently to exposure. Besner v Walter Kidde Nuclear Laboratory, 24 A.D.2d 1045, 265 N.Y.S.2d 312, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2769 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Death benefits were properly awarded to claimant whose husband employed for over 12 years as a microwave transmission unit repairman and who died after a prolonged period of progressive physical and mental deterioration that commenced during his employment, allegedly caused by "chronic brain syndrome" of unknown etiology, notwithstanding the testimony of defendant's experts that decedent's death was due to a pre-existing condition and conflicting evidence as to whether decedent was exposed to unsafe levels of radiation, where there was substantial evidence to establish the necessary causal relationship between decedent's exposure to microwave radiation, the development of his occupational disease, and his ultimate death to support the board's decision. Yannon v New York Tel. Co., 86 A.D.2d 241, 450 N.Y.S.2d 893, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15394 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 57 N.Y.2d 726, 454 N.Y.S.2d 712, 440 N.E.2d 797, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 3652 (N.Y. 1982), app. denied, 57 N.Y.2d 605, 1982 N.Y. LEXIS 7152 (N.Y. 1982).

113. Varicose veins

An auto parts manager and gasoline station attendant, who developed varicosities of both lower extremities due to being on his feet the entire day with the exception of one hour, suffers an occupational disease due to the nature of his employment. Vines v Lazar Motors, Inc., 277 A.D. 1083, 100 N.Y.S.2d 735, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4549 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

Claimant worked as waiter in club 9 hours or more daily for 25 years. Held: Board properly made award for varicose veins in leg as occupational disease. Wildermuth v B. P. O. Elks Club, 5 A.D.2d 911, 170 N.Y.S.2d 874, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6732 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 4 N.Y.2d 677, 174 N.Y.S.2d 1025, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1440 (N.Y. 1958).

Claimant had varicose veins in leg. Held: It was properly found that he did not suffer from occupational disease as his disability was caused by aggravation of condition not occupational in nature. Nussbaum v Mercury Messenger Corp., 7 A.D.2d 673, 179 N.Y.S.2d 282, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4320 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Varicose veins can constitute an occupational disease where medical proof sufficiently associates the occurrence of the disease with the work. Elkin v D. & J. Cleaners, Inc., 14 A.D.2d 402, 221 N.Y.S.2d 153, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7695 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961), app. dismissed, 11 N.Y.2d 885, 227 N.Y.S.2d 922, 182 N.E.2d 410, 1962 N.Y. LEXIS 1284 (N.Y. 1962).

Where it appeared, in connection with a claim for disability due to varicose veins, that claimant, employed as a presser, had no symptoms of varicose veins before starting on his job, which required him to be on his feet ten hours a day for six days a week, first noticed pain and discomfort in his legs and feet four years later the cause of which was then first diagnosed as varicose veins, and had to quit work because of the pain about three years later, it was error for the Board to reject the claim on the broad ground that varicose veins were not an occupational disease and the claim was remanded for further findings of fact on relationship, if any, between the employment and claimant's disease. Elkin v D. & J. Cleaners, Inc., 14 A.D.2d 402, 221 N.Y.S.2d 153, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7695 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961), app. dismissed, 11 N.Y.2d 885, 227 N.Y.S.2d 922, 182 N.E.2d 410, 1962 N.Y. LEXIS 1284 (N.Y. 1962).

114. Disorders caused by cold or wet working conditions

Where a fireman was drenched by water from a defective nozzle on a fire hose while attending a fire and thereby caught pneumonia, and died from heart failure, a claim on this ground is properly dismissed because death resulted from a disease which was not occupational. Doulin v Saratoga Springs, 261 N.Y. 558, 185 N.E. 737, 261 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 558, 1933 N.Y. LEXIS 1372 (N.Y. 1933).

Department store cashier who received a cold draft on her right side from the air conditioning which caused a chronic strain or myositis involving the muscles of the right posterior neck and right shoulder girdle did not suffer a compensable occupational disease within this statute. Paider v Park East Movers, 19 N.Y.2d 373, 280 N.Y.S.2d 140, 227 N.E.2d 40, 1967 N.Y. LEXIS 1585 (N.Y. 1967).

A butcher, whose work required him to enter a refrigerator from time to time, and who as a result contracts labor pneumonia suffers a disability due to an occupational disease or an accidental injury within the meaning of the workmen's compensation law. Waxman v Paget, 264 A.D. 967, 37 N.Y.S.2d 169, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5572 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).. See also Wolfe v Brohman, 260 A.D. 816, 22 N.Y.S.2d 403, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4823 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940), aff'd, 285 N.Y. 635, 33 N.E.2d 557, 285 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 635, 1941 N.Y. LEXIS 1655 (N.Y. 1941).

A finding of occupational disease is proper where an employee becomes afflicted with articular rheumatism after being exposed to cold and dampness and varying temperature conditions over a period of many years. Erb v Sheffield Farms Co., 272 A.D. 1082, 74 N.Y.S.2d 555, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5029 (N.Y. App. Div. 1947).

A claim for occupational neuritis of the left brachial plexis allegedly suffered by an employee in a spring manufacturing plant whose work was to take castings from a conveyer when they had been passed through a tank of water to cool them off after furnace treatment and pile the castings on a truck, must be disallowed where there is no proof of the extent and frequency of the wettings sustained by the claimant nor of the area of the body affected and there was an absence of clear proof that the claimant actually was suffering from the disease. Mohammed v Spring Perch Co., 277 A.D. 1067, 100 N.Y.S.2d 700, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4515 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain a disability award by the Board due to upper respiratory disease resulting from claimant's exposure to cold in the course of 15 years' employment as a butcher, disablement having come on gradually during the last two or three years of his employment during which he began to work some hours daily in the icebox. Roettinger v Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., 17 A.D.2d 76, 230 N.Y.S.2d 903, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8466 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962), aff'd, 13 N.Y.2d 1102, 246 N.Y.S.2d 633, 196 N.E.2d 268, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 838 (N.Y. 1963).

Whether a disease is to be considered occupational under the general provisions of subd 2(29) of this statute depends on whether there is proof of a disability brought on by a distinctive feature of the claimant's job, common to all jobs of that sort. Under this rule Raynaud's disease is occupational as tending to affect persons handling cold liquids. Fact that a disease apparently affects only persons with a predisposition toward it, does not prevent it from being occupational. Benware v Leo F. Benware Creamery, 22 A.D.2d 968, 254 N.Y.S.2d 466, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2586 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964), aff'd, 16 N.Y.2d 966, 265 N.Y.S.2d 284, 212 N.E.2d 771, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1044 (N.Y. 1965).

115. Miscellaneous disorders

An inspector of surveying instruments who suffers thrombophlebitis as the result of jumping down from a raised platform on which the inspector's desk was temporarily located for a period of four to six weeks, does not suffer an occupational disease within the meaning of this section. Champion v W. & L. E. Gurley, 299 N.Y. 406, 87 N.E.2d 430, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 406, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 950 (N.Y. 1949).

The appearance of degeneration of the nerve endings in both ears betrays an occupational disease. Bonner v Patrick McGovern, Inc., 230 A.D. 530, 247 N.Y.S. 23, 1930 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8664 (N.Y. App. Div. 1930).

An award of compensation is proper where an employee working as a furrier and a fur plucker became disabled from the disease known as bronchiectasis. Pinto v Competent Fur Dressers, Inc., 271 A.D. 1036, 68 N.Y.S.2d 366, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5733 (N.Y. App. Div. 1947), aff'd, 297 N.Y. 846, 78 N.E.2d 864, 297 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 846, 1948 N.Y. LEXIS 949 (N.Y. 1948).

A typist, who developed ganglia on the dorsum of both hands due to the continuous application of hand pressure on typing and adding machines which she operated suffers an occupational disease. Macyseaki v Carocelem Leasing Corp., 272 A.D. 853, 70 N.Y.S.2d 385, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3907 (N.Y. App. Div. 1947).

There is evidence sufficient to sustain an award based upon an occupational disease, where the employee was found to have suffered spasmodic functional torticollis after having been employed as a book binder working on folding machines which required him to turn his head to the right continuously while in the act of loading the machine and immediately before becoming disabled, the employee was put to work on a single machine in connection with a very fast job which required him to increase the number of movements with his head in performing his work. Newirth v La Pidus Printing & Lithographing Co., 273 A.D. 835, 76 N.Y.S.2d 45, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4844 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

An vacuum cleaner repairman who contracted bronchial asthma in the course of his employment suffers an occupational disease. Sturesky v Straussman, 273 A.D. 1036, 78 N.Y.S.2d 633, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5858 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

Claim based on a paralytic disease contracted only from inhaling or direct contact with the dried urine of mice was not sustained by proof that grocery stock clerk and packer had seen mice in the place of his employment and medical proof showed that it was impossible to determine where the disease was acquired. Durlacher v Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., 284 A.D. 818, 132 N.Y.S.2d 181, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3555 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954), aff'd, 308 N.Y. 924, 127 N.E.2d 81, 308 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 924, 1955 N.Y. LEXIS 1162 (N.Y. 1955).

Tenosynovitis of the biceps muscle of the upper right arm may properly be considered a condition which would be commonly regarded as natural to, inhering in, an incident and concomitant of the work of an assembler of window adjustors whose work consisted of lifting and moving boxes of window parts, reaching for other parts, and inserting them in a vise, and using a hammer and drill. Briggs v Hope's Windows, Inc., 284 A.D. 1077, 136 N.Y.S.2d 41, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4612 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

A claimant with Kienbock's disease, a rather rare ailment of bone necrosis, sustained a compensable occupational disease where he sustained minimal trauma in his daily work in a steel manufacturing plant. Preusser v Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corp., 4 A.D.2d 727, 163 N.Y.S.2d 524, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5140 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957), aff'd, 4 N.Y.2d 773, 172 N.Y.S.2d 823, 149 N.E.2d 339, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1195 (N.Y. 1958).

An award to a taxicab driver who had synovitis of the knee on the basis that such condition was an occupational disease was not supported by substantial evidence. Caporrimo v Wags Transp. System, Inc., 4 A.D.2d 972, 167 N.Y.S.2d 867, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3909 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

In 1949 claimant became disabled as a result of paresthesia caused by constant use of screwdrivers and scissors, which affected the fingers and thumb of her right hand. In 1950 it was determined that she had completely recovered from said disease. In 1954 claimant stopped work because of an alleged hand condition. Held: the medical testimony established that the 1954 condition was not occupational in nature. Claim dismissed. McWilliams v Eastman Kodak Co., 9 A.D.2d 588, 189 N.Y.S.2d 427, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7452 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Where claimant, a bacteriologist, allegedly contracted a rare skin disease called "pemphigus" allegedly from working on rabbit urine, but the medical testimony was to the effect the cause of that disease was unknown but not attributable to rabbit urine, an award of compensation for occupational disease was remanded for further investigation. Mills v New York, 22 A.D.2d 731, 253

There was no substantial evidence to support determination that claimant's activities constituted "strenuous" work, involving, from a standpoint of the average man, activities sufficiently arduous to entail greater exertion that ordinary wear and tear of life as claimant routinely stopped at patients' homes to obtain blood samples before proceeding to the laboratory, which is not necessarily strenuous or tense work. McLoughlin v New Rochelle Hospital, 34 A.D.2d 1064, 312 N.Y.S.2d 572, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4236 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

Workmen's Compensation Board could find that phlebitis was occupational disease, as against contention that phlebitis as a matter of law could not constitute an occupational disease. Weber v Carhart Photo, Inc., 46 A.D.2d 964, 362 N.Y.S.2d 62, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3313 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974), app. denied, 36 N.Y.2d 643, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 2498 (N.Y. 1975).

A firefighter's anxiety neurosis, that he believed he was a perfectionist who could not "roll with the punches," he felt that some of his fellow fire fighters were laughing at him because he was such a conscientious worker, and, most significant, he felt he was blamed for the death of an occupant of a burning house even though he was without fault, was an occupational disease under Work Comp Law § 3(2) but, if related to his occupation in general terms, the disorder might be accidental as defined in Work Comp Law § 2(7) and Work Comp Law § 10. Hennige v Fairview Fire Dist., 99 A.D.2d 158, 472 N.Y.S.2d 204, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16534 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1984).

Determination of Workers' Compensation Board awarding benefits was supported by substantial evidence where (1) claimant was animal research technician involved in experiments to determine carcinogenic properties of various toxic chemicals, which involved injecting or painting substances on mice and monitoring for growth of tumors, as well as feeding mice and cleaning their cages, (2) claimant was diagnosed with viral meningeal encephalitis and infectious lymphocytosis, and (3) claimant's physician testified that viral meningeal encephalitis is carried by rats and mice and that claimant contracted it by exposure to mice and their droppings, even though employer's expert and board's impartial specialist testified that they knew of no support for associating infectious mononucleosis or encephalitis viruses with exposure to mice. Brush v New York University Medical Center, 144 A.D.2d 142, 534 N.Y.S.2d 470, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10147 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

Finding of Workers' Compensation Board that claimant suffered from chronic obstructive and restrictive bronchopulmonary disease which was compensable under CLS Work Comp § 3(2)(30), for which Special Disability Fund was not liable, rather than silicosis or other dust disease compensable under CLS Work Comp § 3(2)(29), for which Fund would have been liable, was supported by (1) claimant's hospital discharge summary which clearly stated chronic obstructive bronchopulmonary disease as final diagnosis, (2) testimony of claimant's physician that he suffered from status asthmaticus with underlying chronic obstructive bronchopulmonary disease, and (3) testimony of employer's consultant that claimant suffered from chronic obstructive pulmonary disease rather than silicosis, asbestosis, or any other form of pneumoconiosis. Lalla v Astoria Air Conditioning, 156 A.D.2d 808, 549 N.Y.S.2d 228, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15495 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Evidence did not sustain determination that contraction of AIDS was "occupational disease" within meaning of Workers' Compensation Law insofar as nurse's aide was concerned, as exposure to HIV via objects contaminated with blood or blood products is not generally recognized risk of such occupation, and claimant's assertion that urine was transmitting agent for HIV, which board accepted, lacked scientific support. Artiste v Kingsbrook Jewish Medical Ctr., 221 A.D.2d 81, 645 N.Y.S.2d 593, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7813 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

Workers' Compensation Board properly determined that claimant's pancreatitis arose out of and in course of his employment as technical specialist in laser control room where (1) process performed in his workplace, whereby material was removed from metal specimens, created noxious dust, vapors and fumes that were not adequately removed from air, (2) claimant was 40-year-old who had been in excellent health with no known risk factors except exposure to dust and vapors at work, and (3) record was devoid of any other explanation for his illness. Castiglione v Mechanical Tech., 227 A.D.2d 865, 643 N.Y.S.2d 236, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5775 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

I. Generally

1. Hazardous employment, generally

The Work. Comp. Law, as applicable to the state, and its political subdivisions, comprehended only those hazardous employments classified in former § 2. 1914 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 191.

II. Operation Of Vehicles

2. In general

In all instances where a truck or fleet of trucks are hired from individuals by the state, the owner should be required to furnish workmen's compensation insurance that will fully protect his employees while engaged in work for the state. 1934 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 248.

3. Particular activities as vehicle operation

A "jockey" may be within the category of "driver" so as to require the employer to provide compensation coverage for him. 1936 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 216.

III. Manufacture And Handling Of Foods

4. Other particular activities

Persons engaged in the business of selling soft drinks, ice cream, etc., are not pursuing a hazardous employment within the meaning of the Work. Comp. Law, and need not carry workmen's compensation insurance. 1922 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 148.

IV. State Employees

5. In general

Employees of the state who are included within any of the hazardous groups specified in the Work. Comp. Law, or upon whose wages a premium is paid to the state insurance fund, are entitled to compensation or death benefits from the state insurance fund in case of injury. 1923 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 294.

Employees of the New York State Commission on the World's Fair are state employees within the meaning of this section and are entitled to protection under the Compensation Law. 1964 NY Ops Atty Gen Aug 28.

6. Firefighters

It is the duty of the superintendent of a state institution to require its employees to train in the use of fire fighting equipment for the purpose of protecting the inmates and buildings of the institution; an employee injured while so training is entitled to workmen's compensation benefits. 1944 NY Ops Atty Gen Sept 18.

Employees in the fire department of institutions under the jurisdiction of the Department of Correction who are directed to fight fires off the institution's premises pursuant to a mutual assistance agreement with a city, town or village made under the Correction Law are entitled to benefits under the Workmen's Compensation Law when injured in the course of fire duty. 1947 NY Ops Atty Gen April 21.

Paid or volunteer firemen are state employees while serving as instructors at county fire training schools and are subject to the Workmen's Compensation Law while engaged in the performance of such duties. 1949 NY Ops Atty Gen March 7.

7. State police, state militia and the like

Members of the state police are covered by the provisions of the Work. Comp. Law. 1935 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 189.

8. Employees of state boards, commissions, authorities and the like

Employees of the law revision commission are automatically insured hereunder. 1935 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 439.

The provisions of the Work. Comp. Law cover all employees in the division of placement and unemployment insurance of the New York state department of labor; every type of employment in the division is covered and the provisions of the Work. Comp. Law are compulsory in regard to such employees. 1938 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 266.

Students engaged without compensation by the state division of housing to conduct a defense survey become state employees under Workmen's Compensation Law if they are subject to the direction and control of officers and if they receive any benefit from such employment in the nature of board or lodging paid for by the state. 1941 NY Ops Atty Gen Aug 22.

Employees of the New York State Bridge Authority on the Newburgh-Beacon Ferry are employees of the Authority and not of the State for purposes of coverage under the Workmen's Compensation Law. 1957 NY Ops Atty Gen Aug 20.

9. Employees paid by or connected with municipal bodies

Where a project adviser, a clerk and an auditor for projects are named and assigned to a project by the commissioner and subject to his directions, they are state employees, despite their salaries being payable by the city housing authority pursuant to a loan contract, but for purposes of workmen's compensation alone they are regarded as employees of the authority. 1941 NY Ops Atty Gen Mar 29.

V. Municipal Employees

10. In general

The Work. Comp. Law as amended by L 1916 c 622, was applicable to the employees of a state or municipal corporation or other subdivision thereof wherever such employees are engaged in any of the hazardous employments classified in former § 2. 1916 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 234.

11. Members of fire and police forces

12. —Relationship with other compensation provisions

A police officer who is out of work as the result of injury or illness incurred in the line of duty, and who is receiving his full salary during such period of disability, is not entitled to overtime compensation where such officer is subpoenaed to appear in court to testify as a police officer. 1977 Op St Compt File #330.

City policemen and firemen are not covered by the Work. Comp. Law. 1936 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 172.

Emergency services duly authorized and performed by volunteer firemen in emergency situations occasioned by the recent hurricanes are covered by the Workmen's Compensation Law. 1955 NY Ops Atty Gen Sept 9.

Special police appointed by a village board may be covered by workmen's compensation. 1962 NY Ops Atty Gen Aug 28.

A municipality is not mandated by law to carry workmen's compensation coverage for employees who are policemen or firemen but can elect to do so voluntarily. 1976 NY Ops Atty Gen March 5 (informal).

Discussion of appointment of paid and volunteer special policemen in a village on a one-day basis and Workers' Compensation coverage for such individuals. 1978 Op St Compt File #1055.

13. Home relief recipients assigned to work for municipality

Persons receiving home relief who are assigned to perform work for a municipality, pursuant to Social Services Law, § 164(2), are employees of that municipality and, therefore, are to workers compensation benefits. Re-affirmation of Opns St Comp, 1951, No. 5019 reported at 7 Opns St Comp, 1951, p 33. 1980 Op St Compt File #256.

14. Other employees

The members of an independent non-profit community ambulance corp, not affiliated with a volunteer fire department, are engaged in voluntary service not under contract of hire and accordingly are not within the coverage of the Workmen's Compensation Law. 1961 NY Ops Atty Gen May 19.

Whether personnel associated with a small watershed protection district should be within the coverage of the Workmen's Compensation Law rests with the administrative unit of the county in which the district is organized 1962 NY Ops Atty Gen June 1.

A dog control officer may be eligible for membership in the New York State Retirement System and for Worker's Compensation and Disability benefits. 1979 Op St Compt No. 79–685.

VI. Teachers and Educational Institutions

15. In general

The Work. Comp. Law applies to colleges not under state authority and direction. 1928 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 215.

The amendment to former gr. 18 made by L 1928 c 755 does not affect teachers in public schools conducted by municipalities. 1928 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 196.

VII. Business Employing Four Or More Operatives Or Workmen

16. Particular employees as workmen or operatives

Sales people and messengers are not considered workmen or operatives and their employment does not constitute a hazard within the meaning of the workmen's compensation law. 1922 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 148.

VIII. Miscellaneous Occupations

17. Other occupations

Employees of the Chautauqua institution were not included within the provisions of former § 2, group 43, nor former § 3, subd. 5. 1921 N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 86.

ARTICLE 2 Compensation

Section
10. Liability for compensation
25-a. Procedure and payment of compensation in certain claims; limitation of right to compensation

HISTORY:

§ 10. Liability for compensation

1. Every employer subject to this chapter shall in accordance with this chapter, except as otherwise provided in section twenty-five-a hereof, secure compensation to his employees and pay or provide compensation for their disability or death from injury arising out of and in the course of the employment without regard to fault as a cause of the injury, except that there shall be no liability for compensation under this chapter when the injury has been solely occasioned by intoxication from alcohol or a controlled substance of the injured employee while on duty; or by wilful intention of the injured employee to bring about the injury or death of himself or another; or where the injury was sustained in or caused by voluntary participation in an off-duty athletic activity not constituting part of the employee's work related duties unless the employer (a) requires the employee to participate in such activity, (b) compensates the employee for participating in such activity or (c) otherwise sponsors the activity.

2. Notwithstanding any other provisions of this chapter, an injury incurred by an individual currently employed as an emergency medical technician or an advanced emergency medical technician who is certified pursuant to section three thousand two of the public health law, while voluntarily and without expectation of monetary compensation rendering medical assistance at the scene of an accident shall be deemed to have arisen out of and in the course of the employment with that emergency medical technician or advanced emergency medical technician's current employer.

(a) Notwithstanding any other provisions of this chapter, where a public safety worker, including but not limited to a firefighter, emergency medical technician, police officer, correction officer, civilian employee of the department of corrections and community supervision or other person employed by the state to work within a correctional facility maintained by the department of corrections and community supervision, driver and medical observer, in the course of performing his or her duties, is exposed to the blood or other bodily fluids of another individual or individuals, the executive officer of the appropriate ambulance, fire or police district may authorize such public safety worker to obtain the care and treatment, including diagnosis, recommended medicine and other medical care needed to ascertain whether such individual was exposed to or contracted any communicable disease and such care and treatment shall be the responsibility of the insurance carrier of the appropriate ambulance, fire or police district or, if a public safety worker was not so exposed in the course of performing his or her duties for such a district, then such person shall be covered for the treatment provided for in this subdivision by the carrier of his or her employer when such person is acting in the scope of his or her employment. For the purpose of this subdivision, the term "public safety worker" shall include persons who act for payment or who act as volunteers in an organized group such as a rescue squad, police department, correctional facility, ambulance corps, fire department, or fire company.

(b) Where a police officer or firefighter subject to section thirty of this article, or emergency medical technician, paramedic, or other person certified to provide medical care in emergencies, or emergency dispatcher files a claim for mental injury premised upon extraordinary work-related stress incurred in a work-related emergency, the board may not disallow the claim, upon a factual finding that the stress was not greater than that which usually occurs in the normal work environment.

4. Any person incarcerated upon conviction of a felony shall be deemed ineligible for all benefits provided under this chapter. All those whose benefits have ceased by operation of this section, may apply to the board for benefits upon their release from custody pursuant to regulation of the board.

I. In General

1. In general

In light of its beneficial and remedial character, Workmen's Compensation Law should be construed liberally in favor of employee. Wolfe v Sibley, Lindsay & Curr Co., 36 N.Y.2d 505, 369 N.Y.S.2d 637, 330 N.E.2d 603, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 1847 (N.Y. 1975).

Workmen's compensation, as distinguished from tort liability which is essentially based on fault, is designed to shift risk of loss of earning capacity caused by industrial accidents from worker to industry and ultimately to consumer. Wolfe v Sibley, Lindsay & Curr Co., 36 N.Y.2d 505, 369 N.Y.S.2d 637, 330 N.E.2d 603, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 1847 (N.Y. 1975).

The liability of the employer is purely statutory and does not rise out of an employer employee relationship; it is neither ex contractu nor ex delicto. Schmidt v Wolf Contracting Co., 269 A.D. 201, 55 N.Y.S.2d 162, 1945 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2952 (N.Y. App. Div. 1945), aff'd, 295 N.Y. 748, 65 N.E.2d 568, 295 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 748, 1946 N.Y. LEXIS 928 (N.Y. 1946).

In a proceeding in which the referee was informed that a personal injury action had been brought by the claimant against his coemployees in connection with the accident and in which the referee determined that claimant was in the course of his employment when injured (which determination was affirmed by the board notwithstanding claimant's request that the board delay determination until the court case was decided) the board did not act arbitrarily in determining that a causal relationship existed since it cannot be arbitrary for the board to deny the request to withhold determination pending the outcome of a civil action based on the facts presented herein, in that the question of whether claimant was in the course of his employment when injured must be decided in the first instance by the board, and not the court before which the third-party action is pending. Young v Western Electric Co., 85 A.D.2d 823, 445 N.Y.S.2d 645, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16643 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981).

Negligence action to recover for personal injuries was barred by exclusivity provisions of CLS Work Comp §§ 10, 11 and 29(6) since plaintiff had accepted workers' compensation benefits and could not thereafter collaterally attack award in action at law and assert that accident did not occur in course of her employment. French v Shaft, 154 A.D.2d 336, 545 N.Y.S.2d 814, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12253 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1989).

Workers' compensation board properly denied a worker's claim for workers' compensation benefits under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 10; testimony by officials of the worker's employer established that an interview concerning an affirmative action claim made against the worker's finance and co-worker, which caused the worker's break down, was not a compensable accident. Ortiz v Five Points Corr. Facility, 307 A.D.2d 634, 762 N.Y.S.2d 535, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8310 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

Workers' Compensation Board decision holding that an employer's application of N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 56, regarding general contractor liability, was barred by the doctrine of laches was upheld on appeal as the employer waited nearly seven years in the claimant's case to raise § 56 and the general contractor's insurer was significantly prejudiced by the delay as it was not able to participate in two prior hearings and lost a potential intoxication defense relative to the claimant and work-related injury. Matter of Finchum v Colaiacomo, 55 A.D.3d 1084, 869 N.Y.S.2d 619, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7870 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

The cause of action created by the Work. Comp. Law is separate and distinct from the right of action given to an executor or administrator. Travelers Ins. Co. v Staten I. R. T. R. Co., 234 N.Y.S. 293, 134 Misc. 6, 1929 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 770 (N.Y. Mun. Ct. 1929).

Employees' claims for negligent hiring and negligent infliction of emotional distress are barred by exclusivity provision of CLS Work Comp Law §§ 10 and 11. Chrzanowski v Lichtman, 884 F. Supp. 751, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5286 (W.D.N.Y. 1995).

Procedure for giving notice of injury and filing claims discussed. 1954 Ops St Compt File #6624.

2. Relationship with other sections

In determining the intention of the legislature in enacting § 21 and this section, it must constantly be borne in mind that they affect and characterize all other provisions of the act. Post v Burger & Gohlke, 216 N.Y. 544, 111 N.E. 351, 216 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 544, 1916 N.Y. LEXIS 1521 (N.Y. 1916).

This section and §§ 11 and 53 make an employer primarily liable to an employee for payments of compensation. In re Consolidated Indem. & Ins. Co., 282 N.Y. 546, 24 N.E.2d 979, 282 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 546, 1939 N.Y. LEXIS 1648 (N.Y. 1939).

This section is not limited by the provision of former § 3. sub 7 defining the term "injury" which merely made certain that conditions consequent upon a disease following an accidental injury shall be regarded as themselves consequence of such injury. Weber v George Haiss Mfg. Co., 191 A.D. 12, 181 N.Y.S. 140, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4648 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 229 N.Y. 525, 129 N.E. 900, 229 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 525, 1920 N.Y. LEXIS 722 (N.Y. 1920).

This section and §§ 56 and 11 must be read in pari materia. Sweezey v Arc Electrical Const. Co., 266 A.D. 623, 44 N.Y.S.2d 478, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3635 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943), rev'd, 295 N.Y. 306, 67 N.E.2d 369, 295 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 306, 1946 N.Y. LEXIS 835 (N.Y. 1946).

Although they made a sufficient showing of a reasonable excuse for failing to oppose a dismissal motion based upon the law office failure of their counsel, the school district employees failed to make the requisite showing of merit required to vacate a default entered against them under N.Y. C.P.L.R. 5015(a)(1) as they were employees of a school district, which barred their causes of action under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law §§ 10 and 11. Faga v Harrison Cent. School Dist., 40 A.D.3d 690, 835 N.Y.S.2d 686, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5939 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2007).

3. Course of employment; generally

While workmen's compensation is not confined by common-law conceptions of scope of employment, more must be shown to warrant award than injury or death and the relationship of employer and employee. Glickman v Greater New York Taxpayers, 305 N.Y. 431, 113 N.E.2d 548, 305 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 431, 1953 N.Y. LEXIS 802 (N.Y. 1953).

In order for injury to be compensable under Workmen's Compensation Law, injury must be one "arising out of" employment or, in other words, it must be a natural incident to the work or one of the risks connected with the employment, flowing thereform as a natural consequence and directly connected with the work, and, in addition, injury must also arise "in the course of the employment," which means that injury must have been received while the employee was doing the work for which he was employed. Malacarne v Yonkers Parking Authority, 41 N.Y.2d 189, 391 N.Y.S.2d 402, 359 N.E.2d 992, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 3220 (N.Y. 1976).

A myocardial infarction sustained by a 59-year-old painter with a history of preexisting heart disease was properly held to have been accidentally caused by and to have arisen out of the course of his employment, where the opinion expressed by the insurance carrier's medical expert to the effect that the claimant's work played no part in the acute infarction presented no more than the usual conflict of medical opinion, and the board's crediting the testimony given by the claimant's doctor was sufficient to supply the necessary basis for its decision. Bartolotta v Metz, 96 A.D.2d 636, 464 N.Y.S.2d 861, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19189 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1983).

In a workers' compensation proceeding brought by a part-time employee of a used car dealer who was injured while driving a car allegedly owned by the dealer, the Workers' Compensation Board's conclusion that claimant's accident did not arise out of or in the course of his employment had a rational basis, notwithstanding claimant's contention that a prior finding in an arbitration proceeding under the no-fault provisions of the Insurance Law that the vehicle was owned by the dealer at the time of the accident precluded the board from passing on the question of ownership of the vehicle, since once the board rejected claimant's testimony that he was driving the vehicle in order to sell it for his employer, which was the only basis for claimant's assertion that the accident arose out of and in the course of his employment, the question of who owned the vehicle became irrelevant. Meier v Haviland Motors, Inc., 105 A.D.2d 529, 481 N.Y.S.2d 477, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 20559 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1984), app. denied, 64 N.Y.2d 610, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 18620 (N.Y. 1985).

For purposes of CLS Workers' Compensation Law § 10, course of employment includes reasonable amount of time for employee to leave his or her place of employment after ceasing actual work. Thompson v New York Tel. Co., 114 A.D.2d 639, 494 N.Y.S.2d 475, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 53324 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1985).

Claimant was properly awarded workers' compensation benefits after she was assaulted by another employee and sustained injury while taking authorized break at work since assault involved comments claimant had allegedly made about another employee, and claimant did not have any association with assailant or other employee outside her employment. Baker v Hudson Valley Nursing Home, 233 A.D.2d 608, 649 N.Y.S.2d 105, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11470 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996), app. denied, 89 N.Y.2d 813, 659 N.Y.S.2d 854, 681 N.E.2d 1301, 1997 N.Y. LEXIS 771 (N.Y. 1997).

Workers' Compensation Board properly ruled that claimant did not sustain causally related disability, despite his contention that he was injured as a result of fall at work, where he had requested reimbursement from Crime Victims Board for treatment of his injuries, his physician had noted in claimant's medical history that claimant had been injured when he was assaulted and "struck with a bat in the knee," and claimant did not mention his injuries to his employer or co-workers at time they were allegedly sustained and did not request his employer to prepare accident report. Hildenbrandt v Transportation Mfg. Co., 244 A.D.2d 658, 664 N.Y.S.2d 174, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11485 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

In action for personal injuries sustained in fall on property owned by defendant and leased to plaintiff's employer, who moved for dismissal, under CLS CPLR § 3211(a)(7), of defendant's third-party complaint, which alleged causes of action for indemnification/contribution and breach of lease provision requiring employer to procure liability insurance naming owner as additional insured, even if motion were treated as one for summary judgment, it would have to be denied where there was no evidence that plaintiff's injuries arose "out of and in course of [her] employment" under CLS Work Comp § 10(1) or that defendant was being defended and indemnified by insurer that issued policy naming defendant as additional insured. Wilt v Brunswick Plaza L.L.C., 281 A.D.2d 840, 722 N.Y.S.2d 610, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2995 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

Employee's injury was not per se noncompensable where it occurred while the employee was traveling to an appointment on a route he alleged he consistently used to get from his home to appointments in order to avoid traffic. Chadha v J.B. Lippincott Co., 300 A.D.2d 923, 753 N.Y.S.2d 177, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12694 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2002).

After the employee suffered a compensable knee injury when a physician assessing her ability to perform job-related duties following back surgery struck her knee with a reflex hammer and caused serious injury, the employee was not entitled to workers' compensation benefits for knee replacement since expert testimony indicated that the employee's need for a knee replacement was the result of progressive osteoarthritis, a condition that would not have resulted from reflex testing with a rubber mallet. Howard v N.Y. Times, 302 A.D.2d 698, 754 N.Y.S.2d 754, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1257 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 531, 761 N.Y.S.2d 592, 791 N.E.2d 957, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 996 (N.Y. 2003).

Workers' compensation board properly determined that a worker sustained a compensable injury pursuant to N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law §§ 2(7) and 10, and awarded workers' compensation benefits; the worker was injured near his office in the World Trade Center during the September 11, 2001 terrorist attack, and the worker was in a "gray area" where the risks of travel to work merged with the risks of employment. Tompkins v Morgan Stanley Dean Witter, 1 A.D.3d 695, 766 N.Y.S.2d 923, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11603 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

Workers' compensation death benefits claimant was not entitled to rely on the presumption of compensability under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 21(1) because her decedent's death was not unexplained or unwitnessed, in that an individual saw the decedent collapse to the ground, the death certificate listed the cause of death as arteriosclerotic heart disease, an autopsy also revealed that the decedent died of heart disease, and the independent report of a heart disease expert opined that the decedent's death was not work related and was likely caused by severe coronary atherosclerosis. Thus, the Workers' Compensation Board's denial of the underlying claim in the absence of any prima facie proof that the decedent's death arose out of and in the course of employment, as required by N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law §§ 2(7) and 10(1), was supported by substantial evidence. Matter of Crapo v City of Buffalo, 24 A.D.3d 838, 805 N.Y.S.2d 180, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13555 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2005).

The failure of plaintiff's former employer, a medical clinic, to diagnose plaintiff's lung cancer from X-rays taken during routine medical examinations conducted by the clinic as part of plaintiff's employment, which failure to act allegedly aggravated plaintiff's condition, caused an "accidental injury" arising solely from the employment relationship, for which the Workers' Compensation Law provided the exclusive remedy. Le Savoy v Harnes, 127 Misc. 2d 9, 484 N.Y.S.2d 988, 1984 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3720 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1984).

Although the Workmen's Compensation Law, under § 21, is to be construed liberally, an injury to be compensable must nevertheless arise not only "in the course of" but also "out of" the employment, under section 10 of such law. Ognibene v Rochester Mfg. Co., 298 N.Y. 85, 80 N.E.2d 749, 298 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 85, 1948 N.Y. LEXIS 804 (N.Y. 1948).. See also Moore v Lehigh V. R. Co., 169 A.D. 177, 154 N.Y.S. 620, 1915 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9050 (N.Y. App. Div. 1915), aff'd, 217 N.Y. 627, 111 N.E. 1092, 217 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 627, 1916 N.Y. LEXIS 1381 (N.Y. 1916).

The words "arising out of and in the course of the employment" should be given a broad and liberal interpretation. McGrinder v Sullivan, 264 A.D. 640, 37 N.Y.S.2d 1, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4223 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942), rev'd, 290 N.Y. 11, 47 N.E.2d 421, 290 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 11, 1943 N.Y. LEXIS 1131 (N.Y. 1943).

5. —Presumption

If court found that death of parking lot employee arose in the course of his employment, it would be presumed that it also arose out of the employment. Malacarne v Yonkers Parking Authority, 41 N.Y.2d 189, 391 N.Y.S.2d 402, 359 N.E.2d 992, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 3220 (N.Y. 1976).

Rational basis existed for conclusion of Workers' Compensation Board that decedent's death arose out of and in course of his employment, given presumption under CLS Work Comp § 21(1) that unwitnessed accidents occurring during hours of employment are presumed to arise in course of employment absent substantial evidence to contrary, and evidence that decedent was found at 7:30 a.m. inside running car in his employer's locked garage, that he sometimes opened garage at 7:00 a.m., and that he had left work at 5:00 p.m. on preceding day. Hayes v Harris, 227 A.D.2d 864, 642 N.Y.S.2d 384, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5270 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 813, 649 N.Y.S.2d 380, 672 N.E.2d 606, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3092 (N.Y. 1996).

Workers' compensation board erred in denying a teacher's request for benefits for a knee injury which occurred when the teacher was walking around her desk after retrieving materials for a student; the teacher's injury occurred in the course of employment as required by N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 10, and the employer failed to overcome a presumption that the injury arose out of the employment pursuant to N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 21. Keevins v Farmingdale UFSD, 304 A.D.2d 1013, 759 N.Y.S.2d 213, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4160 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

6. —Areas in proximity to worksite

Workers' Compensation Board properly ruled that claimant, correction officer, sustained causally related injury when he slipped and fell on curb in front of main entrance to facility while en route to pickup is paycheck on his day off, especially since employer's document entitled "Paycheck Distribution Procedures" indicated that while arrangements could be made for employer to mail paychecks to employee's residence, expected procedure was for employees to pickup their paychecks in person. Dandola v New York City Dep't of Correction, 244 A.D.2d 729, 664 N.Y.S.2d 392, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11762 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Claimant's accident was properly found to be occurring within course of her employment when she slipped in parking garage floor en route to her job as certified surgical technician at hospital since hospital affirmatively encouraged its employees to park in facility where claimant was injured, parking was available at facility at reduced rate for hospital employees and payment of parking fees was deducted directly from employee paychecks, alternate parking could be accessed by permit only, for which there was waiting list, or was located at some distance from hospital, and facility where claimant was injured was located next door to hospital and was internally connected to hospital building. Thatcher v Crouse-Irving Mem'l Hosp., 253 A.D.2d 990, 678 N.Y.S.2d 161, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9749 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Claimant was properly found to have sustained injury arising out of and in course of his employment while walking to job site where he was scheduled to commence asbestos removal project when he was struck by car since his employment consisted of traveling to various job sites to perform asbestos removal work for periods lasting anywhere from one day to several months, he was required to report to employer's main office in New Jersey once every month at most, and he contacted office by telephone only for purpose of receiving new work assignments. Carpio v R & J Insulation Co., 269 A.D.2d 678, 702 N.Y.S.2d 473, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1286 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. dismissed, 95 N.Y.2d 791, 711 N.Y.S.2d 157, 733 N.E.2d 229, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 1064 (N.Y. 2000).

Court would reverse determination finding that claimant, office cleaner, did not sustain accidental injury arising out of and in course of her employment where she slipped on concourse floor in building while on her way to work on fourth floor, and there was no substantial evidence to support determination that she was not injured "in close proximity to her worksite" and that location of her fall "cannot be considered 'part and parcel' of entrance to the employer's premises." Moore v Ogden Allied, 284 A.D.2d 624, 726 N.Y.S.2d 752, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5985 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

7. —Special hazard

Injury sustained by claimant when employer's truck ran over his foot occurred in course of employment, although accident occurred after work hours on public sidewalk, since presence of truck parked partly on sidewalk constituted special hazard, and claimant was proceeding between employer's office and parking lot at time; thus Workers' Compensation Board erred by reversing its prior decision granting claim. Jacobs v Dellwood Foods, 130 A.D.2d 848, 515 N.Y.S.2d 916, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 46857 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 608, 521 N.Y.S.2d 225, 515 N.E.2d 910, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 18939 (N.Y. 1987).

As an employee's accident was totally coincidental and not a work-related hazard, substantial evidence supported the New York Workers' Compensation Board's finding that the injuries and resulting death from being struck by a truck did not arise out of and in the course of the employee's employment, N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law §§ 2(7), (8); 10(1). There was no evidence that a special hazard existed at the off-premises location where the employee was struck; rather, the risk of being struck by vehicular traffic in this location was shared by the public in general and was not specific to this place of employment. Matter of Fiero v New York City Dept. of Hous. Preserv. & Dev., 34 A.D.3d 911, 823 N.Y.S.2d 290, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13025 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

8. —Deviation from course of employment; illegal act

Inside employee was not in scope of his employment where, on his way home from "special errand" for his employer, he deviated from his course to meet individual with whom he had sexual relations prior to being murdered by that individual. Oehley v Syracuse Boys Club, 151 A.D.2d 825, 542 N.Y.S.2d 799, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7534 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Because a truck driver was shot during a lunch break in an area where the driver had been warned by the employer not to go, and because the driver strayed from a shorter and more commonly used route of travel in order to get to that area, the driver deviated from the driver's employment and was not entitled to workers' compensation benefits under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 10. Matter of Marquis v Frank's Vacuum Truck Serv., Inc., 29 A.D.3d 1038, 814 N.Y.S.2d 363, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5900 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

New York Uninsured Employers' Fund asserted that a claimant's illegal activity in picking up street hails removed his actions from the scope of his employment as a taxicab driver. As the uninsured dispatch company that employed him knew of and at least tolerated this violation of the New York City Taxi and Limousine Commission rules, it would not be heard to argue that the claimant's conduct was outside the scope of employment, thus precluding him from receiving workers' compensation benefits Matter of Nkrumah v Thomas, 61 A.D.3d 1325, 877 N.Y.S.2d 515, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3312 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2009).

9. —Sufficiency of evidence

In workers' compensation proceeding, evidence supported conclusion that assault occurred in course of decedent's employment, although his death actually occurred in 18th floor stairwell that was not technically part of employer's premises, where decedent was approached by his attacker (who was his co-worker) in lobby of building where employer's offices were located on arriving for his scheduled tour of duty, and decedent and co-worker rode together on elevator, which was customary route to employer's 17th floor offices. Rosen v First Manhattan Bank, 84 N.Y.2d 856, 617 N.Y.S.2d 455, 641 N.E.2d 1073, 1994 N.Y. LEXIS 2774 (N.Y. 1994).

A determination by the Workers' Compensation board that a 46-year-old sheriff with preexisting heart disease, who was found dead in the employer's parking lot, had sustained a compensable heart injury arising out of and in the course of his employment was supported by substantial evidence, where the board held that based on the lay and medical testimony including evidence that four days before the accident decedent had climbed two flights of stairs on five separate occasions in an attempt to serve a summons, and that decedent had complained of chest pains and stayed in bed during the ensuing weekend, the work activities preceding decedent's demise were, for him, at that time, so strenuous and stressful as to act on his underlying heart condition and precipitate a coronary occlusion. Monette v County of Albany, 96 A.D.2d 633, 464 N.Y.S.2d 858, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 19185 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1983).

Substantial evidence supported determination that sales executive suffered cerebral vascular accident resulting in stroke as result of emotional problems related to his job, and thus that accident arouse out of and in course of his employment, where it was shown that executive, who had preexisting arterial hypertension, endured excessive emotional distress, manifested by nose bleeds, immediately after final confrontation with his abusive boss, and that he suffered disabling stroke 5 days later. Price v KGM Plastic Indus., 192 A.D.2d 995, 597 N.Y.S.2d 243, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4428 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1993).

Evidence established that claimant was injured while on special errand for employer, and thus was entitled to worker's compensation benefits, where employer enforced dress code and derived benefit from professional appearance of its employees, claimant arrived at work wearing denim suit and—although she had worn same suit previously without incident—she was instructed to change her clothes before she could continue her work, and she was injured in motor vehicle accident while returning home to change. Jennette v MCS Cannon, 211 A.D.2d 943, 621 N.Y.S.2d 229, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 251 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1995).

10. —Duration of employment; travel time

Generally, absent some physical connection to the premises of an employer in time and space, an accident which befalls an employee on his way to or from work does not arise "in the course of the employment." Malacarne v Yonkers Parking Authority, 41 N.Y.2d 189, 391 N.Y.S.2d 402, 359 N.E.2d 992, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 3220 (N.Y. 1976).

Employee of New York City Transit Authority who was injured at employer's station on return home from work did not sustain compensable injury under Workers' Compensation Law, even though she had been issued transportation pass entitling her to free travel on employer's subways, where injury occurred over one hour after she signed off work at different station, employer had not assumed any obligation to facilitate her travel to and from work, and employer did not derive any benefit from fact that employee used pass to travel to and from work. Lemon v New York City Transit Authority, 72 N.Y.2d 324, 532 N.Y.S.2d 732, 528 N.E.2d 1205, 1988 N.Y. LEXIS 1687 (N.Y. 1988).

A 16-year-old part time office and delivery boy who worked for a company owned by his father was properly found to have been injured within the scope of his employment, where he made a delivery of goods before school and was on his way to pick them up after he and his friends had eaten lunch at his parent's camp approximately 10 miles from the pickup site following a half day school session. Anadio v Ideal Leather Finishers, 32 A.D.2d 40, 299 N.Y.S.2d 489, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4089 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 25 N.Y.2d 737, 1969 N.Y. LEXIS 1748 (N.Y. 1969).

Where a construction worker who, because he lived 90 miles away from the job site was permitted to live in the building being constructed, was injured when he stepped in a hole in the building at 2 a.m., the court affirmed the Workmen's Compensation Board award of compensation. The court said that the claimant's residence on the premises was advantageous to the employer, as appeared in the record, because it would enable the claimant to work overtime and thus fill a need of the employer. Broman v A. Brassard, Inc., 35 A.D.2d 142, 314 N.Y.S.2d 850, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3651 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

The court affirmed the determination of the Workmen's Compensation Board that the claimant's accidental injury, which occurred when she was going to the library, arose out of and in the course of her employment where the library was provided by the employer and was on his premises, the claimant's use of it was for improving the efficiency of her work, and such use was for the benefit of the employer and was encouraged by the employer. Ybarsabal v Long Island College Hospital, 35 A.D.2d 766, 314 N.Y.S.2d 901, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3666 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

An inside and outside employee who was injured in explosion of restaurant where he was eating just prior to going to bank as instructed by employer to obtain cashier's checks for payment of parking fines incurred by claimant while using company car on company business was injured in an accident arising out of and in course of employment. Dolan v Crawford & Co., 41 A.D.2d 870, 342 N.Y.S.2d 859, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4693 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1973).

Where photographer, employed by public relations firm, was necessarily exposed to deplorable sanitary conditions with regard to food and drink while traveling in Bolivia which resulted in his liver infection and death, the photographer's death from hepatitis was an "industrial accident." Lothrop v Hamilton Wright Organizations, Inc., 45 A.D.2d 784, 356 N.Y.S.2d 730, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4686 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

Accident, which occurred while workmen's compensation claimant-mechanic was driving his pickup truck to his place of employment after he had been requested to come to work an hour earlier than usual and to bring his truck with him, arose out of and in course of his employment. Lutgen v A. Conte Electrical, Inc., 50 A.D.2d 624, 374 N.Y.S.2d 434, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12429 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

Risks incidental to the journey to and from the actual activity beneficial to the employer resulting in injuries to an employee are accidents arising out of and in the course of the employment. Burlingame v Mobil Chemical Co., 61 A.D.2d 273, 402 N.Y.S.2d 70, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9733 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1978).

Substantial evidence supported the determination that an injury occurred within the scope of employment, where the claimant was an outside worker, had difficulty using mass transportation to get to work, and had been loaned a company truck to take him back and forth. Farina v Romano Italian Ices, Inc., 81 A.D.2d 716, 439 N.Y.S.2d 468, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11269 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 54 N.Y.2d 608, 1981 N.Y. LEXIS 4519 (N.Y. 1981).

A construction worker was not entitled to compensation for injuries received in a motor vehicle accident while en route to his employment site, where it was disputed whether use of his vehicle was a requirement or a condition of his employment, and it was disputed whether the personal tools carried in his car were for anything other than his own convenience. Tsapatoris v G. L. M. Corp., 81 A.D.2d 728, 439 N.Y.S.2d 493, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11286 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981).

The Workers' Compensation Board properly determined that claimant's decedent was injured in the course of his employment, where such injury resulted from an automobile accident which occurred while the decedent was traveling as an "outside worker" in a company car from a managerial conference with company representatives to his own summer camp to spend the night en route back to his home office, where the trip to the summer camp was not a purely personal activity, and where such trip was not a deviation from his employment. Dick v Nationwide Ins. Co., 86 A.D.2d 916, 448 N.Y.S.2d 253, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15590 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1982).

The Workers' Compensation Board properly held that claimant's injury did not arise out of or in the course of his employment and properly denied benefits where, although claimant was required to bring his two-ton pickup truck to work for use on the job, the exception to the general rule that accidents which occur while an employee is on his way to or from work do not arise out of or in the course of his employment when an employee is required to bring his own vehicle to work for use during the work day did not apply inasmuch as claimant was engaged in completing a personal errand, driving his co-worker to pick up his car as a personal favor rather than commuting directly to work, and where the record lacked evidence that claimant's truck was, in fact, to be used on the job on the day he was injured. Stone v A.L.S. Constr. Co., 108 A.D.2d 1036, 485 N.Y.S.2d 605, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 43358 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 65 N.Y.2d 605, 493 N.Y.S.2d 1027, 482 N.E.2d 1229, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 15768 (N.Y. 1985).

Since janitor service regularly provided its employees with transportation to worksites, service's employee was entitled to workers' compensation for injuries sustained while being transported even though he was not paid for time spent in transit and there was no contractual agreement requiring employer to provide transportation. Gay v American Janitor Service, 122 A.D.2d 402, 504 N.Y.S.2d 808, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 59716 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1986).

Workers' Compensation Board properly determined that injury arose in course of claimant's employment as New York City transit police officer where claimant became ill while on duty, he told his supervisor and was directed to go home and report to transit authority clinic on following morning, and he was injured in automobile accident while driving his own vehicle to clinic; risk of travel to and from clinic was incident of employment since medical examination benefited employer by insuring that employees did not leave work due to frivolous or false claims of illness and that employees who were ill did not continue to work, thus endangering themselves and others. Pearson v New York City Transit Auth., 146 A.D.2d 849, 536 N.Y.S.2d 255, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16863 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Defendant, who was employed by state as superintendent of correctional facility, was acting in course of his employment at time of automobile accident while he was returning home from work in state-owned vehicle where (1) state, as part of statewide departmental policy, provided him with vehicle that he was expected to use for work-related travel, including to and from work, (2) he was "on call" 24 hours per day, and (3) vehicle was equipped with cellular phone and short-wave radio so that he could be reached while in transit. Hill v Speckard, 209 A.D.2d 1007, 619 N.Y.S.2d 903, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12035 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1994), reh'g denied, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2075 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't Feb. 3, 1995), app. dismissed, 85 N.Y.2d 1032, 631 N.Y.S.2d 291, 655 N.E.2d 404, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 2077 (N.Y. 1995).

Claimant, truck driver, was properly awarded workers' compensation benefits as result of being injured when struck by car while crossing street from hotel on way to restaurant before commencing next trip since he was traveling employee with no fixed work site, it was reasonable and customary for him to have obtained meal prior to commencing new assignment, and he did not cross street in such reckless and unreasonable manner as to constitute deviation from employment. Hamm v USF Red Star, 284 A.D.2d 793, 727 N.Y.S.2d 714, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6603 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 97 N.Y.2d 602, 735 N.Y.S.2d 491, 760 N.E.2d 1287, 2001 N.Y. LEXIS 3283 (N.Y. 2001).

Workers' compensation board properly denied a claim for death benefits pursuant to N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 16 by a decedent's mother; the decedent's death in an auto accident on his way to a job site did not arise out of the decedent's employment pursuant to N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 10(1), as he was not engaged in work-related activities at the time of the accident. Engle v Reale Constr. Co., 15 A.D.3d 761, 790 N.Y.S.2d 255, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1442 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2005).

Substantial evidence supported the Workers' Compensation Board's determination that the claimant's injuries sustained while commuting were not compensable because at the time of the assault, the claimant, who was a train conductor and in uniform, was not yet on duty or at her assigned station and not performing any duties of her employment or undertaking an errand for the employer. Matter of Rodriguez v New York City Tr. Auth., 161 A.D.3d 1501, 77 N.Y.S.3d 225, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3842 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2018), app. denied, 32 N.Y.3d 916, 122 N.E.3d 567, 98 N.Y.S.3d 769, 2019 N.Y. LEXIS 200 (N.Y. 2019).

Workers' Compensation Board rationally rejected the dual purpose exception to the "going and coming rule" in determining that the claimant's injuries sustained while commuting were not compensable because the claimant's commute served her personal interest in getting to work, and there was no evidence that the method or route the claimant chose served any business purpose, or that the employer benefitted from that route. Matter of Rodriguez v New York City Tr. Auth., 161 A.D.3d 1501, 77 N.Y.S.3d 225, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3842 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2018), app. denied, 32 N.Y.3d 916, 122 N.E.3d 567, 98 N.Y.S.3d 769, 2019 N.Y. LEXIS 200 (N.Y. 2019).

As the assault occurred six train stops away from claimant's assigned station after he had completed his shift, and he was not performing any services for the employer on his commute home, there was no nexus between the motivation for the assault and claimant's employment, and his injuries sustained in the course of travel home from his place of employment were not compensable; the presumption that an accident occurring in the course of employment also arose out of such employment was inapplicable. Matter of Warner v New York City Tr. Auth., 171 A.D.3d 1429, 96 N.Y.S.3d 772, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3131 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2019).

The provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Law can apply when an accident occurs on the employer's premises even though employment hours have terminated. Sivertsen v State, 43 Misc. 2d 978, 252 N.Y.S.2d 623, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1468 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1964), rev'd, 24 A.D.2d 918, 264 N.Y.S.2d 602, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2960 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

11. —Personal activities of employee

The fact that decedent was an "outside worker" did not mean that every accident that might befall him would be within the compass of the compensation law. It had still to be within the ambit of his work. It had still to arise out of and in the course of his employment. Hence, the death claim of the widow of an outside claims investigator for a casualty company should be rejected where decedent was killed in an automobile crash while returning from a Catskill mountain town where his family had been spending the summer and where he had gone for the week-end. His trip to the Catskills was personal and so his death was out of the scope of his employment. Glickman v Greater New York Taxpayers, 305 N.Y. 431, 113 N.E.2d 548, 305 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 431, 1953 N.Y. LEXIS 802 (N.Y. 1953).

Even when injuries arise out of employment, employer is under no duty to compensate his employees if injuries arise while employees are pursuing their private interests on their own time and at a distance from their employer's premises since they would then not be in the course of their employment. Malacarne v Yonkers Parking Authority, 41 N.Y.2d 189, 391 N.Y.S.2d 402, 359 N.E.2d 992, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 3220 (N.Y. 1976).

Obligation of CLS Work Comp Law § 10 to compensate injuries sustained in course of employment which are causally related to employment does not depend on equities of particular case and may not be avoided because of worker's fraud or wrongdoing. Richardson v Fiedler Roofing, Inc., 67 N.Y.2d 246, 502 N.Y.S.2d 125, 493 N.E.2d 228, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 18049 (N.Y. 1986).

Claimant, a hospital attendant in a state hospital who was injured in an automobile accident while driving to a practical nursing school at a time when she was on a one year fully paid educational leave of absence from her job came within "special errand" exception to rule that injuries incurred while traveling to and from work are not risks of employment where leave of absence was for mutual benefit, was encouraged by employer, claimant was required to return to work during vacations from school lasting more than 2 weeks, claimant had to maintain a specified grade average to remain in the program, and claimant could only train in the area in which she was engaged. Love v N. Y. S. Craig School, 42 A.D.2d 796, 345 N.Y.S.2d 710, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3780 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1973), aff'd, 34 N.Y.2d 680, 356 N.Y.S.2d 292, 312 N.E.2d 476, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1646 (N.Y. 1974).

The Workers' Compensation Board properly determined that a volunteer fireman was entitled to benefits based on injuries he had sustained at the fire house, after returning from the scene of a fire, when he fell from a ladder while removing some cots that he had received permission to borrow for his own personal use from a storage area where the claimant testified that, at the time of the accident, there were still some minor cleanup duties at the fire house that remained to be performed. Cozzens v North Syracuse Volunteer Fire Dep't, 98 A.D.2d 888, 471 N.Y.S.2d 24, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 21202 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1983).

In workers' compensation proceeding brought by state trooper who asserted that his heart attack was caused by stress on his job from being pressured to write more tickets, and also by chopping wood, which he stated he did to lose weight as dictated by his supervisor, board's finding that claimant's own action in cutting wood for personal reasons precipitated heart attack, not job stress, was supported by evidence that claimant's supervisor did not order claimant to engage in specific activity of wood-chopping, that claimant was chopping wood primarily to further secondary financial gain unrelated to his employment, and that claimant had given no prior indication that he was especially upset at work or that he was under any greater strain than his fellow officers. Cooley v New York State Police, 158 A.D.2d 828, 551 N.Y.S.2d 412, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1721 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1990).

Evidence supported determination of Workers' Compensation Board that claimant's injury was not compensable where claimant testified that she fell and injured her knee when co-worker grabbed her by her collar during discussion of co-worker's daughter, and co-worker testified that injury occurred as result of discussion with claimant over co-worker's "personal business." Closson v Dutchess County Sheriff's Dep't, 179 A.D.2d 861, 577 N.Y.S.2d 976, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 71 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992).

Workers' Compensation Board properly determined that claimant did not sustain accidental injury in course of his employment as service technician and salesperson, since his travel was purely personal and unrelated to his employment where he was involved in one-car accident while driving away from city in which his office and his apartment were situated, he had no customer appointments that evening but rather was scheduled to meet his supervisor either at his apartment or at his office, and he had blood alcohol level of .235 percent when accident occurred. Estate of Moritz v Ascar, Inc., 179 A.D.2d 909, 579 N.Y.S.2d 462, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 650 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992).

Evidence supported decision of Workers' Compensation Board that claimant sustained accidental injury arising out of and in course of his employment where it was shown that (1) while waiting for co-worker so that he could begin new work assignment, claimant was injured when he attempted to clean his own chainsaw on employer's wire wheel grinder, (2) claimant stated that he had borrowed employer's chainsaw and was asked to clean and return it, and that he decided that he could clean both employer's and his own chainsaw during slack time, and (3) claimant further stated that it was common practice to borrow employer's equipment for personal use and to use employer's on-premises equipment without permission. Smith v Paul Smith's College, 186 A.D.2d 320, 587 N.Y.S.2d 802, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10807 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992).

Claimant, inside employee, did not sustain causally related disability when he was injured in accident while walking in shopping center's parking lot after he stopped on his way home to purchase pen since there was no proof that he maintained home office or that he had work equipment in his home, his supervisor testified that he encouraged his employees to perform their work in office as much as possible, and employee provided pens to claimant. Bobinis v State Ins. Fund, 235 A.D.2d 955, 653 N.Y.S.2d 408, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 758 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Security guard, who injured his ankle while demonstrating boxing maneuver to co-worker while waiting for elevator to arrive after completing his scheduled employment shift and punching out on employer's time clock, was properly denied Workers' Compensation benefits where his own testimony showed that no further work was contemplated on day of accident, his boxing demonstration had no work-related purpose, and his injury was not caused by employer's failure to provide safe means of egress from place of employment. Bigley v J & R Music Elecs., 269 A.D.2d 667, 702 N.Y.S.2d 474, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1277 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

For purposes of determining whether injury sustained by claimant while attempting to fix flat tire on his personal vehicle arose out of and in course of his employment, CLS Work Comp § 21 presumption was not sufficiently rebutted where accident occurred in employer's parking lot immediately after claimant's work shift ended, claimant's use of parking lot benefitted employer by ensuring that he would not be late for his shift, which began at 4:00 a.m., and no contrary proof was presented by employer. Cruz v Karl Ehmer Inc., 282 A.D.2d 841, 724 N.Y.S.2d 777, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3685 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

Workers' compensation board properly ruled that a fire fighter's injuries arose out of and in the course of employment pursuant to N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 10; the fire fighter was entitled to work on his vehicle during unstructured time, and officials tolerated such activity. Pedro v Vill. of Endicott, 307 A.D.2d 598, 762 N.Y.S.2d 177, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8317 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. dismissed, 1 N.Y.3d 546, 775 N.Y.S.2d 242, 807 N.E.2d 292, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 3961 (N.Y. 2003), app. denied, 2 N.Y.3d 706, 780 N.Y.S.2d 312, 812 N.E.2d 1262, 2004 N.Y. LEXIS 1030 (N.Y. 2004).

State trooper did not sustain an accidental injury arising out of and in the course of his employment, N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 10, as the trooper was involved in a noncompensable personal act at the time that he sustained his injuries, as the trooper had stopped by his home to check on construction activities at the time of his fall. Matter of Mills v New York State Police, 41 A.D.3d 1083, 839 N.Y.S.2d 293, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7622 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

12. — —Combined with business activity

The fact that week-end trips were known to the employer and that the employee was required, if necessary, to work evenings and week-end, does not make a "dual purpose" trip. In order to entitle an employee to compensation for an injury sustained while on a "dual purpose" trip, service to the employer must have been one of the motivating reasons, or at least a "concurrent" cause, for the journey. Glickman v Greater New York Taxpayers, 305 N.Y. 431, 113 N.E.2d 548, 305 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 431, 1953 N.Y. LEXIS 802 (N.Y. 1953).

Injuries resulting from automobile accident incurred while employee was on trip which was in part made for employment purpose and such purpose was at least the concurrent cause of the journey, were compensable. Hornburg v Allegany County Dep't of Public Welfare, 29 A.D.2d 1031, 289 N.Y.S.2d 540, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4157 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1968).

Mere circumstance that business is combined with some pleasure will not defeat a claim for workmen's compensation unless the subject accident resulted from a risk produced by the personal activity, but a slight and momentary deviation from the work routine will be distinguished from purely personal activity for the purposes of such workmen's compensation. Gyory v Radgowski, 82 Misc. 2d 553, 369 N.Y.S.2d 583, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2043 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1974).

13. — —During off-duty athletic activity

Widow was not entitled to Workers' Compensation Board after her husband, who worked as accountant for private firm, suffered fatal heart attack while bowling for team sponsored by client of firm because, even if her husband's participation on bowling team inured to substantial benefit of his employer, there was no evidence of overt encouragement by employer. Dorosz v Green & Seifter, 92 N.Y.2d 672, 685 N.Y.S.2d 406, 708 N.E.2d 162, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 35 (N.Y. 1999).

While employer may have indirectly benefited from accountant's voluntary membership on weekly bowling team sponsored by one of his clients, Workers' Compensation Board correctly concluded that his fatal heart attack resulted from voluntary participation in off-duty athletic activity. Dorosz v Green & Seifter, 250 A.D.2d 931, 672 N.Y.S.2d 948, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5681 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998), aff'd, 92 N.Y.2d 672, 685 N.Y.S.2d 406, 708 N.E.2d 162, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 35 (N.Y. 1999).

14. — —During a meal, coffee break, or the like

In Workers' Compensation proceeding, fact that claimant had crossed street to purchase lunch after leaving employer's office and then recrossed street on way to parking lot had no bearing on issue of whether he was proceeding on "normal" route between employer's office and parking lot since he was in fact on sidewalk between office and parking lot at time accident occurred. Jacobs v Dellwood Foods, 130 A.D.2d 848, 515 N.Y.S.2d 916, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 46857 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 608, 521 N.Y.S.2d 225, 515 N.E.2d 910, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 18939 (N.Y. 1987).

Evidence supported determination of Workers' Compensation Board that claimant's injury, which occurred when she tripped in pothole while walking on public street on her unpaid lunch hour, resulted from personal act unrelated to her employment although accident occurred in close proximity to her workplace, where she left employer's premises to smoke cigarette because employer had strict policy against smoking on premises. Roggero v Frontier Ins. Group, 250 A.D.2d 1011, 673 N.Y.S.2d 260, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5931 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Workers' compensation board properly denied an employee's claim for benefits, because the injury did not arise out of and in the course of her employment as required by N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 10(1), as the injury occurred on a lunch break when the employee left the place of employment to move a vehicle, and it was clear that the employee's decision was personal in nature and that the injury did not occur in an area under the employer's control. Rose v Verizon N.Y., Inc., 304 A.D.2d 990, 761 N.Y.S.2d 100, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4151 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

Because a claimant took 15 to 20 minute meal breaks at a time and place convenient to the employer, and because the claimant was not forbidden from aiding a stranded motorist while in the course of the claimant's employment, the claimant was entitled to N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 10 benefits when the claimant was injured by an exploding battery. Matter of McFarland v Lindy's Taxi, Inc., 49 A.D.3d 1111, 853 N.Y.S.2d 743, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2711 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

Denial of an electrician's claim for workers' compensation benefits for an injury suffered while stopping at a drive-through for coffee on the direct route to his assigned job site was error because the injury arose out of the scope of his employment, the trip to the drive-through was a momentary and customary break which did not interrupt his employment and which was reasonable and work-related under the circumstances, and the presumption that the injury arose of out his employment was unrebutted. Matter of Marotta v Town & Country Elec., Inc., 51 A.D.3d 1126, 857 N.Y.S.2d 340, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3790 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

Risk of travel to a place of rest or refreshment may be compensable by workmen's compensation so long as the travel is part of the work routine, since an employee on a business trip is entitled to satisfy his physical needs including relaxation. Gyory v Radgowski, 82 Misc. 2d 553, 369 N.Y.S.2d 583, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2043 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1974).

15. — —During use of employer vehicle

Even though an employer knew that some of its workers violated a company rule by using company vehicles for personal reasons, an employee was not entitled to disability benefits where he was injured while using a company vehicle while driving home after a visit to a friend, since he was engaged in a personal activity. Nattier v Elmsford Transp. Co., 81 A.D.2d 721, 439 N.Y.S.2d 459, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11275 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981).

Claimant was not even tangentially engaged in employer's business of selling automobiles when he was injured in accident while driving to grocery store on Memorial Day holiday, although he was driving demonstrator vehicle provided to him by employer as incident of employment when accident occurred, where no benefit inured to employer which transformed claimant's purely personal use of vehicle into dual personal and business use for purposes of Workers' Compensation Law. Clark v R.I. Suresky & Sons, 236 A.D.2d 673, 653 N.Y.S.2d 441, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 965 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

15.5. —Work from home

Workers' Compensation Board erred in concluding that the claimant's injuries from moving boxes were not sufficiently work related because the Board applied a new standard for employees working from home, like the claimant, under which injuries were only compensable if occurring during regular work hours and while the employee was actively engaged in work duties as opposed to, for example, taking a short break or using the bathroom. Matter of Capraro v Matrix Absence Mgt., 187 A.D.3d 1395, 132 N.Y.S.3d 456, 2020 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6171 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2020).

16. —Employer-sponsored activities

While transportation provided by an employer in isolated cases or on an infrequent basis may not be deemed to be an incident of employment, a frequent and regular practice of providing transportation indicates that the employer has implicitly assumed the responsibility of transporting his employees to work and at some point that practice may become so common and so associated with the employment that it must be seen as incidental to it; once that point is reached there is no meaningful distinction between transportation furnished by custom and that provided by contractual obligation and when accidents occur while employees are traveling to work, an employer who assumes the responsibility to transport his employees must likewise bear the responsibility for the risks encountered in connection with the transportation, especially when the employer is in exclusive control of the conveyance. Holcomb v Daily News, 45 N.Y.2d 602, 412 N.Y.S.2d 118, 384 N.E.2d 665, 1978 N.Y. LEXIS 2364 (N.Y. 1978).

Fatal injuries sustained by an employee who, while on his way to work, hailed a passing truck owned by his employer and during the ride to the employer's plant, accidentally fell from the truck, were compensable. Although the employer was not obligated by contract to furnish transportation to its employees, the Workmen's Compensation Board found that it was a common practice of the employer to transport its employees to and from work and that the practice was advantageous to the employer; those findings are supported by substantial evidence and are a sufficient basis for an award of compensation benefits. Holcomb v Daily News, 45 N.Y.2d 602, 412 N.Y.S.2d 118, 384 N.E.2d 665, 1978 N.Y. LEXIS 2364 (N.Y. 1978).

Where an employee's social activities are in connection with and incidental to his employer's business, such activities become part of his employment; thus, beneficiaries of district sales manager for insurance company who was killed in auto accident on the way home from conducting a sales meeting were entitled to benefits despite fact that he and several salesmen had stopped at several bars after the meeting. McGee v Allstate Ins. Co., 41 A.D.2d 866, 342 N.Y.S.2d 685, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4686 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1973).

Death of employee in attendance at retirement dinner for coworker was within the course of his employment where function was paid for by employer, out of town coworkers attended and were reimbursed for their expenses by the employer, and company officials associated with retiree were present at the dinner. McNamara v Kidder Peabody & Co., 42 A.D.2d 183, 346 N.Y.S.2d 37, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3771 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1973).

There was substantial evidence to sustain board's finding that junior executive's death in auto accident after stopping for cocktails en route home from company-sponsored dinner dance arose out of and in course of employment where such dinner, open only to those in upper strata of employer's management, included studies of company reports and problems in furtherance of management club's purpose of improving quality of management and promoting "unity of management through education and association." Dorman v New Process Gear Div. Chrysler Corp., 44 A.D.2d 8, 353 N.Y.S.2d 264, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5544 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974), aff'd, 35 N.Y.2d 975, 365 N.Y.S.2d 527, 324 N.E.2d 885, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 1699 (N.Y. 1975).

In absence of any evidence to suggest that preseason practice softball game on employer-sponsored team was any less an incident of employment than contemplated official league play after season began and in view of fact that benefit to employer was as much an incident of the preseason practice as it was of subsequent official softball league games, injury to back and left leg sustained by employee while playing in preseason softball game on employer-sponsored team arose out of and in the course of employment and was compensable. Zengotita v New York Tel. Co., 58 A.D.2d 930, 396 N.Y.S.2d 921, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13132 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

Injuries sustained by an employee when the motorcycle he was operating collided with a truck while the employee was en route from his home to a playing field to engage in a softball game as a member of a team in a softball league organized, sponsored and financed by the employer arose out of and in the course of the employment. There was substantial evidence on which it could be found that the employer benefited from and dominated the program. Burlingame v Mobil Chemical Co., 61 A.D.2d 273, 402 N.Y.S.2d 70, 1978 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9733 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1978).

There was substantial evidence to support a finding that a volunteer fireman's injury occurred in the line of duties, where he had been required to attend an open house in full dress and had slipped and fallen on a wet floor and injured his wrist while being required to tend bar. Higgins v Ronkonkoma Fire Dist., Volunteer Fire Co., 81 A.D.2d 721, 439 N.Y.S.2d 459, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11276 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981).

The Workers' Compensation Board properly determined that a correctional officer's injuries sustained in a softball game on the prison grounds arose out of and in the course of employment, where the employer could terminate the athletic activities on its premises at will and where the activity benefitted the employer-employee relations. Nazario v New York State Dep't of Correction, 86 A.D.2d 914, 448 N.Y.S.2d 531, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15588 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1982).

The Workers' Compensation Board properly ruled that the death of the claimant's 16-year-old decedent, who drowned while attempting to rescue another boy at an annual picnic for employees of the city youth program by which he was employed, arose out of and in the course of his employment where the picnic had been organized by decedent's supervisor, where the employer exercised control over the event by authorizing its employees to attend during business hours, and where the picnic provided a business advantage to the employer by contributing to the morale and espirit de corps of the program's participants. Olmedo v Mayor's Summer Youth Program, 98 A.D.2d 878, 470 N.Y.S.2d 858, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 21193 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1983).

Evidence supported board's finding that injury sustained by claimant in evening softball game played in public park was compensable because his participation was sponsored by his employer, where claimant was employed by insurance company and was playing in league composed entirely of insurance company employees at urging of his employer, who deemed such peer-group activities as good for business; fact that claimant's employer was small family enterprise increased significance of fact that it had purchased claimant's softball uniform featuring its logo on back, and diminished relevance of fact that injury occurred off premises and after hours. Diem v Diem & Buerger Ins. Co., 146 A.D.2d 840, 536 N.Y.S.2d 246, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 20 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Employee of Workers' Compensation Board was not entitled to workers' compensation benefits for broken nose suffered while playing softball after regular working hours in state agency league for team composed of board members, even though game was played on state-owned fields, interoffice mail was used to exchange schedules, and other materials and raffle tickets were printed on board computers and copied on board photocopying machines, since there was no evidence that claimant was encouraged to play softball by anyone in position of authority, that his participation was designed to benefit board, or that direct financial support for uniforms and equipment was provided by board. De Carr v New York State Workers' Compensation Bd., 151 A.D.2d 935, 543 N.Y.S.2d 206, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8863 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Evidence supported determination that claimant's decedent had sustained accidental injury in course of employment where supervisor directed decedent to leave his place of employment with several co-workers to perform an activity for private benefit of supervisor, which was done with knowledge of employer, and he died as result of injury sustained while using employer's equipment. Davis v Alpha Apple, Inc., 184 A.D.2d 893, 585 N.Y.S.2d 550, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7964 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992).

Evidence supported determination that female teacher's injury in donkey basketball game was accidental injury in course of her employment, even though teacher was not required to participate in game and was not compensated therefor, where teacher agreed to play after principal expressed his concern that game might be canceled due to insufficient number of volunteers, he encouraged teachers in general (and female teachers in particular) to volunteer, and teacher volunteered believing that her participation would be beneficial at such time as she sought tenure; principal's conduct was neither passive or incidental, but was overt encouragement sufficient for Workers' Compensation Board to conclude that school sponsored game. Midley v Romulus Cent. School Dist., 184 A.D.2d 925, 584 N.Y.S.2d 948, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8198 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992).

Claimants' injuries in off-duty softball game arose in course of their employment where, inter alia, team members were required to wear uniforms paid for by entity formed at employer's initiative to promote employer's goals, hats supplied to players bore employer's logo, uniforms remained employer's property and had to be returned after player resigned from team, and practice schedules and printed materials encouraging employees to "play (employer) softball" were displayed on bulletin boards and in lounge areas at employer's premises. Eddy v Rochester-Genesee Reg'l Transp. Auth., 248 A.D.2d 769, 669 N.Y.S.2d 699, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2207 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Claimant's knee injury while playing basketball with co-workers at gym on his employer's premises after his shift had ended was properly found to have arisen out of and in course of his employment where employer provided all equipment and employed coordinator who managed gym and employer's programs, employer offered incentives for using gym whereby employees could earn points toward gift certificates, movie tickets, and other benefits, employer also distributed flyers promoting use of gym, and claimant testified that one of those flyers referred to basketball. Baker v Sentry Group, 269 A.D.2d 668, 703 N.Y.S.2d 299, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1278 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Because an employer sponsored the off-duty athletic activity that caused an employee's injury, the injury arose out of and in the course of the employment; therefore, the employee was properly awarded benefits under Workers' Compensation Law § 10(1). Matter of Bogert v E.B. Design Air, Inc., 38 A.D.3d 1125, 833 N.Y.S.2d 279, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3656 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

Investigator's injury did not arise out of and in the course of his employment for purposes of N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 10, as the employer did not overtly encourage employee participation in a basketball game at an employee picnic during which the investigator was injured, because the employer did not require attendance at the picnic, and the employer did not expressly invite or suggest that employees participate in the basketball game. Matter of Mack v Kings County Hosp. Ctr., 41 A.D.3d 1063, 839 N.Y.S.2d 277, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7603 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

Board's decision finding that an employee's injury, suffered while practicing volleyball for an employer's "Olympics," was compensable under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 10(1) was improper because the finding of compensability ran contrary to a previous board decision with almost identical facts, and the board did not provide a rational basis for departing from its own precedent; the first distinction made by the board was that the employee in this case had already registered to participate in the Olympics, whereas the employee in the previous case had not, but those facts were inapposite, inasmuch as the present inquiry involved the actions of the employer in encouraging the activity, not the status of the participant. Additionally, the board grounded its departure in a perceived change in the decisional law, but the facts in the relevant case were substantially dissimilar to the facts of both the instant case and the board's precedential decision. Matter of Huff v Department of Corrections, 52 A.D.3d 1003, 860 N.Y.S.2d 244, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5328 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

17. —Evidence of employment

The issue of whether a custom is sufficiently established to render the transportation by an employer of employees to their place of work an incident of the employment is a question of fact for the Workmen's Compensation Board and the scope of review of the Court of Appeals is limited to whether there is substantial evidence in the record as a whole to support the determination. Holcomb v Daily News, 45 N.Y.2d 602, 412 N.Y.S.2d 118, 384 N.E.2d 665, 1978 N.Y. LEXIS 2364 (N.Y. 1978).

Under this section the commission has no authority to make an award in the absence of at least some evidence that the employee met with an injury while he was at work for specified employer, and as consequence of something that had relation to work of employer, something done by him or by others while he was so employed. Collins v Brooklyn Union Gas Co., 171 A.D. 381, 156 N.Y.S. 957, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9457 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

Hearsay testimony, unsupported by facts and circumstances to justify a reasonable inference, is not sufficient to establish the primary fact of accidental personal injury sustained by an employee arising out of and in the course of his employment as set forth in this section. McHale v Sheffield Farms Co., 193 A.D. 541, 184 N.Y.S. 576, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5592 (N.Y. App. Div. 1920).

Admissions in the employers' report, made under this section as to employment and injury, being in conflict with undisputed evidence, do not justify an award. Craciola v Lewis, 233 A.D. 437, 253 N.Y.S. 752, 1931 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11319 (N.Y. App. Div. 1931).

Award based upon a finding that decedent's death arose out of and in the course of his employment affirmed upon evidence that the decedent business agent of the employer-union, died after sustaining a severe beating near his home, that union officials testified directly that there was considerable tension within the union, and decedent's wife testified as to threatening phone calls which she had received about the time that tension had begun to intensify. Fox v United Brotherhood of Carpenters & Joiners, 33 A.D.2d 605, 304 N.Y.S.2d 464, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3027 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 25 N.Y.2d 744, 1969 N.Y. LEXIS 1986 (N.Y. 1969).

The existence of an independent contractor relationship as to the maintenance of a leased tractor could not bar a factual finding that the particular repair was an incident of the otherwise established employer-employee relationship. Harding v Herr's Motor Express, Inc., 35 A.D.2d 883, 315 N.Y.S.2d 693, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3447 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970), app. denied, 28 N.Y.2d 487, 1971 N.Y. LEXIS 1884 (N.Y. 1971).

Substantial evidence supported determination of Workmen's Compensation Board, which disallowed claim for benefits on ground that decedent's death did not arise out of and in the course of employment, that decedent who moved into his employer's building following his separation from his wife and who died assertedly from an after hours fall in the building had moved into the building for his own benefit and was off duty at time of the accident. Munz v L. & J. Plumbing & Heating Co., 49 A.D.2d 977, 374 N.Y.S.2d 365, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11288 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

Evidence sustained finding that death of district court judge who was driving from his home to courthouse when tree fell upon his automobile, killing him, arose out of and in course of his employment. Munro v County of Suffolk, 49 A.D.2d 994, 374 N.Y.S.2d 392, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11325 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

Evidence supported Workmen's Compensation Board's determination that dentist's employee who was found seated in dentist's chair with mask used for administering nitrous oxide fastened over her face, although she was not authorized or qualified to administer nitrous oxide, had not arisen out of and in course of her employment. Appleberry v Moskowitz, 50 A.D.2d 1001, 377 N.Y.S.2d 226, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12191 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

Finding that claimant, who was injured while helping launch large raft at YMCA summer camp, was YMCA employee and that her injury was accident within meaning of Workers' Compensation Law, was supported by evidence that she received reduction in camp tuition and free room and board in exchange for participating in counselor aide training program, her duties included helping counselors and supervising campers with whom she shared cabin, she was required to obtain working papers, YMCA provided her with all necessary equipment, and YMCA retained right to ask her to leave camp if her conduct became undesirable. Long v Schenectady County YMCA, 227 A.D.2d 723, 642 N.Y.S.2d 96, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5035 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

Where an employer supplied all tools and equipment and directed the work of a labor broker's employees, the employer and its insurer were solely liable for a surviving spouse's workers' compensation death benefits claim. Bowman v Birdair, Inc., 302 A.D.2d 697, 754 N.Y.S.2d 752, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1263 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

Although, in personal injury action brought by passenger against driver, who was a fellow employee of plaintiff, and against car rental agency, seeking to recover for the injuries plaintif sustained in Ohio automobile accident, the employer's submission of a workmen's compensation claim for plaintiff would appear to indicate its approval of plaintiff's decision to extend his business stay in Ohio in order to complete his mission, during which extended time the accident occurred, questions of fact existed with respect to the employer's authorization and approval, precluding dismissal of defendants' workmen's compensation defense. Gyory v Radgowski, 82 Misc. 2d 553, 369 N.Y.S.2d 583, 1974 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2043 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1974).

18. Limitation of remedy

When employer complies with provisions of this section employee's sole remedy is under Work. Comp. Law. Kuhn v P. J. Carlin Const. Co. (1937) 274 NY 118, 8 NE2d 300, reh den (1938) 277 NY 651, 14 NE2d 204.; De Coigne v Ludlum Steel Co., 251 A.D. 662, 297 N.Y.S. 636, 1937 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7018 (N.Y. App. Div. 1937).

The amendment to this section as to relief workers in effect May 21, 1934 (repealed by 1941) amendment to this section) was not retroactive, and did not affect claimant's rights which became fixed at the death of the decedent. Schwartzott v Erie County Highway Department, 243 A.D. 662, 276 N.Y.S. 934, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7531 (N.Y. App. Div. 1935).

While the acceptance by an employee of compensation payments made under award by the Workmen's Compensation Board was not an accord and satisfaction extinguishing the employee's cause of action for damages, the awards constituted a finding by the Board that the employee's injuries arose out of and in the course of employment and by virtue of that finding the employee's exclusive remedy is under the Workmen's Compensation Law. Doca v Federal Stevedoring Co., 280 A.D. 940, 116 N.Y.S.2d 25, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4304 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952), aff'd, 305 N.Y. 648, 112 N.E.2d 424, 305 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 648, 1953 N.Y. LEXIS 1208 (N.Y. 1953).

Where employee's injuries arose out of and in the course of his employment, employee's cause of action in common-law negligence against his employer was barred by section of Workmen's Compensation Law. Canty v Greer Children's Community, 54 A.D.2d 698, 387 N.Y.S.2d 292, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14266 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1976), app. dismissed, 41 N.Y.2d 969, 394 N.Y.S.2d 883, 363 N.E.2d 589, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 1956 (N.Y. 1977).

Finding in workmen's compensation case that there was no causal relationship between any acts claimed to have been done by former employer and any of the injuries which former employee claimed to have suffered as result of alleged assault by former employer did not prevent former employee from bringing action against former employer for damages arising out of alleged assault and for damages arising out of fear caused by threatened violent conduct. Leopold v Britt, 58 A.D.2d 856, 396 N.Y.S.2d 680, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13037 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1977).

An action by an employee who was injured while operating an extruder machine, premised on the theory that the principal officer of the employer altered, modified and removed safety components of the machine so as to increase its speed, with knowledge of the dangers to the machine operator by such alterations, should have been dismissed, where the employee had already received workers' compensation benefits prior to the initiation of his personal injury action, where the compensation award established all factual issues relevant to the claim and constituted the exclusive remedy for the employer's liability, where the general provision in Labor Law § 200 requiring an owner or general contractor to provide a safe place to work did not overrule and was subjected to the exclusivity provisions of the Workers' Compensation Law, where the complaint did not support a theory of intentional tort, where there were no allegations in the complaint or any factual support for the theory of successor liability, and where the Workers' Compensation Board determination of liability and compensation award for the employee's injuries was res judicata of the employee's claims for a remedy at law on the alternative theory of intentional tort. Bardere v Zafir, 102 A.D.2d 422, 477 N.Y.S.2d 131, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18802 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't), aff'd, 63 N.Y.2d 850, 482 N.Y.S.2d 261, 472 N.E.2d 37, 1984 N.Y. LEXIS 4653 (N.Y. 1984).

Liability of an employer for an injury arising out of and in the course of employment is exclusively enforcible before the Board. Meaney v Keating, 102 N.Y.S.2d 514, 200 Misc. 308, 1951 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1522 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1951), aff'd, 279 A.D. 1030, 113 N.Y.S.2d 240, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5700 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

A decision of the Workmen's Compensation Board holding that no accident occurred and denying compensation was a bar to a common law action in negligence against the employer for the same injury. The Workmen's Compensation Board had held that there was no accident either within or without the scope of employment, and such a finding was not beyond the Board's powers. Drier v Randforce Amusement Corp., 14 Misc. 2d 362, 179 N.Y.S.2d 412, 1958 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2562 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1958), aff'd, 14 A.D.2d 772, 218 N.Y.S.2d 527, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8212 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1961).

In medical malpractice and negligence action wherein plaintiff alleged that employee's death was caused by wrongful diagnosis and treatment by employer's full time salaried doctor, plaintiff's sole remedy was workmen's compensation where plaintiff failed to allege wilful or wanton conduct by defendant doctor. Golini v Nachtigall, 75 Misc. 2d 523, 347 N.Y.S.2d 981, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1615 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1973), aff'd, 46 A.D.2d 628, 359 N.Y.S.2d 879, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3970 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1974).

An award by the compensation board, having jurisdiction of the matter, deprives the court of any right to relitigate the same issue and hence, the court would have no jurisdiction of a common law action against an employer where the employee contended that the accident did not arise in the course of his employment because it did not happen upon the employer's premises and happened in the free time assigned for the noon meal. Sedore v Sayre, 119 N.Y.S.2d 204, 1953 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1522 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1953).

Employee's personal injury action against the employer for alleged negligence in maintaining the condition of the floor of the diner was barred when the employee had applied for and received workers' compensation benefits from the employer. Couluris v Harbor Boat Realty Inc., 234 N.Y.L.J. 49, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3458 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. Sept. 9, 2005), rev'd, 31 A.D.3d 686, 820 N.Y.S.2d 282, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9565 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2006).

19. Effect of contractual limitations

An employee may not recover hospital expenses from a nonprofit hospital service corporation where its contract excluded hospital service provided for under any compensation law. Moeller v Associated Hospital Service of Capital Dist., 304 N.Y. 73, 106 N.E.2d 16, 304 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 73, 1952 N.Y. LEXIS 783 (N.Y. 1952).

The rights of an employee under the Law do not depend upon the manner in which his employer has elected to carry his insurance; the employee is not prejudiced by the fact that his employer qualifies as a self-insurer or insures otherwise than in the state fund. Winfield v New York C. & H. R. R. Co., 168 A.D. 351, 153 N.Y.S. 499, 1915 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8281 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 216 N.Y. 284, 110 N.E. 614, 216 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 284, 1915 N.Y. LEXIS 803 (N.Y. 1915).

A compensation policy was in effect where employer took out the policy on a particular construction job in September, cancelled it in December when he quit work for the winter and called an agent to reinstate the policy when he was ready to go back to work in April. No policy had been issued at the time of the accident which occurred about two weeks after the employer began work but the agent testified that he assumed there was coverage from the amount of the telephone order. Dunn v Victor Ottilio & Sons, 1 A.D.2d 909, 149 N.Y.S.2d 630, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5953 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Where union purchased a workmen's compensation policy which provided coverage for "labor union—all employees including business agents and organizers," the coverage extended to officers even if policy did not expressly extend coverage to them and even if the officers were unsalaried. Paschen v Bowen, 47 A.D.2d 800, 365 N.Y.S.2d 306, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9120 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1975).

II. Persons Responsible as Employers

A labor union which furnishes union members certain jobs acting as their spokesman and paying them, may be an independent contractor and therefore may be liable for compensation. Hines v Henry I. Stetler, Inc., 196 A.D. 622, 188 N.Y.S. 73, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5578 (N.Y. App. Div. 1921).

While an infant may disaffirm his contract as an employer he cannot avoid his statutory liability as to compensation where an accident happens prior to a valid disaffirmance. Rahman v Bethel, 236 A.D. 182, 258 N.Y.S. 286, 1932 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5926 (N.Y. App. Div. 1932).

Managing agent of multiple dwelling owned by Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. was not liable for affirmative negligence of superintendent causing death of decedent where both decedent and superintendent were each carried on the payroll of Metropolitan and paid by the managing agent from the rents collected and covered by a compensation policy as an employee of Metropolitan. Cunningham v Mark Rafalsky & Co., 281 A.D. 609, 121 N.Y.S.2d 207, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3107 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953), aff'd, 306 N.Y. 712, 117 N.E.2d 903, 306 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 712, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 1072 (N.Y. 1954).

Workers' Compensation Board properly determined that New York City Department of Housing Preservation and Development (HPD) was employer of claimant who was injured in fall while working as superintendent of apartment house, and was thus responsible for payment of his workers' compensation award, where claimant was hired by administrator appointed by court under CLS RPAPL Art 7-A after special proceeding commenced by HPD. Valverde v New York City Dep't of Housing Preservation & Dev., 154 A.D.2d 756, 546 N.Y.S.2d 203, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12409 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989), app. dismissed, 77 N.Y.2d 833, 566 N.Y.S.2d 585, 567 N.E.2d 979, 1991 N.Y. LEXIS 87 (N.Y. 1991).

Claimant, who was injured while assigned to work at county performing arts center (center) by county department of social services (department) under "community work experience program" (CWEP) providing employment to recipients of aid to dependent children, was properly determined to be employee of department for purposes of workers' compensation, despite department's contention that he was employee of center at time of injury, where record showed that department had exclusive power to appoint CWEP employees, retained power to select appropriate work site, paid claimant's wages and approved his work schedule, supervised claimant's job performance, reviewed his weekly time sheets and evaluation reports, and retained authority to remove him from work site. Pizzatola v Ulster County Dep't of Social Services, 156 A.D.2d 873, 550 N.Y.S.2d 93, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15986 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Claimant, who was injured while assigned to work at county performing arts center (center) by county department of social services (department) under "community work experience program" (CWEP) providing employment to recipients of aid to dependent children, was properly determined to be employee of department for purposes of workers' compensation, despite department's contention that he was employee of center at time of injury, since CWEP clearly envisions that participants will be considered employees and provided with workers' compensation coverage, and contrary result was not warranted by fact that center exercised some supervision over claimant and may have agreed to provide workers' compensation coverage for him. Pizzatola v Ulster County Dep't of Social Services, 156 A.D.2d 873, 550 N.Y.S.2d 93, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15986 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Court would annul determination of Workers' Compensation Board that adult newspaper carrier was independent contractor rather than employee, even though she derived her earnings from purchase of newspapers and their resale at profit, she was free to pick up papers at any time after they were printed, and she could determine means of delivery, arrange for substitutes, and handle customer complaints, since same factors were present in earlier decision wherein board held that employer-employee relationship was present. Paolucci v Capital Newspapers, 197 A.D.2d 811, 603 N.Y.S.2d 74, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10122 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1993).

Employment relationship was established by evidence that employer directed claimant as to work to be performed, paid claimant hourly wage, and provided claimant with tools and forms for his work in building cement walls. Charlebois v Brockway, 209 A.D.2d 798, 618 N.Y.S.2d 478, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11104 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1994).

Workers' Compensation Board properly ruled that claimants, who were injured while performing duties as adult newspaper carriers, were employees rather than independent contractors where, inter alia, employer required claimants to deliver newspapers by set hour each morning, employer fixed claimants' territories and provided them with route list containing specific instructions as to how to deliver newspapers to certain customers, employer handled customer complaints, and employer provided plastic bags and elastic bands for use in distribution process. Paolucci v Capital Newspapers, 229 A.D.2d 751, 645 N.Y.S.2d 603, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7844 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

Workers' Compensation Board properly determined that no employer-employee relationship existed between decedent and company that employed passenger decedent was carrying when plane he was piloting crashed, where president of company testified that company did not hire decedent and that decedent had offered to provide flight as favor, and claimant had stated in her application for insurance benefits that decedent was not in course of his employment at time of accident. Limpert v Kay-R Elec., 250 A.D.2d 1005, 673 N.Y.S.2d 762, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5921 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Workers' Compensation Board properly concluded that employer-employee relationship existed where corporation's principal applied for taxicab license for vehicle that claimant was driving at time of his accident, corporation did business as entity that provided claimant with cab and dispatched him to pick up his fares, and principal failed to appear and offer any evidence. Fisher v SDAM Mgmt. Inc., 284 A.D.2d 845, 727 N.Y.S.2d 724, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6743 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

As a dispatch company leased a vehicle to a workers' compensation claimant who had a hack license and used the vehicle to pick up passengers for compensation, and the vehicle had New York City Taxi and Limousine Commission license plates registered to the company, the vehicle was a "taxicab" as defined by N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 148-a. Therefore, the company and claimant were employer and employee under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 2. Matter of Nkrumah v Thomas, 61 A.D.3d 1325, 877 N.Y.S.2d 515, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3312 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2009).

The relationship of employer and employee is not changed when employers continue to provide wages in the form of workers' compensation to employees who have been injured while in the course of their employment. Dallesandro v Dallesandro, 110 Misc. 2d 342, 442 N.Y.S.2d 400, 1981 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3089 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. 1981).

Where an employer charges his employee with the performance of a certain duty and it appears that the force available to perform such a duty is not sufficient, or an emergency occurred which requires assistance for the employee to perform his duties, he is impliedly authorized to call on others to assist him and they thereby become employees of the original employer, and the latter assumes toward them the same obligations as he assumes with the respect to his regular employees. Paul v Mosberg Realty Corp., 37 N.Y.S.2d 766, 1942 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2096 (N.Y. City Ct. 1942).

21. Multiple employers

A commission salesman representing two firms may be awarded compensation against both. Jacobi v Supreme Junior Coat Co., 268 N.Y. 654, 198 N.E. 541, 268 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 654, 1935 N.Y. LEXIS 1121 (N.Y. 1935).

Where a watchman sustained injuries while guarding the premises of 17 separate property owners, an award will be imposed against a single property owner whose property he was guarding at the time of the accident. Moochler v A. H. Herrick & Son, 272 N.Y. 545, 4 N.E.2d 729, 272 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 545, 1936 N.Y. LEXIS 1040 (N.Y. 1936).

Where at time of automobile accident between two automobiles the parties had multiple employers, a steel company and union, and accident occurred while traveling home from negotiations to promote the union's interest, the parties were answerable to the union for actions taken on its behalf and they were paid by union for their efforts by receiving reimbursement of their lost wages, workmen's compensation was the parties' exclusive remedy for injuries resulting from the collision. Paschen v Bowen, 47 A.D.2d 800, 365 N.Y.S.2d 306, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9120 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1975).

In negligence action, company's affirmative defense that it was engaged in joint venture with plaintiff's employer (against whom complaint had been dismissed because of exclusivity of workers' compensation relief) was properly dismissed where company's general counsel testified that company and plaintiff's employer were separate corporate entities, filed separate tax returns and did not share income or losses. Bruno v Dynamic Enterprises, Inc., 132 A.D.2d 964, 518 N.Y.S.2d 494, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49429 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1987).

It was error for board to impose joint and several liability on uninsured dual employers where evidence was insufficient to show that they participated in joint venture; matter would be remitted for board to determine whether joint venture existed, and if not, board should apportion liability between employers. Ayers v Hakes, 260 A.D.2d 975, 689 N.Y.S.2d 281, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4447 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Plaintiff's general employer was entitled to summary judgment dismissing personal injury action where plaintiff had received workers' compensation for same injury from his special employer; when employee elects to receive workers' compensation benefits, both general and special employers are shielded from any action at law commenced by that employee. Stein v Beaver Concrete Breaking Co., 281 A.D.2d 616, 722 N.Y.S.2d 185, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3101 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2001).

22. Contractors and subcontractors

An employee of a subcontractor may maintain an action against the general contractor for personal injuries caused by the general contractor's negligence in the absence of proof that the subcontractor has failed to secure compensation and that the general contractor is thereby under a statutory liability pursuant to § 56 to pay compensation. Clark v Monarch Engineering Co., 248 N.Y. 107, 161 N.E. 436, 248 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 107, 1928 N.Y. LEXIS 1230 (N.Y. 1928).. See also Casey v Shane, 248 N.Y. 625, 162 N.E. 551, 248 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 625, 1928 N.Y. LEXIS 1449 (N.Y.), reh'g denied, 249 N.Y. 513, 164 N.E. 565, 249 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 513, 1928 N.Y. LEXIS 842 (N.Y. 1928).

A general contractor is not bound to secure compensation as an employer of the employees of a subcontractor but he is liable to pay compensation if the subcontractor does not secure it. Sweezey v Arc Electrical Const. Co., 295 N.Y. 306, 67 N.E.2d 369, 295 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 306, 1946 N.Y. LEXIS 835 (N.Y. 1946), disapproved, Washington Metro. Area Transit Auth. v Johnson, 467 U.S. 925, 104 S. Ct. 2827, 81 L. Ed. 2d 768, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 122 (U.S. 1984).

A workman injured while working on a lumber job is the employee of the general contractor, who has a contract to clear a tract of pulp wood rather than alleged subcontractors where it appeared it was the custom in the industry that a tract to be cleared should be subdivided among small groups of men where such subdivisions do not amount to the creation of subcontractors in the sense that it relieves the general contractor from the liability of affording compensation to those injured in the work and the general contractor was the only one who had taken out insurance. Sullivan v Preston, 177 A.D. 110, 163 N.Y.S. 692, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5184 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

An award may be given against a contractor and subcontractor jointly. Dunbar v Mackenzie, 198 A.D. 946, 189 N.Y.S. 233, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8512 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 232 N.Y. 556, 134 N.E. 570, 232 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 556, 1921 N.Y. LEXIS 588 (N.Y. 1921).

A subcontractor rather than a general contractor is the employer of a claimant originally employed by the general contractor but who was employed by the subcontractor pursuant to an arrangement between the contractors and, during the period in which the employee was injured, the subcontractor paid the employee and social security obligations and workmen's compensation insurance payments were paid by the subcontractor for the employee and the subcontractor made the employer's first report of injury and notified the Industrial Commissioner that it had commenced payment of compensation. Moore v Colonial Sand & Stone Co., 261 A.D. 857, 24 N.Y.S.2d 751, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7791 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

General contractor was entitled to summary judgment as to an indemnification claim against a subcontractor, arising from the subcontractor's employee's injury, because the subcontractor was not statutorily protected from liability since the subcontractor did not procure workers' compensation coverage for the employee. Poulin v Ultimate Homes, Inc., 166 A.D.3d 667, 87 N.Y.S.3d 189, 2018 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7462 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 2018).

23. General and special employers

Employees may look to their general employer or their special employer or both, for compensation for injuries due to occupational hazards. De Noyer v Cavanaugh, 221 N.Y. 273, 116 N.E. 992, 221 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 273, 1917 N.Y. LEXIS 1300 (N.Y. 1917).; Schweitzer v Thompson & Norris Co., 229 N.Y. 97, 127 N.E. 904, 229 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 97, 1920 N.Y. LEXIS 660 (N.Y. 1920).; Dennison v Peckham Road Corp., 295 N.Y. 457, 68 N.E.2d 440, 295 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 457, 1946 N.Y. LEXIS 801 (N.Y. 1946).; Dale v Saunders Bros., 171 A.D. 528, 157 N.Y.S. 1062, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5376, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9736 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 218 N.Y. 59, 112 N.E. 571, 218 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 59, 1916 N.Y. LEXIS 1042 (N.Y. 1916), 218 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 59, 218 N.Y. 59, 112 N.E. 571, 218 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 59, 1916 N.Y. LEXIS 1042 (N.Y. 1916).

Where an employee, who had been employed for over two years by a general employer and had been working for defendant special employer for more than a month was directed by the defendant's servant to haul a load of lumber already loaded on one of the defendant's trucks, to which he transferred the general employer's horses, and was hit and injured by a piece of timber negligently handled by one of the defendant special employer's servants, a negligence action against the special employer cannot be maintained. Lee v Cranford Co., 182 A.D. 191, 169 N.Y.S. 370, 1918 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7848 (N.Y. App. Div. 1918), aff'd, 230 N.Y. 618, 130 N.E. 917, 230 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 618, 1921 N.Y. LEXIS 896 (N.Y. 1921).

A corporation which originally hired an employee remains liable as employer for compensation, even though it assigned the contract under which the work for which the employee was hired was to be done, where such an assignment occurs in a foreign state and was without the knowledge of the employee. Noel v Morrison, 260 A.D. 377, 22 N.Y.S.2d 649, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4598 (N.Y. App. Div.), reh'g denied, 260 A.D. 896, 23 N.Y.S.2d 832, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5265 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

Where a truck renting corporation and a motor haulage corporation employed the same mechanic, an award against the rental corporation alone is proper where it appeared that on the day he sustained injuries, he was in the employ solely of the rental corporation. Antonini v Young Rental Corp., 263 A.D. 1032, 33 N.Y.S.2d 466, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7961 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

A harbor master hired by a general agent of the War Shipping Administration having charge of operations connected with loading and unloading of vessels, from stevedores employed by a contract stevedore, and placed under the sole supervision of the dock boss of the general agent is a special employee of the agent and an award of 50 per cent of death benefits is properly made against the agent and its carrier. Johnston v International Freighting Corp., 274 A.D. 728, 87 N.Y.S.2d 297, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5878 (N.Y. App. Div.), reh'g denied, 275 A.D. 865, 89 N.Y.S.2d 523, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4818 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

Where an award was made against both the general and special employers, liability to pay the award in full runs against each. But where the general employer was not insured and his responsibility was open to some doubt, the Board was authorized to make an award against both and the special employer was not harmed by a finding and direction to it to pay the full award with a right of recovery over. Yurcak v Chicago Exp., Inc., 283 A.D. 1128, 131 N.Y.S.2d 568, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6498 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

If there is both a general and special employer, the board can make an award against both or either of them as it sees fit. Bianculli v Times Square Stores, Inc., 34 A.D.2d 696, 309 N.Y.S.2d 542, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5085 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

Plaintiff was special employee of defendant as matter of law, and his acceptance of workers' compensation benefits as employee of his general employer precluded him from bringing personal injury action against defendant, where (1) pursuant to contract between general employer and defendant, plaintiff was supplied to defendant to perform work as technician, and (2) general employer was responsible for paying plaintiff's wages and maintaining workers' compensation for him, but (3) plaintiff reported to work each day at defendant's plant and was supervised and controlled exclusively by defendant's employees, and no representative of general employer was present at defendant's plant while plaintiff performed his work. Degruchy v Xerox Corp., 188 A.D.2d 1003, 591 N.Y.S.2d 661, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14829 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1992).

Corporation was decedent's special employer where general employer was owned by corporation, worked exclusively for corporation, and all work equipment and assignments for general employer's employees were provided and directed by corporation. Rainone v 36th St. Terminal Corp., 209 A.D.2d 814, 618 N.Y.S.2d 152, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11127 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1994).

Plaintiff was "special employee" of defendant where he was hired by company supplying professional help to various companies for work at premises owned by defendant, he worked at premises from inception of his employment until date of accident, and defendant exercised exclusive direction and control over his daily activities. Schulze v Associated Univs., 212 A.D.2d 588, 622 N.Y.S.2d 570, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1542 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 1995).

Driver for truck delivery service was properly found by Workers' Compensation Board to be special employee of company for which he was making deliveries where that company controlled scheduling and location of deliveries, required drivers to work on specified days and had authority to impose rules as to their personal appearance, drivers stored their trucks in company warehouse, and drivers gained access to warehouse using identification cards bearing name of company's subsidiary. Tunison v P.C. Richards & Son, 257 A.D.2d 856, 684 N.Y.S.2d 311, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 524 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Plaintiff was properly found to be defendant city's special employee as matter of law where city, through its department of housing preservation and development (HPD), exclusively controlled hiring, firing, discipline, promotion, work performed, sick leave, vacations, and every other aspect of plaintiff's employment, with exception of payroll services, which were provided by plaintiff's general employer; it was immaterial that plaintiff reported directly to lead mechanic in employ of general employer where lead mechanic, like plaintiff, was controlled and supervised by HPD. Brunetti v City of New York, 286 A.D.2d 253, 728 N.Y.S.2d 665, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8053 (N.Y. App. Div. 1st Dep't 2001).

24. —Duration of special employment

Where New York City contracted with the owner of a team for the use of said team with a driver employed by the owner and the driver having finished his day's work for the city and while returning to his employer was killed when a wheel came off the wagon, an award against the city is not justified since the decedent was killed in the duty of his general employment and not at the time of his special employment by the city. Mackey v New York, 193 A.D. 535, 184 N.Y.S. 495, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5590 (N.Y. App. Div. 1920).

A student nurse, starting her vacation two days early, who was injured while in her father's automobile while en route to the general employer from the special employer pursuant to instructions and the rules of the institution to report "and sign out" for vacation, before being released from duty, is entitled to an award entirely assessed against the general employer hospital. Kwitkowski v Charles E. Wilson Memorial Hospital, 277 A.D. 802, 96 N.Y.S.2d 871, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3376 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

25. —Allocation of responsibility

Both the special and the general employer may be liable for compensation and liability for the award divided between them where the employee is loaned to the special employer, who agreed to carry the employee on its payroll during the period of special service and the employee was temporarily subject to a direction of the employees of the special employer. Dennison v Peckham Road Corp., 295 N.Y. 457, 68 N.E.2d 440, 295 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 457, 1946 N.Y. LEXIS 801 (N.Y. 1946).

A demonstrator for cosmetics assigned to a department store where she worked under the latter's supervision selling its products as well as her own is not entitled to recover against the store for injuries in the course of her employment there, where both companies had agreed that the demonstrator should be deemed the employee of the cosmetic company. Knox v Gimbel Bros, 258 A.D. 1013, 16 N.Y.S.2d 964, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8644 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

Where claimant worked eight days for employer after his layoff by former employer latter employer was solely responsible for benefits awarded to claimant for subsequently incurred disability. Beckinsale v Charles H. Greenthal, Inc., 29 A.D.2d 1011, 289 N.Y.S.2d 426, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4133 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1968).

Recipient of public assistance who was injured while participating in workfare program sponsored by county, when working as mechanic at city public works department garage, was general employee of county and special employee of city for purposes of apportioning his workers' compensation claim equally between county and city. Kemp v City of Hornell, 250 A.D.2d 950, 672 N.Y.S.2d 537, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5678 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

26. Aggravation of existing conditions

An employee who originally suffered an accidental fracture and refractured the same bone by lifting a heavy timber while in the employ of a second employer, suffers two accidental injuries and the award resulting from the second accident should be apportioned equally. Anderson v Babcock & Wilson Co., 256 N.Y. 146, 175 N.E. 654, 256 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 146, 1931 N.Y. LEXIS 1036 (N.Y. 1931).

Where a nurse, who had been employed by two hospitals, is exposed to patients suffering from active tuberculosis during a tour of duty at one of the hospitals, resulting in a reactivation of a pre-existing tuberculosis condition, she is entitled to an award of compensation apportioned between both hospitals. Nyulassey v New York, 270 A.D. 970, 62 N.Y.S.2d 110, 1946 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4892 (N.Y. App. Div. 1946).. See also Nosowich v Central Islip State Hospital, 274 A.D. 1080, 85 N.Y.S.2d 674, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6143 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).; McDonald v New York, 265 A.D. 1026, 39 N.Y.S.2d 2, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS

6674 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943).; Commissioner of Taxation & Finance v Willard Parker Hospital, 256 A.D. 1018, 10 N.Y.S.2d 487, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5901 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

Where an employee is disabled as the result of injuries sustained in two accidents, each accident occurring when the employee was employed by a different employer, the award may properly be charged equally against both employers. Zaborski v Newman Bros. Grain Co., 271 A.D. 1043, 68 N.Y.S.2d 585, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5766 (N.Y. App. Div. 1947).; Frederick v Odenbach Shipbuilding Corp., 278 A.D. 882, 104 N.Y.S.2d 548, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5050 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

A finding that disability due to recurrence of a hernia is the result of an original accident and chargeable against the employer at the time thereof is proper, even though the employee had worked for another employer and was employed by a third employer at the time of the recurrence of the injury, and the medical testimony was to the effect that the recurrence was due to repeated strains on the repaired condition of the original hernia. Jenkins v J. M. Sisson & Co., 274 A.D. 955, 83 N.Y.S.2d 687, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4238 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

Where a plumber sustained a displaced intervertebral disc in a 1936 employment accident and in 1945 after doing heavy work for a second employer, the employee developed symptoms of the displaced disc and as the result of the original accident and the work done for the second employer, the employee suffered a "ruptured intervertebral disc" for which surgery became necessary early in 1946, apportionment of a disability award equally between the employers based on a finding of occupational aggravation of an original back injury is proper. Paradiso v Vuozzo, 277 A.D. 802, 96 N.Y.S.2d 796, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3375 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

Where an employee originally suffered a sacroiliac strain working for his first employer and, after compensation had been paid, the condition improved to such an extent that the employee's doctor advised him to try light work whereupon he took the job with a new employer carrying bags of coal and re-strained his back causing a new disability, an award of compensation for the second disability will be apportioned between the employers. Quick v Levine, 278 A.D. 879, 104 N.Y.S.2d 397, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5042 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), modified, 278 A.D. 988, 104 N.Y.S.2d 397, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5453 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1951).

Where an injury sustained in 1945 by an employee as the result of a fall from which the employee suffered a fracture of the wing of the right ilium, fracture of the right ischium and contusion of the right thigh and hip contributed to the employee's disability along with a lumbosacral strain suffered when the employee was employed by a new employer, an award of benefits computed by dividing responsibility equally between the two employers is proper. Frederick v Odenbach Shipbuilding Corp., 278 A.D. 882, 104 N.Y.S.2d 548, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5050 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

III. Duty to Compensate; Exceptions

27. In general

The Workmen's Compensation Law imposes upon every employer, foreign or domestic, the duty to secure to his workmen compensation for injuries wherever sustained arising out of and in the course of the employment located here. Cameron v Ellis Const. Co. (1930) 252 NY 394, 169 NE 622, remittitur amd (1930) 253 NY 559, 171 NE 782.; Bauss v Consolidated Chimney Co., 270 A.D. 70, 58 N.Y.S.2d 717, 1945 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2803 (N.Y. App. Div. 1945).

The only exceptions as to the right to compensation of employees covered by workmen's compensation law are those specifically stated in this section, to wit intoxication or wilful injury. Sackolwitz v Charles Hamburg & Co., 295 N.Y. 264, 67 N.E.2d 152, 295 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 264, 1946 N.Y. LEXIS 829 (N.Y. 1946).

Basic policy of workmen's compensation is that if injury was accidental and arose in course of employment, recovery should be allowed regardless of foreseeability of injury. Wolfe v Sibley, Lindsay & Curr Co., 36 N.Y.2d 505, 369 N.Y.S.2d 637, 330 N.E.2d 603, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 1847 (N.Y. 1975).

A decision of the Workers' Compensation Board that claimant sustained a compensable back injury in the course of his employment and that there was dual coverage by two insurance companies, each of which would be responsible for 50 percent of claimant's benefits, would be reversed where one insurer's contractual liability under its policy of workers' compensation insurance terminated when that company's insured sold the employment premises prior to claimant's injury and claimant was thereafter in the employ of and paid by the other company's insured. Vasquez v Gotham Hotel, 93 A.D.2d 929, 462 N.Y.S.2d 323, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17822 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1983).

Court would affirm determination that work provided for claimant exceeded limitation imposed by his physician and that his refusal to perform such work did not constitute voluntary removal from labor market for purposes of receiving workers' compensation benefits where (1) claimant's doctor released him to do "light sweeping and cleaning with no heavy lifting," (2) physician-consultant for employer's workers' compensation insurance carrier concurred with claimant's doctor, and (3) claimant's supervisor stated that in addition to approved tasks, claimant was required to lift salt bags weighing as much as 50 pounds. Muzio v Albany, Bureau of Streets, 151 A.D.2d 883, 542 N.Y.S.2d 857, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8124 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

Exposure to secondhand smoke in workplace, to extent that injuries occur, is not exempt from exclusive remedy provisions of CLS Work Comp §§ 10, 11 and 29. Caballero v First Albany Corp., 237 A.D.2d 800, 654 N.Y.S.2d 866, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2438 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Injuries to 15-year-old junior lifeguard when he dived into shallow lake at summer camp arose out of and in course of his employment, rather than in off-duty athletic activity, for purposes of his entitlement to workers' compensation benefits, where (1) he attended lifesaving class, along with other lifeguards and some campers, just before accident, (2) class was taught by head lifeguard (his uncle) and included instruction in shallow-water diving, (3) although junior lifeguard was not required to attend class, head lifeguard invited him to do so, and (4) after class ended, head lifeguard left area, but other lifeguards remained. Kobre v Camp Mogen Avraham, 255 A.D.2d 636, 679 N.Y.S.2d 753, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11684 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Evidence supported Workers' Compensation Board's determination that claimant voluntarily removed himself from labor market by accepting voluntary buyout package, despite his claim that his decision to retire was due to his work-related disability, where buyout package was offered to all eligible employees during period when employer was actively downsizing, claimant accepted buyout package, which was financially advantageous, due to his concern that he might otherwise be laid off, and in nearly 3-year period preceding his retirement, claimant satisfactorily performed all job duties without any physical complaints or medical restrictions and never complained to his supervisor that he was physically unable to perform any task. La Rosa v IBM, 256 A.D.2d 670, 681 N.Y.S.2d 161, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12978 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Workers' Compensation Board properly ruled that claimant voluntarily withdrew herself from labor market where employer offered her position consistent with her light-duty restrictions, claimant testified that she normally would have taken position but was unable to do to child care problems resulting from her husband also working night shift until April, she subsequently began attending business career classes, and employer's representative testified that claimant was again offered position in spring but that she failed to respond to employment offer. Willis v Auxiliary Servs. Corp., 256 A.D.2d 803, 681 N.Y.S.2d 652, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13333 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Evidence supported finding that claimant's failure to accept employer's light-duty assignment did not constitute voluntary withdrawal from labor market where claimant testified that written offer of light-duty work he received did not contain description of work he would be required to perform, he further stated that he called employer but did not receive job description which he needed to obtain his doctor's clearance, employer's representative testified that light-duty position was available, but claimant's treating physician testified that claimant was not able to perform job as described in letter from employer to another physician, claimant thereafter developed major depression which was determined to be causally related to back injury that had caused his initial disability, and his treating psychiatrist testified that, as result of depression, claimant could not have returned to work for employer. Konz v Universal Joint Sales, 262 A.D.2d 819, 692 N.Y.S.2d 240, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6837 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Claimant's testimony and medical evidence of her continuing pain despite ongoing medical treatment, including surgery on her ankle, provided substantial evidence to support Workers' Compensation Board's finding that claimant's decision to retire was prompted by her compensable injury. Beehm v Educational Opportunity Ctr., 272 A.D.2d 808, 709 N.Y.S.2d 221, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5974 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Evidence supported Workers' Compensation Board's finding that it was not unreasonable for claimant to refuse par-time clerical position offered by employer and that she did not voluntarily withdraw from labor market where employer's vice-president of human resources was aware that claimant, who had no place to live in New York during winter, left for extended visit to Florida every October and he knew that her annual trip was imminent when she offered claimant par-time position, and claimant testified that once she arrived in Florida and was terminated from her employment, she actively sought new employment without success until she was classified as totally disabled and discontinued her job search. Frasch v Lakeside Mem. Hosp., 274 A.D.2d 612, 710 N.Y.S.2d 698, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7598 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

The plain design of Workmen's Compensation Law is to assure payments to injured employees regardless of fault and employers are required to secure payment of stipulated compensation by self-insurance, insurance in the state fund or with a private carrier. Cardinal v State, 102 N.Y.S.2d 895, 200 Misc. 574, 1951 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1566 (N.Y. Ct. Cl. 1951), modified, 279 A.D. 326, 109 N.Y.S.2d 818, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4667 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

Every employer must secure compensation to his employees and pay or provide compensation for their disability or death, and where the employer does so, the injured employee may claim only the statutory compensation, and where the employer does not secure compensation, the injured employee may sue for damages or claim compensation. Twitty v Donlon, 133 N.Y.S.2d 381, 1954 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2208 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1954).

When an employer by engaging insurance carrier and paying him premiums has provided compensation for his employees he has done what is required of him by this section and in effect is relieved of the provisions of the Work. Comp. Law. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v American Incinerator Co., 51 F.2d 739, 1931 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1557 (D.N.Y. 1931).

28. Employee negligence

A compensation is made without regard to the faults of the employee and the question of negligence or contributory negligence is not involved. Chludzinski v Standard Oil Co., 176 A.D. 87, 162 N.Y.S. 225, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8964 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).See also O'Brien v Luckenbach S. S. Co., 293 F. 170, 1923 U.S. App. LEXIS 1590 (2d Cir. N.Y. 1923).

Negligence of the employee in taking a course which was more dangerous than other courses furnishes no defense to the employer or insurance company. Bylow v St. Regis Paper Co., 179 A.D. 555, 166 N.Y.S. 874, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7431 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

If a dizzy spell resulting in a fall from a ladder was the result of an original injury suffered in the course of the employment, the employee's wife is entitled to death benefits, whether or not the employee was negligent in climbing the ladder. Colvin v Emmons & Whitehead, 216 A.D. 577, 215 N.Y.S. 562, 1926 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9275 (N.Y. App. Div. 1926).

The Workmen's Compensation Law does not deprive an employee or his dependents of its benefits because the acts of the employee in causing the injury may be in violation of a public statute, ordinance or regulation. A death claim was proper where the employee was killed in a collision after driving employer's car too fast around a curve and partly in wrong traffic lane. Chaffee v Effron, 1 A.D.2d 197, 149 N.Y.S.2d 115, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6261 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Claimant's negligent operation of his employer's taxicab would not bar otherwise valid claim to compensation. Bennerson v Checker Garage Service Corp., 54 A.D.2d 1042, 388 N.Y.S.2d 374, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15006 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976).

29. —Forbidden acts

In a workers' compensation proceeding arising from injuries sustained by a 16-year-old gasoline service station attendant who was burned in an explosion that occurred when he threw a lighted match into a can containing a residue of gasoline, oil and grease, the Workers' Compensation Board did not err in concluding that the injury was the result of "cumulative horseplay," and thus arose out of and in the course of employment. Lubrano v Malinet, 65 N.Y.2d 616, 491 N.Y.S.2d 148, 480 N.E.2d 737, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 14695 (N.Y. 1985).

Claimant's injuries did not arise out of and in the course of his employment, and were not compensable, where they were due to his violation of a strict and rigidly enforced rule against smoking in the building, imposed because the employer was engaged in a business requiring extensive use of highly inflammable materials, by slipping into a toilet to smoke a cigarette, throwing the match into a toilet bowl, the contents of which immediately burst into flames, notwithstanding claimant then threw a pail of sand upon the flames in an attempt to stop the conflagration and the proximate cause of his injuries was flaming liquid splashing out of the toilet bowl and upon his person as the result of tossing in the sand. Boggan v Abby Finishing Co., 11 A.D.2d 591, 200 N.Y.S.2d 488, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9948 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

A rule or regulation of the employment may be considered as abrogated as the result of an injured employee's habitual disregard of it with his employer's knowledge and acquiescence. Barrett v Al Charyn, Inc., 13 A.D.2d 863, 214 N.Y.S.2d 533, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11065 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961), aff'd, 11 N.Y.2d 849, 227 N.Y.S.2d 673, 182 N.E.2d 282, 1962 N.Y. LEXIS 1267 (N.Y. 1962).

With respect to death of a truck driver by carbon monoxide poisoning from using a charcoal burning heater improvised from two cans in his truck, the board was not required to find that deceased was violating orders in using the improvised heating device because of testimony that he had been told not to use it and warned against using it by the employer and his supervisor, where it appeared that the truck heater had been out of order for a long time, the employer had done nothing to fix it, and decedent had been using the charcoal heater openly and with the knowledge of the employer in order to keep warm. Barrett v Al Charyn, Inc., 13 A.D.2d 863, 214 N.Y.S.2d 533, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11065 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961), aff'd, 11 N.Y.2d 849, 227 N.Y.S.2d 673, 182 N.E.2d 282, 1962 N.Y. LEXIS 1267 (N.Y. 1962).

With respect to the claim of a boy, 17 years old when injured by catching his right hand in a meat grinding machine on his employer's restaurant premises, which he was operating for the first time, resulting in amputation of the hand, testimony that he was operating the machine without instructions, and without a guard which was required to be used in connection with it, because he was not told how to operate it or of what the guard consisted, would permit a board finding that he was doing the work in a forbidden manner rather than doing work forbidden by the employer, and was thereby entitled to a full schedule award plus further penalty in like amount against the employer for violating § 130 of the Labor Law. Kilgore v Fragola, 14 A.D.2d 612, 218 N.Y.S.2d 146, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9388 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 10 N.Y.2d 706, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 2073 (N.Y. 1961).

Plaintiff's behavior was outside scope of Workers' Compensation Law, even if his supervisor continued to exercise authority over him during lunch break and ensuing ride in supervisor's van, co-worker performed stunt involving his leaning backward outside van door while vehicle was moving, co-worker then returned to his seat and switched places with plaintiff, who attempted same stunt, whereupon he lost his balance, fell outside van, and was injured. Gladwell v C & S Communs., 224 A.D.2d 775, 637 N.Y.S.2d 502, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 763 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

30. Illegal activities

Evidence supported findings of Workers' Compensation Board that roofer did not deviate from or abandon his employment, and that his death arose out of and in course of employment, where he fell to his death from roof of building near jobsite, while waiting for material to arrive so work could begin, as he and coworker were removing some copper downspouts from building to sell as salvage, which was illegal conduct, but common practice in industry and tolerated by employer. Richardson v Fiedler Roofing, Inc., 67 N.Y.2d 246, 502 N.Y.S.2d 125, 493 N.E.2d 228, 1986 N.Y. LEXIS 18049 (N.Y. 1986).

Workers' compensation claimant's violations of New York City Taxi and Limousine Commission regulations by picking up street hails in a livery cab did not alter his status as an employee or the vehicle's status as a taxicab under N.Y. Veh. & Traf. Law § 148-a. Matter of Nkrumah v Thomas, 61 A.D.3d 1325, 877 N.Y.S.2d 515, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3312 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2009).

31. Intoxication

A claim by a traveling salesman for injuries alleged to have been suffered when he "slipped" as he attempted to alight from his automobile in a city street in the vicinity of his hotel will be dismissed, when the injury was occasioned solely by the intoxication of the claimant. Brynildsen v Mt. Vernon Novelty Curtain Co., 239 A.D. 566, 268 N.Y.S. 600, 1933 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8101 (N.Y. App. Div. 1933).

One whose injuries result from falling down a flight of stairs is not entitled to an award of compensation where it appears that the fall was caused by the claimant's intoxication. Hentnick v City Ice & Fuel Co., 271 A.D. 764, 64 N.Y.S.2d 612, 1946 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2897 (N.Y. App. Div. 1946).

Workers' Compensation Board properly concluded that claimant's intoxication was sole causative factor of accident that occurred while he was driving sanitation truck, where he admitted drinking "wine and liquor" before reporting for work that day, police officers testified that he was visibly intoxicated when they arrived at accident scene, co-worker testified that claimant was driving erratically prior to accident, breathalyzer test conducted after accident disclosed that he had blood alcohol content of 0.298 percent, and he ultimately pleaded guilty to felony driving under influence of alcohol. Dawson v S.P.F. Carting Co., 259 A.D.2d 910, 686 N.Y.S.2d 881, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2540 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

32. —Course of employment

A craneman on a dredge anchored in a river, and living on the dredge in quarters furnished by his employer who went ashore in the evening, after his hours of labor, for purposes entirely personal to him, and, becoming intoxicated, fell from the dock and was drowned while waiting for a rowboat maintained by the master to transport employees to and from shore, was not killed in course of his employment. Berg v Great Lakes Dredge & Dock Co., 173 A.D. 82, 158 N.Y.S. 718, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10382 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

An employee who reports for work in such state of intoxication that he is unable to perform his duties is not entitled to compensation for injuries received from a fall upon being sent ashore. In re Pope, 177 A.D. 69, 163 N.Y.S. 655, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5180 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

An award of death benefits is proper as against the contention that the employee's death was the sole result of his intoxication, where it appears that an employee's Christmas party had been in progress at which liquor was served but there was evidence that the deceased walked all right and acted all right on his way to the elevator shaft into which he fell suffering injuries which resulted in his death. Estabrook v Allied Paper Mills, Inc., 257 A.D. 1096, 14 N.Y.S.2d 653, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9229 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

A truck driver is injured in the course of his employment where his injury occurred on the route from his employer's premises where he had unloaded to the garage where the truck was kept at the end of the day, even though the accident occurred sometime later than the period required to return to the garage from the time the truck driver left his employer's premises and an examination after the truck driver's death revealed alcohol in his brain. Grabusch v Western Beer Corp., 263 A.D. 1027, 33 N.Y.S.2d 463, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7946 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

The board is justified in refusing to find that the evidence established that intoxication was the sole cause of deceased's injuries where deceased, upon coming to work at 7:30 p.m. in an intoxicated condition, was induced by the foreman to sleep in a truck cab on premises, and was later crushed against the wall by a truck being backed into the garage. Holewienko v Gimpel Bros., Inc., 268 A.D. 839, 50 N.Y.S.2d 339, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3707 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944).

An intoxicated employee was within the course of his employment when he fell from the rear of an open stake body truck going around a curve while the employee was standing on the rear of the truck urinating onto the highway. Reichel v Stokol Sales of New York, 282 A.D. 903, 124 N.Y.S.2d 787, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5373 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953), aff'd, 308 N.Y. 671, 124 N.E.2d 316, 308 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 671, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 1788 (N.Y. 1954).

At a party given by his employer, decedent engaged in a contest in which intoxicating liquors, furnished by the employer, were drunk by the cupfull. Shortly after he was taken home, decedent was found dead due to pulmonary edema and acute alcoholism. While occurrence took place on the premises of employer, there was no basis for finding for claimant, since decedent's intoxication was the result of excessive personal use of alcohol which departed from any rational relationship to his work. Herman v Greenpoint Barrel & Drum Reconditioning Co., 9 A.D.2d 572, 189 N.Y.S.2d 353, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7427 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959), aff'd, 8 N.Y.2d 880, 203 N.Y.S.2d 922, 168 N.E.2d 721, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1159 (N.Y. 1960).

Where service employee made repairs at tavern, then had a few drinks and played pool for awhile and was fatally injured while returning in employer's truck to employer's place of business, death was compensable. Sedlack v J. & A. Custom Heating & Air Conditioning, Inc., 32 A.D.2d 1020, 301 N.Y.S.2d 1002, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3400 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969), aff'd, 27 N.Y.2d 784, 315 N.Y.S.2d 850, 264 N.E.2d 344, 1970 N.Y. LEXIS 1058 (N.Y. 1970).

33. —Causation, generally

An award of compensation may be made where intoxication, though an element, was not the sole cause of the accident. May v Accident & Casualty Ins. Co., 276 A.D. 1043, 95 N.Y.S.2d 687, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5658 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

A finding by the board that intoxication was the sole cause of an accident is not required by Workmen's Comp L § 23 to include express negation of each hypothesis that might come to mind as possible contributory factor. Majune v Good Humor Corp., 26 A.D.2d 849, 273 N.Y.S.2d 819, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3341 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1966).

Intoxication must be the sole cause of an injury before it is not compensable. Brame v Alcar Trucking Co., 31 A.D.2d 881, 297 N.Y.S.2d 378, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4564 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969).

Claim for workers' compensation death benefits was properly denied where, according to police reports, police officials received CB radio report which described decedent's vehicle as proceeding in erratic manner, truck driver reported that he saw decedent's vehicle some 3 quarters of mile ahead of him with its brakes continually applied and right turn signal on, decedent's vehicle pulled off onto right side of road and then abruptly turned left across 2 northbound lanes into path of truck, blood specimen taken from decedent's body revealed blood alcohol level of 0.23 percent, and 2 bottles of alcohol were found in decedent's vehicle. Purcell v American SIP Corp., 248 A.D.2d 844, 670 N.Y.S.2d 222, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2469 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Evidence before Workers' Compensation Board did not require finding that claimant was unfit for duty at time of occurrence, and that injury sustained by him when he was shot after apprehending suspected traffic violator therefore did not arise out of course of his employment as police detective, where (1) although he was on disability sick leave, his status was equivalent to that of off-duty police officer and, as such, he was legally authorized to effect arrest, and (2) although he had blood alcohol level of 0.16 percent at time of incident, there was no showing that his injury was due solely to intoxication. Curtis v Village of Lynbrook, 277 A.D.2d 752, 716 N.Y.S.2d 163, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12254 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

34. —Causation, intervening cause

There is evidence sufficient to authorize a grant of compensation as against a contention that the employee's death was solely occasioned by intoxication, where a night watchman, whose place of work was a shanty, was found lying on the floor of the shanty about six feet from a cot which he had occupied on occasion, his right wrist had been burned slightly, the whole front end of the mattress was burned and charred, the floor was littered with cigarette butts, and an autopsy indicated that the employee's death resulted from carbon monoxide poisoning and showed the presence of .32 per cent grain alcohol in his liver. McKenna v Atlas Contractors Equipment Corp., 300 N.Y. 317, 90 N.E.2d 479, 300 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 317, 1950 N.Y. LEXIS 861 (N.Y. 1950).

An award of compensation is properly made where an employee dies of delirium tremens initially caused by alcoholism, where death was accelerated by an accidental injury. Sullivan v Industrial Engineering Co., 173 A.D. 65, 158 N.Y.S. 970, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6043 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

The board was not required to find that an employee's death was "solely occasioned by intoxication," where he died from carbon monoxide poisoning resulting from his use of a charcoal burning heater improvised from two cans in the truck which he was employed to drive, notwithstanding a partly consumed bottle of wine was found under his body and tests following autopsy disclosed 0.35 percent alcohol in his brain. Barrett v Al Charyn, Inc., 13 A.D.2d 863, 214 N.Y.S.2d 533, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11065 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961), aff'd, 11 N.Y.2d 849, 227 N.Y.S.2d 673, 182 N.E.2d 282, 1962 N.Y. LEXIS 1267 (N.Y. 1962).

35. Evidence of cause of injury or death, generally

Testimony by one witness that the deceased employee and a companion, walking along arm in arm, staggered as they proceeded down the dock a short time before both fell into the river is insufficient to show that the accident resulted from intoxication. Mata v Phoenix Const. Associates, 257 A.D. 1091, 14 N.Y.S.2d 699, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9216 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939), aff'd, 283 N.Y. 571, 27 N.E.2d 436, 283 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 571, 1940 N.Y. LEXIS 1023 (N.Y. 1940).

A finding that an injury arose out of and in the course of employment will be sustained against a contention that the injury was caused by the employee's intoxication, where there is no competent or conclusive proof to sustain the contention and the accident was unwitnessed. Barnhill v Henry Steers, Inc., 263 A.D. 1034, 33 N.Y.S.2d 433, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7967 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

Death benefits could not be denied under Work Comp L § 10 where evidence that employee's intoxication, reckless operation of vehicle and speeding were all factors contributing to fatal automobile accident was insufficient to overcome presumption contained in Work Comp L § 21, subd 4 that "the injury did not result solely from the intoxication of the injured employee." Rosebrook v Glen & Mohawk Milk Ass'n, 40 A.D.2d 928, 338 N.Y.S.2d 366, 1972 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3244 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1972), aff'd, 33 N.Y.2d 964, 353 N.Y.S.2d 734, 309 N.E.2d 133, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1754 (N.Y. 1974).

Facts that vehicle driven by decedent had been traveling at speed in excess of speed limit, that it failed to negotiate sharp turn, and that decedent had previously consumed alcohol to intoxicating extent did not establish that intoxication was sole cause of accident. Bouvia v Atlantic Testing Laboratory, 50 A.D.2d 680, 375 N.Y.S.2d 204, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12516 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975), aff'd, 41 N.Y.2d 878, 393 N.Y.S.2d 994, 362 N.E.2d 624, 1977 N.Y. LEXIS 1923 (N.Y. 1977).

A decision by the Board that the claimant's deceased husband's death following heart surgery was causally related to an industrial accident was supported by substantial evidence, where there was direct medical testimony that death was causally related to an industrial accident in which the deceased had been overcome by carbon monoxide fumes. Wechsler v Peter Scalamandre & Son, 81 A.D.2d 713, 439 N.Y.S.2d 442, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11264 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 54 N.Y.2d 606, 1981 N.Y. LEXIS 4484 (N.Y. 1981).

Even though there was conflicting medical testimony in a workmen's compensation case, substantial evidence supported the Board's decision that the claimant's injury had been causally related to work, since the Board was free to choose which experts to credit and reject. Bilotta v Chevrolet-Tonawanda Div., G.M.C., 81 A.D.2d 718, 439 N.Y.S.2d 465, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11271 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981).

Despite employee's claim that her nose bleeds resulted from her employer's air conditioning system, which allegedly aggravated her preexisting environmental sensitivities, Workers' Compensation Board properly found that normal air flow in employee's office did not create seriously adverse environmental condition and that her reaction to it was not accidental injury where (1) employer's evidence rebutted presumptions in CLS Work Comp § 21, (2) employer's medical expert disputed employee's diagnosis of multiple chemical and environmental sensitivities, found no physiological cause for her condition, and opined that she was capable of working, and (3) no unusual environmental condition or extraordinary event was alleged to have caused injury. Friedlander v New York City Health & Hosp. Corp., 246 A.D.2d 937, 667 N.Y.S.2d 847, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 750 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

Hotel floor supervisor's claim for workers' compensation benefits would not be disallowed under CLS Work Comp § 10 where (1) her injury occurred one week after altercation with another employee that led to supervisor's termination, and (2) relationship between altercation and injury, which occurred when she returned to pick up her paycheck and slipped and fell on stairs, was tenuous at best. Wint v Hotel Waldorf Astoria, 251 A.D.2d 696, 674 N.Y.S.2d 146, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6458 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

36. Blood or organ samples

A finding of three and eight-tenths per cent alcohol in the brain of the decedent does not enable a doctor to characterize the behavior of the decedent before his death. Bol v Guaranteed Sanitation, Inc., 251 A.D. 757, 295 N.Y.S. 173, 1937 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7396 (N.Y. App. Div. 1937).

An award of compensation is proper where an employee suffered an unwitnessed fatal fall, even though an autopsy showed $^{34}/_{100}$ per cent alcohol in his brain, which would produce intoxication, impaired senses, and staggering, in view of the presumption in subdivision 4 of § 21 which provides that in the absence of substantial evidence to the contrary, an accident does not result solely from intoxication. May v Accident & Casualty Ins. Co., 276 A.D. 1043, 95 N.Y.S.2d 687, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5658 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

Decedent was seen driving a vehicle at a fast rate of speed, suddenly applying his brakes when there were no other vehicles in sight and crashed into a tree. A subsequent examination disclosed a blood alcoholic content of .29 percent. This proof of intoxication and the manner in which the accident happened was sufficient to overcome the presumption of § 21 and an award was denied. Calka v Mamaroneck Lodge BPOE, 285 A.D. 1093, 139 N.Y.S.2d 316, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6756 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

37. Suicide

An award of compensation will be sustained as for an accidental injury, where the deceased employee left his machine and was last seen proceeding to the men's room and in a manner unknown fell from a large open window in the men's room, the ledge of which was just above the deceased employee's knee and the employer's first report of injury described the accident as "jumped or fell from lavatory window" as against a claim by the employer that the decedent's death was a suicide. Horn v Louis Goldstein Co., 265 A.D. 1022, 38 N.Y.S.2d 1010, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6666 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943).

Where one employed as an electrician from 12:15 a.m. to 8:45 a.m. was last seen alive around 1:10 a.m. and was found dead on the ground outside of his employer's building at 7 a.m. an award of compensation is proper as against a claim of suicide, where no one witnessed the accident. McAvoy v E. R. Squibb & Sons, 269 A.D. 801, 55 N.Y.S.2d 50, 1945 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3911 (N.Y. App. Div. 1945).

The board was wrong when it found that the presumption created by sub 3 of this section had been overcome where the proof showed that the decedent, an inside office worker, had been in poor health and knew that he had a heart ailment, that it would have been a physical impossibility for him to have fallen from a window and where the only inference available from the facts was that he had committed suicide. McLaughlin v John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co., 282 A.D. 782, 123 N.Y.S.2d 14, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4952 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

The presumption against suicide was not overcome where proof showed that decedent was found on the sidewalk in front of employer's premises and with fractures of skull, ribs and extremities and that he was last seen on the seventh floor from which there was an open window out of which decedent could have fallen. Hendry v National Biscuit Co., 285 A.D. 1104, 139 N.Y.S.2d 363, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6774 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

Workers' Compensation Board did not err in concluding that decedent's death by suicide arose out of and in course of his employment as business manager with local office of labor union where expert medical evidence (including testimony and report of impartial specialist in psychiatry) demonstrated that, despite absence of any prior manifestations of mental illness, decedent's frustration, concern and sense of loss due to merger of 2 local offices caused or contributed to his progressive depressive illness, and that his suicide was "significant feature" of his depressive illness. Miller v IBEW Local 631, 237 A.D.2d 641, 654 N.Y.S.2d 460, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2254 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Board applied incorrect legal standard in ruling that work related injury, even if significant contributing factor in decedent's emotional decline and ensuing suicide, was legally insufficient to sustain award of benefits because diagnosis of claimant was severe depression rather than "psychosis" or "derangement of the mind"; decision was reversed and matter remitted to Workers' Compensation Board for further proceedings. Altes v Petrocelli Elec. Co., 270 A.D.2d 767, 704 N.Y.S.2d 372, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3100 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

Workers' Compensation Board properly ruled that a police officer's death was the result of her deliberate intention to injure herself and disallowed her surviving spouse's claim for death benefits because the employer offered substantial evidence that the officer committed suicide, overcoming the statutory presumptions, and that the officer's suicide did not result from insanity, brain derangement, or a pattern of mental deterioration caused by a work-related injury, and the Board, in the absence of any non-speculative evidence, was entitled to reject theoretical explanations for the officer's unexplained suicide. Matter of Delacruz v Incorporated Vil. of Freeport, 175 A.D.3d 1739, 109 N.Y.S.3d 499, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6852 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2019), app. denied, 35 N.Y.3d 902, 147 N.E.3d 580, 2020 N.Y. LEXIS 802 (N.Y. 2020).

38. —Effect of insanity

If injury causes insanity which in turn causes suicide, death benefits may be awarded under the provisions of this section where suicide is not result of discouragement, of melancholy or other sane conditions, but of brain derangement caused by injury. Delinousha v National Biscuit Co., 248 N.Y. 93, 161 N.E. 431, 248 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 93, 1928 N.Y. LEXIS 1228 (N.Y. 1928).; Pushkarowitz v A. & M. Kramer, 275 A.D. 875, 88 N.Y.S.2d 885, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4851 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949), aff'd, 300 N.Y. 637, 90 N.E.2d 494, 300 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 637, 1950 N.Y. LEXIS 1431 (N.Y. 1950).

Suicide is the proximate and direct result of accidental injuries where the decedent was injured while delivering packages for his employer when he slipped and fell on ice steps and struck his head, suffering injuries in the nature of a traumatic psychosis, changes in brain function, concussion of the brain, change of personality, confusion, dizziness and a sense of pushing forward, as well as frequent crying spells. Lockwood v Luckey Platt & Co., 267 A.D. 930, 46 N.Y.S.2d 937, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5562 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944).

An award of compensation is proper where the medical testimony indicates that the suicide of the employee was induced by psychosis and melancholia which followed an industrial accident. Commissioner of Taxation & Finance v Hedstrom-Spaulding, Inc., 272 A.D. 857, 70 N.Y.S.2d 362, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3926 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, McGovern v Curran, 297 N.Y. 479, 74 N.E.2d 184, 297 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 479, 1947 N.Y. LEXIS 988 (N.Y. 1947).. See also Baker v Martirano, 278 A.D. 597, 101 N.Y.S.2d 777, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4064 (N.Y. App. Div.), app. dismissed, 302 N.Y. 701, 98 N.E.2d 491, 302 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 701, 1951 N.Y. LEXIS 866 (N.Y. 1951).; Blau v Goldshare Restaurant, 278 A.D. 595, 102 N.Y.S.2d 84, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4061 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

An award of death benefits may not be made where an employee committed suicide after suffering an injury requiring the amputation of part of his left hand, where there was no competent medical testimony to sustain a finding that the employee was suffering from a mental derangement in the nature of a disease. Wessells v Lockport Cotton Batting Co., 275 A.D. 733, 87 N.Y.S.2d 186, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4238 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1949).

Death benefits are properly payable to the dependents of an employee who contracted encephalitis in the course of his employment and as the result thereof suffered with headaches, insomnia, and change of personality, and ultimately a brain derangement which caused him to commit suicide. O'Donnell v Socony Vacuum Oil Co., 276 A.D. 879, 93 N.Y.S.2d 778, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3666 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

A complaint by employees against their employer seeking damages for injuries sustained as the result of alleged wanton, intentional, unlawful and affirmative wrongful acts in removing certain safety guards from machines operated by plaintiffs, as, in effect, constituting assaults on plaintiffs by defendant, was dismissed on the ground that the sole remedy of plaintiffs was under the Workmen's Compensation Law, there being no allegation that the guards were removed with deliberate intent to injure plaintiffs. Santiago v Brill Monfort Co., 11 A.D.2d 1041, 205 N.Y.S.2d 919, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7870 (N.Y. App. Div. 2d Dep't 1960), aff'd, 10 N.Y.2d 718, 219 N.Y.S.2d 266, 176 N.E.2d 835, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1138 (N.Y. 1961).

Workman's claim that employer acted wilfully and wantonly in his negligent direction to plaintiff workman to use an automobile lift at a time when employer knew such lift was defective, and employer's failure to warn workman of the unsafe condition of the lift although employer was aware of the fact, and directing workman to use a safety device to operate the lift which employer knew to be improper and unsafe did not state a cause of action for intentional injury by employer where said complaint could not be interpreted to allege that employer intentionally caused the lift to collapse on plaintiff workman, nor did said complaint state a claim within the exception to the rule of exclusivity prescribed by Workmen's Compensation Law § 10 where there was no allegation or proof pursuant to Workmen's Compensation Law § 11 that employer failed to secure compensation. Finch v Swingly, 42 A.D.2d 1035, 348 N.Y.S.2d 266, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3295 (N.Y. App. Div. 4th Dep't 1973).

Workers' Compensation Board properly ruled that claimant's injuries were result of her deliberate intention to injure herself where, inter alia, accident occurred on straight section of road on clear and sunny day, road was dry, there was no evidence that claimant's automobile malfunctioned, and there were no skid marks to indicate she took evasive action, carrier's accident reconstructionist concluded that accident was not result of avoidance maneuver, there were reports and testimony of 2 psychiatrists, one of whom examined claimant and both of whom reviewed her psychiatric records—including her hospitalization for which she was discharged just 15 days prior to accident—reflecting that she suffered serious psychotic illness, characterized by paranoid delusions along with depressive symptoms, claimant had history of medication noncompliance and continued to have psychotic thoughts following her recent discharge, and both psychiatrists opined that patients with claimant's psychiatric illnesses were known to be suicidal and were of view that her accident was deliberate and nonaccidental, result of delusional and suicidal thinking. Mackenzie v Management Recruiters, 271 A.D.2d 822, 706 N.Y.S.2d 247, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4445 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 95 N.Y.2d 768, 721 N.Y.S.2d 605, 744 N.E.2d 141, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 3586 (N.Y. 2000).

Where complaint failed to allege that assault by plaintiff's fellow employee was made at the direction of the corporate defendant or was thereafter ratified by the defendant, the liability of the corporate-employer was exclusively contained in Workmen's Compensation Law § 11. Champlin v Chemical Corn Exchange Bank, 158 N.Y.S.2d 138 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1956).

40. —Course of employment

Where evidence indicated that parking lot employee quit work early in order to drive to his sister's, who lived 30 minutes away from parking lot by automobile, and that employee, after parking car and while walking to his sister's, was shot in the back by unknown assailant who did not take $250 in cash from employee's wallet and where there was no evidence of anything to connect shooting of employee with his employment at parking lot other than testimony that employee had stated that his assailant had demanded money bag containing receipts which employee usually deposited each night in bank located across street from parking lot, shooting did not arise "in the course of the employment." Malacarne v Yonkers Parking Authority, 41 N.Y.2d 189, 391 N.Y.S.2d 402, 359 N.E.2d 992, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 3220 (N.Y. 1976).

Employers of retail employees who handle money on premises of their employer and whose jobs include short trips to the bank during the work day in order to exchange money or make a deposit do not become subject to liability in workmen's compensation if, at places and times when employees are away from work, employees are attacked by predators who hope that employees are then in possession of employers' money, for scope of liability under Workmen's Compensation Law is fixed by range of the employment and not by the misconceptions of the predators. Malacarne v Yonkers Parking Authority, 41 N.Y.2d 189, 391 N.Y.S.2d 402, 359 N.E.2d 992, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 3220 (N.Y. 1976).

Where the claimant, an employee in a lumber mill, was accidently struck by a rail which was being handled by a fellow servant which caused the claimant to become angry, whereupon he kicked the co-employee who in turn retaliated, inflicting physical injuries upon the claimant, an award of compensation will be denied since, in incurring the injury, the claimant was not promoting his master's interest but was rather gratifying a personal animosity. Griffin v A. Roberson & Son, 176 A.D. 6, 162 N.Y.S. 313, 1916 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8975 (N.Y. App. Div. 1916).

Where a person employed to drive an automobile truck and to unload the same made a physical attack upon another employee similarly engaged, owing to a quarrel in respect to priority in unloading their trucks, and was killed as a result of a blow inflicted by his fellow servant, the injury was not received while the workman was doing the duty he was employed to perform and was not a natural incident of the work. Stillwagon v Callan Bros., Inc. (1918) 183 App Div 141, 170 NYS 677, affd (1918) 224 NY 714, 121 NE 893.. See also Mazarredo v Levine, 274 A.D. 122, 80 N.Y.S.2d 237, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3023 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

Claimant does not receive injuries arising out of and in course of his employment, where it appears that when a fellow-servant indulged in a little horseplay with claimant by pulling at his blouse, claimant attempted to strike the other with a milk bottle and, failing in that, attempted to bite him and then picked up a cobblestone, when the other servant, in self-protection, struck claimant causing injuries which are foundation for claim. Stein v Williams Printing Co., 195 A.D. 336, 186 N.Y.S. 705, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4743 (N.Y. App. Div. 1921).

A Western Union messenger boy, newly hired as such, injured in a fight with another messenger boy suffers injuries arising out of and in the course of his employment, where a difference of opinion of the boys as to their relative pugilistic ability, the rivalry it engendered, and the desire for dominance and respect within the ranks of their fellow employees led to the contest, rather than reasons personal to them. Chanin v Western Union Tel. Co., 271 A.D. 763, 64 N.Y.S.2d 670, 1946 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2896 (N.Y. App. Div. 1946).

There being substantial evidence to support a board finding that claimant, a taxicab driver, took himself out of the realm of his employment when he got out of his cab and assaulted another motorist following a "near" accident, disallowance of compensation because the claim did not arise out of and in course of employment was sustained. Goldfine v Barsol Cab Operating Co., 19 A.D.2d 672, 241 N.Y.S.2d 273, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3474 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

Death of employee shot by fellow worker was presumed to have arisen out of the employment, despite the lack of affirmative evidence to refute fellow employee's plea of self-defense; Workmen's Compensation Board could properly find that neither the self-serving testimony of the assailant, nor the testimony of a building superintendent that he found a baseball bat near deceased's body, was sufficient to overcome the presumption created by Workmen's Compensation Law § 21. Kaylor v 133 East 80th Street Corp., 43 A.D.2d 999, 352 N.Y.S.2d 62, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5758 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

Workers' Compensation Board properly determined that disabling wound sustained by claimant was intentionally inflicted by his wife, and arose from their purely personal differences without any nexus to his employment as police officer or performance of his job duties, even though claimant was on duty at time of incident, where claimant's wife shot him with his service revolver during domestic dispute that erupted during their lunch together. Robinson v Village of Catskill Police Dep't, 209 A.D.2d 748, 617 N.Y.S.2d 975, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10832 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1994), app. denied, 85 N.Y.2d 810, 628 N.Y.S.2d 53, 651 N.E.2d 921, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 1460 (N.Y. 1995).

Workers' Compensation Board improperly ruled that claimant's injury arose out of and in course of her employment as podiatrist's assistant where undisputed evidence showed that claimant was on break at her place of employment when her sister entered room and repeatedly struck her with hammer, such assault stemmed from purely personal differences between claimant and her sister and was unrelated to claimant's work or performance of her job duties, and there were no previous violent incidents. McMillan v Dodsworth, 254 A.D.2d 619, 679 N.Y.S.2d 722, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11212 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

New York Workers' Compensation Board erred in denying workers' compensation benefits to an injured employee as no evidence of willful intention existed so as to deny coverage and benefits to the employee who was injured at work in an altercation with a supervisor over the employee's work. Bell v Utica Corp., 306 A.D.2d 604, 759 N.Y.S.2d 614, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6325 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

41. —Injury to aggressor

Where an attack by the decedent was not initiated for any purpose of the master but to gratify his own personal desires, the injury was "occasioned by willful intention of the injured employee to bring about the injury or death of himself or another," etc., within the meaning of this section. Stillwagon v Callan Bros., Inc., 183 A.D. 141, 170 N.Y.S. 677, 1918 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5086 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 224 N.Y. 714, 121 N.E. 893, 224 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 714, 1918 N.Y. LEXIS 1122 (N.Y. 1918).

An employee who, while engaged in his regular employment is injured in a fight with a fellow employee arising over a dispute concerning the work, is entitled to compensation where there is evidence sufficient to sustain a finding that the claimant was not the aggressor. Wilson v American Valve Co., 268 A.D. 841, 50 N.Y.S.2d 356, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3712 (N.Y. App. Div.), reh'g denied, 268 A.D. 935, 51 N.Y.S.2d 747, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4309 (N.Y. App. Div. 1944).

Where death or injury is a by-product of associating men in close contacts, compensation awards are proper even to aggressors. Commissioner of Taxation & Finance v Bronx Hospital, 276 A.D. 708, 97 N.Y.S.2d 120, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4950 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

The Workmen's Compensation Law contains no defense that an aggressor or participant is to be denied recovery in cases of malicious assaults; its insertion is purely judicial and sustained only by the court's conclusion that culpable persons should not benefit by their own wrong—the very defense that the compensation act rejects. Commissioner of Taxation & Finance v Bronx Hospital, 276 A.D. 708, 97 N.Y.S.2d 120, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4950 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

There was substantial evidence to support decision by Workers' Compensation Board denying death benefits to decedent's widow after he was killed by co-worker during fight at work, in light of fact that decedent had brought weapon to work and then engaged in totally unprovoked, vicious, sustained attack on co-worker despite efforts of others to intervene; such actions were sufficient to establish that decedent had willful intent to injure, and since co-worker acted only in self-defense, it was not inconsistent for board to allow co-worker's compensation claim and deny claimant's. Matias v Donmoor, Inc., 133 A.D.2d 998, 521 N.Y.S.2d 149, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52022 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987).

42. Psychological or nervous injury

Psychological or nervous injury precipitated by psychic trauma arising out of and in course of employment is compensable under Workmen's Compensation Law to same extent as physical injury. Wolfe v Sibley, Lindsay & Curr Co., 36 N.Y.2d 505, 369 N.Y.S.2d 637, 330 N.E.2d 603, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 1847 (N.Y. 1975).

Where employee had assumed duties of her superior because of his nervous condition, had attempted to comfort him and had found his body immediately following his suicide in his office, employee was entitled to workmen's compensation benefits for psychological disability resulting from severe guilt feelings engendered by her superior's suicide. Wolfe v Sibley, Lindsay & Curr Co., 36 N.Y.2d 505, 369 N.Y.S.2d 637, 330 N.E.2d 603, 1975 N.Y. LEXIS 1847 (N.Y. 1975).

School bus driver suffered her own "accidental injuries" as "active participant" within meaning of Workmen's Compensation Law when, while driving her bus, she came on automobile accident in which 2 school children known to her were killed, she remained at scene with her busload of children until emergency assistance arrived, and she later developed symptoms of post-traumatic stress disorder due to having witnessed aftermath of accident. Wood v Laidlaw Transit, Inc., 77 N.Y.2d 79, 564 N.Y.S.2d 704, 565 N.E.2d 1255, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 4419 (N.Y. 1990).

Supermarket manager was not barred by exclusionary language of CLS Work Comp § 2(7) from receiving workers' compensation benefits on ground that his panic disorder was direct consequence of good faith personnel decisions inasmuch as employer's personnel decisions did not target him directly, but only contributed indirectly to his work-related stress by forcing him to work longer hours, take more responsibility, and manage store that was not performing well. DePaoli v Great A & P Tea Co., 94 N.Y.2d 377, 704 N.Y.S.2d 527, 725 N.E.2d 1089, 2000 N.Y. LEXIS 81 (N.Y. 2000).

A firefighter's anxiety neurosis, that he believed he was a perfectionist who could not "roll with the punches," he felt that some of his fellow fire fighters were laughing at him because he was such a conscientious worker, and, most significant, he felt he was blamed for the death of an occupant of a burning house even though he was without fault, was an occupational disease under Work Comp Law § 3(2) but, if related to his occupation in general terms, the disorder might be accidental as defined in Work Comp Law § 2(7) and Work Comp Law § 10. Hennige v Fairview Fire Dist., 99 A.D.2d 158, 472 N.Y.S.2d 204, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16534 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1984).

Court would affirm determination awarding claimant workers' compensation benefits as result of anxiety depression precipitated by co-worker's disparaging racial remarks and taunts concerning claimant's infertility; such remarks constituted more than usual irritations and differences to which all workers are occasionally subject, and fact that claimant was particularly sensitive about her infertility did not undermine award of benefits. Kaliski v Fairchild Republic Co., 151 A.D.2d 867, 542 N.Y.S.2d 841, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7513 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. dismissed, 75 N.Y.2d 765, 551 N.Y.S.2d 907, 551 N.E.2d 108, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 4433 (N.Y. 1989), aff'd, 76 N.Y.2d 1002, 564 N.Y.S.2d 714, 565 N.E.2d 1265, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 4507 (N.Y. 1990).

Conclusion of Workers' Compensation Board that death of claimant's decedent was causally related to his work was supported by evidence in record, which included testimony showing that when door locks on his car jammed, decedent, extremely upset that he might miss business appointment, drove away holding driver's side door shut and was found shortly thereafter slumped over wheel, expert medical testimony indicating that stress caused by door lock problem was direct cause of decedent's death. Biller v State Ins. Fund, 186 A.D.2d 300, 587 N.Y.S.2d 793, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10602 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1992).

Psychological or nervous injury precipitated by psychic trauma is compensable under Workers' Compensation Law, even when cause adversely affects claimant only due to her own particular sensitivity, and even though claimant has preexisting history of psychological illness. Smith v Steuben County Highway Dep't, 199 A.D.2d 590, 604 N.Y.S.2d 352, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11201 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1993).

Court would affirm determination that claimant was not eligible for workers' compensation benefits because his disabling mental condition was not employment related where hearing testimony by claimant, 3 physicians, employer's regional manager, and its sales manager was conflicting as to whether claimant's depression and anxiety were caused by his personal circumstances, combined with normal stress at work resulting from sluggish economy, or whether his emotional problems were direct result of unusually intense stress in workplace. Troy v Prudential Ins. Co., 233 A.D.2d 635, 649 N.Y.S.2d 746, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11761 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

Evidence supported board's decision that claimant did not suffer work-related accident or occupational disease and accordingly was not entitled to receive workers' compensation benefits, where she had significant history of childhood physical, sexual and emotional abuse, and experts disagreed as to what event or events (work-related or otherwise) caused her to fail to properly perform her work-related functions. Gullo v Southern Erie Clinical Servs., 258 A.D.2d 689, 687 N.Y.S.2d 440, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 957 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Workers' Compensation Law Judge properly dismissed claimant's application for benefits arising out of his alleged psychiatric injury during his employment as projectionist at movie theater where his employer testified that he had no contact whatsoever with claimant during 2 days of his employment, his supervisor testified that he did not harass claimant although he did chide him for leaving projection booth during film showings and for drinking alcoholic beverages on job, and claimant's psychiatrist testified that he had been treated for psychiatric problems prior to employment in question. Kessler v Fairmont Theatre Inc., 262 A.D.2d 888, 692 N.Y.S.2d 500, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7477 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. dismissed, 93 N.Y.2d 1039, 697 N.Y.S.2d 567, 719 N.E.2d 928, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 2860 (N.Y. 1999), app. denied, 94 N.Y.2d 756, 703 N.Y.S.2d 73, 724 N.E.2d 769, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 3959 (N.Y. 1999).

Workers' Compensation Board properly ruled that claimant did not sustain compensable injury for work-related stress stemming from her demotion and corresponding reassignment at her place of employment where she conceded that she could be "bumped back by the incumbent" to her former position, and although employer handled her demotion poorly, its actions did not rise to level of bad faith. Miles v State Ins. Fund, 267 A.D.2d 511, 698 N.Y.S.2d 561, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12483 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Employer's action of informing State Insurance Department of claimant's prior arrest for drug possession, against claimant's wishes, constituted lawful personnel decision undertaken in good faith where obtaining license from department was necessary requirement of claimant's employment, and failure to disclose relevant information to department could potentially jeopardize employer's own license; thus, workers' compensation claim predicated on stress associated with employer's decision was barred by CLS Work Comp § 2(7). Kinney v Prudential Ins. Co., 270 A.D.2d

Claimant, agency services representative with Department of Labor, was properly denied Workers' Compensation benefits where it was undisputed that event triggering her psychic injury was new manager's reassignment of claimant to particularly stressful work position, Workers' Compensation Board properly concluded that "no evidence (was) submitted that the actions taken by the employer were taken in bad faith," and claimant acknowledged that new manager had no ill feelings toward her and that employer did not "set out to harm or injure any of its employees." Section 6-n of the General Municipal Law, which authorizes municipalities to set up a liability and casualty reserve fund, does not apply to Workers' Compensation claims. Those claims are governed by General Municipal Law, § 6-j. Unlike section 6-n, section 6-j does not require municipalities to obtain court approval for the settlement of claims. Therefore, a county need not obtain court approval of a lump sum settlement of a Workers' Compensation claim. 1981 NY Ops Atty Gen April 20 (informal).

1. Notwithstanding other provisions of this chapter, when an application for compensation is made by an employee or for death benefits in behalf of the dependents of a deceased employee, and the employer has secured the payment of compensation in accordance with section fifty of this chapter, (1) after a lapse of seven years from the date of the injury or death and claim for compensation previously has been disallowed or claim has been otherwise disposed of without an award of compensation, or (2)

after a lapse of seven years from the date of the injury or death and also a lapse of three years from the date of the last payment of compensation, or (3) where death resulting from the injury shall occur after the time limited by the foregoing provisions of (1) or (2) shall have elapsed, subject to the provisions of section one hundred twenty-three of this chapter, testimony may be taken, either directly or through a referee and if an award is made it shall be against the special fund provided by this section. Such an application for compensation or death benefits must be made on a form prescribed by the chair for that purpose and must, if a change in condition is claimed, be accompanied by a verified medical or surgical report setting forth facts on which the board may order a hearing.

1-a. Any award which shall be made against such special fund after the effective date of this act upon such an application for compensation or death benefits shall not be retroactive for a period of disability or for death benefits longer than the two years immediately preceding the date of filing of such application. No application by a self-insured employer or an insurance carrier for transfer of liability of a claim to the fund for reopened cases shall be accepted by the board on or after the first day of January, two thousand fourteen except that the board may make a finding after such date pursuant to section twenty-three of this article upon a timely application for review.

2. Claims for further services or treatment rendered or supplies furnished as required by section thirteen hereof shall be paid from such fund when such service, treatment or supplies shall be authorized by the chairman. In cases where a surgical operation has previously been authorized by the board pursuant to the provisions of subdivision five of section thirteen-a of this chapter, no further authorization therefor by the chairman under this section shall be required. The provisions of this chapter with respect to procedure and the right to appeal shall be preserved to the claimant and to the employer originally liable for the payment of compensation and to such fund through its representative as hereinafter provided.

3. Any awards so made shall be payable out of the special fund heretofore created for such purpose, which fund is hereby continued and shall be known as the fund for reopened cases. The employer, or, if insured, his insurance carrier shall pay into such fund, or, in the case of awards made on or after July first, nineteen hundred sixty-nine, either into such fund or the uninsured employers' fund under section twenty-six-a of this article in accordance with the provisions thereof, for every case of injury causing death for which there are no persons entitled to compensation the sum of three hundred dollars where such injury occurred prior to July first, nineteen hundred forty and the sum of one thousand dollars where such injury shall occur on or after said date and prior to April first, nineteen hundred forty-five, and the sum of fifteen hundred dollars where such injury shall occur on or after April first, nineteen hundred forty-five and prior to September first, nineteen hundred seventy-eight and the sum of three thousand dollars where such injury shall occur on or after September first, nineteen hundred seventy-eight, and in each case of death resulting from injury sustained on or after July first, nineteen hundred forty and prior to September first, nineteen hundred seventy-eight, where there are persons entitled to compensation but the total amount of such compensation is less than two thousand dollars exclusive of funeral benefits, the employer, or, if insured, his insurance carrier, shall pay into such fund, or, in the case of awards made on or after July first, nineteen hundred sixty-nine and prior to September first, nineteen hundred seventy-eight, either into such fund or the uninsured employers' fund under section twenty-six-a of this article in accordance with the provisions thereof, the difference between the sum of two thousand dollars and the compensation, exclusive of funeral benefits, and in each case of death resulting from injury sustained on or after September first, nineteen hundred seventy-eight, the employer, or if insured, his insurance carrier shall pay into such fund or the uninsured employers' fund under section twenty-six-a of this article in accordance with the provisions thereof, the difference between the sum of five thousand dollars and the compensation, exclusive of funeral benefits actually paid to or for the dependents of the deceased employee together with any expense charge required by section twenty-seven of this article; provided, however, that where death shall occur subsequent to the periods limited by subdivision one of this section no payment into such special fund nor to the special fund provided by subdivision nine of section fifteen nor to the uninsured employers' fund provided by section twenty-six-a of this article shall be required. In addition to the assessments made against all insurance carriers for the expenses of administering this chapter provided for under the provisions of section one hundred fifty-one of this chapter, and the payments above provided, the employer, or, if insured, his insurance carrier, shall pay the sum of five dollars into said fund for each case in which an award is made pursuant to the provisions of paragraphs a to s inclusive of subdivision three of section fifteen of this chapter, by reason of injury sustained between July first, nineteen hundred forty and June thirtieth, nineteen hundred forty-two, both dates inclusive, and the sum of ten dollars for each such case by reason of injury sustained between July first, nineteen hundred forty-two and June thirtieth, nineteen hundred fifty, both dates inclusive, which payment shall be in addition to any payment of compensation to the injured employee as provided in this chapter.

There shall be maintained in the special fund at all times assets at least equal in value to the sum of (1) the value of awards charged against such fund,

(2) the value of all claims that have been reopened by the board as a charge against such fund but as to which awards have not yet been made, (3) effective January first, nineteen hundred seventy-one, the value of total supplemental benefits to be paid from such fund as reimbursement pursuant to subdivision nine of this section, and (4) a reserve equal to ten per cent of the sum of items (1), (2) and (3) of this paragraph. Annually, as soon as practicable after January first in each year, the chair shall ascertain the condition of the fund and whenever the assets shall fall below the prescribed minimum as herein provided the chair shall collect an amount sufficient to restore the fund to the prescribed minimum.

Commencing on the first of January, two thousand fourteen, the amount collected from all employers required to obtain workers' compensation coverage to maintain the financial integrity of the fund may be paid over a period of time at the discretion of the chair based upon an analysis of the financial condition of the fund. Such payment as determined by the chair shall be included in the assessment rate established pursuant to subdivision two of section one hundred fifty-one of this chapter. The chair shall promulgate regulations to administer claims whose liability has been transferred to the fund for reopened cases. Such regulations may include exercise of the chair's authority to administer existing claims, to procure management for those claims, or to sell such liability. The chair may examine into the condition of the fund at any time on his or her own initiative or on request of the attorney of the fund.

The provisions of this subdivision shall not apply with respect to policies containing coverage pursuant to section thirty-four hundred twenty of the insurance law relating to every policy providing comprehensive personal liability insurance on a one, two, three or four family owner-occupied dwelling.

4. The commissioner of taxation and finance shall be the custodian of such special fund for reopened cases and shall invest any surplus monies thereof in securities which constitute legal investments for savings banks under the laws of this state and in interest bearing certificates of deposit of a bank or trust company located and authorized to do business in this state or of a national bank located in this state secured by a pledge of direct obligations of the United States or of the state of New York in an amount equal to the amount of such certificates of deposit, and may sell any of the securities or certificates of deposit in which such fund is invested, if necessary for the proper administration or in the best interest of such fund. Disbursements from such fund for compensation provided by this section shall be paid by the commissioner of taxation and finance upon vouchers signed by the chairman.

The commissioner of taxation and finance, as custodian of such fund, annually as soon as practicable after January first, shall furnish to the chairman a statement of the fund, setting forth the balance of monies in the said fund as of the beginning of the year, the income of the fund, a summary of payments out of the fund on account of compensation ordered to be paid by the board, medical and other expense, and all other charges against the fund, and setting forth the balance of the fund remaining to its credit on December thirty-first. Such statement shall be open to public inspection in the office of the chairman, and a copy thereof shall be transmitted by the chairman to the superintendent of financial services. The superintendent of financial services may examine into the condition of such fund at any time on his own initiative or on request of the chairman or representative of the fund. He shall verify the receipts and disbursements of the fund, and shall ascertain the liability of the fund upon all cases in which awards of compensation have been made and charged against said fund and shall render a report of such facts to the chairman. Such report shall also be open to public inspection in the office of the chairman.

5. For applications by self-insured employers or insurance carriers for transfer of liability for compensation to the fund for reopened cases under this section, received by the board prior to the first day of January, two thousand fourteen, the chair shall appoint an attorney in such proceedings to represent such fund in proceedings brought to enforce a claim against such fund. Such attorney may apply to the chair for authority to hire such medical or other experts and to defray the expense thereof and of such witnesses as are necessary to a proper defense of the application within an amount in the discretion of the chair and, if authorized, it shall be a charge against the special fund provided herein.

6. Notwithstanding any other provision of this chapter, no award of compensation or death benefits shall be made against said special fund or against an employer or an insurance carrier where application therefor is made after a lapse of eighteen years from the date of the injury or death and also a lapse of eight years from the date of the last payment of compensation.

7. For the purposes of this section the date of the last payment of compensation shall be deemed to mean the date of actual payment of the last installment of compensation previously awarded; provided, however, that where the case is disposed of by the payment of a lump sum, the date of last payment for the purpose of this section shall be considered as the date to which the amount paid in the lump sum settlement would extend if the award had been made on the date the lump sum payment was approved at the maximum compensation rate which is warranted by the employee's earning capacity as determined by the board under section fifteen of this chapter.

8. The provisions of this section shall not apply to any open case pending before the board on April twenty-fourth, nineteen hundred thirty-three or to any closed case in which an application for reopening was received prior to such date, or to awards for deficiency compensation made pursuant to section twenty-nine of this chapter, nor shall it apply during the pendency of an appeal provided for by section twenty-three of this chapter; provided, however, that such provisions shall be retroactive in effect except as to payments into the special fund provided for an employer or his insurance carrier, and except as otherwise herein provided.

9. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of this chapter, every employee who is receiving workers' compensation under this chapter for a permanent and total disability resulting from an accidental injury or occupational disablement which occurred prior to January first, nineteen hundred seventy-nine and every widow or widower who is receiving death benefits under this chapter on account of the death of his or her spouse prior to January first, nineteen hundred seventy-nine shall receive supplemental benefits upon application therefor to the board, which shall be payable in the first instance by the employer or its insurance carrier in accordance with the provisions of this subdivision. These supplemental benefits shall commence on July first, nineteen hundred ninety and shall continue during the period of such permanent total disability or entitlement to death benefits.

(b) If such employee, widow or widower is receiving the statutory maximum benefit in effect at the time of the accidental injury or death, the supplemental benefit shall be an amount which, when added to the regular benefit established for the case, shall equal the maximum weekly benefit in effect for a permanently totally disabled employee, widow or widower whose claim arose on January first, nineteen hundred seventy-nine.

(c) If such employee, widow or widower is receiving a weekly benefit which is less than the statutory maximum benefit which was in effect on the date of the accidental injury or death, the supplemental benefit shall be an amount equal to the difference between the regular benefit being received and a percentage of the maximum benefit in effect on January first, nineteen hundred seventy-nine, determined by multiplying the latter benefit by a fraction, the numerator of which is the regular benefit and the denominator of which is the statutory maximum benefit in effect at the time of the accidental injury or death.

(d) In the event the supplemental benefit computed under this subdivision amounts to less than five dollars, then the supplemental benefit allowed shall be a minimum of five dollars, less the amount, if any, by which the combination of such supplemental benefit and the regular benefit exceeds the maximum weekly benefit in effect for a permanently totally disabled employee, widow or widower whose claim arose on January first, nineteen hundred seventy-nine.

(e) The employer or his insurance carrier paying the supplemental benefits required under this subdivision shall claim reimbursement for each such case from the reopened cases fund under this section, commencing one year from the date of the first such payment and annually thereafter while such supplemental payments continued, on a form prescribed by the chairman.

(f) The special disability fund created under subdivision eight of section fifteen and the reopened cases fund created under section twenty-five-a and the aggregate trust fund created under section twenty-seven of this chapter shall be deemed to be insurance carriers for purposes of this subdivision, other than the payment of the assessment under the provisions of subdivision three of this section.

(g) Whenever payment of the supplemental benefits prescribed hereunder is not made by the insurance carrier by reason of the insolvency of such insurance carrier, or in the case of a self-insurer, by reason of the insolvency of such self-insurer or the discontinuance of its operations, such payment shall be made directly out of the reopened cases fund under this section by the commissioner of taxation and finance upon vouchers approved by the chairman of the workmen's compensation board.

§ 80. The superintendent of insurance [superintendent of financial services], in consultation with the chair of the workers' compensation board, may promulgate regulations relating to the standards to be followed in the approval of forms and in the procedural requirements needed to implement the provisions of this act, and the chair of the workers' compensation board, in consultation with the superintendent of insurance [superintendent of financial services], may promulgate regulations relating to the procedural requirements needed to implement the provisions of this act.

Laws 2010, ch 56, § 1 (Part Q), eff June 22, 2010, provides as follows:

Section 1. (a) For the purpose of this section, "insurance carrier," and "workers' compensation rating board" shall have the meaning set forth in section 2 of the workers' compensation law.

(b) For the purposes of this section, "excess assessment funds" shall mean any excess of the amount collected by an insurance carrier from its policy holders in accordance with a calculation provided by the workers' compensation rating board pursuant to subdivision 8 of section 15, subdivision 3 of section 25-a or section 151 of the workers' compensation law attributable to the period April 1, 2008, through March 31, 2009, over the amount paid to the workers' compensation board pursuant to subdivision 8 of section 15, subdivision 3 of section 25-a or section 151 of the workers' compensation law attributable to the period April 1, 2008, through March 31, 2009. The board may issue guidelines regarding the construction of this section, provided such guidelines are consistent with this section and with part QQ of chapter 56 of the laws of 2009.

(c) Any insurance carrier or affiliated group of insurance carriers that has collected excess assessment funds shall pay over to the chair of the workers' compensation board, within sixty days of the effective date of this subdivision, the amount of such funds. Such funds shall be credited to the workers' compensation account. Any amounts collected pursuant to this section shall be transferred by the comptroller to the general fund, at the request of the director of the budget.

1. In general

Under § 13 the employer must replace any necessary equipment and while it is directed that neither such replacement nor medical treatment shall constitute the payment of compensation under this section the provision was not intended to limit the nature of the liability which may be shifted to the special fund for reopened cases but merely to define the words "payment of compensation" as they appear in this section and thus to provide that such expenditure shall not toll the 3 year limitation. Casey v Hinkle Iron Works, 299 N.Y. 382, 87 N.E.2d 419, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 382, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 947 (N.Y. 1949).

Purpose of § 25-a was to provide for gradual taking over by special fund of stale cases as they became stale. Riddle v General Ice Cream Corp., 262 A.D. 353, 29 N.Y.S.2d 225, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5364 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

The intention of this section is to confine review in a special fund case to three board members. Hawkins v Hotel Statler, 265 A.D. 976, 38 N.Y.S.2d 768, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6800 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).; Stapholtz v Rothman Co., 260 A.D. 818, 22 N.Y.S.2d 357, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4828 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

The provisions of § 25-a and § 123 do not apply to a proceeding for increase of death benefits based upon failure of the board to take into consideration the wage expectancy of a deceased minor employee. George v West Virginia Pulp & Paper Co., 274 A.D. 859, 81 N.Y.S.2d 697, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3704 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

The term "injury" as used in this section means an accidental injury or a compensable injury and thus, the time of injury as related to silicosis means the time of complete disablement rather than the time of the last injurious exposure. Kopec v Buffalo

Brake Beam-Acme Steel & Malleable Iron Works, 2 A.D.2d 946, 156 N.Y.S.2d 829, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3980 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Where possible prejudice to claimant exists, § 115 of the Workmen's Compensation Law is applicable to make § 25-a inoperative and liability is imposed on the employer rather than the Special Fund. Aufiero v Highwall Metal Spinning & Stamping Co., 31 A.D.2d 877, 297 N.Y.S.2d 648, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4560 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 24 N.Y.2d 738, 1969 N.Y. LEXIS 2285 (N.Y. 1969).

The legislative intent of Workmen's Compensation Law § 25-a, subd 1, ¶ 3 was that liability for stale claims shall be shifted from the carrier to the Special Fund, the creation of the transfer being the required passage of time. Dennett v Dennett Refrigeration Equipment, 38 A.D.2d 659, 327 N.Y.S.2d 439, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2614 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1971).

The purpose of Workmen's Compensation Law § 25-a is to impose on the Special Fund the liability for truly "stale" claims. Gantz v Wallace & Tiernan Lucidol Div., 41 A.D.2d 991, 343 N.Y.S.2d 972, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4367 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1973).

Obligation to state under § 15, subds. 7, 8 and § 25-a, is separate and independent one imposed upon employer, to provide additional protection to certain classes of employees when it finds itself free of its obligations to make any payments under Workmen's Compensation Law. The obligation is as absolute as obligation to pay conventional compensation awards. Harris Structural Steel Co. v Dean, 45 N.Y.S.2d 821, 182 Misc. 763, 1943 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2717 (N.Y. City Ct. 1943), aff'd, 55 N.Y.S.2d 297, 184 Misc. 688, 1945 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1837 (N.Y. App. Term 1945).

2. Retroactive effect of statute

There is no statutory impediment to the retroactive responsibility of the Special Fund. Crowl v New York, Dep't of Hospitals, 18 N.Y.2d 23, 271 N.Y.S.2d 659, 218 N.E.2d 537, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 1274 (N.Y. 1966).

Appellants' contention that award should have been against special fund, created by this section is not well taken because case was reopened and award was made previous to enactment of this section. Rich v American Radiator Co., 243 A.D. 827, 278 N.Y.S. 151, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8466 (N.Y. App. Div. 1935), aff'd, 270 N.Y. 632, 1 N.E.2d 365, 270 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 632, 1936 N.Y. LEXIS 1680 (N.Y. 1936).

Where claimant was totally disabled for two weeks in 1926, and was awarded compensation for this period in 1927, submitting to operation August 14, 1929, without any previous request to employer or carrier, award made, upon his application on December 5, 1933 to reopen case, against employer and carrier for period from August 14 to October 5, 1929, was error, case not having been pending before board on April 24, 1934. Mazer v Feldman, Steur & Robinov, Inc., 247 A.D. 919, 287 N.Y.S. 574, 1936 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9396 (N.Y. App. Div. 1936).

Amendment to this section providing for payment of awards out of special fund, whereby, in case of lump sum payment, time to reopen is extended to date when last payment would have been made had such amount been ordered in weekly installments, is not retroactive. Tipton v Lang's Bakery, 250 A.D. 696, 296 N.Y.S. 228, 1937 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8438 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 275 N.Y. 572, 11 N.E.2d 759, 275 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 572, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1553 (N.Y. 1937).

This section does not apply to a case which was pending before the Industrial Board on April 24th 1933. Friedrich v L. Hirsch & Sons, 257 A.D. 878, 11 N.Y.S.2d 1000, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8252 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

Fact that case was open and pending on April 24, 1933, did not affect application of § 25-a provided that after it was closed time limitations prescribed by said section were present. Riddle v General Ice Cream Corp., 262 A.D. 353, 29 N.Y.S.2d 225, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5364 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

The provision of this section prohibiting reopening after eighteen years from the date of the accident is one of limitation and procedural in character and retroactive in effect. Sager v General Electric Co., 269 A.D. 801, 55 N.Y.S.2d 138, 1945 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3910 (N.Y. App. Div. 1945), app. dismissed, 298 N.Y. 752, 83 N.E.2d 152, 298 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 752, 1948 N.Y. LEXIS 1299 (N.Y. 1948).

The 1935 amendment providing that a lump sum award should be projected forward on the basis of the rate of compensation established at the time of closing a case in order to determine the date of the last payment of compensation cannot be applied retroactively. Likepities v Donner Steel Co., 278 A.D. 443, 106 N.Y.S.2d 146, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3833 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

This section controls the Special Fund, and under its subd [2] the requisites for further medical services necessitate authorization by the chairman of the Workmen's Compensation Board, while subd 1 limits any award of compensation in retroactive effect to two years immediately preceding date of application for reopening, but imposes no such limitation in regard to authorized medical expenses. Pixley v University of Rochester, 22 A.D.2d 743, 253 N.Y.S.2d 392, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2943 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964), app. denied, 15 N.Y.2d 483, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1777 (N.Y. 1965).

3. Retroactive awards and payments

The provision of this section that an award against the special fund shall not be retroactive for a period of disability longer than 2 years immediately preceding the application to reopen establishes the time limitation as to temporary total disability and not to permanent partial disability for which a schedule award has been made. Bellini v Great American Indem. Co., 299 N.Y. 399, 87 N.E.2d 426, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 399, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 949 (N.Y. 1949).

The two year retroactive restriction applies to the period of disability and not to wage rates and the board could make a corrected award based on a corrected wage rate effective from the date of the injury. Kaplowitz v Whitehouse Wet Wash Laundry, 273 A.D. 569, 79 N.Y.S.2d 237, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4638 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 298 N.Y. 743, 83 N.E.2d 147, 298 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 743, 1948 N.Y. LEXIS 1292 (N.Y. 1948).

A two-year limitation imposed on retroactive payments applies to all awards made subsequent to the effective date of the amendment even though the cases involved were reopened and remained open prior to 1940. Russo v Wielandt, 274 A.D. 275, 82 N.Y.S.2d 469, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3055 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

A retroactive award under this section may include medical bills despite the fact that no prior authority had been obtained for the incurring of the expense. Greenwald v Electro Metallurgical Co., 284 A.D. 706, 134 N.Y.S.2d 451, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3476 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Where payment by carrier was for a period prior to the two year retroactive period provided under § 25-a of the Workmen's Compensation Law and prior to the date when Special Fund became liable, the latter is not entitled to credit for said payment. Alber v Tobin, 33 A.D.2d 607, 304 N.Y.S.2d 512, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3030 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969).

Since an award against the Special Fund can only be retroactive for 2 years prior to the application to reopen, it is incumbent on the board to make factual findings as to how much, if anything, claimant stands to lose, as prejudice to the plaintiff is a factor which is to be taken into consideration in determining whether a case was intended to be closed. Gantz v Wallace & Tiernan Lucidol Div., 41 A.D.2d 991, 343 N.Y.S.2d 972, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4367 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1973).

4. Payment to special fund when there are no persons entitled to compensation

Section 27 does not authorize payment by the aggregate trust fund into the special funds of §§ 15 and 25-a of an amount equal to the present value of future death benefits ordered paid to a widow in the event the widow dies or remarries before the payments are due her and there is no one to whom compensation would be payable. Kennedy v Neo Gravure Printing Co., 262 A.D. 616, 30 N.Y.S.2d 785, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5439 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

Where a dependent widow obtained a settlement in an action against a third party which exceeded the value of all possible death benefits, an award to the special fund on the ground that there were no persons entitled to death benefits was proper. Department of Taxation & Finance v Thompson-Starrett Co., 271 A.D. 906, 66 N.Y.S.2d 790, 1946 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3653 (N.Y. App. Div. 1946).

Where death award was made to dependent mother of deceased employee as the sole person entitled to compensation, but payment suspended until exhaustion of the proceeds of third party recovery, an award, after death of the mother of payments which would be made her had she survived to the special fund was proper. Chiappano v New York, 281 A.D. 996, 120 N.Y.S.2d 598, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4045 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

An insurance carrier was required to pay money to the Special Fund under subdivision 3 of this section where it consented to waive payment of part of its lien against the widow's recovery in a third-party action instituted by her. Anderson v Metro Decorating Co., 4 A.D.2d 892, 166 N.Y.S.2d 812, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4278 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

An insurance carrier was required to pay money into the Fund for Reopened Cases where the decedent died without dependents even though it was receiving reimbursement from the Special Disability Fund for payments made after the first 260 weeks of disability and death benefits combined because they were not relieved from liability therefor because they had paid decedent 260 weeks of compensation, which included both disability and death benefits. Commissioner of Taxation & Finance v Buffalo Standard Foundry, 4 A.D.2d 894, 167 N.Y.S.2d 241, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4282 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Where claimant suffered a knee injury in 1943, and, in 1947 the case was closed following a lump sum settlement of $1,950 paid by the carrier and approved by the Board on the basis of a definite reduced earning capacity, the settlement award being specifically allocated at $10 a week over 195 weeks in accordance with the earnings reduction, when the case was again reopened in 1959 with liability imposed on the Special Fund the Fund was not entitled to a $1,950 credit against the settlement made over 12 years before as the settlement amount must be considered as having been expended. Gluck v Grade A Foods Corp., 20 A.D.2d 607, 245 N.Y.S.2d 437, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2597 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963), app. denied, 14 N.Y.2d 481, 1964 N.Y. LEXIS 1632 (N.Y. 1964).

There were "no persons entitled to compensation", and payment of death benefits could properly be directed into the Vocational Rehabilitation Fund and the fund for reopened cases where, by reason of remarriage of the deceased employee's widow and ages of his dependent children a recovery in their favor in a third-party action was in excess of any compensation benefits which might possibly become due. Commissioner of Taxation & Finance v Kingsboro Constr. Co., 21 A.D.2d 929, 251 N.Y.S.2d 187, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3366 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 14 N.Y.2d 490, 1964 N.Y. LEXIS 1926 (N.Y. 1964).

Separate and distinct liabilities of an employer subject to third-party suit and under the Workmen's Compensation Act has long been established, and the circumstance that both liabilities are insured against in the same policy, rather than in two, or not at all, is of no moment in determining applicability of the provisions for directing payment into the Vocational Rehabilitation Fund and that for reopened cases when "there are no persons entitled to compensation." Commissioner of Taxation & Finance v Kingsboro Constr. Co., 21 A.D.2d 929, 251 N.Y.S.2d 187, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3366 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 14 N.Y.2d 490, 1964 N.Y. LEXIS 1926 (N.Y. 1964).

The proceeds of an award to a widower because of the industrial death of his wife were properly paid into two special funds, and not to the estate of the widower, where he died after filing the claim and pending the final award. Cebul v Equitable Bldg., 24 A.D.2d 1041, 265 N.Y.S.2d 339, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2762 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965), app. denied, 17 N.Y.2d 420, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 1759 (N.Y. 1966).

Workers' compensation carrier was properly directed to make payments into funds established for instances when deceased employee leaves no beneficiary entitled to compensation, where dependents of deceased employee settled their third-party action against various defendants for sum that exceeded value of possible workers' compensation benefits, since such settlement resulted in situation in which there were no persons entitled to compensation at time of award; fact that deceased employee left surviving dependents was not dispositive, it was irrelevant that carrier waived its lien for amounts already expended, and amendment to CLS Work Comp § 29(1) (respecting apportionment of litigation costs between carrier and claimant) did not apply. Capitelli v Wells, Rich, Green, Inc., 165 A.D.2d 284, 566 N.Y.S.2d 771, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2743 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1991).

5. Cause of injury

A second employer was properly denied reopening of a 1937 case where proof showed that claimant, a porter, fell 35 feet in a 1937 accident and then while in employ of second employer in 1947 fell a distance of 6 feet from a stepladder. Though medical evidence showed 1937 accident was contributory to claimant's condition following the 1947 accident, there was evidence to sustain finding that disability resulted solely from 1947 accident. Tsimos v Frank G. Shattuck Co., 282 A.D. 1081, 126 N.Y.S.2d 128, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5871 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

On the basis of a report by an impartial specialist to whom a disability claim was referred by the Board, other medical testimony being conflicting, there was sufficient evidence to sustain a finding of the Board of no causal relationship between claimant's back condition and a considerably earlier industrial accident in which he fell from a ladder, suffering a back contusion. Li Greci v Greene, Tweed & Co., 17 A.D.2d 673, 230 N.Y.S.2d 528, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8493 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. dismissed, 12 N.Y.2d 644, 1962 N.Y. LEXIS 1623 (N.Y. 1962).

While authorizations for continuing medical treatment by the chairman under subd 2 of this section are clearly administrative if liability has previously been established, where causal relationship is the fundamental issue and has not even been established through normal judicial machinery, the determination is not administrative and not subject to the usual review procedures. Daum v Rochester State Hospital, 21 A.D.2d 953, 251 N.Y.S.2d 361, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3232 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

Where claimant, who had long been employed as a laborer in iron mining and steel manufacture, contracted silicosis and received awards from November 23, 1955 to August 29, 1958, the date of his death from lung cancer, had received disability awards, a board finding that the pre-existing silicosis hastened decedent's death from cancer of the lung could not be sustained where there was no substantial evidence that debilitation associated with silicosis influenced progression of the malignancy. Martinez v Republic Steel Corp., 22 A.D.2d 738, 253 N.Y.S.2d 562, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2931 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

Board's finding that claimant's partial disability was related only to injuries sustained in 1952, 1953, and 1956, and not to an earlier 1947 injury suffered while working for another employer was not supported by substantial evidence where there was no evidence in the record contrary to carrier's expert's diagnosis that all four injuries contributed to the disability. Capuano v Ideal Roller & Mfg. Co., 24 A.D.2d 792, 263 N.Y.S.2d 870, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3228 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Although the immediate cause of claimant's loss of his most recent employment, in 1970, was a reduction in work force owing to economic conditions, claimant would still be entitled to compensation if his back condition, resulting from a compensable injury in 1960, was a limiting factor in his search for employment and therefore partly responsible for his inability to find other employment. Boyle v Gatti, 40 A.D.2d 1063, 339 N.Y.S.2d 65, 1972 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2991 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1972).

6. Compensation; last payment generally

Where date of injury was more than seven years before date of application, but last payment of compensation was made in 1932, less than three years before said date, although said payment should have been made in 1927, more than six years before it, application was too early to permit employment of § 25-a. Kiriloff v A. G. W. Wet Wash Laundry, Inc., 293 N.Y. 222, 56 N.E.2d 559, 293 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 222, 1944 N.Y. LEXIS 1307 (N.Y. 1944).

Initial "stale" workmen's compensation claims are to be measured, for purposes of shifting liability to the Special Fund, for reopened cases, from the last payment of compensation. Riley v Aircraft Products Mfg. Corp., 40 N.Y.2d 366, 386 N.Y.S.2d 838, 353 N.E.2d 801, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 2895 (N.Y. 1976).

Sub 7 of this section is not limited to lump sum settlements made under sub 5-b of § 15. Sayres v August Feine & Sons Co., 283 A.D. 547, 128 N.Y.S.2d 898, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4728 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Compensation is the money allowance payable to an employee. So, a reimbursement to an employer by a carrier within 3 years of the reopening of a case for wages which had been paid by the employer during a period of disability was not a "last payment of compensation" within 3 years under this section to discharge the special fund. Decision and award discharging special fund reversed and claim remitted. Usherson v Greeley Mills, Inc., 7 A.D.2d 809, 180 N.Y.S.2d 894, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3740 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958), aff'd, 7 N.Y.2d 778, 194 N.Y.S.2d 45, 163 N.E.2d 148, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 997 (N.Y. 1959).

Payment by employer of wages within 3 years prior to reopening case pursuant to policy of paying supervisory personnel when off from work constituted payment within the meaning of § 25-a. So, the Special Fund was properly relieved from liability. Tulley v American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corp., 8 A.D.2d 564, 183 N.Y.S.2d 688, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9650 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

7. —Advance payments

Where, although claimant was working for different corporate employer at the time that he filed formal claim for total disability benefits than he was working for at the time of his injury, the corporate employer was a successor corporation which had absorbed as a subsidiary the employer for whom the workman was working at the time of his injury, advance payments of compensation which had been made by the initial corporate employer and an intermediary corporate employer within three years of time that claim was filed were binding on the corporate entity which was employing the workman at the time of his claim so that liability could not be shifted to the Special Fund, for reopened cases. Riley v Aircraft Products Mfg. Corp., 40 N.Y.2d 366, 386 N.Y.S.2d 838, 353 N.E.2d 801, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 2895 (N.Y. 1976).

Where, although seven years elapsed between time of claimant's accident and time that claimant became totally disabled and filed formal claim for workmen's compensation, employer had made advance payments of compensation within three years prior to presentation of formal claim, liability for the claim could not be shifted to the Special Fund for reopened cases. Riley v Aircraft Products Mfg. Corp., 40 N.Y.2d 366, 386 N.Y.S.2d 838, 353 N.E.2d 801, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 2895 (N.Y. 1976).

In 1941 claimant swallowed a tack. Compensation was paid for a period in 1942. During period in 1955 and 1956, claimant was out of work due to the disease resulting from 1941 injuries. The record established that, although claimant was out of work for brief periods before 1955 and his full salary was paid, he actually accomplished tasks for which he was being paid and employer received what he paid for. Because payments were not gratuitous, they did not constitute advanced payments of compensation. Since advance payments were not made in years in question, application for compensation was made more than seven years from date of accident and more than three years from last payment of compensation, and liability was that of Special Fund for Reopened Cases. Propper v Orkins Fashions Stores, Inc., 7 A.D.2d 689, 179 N.Y.S.2d 285, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4347 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Claimant was employed in 1936 by the New York City Park Department as a "climber and pruner" when he was knocked out of a tree and suffered injuries resulting in permanent partial disability. He was continued in his position at full salary but was assigned to lighter work. In 1955, claimant resigned at employer's request and became entitled to retirement benefits which were very much smaller than his salary. On application to reopen the claim, Board properly held that assignment of claimant to lighter work at the same wages, which continued to within a few months of filing of application to reopen, constituted advance payments which tolled the running of the time limitations found in this section. Award affirmed. Golomb v New York, 8 A.D.2d 874, 186 N.Y.S.2d 893, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8278 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Not all payments or wages as sick leave, or under an employee welfare plan are necessarily advance payments of compensation. Stewart v First Nat'l City Bank, 15 A.D.2d 622, 222 N.Y.S.2d 374, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6847 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Payment of wages to claimant by her employer during the period of three years prior to reopening her case, involving three industrial injuries to her back but without any loss of time resulting therefrom, constituted an advance payment or compensation within the meaning of this section relieving the Special Fund from liability for the first and second accidents where such payments were clearly made with the employer's knowledge that the eventual disabilities were attributable to earlier accidents. Gomez v Pepe, 18 A.D.2d 742, 235 N.Y.S.2d 510, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6181 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Claimant's assignment to lighter work at the same wages constituted an advance payment of compensation tolling the three-year time limitation of the above statute. Tremblay v Warren County Westmount Sanatorium, 24 A.D.2d 658, 261 N.Y.S.2d 205, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3641 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Advance payment was made when claimant was treated at employer's clinic during working hours and was paid full wages, and thus since case was reopened within 3 years of such payment, insurance carrier remains liable. Feldman v Presbyterian Hospital, 114 A.D.2d 549, 494 N.Y.S.2d 163, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 53259 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1985).

Evidence supported board's finding of advance payment of compensation, and thus Special Fund for Reopened Cases was properly relieved of liability under CLS Work Comp § 25-a on ground that case was reopened within 3 years of last payment of compensation, where claimant was paid full salary while he was on limited duty performing lighter work normally performed at less pay. Foglia v New York City Housing Authority, 132 A.D.2d 762, 517 N.Y.S.2d 112, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 49280 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1987).

Definition of "advance payment of compensation" for purposes of CLS Work Comp § 25-a is no different than for CLS Work Comp § 28, since informal claims are treated same as formal awards under Workers' Compensation Law. Loiacono v Sears Roebuck & Co., 230 A.D.2d 351, 654 N.Y.S.2d 463, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2227 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Workers' Compensation Board erred in finding that there was no evidentiary basis that advance payments might have been made for the purposes of determining the applicability of N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a because, while the claimant was disabled from regular duty, the record was silent regarding whether the claimant performed lighter duties and, if so, whether he received full wages. Matter of Schroeder v US Foodservice, 107 A.D.3d 1135, 967 N.Y.S.2d 449, 2013 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3999 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2013).

8. —Lump sum settlements

Where a lump sum settlement had not been drawn against because the claimant had suffered no decrease in earnings, the date of the last payment could not be ascertained and the three year limitation did not begin to run. Rainer v Modern Mfg. Co., 265 A.D. 1023, 38 N.Y.S.2d 923, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6668 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943).

A commuted award paid to the Aggregate Trust Fund is the same as a lump sum settlement within the meaning of this section so that the date of the last payment is the date to which the sum would extend if not commuted. Pascucci v William Kennedy Const. Co., 270 A.D. 83, 58 N.Y.S.2d 667, 1945 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2806 (N.Y. App. Div. 1945).

Even if there was substantial evidence to support the Board's decision to reopen a lump-sum settlement, the Special Fund could not be discharged where the case was not reopened until 3 years after the extension of the lump sum on a weekly basis. Primus v Continental Forge & Tool Co., 7 A.D.2d 178, 180 N.Y.S.2d 992, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3690 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

The "last payment" of compensation for the purpose of computing the basis of the Special Fund's liability is "the date" to which the "amount paid" in the lump sum settlement "would extend" if the award were made on the date the lump sum settlement was approved. Primus v Continental Forge & Tool Co., 7 A.D.2d 178, 180 N.Y.S.2d 992, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3690 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Subdivision 7 of this section requires the board, in determining whether a lump-sum settlement has extended compensation payments for more than the three-year period, "to spread the lump-sum settlement at the rate applicable to the disability found at the time of the approval of the lump-sum settlement by the referee." Weinberger v Belmont Electric Co., 13 A.D.2d 884, 215 N.Y.S.2d 195, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10714 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

In determining whether a lump-sum settlement approved by the board extended compensation payments for more than the three-year period, so as to relieve the Special Fund from liability, the fact that claimant, since deceased, might have been paid wages during that period at a rate no less than that of his pre-accident earnings is not controlling. Weinberger v Belmont Electric Co., 13 A.D.2d 884, 215 N.Y.S.2d 195, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10714 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Subdivision 7 of this section must be employed in determining limitations where disability benefits awarded to an alien are commuted pursuant to § 17 and paid to him in a lump sum upon departure from the United States. Rolle v General Foods Corp., etc., 19 A.D.2d 188, 241 N.Y.S.2d 94, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3445 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

9. — —Particular applications

Where the amount of a lump settlement would carry periodical payments at the maximum rate to a date within three years of the time when proceedings were reopened the new award was properly made payable by the employer. Cretella v New York Dock Co., 289 N.Y. 254, 45 N.E.2d 429, 289 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 254, 1942 N.Y. LEXIS 938 (N.Y. 1942).

Where a claimant was injured in 1940 while working as part-time extra man on a town snowplow, his average weekly wage for such work being $13.85, and the case was closed out in 1942 on a finding of partial disability with a lump-sum settlement of $3,000 based on a compensation award at the weekly rate of $9.23, which was excessive, the proper disability rate on such average earnings being $8.00, on claimant's 1954 application to reopen the case the board properly extended the payment period to accord with the lower rate. Weyzk v Stafford, 7 N.Y.2d 121, 195 N.Y.S.2d 841, 164 N.E.2d 106, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 885 (N.Y. 1959).

Where case was closed on June 27, 1930 with lump sum award which would have extended regular weekly payments of compensation to May 21, 1931, and case was reopened in Dec. 12, 1934 on application of claimant filed Oct. 25, 1934, award on Nov. 13, 1935 for disability benefit against employer and insurance carrier was proper. Collier v P. J. Meade Eng. & Constr., Inc., 248 A.D. 931, 290 N.Y.S. 373, 1936 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8107 (N.Y. App. Div. 1936).

A nonschedule adjustment or settlement, with referee approval, whereby claimant was paid $1,150 for "all past, present and future" disability may be allocated in accordance with the formula in subd. 7 so as to bring a petition for reopening within 3 years of the last payment of compensation, the nonschedule adjustment not being binding upon claimant as regards a reopening of his claim. Maschebet v Success Baking Co., 277 A.D. 1069, 100 N.Y.S.2d 614, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4518 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

Where a scheduled award payable for 400 weeks was commuted and paid in a lump sum, a subsequent application to reopen the case, although made more than 7 years after injury, was nevertheless made within 3 years of the "date of the last payment of compensation" as extended under this section. Hence, carrier was liable for new award and not the Special Fund for Reopened Cases. Sayres v August Feine & Sons Co., 283 A.D. 547, 128 N.Y.S.2d 898, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4728 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

The extension of a lump-sum settlement does not run indefinitely because the claimant enters into a successful business and makes more money than he did before a lump-sum settlement so that the statute of limitations does not apply and the Board may reopen a case at any time. Primus v Continental Forge & Tool Co., 7 A.D.2d 178, 180 N.Y.S.2d 992, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3690 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

In determining whether or not the Special Fund for reopen cases is liable, a lump sum cannot be indefinitely extended by excluding weeks during which claimant worked at preinjury wages. Weyzk v Stafford, 8 A.D.2d 560, 183 N.Y.S.2d 481, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9645 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), rev'd, 7 N.Y.2d 121, 195 N.Y.S.2d 841, 164 N.E.2d 106, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 885 (N.Y. 1959).

Where a claimant who suffered back injuries in an industrial accident in 1946 was first given a total disability award, then a reduced earnings award, and finally, in 1950, the board approved a lump sum settlement for $1,500, and the question arose whether, on reopening the case in 1956 the lump-sum settlement had been expended prior to three years before the reopening so that there was no payment of compensation within that period and the Special Fund would be responsible for the award, the board was not required to exclude weeks during that three-year period during which claimant worked at pre-injury wages. Dumelle v Brookhaven Highway Dep't, 13 A.D.2d 878, 215 N.Y.S.2d 193, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10706 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961), aff'd, 11 N.Y.2d 842, 227 N.Y.S.2d 669, 182 N.E.2d 279, 1962 N.Y. LEXIS 1262 (N.Y. 1962).

A finding of the Board that there was no causally related change in claimant's condition since the case was previously closed on a lump sum non-schedule adjustment basis, and the back injury originally sustained by plaintiff in 1944 and for which he was paid compensation up to 1954, to sustain reopening on the ground of change in conditions in 158, on the basis of a change for the worse in his pyschiatric condition, was sustained as a finding of fact on conflicting medical evidence. Pascale v Universal Terminal & Stevedoring Co., 15 A.D.2d 854, 224 N.Y.S.2d 541, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11430 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

In applying subd. 7 of this section for the purpose of determining limitations applicable as against asserted liability of the Special Fund in a reopened case, the Board erred in projecting the original disability award for the remaining 178 weeks during which it would normally have run where the award had, in fact, been commuted and paid in a lump sum to the claimant, an alien, pursuant to § 17, when he departed from the United States at a considerably earlier date. Rolle v General Foods Corp., etc., 19 A.D.2d 188, 241 N.Y.S.2d 94, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3445 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

Denial of a carrier's request to shift its remaining medical liability in a workers' compensation claim to the fund for reopened cases was proper because an earlier lump-sum settlement equated to approximately 323 weeks of benefits, payable until a future date, and thus, although the lump-sum settlement had been reached over three years earlier, three years had not lapsed from the date of last compensation payment; the carrier's assertion that the statute only applied to nonschedule adjustment settlements pursuant to N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 15 was not supported by the language of N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a (7), which specifically stated that it applied to situations where the case was disposed of by the payment of a lump sum. Furthermore, it was not dispositive that the N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 32 agreement did not expressly provide for a future allocation of the payment. Matter of Robinson v Holiday Showcase Rests., Inc., 46 A.D.3d 1178, 848 N.Y.S.2d 728, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13164 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

10. —Sick leave

Sick benefits paid pursuant to the terms of a labor union contract was not a payment of compensation sufficient to discharge the Special Fund for Reopened Cases (25-a) from liability. Moreover, it was ineffective because made after the application to reopen was filed. Davidson v Central Greyhound Lines, Inc., 279 A.D. 946, 110 N.Y.S.2d 748, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5393 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

An employer's established custom of paying one week's full salary to all employees absent because of illness for disability does not constitute the payment of compensation particularly where there has been no new industrial accident. Special fund should be charged where a claim closed in 1943 was opened in 1954 when the disability reoccurred even though employer paid compensation during the first week of the disability. Murray v Packard, 2 A.D.2d 907, 156 N.Y.S.2d 409, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3915 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

The Workers' Compensation Board erred in affirming a decision to charge the Special Disability Fund under Workers' Compensation Law § 25-a for payments for lost time made by an employer to a claimant who had sustained a compensable back injury more than ten years earlier, of which the employer had had knowledge, since payments made by an employer pursuant to a sick leave plan which covers disability irrespective of the cause do not constitute compensation within the meaning of Workers' Compensation Law § 25-a(1). Brock v Great A&P Tea Co., 84 A.D.2d 645, 444 N.Y.S.2d 724, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15770 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981).

In a reopened workers' compensation proceeding, the court would affirm a decision by the Workers' Compensation Board holding the carrier rather than the Special Fund for Reopened Cases liable for benefits, where payments made by the employer during the immediately preceding three years were compensation, not mandatory sick leave, in that the payments were made after the employee's sick leave had been exhausted and thus were discretionary. Urban v NYS Letchworth Village, 91 A.D.2d 1090, 458 N.Y.S.2d 308, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16432 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1983).

Liability for workers' compensation claim was properly transferred to the Special Fund for Reopened Cases under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a because there had been a lapse of seven years from the injury in 1998 to the application to reopen in 2005 and no payment of compensation had been made within three years of the application to reopen as the claimant had been paid for missing work prior to the application to reopen from his accumulated sick leave. Matter of Wilfredo Fuentes v New York City Hous. Auth., 53 A.D.3d 873, 861 N.Y.S.2d 861, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6161 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

When an injured town employee is receiving workmen's compensation benefits, the town, in the absence of a sick leave plan, may not pay him a portion of his salary in addition. 1963 Ops St Compt #133.

Since the Workmen's Compensation Law requires reimbursement of a municipality out of an award made to one of its employees, if he is paid regular salary during the period of incapacitation, a town should not pay salary to an injured employee while receiving workmen's compensation benefits unless it has a regular sick leave plan. 1963 Ops St Compt #133.

11. —Medical benefits

Providing medical treatment or care does not constitute payment of compensation to this section. Kapesser v New York State Police, 286 A.D. 897, 142 N.Y.S.2d 267, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4463 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

Medical payments do not constitute payments of compensation within the meaning of this section. Gammino v Sperry Gyroscope Co., 8 A.D.2d 571, 183 N.Y.S.2d 505, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9660 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Under the explicit terms of subdivision (a) of § 13, provision of medical devices or services is not a payment of compensation within the meaning of § 25-a so as to render the special fund for reopened cases liable for compensation benefits or award of compensation after 18 and 8-year periods. Bratle v Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., 10 A.D.2d 789, 198 N.Y.S.2d 711, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10948 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), aff'd, 9 N.Y.2d 870, 216 N.Y.S.2d 691, 175 N.E.2d 823, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1292 (N.Y. 1961).

Payment of claimant's medical expenses was not "payment of compensation" for purposes of determining applicability of CLS Work Comp § 25-a. McQueen v New York State Div. of Parole, 245 A.D.2d 851, 666 N.Y.S.2d 317, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13193 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 802, 677 N.Y.S.2d 72, 699 N.E.2d 432, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 1767 (N.Y. 1998).

12. — —Particular payments

Employer's furnishing of employee with a truss constitutes a payment of compensation within the meaning of the Work. Comp. Law, and such a case does not come within the purview of this section. Patti v Knickerbocker Fireproofing Co., 255 A.D. 732, 6 N.Y.S.2d 754, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4942 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938), aff'd, 280 N.Y. 609, 20 N.E.2d 559, 280 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 609, 1939 N.Y. LEXIS 1439 (N.Y. 1939).

Where one day after injury employer filed report of injury, employer provided medical attention for over two years, claimant received full wages for years subsequent to accident, industrial board correctly found that employer made advance payments of compensation and allowed award. Cashel v Brown, Lipe Chapin Co., 263 A.D. 912, 32 N.Y.S.2d 154, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7340 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

When claimant in 1927, while engaged in his regular occupation, received injuries which caused epigastric hernia which required operation, and suffered recurrent hernia in 1930 and subsequent operations in 1930 and 1940, claim properly awarded under § 25-a. Romano v New York, 263 A.D. 1030, 33 N.Y.S.2d 453, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7955 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

An employer's furnishing of trusses up to within a period of six months prior to the application for review constituted a payment of compensation so that the claimant was not barred by the seven years' period. Schneider v Durst Mfg. Co., 265 A.D. 1022, 38 N.Y.S.2d 983, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6667 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943).

Where ample evidence in record to show that within three years prior to claimant's application for reopening, the claimant received medical treatment, including x-ray examination in baking treatments, from employer's physicians, the award was properly assessed against the appellant employer and should be affirmed. Danaruma v New York, 266 A.D. 810, 41 N.Y.S.2d 364, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4569 (N.Y. App. Div. 1943).

Payment of full wages for lighter work and furnishing of medical treatment constituted a payment of compensation and where such payment was made within 3 years prior to the application to reopen the case the employer and not the special fund was liable for additional compensation. Sassano v New York, 272 A.D. 843, 70 N.Y.S.2d 39, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3871 (N.Y. App. Div. 1947).

Supplying a claimant prior to the 1944 amendment to § 13-a of the Workmen's Compensation Law with elastic stockings in compliance with a direction by the workmen's compensation board constituted a payment of compensation within the meaning of this section. Niker v McCormick, 273 A.D. 1037, 78 N.Y.S.2d 792, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5860 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

Before the amendment of subdivision a of § 13 of the Workmen's Compensation Law to provide that medical treatment or care shall not constitute payment of compensation under this section, medical care furnished without reference to the accident because of conditions not shown to be related to the accident, and pursuant to a humane program on the part of the employer to supply free medical and hospital care to employees and dependents, and obtained in clinics separate from those devoted to compensation cases, did not revive the employer's responsibility for an award. Lombardo v Endicott Johnson Corp., 275 A.D. 18, 87 N.Y.S.2d 362, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3696 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

Where an employer provided medical care and paid full wages for a period of disability in 1947 resulting from an injury in 1923 the employer and not the fund for reopened cases was liable for a compensation award. Pronath v Bethlehem Steel Co., 275 A.D. 1011, 91 N.Y.S.2d 798, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5479 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

Claimant injured his back in July, 1945. Decision relieving Special Fund for Reopened Cases from liability on finding of payments of compensation within 3-year period based solely on 3 or 4 visits of claimant to employer's clinic for 20 to 30 minutes each time between 1952 and 1954 was erroneous. There was no substantial proof that visits to clinic were occasioned by 1945 injury, but, even if they were, medical treatments do not constitute payments of compensation under this section. Gammino v Sperry Gyroscope Co., 8 A.D.2d 571, 183 N.Y.S.2d 505, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9660 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Where a claimant was injured in 1943, received compensation for brief periods of lost time in 1945, the insurance carrier paid several bills for medical treatment between 1945 and 1957, and the case was closed by the referee on October 14, 1957, subject to reopening for unpaid medical bills, but again reopened by the referee January 2, 1958, the Special Fund should not have been discharged as there had been no compensation payments for three years prior to reopening and the accident occurred more than seven years prior to reopening date. Standish v Walter B. Cooke, Inc., 9 A.D.2d 817, 192 N.Y.S.2d 641, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6169 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

The Special Fund was not required to furnish a truss to the claimant, which formerly had been furnished by the employer, because the furnishing of a truss by the employer within eight years of the application to reopen could not, under the express words of § 13(a), be treated as a payment of compensation. Youngelman v New York, Dep't of Sanitation, 10 A.D.2d 173, 198 N.Y.S.2d 708, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10918 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), app. dismissed, 9 N.Y.2d 905, 217 N.Y.S.2d 83, 176 N.E.2d 94, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1316 (N.Y. 1961).

A board finding that medical expenses were authorized on May 24, 1948, and the authorization never rescinded, having been granted in response to a specific request for such authority, subsequent closing of the reopened case predicated upon claimant's inability to physically appear and not because of lack of merit in his claim constituted sufficient compliance with this section by claimant for allowance of expenses subsequently substantiated and found to be causally related to claimant's original claim. Pixley v University of Rochester, 22 A.D.2d 743, 253 N.Y.S.2d 392, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2943 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964), app. denied, 15 N.Y.2d 483, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1777 (N.Y. 1965).

13. —Pensions

A city's payment of a retirement pension to an incapacitated employee is a payment of compensation within the meaning of this section insofar as the payment is made from the funds of the city. This would not apply to the annuity portion of a retirement allowance. Hyser v New York, 273 A.D. 1043, 79 N.Y.S.2d 378, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5881 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

An award against the Special Fund for Reopened Cases was affirmed where an employee of the State Insurance Fund was awarded compensation and also was granted an accidental disability retirement pension under the New York State Employees' Retirement System. Nash v State Ins. Fund, 279 A.D. 1102, 112 N.Y.S.2d 377, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5985 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

The payment of an accidental disability retirement pension into which the employer has made contributions, is a payment of compensation within the meaning of Workmen's Compensation Law § 25-a. And hence, the Special Fund for Reopened Cases was relieved from liability for any further medical or disability treatments that might be needed by a claimant receiving a retirement pension from the New York State Employees' Retirement System for accidental injury. Pignataro v Westchester Parkway Police Dep't, 5 A.D.2d 523, 173 N.Y.S.2d 436, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6146 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958), aff'd, 7 N.Y.2d 848, 196 N.Y.S.2d 987, 164 N.E.2d 861, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 935 (N.Y. 1959).

Accidental retirement pension benefits paid to a claimant constituted a payment of compensation, so that where more than three years had not elapsed since the last payment of compensation, the insurance carrier was liable for a continuance of medical treatment, rather than the Special Fund for Reopened Cases. Craig v Palisades Interstate Park Com., 28 A.D.2d 797, 281 N.Y.S.2d 387, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3715 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 20 N.Y.2d 642, 1967 N.Y. LEXIS 1904 (N.Y. 1967).

Pension payments made by employer were not payments of "compensation", within meaning of statute making employer rather than special fund liable for reopened claims after case is closed if compensation has been paid within three years of application for further compensation, even though employer granted pension in part because of claimant's physical disability resulting from loss of his leg in industrial accident, where pension plan involved provided for such pension when employee with 15 years' service and who, while in service, becomes permanently incapacitated for further work but where plan did not require any occupational relationship to cause of disability. Krystofik v General Electric Co., 54 A.D.2d 137, 388 N.Y.S.2d 50, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13738 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976).

Although pensions which can only be granted on basis of occupational disability must be considered payments of compensation as to occupationally caused disabilities for which they are granted, payments by employer which result solely from finding of disability regardless of its cause are not advance payments of compensation. Krystofik v General Electric Co., 54 A.D.2d 137, 388 N.Y.S.2d 50, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13738 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976).

14. —Wages

Where an employee received wages for lost time for a recurrence of a disability, the payment of wages during the subsequent disability constituted a payment of compensation and the special fund for reopened cases was properly discharged from liability. Tum v Elmira Coca Cola Bottling Works, Inc., 277 A.D. 800, 96 N.Y.S.2d 736, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3372 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1950).

The payment to a disabled employee of a wage equal to her pre-injury wage was not established as compulsory under the National Recovery Act and hence, such payments made within 8 years of the reopening of the case constituted payment of compensation and extended the time limitations provided by this section. White v Marine Trust Co., 281 A.D. 912, 119 N.Y.S.2d 650, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3757 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

A claimant who had been almost completely blinded and permanently scarred in an industrial accident of several years past was permitted to reopen his claim and the Board awarded permanent disability compensation and directed that the carrier for the employer pay the award. The court sustained the award even though claimant was employed in the same position at a salary much greater than that paid at the time of the accident but directed that the award be paid by the Fund for Reopened Cases. The last payment of compensation had been made over three years before the claim was reopened but the Board had found that the wages paid the claimant constituted advance compensation payments. In the absence of proof that wages were gratuitous, the court held that they were not compensation payments. Baker v Standard Rolling Mills, Inc., 284 A.D. 433, 131 N.Y.S.2d 739, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3420 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).. See also Mallardi v Palumbo Cigar Co., 284 A.D. 916, 134 N.Y.S.2d 314, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4050 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

The assigning of a claimant to lighter work and paying him full wages with knowledge of a previous disablement did not constitute advance payment of compensation which would relieve the Special Fund where the claimant earned his hire and there was nothing gratuitous in the performance of the lighter work. Puglia v Sing Sing Prison, 3 A.D.2d 871, 161 N.Y.S.2d 250, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5889 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Where payment of full salary during absence of the claimant from work, which was charged against annual and sick leave, was not a voluntary payment but was compulsory under Civil Service Law Rule 2(3), such compulsory payment did not constitute such a payment of compensation as would relieve the Special Fund under this section. Puglia v Sing Sing Prison, 9 A.D.2d 831, 192 N.Y.S.2d 590, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6192 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959), aff'd, 8 N.Y.2d 891, 204 N.Y.S.2d 142, 168 N.E.2d 820, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1167 (N.Y. 1960).

Where a claimant sustained a back injury in 1942 in course of employment by the State Department of Correction at Sing Sing Prison, was awarded compensation, and his case closed on December 30, 1947, payments later made by the Warden to claimant for two short absences when he reported sick in 1953 were to be considered, under the Attendance Rules for Institutional Employees, merely a mandatory payment of full wages and not a payment of compensation such as to relieve the Special Fund for Reopened Cases from liability for further compensation payments awarded on reopening the compensation claim in 1953. Puglia v Sing Sing Prison, 9 A.D.2d 831, 192 N.Y.S.2d 590, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6192 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959), aff'd, 8 N.Y.2d 891, 204 N.Y.S.2d 142, 168 N.E.2d 820, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1167 (N.Y. 1960).

It was error to discharge the Special Fund from liability because a painter was paid the same wages by his employer as other painters, though he worked only at ground level because of dizziness attributed to a 1947 industrial accident in a different line of work, where the original case had been closed in 1950 and was not reopened for further award until 1958, there being nothing to indicate that the employer was not receiving full value in work for the wages paid so that the wage rate could be considered in the nature of a compensation payment. Schaffner v General Motors Corp., 12 A.D.2d 556, 206 N.Y.S.2d 1005, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7256 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

This section deals specifically with a shift in responsibility as between the insurance carrier and the Special Fund under stated circumstances, and there is nothing in its language which warrants the conclusion that the Legislature intended that in fixing the date of last payment the weeks during which claimant worked at pre-injury wages were to be excluded. Dumelle v Brookhaven Highway Dep't, 13 A.D.2d 878, 215 N.Y.S.2d 193, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10706 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961), aff'd, 11 N.Y.2d 842, 227 N.Y.S.2d 669, 182 N.E.2d 279, 1962 N.Y. LEXIS 1262 (N.Y. 1962).

Board's decision that N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a applied was error because the claimant's receipt of the same wages for lighter work, as stated in the claimant's affidavit, could have constituted an advance payment of compensation relieving the Special Fund for Reopened Cases from liability; the board should have allowed further development of the record. Absent proof regarding the nature of the claimant's light duty work, the board could not have assessed whether an advance payment was made for the purposes of determining the applicability of § 25-a, and, accordingly, the board's decision was not supported by substantial evidence. Matter of Iannaci v Independent Cement Corp., 66 A.D.3d 1194, 887 N.Y.S.2d 357, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7403 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2009).

15. —Other payments

Payments awarded by an employer voluntarily in that they are not paid under an award by the board are effective to avoid the lapse of time essential to the liability of the fund for reopened cases. Pollock v Melville Shoe Corp., 271 A.D. 846, 65 N.Y.S.2d 829, 1946 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3385 (N.Y. App. Div. 1946).

Payment by a self-insured employer to a claimant on January 27, 1948, for the sole purpose of correcting a mistake made by the Board in computing the amount due under an award made April 12, 1946, constituted the payment of compensation made less than three years prior to claimant's application to reopen the claim within the meaning of this section. Adams v Aluminum Co. of America, 282 A.D. 1088, 126 N.Y.S.2d 671, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5887 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Claimant sustained an accident in 1937. In 1952, the injury caused claimant to take time off from work for which he was paid by his employer. The employer's payment constituted an advance payment of compensation and the claim, reopened in 1953, was not the liability of the Special Fund. Dorfer v William Summerhays & Sons Corp., 286 A.D. 1053, 144 N.Y.S.2d 835, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5116 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

Where there was no substantial evidence to show that lost time payments made by an employer (within 3 years of the reopening of a closed case) were related to the employee's original accident, the Special Fund for Reopened Cases was liable. The closed case was reopened more than 7 years after the accident. The evidence clearly showed that the lost time payments (within 3 years of the reopening) were due to another injury. Schoelkopf v G. X. Mathews Co., 8 A.D.2d 225, 187 N.Y.S.2d 487, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7998 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

The claim of a credit for an alleged overpayment in a previous year constituted a "payment" within the meaning of this section. Reed v William Danz Constr. Co., 9 A.D.2d 1004, 194 N.Y.S.2d 942, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5328 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Special Fund was properly discharged from liability on reopening of claim for back injury where last payment on aggravated back injury, of which employer had full knowledge, was made within 3 years of reopening date. Scoppo v American Brake Shoe Co., 43 A.D.2d 603, 348 N.Y.S.2d 598, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3245 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1973).

16. Date of disability

In occupational disease case, Workmen's Compensation Board may properly fix date of disablement at time of need of medical care and before any actual loss of wages. Smith v Ingersoll-Rand Co., 50 A.D.2d 988, 376 N.Y.S.2d 262, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11957 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

Substantial evidence supported Workmen's Compensation Board's finding that employee was disabled by silicosis on May 25, 1960 despite fact that he returned to work and remained there until November, 1971. Smith v Ingersoll-Rand Co., 50 A.D.2d 988, 376 N.Y.S.2d 262, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11957 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

Fixing date of disablement by occupational disease is factual question for Workmen's Compensation Board and must be upheld if supported by substantial evidence. Smith v Ingersoll-Rand Co., 50 A.D.2d 988, 376 N.Y.S.2d 262, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11957 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

17. Liens on special funds and payments made therefrom

Where the widow died before an award was made her attorney's fees could not be made liens on payments made to the special funds. De Stefano v Meerbaum, 272 A.D. 981, 72 N.Y.S.2d 840, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4490 (N.Y. App. Div. 1947).

Though insurance carrier was required by Workmen's Compensation Law to pay moneys into vocational rehabilitation fund and into fund for reopened cases, carrier was not entitled to a lien in such amounts against amount widow recovered in wrongful death action. In re Estate of Grasso, 1 Misc. 2d 704, 148 N.Y.S.2d 850, 1956 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2220 (N.Y. Sur. Ct. 1956).

18. Effect of third party liability for compensation

Failure of claimant to prosecute third party action to a conclusion is not a bar to reopening compensation claim where two trials were had but no decisive jury verdict ever rendered and during the course of hearings on reopening claimant offered to assign his third party claim to the carrier which offer was rejected. Holdren v Rupp, 282 A.D. 783, 122 N.Y.S.2d 441, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4954 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

The Special Fund and not a carrier was liable for an award of the Board in 1951 upon reclassification of claimant's disability following the closing of the case after claimant, injured in 1941, received sum in settlement of third-party action and thereafter in 1945 Board made an award which was less than the amount received in the third-party action. Craven v Andrews, 283 A.D. 345, 128 N.Y.S.2d 143, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4676 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Where the compensation insurance carrier, after serving notice of lien on the deceased employee's widow's right of action against a third person for causing the employee's death, voluntarily waived one-half of its lien in connection with a settlement of the third-party right of action, which one-half amounted to $2,026.50, it was not entitled to credit for the amount so waived against its liability to the Special Fund under this section as representing a payment of compensation to which the widow was "entitled." Murray v Farmingdale Federal Sav. & Loan Asso., 11 A.D.2d 452, 207 N.Y.S.2d 805, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6721 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Workmen's Compensation Board, in holding hearings on reopening of compensation file, erred in failing to afford employer's compensation carrier, which had been discharged from liability, opportunity to develop what evidence it might desire to present concerning contention that carrier had consented to third-party settlement of claimant's accident. Rought v Swift & Co., 55 A.D.2d 763, 389 N.Y.S.2d 460, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15548 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976).

Evidence supported determination of Workmen's Compensation Board that claimant had not voluntarily discontinued his third-party action, in case in which carrier contended that claim for further compensation was barred on basis that voluntary discontinuance had occurred without its consent. Maher v State University College, 59 A.D.2d 814, 399 N.Y.S.2d 74, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13896 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

19. Reopening cases, generally

The provisions of § 123 limit the board's right to open cases and relieve the special fund for reopened cases of responsibility in 7 year old cases contested and decided adversely to the claimant or closed without award and without determination on the merits. Kaplan v Wirth & Birnbaum, 301 N.Y. 121, 92 N.E.2d 919, 301 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 121, 1950 N.Y. LEXIS 822 (N.Y. 1950).

There is nothing in this section to suggest that rights or liabilities of parties are dependent in any special manner upon reopening of case upon board's own motion. Ryan v American Bridge Co., 243 A.D. 496, 278 N.Y.S. 612, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7104 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 268 N.Y. 502, 198 N.E. 375, 268 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 502, 1935 N.Y. LEXIS 980 (N.Y. 1935).

Where case had been taken under advisement by board as to claimant's hospital bill and doctor bill, and had been referred to referee in Oct. 1932, case had been reopened and was therefore pending on April 24, 1933. Lanfield v Cady, 248 A.D. 926, 290 N.Y.S. 234, 1936 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8097 (N.Y. App. Div. 1936).

Where claimant suffered a back injury in course of employment in 1950 for which he received compensation until 1954, when the case was closed, and again in 1957 suffered further back trouble while employed by a different employer, and a doctor's report was filed in connection with the 1957 claim indicating that it was probably related to the 1950 accident, whereupon the second employer requested reopening of the 1950 claim on the basis of such report, the Board was justified in reopening the 1950 claim, treating the doctor's report as made within seven years and as an application for reopening, discharging the Special Fund, and charging the claim back against the initial insurance carrier. Wilson v Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., 15 A.D.2d 847, 224 N.Y.S.2d 362, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11421 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

The filing of a report indicating a change of condition was sufficient to warrant the board's action in reopening a matter previously closed by the referee. Rawlings v Reliable Sample Co., 30 A.D.2d 722, 291 N.Y.S.2d 669, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3569 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1968).

Section of the Workmen's Compensation Law shifting liability to the Special Fund for Reopened Cases for payment of compensation for certain state claims is inapplicable where claimant applies to reopen case within seven years of accident. Italiano v Mobil Oil Corp., 50 A.D.2d 638, 374 N.Y.S.2d 162, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12454 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

Claimant's recommencement of treatment in 1984 did not constitute "reopening" of case within 3 years of last payment of compensation in 1982, and thus did not take matter outside purview of CLS Work Comp § 25-a. Loiacono v Sears Roebuck & Co., 230 A.D.2d 351, 654 N.Y.S.2d 463, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2227 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

The doctor's report clearly made reference to the changed condition in the employee's right knee; therefore, the employee's application to reopen the second case was made within seven years of the injury and was sufficient notice to the board of the employee's application to reopen his second case and the second insurer was properly put back on notice Davis v T.J. Madden Constr. Co., 295 A.D.2d 826, 744 N.Y.S.2d 546, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6802 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2002).

Closure of a workers' compensation case for purposes of N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a discharged an employer's workers' compensation carrier from liability even though the parties anticipated that the claimant might require further medical treatment; the fact that there could be a deterioration in the claimant's physical condition requiring another reopening of the claimant's case did not mean that the matter was not fully closed for the purposes of § 25-a, and the fact that the matter was reopened shortly thereafter did not change the result. Andrus v Purolator Prods., 301 A.D.2d 762, 753 N.Y.S.2d 224, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 87 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

Where the Workers' Compensation Board closed an employee's case without resolving the issues of permanency and whether surgery was indicated, the closing contemplated further proceedings to establish the extent of claimant's disability, and substantial evidence supported the Board's finding that the case was not truly closed; moreover, the question of whether or not the employee's case was truly closed also determined the applicability of N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 123, as that statute's time limits applied only to truly closed cases. Carubia v Colt Indus., 12 A.D.3d 827, 783 N.Y.S.2d 891, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13248 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2004).

Workers' compensation board properly found that a worker did not sustain a causally related disability; a psychotic episode suffered was a result of current stress, and not a remanifestation of stress the worker suffered while she was employed, and therefore N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a was applicable. Berkley v Irving Trust Co., 15 A.D.3d 750, 789 N.Y.S.2d 552, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1446 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2005).

Although a workers' compensation law judge stated in 2001 that no further action was planned by the Workers' Compensation Board, the record reflected that further proceedings were contemplated; therefore, substantial evidence existed to support the Board's conclusion that N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a did not apply. Matter of Washburn v Bob Hooey Constr. Co., 39 A.D.3d 956, 833 N.Y.S.2d 696, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4148 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

20. Special fund liability, generally

If it is determined that award should be made from special fund provided for in this section it should not be different in amount because of an appeal. Payment should be made from fund from time it would have commenced but for erroneous award. Vleck v Parry, 270 N.Y. 371, 1 N.E.2d 468, 270 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 371, 1936 N.Y. LEXIS 1556 (N.Y. 1936).

A ruling, in part made by the Chairman of the Board and in part by the Board and its Referee, which imposed liability on the Special Fund for medical care longer than 18 years after the accident and 8 years after the last payment of compensation, could be reviewed under § 23 of the Workmen's Compensation Law, where the process was a closely integrated series of related and dependent procedural steps involving decisions by the Referee, the Board, and the Chairman; although a decision of the Chairman under § 25-a(2) which was independent of Board implementation might be reviewed separately in an Article 78 proceeding. Crowl v New York, Dep't of Hospitals, 18 N.Y.2d 23, 271 N.Y.S.2d 659, 218 N.E.2d 537, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 1274 (N.Y. 1966).

There is no express requirement, in order to shift liability for workmen's compensation benefits to the Special Fund for reopened cases, that there be a formal opening of a claim or a prior formal award. Riley v Aircraft Products Mfg. Corp., 40 N.Y.2d 366, 386 N.Y.S.2d 838, 353 N.E.2d 801, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 2895 (N.Y. 1976).

Accrual date of claim for death benefits is necessarily date of death giving rise to claim, and thus date of death begins running of limitations period of CLS Work Comp § 25-a(6); time bar of CLS Work Comp § 123 is not applicable. Zechmann v Canisteo Volunteer Fire Dep't, 85 N.Y.2d 747, 628 N.Y.S.2d 249, 651 N.E.2d 1268, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 1115 (N.Y. 1995).

Incorporation of CLS Work Comp § 123 into CLS Work Comp § 25-a(1) does not alter scope of § 123, which applies only to reopened cases, and thus "18- and 8"-year limitation of § 123 did not apply to new claim for death benefits that was brought against Special Fund for Reopened Cases separately from, and subsequently to, disability claim that had been closed. Zechmann v Canisteo Volunteer Fire Dep't, 85 N.Y.2d 747, 628 N.Y.S.2d 249, 651 N.E.2d 1268, 1995 N.Y. LEXIS 1115 (N.Y. 1995).

Disability and death claims are two separate claims so that an award on a death claim which came within the provisions of this section should be paid from the fund although payments had been made on the disability claim within the three year period. De Santis v Folcaro, 259 A.D. 768, 18 N.Y.S.2d 259, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6586 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

Liability of the special fund is not created by reason of the obligation on the part of the employer but solely by virtue of the lapse of time. Becker v Marcy State Hospital, 264 A.D. 643, 38 N.Y.S.2d 219, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4224 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

Award should have been made against special fund under Work. Comp. Law, § 25-a, where at time award was made seven years had elapsed since date of injury, and three years had elapsed from date of last payment of compensation, assuming that payment of medical expenses and wages during period of disability was an advance payment of compensation. Larac v Munson S. S. Lines, 264 A.D. 923, 36 N.Y.S.2d 57, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5387 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

Liability against Fund for Reopened Cases arises only under precise conditions set forth in this section, and if these conditions are not met there can be no liability against this fund simply because an additional benefit is allowed after a commuted award has been paid into Aggregate Trust Fund under § 27. Pascucci v William Kennedy Const. Co., 270 A.D. 83, 58 N.Y.S.2d 667, 1945 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2806 (N.Y. App. Div. 1945).

The Workmen's Compensation Board may apportion liability between a self-insured employer in the Special Fund without rescinding a prior schedule award and crediting the special Fund by the amount of payment made under that award. Brown v Interstate Motor Freight System, Inc., 32 A.D.2d 51, 299 N.Y.S.2d 304, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4161 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969), aff'd, 26 N.Y.2d 735, 309 N.Y.S.2d 37, 257 N.E.2d 286, 1970 N.Y. LEXIS 1588 (N.Y. 1970).

Since the shifting of liability under Workmen's Compensation L § 25-a is dependent upon the passage of time where no further proceedings are contemplated and since an order for continued treatment under § 13 does not prevent the shifting of liability therefor to the Special Fund, the board's discretion in closing or not closing a case is not so absolute that it may refuse to do so solely to thwart said shift of liability. Wiley v Van Der Horst Corp., 38 A.D.2d 642, 327 N.Y.S.2d 104, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2672 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1971).

Once, solely by reason of requisite passage of time, Special Fund for Reopened Cases becomes liable for compensation benefits, it succeeds to procedural rights of carrier and liability shifts entirely from carrier to fund. De Mayo v Rensselaer Polytech Inst., 144 A.D.2d 740, 535 N.Y.S.2d 152, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10911 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988), aff'd, 74 N.Y.2d 459, 548 N.Y.S.2d 630, 547 N.E.2d 1157, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 3217 (N.Y. 1989).

Agency's belated determination that an injured worker should have been awarded permanent total disability after a work-related accident deprived the worker of sight in the only eye that worked should not have resulted in a modified award for which the New York Special Fund Conservation Committee was responsible without consideration as to whether an award subject to the limits on Special Fund responsibility would unduly prejudice the worker. Jansch v Sagamore Children's Fund, 302 A.D.2d 851, 756 N.Y.S.2d 326, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1734 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

Finding that special fund was required to pay for claimant's treatment of right arm pain incurred while working for the claimant's employer was supported by substantial evidence, as the evidence showed the claimant's case was closed by the Workers' Compensation Board and was not reopened for more than seven years following the injury and three years following the last payment of compensation; since the reopening and last payment of compensation did not occur within those time periods, N.Y. Workers. Comp. Law § 25-a(1) dictated that the special fund cover the cost of further treatments. Jones v HSBC, 304 A.D.2d 864, 757 N.Y.S.2d 368, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3501 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

Although the special fund claimed the claimant's case was reopened, and, thus, it was not responsible for paying for the claimant's treatment that otherwise occurred more than seven years after the date of injury and more than three years following the last payment of compensation, that argument had to be rejected, as the workers' compensation carrier's act of paying for medical treatment did not constitute payment of compensation for purposes of determining the time periods under N.Y. Workers' Compensation Law § 25-a. Jones v HSBC, 304 A.D.2d 864, 757 N.Y.S.2d 368, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3501 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

21. —Open claims

Where claim was at no time finally disposed of or closed by board, after filing of claim, this section has no application. Naylor v Carey, 250 A.D. 792, 293 N.Y.S. 775, 1937 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9020 (N.Y. App. Div. 1937).

This section has no application to a case which was open on April 24, 1933 and never closed but adjourned from year to year with the consent and approval of the employer. Gordon v Pennsylvania R. Co., 269 A.D. 794, 55 N.Y.S.2d 42, 1945 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3883 (N.Y. App. Div. 1945).

Where a surviving child, following cessation of payments to her at age 18 and the expiration of the 7 and 3 lapse periods, applied for resumption of payments on the ground that she was a dependent crippled child, the fact that the original claim for death benefits as filed by her mother was still open prevented transfer of liability to the special fund for reopened cases. Branciforte v H. Kohnstemm & Co., 272 A.D. 855, 70 N.Y.S.2d 364, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3916 (N.Y. App. Div.), app. dismissed, 297 N.Y. 594, 75 N.E.2d 267, 297 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 594, 1947 N.Y. LEXIS 1077 (N.Y. 1947).

A case in which numerous hearings are held before the board, and which is marked continued at the close of each, ultimately terminating in an award, was never closed, and hence never reopened, and this section is not applicable. Baker v Crispell Bros., 275 A.D. 735, 87 N.Y.S.2d 193, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4245 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

The Special Fund is not liable under this section with respect to cases which have never been closed and in which further proceedings are contemplated. Janikowski v Yardley's of London, Inc., 11 A.D.2d 577, 201 N.Y.S.2d 157, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9926 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Where claimant first suffered from dermatitis in 1946, when her work for a particular employer exposed her to benzol, turpentine, and ink, again, in 1951, developed a skin irritation when exposed to chocolate in course of a different employment, for which compensation was awarded and the case closed in 1951, and still subsequently, in 1952, became disabled while working for a third employer as the result of exposure to "tintex," following which compensation was paid by the last employer until a new hearing was held in 1958 to determine whether disability was associated with prior exposures, on the basis of medical testimony the board properly found that each claim was independent and discharged the Special Fund from liability. Mannix v Park & Tilford Distillers, 12 A.D.2d 558, 207 N.Y.S.2d 50, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7259 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

The special fund for reopened cases is not required to pay a claim that has in fact never been closed, even though more than seven years have passed from the date of the injury and no previous award has been rendered, since further proceedings were actually contemplated in the former case. Abelowitz v Sterling Tool Co., 26 A.D.2d 875, 274 N.Y.S.2d 118, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3301 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1966).

Workmen's Compensation Board properly discharged Special Fund for Reopened Cases from liability where closing of claim for knee injury "until claimant may be present to be examined by State Board" was not a "true closing". Lopez v New York Auction Service, 43 A.D.2d 606, 348 N.Y.S.2d 594, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3249 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1973).

22. —Delayed claims

Application held in abeyance for filing of medical report was not open and pending on April 24, 1933, and award should be made under § 25-a. Fallon v New York Color & Chemical Co., 275 N.Y. 573, 11 N.E.2d 760, 275 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 573, 1937 N.Y. LEXIS 1554 (N.Y. 1937).

In the case of "stale" initial claims, i.e., claims arising from old injuries without there ever having been a formal opening or award, it is consistent with objective of statute creating the Special Fund for reopened cases to shift liability to the Special Fund for an old accident and dormant compensation matter. Riley v Aircraft Products Mfg. Corp., 40 N.Y.2d 366, 386 N.Y.S.2d 838, 353 N.E.2d 801, 1976 N.Y. LEXIS 2895 (N.Y. 1976).

Where claimant suffered an injury to one of his eyes and received an award for temporary disability and the case was closed on such award in 1921, and in 1922 claimant asked for a reopening of his case and he was notified to produce proof of permanent loss of vision, and he did nothing more about the matter until 1938, at which time he submitted another application accompanied by a medical report, and case was reopened and award granted, a contention by the board that it had acted upon the application in 1922 is precluded by the long lapse of time which is conclusive evidence that the first application was abandoned, and therefore the award must be paid from the special fund under § 25-a. Kane v Utica Knitting Co., 259 A.D. 947, 19 N.Y.S.2d 961, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7393 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

Where a professional dancer suffered injuries while lifting another dancer during a rehearsal in 1945, filed a claim later that year, but the case was closed until claimant should request a hearing, a hearing was requested in 1950 at which time claimant was informed he needed proof of causal relationship and the case was adjourned several times to allow him to obtain such proof, and the case was again closed in September, 1952, following which, in December 22, 1952, claimant filed a formal application to reopen, which was granted, but no medical report received until December, 1955, it was within the discretion of the board to treat its decision reopening the case as of date of the application to reopen. Schun v U. S. O. Camp Shows, Inc., 11 A.D.2d 829, 203 N.Y.S.2d 141, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8496 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 8 N.Y.2d 709, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1866 (N.Y. 1960).

Where claimant was injured in 1960 but did not become totally disabled until 1971 and did not file claim until 1971, award could not be charged to the Special Fund for Reopened Cases as the claim presented was not a renewed claim following the prior closing of a case but rather was the initial claim. Riley v Aircraft Products Mfg. Corp., 45 A.D.2d 800, 357 N.Y.S.2d 49, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4576 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

23. —Closed claims, generally

For the purposes of this section a case is to be deemed closed when it is transferred to the abeyance file because no further proceedings are foreseen. Casey v Hinkle Iron Works, 299 N.Y. 382, 87 N.E.2d 419, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 382, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 947 (N.Y. 1949).

The determination with regard to the "closing" of a claim for purposes of § 25-a of the Workmen's Compensation Law is one of fact and a mere statement by a referee that a case is "closed" does not necessarily render it so within the meaning of § 25-a. Scalesse v Printing Advertising Corp., 30 N.Y.2d 234, 331 N.Y.S.2d 642, 282 N.E.2d 604, 1972 N.Y. LEXIS 1381 (N.Y. 1972).

A referee, not knowing when claimant would be able to attend a hearing since he was in the Army Transport Service, stated that the case would be closed until such time as claimant requested a hearing. This did not constitute an actual closing of the case, and when the case was resumed, the employer's and carrier's liability was not excluded by section 25-a. Diskin v 99 Wall Street Corp., 279 A.D. 1103, 112 N.Y.S.2d 127, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5986 (N.Y. App. Div. 1952).

Decision of Workmen's Compensation Board holding carrier rather than Special Fund liable for benefits, affirmed since the disposition made by the referee, the direction being "closed till such time as a deficiency arises", did not "close" the case within the contemplation of Workmen's Compensation Law § 25-a subdivision 1. Reeves v Charles Pfizer & Co., 28 A.D.2d 792, 280 N.Y.S.2d 916, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3710 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1967), aff'd, 22 N.Y.2d 950, 295 N.Y.S.2d 165, 242 N.E.2d 396, 1968 N.Y. LEXIS 1070 (N.Y. 1968).

Whether or not there has been the closing of a case for the purposes of Workmen's Compensation Law § 25-a is a determination of fact, and thus if the board's decision is supported by substantial evidence it cannot be disturbed. Lopez v New York Auction Service, 43 A.D.2d 606, 348 N.Y.S.2d 594, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3249 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1973).

The standard for true closure under Workmen's Compensation L § 15, subd 8(f) should be no stricter than that under § 25-a and § 123; the critical test in each instance being whether the case has, in fact, closed, a factual matter clearly within the province of the board to determine. Hirschhorn v L & N Fruit & Produce, Inc., 43 A.D.2d 1007, 352 N.Y.S.2d 685, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5616 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

Mere fact that workmen's compensation payments were to continue indefinitely in a closed case, with possibility of a future modification upon a change in claimant's condition or earnings, could not be taken to mean that such case was not truly closed, following passage of requisite statutory period, for shift of liability to Special Fund for Reopened Cases. McGarry v Capatano & Grow Constr. Co., 58 A.D.2d 372, 396 N.Y.S.2d 901, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12417 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977), aff'd, 44 N.Y.2d 946, 408 N.Y.S.2d 320, 380 N.E.2d 152, 1978 N.Y. LEXIS 2133 (N.Y. 1978).

Where an employee was injured in the course of his employment, filed a claim, and had his case closed pending the outcome of a third-party action, the case was not closed within the meaning of Work Comp Law § 25-a and therefore liability could not be shifted to the Special Fund for Reopened Cases when the case was reopened several years later on a claim for deficiency compensation. Anzovino v Westchester County Publishers, Inc., 81 A.D.2d 720, 439 N.Y.S.2d 461, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11274 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981).

Because there were unresolved issues as to whether a workers' compensation claimant's 1991 case had been closed, the Workers' Compensation Board properly found that N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a was inapplicable to the claimant's award of workers' compensation benefits. Matter of Hartwell v Amphenol Interconnect Prods., 51 A.D.3d 1245, 858 N.Y.S.2d 442, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4235 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

24. — —Case not "closed"

Case closed without prejudice, where carrier was required to furnish claimant competent surgeon, and requiring claimant to go back to same surgeon for reasonable period of time for observation is not closed within meaning of this section. Tiskavage v Tifft Const. Co., 243 A.D. 828, 278 N.Y.S. 446, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8469 (N.Y. App. Div. 1935).

Although the case of a waitress who slipped and fell on a staircase in February of 1956 had been marked "Closed" for claimant's non-appearance for ordered medical examination and was not "Reopened" until 1965, which was more than seven years after the injury and three years after the last payment of compensation, the board could properly reach the conclusion that the employer and its carrier were liable for an award, rather than the special fund for reopened cases. Stoever v Sheraton Astor W. L. Hotel Operating Co., 29 A.D.2d 597, 285 N.Y.S.2d 419, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2734 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1967).

"Closing" of case on August 6, 1979 was not final and special fund would be discharged and relieved of liability, where on such date there was outstanding claim for disability based on proper medical evidence, examination of claimant by carrier's consultant had yet to be conducted, and claimant was outside jurisdiction of hearing. Walker v Carrier Air Conditioning Div. of Carrier Corp., 110 A.D.2d 957, 487 N.Y.S.2d 883, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 48852 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1985).

Workers' compensation case closing made until claimant requested hearing and advised Board of her doctor's availability to testify was not true closing so as to shift liability for change-in-condition payments under CLS Work Comp § 25-a(2). Kirschner v Rowe, Walsh Associates, 144 A.D.2d 191, 534 N.Y.S.2d 509, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10362 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

25. — —Particular claims

Where claimant was originally injured in 1949 in course of employment by the same employer, suffering a back sprain from which he was unable to return to work for four months, and reinjured his back again in 1957 the Board was correct in holding compensation benefits for the 1957 injury should be charged to the Special Fund, it being conceded that more than seven years had elapsed since the original accident, notwithstanding certain payments were voluntarily made by the employer to claimant by reason of his disability within three years of the 1957 compensation application, there being testimony that such payments were made in accordance with the employer's policy to compensate employees for a certain amount of "sick leave with pay" depending on service, etc., irrespective of cause of absence. Stewart v First Nat'l City Bank, 15 A.D.2d 622, 222 N.Y.S.2d 374, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6847 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

The Board could properly decline to shift liability for further compensation to the Special Fund where a nasal condition constituting an occupational disease and which first developed in 1943 had continued for a period of nearly 20 years without compensable time lost during which the carrier had furnished medical treatment at intervals and only recently been closed but continued along from time to time on periodic authorizations of symptomatic treatment. Schwartz v Your Baking Co., 20 A.D.2d 422, 246 N.Y.S.2d 970, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4360 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

The Special Fund was liable under evidence that the claimant's decedent suffered three compensable heart attacks in 1948, 1951 and 1954; that by a 1961 board decision, disability benefits were allowed on the first two accidents and no loss was attributed to the 1954 attack; and all cases were closed with a direction to the carriers to continue the specified payments "until there is a change in condition or earnings;" that similar findings were made when the claim as to the 1954 attack reopened and reclosed in 1964 and 1967; and that upon the decedent's death in 1968, death was attributed equally to all three compensable heart attacks, and the respective carriers were each held compensable for one-third of the death benefits due thereon. Dennett v Dennett Refrigeration Equipment, 38 A.D.2d 659, 327 N.Y.S.2d 439, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2614 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1971).

Substantial evidence supported findings that a claimant's case, at the time benefits were suspended at the time of the claimant's incarceration, was closed; even in such a case, it was always understood that there was a chance that a case might have to be reopened, and so, since the case had truly been closed, the Special Fund for Reopened Cases would have to take responsibility for the resumed payments. Matter of Mackey v Murray Roofing, 24 A.D.3d 1149, 807 N.Y.S.2d 434, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14806 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2005).

Where the employee was injured in 1993, where the case was closed in 1994, and where the case was reopened in 2002 for shifting liability to the Special Fund for Reopened Cases, the case was then closed pursuant to N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a; as there was no evidence that further proceedings aside from issues related to § 25-a were contemplated in 2002, substantial evidence supported the determination that the case was truly closed in 2002 and that § 25-a was applicable to a subsequent further application for compensation. Matter of Hantz v Brightman Agency, 29 A.D.3d 1098, 816 N.Y.S.2d 199, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6155 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

Decision of the New York Workers' Compensation Board, which directed that awards of compensation be paid by the Special Fund for Reopened Cases pursuant to N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a, was reversed because the Board's determination that a June 25, 2003, decision, which indicated that no further action was planned, constituted a true closing was not supported on the record by substantial evidence because (1) the record demonstrated that on July 25, 2000, the issue of payment for a claimant's lost wages subsequent to June 8, 2000, was held in abeyance, (2) the issue was raised at least once more and, by a July 18, 2001, decision, was held again pending further medical evidence, and (3) neither the hearing preceding the Board's July 25, 2003, decision nor the decision itself addressed this issue. Matter of Granberry v JCCA Edenwald, Inc., 33 A.D.3d 1102, 823 N.Y.S.2d 550, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12503 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

Workers' compensation board erred in ruling that a worker's case was truly closed in 1992 and that liability shifted to the special fund under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a because the critical "true closing" date was 2000, when a workers' compensation law judge closed both cases without prejudice to the carrier seeking apportionment of the awards in the 1996 case against the worker's 1991 injury. Matter of Nickel v Kings Park Psychiatric Ctr., 52 A.D.3d 1130, 860 N.Y.S.2d 678, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5841 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

Ruling that liability for a workers' compensation claim had shifted to the special fund for reopened cases pursuant to N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a was proper because, during the eight-year period between when the board was first notified of the incident in 1998 and the employee filed his claim for compensation in 2006, no action was taken and no payments for compensation were made on the claim; as such, the case was then deemed closed. The board's determination that liability had shifted to the fund was supported by substantial evidence. Matter of Rodriguez v Greenfield Die Casting, 53 A.D.3d 728, 860 N.Y.S.2d 334, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5936 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

26. —Reopened claims

The provisions of § 123 limit the board's right to open cases and relieve the special fund for reopened cases of responsibility in 7 year old cases contested and decided adversely to the claimant or closed without award and without determination on the merits. Kaplan v Wirth & Birnbaum, 301 N.Y. 121, 92 N.E.2d 919, 301 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 121, 1950 N.Y. LEXIS 822 (N.Y. 1950).

Liability for payment of compensation award under CLS Work Comp § 25-a shifts from insurance carrier to Special Fund for Reopened Cases simply by virtue of passage of requisite period of time; once statute has been triggered, insurance carrier has no further interest in payment of claim, and special fund steps into shoes of carrier and succeeds to its rights and responsibilities. De Mayo v Rensselaer Polytech Institute, 74 N.Y.2d 459, 548 N.Y.S.2d 630, 547 N.E.2d 1157, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 3217 (N.Y. 1989).

A payment of compensation which avoids the liability of the fund need not be a payment under the direction of a formal award and payment of full wages for absences caused by the disabling effects of an injury made within three years of the application to reopen constituted a payment of compensation sufficient to avoid fund liability. Lopa v Brillo Mfg. Co., 271 A.D. 846, 65 N.Y.S.2d 673, 1946 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3384 (N.Y. App. Div. 1946).

Upon reopening a case originally closed following settlement of liability on a lump sum basis, pursuant to subd. 5-b of § 15, it was error to discharge the Special Fund under this section where it was agreed at the hearing that the allowance of $10 reduced earnings was made without accurate check of actual earnings, as it is the status of the disability, not the amount of the award, which controls as to liability of the Special Fund. Goldbard v Dixie Lake Hotel & Country Club, 11 A.D.2d 858, 203 N.Y.S.2d 317, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8538 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Where claimant suffered a back injury in course of employment in 1950 for which he received compensation until 1954, when the case was closed, and again in 1957 suffered further back trouble while employed by a different employer, and a doctor's report was filed in connection with the 1957 claim indicating that it was probably related to the 1950 accident, whereupon the second employer requested reopening of the 1950 claim on the basis of such report, the Board was justified in reopening the 1950 claim, treating the doctor's report as made within seven years and as an application for reopening, discharging the Special Fund, and charging the claim back against the initial insurance carrier. Wilson v Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., 15 A.D.2d 847, 224 N.Y.S.2d 362, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11421 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

A claimant, who had sustained a compensable injury, retired, and then sustained a consequential injury that was the responsibility of the Special Fund for Reopened Cases pursuant to Work Comp Law § 25-a, did not suffer a new accident entitling her to compensation at the rate applicable at the time of the second accident, but at the rate established at the time of original injury in that claimant's injuries cannot be attributable to conditions of employment existing at a time claimant in retired. Coakley v General Motors Corp. Harrison Radiator Div., 108 A.D.2d 983, 484 N.Y.S.2d 969, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 43311 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1985).

In view of specific statutory prescription of awards of deficiency compensation against special fund for reopened cases, CLS Workers' Compensation § 25-a(8), difference between amount actually received by claimant in third party action and benefits he is entitled to under Workers' Compensation Law continued to remain responsibility of carrier. Manning v Niagara Mohawk Power Corp., 119 A.D.2d 947, 501 N.Y.S.2d 218, 1986 N.Y. App. Div.

Medical report constituted application to reopen claim since report was based on doctor's examination of claimant which revealed "significant degenerative changes in the upper lumbar area," doctor thereafter prescribed conservative course of treatment, but he noted that MRI should be conducted if symptoms persisted and ordered claimant to undergo physical therapy and trial of TENS unit, and while doctor testified at hearing that claimant subsequently showed some improvement, he stated that symptoms thereafter worsened; instant report did not merely reflect claimant's continued disability and treatment, but rather indicated change in claimant's condition. Sartwell v Hercules Inc., 262 A.D.2d 766, 692 N.Y.S.2d 483, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6499 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Because the requisite seven-year and three-year time periods had elapsed upon reopening of a claimant's workers' compensation claim, and because the claimant made no application for deficiency compensation, the prohibition on transfer of liability to the Special Fund for Reopened Cases contained in N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a(8) did not apply. Matter of Belleville v Madame Pirie's, Inc., 28 A.D.3d 977, 814 N.Y.S.2d 305, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4564 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.3d 717, 827 N.Y.S.2d 687, 860 N.E.2d 989, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 3723 (N.Y. 2006).

Because the Special Fund for Reopened Cases made awards to an employee for compensable lost time beyond three years from the date of an accident, pursuant to N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a(8), it was not a "basic economic loss" that precluded the Fund from exercising a credit; any additional award owed to the employee represented deficiency compensation, the amount of which was not calculable. Matter of Kusy v South Orangetown Cent. School Dist., 34 A.D.3d 973, 825 N.Y.S.2d 786, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13207 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

At the time that N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a was triggered and liability was transferred to the Special Fund for Reopened Cases, the claimant had not had any compensable lost time after 1996, and the carrier maintained a credit against prior payments made under the schedule loss of use award; thus, the Fund was entitled to a credit for the schedule loss of use award. Matter of Castro v New York City Tr. Auth., 50 A.D.3d 1272, 855 N.Y.S.2d 711, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3148 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

Board's finding that N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a(8) was inapplicable to a petition to shift liability to the special fund for reopened cases was supported by substantial evidence because the relevant time periods were satisfied solely as a result of the passage of time without payment in a closed case, and the credit based on the claimant's third-party settlement was exhausted; there was no dispute that the case was closed in 2002, that the last payment of compensation to which the claimant was entitled was made in January 2002, and that the credit was exhausted i.e., the claimant's entitlement to benefits exceeded the third-party recovery prior to January 2002 such that the third-party settlement played no part in the subsequent expiration of the time periods set forth in N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a(8). Matter of Barberie v Helmsley Spear Co., 51 A.D.3d 1289, 858 N.Y.S.2d 469, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4379 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

27. — —Compensation

Where the employee earlier received only medical benefits under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 13(a) for a work-related injury, the employee had not received compensation pursuant to N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a(1) for purposes of determining Special Fund for Reopened Cases liability. Matter of Hantz v Brightman Agency, 29 A.D.3d 1098, 816 N.Y.S.2d 199, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6155 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

28. — —Determination whether case is closed

Since report of operation filed with Board by claimant's physician within 3 years of last payment of compensation might be treated as application to reopen case, Special Fund properly discharged. Davis v Monroe Sander Corp., 6 A.D.2d 933, 175 N.Y.S.2d 790, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5253 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Decisions of Workers' Compensation Board that case had not been informally closed, and thus that Special Fund for Reopened Cases was not liable for claimant's continued medical treatment, required reversal where initial "stale" claim was made more than 7 years after date of accident and more than 3 years after last advance payment of compensation. Loiacono v Sears Roebuck & Co., 230 A.D.2d 351, 654 N.Y.S.2d 463, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2227 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Review board properly determined that an insurance carrier, and not a state reopended cases fund, was responsible for further payments on a claimant's benefits; the claim was never officially closed, so pursuant to N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a the responsibility remained with the carrier, and not with the fund. Stevens v MMR Corp., 13 A.D.3d 1002, 787 N.Y.S.2d 461, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16187 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2004).

Trial court erred in determining that N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a did not apply to the instant action concerning claimant's workers' compensation benefits, because the determination that claimant's case was not truly closed was not supported by substantial evidence, as a N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 32 agreement between the claimant and an insurance carrier did not contemplate further proceedings. Matter of Bates v Finger Lakes Truck Rental, 41 A.D.3d 957, 839 N.Y.S.2d 234, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6891 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

Workers' Compensation Board properly affirmed a workers' compensation law judge's finding that liability was premature because an injured employee's case was not truly closed for the purpose of shifting liability to the Special Fund for Reopened Cases where awards for the period in question had been held in abeyance and resolution of that issue was not affected for seven years-after the injured employee had again started to lose compensable time. Matter of Anticola v Tops Mkts., 117 A.D.3d 1373, 986 N.Y.S.2d 883, 2014 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3878 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2014).

Workers' Compensation Board properly ruled that liability shifted to the Special Fund for Reopened Cases because the multiple C-8.1 forms filed by the carrier did not bar a finding that the case was truly closed inasmuch as they concerned objections to the payment of medical care and were unrelated to the payment of compensation benefits, and, despite the claimant's ongoing medical treatments and the carrier's continuing objections thereto, the record reflected that no further issues related to the payment of compensation were outstanding at the time the matter was closed. Matter of Guillen v Tulley Constr., 169 A.D.3d 1141, 92 N.Y.S.3d 489, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 947 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2019).

29. — —Penalty for late payment

Special Fund for Reopened Cases has responsibility to pay claimants promptly and should be fully subject to 20 percent penalty contained in CLS Work Comp § 25 whenever it fails to make payment within 10 days. De Mayo v Rensselaer Polytech Institute, 74 N.Y.2d 459, 548 N.Y.S.2d 630, 547 N.E.2d 1157, 1989 N.Y. LEXIS 3217 (N.Y. 1989).

30. — —Special Fund held liable

Where a 1945 compensation claimant had a recurrent bilateral hernia, regarded as "occupational," but his case was closed on a finding of no disablement subject to being reopened in case claimant wanted an operation and he suffered no diminution of wages until 15 years later when he underwent his first operation, whereupon the case was reopened, and an award made against the Special Fund for reopened cases and not against the claimant's employer. Hooper v Bethlehem Steel Co., 12 N.Y.2d 767, 234 N.Y.S.2d 717, 186 N.E.2d 565, 1962 N.Y. LEXIS 896 (N.Y. 1962).

Where the original compensation award was made to June 16, 1950, for permanent partial disability, and the case closed, following which the insurance carrier continued to make payments as provided thereby until it discovered, in 1955, that claimant was working full time without reduction of earnings, applied for leave to suspend payments, and a new award was made for the period 1950–1952, and still later, in 1957, the case was reopened because of a change of condition, the date of the last actual payment of compensation under the prior award was for the 1950–1952 period and the insurance carrier was entitled to be relieved of liability and liability shifted to the Special Fund. Ramberg v Dorn, 12 A.D.2d 562, 206 N.Y.S.2d 1008, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7265 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960), app. denied, 9 N.Y.2d 609, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1641 (N.Y. 1961).

Where claimant, a laboratory technician, developed tuberculosis as an occupational disease and the Board found October 10, 1949, as the date of disablement, and thereafter awards of compensation were paid her until September 29, 1954, following which, on March 29, 1955 the case was closed with a "no further disability" finding, but again reopened in 1959 on application of both the insurance carrier and the claimant, it was error for the Board to discharge the Special Fund for reopened cases where no change had been shown in claimant's physical condition. Gauzza v Columbia Presbyterian Hospital, 15 A.D.2d 710, 223 N.Y.S.2d 242, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12035 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962).

Workers' compensation board erred in discharging a special fund for reopened cases from liability, as the record as a whole did not establish that the wages paid to a worker by her employer were voluntarily made in recognition of continuing liability for her work-related injury as required by N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a. Matter of Faison v City of N.Y. Dept. of Human Resources, 24 A.D.3d 829, 805 N.Y.S.2d 167, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13564 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2005), app. dismissed, 7 N.Y.3d 783, 820 N.Y.S.2d 544, 853 N.E.2d 1112, 2006 N.Y. LEXIS 3207 (N.Y. 2006).

Special Fund for Reopened Cases was liable for the workers' compensation award under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a(1), as the case reopened more than seven years after the date of injury; forms submitted by the employee's chiropractor years before the reopening date did not constitute applications to reopen, as the forms did not indicate how the employee's condition had changed. Matter of Hantz v Brightman Agency, 29 A.D.3d 1098, 816 N.Y.S.2d 199, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6155 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a was inapplicable, and the New York Special Fund for Reopened Cases was liable for further compensation to a workers' compensation claimant as medical reports from 2002 and 2003 constituted a reopening of the 1997 case as they referenced such changes in the claimant's diagnoses as a new rotator cuff tear and chronic pain syndrome, and noted that the claimant's condition had become permanent, that further surgery was no longer a viable option, and that the claimant had to stop working. Matter of Phillips v Plainville Turkey Farms, Inc., 45 A.D.3d 1061, 846 N.Y.S.2d 427, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11691 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a was applicable to a workers' compensation claimant's degenerative condition in the claimant's right knee that was attributable to the claimant's left knee problems since seven years had elapsed from a workers' compensation claimant's left knee injuries, and three years had elapsed from the date of the payments under a settlement agreement pursuant to N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 32 with an employer, which shifted liability from the employer to the New York Special Fund for Reopened Cases; the Special Fund's liability was triggered upon the passage of time provided for in the statute. Under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 13, notwithstanding the settlement agreement's express terms, the employer was only statutorily obligated to remain liable for medical expenses absent N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a liability. Matter of Martin v New York Tel., 46 A.D.3d 1136, 848 N.Y.S.2d 730, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13201 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

Because an employee's third-party settlement played no part in the expiration of the time periods necessary to shift liability to the Special Fund for Reopened Cases, substantial evidence supported the Workers' Compensation Board's finding that N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a(8) was inapplicable and its ruling that liability for an employee's injuries shifted to the Special Fund. Matter of Sidorovski v New Venture Gear, 49 A.D.3d 1096, 853 N.Y.S.2d 731, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2692 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

Determination by the Workers' Compensation Board that liability for payment an injured employee's claim, based upon a non-permanent injury, shifted to the Special Fund for Reopened Cases pursuant to N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a was supported by substantial evidence that no further action was contemplated and that no issues remained unresolved; the pendency of a third-party action did not change the determination that there was closure to the claim. Matter of Giglio v C.I.R. Elec., 55 A.D.3d 1183, 866 N.Y.S.2d 412, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8078 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

Workers' Compensation Board properly shifted liability for a claimant's injury from a self-insured employer to the Special Fund for Reopened Cases since the case had been closed in 2004 following resolution of a reimbursement issue and was reopened by the employer in 2005 when it sought to be discharged from liability for the claimant's 1992 knee injury and the employer's application to reopen was made more than seven years from the date of the injury and three years from the last payment of compensation. Early v New York Tel. Co., 57 A.D.3d 1341, 870 N.Y.S.2d 573, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9972 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

Special Fund for Reopened Cases was properly found liable for a claimant's compensation because (1) a carrier made no advance payment of compensation, as nothing showed the carrier's payments were made to compensate the claimant for injuries sustained in a prior injury, as the injuries sustained in two accidents were distinctly different, and (2) a claim was reopened approximately 13 years after an injury and 12 years after that case was closed. Matter of Wetterau v Canada Dry, 124 A.D.3d 1165, 3 N.Y.S.3d 432, 2015 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 681 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2015).

Workers' Compensation Board erred in ruling, among other things, that liability did not shift to the Special Fund for Reopened Cases because liability was transferred to the Special Fund well before the January 1, 2014 closure date, and the record did not support a finding of a violation of the statute prohibiting the Board from accepting, after the cut-off date, any application by an employer or carrier for transfer of liability of a claim to the Special Fund. Matter of Verneau v Consolidated Edison Co. of N.Y., Inc., 174 A.D.3d 1022, 104 N.Y.S.3d 401, 2019 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5333 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2019).

31. — —Special Fund discharged from liability

Claimant sustained a back injury in 1940 for which compensation was paid. In February, 1954, claimant again injured his back. The carrier paid compensation without protest after 1954 accident with knowledge that 1940 accident played a part in the resulting disability, and it was not until October, 1955 that question of liability of Special Fund for Reopened Cases was mentioned. From medical testimony Board could only determine that 1940 accident contributed to the 1954 disability. Such being the case, there would be no question but that compensation was paid by carrier as to the 1940 accident. So, the special fund was properly discharged. Gillette v Staub & Son, 8 A.D.2d 896, 186 N.Y.S.2d 909, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8313 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Where case was reopened upon an application on behalf of an employee, in the form of a medical report, within 7 years after the injury, the Special Fund was not liable for the award. Melendez v Johnson, 30 A.D.2d 1030, 294 N.Y.S.2d 243, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3061 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1968).

Where workman suffered 25 percent loss in earning capacity in 1947 back injury, and had an additional 25 percent loss in subsequent 1961 and 1962 back injuries, Workmen's Compensation Board properly discharged carrier and Special Fund from liability for that proportion of permanent award as was attributable to 1947 accident where workman's application to reopen 1947 award, although dated June 1, 1964, was not submitted to board until 1967. Lukacina v Smith, 43 A.D.2d 768, 350 N.Y.S.2d 466, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2863 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1973).

Where claimant filed application to reopen claim about five years after original injury, Special Fund for Reopened Cases was discharged from liability for claim. Italiano v Mobil Oil Corp., 50

Board properly discharged the Special Fund for Reopened Cases from liability after a timely application was made to reopen prior compensation case where Board reopened case for "consideration of further disability," closed the case after claimant's second failure to appear, and then administratively placed back on the Board's calendar, in that nothing in the record indicated that the Board's closing after claimant's non-appearance was a final closing. Sweet v Slattery Associates, Inc., 84 A.D.2d 641, 444 N.Y.S.2d 289, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15762 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981).

The Workers' Compensation Board properly found that liability for benefits rested with the employer's carrier and discharged the Special Fund for Reopened Cases, where claimant's letter, filed well within the seven and three year statutory periods necessary to reopen a case, clearly sought further compensation based upon the original compensable injury and where the board's decision to reopen the case was predicated not merely upon claimant's doctor's report filed after the seven-year period had expired but also upon claimant's timely letter; there is no requirement that an employee's application for compensation be in any particular form as long as it sets forth facts sufficient to establish its purpose and a letter is sufficient. Ash v Native Laces & Textiles Co., 85 A.D.2d 822, 445 N.Y.S.2d 646, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16642 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981).

CLS Work Comp § 25-a did not apply to shift liability to Special Fund where (1) case was reopened within 7 years of claimant's 1991 accident to consider his request for continuing medical treatment, after he lost his job due to plant closing and while he was enrolled in retraining program that prohibited him from working, and (2) board's factual determination that case was not closed and subsequently reopened was supported by language of its 1997 decision which, rather than stating that case was closed, stated that "all present issues are resolved" and "no further action is planned or expected...at this time." Pegoraro v Tessy Plastics Corp., 287 A.D.2d 909, 732 N.Y.S.2d 260, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9974 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001), app. denied, 98 N.Y.2d 669, 746 N.Y.S.2d 455, 774 N.E.2d 219, 2002 N.Y. LEXIS 1632 (N.Y. 2002).

Liability in a workers' compensation case did not shift to the Special Fund for Reopened Cases under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a because at the time of a Workers' Compensation Law Judge's decision awarding benefits, a third-party action was still pending and, thus, no true closing of the case had occurred. Matter of Giemza v Town of Cambridge, 45 A.D.3d 1008, 845 N.Y.S.2d 846, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11144 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

Since no claim was being made for awards or medical treatment for a claimant's hand, the claimant's case was improperly reopened; accordingly, the Workers' Compensation Board erred in finding that liability shifted to the Special Fund for Reopened Cases under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a. Matter of Rogers v Del Labs, 52 A.D.3d 1129, 861 N.Y.S.2d 163, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5824 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

32. — —Not proper charge against Special Fund

The expenses of a non-emergency herniorrhaphy undergone without the prior authorization of the Board and at a time more than 7 years after the accident and the last payment of compensation but within two years of the reopening of the claim was not a proper charge against special fund. Marrameo v Manhattan Coat Co., 2 A.D.2d 102, 153 N.Y.S.2d 848, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4696 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

33. —Other particular claims

The fund for reopened cases is liable for the expense of providing an injured employee with orthopedic shoes where the employee was injured more than 20 years before the application and no compensation has been paid within 3 years. Casey v Hinkle Iron Works, 299 N.Y. 382, 87 N.E.2d 419, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 382, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 947 (N.Y. 1949).

Special fund is liable, under this section, for expense of further treatments to be administered to claimant, where record shows that following his injury lump sum award was made to him and case closed; that thereafter claimant neither lost time from his work nor suffered any diminution of wages, except during period of idleness which resulted from operation; that award for expense of said operation was terminated by payment in full; that after that award, no order, decision or other determination was made by state industrial board for any other award or for reopening case, nor was any notice given to employer or state insurance fund, as carrier, to that effect; and that no payments of compensation have been made for approximately fourteen years. Speranza v Loft, Inc., 253 A.D. 177, 1 N.Y.S.2d 746, 1938 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8387 (N.Y. App. Div. 1938).

Where it appeared that claimant was employed as a laborer in a municipal maintenance department, sustained a right inguinal hernia in a ditch-digging accident in 1940, for which compensation was awarded and the case closed, which condition reoccurred following a snowshoveling accident in 1949, then sustained a third accident while working on a highway in 1951, having already had a left side hernia even prior to the first accident, there being substantial evidence to support the board's finding of disability attributable to the 1949 accident as well as that of 1951, a decision charging one-half the latest award to the Special Fund would not be reversed. Coryer v Plattsburgh, 14 A.D.2d 656, 218 N.Y.S.2d 787, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9347 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

The Special Fund was liable where the death occurred more than 7 years after the initial injury and much more than 3 years after the last payment of compensation. Riccardi v Dellwood Dairy Co., 38 A.D.2d 666, 327 N.Y.S.2d 442, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2620 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1971).

In a workers' compensation proceeding, an initial claim arising from a 1969 injury that was filed 11 years later had not previously been "disallowed or otherwise disposed of," and thus there was no predicate to shift liability to the Special Fund under Work Comp Law § 25-a(1)(1), where neither a formal nor informal award was made prior to the filing of the claim, and where, the employer and its carrier having waived objection to the propriety of the award, the claim was properly treated as having been filed in compliance with Work Comp Law § 49-bb, and thus was not "stale". Scheulen v New York Times Co., 105 A.D.2d 502, 481 N.Y.S.2d 455, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 20538 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1984).

In a workers' compensation action arising from asbestos exposure, a workers' compensation board properly determined that N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a did not apply, because the instant claim for death benefits was made within seven years of the decedent's death, and thus liability did not shift to the Special Funds Conservation Committee. Matter of Andres v Occidental Chem., 43 A.D.3d 1245, 841 N.Y.S.2d 729, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9728 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2007).

When liability for a claim has already been transferred from the carrier to the Special Fund for Reopened Cases and the employee thereafter dies for reasons causally related to the original claim, the Special Fund remains liable for the claim for death benefits. Matter of Misquitta v Getty Petroleum, 150 A.D.3d 1363, 54 N.Y.S.3d 206, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3516 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2017).

Decision that liability had shifted to the Special Fund for Reopened Cases was affirmed because the claimant did not have to obtain another transfer of liability to the Special Fund upon the decedent's death as liability had already been transferred in 2000 and as such, N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a(1-a), which closed the Special Fund to newly reopened cases after a certain date, did not apply. Matter of Misquitta v Getty Petroleum, 150 A.D.3d 1363, 54 N.Y.S.3d 206, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3516 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2017).

34. Application to reopen claim

Where claimant made written application to board for further compensation for loss of use of foot, it was error for board to make award against employer and carrier and not against special fund under this section notwithstanding fact that decision on which award is based contains finding of fact that claim was reopened on board's own motion and not on application of employee. Sehm v Sibley, Lindsay & Curr Co., 242 A.D. 271, 275 N.Y.S. 582, 1934 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6044 (N.Y. App. Div. 1934).

Contention that award should be made against special fund under this section because no application to reopen was made prior to April 24 cannot be upheld in face of proof that on January 19, claimant's attorney sent to department of labor for attention by one of its executive officers letter asking for review of case and for reopening of same. Patsaros v John Eichler Brewing Co., 245 A.D. 873, 282 N.Y.S. 183, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11340 (N.Y. App. Div. 1935).

The provisions of this section have no application where a claimant applies to have his case reopened within seven years subsequent to the date of the accident. Ludgen v Jamestown Asphalt Paving Materials Corp., 257 A.D. 881, 11 N.Y.S.2d 886, 1939 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8265 (N.Y. App. Div. 1939).

Application for reopening of case which was filed within seven years from the date of accident, precludes payment of an award out of special fund established pursuant to provisions of § 25-a. Marinaccio v New York, 259 A.D. 947, 19 N.Y.S.2d 958, 1940 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7390 (N.Y. App. Div. 1940).

In determining whether an application to reopen a workmen's compensation case is brought prematurely where previous compensation has been authorized, "the date of last payment of compensation" within the meaning of this section is the actual date of the last payment of an instalment of compensation, not necessarily the last payment of the last instalment of the compensation awarded, so that a lapse of over three years since the most recent payment of an instalment, even though four instalments remain payable, will support an application under this section. Esterow v Schimel, Son & Lustig, 274 A.D. 325, 83 N.Y.S.2d 735, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3074 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

A claimant's letter to the Board stating that he was writing to see if the Board would consider opening his case, as his condition was getting worse all the time and he was having a hard time finding work, was sufficient and timely under subd. 1 of this section where it was sent to the Board within nine years following closing of claimant's case, and would sustain the board's discharge of the Special Fund, although not accompanied by a medical report, a medical report not being received until one day after three years from projection of the lump sum payment made in settlement of the claim. Wood v Albany County Highway Dep't, 18 A.D.2d 743, 235 N.Y.S.2d 825, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6182 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962), aff'd, 13 N.Y.2d 742, 241 N.Y.S.2d 868, 191 N.E.2d 919, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 1111 (N.Y. 1963).

35. —Medical report as application

A form medical report filed by claimant's physician indicating a change in claimant's condition could be treated as an application to reopen a closed claim even though the report had been made without claimant's knowledge and the physician did not know that the case had been closed. Norton v New York State Dep't, 1 N.Y.2d 844, 153 N.Y.S.2d 223, 135 N.E.2d 726, 1956 N.Y. LEXIS 836 (N.Y. 1956).

A physician's report setting forth all the facts necessary for an application to reopen may be treated as such application and where filed within 3 years of the last payment of compensation liability for an award rests on the employer and his insurance carrier rather than the special fund for reopened cases. Finkle v Cushing Stone Co., 278 A.D. 250, 104 N.Y.S.2d 692, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3787 (N.Y. App. Div.), app. denied, 278 A.D. 985, 105 N.Y.S.2d 1006, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5443 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

Where claimant sustained a heart injury in the nature of coronary occlusion and myocardial infarction in 1950, and the case was closed July 25, 1956, long after the last payment of compensation, with a finding of permanent partial disability, and thereafter, but prior to lapse of seven years from date of injury, the attending physician filed medical reports with the board stating that claimant had begun having attacks of angina pectoris and an extension of the original damage, such reports could be considered an application for reopening the case within the statutory period. Chase v Buffalo Aeronautical Corp., 12 A.D.2d 849, 209 N.Y.S.2d 609, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13210 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

A physician's report to the Workmen's Compensation Board, stating that there is a distinct relationship between different claims based on different accidents, is sufficient to put the Board on notice that the carrier's liability might be extended, and the Board is justified in treating it as an application to re-open, where made within seven years from date of injury, even though no formal request for re-opening the original case and apportionment of liabilities between insurance carriers appears therein. Costello v Industrial Container Corp., 20 A.D.2d 941, 248 N.Y.S.2d 911, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3923 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964).

Medical reports were sufficient to put Workmen's Compensation Board on notice that there had been a change in claimant's condition and that carrier's liability had not been concluded and Board was justified in treating such report as an application to reopen the claim and restore it to the referee's calendar. Sacco v Mele Mfg. Co., 27 A.D.2d 966, 279 N.Y.S.2d 327, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4336 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1967).

Medical report of claimant's changed condition filed within seven years of prior accident, which was sufficient to put board on notice that carrier's liability might be extended thereby, may be treated as application to reopen a closed case, even though no formal request accompanied report. Alexander v County of Erie, 28 A.D.2d 1069, 284 N.Y.S.2d 145, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3129 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1967).

The board properly found that the medical report was sufficient to put it on notice of a change in claimant's condition and treated it as an application to reopen the case within the statutory period, even though the medical report was the only report filed between the closing of the case and its reopening and that the claimant was not under treatment when the case closed but subsequently required treatment in the nature of diathermy, a back support and analgesics for chronic recurrent low back pain and a painful left leg. Koeppel v Novo Knitting Mills, 34 A.D.2d 1074, 312 N.Y.S.2d 576, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4254 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

Where, up until 1970, routine medical reports mentioned only the possibility of future avascular necrosis of the affected femoral head and where 1972 reports first referred to a good possibility of a need for surgery, the 1972 reports, although reflecting the continuation of preexisting condition, also demonstrated that claimant's condition had changed to the point where surgical intervention was indicated and thus supported finding of change in condition in 1972 and finding that the 1972 reports constituted an application to reopen within period of limitations, so that the reopening was not chargeable to the Special Fund for reopened cases. Martin v Bausch & Lomb, Inc., 54 A.D.2d 1002, 388 N.Y.S.2d 60, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14962 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976).

Board properly ruled that employer's insurance carrier was liable for compensation award to claimant and discharged Special Fund for Reopened Cases, since report by claimant's treating physician filed in 1981, which concluded that claimant's condition was permanent, constituted application to reopen closed case, and was submitted within 3 years of last payment of compensation to claimant in February, 1979; 1981 physician's report was sufficient to indicate change in claimant's condition, although same physician had concluded initially that condition was permanent, since board's initial determination making award and closing case with finding of no permanency was founded on substantial evidence, and thus was final and conclusive on question of disability as of that time. Kane v Mohawk Data Sciences Corp., 140 A.D.2d 837, 528 N.Y.S.2d 222, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5021 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

Liability of employer's workers' compensation carrier for injured employee's future medical payments would be discharged, and liability would be transferred to Special Fund for Reopened Cases under CLS Work Comp § 25-a, where (1) accident occurred on October 18, 1984, last payment of compensation was made on November 19, 1984, and thus criterion of requisite passage of time was met, and (2) chiropractor's reports did not indicate change in claimant's condition, and thus did not constitute reopening of case so as to remove it from purview of statute. McQueen v New York State Div. of Parole, 245 A.D.2d 851, 666 N.Y.S.2d 317, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13193 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d

36. — —Special Fund discharged

Examining orthopedic surgeon's medical report describing change in condition of workers' compensation claimant was sufficient to constitute application to reopen claimant's 1984 claim, even though it did not specifically mention claimant's 1984 back injury, where it specifically apportioned 50 percent of claimant's disability to 1990 incident and 50 percent to previous back problems; thus, under CLS Work Comp § 25-a(1), Special Fund was properly discharged from liability, even though 1984 claim was not reopened until after lapse of 7 years, where medical report was filed within 7 years from date of 1984 injury. Dumont v Nestle Co., 286 A.D.2d 804, 730 N.Y.S.2d 357, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8630 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

Workers' Compensation Board properly ruled that liability did not shift to the Special Fund for Reopened Cases because, although there had been true closure at the time that the claim was established and no awards were made, an August 2009 medical report from worker's chiropractor raised an issue of permanency, which constituted a change in worker's medical condition and reopened the claim, thereby warranting removal of the Special Fund from notice and reinstatement of the employer's liability for the claim. Matter of Williams v General Elec., 146 A.D.3d 1211, 45 N.Y.S.3d 673, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 408 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2017).

37. — —Report held not to be applicable

The filing of two routine medical reports which did not show a change in claimant's condition did not sustain a finding of the board that an application for reopening the case had been made. McKenna v Elm Tremont Coal Co., 9 A.D.2d 458, 194 N.Y.S.2d 705, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5239 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

In determining whether a changed condition is shown by a medical report filed near the end of the seven-year period, constituting an application for reopening the case, the medical report should not be given a strained or unreasonable interpretation, on the basis of loose language employed by the doctor in making the report, or unless it is reasonably clear that the doctor's intention was to indicate a substantial change of condition which would be good cause for reopening the case. Tripoli v Crucible Steel Co., 12 A.D.2d 425, 212 N.Y.S.2d 309, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11801 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), aff'd, 10 N.Y.2d 877, 223 N.Y.S.2d 504, 179 N.E.2d 509, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1004 (N.Y. 1961).

A finding of the Workmen's Compensation Board that a medical report filed within the seven-year period constituted an application for reopening the case and discharged the Special Fund was not sustained by the record where it appeared that the same doctor had been attending the same type of foot injury right along with no substantial change in the claimant's condition. Tripoli v Crucible Steel Co., 12 A.D.2d 425, 212 N.Y.S.2d 309, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11801 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), aff'd, 10 N.Y.2d 877, 223 N.Y.S.2d 504, 179 N.E.2d 509, 1961 N.Y. LEXIS 1004 (N.Y. 1961).

A medical report, which was one of a long series of routine reports filed over several years, could not be considered as a timely application to reopen claimant's case, where the report clearly indicated "no change on physical findings," but did differ from prior reports by advising a course of daily physiotherapy, a lumbosacral corset, and medication for pain. The court pointed out it was highly significant that it was almost two years after filing the report, and after three additional reports, all clearly indicating a changed condition, had been submitted before the board "recognized" this report as an indication of changed condition. Vito v Josall Roofing Co., 29 A.D.2d 798, 287 N.Y.S.2d 246, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4630 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1968).

Medical reports filed within the seven year period and following the closing of the case are insufficient to indicate a change in medical condition such as would constitute an application for a reopening of the case. Pizzarello v Harrison, 31 A.D.2d 878, 297 N.Y.S.2d 612, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4561 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969).

Medical reports, which merely indicated that claimant's knee condition continued but was stabilized, were insufficient to constitute notice to Workmen's Compensation Board of a change in claimant's condition, for purposes for statute relating to liability of special fund for reopened cases. Pucser v Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corp., 45 A.D.2d 798, 357 N.Y.S.2d 169, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4638 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

While medical reports can constitute application to reopen workers' compensation case, such reports must sufficiently give Workers' Compensation Board notice of change in claimant's condition; in determining whether changed condition is shown, medical report should not be given strained or unreasonable interpretation, and should not be interpreted as basis for application to reopen unless it is reasonably clear that such was intention of physician. Loiacono v Sears Roebuck & Co., 230 A.D.2d 351, 654 N.Y.S.2d 463, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2227 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Reports from claimant's chiropractor stating that claimant was on "maintenance care" or "symptomatic care for active relief of pain," recommending chiropractic adjustments as needed, and stating that her condition would not be permanent as long as periodic treatment occurred, were not sufficient to give notice of change in condition as compared to simply indicating continued disability and treatment. Loiacono v Sears Roebuck & Co., 230 A.D.2d 351, 654 N.Y.S.2d 463, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2227 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Because a chiropractor's medical reports did not refer to any change in an employee's condition or contain any opinion as to permanency, but merely recommended a continuation of chiropractic care, they did not display a clear intention to reopen the employee's workers' compensation case; therefore, the Workers' Compensation Board erred in ruling that use N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a was inapplicable. Matter of Gregorec v Brenners Furniture Co., Inc., 68 A.D.3d 1301, 890 N.Y.S.2d 197, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8945 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2009).

Employer could not reopen and transfer liability to the Special Fund for Reopened Cases (Special Fund) since the liability to transfer relied upon in the application, a May 7 2013 medical evaluation, occurred within 7 years of the accident, and the passage of the requisite time period without current liability or proof that further medical or indemnity payments were payable when the application was submitted, was not a proper basis to reopen the claim; the employer could not include medical liability subsequent to its application. The 2-year retroactive period of liability for the Special Fund was separate and distinct from the question of whether liability could be shifted to the Special Fund in the first instance. Matter of Whitmeyer v Oneida County, 155 A.D.3d 1268, 65 N.Y.S.3d 583, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8252 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2017).

38. Time limitations, generally

Literal construction of language of § 25-a "three years from the date of last payment of compensation," is clearly indicated, and construction "three years from the date when compensation should have been paid," cannot be accepted. Kiriloff v A. G. W. Wet Wash Laundry, Inc., 293 N.Y. 222, 56 N.E.2d 559, 293 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 222, 1944 N.Y. LEXIS 1307 (N.Y. 1944).

Where an application to reopen was in fact made within the seven year period but was denied on the mathematically incorrect finding that seven years had elapsed, on application for reconsideration after the limitation period had actually expired the board could rescind the former decision and restore the case to the calendar as of the former date. Roder v Northern Maytag Co., 297 N.Y. 196, 78 N.E.2d 470, 297 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 196, 1948 N.Y. LEXIS 860 (N.Y. 1948).

Where claimant was injured in 1933 and last payment of compensation was made and case closed in that year, more than seven years have elapsed since date of injury and more than three years since last payment of compensation was made or medical treatment furnished and if claimant's present disability is to be attributed to 1933 accident § 25-a is applicable. Becker v Marcy State Hospital, 264 A.D. 643, 38 N.Y.S.2d 219, 1942 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4224 (N.Y. App. Div. 1942).

The 7-year period under this section, as applied to a death case, is to be measured from the date of the death and not from the date of the disability. Burcia v St. Joseph Lead Co., 283 A.D. 1124, 131 N.Y.S.2d 644, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6493 (N.Y. App. Div.), app. denied, 284 A.D. 858, 134 N.Y.S.2d 277, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3769 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Where more than seven years lapsed since an accident and more than three years since the last payment of compensation, liability is shifted from the employer to the Special Fund for Reopened Cases. Greenwald v Electro Metallurgical Co., 284 A.D. 706, 134 N.Y.S.2d 451, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3476 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

The postponement of a hernia operation to a later date at claimant's election did not convert the accident into an occupational disease and postpone the date of accident to the date of disability due to the operation a year later. Buehler v Service Machine Works, 284 A.D. 923, 134 N.Y.S.2d 413, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4066 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

The seven-year period under this section, as applied to a death case, is to be measured from the date of death and not from the date of injury. Dickerson v Essex County, 2 A.D.2d 516, 157 N.Y.S.2d 94, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3820 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Subdivision 1 of this section, dealing with time limits upon applications to reopen claims, merely provides a fixed date after which the Special Fund becomes liable and does not require medical proof to substantiate an application to re-open the case. Wood v Albany County Highway Dep't, 18 A.D.2d 743, 235 N.Y.S.2d 825, 1962 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6182 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1962), aff'd, 13 N.Y.2d 742, 241 N.Y.S.2d 868, 191 N.E.2d 919, 1963 N.Y. LEXIS 1111 (N.Y. 1963).

For purposes of the time limitation provisions of subd. 7 of § 25-a, with respect to liability of the Special Fund upon reopening of a disability case, following commutation of the original award by lump sum payment as provided in this section upon an alien's departure from the United States, compensation payments should be considered as having terminated when the lump sum payment is made and the Special Fund is liable if that date is more than three years prior to filing of the application for reopening. Rolle v General Foods Corp., etc., 19 A.D.2d 188, 241 N.Y.S.2d 94, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3445 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963).

Although formula provided by subd 7 of this statute is to be applied in determining date of last payment of compensation "for the purposes of this section," the section referred to is the broad and comprehensive statute, substantive as well as procedural, which creates rights and liabilities in re-opened cases and provides basically that "if an award is made it shall be against the special fund" (subd 1). Schneider v Bruckner Beverages, Inc., 23 A.D.2d 512, 255 N.Y.S.2d 120, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5111 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 15 N.Y.2d 485, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1839 (N.Y. 1965).

That portion of the statute with reference to awards to be made against the Special Fund that "after a lapse of 7 years from the date of the injury or death also a lapse of 3 years from the date of the last payment of compensation" means that the 7-year period specified therein is to be construed from the date of death and not from the date of injury. Riccardi v Dellwood Dairy Co., 38 A.D.2d 666, 327 N.Y.S.2d 442, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2620 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1971).

Date of application to reopen, not date of treatment, is controlling, for purposes of determining party responsible for payment of compensation. Italiano v Mobil Oil Corp., 50 A.D.2d 638, 374 N.Y.S.2d 162, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12454 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

Examining orthopedic surgeon's medical report describing change in condition of workers' compensation claimant was sufficient to constitute application to reopen claimant's 1984 claim, even though it did not specifically mention claimant's 1984 back injury, where it specifically apportioned 50 percent of claimant's disability to 1990 incident and 50 percent to previous back problems; thus, under CLS Work Comp § 25-a(1), Special Fund was properly discharged from liability, even though 1984 claim was not reopened until after lapse of 7 years, where medical report was filed within 7 years from date of 1984 injury. Dumont v Nestle Co., 286 A.D.2d 804, 730 N.Y.S.2d 357, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8630 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

39. —Timeliness of particular actions

A 1932 claim disposed of in 1938 without an award, and reopened in 1952 was barred by the statute of limitations though the employer at all times had knowledge of claimant's disability and assigned him to lighter work, afforded medical treatment and paid full wages for time lost while obtaining medical treatment. Kapesser v New York State Police, 286 A.D. 897, 142 N.Y.S.2d 267, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4463 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

Claimant claimed injury resulting in blindness in 1926. An award for period ending in 1931 was made for permanent total disability. Thereafter, employer was permitted to submit further evidence against disability. In 1940, claimant's attorney requested hearing be cancelled because they had no testimony available at that time. Case was marked to be held in abeyance and placed in closed files. In 1952, claimant was located, hearings held and award made. Held: award reversed and claim dismissed. Claimant's complete inaction for 12 years and fact that there was no change in claimant's condition led to conclusion that claimant had abandoned idea of proceeding further. Case was closed and hence the time limitations provided in the Workmen's Compensation Law were applicable. McCulla v Alco Products, Inc., 5 A.D.2d 898, 171 N.Y.S.2d 166, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6709 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

In March, 1949 while working, decedent suffered left inguinal hernia for which he was awarded compensation and the case was closed in September, 1949. In November, 1953, while recovering from operation for strangulated hernia, decedent was taken with severe pains in abdomen and died. Autopsy showed cause of death was perforated stomach ulcer. Board properly disallowed widow's claim for death benefits on finding of no causal relation between accident or operation in death. As to award for disability from October 29, 1953 to November 2, 1953, Special Fund for Reopened Cases was properly discharged as the case was reopened within 7 years of the accident. 1953 order of referee instructing that case be reopened and placed on calendar with death cause was sufficient even though there had been no formal reopening. And, even if the June, 1956 decision be considered as the reopening, then award for 1953 disability was beyond the 2-year period preceding application for compensation for which fund could be held liable. Carpenter v Port Henry, 8 A.D.2d 568, 183 N.Y.S.2d 467, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9655 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

With respect to liability of the special fund under this section for death benefits due to a crippled child of a decedent, the insurance carrier, and not the special fund, is liable notwithstanding lapse of more than seven years since the accident and lapse of more than three years since date of the last compensation payment to the child, where payments were still being made, within the three-year period, under the award, to the child's mother. Calim of Rilitz, 11 A.D.2d 547, 199 N.Y.S.2d 1003, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10179 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 8 N.Y.2d 708, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1862 (N.Y. 1960).

Where a closed case was reopened at instance of the claimant on conventional application forms after he had unsuccessfully sought reimbursement from the insurance carrier for cost of treating his leg condition, more than seven years having elapsed from date of injury and more than three years since last payment of compensation was made, the responsibility for claimant's additional medical and hospital expense was erroneously imposed upon the employer. Wohlsen v New Rochelle Coal & Lumber Co., 14 A.D.2d 661, 219 N.Y.S.2d 124, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9329 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Board properly found that a claim was the responsibility of the Special Funds Conservation Committee under Work Comp Law § 25-a and properly limited the responsibility of the Fund to the two-year period prior to the filing of the claim where the record established that the claim was made more than seven years after the date of disablement and more than three years after the last advance payment of compensation by the employer. Ferraro v P. Nathan & Co., 84 A.D.2d 621, 444 N.Y.S.2d 254, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15732 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981).

Special Fund for Reopened Cases was improperly directed to pay an award of benefits to a claimant pursuant to N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a as the employer's workers' compensation carrier applied to shift liability under § 25-a less than three years after it claimed credit for an overpayment in lieu of making further benefit payments following the Workers' Compensation Board's affirmance of a new award after the claimant was convicted of petit larceny in connection with submitting false statements to the carrier and the claimant was ordered to pay restitution.. Matter of Negron v Sky View Haven Nursing Home, Inc., 50 A.D.3d 1344, 856 N.Y.S.2d 279, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3300 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

40. — —Longshoremen's and Harbor Worker's Act

Claimant, who had been receiving compensation payments under the Longshoremen's and Harbor Worker's Act (33 USC § 901) was properly permitted to file claim for compensation where, after a lapse of seven years, it was held in an action under the Jones Act that he was not a seaman. Luoma v Spearin, Preston & Burrows, Inc., 307 N.Y. 728, 121 N.E.2d 544, 307 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 728, 1954 N.Y. LEXIS 1458 (N.Y. 1954).

41. — —Trial on the merits

The dismissal of a claim based on a 1932 accident by a referee on the ground that it was barred by the statute of limitations was not a disposition "after a trial on the merits" within the meaning of the 1940 amendment to this section. Ennis v Kennedy Valve Mfg. Co., 282 A.D. 971, 125 N.Y.S.2d 535, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5598 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

42. — —Special Fund determined to be liable

Award is payable out of special fund created by this section rather than by self-insurer, where it not only appears that case was reopened more than seven years after claimant's injury and more than three years after last payment of compensation previously awarded, but that case had been properly and definitely closed in 1928, and that there was no pending application for reopening which was received before April 24, 1933. Requirement that such claims shall be paid out of special fund is mandatory. Ryan v American Bridge Co., 243 A.D. 496, 278 N.Y.S. 612, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7104 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 268 N.Y. 502, 198 N.E. 375, 268 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 502, 1935 N.Y. LEXIS 980 (N.Y. 1935).

Where injury was received November 6, 1925, and last payment made before September 3, 1929, when referee closed case without prejudice until claimant wished to reopen, and where commissioner on September 7 closed files without prejudice until claimant requested hearing, since case was not open on April 24, 1933, and injury had been received over seven years before award on November 6, 1935, against employer and carrier, and last compensation payment over three years before, award should have been against special fund. King v Schweinler, 247 A.D. 841, 286 N.Y.S. 287, 1936 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9002 (N.Y. App. Div. 1936).

Where case was closed in 1928 without prejudice, and reopened in November, 1934 on claimant's motion, award should be made against special fund, pursuant to this section. Greenberg v Fox, 248 A.D. 648, 287 N.Y.S. 906, 1936 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6662 (N.Y. App. Div.), aff'd, 272 N.Y. 549, 4 N.E.2d 730, 272 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 549, 1936 N.Y. LEXIS 1044 (N.Y. 1936).

Workers' Compensation Board properly directed that death benefits be paid by Special Fund for Reopened Cases, despite fund's claim that decedent's fatal heart attack occurred within 7 years of prior heart attack for which he was awarded total disability benefits, since fund was properly deemed to have waived issue where (1) it had knowledge of all pertinent facts but failed to raise any objection until after workers' compensation law judge discharged carrier from liability and determined that decedent's death was causally related to his prior heart attack, and (2) board found that carrier and claimant would be substantially prejudiced if forced to relitigate issue of causal relationship; special fund should raise its threshold defenses at earliest opportunity after it is placed on notice. Collier v Brightwater Beer & Soda Distributor, 147 A.D.2d 868, 538 N.Y.S.2d 90, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1970 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989), aff'd, 75 N.Y.2d 949, 555 N.Y.S.2d 690, 554 N.E.2d 1278, 1990 N.Y. LEXIS 930 (N.Y. 1990).

Liability of employer's workers' compensation carrier for injured employee's future medical payments would be discharged, and liability would be transferred to Special Fund for Reopened Cases under CLS Work Comp § 25-a, where (1) accident occurred on October 18, 1984, last payment of compensation was made on November 19, 1984, and thus criterion of requisite passage of time was met, and (2) chiropractor's reports did not indicate change in claimant's condition, and thus did not constitute reopening of case so as to remove it from purview of statute. McQueen v New York State Div. of Parole, 245 A.D.2d 851, 666 N.Y.S.2d 317, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13193 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 802, 677 N.Y.S.2d 72, 699 N.E.2d 432, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 1767 (N.Y. 1998).

43. — —Carrier determined to be liable

Disallowed case involving 1939 accident was reopened in 1945 and closed in 1947 for failure to produce the evidence outlined in the application. Thereupon, claimant promptly submitted the evidence and an explanation of the delay. Carrier now contended Board was without jurisdiction since more than seven years had elapsed since date of alleged accident. Held, closure in 1947 by a referee was only an interlocutory determination subject to review by the Board. Award against carrier, affirmed. Barnes v New York World's Fair 1939, 277 A.D. 819, 97 N.Y.S.2d 355, 1950 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3414 (N.Y. App. Div. 1950).

Where it appeared that claimant, then 19 ½ years of age, sustained a back injury in an industrial accident on May 31, 1945, in connection with which he filed a compensation claim on October 7, 1947, which claim was later dismissed and the case closed on July 1, 1948, for failure to prosecute, and that his application to reopen the proceedings filed approximately eight years after the accident would normally be barred under § 123, the application to reopen was nevertheless considered timely under § 115 since it was filed within 6 ½ years after he attained majority, and the liability could not be transferred to the Special Fund as the claimant would be prejudiced by a transfer of liability to the Fund in view of § 25-a precluding liability of the Fund for compensation retroactively beyond two years. Kulpa v Alco Products, Inc., 10 A.D.2d 747, 198 N.Y.S.2d 177, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11190 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 8 N.Y.2d 706, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1784 (N.Y. 1960).

44. —Tolling of limitation period

The limitations of this section on the liability of an employer or his insurance carrier are not tolled during the pendency of an appeal by a third person erroneously found to be the employer where neither the employer or his carrier were parties to the appeal nor concerned with it. Bellini v Great American Indem. Co., 299 N.Y. 399, 87 N.E.2d 426, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 399, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 949 (N.Y. 1949).

"During the pendency of an appeal provided for by section twenty-three" was only a requirement as to elimination of such appeal time pendency from time computation in determining seven and three-year limitation periods otherwise provided. Riddle v General Ice Cream Corp., 262 A.D. 353, 29 N.Y.S.2d 225, 1941 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5364 (N.Y. App. Div. 1941).

Civil Practice Act § 27 is applicable to a workmen's compensation death claim. Thus, the Italian widow of a workman killed in the course of his employment in 1942 had until two years after the proclamation of the Treaty of Peace with Italy to make a claim for death benefits. A letter written to the Compensation Board during this two-year period by the Italian Consul was a sufficient claim where it clearly showed widow's intention of claiming compensation death benefits. But since the broad terms of the Peace Treaty must be deemed to have tolled the 7-year limitation set forth in § 25-a, the award should not be made against the Special Fund for Reopened Cases but should be made against the carrier. Borelli v Rochester Transit Corp., 285 A.D. 230, 136 N.Y.S.2d 315, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3313 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

On an application for a reopening made more than 7 years after the date of accident and more than 3 years after the last payment of compensation, the award should have been made against the Special Fund under this section because the statutory periods specified under this section did not constitute a statute of limitations and hence, were not tolled by infancy, under the provisions of § 115. Longo v M & F Auto Wreckers, 4 A.D.2d 902, 166 N.Y.S.2d 900, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4292 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

"Continuing disability" of itself does not toll the running of time as to Special Fund nor does medical treatment. The factor of a continuing disability is only relevant to the question of whether or not there was a payment of compensation within three years of the reopening. Pizzarello v Harrison, 31 A.D.2d 878, 297 N.Y.S.2d 612, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4561 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969).

A decision of the Workers' Compensation Board discharging the Special Fund for Reopened Cases from liability pursuant to Work Comp Law § 25-a would be affirmed, despite the fact that seven years had elapsed from the date of claimant's original injury and three years had elapsed from the date of the employer's last payment to claimant, where claimant's physician's reports, which were filed within both limitation periods, and which described the exacerbation of claimant's condition, served as a motion to reopen the case, and gave sufficient notice regarding claimant's continuing disability and the employer's continuing liability to toll the provisions of Work Comp Law § 25-a. Russell v Carborundum Co., 105 A.D.2d 541, 481 N.Y.S.2d 485, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 20566 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1984), app. denied, 64 N.Y.2d 606, 487 N.Y.S.2d 1026, 1985 N.Y. LEXIS 18761 (N.Y. 1985).

Board properly applied CLS Work Comp § 115 to toll claims of decedent's children for purposes of reopening and liability under CLS Work Comp § 25-a. Hayes v Harris, 227 A.D.2d 864, 642 N.Y.S.2d 384, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5270 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 813, 649 N.Y.S.2d 380, 672 N.E.2d 606, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3092 (N.Y. 1996).

45. —Tolling of limitation period; mental incompetence

Where an employee is mentally incompetent § 115 limits the application of the time limitation of § 25-a. Pytel v Carborondum Co., 273 A.D. 832, 76 N.Y.S.2d 26, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4833 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948), limited, Longo v M & F Auto Wreckers, 4 A.D.2d 902, 166 N.Y.S.2d 900, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4292 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

The suspension of the statute of limitations is not literally in favor of incompetency as a legal status but in favor of a "person who is mentally" incompetent, in the factual sense and for whom no committee has been appointed. Macraken v R. & B. Lunch Co., 281 A.D. 215, 119 N.Y.S.2d 827, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3012 (N.Y. App. Div.), reh'g denied, 281 A.D. 912, 120 N.Y.S.2d 254, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3756 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Where prior closings were made inoperative by the determination that claimant was incompetent until the reopening, such fact nullifies the statutory requirements invoking Special Fund disability under § 25-a of the Workmen's Compensation Law. Aufiero v Highwall Metal Spinning & Stamping Co., 31 A.D.2d 877, 297 N.Y.S.2d 648, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4560 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 24 N.Y.2d 738, 1969 N.Y. LEXIS 2285 (N.Y. 1969).

Substantial evidence supported Workers' Compensation Board's finding of claimant's mental incompetence, thus tolling statute of limitations, where claimant manifested signs of behavioral changes, such as current memory loss, impatience, and disorientation, which condition grew progressively worse, claimant's wife and father testified about claimant's dramatic personality disorder following accident, his inability to remember simple and current events, perform routine tasks, or interact and socialize, and examining psychiatrist testified that claimant sustained brain trauma causing personality and intellectual dysfunctions. Uhler v A&P, 242 A.D.2d 754, 661 N.Y.S.2d 859, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8530 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

46. —Tolling of limitation period; military service

The time limitations of this section for holding a carrier liable for an award in a reopened case are not tolled by § 308 of the Military Law. Bellini v Great American Indem. Co., 299 N.Y. 399, 87 N.E.2d 426, 299 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 399, 1949 N.Y. LEXIS 949 (N.Y. 1949).

The time provisions of this section are tolled during the military service of a claimant where such a suspension is necessary to avoid prejudice to his rights and during the period when a former award was under appeal. Sturesky v Straussman, 273 A.D. 1036, 78 N.Y.S.2d 633, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5858 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

The sole criterion under this section is the passage of time. Hence, where the claimant was injured in 1941 and was disabled until 1943 when his case was closed without prejudice he thereafter served in the military service from 1943 to 1945 and he then applied to reopen his case in 1949, more than seven years had elapsed between the date of the accident and the date of reopening and more than three years had elapsed between the date of the last payment of compensation and the date of reopening. Under those circumstances, the express terms of this section oppose liability on the special fund. Schechter v State Ins. Fund, 283 A.D. 19, 126 N.Y.S.2d 257, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2968 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Sections 304 and 308 of the Military Law did not toll the time limitation of this section so as to relieve the special fund from liability. Walker v Symington Gould Corp., 282 AD 785, 122 S2d 565 (1953). 68 the time limitation during a claimant's military service in favor of the special fund where the claimant was injured in 1941, was in military service from 1943 to 1945 and sought to reopen his case in 1949. Both the statute and judicial decisions are clear that the benefit of this section is purely personal and may not be extended to relieve or protect others. Schechter v State Ins. Fund, 283 A.D. 19, 126 N.Y.S.2d 257, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2968 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

When an employee injured his back in 1939 and received an award of one week's compensation with the case thereupon being closed and he thereafter enlisted in the Navy in 1942 and remained in service until discharged in 1945 and, thereafter, in 1949, he suffered an attack of lower back pain which the Board found attributable to the original accident and reopened his case, the latter award was assessable against the Special Fund. The Special Fund was not entitled to the benefit of the Military Law (§§ 304 and 308) in determining the running of the periods of time specified in this section. Greenwald v Electro Metallurgical Co., 284 A.D. 706, 134 N.Y.S.2d 451, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3476 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

47. Review

A referee's finding of causal relation for medical care longer than 18 years after accident and 8 years after the last payment of compensation and imposing liability on the Special Fund, entitled the Special Fund to a review by the Workmen's Compensation Board of the referee's findings and the Chairman's authorization to furnish medical services. Crowl v New York, Dep't of Hospitals, 18 N.Y.2d 23, 271 N.Y.S.2d 659, 218 N.E.2d 537, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 1274 (N.Y. 1966).

Rule 5(c) of the Workmen's Compensation Board requires that in claims involving the Special Fund under this section the referee shall take all testimony without making any decision or recommendation and refer the completed record to the board for decision, and an employer, charged with knowledge of this rule, and aware that the board will not consider an application to review the referee's decision prior to conclusion of testimony, at his option may remain in the case and request notice of further hearings. Handler v Taterka, 22 A.D.2d 741, 253 N.Y.S.2d 321, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2940 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964), app. denied, 15 N.Y.2d 483, 1965 N.Y. LEXIS 1793 (N.Y. 1965).

Where Workmen's Compensation board reopened two closed claims and made an award, finding that each claim contributed equally to total disability, it was held that the decision must be reversed insofar as the award related to the earlier claim for which no compensation had ever been paid for lost time or wages, although the carrier had paid for medical expenses connected with this claim. Fair v Standard Milling Co., 23 A.D.2d 925, 259 N.Y.S.2d 375, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4292 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Where employer assigned claimant to another position after being injured, and there was nothing in the record to indicate that the employer did not receive full value for the claimant's wages, the decision of the Workmen's Compensation Board discharging the special fund for reopened cases was reversed. Nesbitt v Ellenville Electric Co., 28 A.D.2d 794, 280 N.Y.S.2d 997, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3712 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1967).

Upon reopening a case which had theretofore been closed by payment of a lump sum, where there was proof of claimant's average weekly wage before the accident, but no determination of his wage earning capacity thereafter and where the Board at the time of payment of the lump sum did not indicate a method for allocating the lump sum settlement, and there was no basis established for the Board's allocation of the specified sum per week, the claim was remanded for further proceedings. Rizzo v Glenwood Clothes, Inc., 33 A.D.2d 611, 304 N.Y.S.2d 561, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3036 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969).

Where finding of board was not sufficiently developed to permit review of its conclusion that case had been closed in 1964 and that claim filed in 1974 was not one for deficiency and thus should be charged against Special Fund, case would be remitted to board for further proceedings. Gantz v Wallace & Tiernan Lucidol Div., 41 A.D.2d 991, 343 N.Y.S.2d 972, 1973 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4367 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1973).

48. Erroneous awards or payments

Claimant became totally disabled from silicosis in 1946. Award was made and case closed. Thereafter, case was reopened and award was made in 1952 on basis of erroneous report filed by carrier for period in 1948. In 1953 carrier again resumed payments. Board properly declined to relieve carrier of liability and to charge the Special Fund with liability. Original error in 1948 was carrier's and could have been ascertained from its own records at any time. Since 1953 payments were of compensation for which award had been made within the meaning of this section, board's decision was technically correct. Moreover, appellants failed to appeal from 1952 award or to request its correction prior to resumption of payments in 1953. Burns v Anstice Co., 5 A.D.2d 895, 170 N.Y.S.2d 945, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6705 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

On appeal from a decision which denied the Special Fund credit against an award in a reopened case in which it was liable, of a sum representing the amount of an overpayment by the insurance carrier, such sum being the total of payments made after the claimant returned to work without the carrier's knowledge, the board holding that the present award was the liability of the Special Fund under the above statute and that since the overpayment by the carrier was for a period prior to the two year retroactive period provided thereunder and prior to the date when the Special Fund became liable, and since the carrier was not liable and was not charged with or called upon to pay any present award against which credit can be taken under § 22 the board was constrained to find that neither the carrier nor the Special Fund under the above statute was entitled to credit for the overpayment previously made, the Appellate Division held that explicit as the above statute is in detailing the Fund's liability, its rights and the limitations upon each, it found in it nothing to support the Fund's contention, and that the Fund's reliance upon the provision contained in the last sentence of § 22 seemed mistaken because there was here involved no "award decreasing the compensation rate". Basso v F. W. Woolworth Co., 24 A.D.2d 687, 261 N.Y.S.2d 570, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3554 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

If the facts were such in December of 1970 as to entitle workmen's compensation carrier to stop payments, neither the Special Fund for Reopened Cases nor the claimant would be entitled to a windfall merely because of a technical failure on part of insurer to file a Workmen's Compensation Board Form C-8 "Notice That Payment of Compensation or Disability Has Been Stopped or Modified" and supporting documentation. McGarry v Capatano & Grow Constr. Co., 58 A.D.2d 372, 396 N.Y.S.2d 901, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12417 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977), aff'd, 44 N.Y.2d 946, 408 N.Y.S.2d 320, 380 N.E.2d 152, 1978 N.Y. LEXIS 2133 (N.Y. 1978).

49. Other matters

An award for total disability due to silicosis was proper where a prior claim in 1944 had been denied for want of total disability and where application to reopen was made within 7 years although case was not formally reopened until 1954. Stimburis v Leviton Mfg. Co., 5 N.Y.2d 360, 184 N.Y.S.2d 632, 157 N.E.2d 621, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1501 (N.Y. 1959).

Where claimant had applied in 1931 to reopen his case on ground of total disability, and application was disallowed on ground that time for reclassification had expired, and where board reopened case, in June 1933 on its own motion more than seven years after injury and more than three years after last payment of compensation previously allowed, there was no undisposed of application to reopen nor any appeal pending on April 24, 1933, and payment of award should be made out of special fund under this section. Cordial v Townsend Furnace & Machine Co., 243 A.D. 829, 278 N.Y.S. 616, 1935 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8472 (N.Y. App. Div. 1935).

A compensation claim reopened after an unsuccessful third-party malpractice suit by the claimant was an action to recover deficiency compensation within the meaning of § 29. The employer was therefore liable, instead of the Special Fund, since the provisions of § 25-a governing the fund's liability do not apply to awards for deficiency compensation. Schreckinger v York Distributors, Inc., 9 A.D.2d 333, 194 N.Y.S.2d 67, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5599 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Sufficient basis for reopening a case to relieve the Special Fund from liability did not appear from a doctor's report, filed October 14, 1954, showing "change and need for medical treatment and a new condition, periarthritis of the left knee," where, subsequently, five reports filed by attending physicians up to and including October 24, 1956, referred only to a lower back condition without mentioning the knee, no action having been taken by the board on the 1954 report until claimant applied, in January, 1957, to have the claim reopened for refusal to pay medical expenses. Erwin v Minneapolis Honeywell Regulator Co., 9 A.D.2d 989, 194 N.Y.S.2d 796, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5308 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Claimant's refusal to undergo surgery for a hernia was not "unreasonable" within the meaning of this section where he had already twice undergone operations for the hernia, following which it recurred, and there was medical testimony that no guarantee of nonrecurrence could be made even if he submitted to a third operation. Kovary v American Woolen Co., 12 A.D.2d 711, 208 N.Y.S.2d 821, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6256 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

The board was not barred from reopening, in 1957, a claim originally based upon a 1938 accident in which claimant was overcome by powder smoke while working on a tunnel construction project and for which he was awarded disability benefits on the basis of a succeeding bronchitic condition, his later disability having been diagnosed as due to silicosis, and imposing liability on the Special Funds. Harley v Walsh Constr. Co., 14 A.D.2d 614, 218 N.Y.S.2d 331, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9391 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Conditional authorization granted to a claimant by the board on June 24, 1958, to secure medical care for a leg condition upon a finding by the board that the condition required treatment and was the result of a 1934 industrial accident for treatment of which, at this time, the Special Fund would be responsible, was abrogated where the board never finally imposed responsibility upon the Special Fund. Wohlsen v New Rochelle Coal & Lumber Co., 14 A.D.2d 661, 219 N.Y.S.2d 124, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9329 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Assessments made by the Chairman of the Workmen's Compensation Board against a self-insured employer properly included apportionment payments made by him to insurance carriers or self-insurers of the claimant-employee's last employer pursuant to § 44. Mason & Hanger-Silas Mason Co. v Senior, 27 A.D.2d 30, 275 N.Y.S.2d 755, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2762 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1966).

Claimant's refusal to submit to further surgery was reasonable and not a ground to preclude award of compensation benefits where claimant had already undergone two myelograms, where claimant had undergone major surgery once, and where although new surgery according to all the physicians involved was medically indicated, it carried no guarantee of success and the possibility existed that such surgery could worsen claimant's condition or result in paralysis. Messina v Speranza, 79 A.D.2d 807, 435 N.Y.S.2d 96, 1980 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14217 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1980).

Average weekly wage calculation used to determine permanent disability award for occupational injury sustained by worker in 1973, rather than average weekly wage received by comparable employee for one-year period under CLS Work § 14(2), applied to death claim asserted by widow following worker's death from lung disease in 1995. House v International Talc Co., 261 A.D.2d 687, 689 N.Y.S.2d 552, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4702 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1999).

Workers' Compensation Board's shift of liability from an employer's carrier to the Special Fund for Reopened Cases under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 25-a(1) was not premature because nothing in relevant precedent would resurrect an abandoned issue, based on the untimely appeal of a fraud finding against the employee, of the employee's entitlement to future wage replacement benefits. Matter of Zimmerman v Quality Inn, 25 A.D.3d 829, 806 N.Y.S.2d 316, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 84 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2006).

As assessments against group self-insured trusts (GSITs) were based on the Workers' Compensation Board's unreasonable interpretation of the words "the preceding year," which was used in calculating pure premiums and allocating administrative assessments levied against the GSITs under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law §§ 15(8), 25-a, 50(5), 151, the assessments were vacated. Matter of Nuara v State of New York Workers' Compensation Bd., 979 N.Y.S.2d 453, 43 Misc. 3d 425, 2010 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 6891 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2010).

50. —Death benefits

Right to death benefits does not exist until death of injured employee, on which event right springs into existence as original independent right, and, therefore, L 1923, c 566, is applicable where accident happened prior to time statute took effect but death resulting from accident occurred thereafter. Donoho v Atlantic Basin Iron Works, 210 A.D. 535, 206 N.Y.S. 494, 1924 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6784 (N.Y. App. Div. 1924).

51. —Party in interest

Administrator is not a party in interest in workmen's compensation proceedings to determine the rights of the special funds. Department of Taxation & Finance v New York, 272 A.D. 407, 71 N.Y.S.2d 572, 1947 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3306 (N.Y. App. Div. 1947).

HISTORY:

Add, L 1955, ch 849, § 1, eff April 29, 1955.

§ 61. Continuance of existing plans; establishment of new plans

1. Plans of mutual self-insurance heretofore adopted by boards of supervisors of counties pursuant to former subdivision three-a of section fifty of this chapter, are hereby continued; provided, however, that the board of supervisors of a county must provide by local law for the continuation of the plan and for the administration thereof pursuant to this article on or before July thirty-first, nineteen hundred fifty-six, or such plan shall be deemed abandoned as of October thirty-first, nineteen hundred fifty-six, subject to the provisions of subdivision two of section seventy-five of this chapter. All such plans not so abandoned shall be operated pursuant to the provisions of this article and local laws adopted pursuant thereto.

2. The board of supervisors of a county may by local law establish the plan of self-insurance provided for in this article.

3. A local law establishing a plan pursuant to this article may, notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph f of subdivision one of section eleven of the municipal home rule law, provide that the provisions of subdivision three of section sixty-three of this article, as amended from time to time, shall not be applicable to the plan in that county and, if such plan is established, the term "liability", as used in this article, shall not include any compensation, assessments or other obligations under the volunteer firefighters' benefit law and the provisions of subdivision three of section sixty-three of this article, as amended from time to time, shall not be applicable in relation to such plan.

4. If a plan has been continued pursuant to this article, the board of supervisors may, notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph f of subdivision one of section eleven of the municipal home rule law, adopt a local law on or before the first day of August in any year to provide that the provisions of subdivision three of section sixty-three of this article, as amended from time to time, shall not be applicable to the plan in that county after the thirty-first day of December in such year, except as to liabilities existing on such latter date, and, if such a local law is adopted, the term "liability", as used in this article, shall not include any compensation, assessments or other obligations under the volunteer firefighters' benefit law, and the provisions of subdivision three of section sixty-three of this article shall not be applicable in relation to such plan, after the thirty-first day of December in such year, except as to, and in connection with, liabilities existing on such thirty-first day of December.

5. If a local law has been adopted pursuant to either subdivision three or subdivision four of this section, the board of supervisors may, notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph f of subdivision one of section eleven of the municipal home rule law, adopt a local law on or before the first day of August in any year to provide that the provisions of subdivision three of section sixty-three of this chapter, as amended from time to time, shall be applicable to the plan in that county after the thirty-first day of December in such year, and, if such a local law is adopted, the term "liability", as used in this article shall include any compensation, assessments, or other obligations under the volunteer firefighters' benefit law, the volunteer ambulance workers' benefit law, and the provisions of subdivision three of section sixty-three of this chapter shall be applicable in relation to such plan, after the thirty-first day of December in such year, and, further, the provisions of section sixty-seven of this chapter shall be applicable on and after the first day of August in such year in relation to such plan.

6. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph f of subdivision one of section eleven of the municipal home rule law, the board of supervisors of a county may by local law amend the definition of "liability", as defined in subdivision seven of section sixty of this article, to exclude any liability under paragraph m of subdivision one of section five of the volunteer firefighters' benefit law.

Jurisprudences:

111 NY Jur 2d Workers' Compensation § 1041.

§ 63. Liability of county

1. In the case of plans established pursuant to former subdivision three-a of section fifty of this chapter and continued pursuant to the provisions of section sixty-one of this chapter, payments with respect to (a) the liability of participants arising on and after January first, nineteen hundred fifty-seven, and (b) the joint liability of the participants imposed pursuant to such former subdivision three-a of section fifty of this chapter, shall be made by the county.

2. When a plan is established pursuant to this article, payments with respect to the liability of participants arising on and after the effective date of the plan shall be made by the county.

3. Where a town participates in a plan, in addition to payments with respect to the liability of the town, the county shall make payments with respect to that portion of the liability of all villages, fire districts, fire protection districts and fire alarm districts within such town and all territory within such town outside cities, villages, fire districts, fire protection districts and fire alarm districts arising out of the death of or injury to volunteer firefighters; provided, however, that the county shall not be obligated to make such payments in the case of a village, fire district, fire protection district or fire alarm district, located in more than one town unless the town board of each town containing part of the village or district by resolution elects to become a participant in the plan. Participation in a plan by a village or fire district shall make the county liable for such payments where the town or towns in which such village or fire district is located are not participants in the plan. The term "injury", as used in this subdivision, means "injury" as defined in subdivision four of section three of the volunteer firefighters' benefit law, as amended from time to time. If a county has elected to establish a self-insurance plan for itself, it may elect to extend coverage under such plan to voluntary ambulance companies upon the same terms and conditions as such coverage applies to volunteer firefighters.

4. The expenditure of county funds for payments authorized or required by this article is hereby declared to be for a county purpose.

5. For the purposes of this article, officers and employees of a soil conservation district located wholly within a county shall be deemed employees of the county in which such district is located.

6. Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this section, each participant alone shall be obligated to pay the increased liability provided for by section fourteen-a of this chapter.

7. Notwithstanding any other provision of this chapter, each participant in a plan continued or established pursuant to this article shall be deemed to have duly taken such action, as would have otherwise been required by this chapter, to elect to bring all of its employees, or officers, elected or appointed or otherwise, not enumerated in section three, subdivision one, groups one to seventeen inclusive, of this chapter, within the coverage of this chapter hereafter, notwithstanding the definitions of the terms "employment", "employer", or "employee" in subdivisions three, four and five of section two of this chapter, and each participant which has any group, as defined by order of the New York state civil defense commission, of civil defense volunteers not enumerated in section three, subdivision one, group seventeen, who are personnel of a volunteer agency of the local office of such participant, as defined in the state defense emergency act, shall be deemed to have duly taken such separate and distinct action of its legislative or other governmental body, as would otherwise have been required by this chapter, to bring such group of civil defense volunteers within the coverage of this chapter hereafter as to their authorized civil defense services to the extent not covered under article ten of this chapter, and hereafter all such officers and employees and such civil defense volunteers of a participant in a plan continued or established pursuant to this article shall be within the coverage of this chapter to the same extent as if all appropriate action had been taken pursuant to section three, subdivision one, group nineteen, or any other applicable provision, of this chapter; provided, however, in relation to such officers and employees of the participant, or any class or group of such officers and employees of the participant or for such civil defense volunteers who are personnel of the participant, a participant may (1) elect not to provide such coverage, (2) elect to provide such coverage in a manner provided in section fifty of this chapter other than under article five thereof, (3) elect to revoke an election made under either "(1)" or "(2)" above and adopt the other of such elections, or (4) elect to revoke an election made under either "(1)" "(2)" or "(3)" above and have such coverage provided under the plan as if no election had been made hereunder. Any such election shall become effective when adopted if it is filed with the chairman of the workmen's compensation board and with the committee or administrator of the plan within ten days after adoption, otherwise it shall become effective when filed with both the chairman of the workmen's compensation board and the committee or administrator of the plan. The chairman of the workmen's compensation board may prescribe the form or forms of any such election. Notwithstanding the provisions of section three, subdivision one, group nineteen, of this chapter, if the county elects to exclude one or more groups of such civil defense volunteers of the county's office of civil defense, then the plan shall not be liable for coverage under this chapter for such civil defense volunteers so excluded, but this shall not preclude a town or a village in such county or a city participating in the consolidated county office of civil defense of such county from bringing the members of such group or groups of duly enrolled civil defense volunteers who are residents of and are enrolled from such town, village or city within the coverage of this chapter during any period when the county has so excluded, but in any such case the compensation shall be secured in a manner provided in section fifty of this chapter other than under article five thereof. This subdivision shall not affect the coverage of officers and employees and civil defense volunteers for whom mandatory coverage is provided under this chapter.

8. Except as provided in subdivision three or nine of this section in relation to volunteer firefighters and volunteer ambulance workers, participation in a plan by a town shall not make the county liable for payments of compensation under this chapter in relation to the officers and employees of a fire or ambulance district located in whole or in part in such town. Except as provided in subdivision three of this section in relation to volunteer firefighters or subdivision nine of this section in relation to volunteer ambulance workers, the county shall be liable for payments of compensation under this chapter in relation to the officers and employees of a fire or ambulance district only in cases where the fire or ambulance district is a participant in the plan.

9. Where a town participates in a plan, in addition to payments with respect to the liability of the town, the county shall make payments with respect to that portion of the liability of all villages, ambulance districts, within such town and all territory within such town outside cities, villages, ambulance districts, arising out of the death of or injury to volunteer ambulance workers; provided, however, that the county shall not be obligated to make such payments in the case of a village, ambulance district, located in more than one town unless the town board of each town containing part of the village or district by resolution elects to become a participant in the plan. Participation in a plan by a village or ambulance district shall make the county liable for such payments where the town or towns in which such village or ambulance district is located are not participants in the plan. The term "injury", as used in this subdivision, means "injury" as defined in subdivision four of section three of the volunteer ambulance workers' benefit law, as amended from time to time.

Where the fire districts alleged that they were fraudulently induced by the County of Ulster into joining the workers' compensation self-insurance plan that the County had established, the action was time barred by the six-year limitations period under N.Y. C.P.L.R. 213(8), as the fire districts joined the plan between 1979 and 1985, and the earliest action was filed in 1997; although the fire districts alleged that the fraud was not reasonably discoverable until the plan was audited in 1995 and 1996, that claim failed since the fire districts alleged that it should have been evident to all involved that, pursuant to N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 63, they were already covered under the plan due to their towns' participation in it. 4. Injury

Finding of Workmen's Compensation Board that claimant who worked in air-conditioned office part of the time and part of the time in a room which was a few degrees colder sustained an accidental injury by being subjected to an inconsistent temperature environment was not supported by substantial evidence. Floom v Harfred Operating Co., 52 A.D.2d 703, 382 N.Y.S.2d 579, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12382 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976).

Evidence that a police officer continued to work on a full-time basis from 1989 through 1997, and continued to qualify for use of a handgun even though the officer claimed to have lost strength in the officer's grip, supported the state comptroller's denial of accidental and performance of duty disability retirement benefits. Maida v McCall, 305 A.D.2d 929, 760 N.Y.S.2d 582, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5812 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 100 N.Y.2d 511, 766 N.Y.S.2d 165, 798 N.E.2d 349, 2003 N.Y. LEXIS 2294 (N.Y. 2003).

5. Employees

Although the future liability accrued by a self-insurance plan was not a debt within the meaning of N.Y. Const. art. VIII, § 2, a county was not entitled to summary judgment as it failed to establish that certain employees were volunteer ambulance workers, within the scope of N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 63(3) and N.Y. Vol. Ambul. Workers' Ben. Law §§ 3, 5, and 30. Village of Ilion v County of Herkimer, 63 A.D.3d 1546, 879 N.Y.S.2d 875, 2009 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4445 (N.Y. Analysis

1. In general
2. Covered individuals
3. Exclusion

1. In general

A town which is a participant in a county mutual self-insurance plan may not charge back to a fire district within the town that portion of the town's annual contribution to the plan which can be directly attributed to losses incurred by the fire district. 1981 Op St Compt File #771.

2. Covered individuals

Volunteer firemen of the Village of Saranac Lake, a participating Village in the Franklin County Self Insurance Plan, are covered by that plan while performing their duties in that portion of the Town of Harrietstown outside the Village of Saranac Lake when the Town has contracted with the Village for the Village to provide fire protection for the Town. 1973 NY Ops Atty Gen June 21 (informal).

A county that administers a county self-insurance plan under Article 5 of the Workers' Compensation Law may not decline to cover an individual volunteer firefighter who has been duly approved for membership in a fire department. N.Y. Op. Att'y Gen. No. 84-62.

When a fire district is located in two counties, only one of which has a county self-insurance plan, the fire district itself may participate in the plan on behalf of all its firemen in both counties. 1979 Op St Compt File #732.

Where volunteer firemen are covered by a county self-insurance plan, they are entitled to benefits if injured while responding to a call for assistance from outside the fire district notwithstanding that the request for assistance is not a mutual aid call. 1981 Op St Compt File #81.77.

3. Exclusion

A county by local law may exclude all volunteer firemen from coverage in a county self-insurance plan, but may not administratively exclude, on physical grounds, an individual volunteer fireman who is duly approved for membership in a fire company. 1979 Op St Compt File #889.

Compensation coverage of volunteer firemen located with towns which have withdrawn from county self-insurance plan is governed by Volunteer Firemen's Benefit Law § 30 if the villages or fire districts within the towns do not elect to become participants in the plan. 1968 NY Ops Atty Gen March 14.

§ 64. Administration of plan

1. The board of supervisors shall by local law provide for the administration of the plan, such plan to be administered by either a committee or an administrator. Any county officer or employee or other person may be appointed to such committee or act as administrator, or be appointed or employed by such committee or administrator. The committee or administrator may employ, subject to the approval of the board of supervisors, such persons as may be deemed necessary for the operation of the plan, and may contract for necessary actuarial, or other expert or professional services. Members of the committee or the administrator, and all other officers and employees of the plan, shall receive such salary or other remuneration, payable from moneys of the plan, as shall be fixed by the board of supervisors. Notwithstanding the provisions of any other law, a county officer or employee, other than a member of the board of supervisors, in addition to his salary as such officer or employee, may be compensated as a member of such committee, as such administrator, or as an officer or employee of the plan.

2. The county treasurer shall be the custodian of all moneys of the plan. Such moneys shall be accounted for as a separate fund to be known as the county self-insurance fund, and shall be deposited in a bank or trust company designated in the manner provided by law as a depositary of moneys of the county. Disbursements of such moneys, except for payment of fixed salaries, shall be made only upon order of the committee or administrator, as the case may be. Compensation may be paid upon such order to persons entitled thereto in the manner provided in section twenty-five of this chapter. The amount of compensation payable prior to an award pursuant to such order shall constitute a settled claim within the meaning of the local finance law. Books, records and papers of the plan shall be subject to examination and audit as provided in section two hundred ten of the county law.

3. The county attorney shall be legal advisor to the plan and it shall be his duty to represent the plan in all controversies. In addition, the county attorney may engage subject to the approval of the board of supervisors, counsel in respect to any particular subject matter, proceeding or litigation, in which event the expense of engaging such special counsel shall be charged as an administrative expense of the plan.

§ 65. Rules and regulations

1. The board of supervisors shall by local law adopt rules and regulations not inconsistent with law for the fair and equitable administration and operation of the plan. Such rules and regulations may provide standards and conditions with respect, but not limited, to (a) entry and withdrawal of participants, (b) medical examinations, (c) safety programs, (d) reports by participants and (e) cooperation by participants, provided, however, that such rules and regulations, or failure to adopt the same, shall not prevent withdrawal of a participant from the plan upon the condition that such participant shall pay, in a lump sum or in installments, an equitable share of the outstanding liabilities of the plan as of the date of withdrawal. Any payments required upon entry to or withdrawal from a plan may be financed, in whole or in part, by any municipal corporation or district corporation by the issuance of bonds or capital notes pursuant to the local finance law.

2. Such rules and regulations may also provide that for any violation thereof or of this chapter, a participant may be expelled from the plan or be charged with a penalty. Any such penalty shall be collected at the same time and in the same manner as other charges against participants as provided in section sixty-seven of this chapter, or in such other manner as may be provided in such rules and regulations. A participant liable for the payment of a penalty may by action of its governing body elect to recover the amount thereof from the public officer or employee whose act or failure to act resulted in the imposition of such penalty. In such event, the amount of the penalty may be withheld from the salary or other remuneration payable to such officer or employee.

§ 73. Abandonment of plan

The board of supervisors of a county may by local law provide for the abandonment of a plan, effective as of the close of the calendar year then in progress. Such plan, however, shall continue to operate thereafter until all liabilities of the plan incurred prior to such effective date shall have been satisfied and all advances to the county self-insurance fund shall have been repaid. Such local law shall provide a method for the distribution of any assets of the plan remaining after all such liabilities have been satisfied. The provisions of this section shall not apply to any plan abandoned pursuant to section sixty-one of this chapter. At the discretion of the chair, the board of supervisors of a county may execute an assumption of workers' compensation liability insurance policy securing such further and future contingent liability as may arise from prior injuries to workers and be incurred by reason of any change in the condition of such workers warranting the board making subsequent awards for payment of additional compensation. Such policy shall be in a form approved by the superintendent of financial services and shall be issued by the state fund or any insurance company licensed to issue this class of insurance in this state. In the event that such policy is issued by an insurance company other than the state fund, then said policy shall be deemed to be of the kind specified in paragraph fifteen of subsection (a) of section one thousand one hundred thirteen of the insurance law and covered by the workers' compensation security fund as created and governed by article six-A of this chapter. It shall only be issued for a single complete premium payment in advance by the county, city, village, town, school district, fire district or other political subdivision of state and in an amount deemed acceptable by the chair and the superintendent of financial services. In lieu of the applicable premium charge ordinarily required to be imposed by a carrier, said premium shall include a surcharge in an amount to be determined by the chair to satisfy all assessment liability due and owing to the board and/or the chair under this chapter. Said surcharge shall be payable to the board simultaneous to the execution of the assumption of workers' compensation liability insurance policy. However, the payment of said surcharge does not relieve the carrier from any other liability, including liability owed to the superintendent of financial services pursuant to article six-A of this chapter. When issued such policy shall be noncancellable without recourse for any cause during the continuance of the liability secured and so covered.

§ 100. Insurance against liability to volunteer firefighters and ambulance workers

Insurance contracts issued by the state insurance fund to insure political subdivisions against liability in relation to volunteer firefighters or volunteer ambulance workers under the volunteer firefighters' benefit law or the volunteer ambulance workers' benefit law shall be designated "volunteer firefighters' benefit insurance" or "volunteer ambulance workers' benefit insurance". The provisions of this article which are not inconsistent with such laws shall be applicable in relation to such insurance. The following terms used in this article, unless inconsistent with the volunteer firefighters' benefit law or the volunteer ambulance workers' benefit law, are hereby enlarged as follows:

1. "Employer" includes any political subdivision liable for benefits pursuant to the volunteer firefighters' benefit law or the volunteer ambulance workers' benefit law.

2. "Employee" includes a volunteer firefighter or volunteer ambulance worker who has been or might be injured in line of duty or who dies or might die from such an injury. When a political subdivision or a district or area thereof is responsible for the payment of benefits pursuant to the volunteer firefighters' benefit law or the volunteer ambulance workers' benefit law, it shall be deemed the "employer" of such "employee."

3. "Workers' compensation" and "compensation" include the benefits in relation to volunteer firefighters or volunteer ambulance workers pursuant to the volunteer firefighters' benefit law or the volunteer ambulance workers' benefit law.

4. "This chapter" includes the volunteer firefighters' benefit law and the volunteer ambulance workers' benefit law, except when such a meaning is inconsistent with this article.

§ 114. Penalties for fraudulent practices

1. Any person who, knowingly and with intent to defraud presents, causes to be presented, or prepares with knowledge or belief that it will be presented to or by an insurer or purported insurer, or any agent thereof, any written statement as part of, or in support of, an application for the issuance of or the rating of an insurance policy for compensation insurance, or a claim for payment or other benefit pursuant to a compensation policy which he or she knows to: (i) contain a false statement or representation concerning any fact material thereto; or (ii) omits any fact material thereto, shall be guilty of a class E felony. Upon conviction, the court in addition to any other authorized sentence, may order forfeiture of all rights to compensation or payments of any benefit, and may also require restitution of any amount received as a result of a violation of this subdivision.

2. An employer or carrier, or any employee, agent, or person acting on behalf of an employer or carrier, who knowingly makes a false statement or representation as to a material fact in the course of reporting, investigation of, or adjusting a claim for any benefit or payment under this chapter for the purpose of avoiding provision of such payment or benefit shall be guilty of a class E felony.

3. A person who knowingly makes a false statement or representation as to a material fact for the purpose of obtaining, maintaining or renewing insurance under this chapter, whether for himself or herself or for any other person or entity or for the purpose of evading the requirements of section fifty of this chapter shall be guilty of a class E felony. In addition to any other remedy, the carrier providing insurance shall be entitled to restitution of any amount obtained or withheld as a result of a violation of this subdivision.

4. Consistent with the provisions of the criminal procedure law, in any prosecution alleging a violation of subdivision one, two or three of this section, or sections fifty-two and one hundred thirty-one of this chapter, in which the act or acts alleged may also constitute a violation of the penal or other law, the prosecuting official may charge a person pursuant to the provisions of this section and in the same accusatory instrument with a violation of such other law.

5. A person (a) who is convicted of a second or subsequent offense under this section within ten years of the prior conviction, or (b) who violates any provision of this section concerning two or more claimants, shall be guilty of a class D felony.

Analysis

1. In general
2. Disqualification from benefits
3. —Benefits attributable to false statement

1. In general

Information stating that defendant, an employer of labor, for purpose of obtaining benefits or payments under Work. Comp. Law for himself and employees, made false statements to insurer as to amount of his payroll, charges a misdemeanor as defined by § 114. People v Rudnick, 280 N.Y. 5, 19 N.E.2d 658, 280 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 5, 1939 N.Y. LEXIS 1278 (N.Y. 1939).

2. Disqualification from benefits

Although this section provides that false representations to obtain benefits constitutes the maker thereof guilty of a misdemeanor, there is nothing which mandates that the Board must disqualify an otherwise eligible claimant from benefits lawfully due and owing. Gillyard v Spenyovics, 27 A.D.2d 765, 277 N.Y.S.2d 99, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4880 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1967).

Claimant's intentional misrepresentation of her postemployment work activities did not render her ineligible to receive benefits under CLS Work Comp § 114. Naklicki v St. Charles Hosp., 224 A.D.2d 850, 638 N.Y.S.2d 200, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1281 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1996).

Claimant, a volunteer firefighter, could not be disqualified from receiving benefits under N.Y. Vol. Fire. Ben. Law § 10 for allegedly making false representations as to her alleged physical limitations because the plain and unambiguous language of N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 114-a limited its application to claims for benefits under N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 15; thus, the civil penalties of § 114-a did not apply to wage replacement benefits, and only criminal penalties were provided for in N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 114 and N.Y. Vol. Fire. Ben. Law § 55. Matter of Giello v Providence Fire Dist., 57 A.D.3d 1294, 869 N.Y.S.2d 676, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9819 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2008).

3. —Benefits attributable to false statement

Pursuant to N.Y. Workers' Comp. Law § 114-a, a claimant who makes a knowingly false statement is disqualified from receiving compensation that is directly attributable to such false statement or representation; retired employee who was awarded workers' compensation benefits for an on the job injury, and then retired three years later, was found to have voluntarily left the labor market when the evidence showed he continued to do janitorial work at the same workplace after retirement. Singletary v Meloon Foundries, 302 A.D.2d 652, 754 N.Y.S.2d 737, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 848 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2003).

1. In general

Where it appeared that claimant, then nineteen and one-half years of age, sustained a back injury in an industrial accident on May 31, 1945, in connection with which he filed a compensation claim on October 7, 1947, which claim was later dismissed and the case closed on July 1, 1948, for failure to prosecute, and that his application to reopen the proceedings filed approximately eight years after the accident would normally be barred under § 123, the application to reopen was nevertheless considered timely under § 115 since it was filed within 6 ½ years after he attained majority, and the liability could not be transferred to the Special Fund as the claimant would be prejudiced by a transfer of liability to the Fund in view of § 25-a precluding liability of the Fund for compensation retroactively beyond two years. Kulpa v Alco Products, Inc., 10 A.D.2d 747, 198 N.Y.S.2d 177, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11190 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 8 N.Y.2d 706, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1784 (N.Y. 1960).

This section is inconsistent with and controls over § 60 of the Civil Practice Act. Commissioners of State Ins. Fund v Thames Trading Co., 64 N.Y.S.2d 91, 1946 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2554 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1946).

2. Applicability

The suspension of the statute of limitations is not literally in favor of incompetency as a legal status but in favor of a "person who is mentally" incompetent, in the factual sense and for whom no committee has been appointed. Macraken v R. & B. Lunch Co., 281 A.D. 215, 119 N.Y.S.2d 827, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3012 (N.Y. App. Div.), reh'g denied, 281 A.D. 912, 120 N.Y.S.2d 254, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3756 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Where possible prejudice to claimant exists, § 115 of the Workmen's Compensation Law is applicable to make § 25-a inoperative and liability is imposed on the employer rather than the Special Fund. Aufiero v Highwall Metal Spinning & Stamping Co., 31 A.D.2d 877, 297 N.Y.S.2d 648, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4560 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 24 N.Y.2d 738, 1969 N.Y. LEXIS 2285 (N.Y. 1969).

3. No retroactive effect

Claimant is not helped by fact that, after limitation had run against him, former § 116 was amended so as to bring all minors, whether dependents or not, under its protection. Nothing in statute indicates that it was intended to apply to cases where limitation had already run and courts may not give retroactive effect to its provisions unless such legislative intent is defined by express language or by necessary inference. Decker v Pouvailsmith Corp., 252 N.Y. 1, 168 N.E. 442, 252 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 1, 1929 N.Y. LEXIS 519 (N.Y. 1929).

4. Effect on statutory periods

The tolling provisions of this section for infancy did not affect the running of the statutory periods in § 25-a. Longo v M & F Auto Wreckers, 4 A.D.2d 902, 166 N.Y.S.2d 900, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4292 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

5. Incompetency toll

Workers' Compensation Board correctly concluded that incompetency toll afforded by CLS Work Comp § 115 did not apply where claimant was competent to file compensation claim; § 115 toll is available only to individuals who are unable to protect their legal rights because of an over-all inability to function in society. Cerami v City of Rochester Sch. Dist., 82 N.Y.2d 809, 604 N.Y.S.2d 543, 624 N.E.2d 680, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 3263 (N.Y. 1993).

Workers' Compensation Board is proper arbiter in determining whether incompetency toll under CLS Work Comp § 115 should apply since such determination necessarily involves consideration of all surrounding facts and circumstances relevant to claimant's ability to safeguard his or her legal rights; appropriate role for courts is simply to determine whether board's determination is supported by substantial evidence. Cerami v City of Rochester Sch. Dist., 82 N.Y.2d 809, 604 N.Y.S.2d 543, 624 N.E.2d 680, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 3263 (N.Y. 1993).

Where an employee is mentally incompetent § 115 limits the application of the time limitation of § 25-a. Pytel v Carborondum Co., 273 A.D. 832, 76 N.Y.S.2d 26, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4833 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948), limited, Longo v M & F Auto Wreckers, 4 A.D.2d 902, 166 N.Y.S.2d 900, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4292 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Workers' Compensation Board properly concluded that claimant was not mentally incompetent so as to avail himself of toll under ClS Work Comp § 115 where medical testimony showed that his emotional injuries did not affect his over-all ability to function in society, conclusion which was corroborated by fact that he was employed on full-time basis during much of relevant period. Kaschak v IBM Corp., 256 A.D.2d 830, 681 N.Y.S.2d 673, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13606 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1998).

6. —Not applicable

Workers' Compensation Board properly determined that claimant was not mentally incapacitated during relevant 2-year interval following his 1967 resignation from employment, and that toll under CLS Work Comp § 115 did not apply, where (1) psychiatrist testified that claimant was competent to file workers' compensation claim in 1967, and (2) during pertinent period, claimant applied for and obtained employment, consulted with numerous attorneys, and filed discrimination complaints with Human Rights Commission in effort to regain his former position. Cerami v City of Rochester Sch. Dist., 82 N.Y.2d 809, 604 N.Y.S.2d 543, 624 N.E.2d 680, 1993 N.Y. LEXIS 3263 (N.Y. 1993).

Workers' Compensation Board properly rejected claimant's contention that limitations period of CLS Work Comp § 28 should have been tolled by reason of her self-professed mental incompetency where reports of 2 psychiatrists opined that claimant was mentally competent during relevant time, she had filed grievance contesting her discharge immediately thereafter and actively pursued that avenue of redress to its conclusion, and she also filed claim with United States Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and obtained legal assistance in evaluating resulting settlement offer all within 2 years of incident. Jirak v Federal Express Corp., 253 A.D.2d 986, 677 N.Y.S.2d 647, 1998 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9752 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 92 N.Y.2d 818, 684 N.Y.S.2d 489, 707 N.E.2d 444, 1998 N.Y. LEXIS 4340 (N.Y. 1998).

7. —Evidence

Substantial evidence supported Workmen's Compensation Board's finding that the claimant was sufficiently competent during the two-year period following his accident to have filed a claim, and therefore the limitations period was not tolled because of incompetency. Goetzmann v Buffalo Gun Center, Inc., 55 A.D.2d 738, 389 N.Y.S.2d 435, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15520 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976).

Substantial evidence supported Workers' Compensation Board's finding of claimant's mental incompetence, thus tolling statute of limitations, where claimant manifested signs of behavioral changes, such as current memory loss, impatience, and disorientation, which condition grew progressively worse, claimant's wife and father testified about claimant's dramatic personality disorder following accident, his inability to remember simple and current events, perform routine tasks, or interact and socialize, and examining psychiatrist testified that claimant sustained brain trauma causing personality and intellectual dysfunctions. Uhler v A&P, 242 A.D.2d 754, 661 N.Y.S.2d 859, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8530 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1997).

Where the widow filed a claim for workers' compensation death benefits alleging that the decedent's death was causally related to occupational stress, there was substantial evidence to support the workers' compensation board's finding that the widow failed to prove mental incompetency in order to toll the limitation; thus, the trial court properly dismissed the claim as untimely. Estate of Cagle v White Auto Parts, 297 A.D.2d 897, 747 N.Y.S.2d 600, 2002 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8792 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2002).

8. —Appointment of conservator

Appointment of conservator under CLS Men Hyg Art 77 is not basis for ending toll of limitations period pursuant to CLS Work Comp § 115. Estate of Terjesen v Peter Kiewit & Sons Co., 197 A.D.2d 163, 610 N.Y.S.2d 684, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4079 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1994).

9. Minority toll

Under the provisions of this section that no limitation of time shall run against a minor as long as he has no guardian, a minor's compensation claim was not outlawed by § 28 because no liability was asserted until more than two years subsequent to the accident. Wheeler v Blake, 13 A.D.2d 602, 212 N.Y.S.2d 292, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11968 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Board properly applied CLS Work Comp § 115 to toll claims of decedent's children for purposes of reopening and liability under CLS Work Comp § 25-a. Hayes v Harris, 227 A.D.2d 864, 642 N.Y.S.2d 384, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5270 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 88 N.Y.2d 813, 649 N.Y.S.2d 380, 672 N.E.2d 606, 1996 N.Y. LEXIS 3092 (N.Y. 1996).

Married status of infant, suing third party under § 29, did not deprive her of benefit of exemption from limitations of time given by § 115. Inakay v Sun Laundry Corp., 42 N.Y.S.2d 344, 180 Misc. 550, 1943 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1998 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1943).

A defense to an action by an insurance carrier, brought on the grounds that the injured employee had failed to commence an action within six months of the award and one year of the accident, alleging that the employee was an infant, is insufficient where it does not allege that no guardian was appointed or that an action was commenced by the employee within six months after attaining majority or that an award was made after majority and less than six months prior to the present action. Commissioners of State Ins. Fund v Thames Trading Co., 64 N.Y.S.2d 91, 1946 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2554 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1946).

10. Question of fact

Whether a claimant is mentally incompetent and if so for how long a period presents questions of fact which should not be disposed of except by trial. Young v State, 273 A.D. 986, 78 N.Y.S.2d 39, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5607 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

11. Evidence

Where there was a conflict in medical testimony as to the sanity of claimant and the Board rejected his claim and excuse for late filing on the ground that he was mentally incompetent, it was held the choice between conflicting medical opinions was exclusively with the board if its decision was supported by substantial evidence. Bellinger v Perini Corp., 28 A.D.2d 1044, 283 N.Y.S.2d 724, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3173 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1967).

§ 118. Technical rules of evidence or procedure not required

The chairman or board in making an investigation or inquiry or conducting a hearing shall not be bound by common law or statutory rules of evidence or by technical or formal rules of procedure, except as provided by this chapter; but may make such investigation or inquiry or conduct such hearing in such manner as to ascertain the substantial rights of the parties. 1. In general

Statutory provision eliminating application of technical rules under Work. Comp. Law is one which is liberally applied in accordance with spirit of provision for protection of claimants against technicalities in trial of claims, and equal justice requires that it should be so applied as to permit to defendant consideration of substantial question, which has been fairly raised, although not by methods necessary in ordinary action. Ziegler v P. Cassidy's Sons, 220 N.Y. 98, 115 N.E. 471, 220 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 98, 1917 N.Y. LEXIS 944 (N.Y. 1917).

Where a claimant is not represented by counsel the duty of questioning witnesses necessarily rests, to a great extent, upon the Referee; and moreover he is not bound by technical rules of evidence or procedure. Raley v E. I. Du Pont De Nemours & Co., 283 A.D. 1130, 131 N.Y.S.2d 552, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6501 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Finding by Workers' Compensation Board that claimant's injury occurred during course of employment would not be set aside due to board's consideration of written statement of employer's vice-president that claimant was on errand to get employer cup of coffee when injured, although statement was never formally received in evidence by law judge, since formal rules of evidence do not govern such proceedings. Harford v Widensky's, Inc., 154 A.D.2d 821, 546 N.Y.S.2d 485, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12699 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

In workers' compensation proceeding in which staff psychologist claimed that his employment was discriminatorily terminated in violation of CLS Work Comp § 120, there was no merit in his conclusory procedural objections—that Workers' Compensation Board excluded essential factual evidence, that Workers' Compensation Law Judge (WCLJ) allowed inflammatory and nonfactual diatribes to enter into proceeding, that WCLJ misidentified witness, that claimant's attorney was denied opportunity to question claimant about job performance evaluations, and that WCLJ erred in admitting second rather than first accident report—where, even if those objections had arguable support in record, they were exaggerated or immaterial and did not dictate reversal of board's decision that claimant's termination was for nondiscriminatory reasons. Coscia v Association for the Advancement of Blind & Retarded Inc., 273 A.D.2d 719, 710 N.Y.S.2d 174, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7429 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2000).

2. Admissibility of evidence, generally

The minutes of an athletic association (a membership corporation) sponsored by an employer were admissible in evidence in view of the fact that the employer had a representative on the board and liberal rules of evidence apply in compensation hearings. Tedesco v General Electric Co., 305 N.Y. 544, 114 N.E.2d 33, 305 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 544, 1953 N.Y. LEXIS 798 (N.Y. 1953).

A statement taken by the carrier's investigator while claimant was in the hospital suffering pain from a severely crushed leg and under heavy sedation, even though illegally obtained under Penal Law § 270-b, was not inadmissible on that account. Its evidentiary weight was, of course, for the board. Thanhauser v Milprint, Inc., 9 A.D.2d 833, 192 N.Y.S.2d 911, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6197 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

Medical opinion as to causality need not be couched in terms of certainty in order to be accepted by Workmen's Compensation Board, provided it is judgment of expert that causality should and could be assumed. Whitaker v Sunset Queens, Inc., 49 A.D.2d 998, 374 N.Y.S.2d 402, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11335 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

It was improper for Workmen's Compensation Board to receive in evidence copy of police laboratory report of blood-alcohol content of deceased employee, who was killed in fatal automobile accident while operating station wagon owned by his employer, which report stated that blood sample had been obtained by coroner pursuant to statute mandating coroner to make quantitative tests for alcohol on bodies of certain individuals killed in motor vehicle accident, in light of further provision of said statute that such results were to be used only for purpose of compiling statistical data and were not to be admitted into evidence or otherwise disclosed in any legal action or proceeding; nor was lab report admissible under business records statute. Rourke v Carl's Drug Co., 56 A.D.2d 202, 392 N.Y.S.2d 498, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10046 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

Worker's Compensation Board could consider evidence that was not before the Workers' Compensation Law Judge (WCLJ) because the formal rules of evidence did not apply to proceedings before the Board and the Board could, in its discretion, consider evidence on any relevant issue. Though the Board and the WCLJ were presented with conflicting documentation concerning a claimant employee's birth date, the Board was not bound by the WCLJ's credibility determinations and was entitled to determine for itself that the claimant was a minor when he was injured. Paiz v Coastal Pipeline Prods. Corp., 9 A.D.3d 717, 780 N.Y.S.2d 656, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9759 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2004).

3. Sufficiency of evidence required, generally

Jurisdiction of commission to make award depends upon happening of accident under conditions named in Work. Comp. Law and this requires evidence of probative force. McHale v Sheffield Farms Co., 193 A.D. 541, 184 N.Y.S. 576, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5592 (N.Y. App. Div. 1920).

The occurrence of an accident is factual and thus for the board's determination if its decision is supported by substantial evidence. Prue v Empire Scrap Metals, Inc., 32 A.D.2d 680, 299 N.Y.S.2d 771, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4081 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969).

Mandate of CLS Work Comp § 118 that Workers' Compensation Board "ascertain the substantial rights of the parties" empowers board to selectively adopt or reject portions of medical expert's opinion and to review record realistically and as whole. Moore v RPM Industries, Inc., 144 A.D.2d 135, 534 N.Y.S.2d 463, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10134 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1988).

4. —Finding that injury occurred in course of employment

Even if decedent also planned to engage in sightseeing, the rule is well-settled that, if a business motive is a concurrent cause of the trip, it comes within the course of employment. Guggenheim v C. Hedke & Co., 32 A.D.2d 1017, 301 N.Y.S.2d 792, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3399 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969), aff'd, 27 N.Y.2d 596, 313 N.Y.S.2d 409, 261 N.E.2d 407, 1970 N.Y. LEXIS 1244 (N.Y. 1970).

5. Availability of physician-patient privilege

It seems that even under its broad powers the Workmen's Compensation Board has no right to disregard the statutory physician-patient privilege provided by Civil Practice Act §§ 352, 354. Even assuming this privilege to apply, it is waived as soon as evidence of the claimant's injuries is given in his behalf. Petition of Maryland Casualty Co., 274 A.D. 211, 80 N.Y.S.2d 181, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3041 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

6. Use of hospital records

Public policy does not prevent proper use at the hearing on a claim by an injured employee under this law, of relevant hospital records relating to his mental condition. On the contrary, it would seem to be against exclusion of any competent and relevant evidence bearing on the nature and extent of injuries claimed by the employee and their relation to an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment. Petition of Maryland Casualty Co., 274 A.D. 211, 80 N.Y.S.2d 181, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3041 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

Hospital records subpoenaed under § 119 are to be turned over to the Workmen's Compensation Board or its referee at the hearing, and may be inspected by the employer's representative and offered in evidence only when it is ruled that the records are relevant and that the privilege with respect thereto no longer applies. Petition of Maryland Casualty Co., 274 A.D. 211, 80 N.Y.S.2d 181, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3041 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

A subpoena for the production of hospital records under § 119 does not authorize an inspection thereof by, or their disclosure to, any person except the claimant or his representative. Petition of Maryland Casualty Co., 274 A.D. 211, 80 N.Y.S.2d 181, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3041 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

In action under Workmen's Compensation Law for death of nurse who allegedly contracted tuberculosis from a patient in a psychiatric ward, claimant would only be allowed an examination of those parts of the patient records as would reveal any physical ailments suffered by patients on the nurse's floor, but not to a revelation of the patients' names. Williams v Buffalo General Hospital, 28 A.D.2d 777, 280 N.Y.S.2d 699, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3796 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1967).

7. Impeachment of witnesses

This section does not prevent impeachment of a witness before the workmen's compensation board on the ground of prior conviction of a crime. Fisher v One Oak Dairy, Inc., 274 A.D. 274, 82 N.Y.S.2d 461, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3054 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

Claimant was not unduly prejudiced by his inability to cross-examine carrier's private investigator, who testified at workers' compensation hearing that he had videotaped claimant as he walked around outdoors exhibiting no indication of physical impairment, given vast amount of independent evidence presented at hearing, including medical reports and testimony submitted by 9 health care professionals based on their physical examinations of claimant. Weber v Northberry Constr., 261 A.D.2d 744, 689 N.Y.S.2d 744, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5313 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 93 N.Y.2d 815, 697 N.Y.S.2d 562, 719 N.E.2d 923, 1999 N.Y. LEXIS 2200 (N.Y. 1999).

8. Depositions

Former § 68, now this section, was qualified by former § 72, now § 121, relating to the manner of taking depositions and an award could not be based on informal depositions but the depositions were required to be taken in the manner prescribed for other civil actions. Eretza v Ft. Montgomery Iron Works, 193 A.D. 817, 184 N.Y.S. 789, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5655 (N.Y. App. Div. 1920).

Workers' compensation insurance carrier was not obligated to turn over surveillance videotape in its possession until after it had opportunity to cross-examine claimant. De Marco v Millbrook Equestrian Ctr., 287 A.D.2d 916, 732 N.Y.S.2d 121, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9945 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2001).

9. Admissions

Corporation which has empowered one of its clerks to report accidents to employees is bound by admission contained in report which was signed by said clerk in name of superintendent of corporation. Anthus v Rail Joint Co., 193 A.D. 571, 185 N.Y.S. 314, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5601 (N.Y. App. Div. 1920), aff'd, 231 N.Y. 557, 132 N.E. 887, 231 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 557, 1921 N.Y. LEXIS 713 (N.Y. 1921).

10. Hearsay evidence, generally

Hearsay evidence as to whether or not decedent had suffered accidental injury sufficient to warrant award under Work. Comp. Law is admissible in discretion of commission. Lindquest v Holler, 178 A.D. 317, 164 N.Y.S. 906, 1917 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5816 (N.Y. App. Div. 1917).

Where proof of cause of death is composed chiefly of hearsay statements and declarations either introduced by insurance carrier itself or received without objection, carrier cannot on appeal object that such statements were incompetent and of no probative value. Hernon v Holahan, 182 A.D. 126, 169 N.Y.S. 705, 1918 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7844 (N.Y. App. Div. 1918).

A death claim was dismissed where evidence showed only that decedent was sitting on a water main doing construction work and was next seen on the ground below the main suffering from a ruptured aneurysm. The only evidence that decedent had slipped and suffered the aneurysm when he hit the ground was belated and interested hearsay testimony. Bonomi v Poirier & McLane Corp., 1 A.D.2d 302, 149 N.Y.S.2d 616, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5936 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Although this section provides that hearsay testimony is admissible, it does not require the board to accept it as true and the credibility and weight to be given all the evidence is for the board's determination. Kelly v Marine Works, Inc., 3 A.D.2d 873, 161 N.Y.S.2d 184, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5893 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957).

Relationship of infant claimant to deceased employee, as his daughter, was sufficiently established by testimony of decedent's brother that the infant was his niece and had visited him and that his brother had told him about her and that she was his daughter, pedigree declarations being an exception to the hearsay rule. Johnson v La Sala Mason Corp., 19 A.D.2d 925, 244 N.Y.S.2d 31, 1963 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2978 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1963), app. denied, 13 N.Y.2d 601, 1964 N.Y. LEXIS 1529 (N.Y. 1964).

Hearsay testimony is admissible under § 118 of the Workmen's Compensation Law. Angelino v 660 Park Ave. Corp., 28 A.D.2d 798, 281 N.Y.S.2d 130, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3717 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1967).

11. —Necessity of corroboration

Award made under Work. Comp. Law, cannot be sustained upon hearsay evidence, uncorroborated by facts, circumstances or other evidence. Belcher v Carthage Mach. Co., 224 N.Y. 326, 120 N.E. 735, 224 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 326, 1918 N.Y. LEXIS 884 (N.Y. 1918).; Kubes v General Electric Co., 200 A.D. 848, 191 N.Y.S. 935, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9241 (N.Y. App. Div. 1921).; Vassilakis v Fairfax Hotel Co., 193 A.D. 829, 184 N.Y.S. 774, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5659 (N.Y. App. Div. 1920).; Hansen v Flinn-O'Rourke Co., 192 A.D. 878, 183 N.Y.S. 213, 1920 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7575 (N.Y. App. Div. 1920).

Declarations of an employee who had lost the power to think or speak could be received in the same manner as those of deceased employees. Altschuller v Bressler, 289 N.Y. 463, 46 N.E.2d 886, 289 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 463, 1943 N.Y. LEXIS 1170 (N.Y. 1943).

Policeman's testimony as to admissions made by employee concerning murder of fellow employee could not be held insubstantial as a matter of law on the basis of lack of corroboration required under Workmen's Compensation Law § 118; even if aggressor employee were dead, no corroboration would have been required, since he was not person through whom or on whose account claim for benefits was made. Kelly v New York City Transit Authority, 33 N.Y.2d 373, 353 N.Y.S.2d 164, 308 N.E.2d 684, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1699 (N.Y. 1974).

Hearsay evidence that decedent fell while washing a truck in the course of his employment was not sufficient to support a death award where it was not corroborated by any evidence other than that decedent died of a criminal injury. Comstock v Goetz Oil Corp., 286 A.D. 132, 142 N.Y.S.2d 217, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3992 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955), dismissed, 10 A.D.2d 782, 199 N.Y.S.2d 459, 1960 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11073 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1960).

Decedent, counter man in luncheonette, fell while at work and sustained head injuries. After release from hospital decedent fell in subway sustaining further head injuries and subsequently died. First fall was unwitnessed and claimant was entitled to presumption under § 21. Hearsay evidence that he slipped on floor behind counter was sufficiently corroborated by "other evidence". Award affirmed. McCann v Hy-Al Luncheonette Co., 5 A.D.2d 1026, 173 N.Y.S.2d 137, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6181 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

That decedent, who was hypersensitive to bee venom, died as the result of a bee sting incurred in course of his employment was amply sustained by the coroner's report of finding a bee sting mark on his forehead, which, together with admissions of the employer, who was present shortly after the occurrence, that decedent was "killed by bee sting," was amply sufficient to corroborate hearsay testimony concerning the occurrence. Webster v Mason, 13 A.D.2d 355, 217 N.Y.S.2d 290, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9778 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

An employer's report under the requirement of § 110, containing detailed and considered admissions concerning the industrial accident, may be regarded as corroboration of the decedent's hearsay declarations which are admissible under the above statute if corroborated by "circumstances" and "other evidence", and on this basis the Appellate Division held that the board acted within the purview of its fact-finding power and on substantial evidence in stating that "the record is clear that the accident did happen and it arose out of the employment." Laine v Rula Corp., 24 A.D.2d 675, 261 N.Y.S.2d 182, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3677 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965).

Where declarations upon which Workmen's Compensation Board based its finding that workman's death did not arise out of his employment where statements of decedent's uncle, two police officers, and another person, the Board was not required to ignore the declarations on the theory that they were uncorroborated hearsay as only the hearsay declarations of the deceased employee on whose account the claim for benefits is made are required to be corroborated. McGinn v Jack Chambers, Inc., 46 A.D.2d 701, 359 N.Y.S.2d 917, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3858 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1974).

12. Corroboration of deceased employee's declarations, generally

While hearsay declarations are admissible in compensation proceedings if they are used to establish accident and injury, they must be corroborated. Hence, a death award was properly reversed where the only evidence to sustain the Board's finding was based upon hearsay declarations of the decedent. Ptaszynski v American Sugar Refining Co., 305 N.Y. 833, 114 N.E.2d 38, 305 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 833, 1953 N.Y. LEXIS 1334 (N.Y. 1953).

Workmen's Compensation Law § 118, requiring corroboration "by circumstances or other evidence" of declarations of a deceased employee concerning the accident, was interpreted to require corroboration only as to declarations of deceased employee on whose account or through whom a claim for benefits is made. Kelly v New York City Transit Authority, 33 N.Y.2d 373, 353 N.Y.S.2d 164, 308 N.E.2d 684, 1974 N.Y. LEXIS 1699 (N.Y. 1974).

Declaration of deceased employee to be sufficient to establish accident and injury under this section must be corroborated as to each of essential elements of "injury" as defined in § 2, subd. 7. Meehan v Dutton Lumber Co., 210 A.D. 540, 206 N.Y.S. 418, 1924 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6787 (N.Y. App. Div. 1924).

Although Workmen's Compensation Law § 118 requires corroboration of hearsay declarations of a decedent, direct proof is not required. The decisive question if whether there is corroboration by circumstances or other evidence. Proof of the duties, common nature or circumstances of the work performed by decedent may constitute sufficient corroboration. Rosen v Rose Housewares, Inc., 34 A.D.2d 719, 309 N.Y.S.2d 687, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5048 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1970).

Plainly hearsay proof of nature and purpose of decedent's fatal trip was admissible in workmen's compensation proceeding and could be relied upon by Workmen's Compensation Board where it was sufficiently corroborated by circumstances and other evidence. Munro v County of Suffolk, 49 A.D.2d 994, 374 N.Y.S.2d 392, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11325 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

Proof of the duties, nature and circumstances of work performed by deceased employee may constitute sufficient corroboration, in a workmen's compensation proceeding, of hearsay testimony by decedent's widow. Goldstone v New York State Dep't of Motor Vehicles, 57 A.D.2d 973, 394 N.Y.S.2d 99, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12263 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

In workmen's compensation proceedings, the statutory corroboration required of hearsay statements is not as technical as that at common law and may consist of circumstances or other evidence. Goldstone v New York State Dep't of Motor Vehicles, 57 A.D.2d 973, 394 N.Y.S.2d 99, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12263 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

In a workers' compensation case the widow of a productivity manager, who died of a heart attack, was properly awarded benefits where the widow testified as to the manager's lifting of a heavy suitcase on the day in question, and where the compensation board properly credited the portion of the widow's uncorroborated testimony that was based on her personal knowledge, observation, and recollection, in that only the portion of her testimony that contained statements by the deceased manager required corroboration. Palacio v A & P Tea Co., 92 A.D.2d 683, 460 N.Y.S.2d 195, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 16959 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1983).

Requirement of corroboration of declarations of deceased employee concerning accident under CLS Work Comp § 118 is not as technical as that at common law. Padilla v New York City Bd. of Education, 127 A.D.2d 957, 512 N.Y.S.2d 723, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 43440 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 602, 518 N.Y.S.2d 1024, 512 N.E.2d 550, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 17399 (N.Y. 1987).

13. —By physical evidence

The requirement of corroboration of a deceased employee's declarations was sufficiently met by the independently established fact that the decedent became ill while at work, by the similarity of history given to two physicians by the employee, by the physical findings and by the employer's admissions. Ostrowski v Mohawk Carpet Mills, Inc., 275 A.D. 874, 88 N.Y.S.2d 865, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4849 (N.Y. App. Div. 1949).

Declaration of a deceased employee that while lifting 100 pound bags he felt something snap inside was corroborated by evidence that there were such bags in the stockroom where he worked, that he was taking inventory at the time and occasionally had to lift the bags and his condition upon operation suggested a sudden rupture. Carney v General Cable Corp., 278 A.D. 868, 104 N.Y.S.2d 204, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5014 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951), aff'd, 303 N.Y. 885, 105 N.E.2d 108, 303 N.Y. (N.Y.S.) 885, 1952 N.Y. LEXIS 1343 (N.Y. 1952).

Statement of deceased to wife that he had suffered pain in chest while shoveling snow at the plant was sufficiently corroborated by fact that a substantial snow had fallen that day, that a path had been shoveled from the guard house to the plant gate when decedent was relieved from duty and that there was no one else around at that time, that decedent went home by taxi when he usually traveled by bus, and the doctor found corroborative physical conditions on examination shortly thereafter and other witnesses testified to decedent's statement that he was stricken with pain while shoveling snow. Keach v E. H. Titchener Co., 278 A.D. 991, 105 N.Y.S.2d 855, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5459 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

Where accident occurred without witnesses, declarations of decedent made to his wife as to cause of accident are admissible under this section and where declaration that decedent fell on fourth floor of building where he was employed as night watchman and in an injured condition groped his way to the basement floor was sufficiently corroborated by a finding of decedent's eyeglasses and keys on the fourth floor. McKinley v Wilson Bros., 282 A.D. 791, 122 N.Y.S.2d 538, 1953 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4969 (N.Y. App. Div. 1953).

Statements of a deceased employee that she hit her leg on a sewing machine doing the employer's work in her home were admissible in evidence and, when corroborated by medical evidence that thrombophlebitis developed in the area of the leg struck, were sufficient to establish the accident and the injury. Portolano v G. A. Albano Co., 285 A.D. 915, 137 N.Y.S.2d 515, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6098 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

Evidence was sufficient to corroborate decedent's declaration to his wife after returning from taking care of his employer's elevator that he had walked up sixteen flights of stairs to the elevator. Howard v One East End Ave. Corp., 4 A.D.2d 722, 163 N.Y.S.2d 500, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5133 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 4 A.D.2d 844, 168 N.Y.S.2d 621, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4623 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957), app. denied, 4 N.Y.2d 673, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1326 (N.Y. 1958).

Decedent's declaration as to the manner in which the accident, a coronary thrombosis while cleaning out his employer's water well, occurred was sufficiently corroborated by the proof of his prior health, by the evidence as to his appearance at the end of the day and the proof as to the nature of the well-cleaning task. Rambold v Whitney, 4 A.D.2d 906, 167 N.Y.S.2d 54, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4299 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 4 A.D.2d 991, 167 N.Y.S.2d 1020, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3863 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1957), app. denied, 4 N.Y.2d 673, 1958 N.Y. LEXIS 1339 (N.Y. 1958).

Decedent, a tailor, fell while at work and sustained an injury to his head. There was hearsay statement by decedent that he struck his head on his machine as he fell. Claim filed prior to death stated that he hit his head on the floor and an amended complaint stated that he hit his head on the machine. There was medical evidence that the location of the laceration on the skull suggested a fall against the machine or another object. Held:

there was sufficient proof to support the hearsay statement. And there was sufficient evidence to establish causal relation between the injury and death 9 months later to a malignant brain tumor where such evidence showed that the injury accelerated the progress of the disease. Baumstein v Siegel & Alenikoff, Inc., 9 A.D.2d 572, 189 N.Y.S.2d 431, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7428 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 7 N.Y.2d 705, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1820 (N.Y. 1959).

Undisputed circumstances that employee had enjoyed good health prior to heavy lifting incident and had never complained of or been treated for cardiac symptoms, evidence that he did not appear ill when he left for work on morning heavy lifting incident occurred but that his appearance and demeanor after work reflected acutely ill person, and nature of his duties and of his employment environment sufficiently corroborated employee's statements to his wife and doctor that he had a "pain in his chest" and that he had experienced similar pain while lifting 500 pound weights in course of his employment to support Workmen's Compensation Board's determination that death resulted from compensable industrial accident. Nickels v L. J. Thornton, Inc., 53 A.D.2d 718, 384 N.Y.S.2d 59, 1976 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13486 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1976).

14. —By testimony of others

Letters and documents, although unsworn to and not authenticated, tending to show that previous husband had died before claimant married deceased employee were properly received in evidence and constituted proper corroboration of claimant's contention that she was lawful widow of deceased. Lewis v Charles F. Noyes Co., 278 A.D. 222, 104 N.Y.S.2d 600, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3777 (N.Y. App. Div. 1951).

Death benefits award was not proper where it was based upon decedent's hearsay statements that he strained himself by handling a heavy carton where the statements were not corroborated by testimony of fellow workmen that decedent handled heavy cartons or that a carton slipped on the date of the alleged accident. Cholet v R. H. Macy & Co., 285 A.D. 1095, 139 N.Y.S.2d 373, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6760 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

Decedent's declarations as to the occurrence of an accident were sufficiently corroborated where he had told his physician that while lifting 100 pound bags of cement against his left side he felt a pain in his left side later diagnosed as a ruptured spleen. Fellow employees testified that on day of the alleged accident decedent had lifted bags of cement and expert medical testimony established that a rupture could result only from a direct trauma and that decedent by lifting 100 pound bags against his left side could have caused such a trauma. Viselli v Martino, 285 A.D. 1195, 140 N.Y.S.2d 643, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7142 (N.Y. App. Div. 1955).

Decedent, foreman in laundry, developed symptoms of heart attack during the afternoon. He died 2 weeks later from coronary condition and myocardial infarction. There were hearsay declarations by decedent to effect that, when he was lifting bag of wash, he felt sharp chest pains. However, there was testimony by co-employee that decedent lifted bundles of wet wash weighing 50 to 60 lbs. nearly every day, and this was some corroboration of the hearsay declaration. Award affirmed. Svigals v Blue Diamond Laundry No. 1, Inc., 7 A.D.2d 800, 180 N.Y.S.2d 783, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3724 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

Decedent had stated to his physician that he had pushed teletype machine weighing 150 lbs. shortly before he suffered a heart attack. Fellow employee testified that decedent moved machine on average of once per day, that moving it was severe effort and that sudden demands for machine required fast movement. This was sufficient proof of circumstances and other evidence in corroboration of hearsay statement. Award affirmed. Aaron v Burnham & Co., 8 A.D.2d 891, 186 N.Y.S.2d 958, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8304 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 9 A.D.2d 601, 189 N.Y.S.2d 122, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10590 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959), app. denied, 7 N.Y.2d 705, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1815 (N.Y. 1959).

In a proceeding for death benefits, hearsay testimony of the widow that deceased told her he had lifted something heavy and felt pain, and of a physician that deceased told him he had lifted a "heavy object," were sufficiently corroborated by testimony that deceased suffered the attack while actually working and that the work involved strenuous physical effort in lifting trash cans onto trucks or dollies. Jones v Chicago Pneumatic Tool Co., 9 A.D.2d 804, 192 N.Y.S.2d 764, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6145 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959).

With respect to a death benefit claim arising out of death of a highway patrolman from a heart attack, allegedly brought on by overexertion in course of helping a lady motorist change a tire, hearsay evidence as to the exertion, consisting of decedent's statements to his physician and to a retired police sergeant, was sufficiently corroborated to sustain an award where there was testimony of a lieutenant in charge that patrolmen more or less frequently assisted motorists in changing tires, particularly if they were ladies or elderly people in distress. O'Brien v Long Island State Parkway Com., 13 A.D.2d 855, 214 N.Y.S.2d 786, 1961 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11053 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1961).

Although under the Workmen's Compensation Law the declarations of a deceased employee are sufficient to establish accident and injury if corroborated by the circumstances or other evidence, the statements of a nurse, who allegedly contracted tuberculosis as the result of being exposed to a tubercular patient, that she had been in contact with such a patient were not competent to establish such exposure, since a nurse is not competent to say that a patient had tuberculosis. Williams v Buffalo General Hospital, 28 A.D.2d 777, 280 N.Y.S.2d 699, 1967 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3796 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1967).

Rational basis existed for Workers' Compensation Board's inference that death was caused by work-related accidental injury where wife of decedent testified that decedent had said on day of his death that he would be late in coming home because he had to work overtime on pain of losing his job, and co-worker testified that decedent, who was spackling ceiling, declined to stop working for coffee break because he had to finish job; board could rely on decedent's declarations, as corroborated by co-worker, since wife's expert testified that decedent's normal work duties would not have contributed to death due to occlusive coronary arteriosclerosis without physical and emotional stress created by working on job under time constraints and in anticipation of long hours, and declarations were relevant to issue whether these added stresses were present. Padilla v New York City Bd. of Education, 127 A.D.2d 957, 512 N.Y.S.2d 723, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 43440 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't), app. denied, 70 N.Y.2d 602, 518 N.Y.S.2d 1024, 512 N.E.2d 550, 1987 N.Y. LEXIS 17399 (N.Y. 1987).

Substantial evidence supported the Workers' Compensation Board's finding that the decedent's injuries and ensuing death were the result of a work-related accident because the decedent's statement to the claimant that he fell "into the pit" was the most direct evidence that he sustained his fatal injuries while performing duties at work, and the claimant's testimony and that of the supervisor who saw the decedent holding his stomach provided sufficient corroboration of the decedent's statement. Matter of Silvestri v New York City Tr. Auth., 153 A.D.3d 1069, 59 N.Y.S.3d 618, 2017 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6078 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 2017).

15. —By other evidence

Where decedent was fatally injured in a highway accident while driving a company owned car, and containing samples of merchandise and a sample case with him on the trip, and had made repeated declarations to friends and relatives that he was going to contact customers, the employer's report of injury stating that decedent was "traveling on business" and made after an adequate opportunity for investigation and reflection, was sufficient corroboration of decedent's hearsay declarations. Guggenheim v C. Hedke & Co., 27 N.Y.2d 596, 313 N.Y.S.2d 409, 261 N.E.2d 407, 1970 N.Y. LEXIS 1244 (N.Y. 1970).

Where the deceased employee died of a heart attack, and there was hearsay evidence that on the day preceding his collapse and death he had been obliged to climb stairs up to the twentieth floor of a building under construction, and this evidence was in part corroborated by the fact that the employer had during the month of decedent's death several buildings of twenty stories under construction, and it was stipulated that a witness would testify that the decedent had occasion to climb stairs on the day preceding his death, causation was established within the requirements of this section. Himovitch v Chiaet Ornamental Iron Works, 24 A.D.2d 799, 263 N.Y.S.2d 971, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3237 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1965), app. denied, 17 N.Y.2d 418, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 1678 (N.Y. 1966).

In proceeding for workmen's compensation death benefits brought by the widow of decedent, a 64-year-old license clerk whose clerical duties required him to work behind a counter reviewing automobile registrations and renewals, there was more than sufficient proof of the heavy burden of business, together with the unruliness of applicants, on September 30, the day decedent suffered a heart attack, to satisfy the requisite statutory corroboration of widow's testimony that her husband came home complaining that the day had been distressing and that he had been physically threatened by one individual. Goldstone v New York State Dep't of Motor Vehicles, 57 A.D.2d 973, 394 N.Y.S.2d 99, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12263 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1977).

In an application for death benefits brought by the widow of a man who died in an automobile accident on a trip which had the two-fold purpose of attending a business meeting and celebrating the couple's anniversary, there was substantial evidence to support the Board's finding that the accident arose out of and in the course of decedent's employment, where the claimant testified that her husband had told her shortly before the accident that he was planning to visit his plant, where this testimony was corroborated by testimony of the decedent's supervisor, and where there was evidence that the decedent had received permission to travel and had received a cash advance for the trip. Wright v General Electric Co., 81 A.D.2d 722, 439 N.Y.S.2d 456, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11278 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981).

16. —Uncorroborated testimony

The uncorroborated testimony of a physician that decedent had told him that he had pushed a table containing a teletype machine away from his desk and felt a sharp chest pain which later developed into a fatal myocardial infarction was not sufficient to sustain an award. Aaron v Burnham & Co., 2 A.D.2d 93, 154 N.Y.S.2d 652, 1956 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4693 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1956).

Decedent, laundry supervisor, had performed supervisory duties during maintenance work on Saturday. There was no proof that he lifted or moved any object. He left premises in early afternoon. When he arrived home in early evening, witness testified decedent said he didn't feel good, that he had picked up heavy basket and hurt himself. He died following day of heart disease. Held: Finding of accident was without substantial evidence and decedent's hearsay evidence was not corroborated. Acute heart disease not circumstanced in support of accident. Claim dismissed. Ohriner v Jamaice Wet Wash Laundry Co., 5 A.D.2d 901, 170 N.Y.S.2d 931, 171 N.Y.S.2d 129, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6712 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

The corroboration "by circumstances or other proof" required by this section for hearsay failed, and there was insufficient predicate for medical opinion evidence where it could only be found in decedent's conversation with his wife before leaving for work on the particular Sunday of his death from coronary thrombosis indicating that some of the tasks he expected to perform that day constituted his usual work, but not necessarily on Sundays. Andrew v Cameron Bros. Boat Livery, 22 A.D.2d 727, 253 N.Y.S.2d 160, 1964 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2991 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1964), aff'd, 17 N.Y.2d 608, 268 N.Y.S.2d 565, 215 N.E.2d 685, 1966 N.Y. LEXIS 1560 (N.Y. 1966).

17. Other particular evidentiary rulings

Absent unusual circumstances, no adverse inferences may be drawn from an employer's vigorous opposition to an employee's compensation and unemployment insurance claims, since an employer has the right to present its position to the Workers' Compensation Board and should not be penalized for doing so. Axel v Duffy-Mott Co., 47 N.Y.2d 1, 416 N.Y.S.2d 554, 389 N.E.2d 1075, 1979 N.Y. LEXIS 1930 (N.Y. 1979).

The board is not barred from finding death due to an occupational disease by reason of the filing of a death claim based on accident. Nichols v Colonial Beacon Oil Co., 284 A.D. 581, 132 N.Y.S.2d 72, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3445 (N.Y. App. Div. 1954).

Errors in exclusion of evidence were so substantial as to require reversal of an award and remittal to board. Decedent, assistant personnel director, had gone to Potsdam to interview college students for employer. Testimony of witnesses as to decedent's conduct and condition while he was at inn near Potsdam during evening prior to automobile accident was excluded as irrelevant or calling for opinion. Cumulative effect of numerous erroneous and prejudicial rulings was to deprive employer and carrier of fair trial of issues. Allen v Glens Falls Ins. Co., 5 A.D.2d 1020, 173 N.Y.S.2d 316, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6174 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958).

The claimant was not deprived of the right to produce additional medical evidence to support her physician's evidence where, at the final hearing, the referee said "all sides rest" and claimant's counsel did not suggest that he was not then resting or that he wanted to adduce any further proof on any issue. Leiser v Saks Fifth Ave., 9 A.D.2d 832, 192 N.Y.S.2d 848, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6195 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1959), app. denied, 7 N.Y.2d 709, 1960 N.Y. LEXIS 1591 (N.Y. 1960).

The selection of the opinion of claimant's expert over other medical opinions in the record is an exercise of the fact-finding power entirely within the province of the board, and it is not the court's function to decide which expert opinion is more weighty or persuasive. Currie v Medical Coaches, Inc., 32 A.D.2d 594, 299 N.Y.S.2d 474, 1969 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4149 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1969).

In action by claimant who contends that he is unable to work due to work-related back injury sustained in 1973, claimant's refusal to comply with subpoena duces tecum directing him to produce his Federal tax records for years 1974 through 1981 justify Workers' Coompensation Board in ordering that case be closed until claimant furnishes information requested, since decision falls within Board's discretionary power to conduct hearings in such manner as to ascertain substantial rights of parties. Morgen v CBS, Inc., 114 A.D.2d 533, 494 N.Y.S.2d 147, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 53249 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1985).

In Workers' Compensation proceeding in which claimant alleged that she was discharged as result of absences caused by work-related back injury, board did not err in considering 2 medical reports included in employer's review application which indicated that claimant had been treated during relevant time frame for ailments unrelated to back injury for which she sought benefits, although claimant was not afforded opportunity to cross-examine authors of reports, since reports merely evidenced absenteeism and were not offered to contradict claim of work-related back injury. McQueen v New York City Health & Hosp. Corp., 154 A.D.2d 789, 546 N.Y.S.2d 235, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12692 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1989).

18. —Finding of causal relationship between employment and injury

Award should not be allowed where industrial commission uses statement made by physician, which was submitted after hearing was closed, so that no opportunity for cross-examination of declarant was offered. Jack v Morrow Mfg. Co., 194 A.D. 565, 185 N.Y.S. 588, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9326 (N.Y. App. Div. 1921).

Award based on unsworn report by physician, submitted outside of any regular hearing of which employer or insurance carrier had notice, will be reversed. Stimal v Jewett & Co., 198 A.D. 427, 190 N.Y.S. 889, 1921 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8114 (N.Y. App. Div. 1921).

In a hearing before the workmen's compensation board the referee may properly under this section limit cross-examination of a witness in regard to his prior conviction of a crime and partially exclude evidence relative to his criminal record where such conviction was known to the referee and his disposition of the case was made in the light of this knowledge. Fisher v One Oak Dairy, Inc., 274 A.D. 274, 82 N.Y.S.2d 461, 1948 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3054 (N.Y. App. Div. 1948).

While in Chicago in connection with promotion of employer's products, decedent went to Springfield to visit night club and, while returning to Chicago, was killed in automobile accident. On testimony of decedent's widow and woman who accompanied him to night club, board was warranted in finding that visit to night club was for purpose of advertising employer's product on radio interview on which it was customary to permit reference to patron's business. Award affirmed. On cross-examination decedent's woman companion testified as to facts of radio broadcast but declined to answer personal questions. Under circumstances, appellant not deprived of fair trial. Opportunity to cross-examine must be given on quasi-judicial hearing before administrative tribunal but not to more than a reasonable extent. Epstein v Cort Watch Co., 7 A.D.2d 663, 179 N.Y.S.2d 620, 1958 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4305 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1958), app. denied, 5 N.Y.2d 709, 1959 N.Y. LEXIS 1967 (N.Y. 1959).

In proceeding for workmen's compensation benefits, in which claimant's attending psychiatrist testified that, based upon information received from claimant and review of pertinent hospital records, in his opinion claimant was suffering from anxiety neurosis with facial paralysis which was causally related to accidental injury sustained by claimant in course of her employment, there was substantial evidence to support Workmen's Compensation Board's finding that claimant had continuing causally related disability, notwithstanding conflicting testimony of insurer's medical expert. Ayub v Ideal Toy Co., 50 A.D.2d 1051, 377 N.Y.S.2d 730, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12057 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

In proceeding for workmen's compensation benefits, in which claim form for private insurance company, completed by milk deliveryman, indicated that, in course of rearranging cases of milk in his truck, one case slipped and as he attempted to catch it; deliveryman felt severe pain in his left arm which was then followed by other symptoms of heart attack, and medical witness, testifying on basis of such evidence, related deliveryman's death 12 days later to work effort, there was substantial evidentiary support for Workmen's Compensation Board's finding of causal relation of accident to decedent's employment. Leader v Holland Farms, Inc., 50 A.D.2d 1051, 377 N.Y.S.2d 732, 1975 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12056 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1975).

The Workers Compensation Board properly ruled that a claimant was disabled by reason of asbestiosis and that the claimant might testify that he had been exposed to asbestos on one specific job where he had already testified to exposure to asbestos over the course of 20 years of work for his employer and not during just that one job, and that his claim was timely in that it had been filed within 90 days after he had acquired knowledge that his disease was due to the nature of his work for his employer. Murphy v Hopkins & Reilly Mason Contractors, 83 A.D.2d 734, 442 N.Y.S.2d 615, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 15047 (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep't 1981).

TITLE 2 DEPARTMENT OF AUDIT AND CONTROL

CHAPTER II MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS

SUBCHAPTER A SALES OF BONDS AND NOTES; DEBT STATEMENTS

PART 39 INSTALLMENT PURCHASE CONTRACTS BY POLITICAL SUBDIVISIONS

(Statutory authority: General Municipal Law, § 109-b(3)(d))

Section

39.0. Background.
39.1. Definitions.
39.2. Evaluation of financing alternatives.
39.3. Adoption of resolution authorizing an installment purchase contract.
39.4. Compliance with competitive bidding statutes or other applicable provisions.
39.5. Procurement of vendor and non-vendor financing.
39.6. Public sale of certificates of participation.
39.7. Private sale of certificates of participation.
39.8. Solicitation of alternative financing quotations.
39.9. Application of periodic payments and proceeds of certificates of participation.
39.10. Report to the State Comptroller.

§ 39.0. Background.

General Municipal Law, section 109-bauthorizes political subdivisions to enter into installment purchase contracts to finance capital improvements and to cause or permit certificates of participation to be issued in connection therewith. Subparagraph (d) of subdivision (3) of that statute requires the State Comptroller to adopt rules ""governing the procedure which shall be adhered to when entering into installment purchase contracts or authorizing the execution and delivery of certificates of participation...." This provision further provides that a political subdivision shall not conduct the private sale of certificates of participation without prior approval of the State Comptroller ″except as provided in such rules which shall set forth the circumstances under which such approval shall not be required.″ This Part is being promulgated in accordance with the requirements of General Municipal Law, section 109-b(3)(d). The primary purposes of these rules are to:

(a) cause a political subdivision to critically evaluate the financing alternatives available to it under section 109-b of the General Municipal Law and the Local Finance Law;

(b) ensure that a political subdivision, when procuring the capital improvements to be financed, complies with the competitive bidding requirements of Article 5-a of the General Municipal Law or any other general, special or local law or, if such competitive bidding requirements are not applicable, the policies required to be adopted pursuant to General Municipal Law, section 104-b; and

(c) require a political subdivision to seek competition for financing unless the political subdivision determines that it is in its best interests to conduct a private sale of certificates of participation.

§ 39.1. Definitions.

For purposes of this Part:

(a) ″Cost of financing″ shall mean the total payments of principal and interest estimated to become payable pursuant to an installment purchase contract or due on indebtedness, as the case may be, together with any estimated actual and necessary expenses incurred in connection with the execution of such installment purchase contract or the issuance of such indebtedness to the extent such expenses are not included in the periodic payments to be made under the installment purchase contract or paid from the proceeds of the indebtedness.

(b) ″Evaluation of Financing Alternatives″ shall mean the evaluation prepared pursuant to section 39.2 of this Part.

(c) ″Indebtedness″ shall mean bonds or notes issued in accordance with the Local Finance Law.

(d) ″Political subdivision,″ ″Capital improvement,″ ″Installment purchase contract″ and ″Certificate of Participation″ shall have the meanings ascribed to them by paragraphs (a) through (d) inclusive of subdivision 1 of section 109-b of the General Municipal Law.

(e) ″Pooled or Aggregate Program″ shall mean any program under which certificates of participation are issued and represent a proportionate interest or the right to receive a proportionate share in lease, rental, installment or other periodic payments made or to be made by a political subdivision and one or more parties, other than the political subdivision, pursuant to installment purchase contracts.

(f) ″Private sale″ shall mean any sale of certificates of participation, other than a public sale, conducted by a political subdivision.

(g) ″Public sale″ shall mean any sale of certificates of participation conducted by a political subdivision pursuant to section 39.6 of this Part.

§ 39.2. Evaluation of financing alternatives.

No governing board shall adopt a resolution authorizing an installment purchase contract unless an evaluation of financing alternatives has been prepared in connection therewith. Such evaluation shall set forth the financing alternatives considered and the criteria used to evaluate these alternatives. The evaluation shall also contain written documentation substantiating the estimates required to be included in the evaluation pursuant to this section. At a minimum, the evaluation of financing alternatives shall contain the following:

(a) A statement indicating the estimated cost of each capital improvement to be financed, exclusive of the cost of financing;

(b) A statement indicating whether the proposed capital improvements may be financed with indebtedness issued under the Local Finance Law and if not, the specific reasons why such financing is not authorized;

(c) If the capital improvements may be financed with indebtedness, a statement indicating the estimated total cost of the capital improvements, inclusive of the cost of financing, if financed pursuant to the Local Finance Law;

(d) A statement indicating the estimated total cost of the proposed capital improvements, inclusive of the cost of financing, if financed pursuant to an installment purchase contract;

(e) A comparison of the estimated total costs required by subdivisions (c) and (d) of this section; and

(f) A recommendation as to whether it is in the best interests of the political subdivision to finance the capital improvements pursuant to the Local Finance Law or pursuant to an installment purchase contract and the specific reasons for such recommendation.

§ 39.3. Adoption of resolution authorizing an installment purchase contract.

Any resolution authorizing a political subdivision to utilize an installment purchase contract to finance capital improvements shall refer to the evaluation of financing alternatives and, after taking into account such evaluation, set forth the specific reasons why the governing board has determined that it is in the best interests of the political subdivision to finance the capital improvements pursuant to an installment purchase contract. The evaluation of financing alternatives shall be maintained by the political subdivision as a public record and be filed with the resolution to which it pertains.

§ 39.4. Compliance with competitive bidding statutes or other applicable provisions.

No political subdivision shall enter into an installment purchase contract unless and until it has complied with the competitive bidding requirements of article 5-A of the General Municipal Law or of any other general, special or local law. If no such competitive bidding requirements are applicable, the political subdivision shall comply with its procurement policies and procedures adopted pursuant to General Municipal Law, section 104-b. For purposes of complying with such requirements or procedures, a political subdivision may determine to solicit bids, quotations or proposals, as the case may be, in the alternative, exclusive and inclusive, of the cost of financing.

§ 39.5. Procurement of vendor and non-vendor financing.

(a) If the governing board of the political subdivision determines that it is in the best interests of the political subdivision to select a bid, offer or proposal, as the case may be, inclusive of the cost of financing, the governing board shall adopt a resolution authorizing the political subdivision to enter into an installment purchase contract with the successful bidder or offeror making a bid or offer inclusive of the cost of financing.

(b) If the governing board determines that it is in the best interests of the political subdivision to select a bid, offer or proposal, as the case may be, exclusive of the cost of financing, it shall adopt a resolution requiring the capital improvement to be procured from the successful party making a bid, offer or proposal, exclusive of the cost of financing, and directing that non-vendor financing be obtained pursuant to either section 39.6, 39.7 or 39.8 of this Part. Such resolution shall also authorize the political subdivision to enter into an installment purchase contract with any party selected to provide the financing or, if certificates of participation are to be issued, with a party acting on behalf of the holders of the certificates of participation. The resolution may also delegate to the chief fiscal officer the power to cause certificates of participation to be sold pursuant to section 39.6 or 39.7 of this Part.

(c) Any resolution adopted pursuant to this section must include a statement that execution of the installment purchase contract will not cause the political subdivision to exceed the limits prescribed by paragraph c of subdivision 6 of section 109-b of the General Municipal Law.

§ 39.6. Public sale of certificates of participation.

A political subdivision may cause certificates of participation issued in connection with one or more of its installment purchase contracts to be sold at public sale. Such certificates of participation shall be sold to the bidder offering the lowest interest cost as computed in accordance with the net interest cost method, taking into consideration any premium or discount, or the actuarial or true interest cost method, whichever is specified in the notice of sale. The notice of such sale must be circularized in accordance with any rule or order prescribed by the State Comptroller pursuant to paragraph d of section 57.00 of the Local Finance Law for the circularization of notices for the sale of bonds. Where the notice of sale provides that bids shall be awarded based on net interest cost, the notice shall also require that the interest rate for each maturity shall not be less than the interest rate for any prior maturity. The notice of sale must be circularized not less than four nor more than 15 days, Sundays excepted, before the date fixed for the public sale unless the notice provides for a supplemental notice of sale in accordance with the procedure for the sale of bonds in paragraph (d) of section 58.00 of the Local Finance Law

§ 39.7. Private sale of certificates of participation.

The governing board or the chief fiscal officer, if the governing board has delegated such power to him, may determine that a public sale of certificates of participation is not in the best interests of the political subdivision. The determination of the governing board or chief fiscal officer, as the case may be, shall state that a private sale of such certificates of participation is expected to reduce the cost of financing and set forth the specific factors upon which the governing board or chief fiscal officer has relied on making such determination. The factors recited in such determination may include: (a) unstable or volatile market conditions; (b) conditions of fiscal stress or negative credit factors being experienced by the issuer; (c) the large dollar amount of the proposed issue; (d) the complexity of the issue; or (e) any other factor which the governing board or chief fiscal officer, as the case may be, reasonably and in good faith believes will cause the cost of financing to be lower if the certificates of participation are sold at private rather than public sale.

Such determination, if made by the governing board, shall be made by resolution and if made by the chief fiscal officer, shall be made in a certificate filed with the governing board prior to such sale. Upon making the determination required by this paragraph, such certificates of participation may be sold at private sale provided that any underwriters, providers of letters of credit or liquidity facilities, bond counsel and financial advisors to be used in connection with such sale have been selected in accordance with the policies and procedures contained in section 37.5(b)-(e) of this Title. The prior approval of the State Comptroller shall not be required for any private sale of certificates of participation conducted in accordance with the requirements of this paragraph.

§ 39.8. Solicitation of alternative financing quotations.

The governing board, or if authorized by the governing board, the chief fiscal officer may solicit alternative quotations for financing from qualified interested parties. The political subdivision or chief fiscal officer, as the case may be, shall prepare and maintain written documentation of compliance with this section, including the names and addresses of all qualified interested parties from which financing quotations were sought, the responses received from such parties and written justification of the ultimate selection made. Any political subdivision which enters into an installment purchase contract pursuant to this section shall not permit certificates of participation to be issued in connection therewith except as part of a pooled or aggregate program.

§ 39.9. Application of periodic payments and proceeds of certificates of participation.

Periodic payments to be made under an installment purchase contract and the proceeds of certificates of participation shall only be applied towards the following:

(a) the cost of the capital improvements being financed;

(b) the payment of interest pursuant to paragraph (e) of subdivision 2 of the General Municipal Law, section 109-b;

(c) preliminary costs of surveys, maps, plans, estimates, taking of title and interest during construction;

(d) the establishment of reserve funds;

(e) the cost or premiums of letters of credit, insurance or other credit enhancements;

(f) the costs of bond counsel, financial advisors, underwriters, trustees and paying agents; and

(g) other actual and necessary expenses directly related to the issuance of certificates of participation or execution of the installment purchase contract.

§ 39.10. Report to the State Comptroller.

The political subdivision shall include in its annual report filed with the State Comptroller in accordance with Section 31 of the General Municipal Law such information as the Comptroller may require for all installment purchase contracts and certificates of participation that are issued in connection with such installment purchase contracts, including the amount and date of all certificates of participation sold at private sale.

CHAPTER III FIRE SAFETY

PART 210 VOLUNTEER FIREFIGHTER ENHANCED CANCER DISABILITY BENEFITS PROGRAM

(Statutory authority: General Municipal Law, § 205-cc)

Section

210.1. Authority, intent and purpose.
210.2. Definitions.
210.3. Eligibility.
210.4. Documentation.
210.5. Proof of benefit coverage.
210.6. Claims process.

Section
210.7. Denial of benefits.
210.8. Annual reports.

§ 210.1. Introduction.

(a) The Division of Homeland Security and Emergency Services, Office of Fire Prevention and Control has authority to establish rules and regulations related to claims, denials and qualifications for the enhanced cancer disability benefit, pursuant to General Municipal Law section 205-cc.

(b) The intent and purpose of the regulations are to establish processes by which an active volunteer firefighter or his or her beneficiaries can establish qualification for benefits, file a claim for benefits or appeal from a denial of benefits.

§ 210.2. Definitions.

For purposes of this Part:

(a) Authority Having Jurisdiction shall mean the governmental body which possesses the legal responsibility for providing fire protection as follows:

(1) for a fire district and joint fire district it shall mean the board of fire commissioners;

(2) for a village it shall mean the village board of trustees;

(3) for a fire protection district, it shall mean the town board that contracts to provide fire protection.

(4) for a city it shall mean the governing body vested with such power.

(b) Active Volunteer Firefighter shall mean a person who has been approved by a legally organized fire district, department or company as a firefighter and who is faithfully and actually performing service in the protection of life and property from fire or other emergency, accident or calamity in connection with which the services of the fire district, department or company are required.

(c) Benefit Provider shall mean an insurance company authorized to engage in the business of insurance in this State providing Enhanced Cancer Disability Benefits to eligible volunteer firefighters or the authority having jurisdiction that is self-funding an Enhanced Cancer Disability Benefits Program.

(d) Cancer shall mean:

(i) a disease caused by an uncontrolled division of abnormal cells in a part of the body or a malignant growth or tumor resulting from the division of abnormal cells; and

(ii) affecting the prostate or breast, lymphatic, hematological, digestive, urinary, neurological, or reproductive systems or melanoma.

(e) Enhanced Cancer Disability Benefits shall mean the benefits set forth in General Municipal Law section 205-cc(2)(a)-(d).

(f) Faithful and actual service shall mean participation in the firefighting activities of a legally organized volunteer fire district, department or company.

(g) Fit test shall mean the self-contained breathing apparatus fit test conducted yearly pursuant to requirements of 29 CFR 1910.134 for an immediately dangerous to life and health atmosphere.

(h) Interior firefighter shall mean an active volunteer firefighter who:

(i) has the minimum training to conduct interior structural firefighting duties as determined by the fire district, department or company;

(ii) has been deemed physically and medically qualified pursuant to 29 CFR 1910.134 to use self-contained breathing apparatus;

(iii) has successfully completed fit test(s); and

(iv) has been designated by the fire district, department or company to perform interior structural firefighting duties in an immediately dangerous to life and health atmosphere.

(i) Office of Fire Prevention and Control shall mean the New York State Division of Homeland Security and Emergency Services Office of Fire Prevention and Control.

(j) Physical examination shall mean a medical evaluation by a board-certified physician or other licensed health care professional, who, within the scope of their practice, determined the interior firefighter's ability to use a respirator and perform interior structural firefighting activities, and shall include completion of the mandatory OSHA Respiratory Medical Evaluation Questionnaire contained in 29 CFR 1910.134, Appendix C.

(k) Reporting year shall mean December 1st through November 30th.

(l) Total disability means a disability caused by cancer and that prevents a volunteer firefighter from being an active volunteer firefighter.

(m) Year of firefighting service means a consecutive 12-month period during which an active volunteer firefighter participates in the service of and meets the minimum standards established by the fire district, department or company.

§ 210.3. Eligibility.

(a) A volunteer firefighter must meet the following criteria to be eligible for enhanced cancer disability benefits:

(1) Five or more years of faithful and actual firefighting service as an interior firefighter;

(2) Has submitted proof of five years of interior structural firefighting service by providing verification that he or she has passed at least five annual fit tests;

(3) Successful completion of a physical examination prior to the commencement of duties as an interior firefighter, which failed to reveal evidence of cancer; and

(4) Diagnosis of cancer.

(b) A volunteer firefighter shall remain eligible for enhanced cancer disability benefits specified in General Municipal Law section 205-cc(2)(a), (b), and (d) for 60 months after the formal cessation of the volunteer firefighter's status as an active volunteer firefighter.

§ 210.4. Documentation.

(a) Fire districts, departments and companies shall provide information on the enhanced cancer disability benefit to all its members and make available such information upon request.

(b) Upon request, the fire district, department or company shall provide a claim form and instructions to its member or their beneficiary(ies) detailing how to file a claim for enhanced cancer benefits with the benefits provider.

(c) As part of any claim submitted and filed with the benefit provider, fire districts, departments and companies shall provide a certification of eligibility for enhanced cancer disability benefits using a form prescribed by the Office of Fire Prevention and Control. This form must be signed by the head of the department or company, sworn to under penalty of perjury as true, correct and complete, notarized and contain, at a minimum, the following information:

(1) the full legal name of the eligible volunteer firefighter;

(2) the full legal name of the fire district, department or company;

(3) the dates the eligible volunteer firefighter was an active volunteer firefighter of the fire district, department or company;

(4) the number of years of firefighting service as an interior firefighter;

(5) a statement that the eligible volunteer firefighter performed interior structural firefighting duties inside a building; and

(6) a statement that the eligible volunteer firefighter successfully completed a physical examination, prior to the commencement of duties as an interior firefighter, which failed to reveal any evidence of cancer.

§ 210.5. Proof of benefit coverage.

(a) A fire district, department or company must submit to the Office of Fire Prevention and Control by January 1, 2019 and annually thereafter an attestation that the fire district, department or company will provide the enhanced cancer disability benefit by:

(1) carrying an insurance policy issued by an insurance company authorized to engage in the business of insurance in this State sufficient to cover its eligible volunteer firefighters and provide a death benefit to their beneficiaries; or

(2) proof that the authority having jurisdiction:

(i) possesses taxing authority; and

(ii) has agreed in writing to fund any and all claims of eligible volunteer firefighters and their beneficiaries through existing and future revenues.

(b) The policy coverages and or financial responsibilities of a fire district, department or company shall include:

(1) A lump sum payment of $ 25,000 for each diagnosis payable to the eligible volunteer firefighter upon acceptable proof to the benefit provider of a diagnosis by a board-certified physician in the medical specialty appropriate for the type of cancer diagnosed that there are one or more malignant tumors characterized by the uncontrollable and abnormal growth and spread of malignant cells with invasion of normal tissue and that either:

(i) there is metastasis; and

(a) surgery, radiotherapy, or chemotherapy is medically necessary; or

(b) there is a tumor of the prostate, provided that it is treated with radical prostatectomy or external beam therapy; or

(c) the firefighter has terminal cancer, his or her life expectancy is 24 months or less from the date of diagnosis, and will not benefit from, or has exhausted, curative therapy;

(2) A lump sum payment of $6,250 for each diagnosis, payable to the eligible volunteer firefighter upon acceptable proof to the benefit provider of a diagnosis by a board-certified physician in the medical specialty appropriate for the type of cancer involved that either:

(i) there is a carcinoma in situ such that surgery, radiotherapy, or chemotherapy has been determined to be medically necessary; or

(ii) there are malignant tumors that are treated by endoscopic procedures alone; or

(iii) there are malignant melanomas.

(3) A monthly benefit of $1,500, of which the first payment shall be made six months after total disability and submission of acceptable proof of said disability to the benefit provider that such disability is caused by cancer and that the cancer precludes the eligible volunteer firefighter from serving as a firefighter, provided that the benefit shall continue for up to 36 consecutive months; and

(4) A death benefit of $50,000 payable to the eligible volunteer firefighter or his or her beneficiary upon acceptable proof by a board-certified physician that the firefighter's death resulted from complications associated with cancer.

§ 210.6. Claims process.

(a)(1) An eligible volunteer firefighter or their beneficiary(ies) shall file a claim with the benefit provider within 120 days after the diagnosis of a covered cancer, the death of the eligible volunteer firefighter, or commencement of a covered total disability. Failure to file a claim within such time shall not invalidate or reduce any claim if it shall be shown not to have been reasonably possible to file such claim and that a claim was filed as soon as reasonably possible. A claim shall be filed by submitting a claim form(s) as may be required by the benefit provider to the benefit provider. The claim form must be signed by the eligible volunteer firefighter or their beneficiary(ies) and sworn to under penalty of perjury as true, correct and complete.

(2) The benefit provider shall have the right and opportunity to examine the person of the eligible volunteer firefighter when and as often as the benefit provider may reasonably require during the pendency of claim and also the right and opportunity to make an autopsy in case of death where it is not prohibited by law.

(b) The benefit provider shall review the claim and determine if the claim will be paid within 30 days of receipt of the claim. However, if the benefit provider requires additional information from the claimant to make a determination, the benefit provider shall provide written notice to the claimant within such 30 days requesting the information. The claimant shall be afforded at least 45 days from receipt of the request to furnish the information. The 30 days in which the benefit provider shall make a determination on the claim shall be tolled and shall resume as of the date the claimant furnishes the information to the benefit provider or the end of the 45-day period afforded to the claimant to provide such information.

(c) If the claim is approved, the benefit provider shall mail or deliver written notification to the claimant and the fire district, department or company within five business days of the approval. The benefit provider shall pay benefits within 30 days of mailing or delivering such notification.

(d) If the claim is denied, the benefit provider shall mail or deliver written notification to the claimant and the fire district, department or company within five business days of the denial. If the benefit provider making the denial is an insurance company, then the written denial notification shall include a statement that the claimant may file a complaint with the New York State Department of Financial Services and provide the department's website address, mailing address, and telephone number. Any denial notification by a benefit provider shall include the reasons for such denial. The only permissible reason(s) for denial of a claim shall be the following:

(1) the volunteer firefighter does not have five or more years of service as interior firefighter; or

(2) the volunteer firefighter did not successfully complete a physical examination, prior to the commencement of duties as an interior firefighter, which examination failed to reveal any evidence of cancer; or

(3) the volunteer firefighter has not passed five yearly fit tests; or

(4) the volunteer firefighter ceased to be an active volunteer firefighter for more than 60 months prior to the submission of the claim for benefits; or

(5) the volunteer firefighter is receiving or has already received benefits as a paid firefighter under General Municipal Law article 10; or

(6) the diagnosis of cancer is not for a type covered by this Part; or

(7) the volunteer firefighter does not have a total disability as referenced in General Municipal Law section 205-cc(2)(c).

(e) Upon receipt of the denial of the claim, the claimant shall have 60 days to appeal the denial pursuant to section 210.7 of this Part.

§ 210.7. Denial of benefits.

(a) If the benefit provider is an insurance company, then the claimant shall appeal the denial to the insurance company. If the insurance company denies the claimant's appeal, then a claimant may bring an action at law or in equity to recover on the insurance policy. However, a claimant shall not bring an action at law or in equity to recover on the insurance policy prior to the expiration of 60 days after the claim was filed pursuant to section 210.6 of this Part and a claimant shall not bring such an action after the expiration of two years following the time the claimant was required to file the claim pursuant to section 210.6 (a)(1) of this Part.

(b) Except where the benefit provider is an insurance company, as provided in subdivision (a) of this section, any denial of benefit of enhanced cancer disability benefits shall be considered a final and binding agency determination within the meaning of the New York State Civil Practice Law and Rules.

§ 210.8. Annual reports.

(a) Annual claims report. The fire district, department or company shall report to the Office of Fire Prevention and Control, no later than December 1, 2019 and annually thereafter, on the claims and benefits payments for the reporting year using forms prescribed by the Office of Fire Prevention and Control.

(1) This report must be signed by the head of the department or company, sworn to under penalty of perjury as true, correct and complete and shall be notarized.

(2) The Office of Fire Prevention and Control shall develop an annual claims report form to be maintained on its website, containing at a minimum the following information:

(i) number of claims in the reporting year;

(ii) the types of claims in the reporting year;

(iii) the types of cancer claims in the reporting year; and

(iv) the number of eligible volunteer firefighters who received enhanced cancer disability benefits in the reporting year.

(b) Annual roster of interior firefighters. The fire district, department or company shall report to the Office of Fire Prevention and Control, no later than December 1, 2019 and annually thereafter, a complete list of its interior firefighters for the reporting year.

(c) The Office of Fire Prevention and Control shall make information related to interior firefighers and applicable training available to fire districts, departments or companies upon request.

TITLE 11 INSURANCE DEPARTMENT

CHAPTER III POLICY AND CERTIFICATE PROVISIONS

SUBCHAPTER A LIFE, ACCIDENT AND HEALTH INSURANCE

PART 52 (REGULATION 62) MINIMUM STANDARDS FOR FORM, CONTENT AND SALE OF HEALTH INSURANCE, INCLUDING STANDARDS OF FULL AND FAIR DISCLOSURE

(Statutory authority: Insurance Law, §§ 201, 301, 1109, 1117, 2104, 2119, 3201, 3217, 3218, 3221, 3233, 4224, 4235, 4237, art. 43)

Section

52.22. Volunteer firefighter enhanced cancer insurance.

§ 52.22. Volunteer firefighter enhanced cancer insurance.

(a) General Municipal Law section 205-cc requires every legally organized fire district, department or company in this state to provide and maintain for each eligible volunteer firefighter an enhanced cancer disability benefit insurance program. The law requires the Division of Homeland Security and Emergency Services' Office of Fire Prevention and Control to promulgate regulations, in consultation with the Department of Financial Services and the Workers' Compensation Board, to implement General Municipal Law section 205-cc. Those regulations are contained in Part 210 of Title 9. This section establishes the minimum requirements for policies issued in satisfaction of those requirements.

(b) Definitions. As used in this section:

(1) Active volunteer firefighter shall have the meaning set forth in Part 210 of Title 9.

(2) Cancer means a disease caused by an uncontrolled division of abnormal cells in a part of the body or a malignant growth or tumor resulting from the division of abnormal cells affecting the prostate or breast, lymphatic, hematological, digestive, urinary, neurological, or reproductive systems, or melanoma.

(3) Insured firefighter means a volunteer firefighter covered under the policy and who meets the eligibility requirements for coverage set forth in Part 210 of Title 9.

(4) Total disability shall have the meaning set forth in Part 210 of Title 9.

(5) Volunteer firefighter enhanced cancer insurance means a blanket insurance policy or certificate that provides cancer benefits to volunteer firefighters in accordance with General Municipal Law section 205-cc.

(c) General rules.

(1) A volunteer firefighter enhanced cancer insurance policy or certificate issued in satisfaction of the requirements of General Municipal Law section 205-cc shall be clearly labeled as volunteer firefighter enhanced cancer insurance. An insurer shall issue a policy of volunteer firefighter enhanced cancer insurance only as a stand-alone policy and shall not issue the coverage combined or offered in conjunction with any other insurance.

(2) Every volunteer firefighter enhanced cancer insurance policy or certificate shall conspicuously set forth the following statement on the first page of the policy or certificate in boldface type: "This is a limited policy (or certificate). It pays benefits only for specific losses from cancer. Read it carefully."

(3) An insurer may not impose any preexisting condition limitation or exclusion on coverage for an insured firefighter.

(4) Benefits shall be payable under the policy without regard to other coverage except: (i) benefits shall not be payable if the insured is already provided paid firefighter benefits under General Municipal Law article 10; and (ii) the monthly disability benefit provided pursuant to subdivision (d)(1)(iii) of this section shall be secondary to disability benefits from any other source (other than individual disability income insurance purchased by the insured firefighter) such as group or blanket disability, social security disability or workers' compensation benefits. Where the policy is secondary, benefits shall be limited to the difference between the amount paid from the other source and the benefit specified in the policy.

(5) The policy shall comport with the claims process requirements provided in Part 210 of Title 9.

(6) The exclusions in section 52.16(c) of this Part shall not be applicable to this coverage. A claim for benefits may be denied only for the reasons set forth in Part 210 of Title 9.

(7) Conditions for nonrenewal or termination by the insurer shall be fully set forth in the policy. Notices of nonrenewal or termination shall provide for at least 60 days' prior written notice to the policyholder.

(8) Any change in premium rates shall be subject to the prior approval of the superintendent. The insurer shall provide each policyholder with at least 60 days' prior written notice before implementing an approved rate adjustment.

(d) Benefits.

(1) In accordance with General Municipal Law section 205-cc, every volunteer firefighter enhanced cancer insurance policy shall include each of the following benefits: (i) A lump sum benefit of $25,000 for each diagnosis payable to the insured firefighter upon acceptable proof to the insurer of a diagnosis by a board-certified physician in the medical specialty appropriate for the type of cancer diagnosed that there are one or more malignant tumors characterized by the uncontrollable and abnormal growth and spread of malignant cells with invasion of normal tissue and that either:

(a) there is metastasis; and

(1) surgery, radiotherapy, or chemotherapy is medically necessary; or

(2) there is a tumor of the prostate, provided that it is treated with radical prostatectomy or external beam therapy; or

(b) the insured firefighter has terminal cancer, the firefighter's life expectancy is 24 months or less from the date of diagnosis, and will not benefit from, or has exhausted, curative therapy. (ii) A lump sum benefit of $6,250 for each diagnosis payable to the insured firefighter upon acceptable proof to the insurer of a diagnosis by a board-certified physician in the medical specialty appropriate for the type of cancer involved that either:

(a) there is carcinoma in situ such that surgery, radiotherapy, or chemotherapy has been determined to be medically necessary;

(b) there are malignant tumors that are treated by endoscopic procedures alone; or

(c) there are malignant melanomas. (iii) A monthly benefit of $1,500, of which the first payment shall be made six months after total disability and submission of acceptable proof of such disability to the insurer that the disability is caused by cancer and that such cancer precludes the insured firefighter from serving as a firefighter. Such benefit shall continue for up to 36 consecutive monthly payments.

(a) Any insured firefighter receiving such monthly benefits may be required to have his or her condition reevaluated. In the event any such reevaluation reveals that the insured firefighter has regained the ability to perform duties as a firefighter, then his or her monthly benefits shall cease the last day of the month of reevaluation.

(b) In the event that there is a subsequent reoccurrence of a disability caused by cancer that precludes the insured firefighter from serving as a firefighter, he or she shall be entitled to receive any remaining monthly payments. (iv) A death benefit in the amount of $50,000 that is payable to the insured firefighter or his or her beneficiary upon acceptable proof by a board-certified physician that the insured firefighter's death resulted from complications associated with cancer.

(2) The combined total of all lump sum benefits received during an insured firefighter's lifetime pursuant to subparagraphs (i) and (ii) of paragraph (1) of this subdivision shall not exceed $50,000.

(3) An insured firefighter shall remain eligible for the benefits in subparagraphs (i), (ii) and (iv) of paragraph (1) of this subdivision for 60 months after the formal cessation of the insured firefighter's status as an active volunteer firefighter.

(4) Any policy that conditions payment upon pathological diagnosis of a covered cancer shall also provide that if such a pathological diagnosis is medically inappropriate, a clinical diagnosis will be accepted in lieu thereof. Any type of medically appropriate diagnosis shall be accepted.

TITLE 12 DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

CHAPTER XI DIVISION OF SAFETY AND HEALTH

SUBCHAPTER A PUBLIC EMPLOYEES' SAFETY AND HEALTH

PART 800 PUBLIC EMPLOYEES' OCCUPATIONAL SAFETY AND HEALTH STANDARDS

(Statutory authority: Labor Law, § 27-a)

Section

800.7. Emergency escape and self rescue ropes and system components for firefighters.

§ 800.7. Emergency escape and self rescue ropes and system components for firefighters.

(a) Title and citation. Within and for the purposes of the Department of Labor, this section may be known as Code Rule 800.7, Emergency Escape and Self Rescue Ropes and System Components for Firefighters, specifying the requirements for safety ropes and associated system components.

(b) Purpose and Intent. This rule is intended to ensure that firefighters are provided with necessary escape rope and system components for self rescue and emergency escape and to establish specifications for such ropes and system components.

(c) Application: This section shall apply throughout the State of New York to the State, any political subdivision of the State, Public Authorities, Public Benefit Corporations or any other governmental agency or instrumentality thereof employing firefighters within the meaning of § 27-a of the Labor Law. This section shall not apply to such employers located in a city with a population of over one million.

(d) DEFINITIONS. Within this section, the following terms shall have the meanings indicated:

(1) ″System Components″ means safety harnesses, belts, ascending devices, carabiners, descent control devices, rope grab devices, and snap links.

(2) ″Escape Rope″ means a single purpose, single use, emergency escape (Self-rescue) rope.

(3) ″Interior Structural Fire Fighting″ means the physical activity of fire suppression, rescue or both, inside of buildings or enclosed structures which are involved in a fire situation beyond the incipient stage.

(4) ″Interior Structural Fire Fighter″ means a firefighter who is designated by their employer to perform interior structural firefighting duties in an immediately dangerous to life and health (IDLH) atmosphere and is medically qualified to use self-contained breathing apparatus (SCBA) as defined in 29 CFR 1910.134.

(5) ″Entrapment at Elevations″ means a situation where a firefighter finds the normal route of exit is made unusable by fire, or other emergency situation, that requires the firefighter to immediately exit the structure from an opening not designed as an exit, that is above the ground floor and at an elevation above the surrounding terrain which would reasonably be expected to cause injury should the firefighter be required to exit.

(e) Specifications for Escape Ropes and System Components. Escape ropes and system components provided to firefighters shall conform to the requirements of ″The National Fire Protection Association Standard 1983, Standard on Fire Service Life Safety Rope and Equipment for Emergency Services″ in effect at the time of their manufacture. Escape ropes and system components purchased after the effective date of this section shall conform to the 2006 edition (NFPA1983-2006) of such standard.

(f) Risk Assessment and Equipment Selection.

(1) Each employer who employs firefighters shall develop a written risk assessment to be used to determine under what circumstances escape ropes and system components will be required and what type will be required to protect the safety of firefighters in its employ. In performing the assessment, the employer shall:

(i) Identify the types and heights of buildings and other structures in the area the firefighters are expected to work. Such area shall include the regular scope of the fire district or other area covered by the fire department in question as well as any other districts or communities to which the fire department provides mutual aid with a reasonably predictable frequency;

(ii) Assess the standard operating procedures followed by the department with regard to rescue of firefighters from elevations;

(iii) Identify the risks to firefighters of being trapped at an elevation during structural fire fighting operations given the types of buildings or other structures located in the area(s) in which firefighters are expected to work. Identification of the risk in question shall include an assessment of:

(a) the extent to which standard operating procedures already in place will mitigate the risks identified;

(b) the type of escape ropes and system components that will be necessary to protect the safety of firefighters if operating procedures do not sufficiently mitigate the risk.

(2) Should the risk assessment establish that firefighters employed by the department performing interior structural firefighting are reasonably expected to be exposed to the risk of entrapment at elevations, the employer shall provide to each interior structural firefighter in its employ a properly fitted escape rope and those system components which meet the specifications for such rope and system components set forth in subdivision (e) of this section and which would mitigate the danger to life and health associated with such risk.

(g) Training.

(1) The employer shall ensure that each firefighter who is provided with an escape rope and system components is instructed in their proper use by a competent instructor. Instruction shall include the requirements of subdivision (h) of this section and the user information provided by the manufacturer as required by NFPA 1983 Chapter 5.2 for each rope and system component.

(2) Instruction shall include hands-on use of the equipment in a controlled environment.

(3) A record of such instruction including the name of the individual being trained, the name of the individual delivering the training, and the date on which the training was provided shall be maintained by the employer until such time as the firefighter is no longer employed by the employer or the employer delivers a subsequent training on this topic, whichever comes first.

(h) Employer Duties. In addition to the duties set forth in subdivisions (f) and (g) of this section, employers covered by this section shall have the following duties:

(1) To ensure the adequacy of the safety ropes and system components, the employer shall routinely inspect and ensure that:

(i) Existing safety ropes and system components meet the codes, standards, and recommended practices adopted by the Commissioner;

(ii) Existing safety ropes and system components still perform their function by taking precautions to identify any of their limitations through reasonable means, including, but not limited to:

(a) checking the labels or stamps on the equipment;

(b) checking any documentation or equipment specifications; and

(c) contacting the supplier or approval agency;

(iii) Firefighters are informed of the limitations of any safety rope or system components;

(iv) Firefighters are not allowed or required to use any safety rope or system components beyond their limitations;

(v) Existing or new safety ropes and system components have no visible defects that limit their safe use;

(vi) Safety ropes and system components are used, cleaned and maintained according to the manufacturer's instructions;

(vii) Firefighters are instructed in identifying to the employer any defects the firefighter may find in safety ropes and system components; and

(viii) Any identified defects are corrected or immediate action is taken to eliminate the use of the equipment by:

(a) ensuring that escape ropes and system components with defects which are repairable are tagged as unsafe and stored in such a manner that they cannot be used until repairs are made;

(b) ensuring that escape ropes and system components that cannot be repaired are immediately destroyed or rendered unusable as an escape rope and system components; and

(c) ensuring that any escape rope that has been utilized under load for the purpose of self rescue/emergency escape is immediately removed from service, destroyed, or rendered unusable as an escape rope and immediately replaced.

(2) The employer's routine inspection cycle required by this subdivision shall be based upon the volume of activity the Department undertakes but, in no case, any less frequently than once each month.

TITLE 15 DEPARTMENT OF MOTOR VEHICLES

CHAPTER I REGULATIONS OF THE COMMISSIONER

SUBCHAPTER D EQUIPMENT

PART 44 COLORED LIGHTS

(Statutory authority: Vehicle and Traffic Law, §§ 215, 375)

Section

44.1. Introduction.
44.2. Red lights and certain white lights.
44.3. Amber lights.
44.4. Blue and green lights.
44.5. Auxiliary lights.
44.6. Exemptions.

§ 44.1. Introduction.

Paragraph (c) of subdivision 2 and subdivision 41 of section 375 and sections 100-a, 101, 106-a, 114-b, 115-a, 117-a, 117-b, 132-a, 1104 and 1144 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law govern the affixing, display and effect of colored lights on vehicles, other than those required by law.

§ 44.2. Red lights and certain white lights.

A reference to the color red wherever it appears in this Part shall include the combination of the colors red and white.

(a) One or more red lights may be affixed to an authorized emergency vehicle which includes every ambulance, police vehicle, fire vehicle and civil defense emergency vehicle as each of these is defined in the Vehicle and Traffic Law.

(b) One or more red lights may be displayed on an authorized emergency vehicle when such vehicle is parked or operating while engaged in transporting a sick or injured person, pursuing an actual or suspected violator of the law, or responding to or working or assisting at the scene of an accident, disaster, police call, alarm of fire or other emergency, including an emergency drill on a public highway. Such light or lights may not be displayed when returning from such service, except upon a fire vehicle. An authorized emergency vehicle operated for the purpose of obtaining fuel, lubricants, maintenance or repairs is not considered to be operation in an emergency.

(c) At least one red light must be displayed and visible under normal atmospheric conditions from a distance of 500 feet from any direction from an authorized emergency vehicle, except a police vehicle, exercising the privileges granted in section 1104 of the Vehicle and Traffic Law and sounding an audible signal as required by section 1104. Where required, because of vehicle construction, more than one red light may be used to satisfy the visibility requirement of section 1104.

(d) One all-white light, which is revolving, rotating, flashing, oscillating or constantly moving may be affixed to an authorized emergency vehicle and displayed thereon only when such vehicle is engaged in emergency operation as set forth in subdivision (b) of this section. Such white light and the white portion of a combination red and white light shall not be:

(1) arranged, adjusted or operated so as to produce dangerous glare or dazzle;

(2) arranged, adjusted or operated so as to interfere with the visibility of any red light or red lights displayed on the vehicle; or

(3) of greater intensity than exceeds 100 candlepower as expressed in mean spherical candlepower at 35 watts.

(e) Headlamps of an approved headlighting system on an authorized emergency vehicle or any other vehicle may not be made to flash either alternately or in unison, except that the high beam white lights (ordinarily the inboard or lower lights) of a dual headlamp system may flash alternately on an authorized emergency vehicle.

§ 44.3. Amber lights.

(a) One or more amber lights may be affixed to a hazard vehicle as defined in section 117-a of the New York State Vehicle and Traffic Law.

(b) One or more amber lights must be displayed upon a hazard vehicle when such vehicle is engaged in a hazardous operation which is the operation, or parking, of a vehicle on or immediately adjacent to a public highway while such vehicle is actually engaged in an operation which would restrict, impede, or interfere with the normal flow of traffic, and such lights may be displayed upon a hazard vehicle engaged in ice or snow removal or other hazardous operation on a parking lot or similar facility. Such amber lights must be visible to all approaching traffic under normal atmospheric conditions from a distance of 500 feet from such vehicle.

(c) Such light or lights shall not be required to be displayed during daylight hours provided at least two red flags visible from a distance of 500 feet are placed both in or on the front of, and to or on the rear of the vehicle and two such red flags are placed to each side of the vehicle open to traffic. The two red flags may be mounted on a single mast using a

"Y" adapter.

(d) Such lights or flags need not be displayed on the vehicle when the vehicle is operating, or parked, within a barricaded work area and said lights or flags are displayed on the barricade.

(e) The temporary affixing and display of an amber light to be used as a warning light on a disabled motor vehicle or on a motor vehicle while it is stopped on a highway while engaged in an operation which would restrict, impede or interfere with the normal flow of traffic is not prohibited.

(f) Such amber light or lights must be mounted higher than the head lamps.

§ 44.4. Blue and green lights.

(1) One or more blue lights or combination blue and red lights or combination blue, red and white lights may be affixed to a police vehicle, fire vehicle, ambulance, emergency ambulance service vehicle, and county emergency medical services vehicle, provided that such blue light or lights shall be displayed on such vehicles for rear projection only. In the event that the trunk or rear gate of a police vehicle, fire vehicle, ambulance, emergency ambulance service vehicle, and county emergency medical services vehicle obstructs or diminishes the visibility of other emergency lighting on such vehicle, a blue light may be affixed to and displayed from the trunk, rear gate or interior of such vehicle. Such lights may be displayed on a police vehicle, ambulance, emergency ambulance service vehicle, and county emergency medical services vehicle when such vehicle is engaged in an emergency operation. Nothing contained in this subdivision shall be deemed to authorize the use of blue lights on a police vehicle, emergency ambulance service vehicle, and county emergency medical services vehicle unless such vehicle also displays one or more red, or combination red and white lights as otherwise authorized in this section.

(2) One blue light may be affixed to any motor vehicle owned by a volunteer member of a fire department or on a motor vehicle owned by a member of such person's family residing in the same household or by a business enterprise in which such person has a proprietary interest or by which he is employed.

(b) One green light may be affixed to any motor vehicle owned by a member of a volunteer ambulance service, or on a motor vehicle owned by a member of such person's family, or by a business enterprise in which such person has a proprietary interest or by which he is employed.

(c) Authorization to affix a blue light to each of the motor vehicles described in paragraph (2) of subdivision (a) must be in writing, signed by the chief of the fire department or company. Authorization to affix a green light to each of the vehicles described in subdivision (b) must be in writing and signed by the chief officer of the volunteer ambulance service. The authorization given to members of their respective organization may be revoked at any time by the chief officer who issued the same or his successor in office. Such written authority must be carried upon the person of the operator of the vehicle whenever such lights are displayed.

(d) A green light may not be affixed, nor may the authorization be given to do so, to a vehicle described in paragraph (2) of subdivision (a) where an ambulance service is operated by and is a function of a volunteer fire department or company.

(e) A blue light may be affixed to a vehicle which is entitled to have a green light affixed and such green light is affixed and both are properly authorized.

(f) A green light may be affixed to a vehicle, other than a police vehicle, which is entitled to have a blue light affixed and such blue light is affixed and both are properly authorized.

(g) A blue or green light may be affixed to a vehicle which is entitled to have amber lights affixed and one or more amber lights are so affixed, except that only one color which is appropriate to the activity of the vehicle may be displayed at any one time.

(h) Except as provided in paragraph (1) of subdivision (a), a blue or green light may not be affixed to a vehicle which is entitled to have red lights affixed and one or more red lights are so affixed.

(i) A vehicle authorized to have either a blue or green light affixed may display only one such light and only when engaged in an emergency operation as set forth in subdivision (b) of section 44.2 of this Part.

(j) A vehicle authorized to have both a blue and green light affixed may display only one such light at a time and only that light which is appropriate to the use of the vehicle at that time.

(k) A blue or green light affixed to and displayed upon a vehicle pursuant to the preceding provisions shall also comply with the following:

(1) Only one such light may be displayed which must be visible from in front of such vehicle.

(2) (Reserved)

(3) Such light may not be part of the headlamp system.

(4) No inscription may appear across the face of the lens or dome.

(5) Such light may be a fixed, unidirectional light, either steady or flashing, mounted in front of or behind the grille or anywhere on the vehicle, or a revolving, rotating, oscillating or constantly moving light which must be mounted above the headlamps preferably on the roof to avoid reflected glare or distraction to the operator. If mounted upon the dashboard inside the vehicle, a suitable cover, which may consist of paint, must be used to prevent reflected glare or distraction to the operator.

(6) Such light must consist of a lamp with a blue or green lens and not an uncolored lens with a blue or green bulb, except that a roof-mounted dome unit which does not include a lens, must consist of a blue or green dome and not an uncolored dome with a blue or green bulb.

(7) The lens of such a light must be not less than three inches nor more than six inches in diameter, except that a roof-mounted dome unit which does not include a lens must be not more than nine inches in height.

(8) A roof-mounted dome unit may consist of one or more bulbs or sealed-beam lamps whose light source cannot exceed 32 candlepower.

(9) The affixing of more than one light or lighting device or fixture whereby the lights or lamps are made to flash alternately is prohibited.

(10) The provisions of this subdivision shall not apply to a police vehicle, fire vehicle, ambulance, emergency ambulance service vehicle, and county emergency medical services vehicle.

(l) One bar light may be used, provided that:

(1) it has a housing not more than nine inches high;

(2) it consists of a blue or green housing, and not an uncolored housing with blue or green bulbs;

(3) all bulbs inside the housing flash on and off simultaneously;

(4) the blue or green housing is continuous with no breaks, barriers or coverings which could give the appearance of two or more lights; and

(5) it is mounted on the roof of the vehicle and not on the hood, trunk or other part of the vehicle.

(m) Lights that give off blinding flashes, such as strobe lights, are prohibited.

(n) Some examples of prohibited lights are:

(1) a blue or green light on the front of the vehicle together with the same color light on the roof;

(2) a blue or green dome light and a bar light of the same color;

(3) a bar light divided into two or more parts by any section of another color, including white, or by any opaque material; or

(4) two blue or two green dome lights.

(o) A green light may not have a light source greater than 32 candlepower.

§ 44.5. Auxiliary lights.

(a) Lights which are red in color, supplemental to and perform the same functions of required light, such as brake lights, directional signal lights and hazard warning lights, are not prohibited provided:

(1) such lights function in unison with required lights; and

(2) such lights, except on tow trucks and vehicles having doors on the rear, are below any amber hazard or red emergency light affixed to such a vehicle.

(b) Fog lights. The use of amber fog lights shall not be prohibited because of color on any vehicle, provided such lights are affixed below the vehicle's headlamps and are arranged, adjusted or operated to avoid dangerous glare or dazzle.

§ 44.6. Exemptions.

(a) This Part shall not be applicable to vehicles from other States or from the Dominion of Canada which have entered this State to render police, fire or civil defense aid, or ambulance service, while such vehicles are here or returning to their home stations, if the lights on such vehicles comply with the laws of their home States or the Dominion of Canada, are displayed in this State in the same manner permitted by their home States or the Dominion of Canada.

(b) Antique or historical emergency vehicles which are used for parades, demonstrations, etc. may continue to have affixed thereto any colored lights, or their replacements, which were carried on such vehicles when they were used as emergency vehicles. However, no such colored lights shall be displayed when operated upon the public highways of this State, unless such vehicle is being operated in a parade or demonstration under permit from the appropriate local or State authority.
